2	"It may designate the territory over which the sovereignty of the United States extends, or"	Federal law Federal forms	"United States"	"The United States (the District of Columbia, possessions and territories)". Here Congress has exclusive legislative jurisdiction. In this sense, the term "United States" is a singular noun. You are a person residing in the District of Columbia, one of its Territories or Federal areas (enclaves). Hence, even a person living in the one of the sovereign States could still be a member of the Federal area and therefore a "citizen of the United States." This is the definition used in most "Acts of Congress" and federal statutes. We identify this version of "United States" with two asterisks after its name: "United States" throughout this article. This definition is also synonymous with the "United States" corporation found in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A).
3	"...as the collective name for the states which are united by and under the Constitution."	Constitution of the United States	"United States"	"The several States which is the united States of America." Referring to the 50 sovereign States, which are united under the Constitution of the United States of America. The federal areas within these states are not included in this definition because the Congress does not have exclusive legislative authority over any of the 50 sovereign States within the Union of States. Rights are retained by the States in the 9th and 10th Amendments, and you are a "Citizen of these united States." This is the definition used in the Constitution for the United States of America. We identify this version of "United States" with a three asterisks after its name: "United States" throughout this article.

The way our present system functions, all PUBLIC rights are attached to federal territory. They cannot lawfully attach to EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE property because the right to regulate EXCLUSLIVELY PRIVATE rights is repugnant to the constitution, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Lastly, when the government enters the realm of commerce and private business activity, it operates in equity and is treated as EQUAL in every respect to everyone else. ONLY in this capacity can it enact law that does NOT attach to its own territory and to those DOMICILED on its territory:

United States, 231 Ct.Cl. 823, 826 (1982) (sovereign acts doctrine applies where, "[w]ere [the] contracts exclusively between private parties, the party hurt by such governing action could not claim compensation from the other party for the governing action"). The dissent ignores these statements (including the statement from Jones, from which case Horowitz drew its reasoning literally verbatim), when it says, post at 931, that the sovereign acts cases do not emphasize the need to treat the government-as-contractor the same as a private party.*

If a government wants to reach outside its territory and create PRIVATE law for those who have not consented to its jurisdiction by choosing a domicile on its territory, the ONLY method it has for doing this is to exercise its right to contract.

> Debt and contract [franchise agreement, in this case] are of no particular place.

Locus contractus regit actum.
The place of the contract [franchise agreement, in this case] governs the act.

The most important method by which governments exercise their PRIVATE right to contract and disassociate with the territorial limitation upon their lawmaking powers is through the use or abuse of franchises, which are contracts.

> As a rule, franchises spring from contracts between the sovereign power and private citizens*, made upon valuable considerations, for purposes of individual advantage as well as public benefit,* [207] and thus a franchise partakes of a double nature and character. So far as it affects or concerns the public, it is publici juris and is subject to governmental control. The legislature may prescribe the manner of granting it, to whom it may be granted, the conditions and terms upon which it may be held, and the duty of the grantee to the public in exercising it, and may also provide for its forfeiture upon the failure of the grantee to perform that duty. But when granted, it becomes the property of the grantee, and is a private right, subject only to the governmental control growing out of its other nature as publici juris. [208]

5.6.12.5.9 Taxation of "Public" v. "Private" property

> "All systems either of preference or of restraint, therefore, being thus completely taken away, the obvious and simple system of natural liberty establishes itself of its own accord. Every man, as long as he does not violate the laws of justice, is left perfectly free to pursue his own interest his own way, and to bring both his industry and capital into competition with those of any other man or order of men. The sovereign is completely discharged from a duty, in the attempting to perform which he must always be exposed to innumerable delusions, and for the proper performance of which no human wisdom or knowledge could ever be sufficient: the duty of superintending the industry of private people."
> [Adam Smith, An Inquiry into the Nature and Causes of the Wealth of Nations (1776)]

The U.S. Supreme Court has held many times that the ONLY purpose for lawful, constitutional taxation is to collect revenues to support ONLY the machinery and operations of the government and its "employees". This purpose, it calls a "public use" or "public purpose":

> "The power to tax is, therefore, the strongest, the most pervading of all powers of government, reaching directly or indirectly to all classes of the people. It was said by Chief Justice Marshall, in the case of McCulloch v. Md., 4 Wheat. 431, that the power to tax is the power to destroy. *A striking instance of the truth of the proposition is seen in the fact that the existing tax of ten per cent, imposed by the United States on the circulation of all other banks than the National Banks, drove out of existence every state bank of circulation within a year or two after its passage. This power can be readily employed against one class of individuals and in favor of another, so as to ruin the one class and give unlimited wealth and prosperity to the other, if there is no implied limitation of the uses for which the power may be exercised.
> To lay, with one hand, the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms.
> Nor is it taxation. 'A tax,' says Webster's Dictionary, 'is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or State.' 'Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the Legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes.' Cooley, Const. Lim., 479.

Black's Law Dictionary defines the word "public purpose" as follows:

> "Public purpose. In the law of taxation, eminent domain, etc., this is a term of classification to distinguish the objects for which, according to settled usage, the government is to provide, from those which, by the like usage, are left to private interest, inclination, or liberality. The constitutional requirement that the purpose of any tax, police regulation, or particular exertion of the power of eminent domain shall be the convenience, safety, or welfare of the entire community and not the welfare of a specific individual or class of persons [such as, for instance, federal benefit recipients as individuals]. "Public purpose" that will justify expenditure of public money generally means such an activity as will serve as benefit to community as a body and which at same time is directly related function of government. Pack v. Southwestern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 215 Tenn. 503, 387 S.W.2d. 789, 794.
> The term is synonymous with governmental purpose. As employed to denote the objects for which taxes may be levied, it has no relation to the urgency of the public need or to the extent of the public benefit which is to follow; the essential requisite being that a public service or use shall affect the inhabitants as a community, and not merely as individuals. A public purpose or public business has for its objective the promotion of the public health, safety, morals, general welfare, security, prosperity, and contentment of all the inhabitants or residents within a given political division, as, for example, a state, the sovereign powers of which are exercised to promote such public purpose or public business."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1231, Emphasis added]

A related word defined in Black's Law Dictionary is "public use":

> Public use. Eminent domain. The constitutional and statutory basis for taking property by eminent domain. For condemnation purposes, "public use" is one which confers some benefit or advantage to the public; it is not confined to actual use by public. It is measured in terms of right of public to use proposed facilities for which condemnation is sought and, as long as public has right of use, whether exercised by one or many members of public, a "public advantage" or "public benefit" accrues sufficient to constitute a public use. Montana Power Co. v. Bokma, Mont., 457 P.2d. 769, 772, 773.*
> Public use, in constitutional provisions restricting the exercise of the right to take property in virtue of eminent domain, means a use concerning the whole community distinguished from particular individuals. But each and every member of society need not be equally interested in such use, or be personally and directly affected by it; if the object is to satisfy a great public want or exigency, that is sufficient. Ringe Co. v. Los Angeles County, 262 U.S. 700, 43 S.Ct. 689, 692, 67 L.Ed. 1186. The term may be said to mean public usefulness, utility, or advantage, or what is productive of general benefit. It may be limited to the inhabitants of a small or restricted locality, but must be in common, and not for a particular individual. The use must be a needful one for the public, which cannot be surrendered without obvious general loss and inconvenience. A "public use" for which land may be taken defies absolute definition for it changes with varying conditions of society, new appliances in the sciences, changing conceptions of scope and functions of government, and other differing circumstances brought about by an increase in population and new modes of communication and transportation. Katz v. Brandon, 156 Conn. 521, 245 A.2d. 579, 586.
> See also Condemnation; Eminent domain.
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1232]

Black's Law Dictionary also defines the word "tax" as follows:

> "Tax: A charge by the government on the income of an individual, corporation, or trust, as well as the value of an estate or gift. The objective in assessing the tax is to generate revenue to be used for the needs of the public.
> A pecuniary [relating to money] burden laid upon individuals or property to support the government, and is a payment exacted by legislative authority. In re Mytinger, D.C.Tex. 31 F.Supp. 977,978,979. Essential characteristics of a tax are that it is NOT A VOLUNTARY PAYMENT OR DONATION, BUT AN ENFORCED CONTRIBUTION, EXACTED PURSUANT TO LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY. Michigan Employment Sec. Commission v. Patt, 4 Mich.App. 228, 144 N.W.2d. 663, 665. ..."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1457]

So in order to be legitimately called a "tax" or "taxation", the money we pay to the government must fit all of the following criteria:

1. The money must be used ONLY for the support of government. It cannot go to a private person, or even to those who THINK they are private but aren't.
2. The subject of the tax must be "liable", and responsible to pay for the support of government under the force of law.
3. The money must go toward a "public purpose" rather than a "private purpose".
4. The monies paid cannot be described as wealth transfer between two people or classes of PRIVATE people within society.
5. The monies paid cannot aid one group of private individuals in society at the expense of another group, because this violates the concept of equal protection of law for all citizens found in Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1.

If the monies demanded by government do not fit all of the above requirements, then they are being used for a "private" purpose and cannot be called "taxes" or "taxation", according to the U.S. Supreme Court. Actions by the government to enforce the payment of any monies that do not meet all the above requirements can therefore only be described as:

1. Theft and robbery by the government in the guise of "taxation"
2. Government by decree rather than by law
3. Tyranny
4. Socialism
5. Mob rule and a tyranny by the "have-nots" against the "haves"
6. 18 U.S.C. §241: Conspiracy against rights. The IRS shares tax return information with states of the union, so that both of them can conspire to deprive you of your property.
7. 18 U.S.C. §242: Deprivation of rights under the color of law. The Fifth Amendment says that people in states of the Union cannot be deprived of their property without due process of law or a court hearing. Yet, the IRS tries to make it appear like they have the authority to just STEAL these people's property for a fabricated tax debt that they aren't even legally liable for.
8. 18 U.S.C. §247: Damage to religious property; obstruction of persons in the free exercise of religious beliefs
9. 18 U.S.C. §872: Extortion by officers or employees of the United States.
10. 18 U.S.C. §876: Mailing threatening communications. This includes all the threatening notices regarding levies, liens, and idiotic IRS letters that refuse to justify why government thinks we are "liable".
11. 18 U.S.C. §880: Receiving the proceeds of extortion. Any money collected from Americans through illegal enforcement actions and for which the contributors are not "liable" under the law is extorted money, and the IRS is in receipt of the proceeds of illegal extortion.
12. 18 U.S.C. §1581: Peonage, obstructing enforcement. IRS is obstructing the proper administration of the Internal Revenue Code and the Constitution, which require that they respect those who choose NOT to volunteer to participate in the federal donation program identified under subtitle A of the I.R.C.
13. 18 U.S.C. §1583: Enticement into slavery. IRS tries to enlist "nontaxpayers" to rejoin the ranks of other peons who pay taxes they aren't demonstrably liable for, which amount to slavery.
14. 18 U.S.C. §1589: Forced labor. Being forced to expend one's personal time responding to frivolous IRS notices and pay taxes on my labor that I am not liable for.

The U.S. Supreme Court has further characterized all efforts to abuse the tax system in order to accomplish "wealth transfer" as "political heresy" that is a denial of republican principles that form the foundation of our Constitution, when it issued the following strong words of rebuke. Incidentally, the case below also forms the backbone of reasons why the Internal Revenue Code can never be anything more than private law that only applies to those who volunteer into it:

> "The Legislature may enjoin, permit, forbid, and punish; they may declare new crimes; and establish rules of conduct for all its citizens in future cases; they may command what is right, and prohibit what is wrong; but they [the government] cannot change innocence [a "nontaxpayer"] into guilt [a "taxpayer"]; or punish innocence as a crime [criminally prosecute a "nontaxpayer" for violation of the tax laws]; or violate the right of an antecedent lawful private contract; or the right of private property. To maintain that our Federal, or State, Legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT and FRAUD], if they had not been expressly restrained; would, 389 in my opinion, be a political heresy, altogether inadmissible in our free republican governments."*

We also cannot assume or suppose that our government has the authority to make "gifts" of monies collected through its taxation powers, and especially not when paid to private individuals or foreign countries because:

3. The Constitution DOES NOT authorize the government to "gift" money to anyone within states of the Union or in foreign countries, and therefore, this is not a Constitutional use of public funds, nor does unauthorized expenditure of such funds produce a tangible public benefit, but rather an injury, by forcing those who do not approve of the gift to subsidize it and yet not derive any personal benefit whatsoever for it.
4. The Supreme Court identifies such abuse of taxing powers as "robbery in the name of taxation" above.

Based on the foregoing analysis, we are then forced to divide the monies collected by the government through its taxing powers into only two distinct classes. We also emphasize that every tax collected and every expenditure originating from the tax paid MUST fit into one of the two categories below:

Table 5-65: Two methods for taxation

#	Characteristic	Public use/purpose	Private use/purpose
1	Authority for tax	U.S. Constitution	Legislative fiat, tyranny
2	Monies collected described by Supreme Court as	Legitimate taxation	"Robbery in the name of taxation" (see Loan Assoc. v. Topeka, above)
3	Money paid only to following parties	Federal "employees", contractors, and agents	Private parties with no contractual relationship or agency with the government
4	Government that practices this form of taxation is	A righteous government	A THIEF
5	This type of expenditure of revenues collected is:	Constitutional	Unconstitutional
6	Lawful means of collection	Apportioned direct or indirect taxation	Voluntary donation (cannot be lawfully implemented as a "tax")
7	Tax system based on this approach is	A lawful means of running a government	A charity and welfare state for private interests, thieves, and criminals
8	Government which identifies payment of such monies as mandatory and enforceable is	A righteous government	A lying, thieving government that is deceiving the people.
9	When enforced, this type of tax leads to	Limited government that sticks to its corporate charter, the Constitution	Socialism Communism Mafia protection racket Organized extortion
10	Lawful subjects of Constitutional, federal taxation	Taxes on imports into states of the Union coming from foreign countries. See Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 (external) taxation.	No subjects of lawful taxation. Whatever unconstitutional judicial fiat and a deceived electorate will tolerate is what will be imposed and enforced at the point of a gun
11	Tax system based on	Private property VOLUNTARILY donated to a public use by its exclusive owner	All property owned by the state, which is FALSELY PRESUMED TO BE EVERYTHING. Tax becomes a means of "renting" what amounts to state property to private individuals for temporary use.

The U.S. Supreme Court also helped to clarify how to distinguish the two above categories when it said:

> "It is undoubtedly the duty of the legislature which imposes or authorizes municipalities to impose a tax to see that it is not to be used for purposes of private interest instead of a public use, and the courts can only be justified in interposing when a violation of this principle is clear and the [87 U.S. 665] reason for interference cogent. And in deciding whether, in the given case, the object for which the taxes are assessed falls upon the one side or the other of this line, they must be governed mainly by the course and usage of the government, the objects for which taxes have been customarily and by long course of legislation levied, what objects or purposes have been considered necessary to the support and for the proper use of the government, whether state or municipal. Whatever lawfully pertains to this and is sanctioned by time and the acquiescence of the people may well be held to belong to the public use, and proper for the maintenance of good government, though this may not be the only criterion of rightful taxation."

[Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874)]

If we give our government the benefit of the doubt by "assuming" or "presuming" that it is operating lawfully and consistent with the model on the left above, then we have no choice but to conclude that everyone who lawfully receives any kind of federal payment MUST be either a federal "employee" or "federal contractor" on official duty, and that the compensation received must be directly connected to the performance of a sovereign or Constitutionally authorized function of government. Any other conclusion or characterization of a lawful tax other than this is irrational, inconsistent with the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court on this subject, and an attempt to deceive the public about the role of limited Constitutional government based on Republican principles. This means that you cannot participate in any of the following federal social insurance programs WITHOUT being a federal "employee", and if you refuse to identify yourself as a federal employee, then you are admitting that your government is a thief and a robber that is abusing its taxing powers:

5. Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. I.R.C. (26 U.S.C.) sections 1, 32, and 162 all confer privileged financial benefits to the participant which constitute federal "employment" compensation.
6. Social Security.
7. Unemployment compensation.
8. Medicare.

An examination of the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(13), in fact, identifies all those who participate in the above programs as "federal personnel", which means federal "employees". To wit:

> TITLE 5 > PART I > CHAPTER 5 > SUBCHAPTER II > § 552a
> § 552a. Records maintained on individuals
> (a) Definitions.— For purposes of this section—
> (13) the term "Federal personnel" means officers and employees of the Government of the United States, members of the uniformed services (including members of the Reserve Components), individuals entitled to receive immediate or deferred retirement benefits under any retirement program of the Government of the United States (including survivor benefits).*

The "individual" they are talking about above is further defined in 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2) as follows:

> TITLE 5 > PART I > CHAPTER 5 > SUBCHAPTER II > § 552a
> § 552a. Records maintained on individuals
> (a) Definitions.— For purposes of this section—
> (2) the term "individual" means a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence;

The "citizen of the United States" they are talking above is based on the statutory rather than constitutional definition of the "United States", which means it refers to the federal zone and excludes states of the Union. Also, note that both of the two preceding definitions are found within Title 5 of the U.S. Code, which is entitled "Government Organization and Employees". Therefore, it refers ONLY to government "employees" and excludes private employees. There is no definition of the term "individual" anywhere in Title 26 (I.R.C.) of the U.S. Code or any other title that refers to private natural persons, because Congress cannot legislative for them. Notice the use of the phrase "private business" in the U.S. Supreme Court ruling below:

> "The individual may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own way [unregulated by the government]. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no duty to the State or to his neighbor to divulge his business, or to open his doors to an investigation, so far as it may tend to criminate him. He owes no such duty to the State, since he receives nothing therefrom, beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the Constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public [including so-called "taxes" under Subtitle A of the I.R.C.] so long as he does not trespass upon their rights."

The purpose of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights instead is to REMOVE authority of the Congress to legislate for private persons and thereby protect their sovereignty and dignity. That is why the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the following:

> "The makers of our Constitution undertook to secure conditions favorable to the pursuit of happiness. They recognized the significance of man's spiritual nature, of his feelings and of his intellect. They knew that only a part of the pain, pleasure and satisfactions of life are to be found in material things. They sought to protect Americans in their beliefs, their thoughts, their emotions and their sensations. They conferred, as against the Government, the right to be let alone - the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men."
> [Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438, 478 (1928) (Brandeis, J., dissenting); see also Washington v. Harper, 494 U.S. 210 (1990)]

QUESTIONS FOR DOUBTERS: If you aren't a federal statutory "employee" as a person participating in Social Security and the Internal Revenue Code, then why are all of the Social Security Regulations located in Title 20 of the Code of Federal Regulations under parts 400-499, entitled "Employee Benefits"? See for yourself:

Below is the definition of "employee" for the purposes of the above:

> 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1 Employee:
> "...the term [employee] includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a [federal] State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision, thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing*. The term 'employee' also includes an* officer of a corporation*."*

> For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes [is limited to] an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation.
> TITLE 5 > PART III > Subpart A > CHAPTER 21 > § 2105
> §2105. Employee
> (a) For the purpose of this title, "employee", except as otherwise provided by this section or when specifically modified, means an officer and an individual who is—
> (1) appointed in the civil service by one of the following acting in an official capacity—
> (A) the President;
> (B) a Member or Members of Congress, or the Congress;
> (C) a member of a uniformed service;
> (D) an individual who is an employee under this section;
> (E) the head of a Government controlled corporation; or
> (F) an adjutant general designated by the Secretary concerned under section 709 (c) of title 32;
> (2) engaged in the performance of a Federal function under authority of law or an Executive act; and
> (3) subject to the supervision of an individual named by paragraph (1) of this subsection while engaged in the performance of the duties of his position.

Keeping in mind the following rules of statutory construction and interpretation, please show us SOMEWHERE in the statutes defining "employee" that EXPRESSLY includes PRIVATE human beings working as PRIVATE workers protected by the constitution and not subject to federal law:

> "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

> "When a statute includes an explicit definition, we must follow that definition, even if it varies from that term's ordinary meaning. Meese v. Singer, Sutherland on Statutes and Statutory Construction § 47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute, read "as a whole," post at 998 [530 U.S. 943] (THOMAS, J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition. That definition does not include the Attorney General's restriction -- "the child up to the head." Its words, "substantial portion," indicate the contrary."
> [Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914 (2000)]

Another very important point to make here is that the purpose of nearly all federal law is to regulate "public conduct" rather than "private conduct". Congress must write laws to regulate and control every aspect of the behavior of its employees so that they do not adversely affect the rights of private individuals like you, who they exist exclusively to serve and protect. Most federal statutes, in fact, are exclusively for use by those working in government and simply do not apply to private citizens in the conduct of their private lives. This fact is exhaustively proven with evidence in:

> Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Federal law cannot apply to the private public at large because the Thirteenth Amendment says that involuntary servitude has been abolished. If involuntary servitude is abolished, then they can't use, or in this case "abuse" the authority of law to impose ANY kind of duty against anyone in the private public except possibly the responsibility to avoid hurting their neighbor and thereby depriving him of the equal rights he enjoys.

> For the commandments, "You shall not commit adultery," "You shall not murder," "You shall not steal," "You shall not bear false witness," "You shall not covet," and if there is any other commandment, are all summed up in this saying, namely, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself."
> Love does no harm to a neighbor; therefore love is the fulfillment of [the ONLY requirement of] the law [which is to avoid hurting your neighbor and thereby love him].*
> [Romans 13:9-10, Bible, NKJV]
> "Do not strive with a man without cause, if he has done you no harm."
> [Prov. 3:30, Bible, NKJV]

Thomas Jefferson, our most revered founding father, summed up this singular duty of government to LEAVE PEOPLE ALONE and only interfere or impose a "duty" using the authority of law when and only when they are hurting each other in order to protect them and prevent the harm when he said.

> "With all [our] blessings, what more is necessary to make us a happy and a prosperous people? Still one thing more, fellow citizens--a wise and frugal Government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned. This is the sum of good government, and this is necessary to close the circle of our felicities."
> [Thomas Jefferson: 1st Inaugural, 1801. ME 3:320]

The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed this view, when it ruled:

> "The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."
> [City of Boerne v. Florez, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

What the U.S. Supreme Court is saying above is that the government has no authority to tell you how to run your private life. This is contrary to the whole idea of the Internal Revenue Code, whose main purpose is to monitor and control every aspect of those who are subject to it. In fact, it has become the chief means for Congress to implement what we call "social engineering". Just by the deductions they offer, people are incentivized into all kinds of crazy behaviors in pursuit of reductions in a liability that they in fact do not even have. Therefore, the only reasonable thing to conclude is that Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A which would "appear" to regulate the private conduct of all human beings in states of the Union, in fact:

1. Only applies to "public employees", "public offices", and federal instrumentalities in the official conduct of their duties on behalf of the municipal corporation located in the District of Columbia, which 4 U.S.C. §72 makes the "seat of government".
2. Does not CREATE any new public offices or instrumentalities within the national government, but only regulates the exercise of EXISTING public offices lawfully created through Title 5 of the U.S. Code. The IRS abuses its forms to unlawfully CREATE public offices within the federal government. In payroll terminology, this is called "creating fictitious employees", and it is not only quite common, but highly illegal and can get private workers FIRED on the spot if discovered.
3. Regulates PUBLIC and not PRIVATE conduct and therefore does not pertain to private human beings.
4. Constitutes a franchise and a "benefit" within the meaning of 5 U.S.C. §552a. Tax "refunds" and "deductions", in fact, are the "benefit", and 26 U.S.C. §162 says that all those who take deductions MUST, in fact, be engaged in a public office within the government, which is called a "trade or business":

> TITLE 5 > PART I > CHAPTER 5 > SUBCHAPTER II > § 552a
> § 552a. Records maintained on individuals
> (12) the term "Federal benefit program" means any program administered or funded by the Federal Government, or by any agent or State on behalf of the Federal Government, providing cash or in-kind assistance in the form of payments, grants, loans, or loan guarantees to individuals*;. . .*

5. Has the job of concealing all the above facts in thousands of pages and hundreds of thousands of words so that the average American is not aware of it. That is why they call it the "code" instead of simply "law": Because it is private law you have to volunteer for and an "encryption" and concealment device for the truth. Now we know why former Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neil called the Internal Revenue Code "9500 pages of gibberish" before he quit his job in disgust and went on a campaign to criticize government.

The I.R.C. therefore essentially amounts to a part of the job responsibility and the "employment contract" of EXISTING "public employees", "public officers", and federal instrumentalities. This was also confirmed by the House of Representatives, who said that only those who take an oath of "public office" are subject to the requirements of the personal income tax. See:

The total lack of authority of the government to regulate or tax private conduct explains why, for instance:

1. The vehicle code in your state cannot be enforced on PRIVATE property. It only applies on PUBLIC roads owned by the government
2. The family court in your state cannot regulate the exercise of unlicensed and therefore PRIVATE CONTRACT marriage. Marriage licenses are a franchise that make those applying into public officers. Family court is a franchise court and the equivalent of binding arbitration that only applies to fellow statutory government "employees".
3. City conduct ordinances such as those prohibiting drinking by underage minors only apply to institutions who are licensed, and therefore PUBLIC institutions acting as public officers of the government.

Within the Internal Revenue Code, those legal "persons" who work for the government are identified as engaging in a "public office". A "public office" within the Internal Revenue Code is called a "trade or business", which is defined below. We emphasize that engaging in a privileged "trade or business" is the main excise taxable activity that in fact and in deed is what REALLY makes a person a "taxpayer" subject to the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A:

> 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701(a)(26)

> "The term 'trade or business' includes the performance of the functions of a public office."

Below is the definition of "public office":

> Public office
> "Essential characteristics of a 'public office' are:
> (1) Authority conferred by law,
> (2) Fixed tenure of office, and
> (3) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.
> (4) Key element of such test is that "officer is carrying out a sovereign function'.
> (5) Essential elements to establish public position as 'public office' are:
> (a) Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.
> (b) Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,
> (c) Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.
> (d) Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and
> (e) Position must have some permanency."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1230]

Those who are fulfilling the "functions of a public office" are under a legal, fiduciary duty as "trustees" of the "public trust", while working as "volunteers" for the "charitable trust" called the "United States Government Corporation", which we affectionately call "U.S. Inc.":

> *"As expressed otherwise, the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer. [209] Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain from a discharge of their trusts. [210] That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political entity on whose behalf he or she serves. [211] and owes a fiduciary duty to the public. [212] It has been said that the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual. [213]
> Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy.[214]"
> [63C American Jurisprudence 2d, Public Officers and Employees, §247 (1999)]

"U.S. Inc." is a federal corporation, as defined below:

> "Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes; but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be disseised,' without due process of law, is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal government, by the amendments to the constitution."

TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
CHAPTER 176 - FEDERAL DEBT COLLECTION PROCEDURE
SUBCHAPTER A - DEFINITIONS AND GENERAL PROVISIONS
Sec. 3002. Definitions

(15) "United States" means -
(A) a Federal corporation;
(B) an agency, department, commission, board, or other entity of the United States; or
(C) an instrumentality of the United States.

Those who are acting as "public officers" for "U.S. Inc." have essentially donated their formerly private property to a "public use". In effect, they have joined the SOCIALIST collective and become partakers of money STOLEN from people, most of whom, do not wish to participate and who would quit if offered an informed choice to do so.

"My son, if sinners [socialists, in this case] entice you,
Do not consent [do not abuse your power of choice]
If they say, "Come with us,
Let us lie in wait to shed blood [of innocent "nontaxpayers"];
Let us lurk secretly for the innocent without cause;
Let us swallow them alive like Sheol,
And whole, like those who go down to the Pit:
We shall fill our houses with spoil [plunder];
Cast in your lot among us,
Let us all have one purse [share the stolen LOOT]"--

My son, do not walk in the way with them [do not ASSOCIATE with them and don't let the government FORCE you to associate with them either by forcing you to become a "taxpayer"/government whore or a "U.S. citizen"],
Keep your foot from their path;
For their feet run to evil,
And they make haste to shed blood.
Surely, in vain the net is spread
In the sight of any bird;
But they lie in wait for their own blood.
They lurk secretly for their own lives.
So are the ways of everyone who is greedy for gain [or unearned government benefits];
It takes away the life of its owners."
[Proverbs 1:10-19, Bible, NKJV]

Below is what the U.S. Supreme Court says about those who have donated their private property to a "public use". The ability to volunteer your private property for "public use", by the way, also implies the ability to UNVOLUNTEER at any time, which is the part no government employee we have ever found is willing to talk about. I wonder why….DUHHHH!:

*"Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights,-'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;' and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property [or income] which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.

Any legal person, whether it be a natural person, a corporation, or a trust, may become a "public office" if it volunteers to do so. A subset of those engaging in such a "public office" are federal "employees", but the term "public office" or "trade or business" encompass much more than just government "employees". In law, when a legal "person" volunteers to accept the legal duties of a "public office", it therefore becomes a "trustee", an agent, and fiduciary (as defined in 26 U.S.C. §6903) acting on behalf of the federal government by the operation of private contract law. It becomes essentially a "franchisee" of the federal government carrying out the provisions of the franchise agreement, which is found in:

1. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, in the case of the federal income tax.

2. The Social Security Act, which is found in Title 42 of the U.S. Code.

If you would like to learn more about how this "trade or business" scam works, consult the authoritative article below:

The "Trade or Business" Scam, Form #05.001 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

If you would like to know more about the extreme dangers of participating in all government franchises and why you destroy ALL your Constitutional rights and protections by doing so, see:

1. Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
2. SEDM Liberty University, Section 4:
   http://sedm.org/LibertyU/LibertyU.htm

The IRS Form 1042-S Instructions confirm that all those who use Social Security Numbers are engaged in the "trade or business" franchise:

> Box 14, Recipient's U.S. Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN)
> You must obtain and enter a U.S. taxpayer identification number (TIN) for:
> - Any recipient whose income is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States.
> [IRS Form 1042-S Instructions, p. 14]

Engaging in a "trade or business" therefore implies a "public office", which makes the person using the number into a "public officer" who has donated his formerly private time and services to a "public use" and agreed to give the public the right to control and regulate that use through the operation of the franchise agreement, which is the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A and the Social Security Act found in Title 42 of the U.S. Code. The Social Security Number is therefore the equivalent of a "license number" to act as a "public officer" for the federal government, who is a fiduciary or trustee subject to the plenary legislative jurisdiction of the federal government pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39), 26 U.S.C. §7408(c), and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure Rule 17(b), regardless of where he might be found geographically, including within a state of the Union. The franchise agreement governs "choice of law" and where it's terms may be litigated, which is the District of Columbia, based on the agreement itself.

Now let's apply what we have learned to your employment situation. God said you cannot work for two companies at once. You can only serve one company, and that company is the federal government if you are receiving federal benefits:

> "No one can serve two masters [two employers, for instance]; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government]."
> [Luke 16:13, Bible, NKJV. Written by a tax collector]

Everything you make while working for your slave master, the federal government, is their property over which you are a fiduciary and "public officer".

> "THE" + "IRS" ="THEIRS"

A federal "public officer" has no rights in relation to their master, the federal government:

> "The restrictions that the Constitution places upon the government in its capacity as lawmaker, i.e., as the regulator of private conduct, are not the same as the restrictions that it places upon the government in its capacity as employer. We have recognized this in many contexts, with respect to many different constitutional guarantees. Private citizens perhaps cannot be prevented from wearing long hair, but policemen can. Kelley v. Johnson, 425 U.S. 238, 247 (1976). Private citizens cannot have their property searched without probable cause, but in many circumstances government employees can. O'Connor v. Ortega, 480 U.S. 709, 723 (1987) (plurality opinion); id., at 732 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment). Private citizens cannot be punished for refusing to provide the government information that may incriminate them, but government employees can be dismissed when the incriminating information that they refuse to provide relates to the performance of their job. Gardner v.

> Broderick, [497 U.S. 62, 95] 392 U.S. 273, 277 -278 (1968). With regard to freedom of speech in particular: Private citizens cannot be punished for speech of merely private concern, but government employees can be fired for that reason. Connick v. Myers, 461 U.S. 138, 147 (1983). Private citizens cannot be punished for partisan political activity, but federal and state employees can be dismissed and otherwise punished for that reason. Public Workers v. Mitchell, 330 U.S. 75, 101 (1947); Civil Service Comm'n v. Letter Carriers, 413 U.S. 548, 556 (1973); Broadrick v. Oklahoma, 413 U.S. 601, 616 -617 (1973)."
> [Rutan v. Republican Party of Illinois, 497 U.S. 62 (1990)]

Your existence and your earnings as a federal "public officer" and "trustee" and "fiduciary" are entirely subject to the whim and pleasure of corrupted lawyers and politicians, and you must beg and grovel if you expect to retain anything:

> "In the general course of human nature, A POWER OVER A MAN's SUBSISTENCE AMOUNTS TO A POWER OVER HIS WILL."
> [Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper No. 79]

You will need an "exemption" from your new slave master specifically spelled out in law to justify anything you want to keep while working on the federal plantation. The 1040 return is a profit and loss statement for a federal business corporation called the "United States". You are in partnership with your slave master and they decide what scraps they want to throw to you in your legal "cage" AFTER they figure out whatever is left in financing their favorite pork barrel project and paying off interest on an ever-expanding and endless national debt. Do you really want to reward this type of irresponsibility and surety?

The W-4 therefore essentially amounts to a federal employment application. It is your badge of dishonor and a tacit admission that you can't or won't trust God and yourself to provide for yourself. Instead, you need a corrupted "protector" to steal money from your neighbor or counterfeit (print) it to help you pay your bills and run your life. Furthermore, if your private employer forced you to fill out the W-4 against your will or instituted any duress to get you to fill it out, such as threatening to fire or not hire you unless you fill it out, then he/she is:

1. Acting as an employment recruiter for the federal government.
2. Recruiting you into federal slavery in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment, and 42 U.S.C. §1994.
3. Involved in a conspiracy to commit grand theft by stealing money from you to pay for services and protection you don't want and don't need.
4. Involved in racketeering and extortion in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1951.
5. Involved in money laundering for the federal government, by sending in money stolen from you to them, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1956.

The higher ups at the IRS probably know the above, and they certainly aren't going to tell private employers or their underlings the truth, because they aren't going to look a gift horse in the mouth and don't want to surrender their defense of "plausible deniability". They will NEVER tell a thief who is stealing for them that they are stealing, especially if they don't have to assume liability for the consequences of the theft. No one who practices this kind of slavery, deceit, and evil can rightly claim that they are loving their neighbor and once they know they are involved in such deceit, they have a duty to correct it or become an "accessory after the fact" in violation of 18 U.S.C. §3. This form of deceit is also the sin most hated by God in the Bible. Below is a famous Bible commentary on Prov. 11:1:

> "As religion towards God is a branch of universal righteousness (he is not an honest man that is not devout), so righteousness towards men is a branch of true religion, for he is not a godly man that is not honest*, nor can he expect that his devotion should be accepted; for,* 1. Nothing is more offensive to God than deceit in commerce. A false balance is here put for all manner of unjust and fraudulent practices [of our public dis-servants] in dealing with any person [within the public], which are all an abomination to the Lord, and render those abominable [hated] to him that allow themselves in the use of such accursed arts of thriving. It is an affront to justice, which God is the patron of, as well as a wrong to our neighbour, whom God is the protector of. Men [in the IRS and the Congress] make light of such frauds, and think there is no sin in that which there is money to be got by, and, while it passes undiscovered, they cannot blame themselves for it; a blot is no blot till it is hit, Hos. 12:7, 8. But they are not the less an abomination to God, who will be the avenger of those that are defrauded by their brethren. 2. Nothing is more pleasing to God than fair and honest dealing, nor more necessary to make us and our devotions acceptable to him: A just weight is his delight. He himself goes by a just weight, and holds the scale of judgment with an even hand, and therefore is pleased with those that are herein followers of him. A balance cheats, under pretence of doing right most exactly, and therefore is the greater abomination to God."
> [Matthew Henry's Commentary on the Whole Bible; Henry, M., 1996, c1991, under Prov. 11:1]

The Bible also says that those who participate in this kind of "commerce" with the government are practicing harlotry and idolatry. The Bible book of Revelations describes a woman called "Babylon the Great Harlot".

> "And I saw a woman sitting on a scarlet beast which was full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. The woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet, and adorned with gold and precious stones and pearls, having in her hand a golden cup full of abominations and the filthiness of her fornication. And on her forehead a name was written:
> MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.
> I saw the woman, drunk with the blood of the saints and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. And when I saw her, I marveled with great amazement."
> [Rev. 17:3-6, Bible, NKJV]

This despicable harlot is described below as the "woman who sits on many waters".

> "Come, I will show you the judgment of the great harlot [Babylon the Great Harlot] who sits on many waters, with whom the kings of the earth [politicians and rulers] committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth were made drunk [indulged] with the wine of her fornication."
> [Rev. 17:1-2, Bible, NKJV]

These waters are simply symbolic of a democracy controlled by mobs of atheistic people who are fornicating with the Beast and who have made it their false, man-made god and idol:

> "The waters which you saw, where the harlot sits, are peoples, multitudes, nations, and tongues."
> [Rev. 17:15, Bible, NKJV]

The Beast is then defined in Rev. 19:19 as "the kings of the earth", which today would be our political rulers:

> "And I saw the beast, the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against Him who sat on the horse and against His army."
> [Rev. 19:19, Bible, NKJV]

Babylon the Great Harlot is "fornicating" with the government by engaging in commerce with it. Black's Law Dictionary defines "commerce" as "intercourse":

> "Commerce. ...Intercourse by way of trade and traffic between different peoples or states and the citizens or inhabitants thereof, including not only the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities, but also the instrumentalities [governments] and agencies by which it is promoted and the means and appliances by which it is carried on..."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 269]

If you want your rights back people, you can't pursue government employment in the context of your private job. If you do, the Bible, not us, says you are a harlot and that you are CONDEMNED to hell!

> And I heard another voice from heaven saying, "Come out of her, my people, lest you share in her sins, and lest you receive of her plagues. For her sins have reached to heaven, and God has remembered her iniquities. Render to her just as she rendered to you, and repay her double according to her works; in the cup which she has mixed, mix double for her. In the measure that she glorified herself and lived luxuriously, in the same measure give her torment and sorrow; for she says in her heart, 'I sit as queen, and am no widow, and will not see sorrow.' Therefore her plagues will come in one day—death and mourning and famine. And she will be utterly burned with fire, for strong is the Lord God who judges her.
> [Rev. 18:4-8, Bible, NKJV]

In summary, it ought to be very clear from reading this section then, that:

1. It is an abuse of the government's taxing power, according to the U.S. Supreme Court, to pay public monies to private persons or to use the government's taxing power to transfer wealth between groups of private individuals.
2. Because of these straight jacket constraints of the use of "public funds" by the government, the government can only lawfully make payments or pay "benefits" to persons who have contracted with them to render specific services that are authorized by the Constitution to be rendered.
3. The government had to create an intermediary called the "straw man" that is a public office or agent within the government and therefore part of the government that they could pay the "benefit" to in order to circumvent the restrictions upon the government from abusing its powers to transfer wealth between private individuals.

4. The straw man is a "public office" within the U.S. government. It is a creation of Congress and an agent and fiduciary of the government subject to the statutory control of Congress. It is therefore a public entity and not a private entity which the government can therefore lawfully pay public funds to without abusing its taxing powers.
5. Those who sign up for government contracts, benefits, franchises, or employment agree to become surety for the straw man or public office and agree to act in a representative capacity on behalf of a federal corporation in the context of all the duties of the office pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
6. Because the straw man is a public office, you can't be compelled to occupy the office. You and not the government set the compensation or amount of money you are willing to work for in order to consensually occupy the office. If you don't think the compensation is adequate, you have the right to refuse to occupy the office by refusing to connect your assets to the office using the de facto license number for the office called the Taxpayer Identification Number.

5.6.12.5.10 "Political (PUBLIC) law" v. "civil (PRIVATE) law"

Within our republican government, the founding fathers recognized three classes of law:

1. Criminal law. Protects both PUBLIC and PRIVATE rights.
2. Civil law. Protects exclusively PRIVATE rights.
3. Political law. Protects exclusively PUBLIC rights of public officers and offices within the government.

The above three types of law were identified in the following document upon which the founding fathers wrote the constitution and based the design of our republican form of government:

The Spirit of Laws, Charles de Montesquieu, 1758
SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/SpiritOfLaws/sol.htm

Montesquieu defines "political law" and "political liberty" as follows:

> 1. A general Idea.
> I make a distinction between the laws that establish political liberty, as it relates to the constitution, and those by which it is established, as it relates to the citizen. The former shall be the subject of this book; the latter I shall examine in the next.*
> [The Spirit of Laws, Charles de Montesquieu, 1758, Book XI, Section 1;

The Constitution in turn is a POLITICAL document which represents law EXCLUSIVELY for public officers within the government. It does not obligate or abrogate any PRIVATE right. It defines what the courts call "public rights", meaning rights possessed and owned exclusively by the government ONLY.

> "And the Constitution itself is in every real sense a law-the lawmakers being the people themselves, in whom under our system all political power and sovereignty primarily resides, and through whom such power and sovereignty primarily speaks. It is by that law, and not otherwise, that the legislative, executive, and judicial agencies which it created exercise such political authority as they have been permitted to possess. The Constitution speaks for itself in terms so plain that to misunderstand their import is not rationally possible. 'We the People of the United States,' it says, 'do ordain and establish this Constitution.' Ordain and establish! These are definite words of enactment, and without more would stamp what follows with the dignity and character of law. The framers of the Constitution, however, were not content to let the matter rest here, but provided explicitly-'This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; ... shall be the supreme Law of the Land.' (Const. art. 6, cl. 2.) The supremacy of the Constitution as law is thus declared without qualification. That supremacy is absolute; the supremacy of a statute enacted by Congress is not absolute but conditioned upon its being made in pursuance of the Constitution. And a judicial tribunal, clothed by that instrument with complete judicial power, and, therefore, by the very nature of the power, required to ascertain and apply the law to the facts in every case or proceeding properly brought for adjudication, must apply the supreme law and reject the inferior stat- [298 U.S. 238, 297] ute whenever the two conflict. In the discharge of that duty, the opinion of the lawmakers that a statute passed by them is valid must be given great weight, Adkins v. Children's Hospital, 261 U.S. 525, 544 , 43 S.Ct. 394, 24 A.L.R. 1238; but their opinion, or the court's opinion, that the statute will prove greatly or generally beneficial is wholly irrelevant to the inquiry. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States, 295 U.S. 495, 549 , 550 S., 55 S.Ct. 837, 97 A.L.R. 947. "*
> [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

The vast majority of laws passed by Congress are what Montesquieu calls "political law" that is intended exclusively for the government and not the private citizen. The authority for implementing such political law is Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution. To wit:

> United States Constitution
> The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to Prejudice any Claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

The only areas where POLITICAL law and CIVIL law overlap is in the exercise of the political rights to vote and serve on jury duty. Why? Because jurists are regarded as public officers in 18 U.S.C. §201(a)(1):

> TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 11 > § 201
> § 201. Bribery of public officials and witnesses
> (a) For the purpose of this section—
> (1) the term "public official" means Member of Congress, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner, either before or after such official has qualified, or an officer or employee or person acting for or on behalf of the United States, or any department, agency or branch of Government thereof, including the District of Columbia, in any official function, under or by authority of any such department, agency, or branch of Government, or a juror*;*

However, it has also repeatedly been held by the courts that poll taxes are unconstitutional. Hence, voters technically are NOT to be regarded as public officers or franchisees for any purpose OTHER than their role as a voter. Recall that all statutory "Taxpayers" are public offices in the government.

Tax laws, for instance, are "political law" exclusively for the government or public officer and not the private citizen. Why? Because:

1. The U.S. Supreme Court identified taxes as a "political matter". "Political law", "political questions", and "political matters" cannot be heard by true constitutional courts and may ONLY be heard in legislative franchise courts officiated by the Executive and not Judicial branch:

> *"Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides,* the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
> [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

2. The U.S. Tax Court:
   - 2.1. Is an Article I Court in the EXECUTIVE and not JUDICIAL branch, and hence, can only officiate over matters INTERNAL to the government. See 26 U.S.C. §7441.
   - 2.2. Is a POLITICAL court in the POLITICAL branch of the government. Namely, the Executive branch.
   - 2.3. Is limited to the District of Columbia because all public offices are limited to be exercised there per 4 U.S.C. §72. It travels all over the country, but this is done ILLEGALLY and in violation of the separation of powers.
3. The activity subject to excise taxation is limited exclusively to "public offices" in the government, which is what a "trade or business" is statutorily defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).

> 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701(a)(26)
> "The term 'trade or business' includes the performance of the functions of a public office."

In Book XXVI, Section 15 of the Spirit of Laws, Montesquieu says that POLITICAL laws should not be allowed to regulate CIVIL conduct, meaning that POLITICAL laws limited exclusively to the government should not be enforced upon the PRIVATE citizen or made to "appear" as though they are "civil law" that applies to everyone:

The Spirit of Laws, Book XXVI, Section 15

15. That we should not regulate by the Principles of political Law those Things which depend on the Principles of civil Law.

As men have given up their natural independence to live under political laws, they have given up the natural community of goods to live under civil laws.

By the first, they acquired [PUBLIC] liberty; by the second, [PRIVATE] property. We should not decide by the laws of [PUBLIC] liberty, which, as we have already said, is only the government of the community, what ought to be decided by the laws concerning [PRIVATE] property. It is a paralogism to say that the good of the individual should give way to that of the public; this can never take place, except when the government of the community, or, in other words, the liberty of the subject is concerned; this does not affect such cases as relate to private property, because the public good consists in every one's having his property, which was given him by the civil laws, invariably preserved.

Cicero maintains that the Agrarian laws were unjust; because the community was established with no other view than that every one might be able to preserve his property.

Let us, therefore, lay down a certain maxim, that whenever the public good happens to be the matter in question, it is not for the advantage of the public to deprive an individual of his property, or even to retrench the least part of it by a law, or a political regulation. In this case we should follow the rigour of the civil law, which is the Palladium of [PRIVATE] property.

Thus when the public has occasion for the estate of an individual, it ought never to act by the rigour of political law; it is here that the civil law ought to triumph, which, with the eyes of a mother, regards every individual as the whole community.

If the political magistrate would erect a public edifice, or make a new road, he must indemnify those who are injured by it; the public is in this respect like an individual who treats with an individual. It is fully enough that it can oblige a citizen to sell his inheritance, and that it can strip him of this great privilege which he holds from the civil law, the not being forced to alienate his possessions.

After the nations which subverted the Roman empire had abused their very conquests, the spirit of liberty called them back to that of equity. They exercised the most barbarous laws with moderation: and if any one should doubt the truth of this, he need only read Beaumanoir's admirable work on jurisprudence, written in the twelfth century.

They mended the highways in his time as we do at present. He says, that when a highway could not be repaired, they made a new one as near the old as possible; but indemnified the proprietors at the expense of those who reaped any advantage from the road.[43] They determined at that time by the civil law; in our days, we determine by the law of politics.

What Montesquieu is implying is what we have been saying all along, and he said it in 1758, which was even before the Declaration of Independence was written:

1. The purpose of establishing government is exclusively to protect PRIVATE rights.
2. PRIVATE rights are protected by the CIVIL law. The civil law, in turn is based in EQUITY rather than PRIVILEGE:

> "Thus when the public has occasion for the estate of an individual, it ought never to act by the rigour of political law; it is here that the civil law ought to triumph, which, with the eyes of a mother, regards every individual as the whole community."

3. PUBLIC or government rights are protected by the PUBLIC or POLITICAL or GOVERNMENT law and NOT the CIVIL law.
4. The first and most important role of government is to prevent the POLITICAL or GOVERNMENT law from being used or especially ABUSED as an excuse to confiscate or jeopardize PRIVATE property.

Unfortunately, it is precisely the above type of corruption that Montesquieu describes that is the foundation of the present de facto government, tax system, and money system. ALL of them treat every human being as a PUBLIC officer against their consent, and impose what he calls the "rigors of the political law" upon them, in what amounts to unconstitutional eminent domain and a THEFT and CONFISCATION of otherwise PRIVATE property by enforcing PUBLIC law against PRIVATE people.

5.6.12.5.11 Lawful methods for converting PRIVATE property into PUBLIC property

Next, we must carefully consider all the rules by which EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE property is lawfully converted into PUBLIC property subject to government control or civil regulation. These rules are important, because the status of a particular type of property as either PRIVATE or PUBLIC determines whether either COMMON LAW or STATUTORY LAW apply respectively.

In general, only by either accepting physical property from the government or voluntarily applying for and claiming a status or right under a government franchise can one procure a PUBLIC status and be subject to STATUTORY civil law. If one wishes to be governed ONLY by the common law, then they must make their status very clear in every interaction with the government and on EVERY government form they fill out so as to avoid connecting them to any statutory franchise.

Below is a detailed list of the rules for converting PRIVATE property to PUBLIC property:

1. The purpose for establishing governments is mainly to protect private property. The Declaration of Independence affirms this:

> "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, --"
> [Declaration of Independence, 1776]

2. Government protects private rights by keeping "public [government] property" and "private property" separate and never allowing them to be joined together. This is the heart of the separation of powers doctrine: separation of what is private from what is public with the goal of protecting mainly what is private. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. All property BEGINS as private property. The only way to lawfully change it to public property is through the exercise of your unalienable constitutional right to contract. All franchises qualify as a type of contract, and therefore, franchises are one of many methods to lawfully convert PRIVATE property to PUBLIC property. The exercise of the right to contract, in turn, is an act of consent that eliminates any possibility of a legal remedy of the donor against the donee:

> "Volunti non fit injuria.
> He who consents cannot receive an injury. 2 Bouv. Inst. n. 2279, 2327; 4 T. R. 657; Shelf. on mar. & Div. 449.
> Consent removes or obviates a mistake. Co. Litt. 126.
> Melius est omnia mala pati quam malo concentire.
> It is better to suffer every wrong or ill, than to consent to it. 3 Co. Inst. 23.
> Nemo videtur fraudare eos qui sciunt, et consentiunt.
> One cannot complain of having been deceived when he knew the fact and gave his consent. Dig. 50, 17, 145."
> [Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;
> SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm]

4. In law, all rights are "property".

> Property. That which is peculiar or proper to any person; that which belongs exclusively to one. In the strict legal sense, an aggregate of rights which are guaranteed and protected by the government*. Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co. v. State, 65 Misc.Rep. 263, 121 N.Y.S. 536.* The term is said to extend to every species of valuable right and interest. More specifically, ownership; the unrestricted and exclusive right to a thing; the right to dispose of a thing in every legal way, to possess it, to use it, and to exclude everyone else from interfering with it. That dominion or indefinite right of use or disposition which one may lawfully exercise over particular things or subjects. The exclusive right of possessing, enjoying, and disposing of a thing. The highest right a man can have to anything; being used to refer to that right which one has to lands or tenements, goods or chattels, which no way depends on another man's courtesy.

> The word is also commonly used to denote everything which is the subject of ownership, corporeal or incorporeal, tangible or intangible, visible or invisible, real or personal, everything that has an exchangeable value or which goes to make up wealth or estate. It extends to every species of valuable right and interest, and includes real and personal property, easements, franchises, and incorporeal hereditaments, and includes every invasion of one's property rights by actionable wrong. Labberton v. General Cas. Co. of America, 53 Wash.2d. 180, 332 P.2d. 250, 252, 254.
> Property embraces everything which is or may be the subject of ownership, whether a legal ownership. or whether beneficial, or a private ownership. Davis v. Davis. TexCiv-App., 495 S.W.2d. 607. 611. Term includes not only ownership and possession but also the right of use and enjoyment for lawful purposes. Hoffmann v. Kinealy, Mo., 389 S.W.2d. 745, 752.
> Property, within constitutional protection, denotes group of rights inhering in citizen's relation to physical thing, as right to possess, use and dispose of it*. Cereghino v. State By and Through State Highway Commission, 230 Or. 439, 370 P.2d. 694, 697.*
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Fifth Edition, p. 1095]

By protecting your constitutional rights, the government is protecting your PRIVATE property. Your rights are private property because they came from God, not from the government. Only what the government creates can become public property. An example is corporations, which are a public franchise that makes officers of the corporation into public officers.

5. The process of taxation is the process of converting "private property" into a "public use" and a "public purpose". Below are definitions of these terms for your enlightenment.

> Public use*. Eminent domain. The constitutional and statutory basis for taking property by eminent domain. For condemnation purposes, "public use" is one which confers some benefit or advantage to the public; it is not confined to actual use by public. It is measured in terms of right of public to use proposed facilities for which condemnation is sought and, as long as public has right of use, whether exercised by one or many members of public, a "public advantage" or "public benefit" accrues sufficient to constitute a public use. Montana Power Co. v. Bokma, Mont., 457 P.2d. 769, 772, 773.*
> Public use, in constitutional provisions restricting the exercise of the right to take property in virtue of eminent domain, means a use concerning the whole community distinguished from particular individuals. But each and every member of society need not be equally interested in such use, or be personally and directly affected by it; if the object is to satisfy a great public want or exigency, that is sufficient. Ringe Co. v. Los Angeles County, 262 U.S. 700, 43 S.Ct. 689, 692, 67 L.Ed. 1186. The term may be said to mean public usefulness, utility, or advantage, or what is productive of general benefit. It may be limited to the inhabitants of a small or restricted locality, but must be in common, and not for a particular individual. The use must be a needful one for the public, which cannot be surrendered without obvious general loss and inconvenience. A "public use" for which land may be taken defies absolute definition for it changes with varying conditions of society, new appliances in the sciences, changing conceptions of scope and functions of government, and other differing circumstances brought about by an increase in population and new modes of communication and transportation. Katz v. Brandon, 156 Conn. 521, 245 A.2d. 579, 586.
> See also Condemnation; Eminent domain.
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1232]

> *"Public purpose. In the law of taxation, eminent domain, etc., this is a term of classification to distinguish the objects for which, according to settled usage, the government is to provide, from those which, by the like usage, are left to private interest, inclination, or liberality.* The constitutional requirement that the purpose of any tax, police regulation, or particular exertion of the power of eminent domain shall be the convenience, safety, or welfare of the entire community and not the welfare of a specific individual or class of persons [such as, for instance, federal benefit recipients as individuals]. "Public purpose" that will justify expenditure of public money generally means such an activity as will serve as benefit to community as a body and which at same time is directly related function of government. Pack v. Southwestern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 215 Tenn. 503, 387 S.W.2d. 789, 794 .
> The term is synonymous with governmental purpose. As employed to denote the objects for which taxes may be levied, it has no relation to the urgency of the public need or to the extent of the public benefit which is to follow; the essential requisite being that a public service or use shall affect the inhabitants as a community, and not merely as individuals. A public purpose or public business has for its objective the promotion of the public health, safety, morals, general welfare, security, prosperity, and contentment of all the inhabitants or residents within a given political division, as, for example, a state, the sovereign powers of which are exercised to promote such public purpose or public business."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1231, Emphasis added]

6. The federal government has no power of eminent domain within states of the Union. This means that they cannot lawfully convert private property to a public use or a public purpose within the exclusive jurisdiction of states of the Union:

> "The United States have no constitutional capacity to exercise municipal jurisdiction, sovereignty, or eminent domain, within the limits of a State or elsewhere, except in cases where it is delegated, and the court denies the faculty of the Federal Government to add to its powers by treaty or compact.'"
> [Dred Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. 393, 508-509 (1856)]

7. The Fifth Amendment prohibits converting private property to a public use or a public purpose without just compensation if the owner does not consent, and this prohibition applies to the Federal government as well as states of the Union. It was made applicable to states of the Union by the Fourteenth Amendment in 1868.

> Fifth Amendment - Rights of Persons
> No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.
> [United States Constitution, Fifth Amendment]

If the conversion of private property to public property is done without the express consent of the party affected by the conversion and without compensation, then the following violations have occurred:

7.1. Violation of the Fifth Amendment "takings clause" above.
7.2. "Conversion" in violation of 18 U.S.C. §654.
7.3. Theft.

8. Because taxation involves converting private property to a public use, public purpose, and public office, then it involves eminent domain if the owner of the property did not expressly consent to the taking:

> Eminent domain. The power to take private property for public use by the state, municipalities, and private persons or corporations authorized to exercise functions of public character. Housing Authority of Cherokee National of Oklahoma v. Langley, Okl., 555 P.2d. 1025, 1028. Fifth Amendment, U.S. Constitution.
> In the United States, the power of eminent domain is founded in both the federal (Fifth Amend.) and state constitutions. However, the Constitution limits the power to taking for a public purpose and prohibits the exercise of the power of eminent domain without just compensation to the owners of the property which is taken. The process of exercising the power of eminent domain is commonly referred to as "condemnation", or, "expropriation".
> The right of eminent domain is the right of the state, through its regular organization, to reassert, either temporarily or permanently, its dominion over any portion of the soil of the state on account of public exigency and for the public good. Thus, in time of war or insurrection, the proper authorities may possess and hold any part of the territory of the state for the common safety; and in time of peace the legislature may authorize the appropriation of the same to public purposes, such as the opening of roads, construction of defenses, or providing channels for trade or travel. Eminent domain is the highest and most exact idea of property remaining in the government, or in the aggregate body of the people in their sovereign capacity. It gives a right to resume the possession of the property in the manner directed by the constitution and the laws of the state, whenever the public interest requires it.
> See also Adequate compensation; Condemnation; Constructive taking; Damages; Expropriation; Fair market value; Just compensation; Larger parcel; Public use; Take.
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Fifth Edition, p. 470]

9. The Fifth Amendment requires that any taking of private property without the consent of the owner must involve compensation. The Constitution must be consistent with itself. The taxation clauses found in Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3 cannot conflict with the Fifth Amendment. The Fifth Amendment contains no exception to the requirement for just compensation upon conversion of private property to a public use, even in the case of taxation. This is why all taxes must be indirect excise taxes against people who provide their consent by applying for a license to engage in the taxed activity: The application for the license constitutes constructive consent to donate the fruits of the activity to a public use, public purpose, and public office.

10. There is only ONE condition in which the conversion of private property to public property does NOT require compensation, which is when the owner donates the private property to a public use, public purpose, or public office. To wit:

> "Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights,-'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;' and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property [or income] which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit [e.g. SOCIAL SECURITY, Medicare, and every other public "benefit"]; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation. "

The above rules are summarized below:

Table 5-66: Rules for converting private property to a public use or a public office

1	The owner of property justly acquired enjoys full and exclusive use and control over the property. This right includes the right to exclude government uses or ownership of said property.	Yes
2	He may not use the property to injure the equal rights of his neighbor. For instance, when you murder someone, the government can take your liberty and labor from you by putting you in jail or your life from you by instituting the death penalty against you. Both your life and your labor are "property". Therefore, the basis for the "taking" was violation of the equal rights of a fellow sovereign "neighbor".	No
3	He cannot be compelled or required to use it to "benefit" his neighbor. That means he cannot be compelled to donate the property to any franchise that would "benefit" his neighbor such as Social Security, Medicare, etc.	Yes
4	If he donates it to a public use, he gives the public the right to control that use.	Yes
5	Whenever the public needs require, the public may take it without his consent upon payment of due compensation. E.g. "eminent domain".	No

11. The following two methods are the ONLY methods involving consent of the owner that may be LAWFULLY employed to convert PRIVATE property into PUBLIC property. Anything else is unlawful and THEFT:
    11.1. DIRECT CONVERSION: Owner donates the property by conveying title or possession to the government.[215]
    11.2. INDIRECT CONVERSION: Owner assumes a PUBLIC status as a PUBLIC officer in the HOLDING of title to the property.[216] All such statuses and the rights that attach to it are creations and property of the government, the use of which is a privilege. The status and all PUBLIC RIGHTS that attach to it conveys a "benefit" for which the status user must pay an excise tax. The tax acts as a rental or use fee for the status, which is government property.
12. You and ONLY you can authorize your private property to be donated to a public use, public purpose, and public office. No third party can lawfully convert or donate your private property to a public use, public purpose, or public office without your knowledge and express consent. If they do, they are guilty of theft and conversion, and especially if they are acting in a quasi-governmental capacity as a "withholding agent" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(16).
    12.1. A withholding agent cannot file an information return connecting your earnings to a "trade or business" without you actually occupying a "public office" in the government BEFORE you filled out any tax form.
    12.2. A withholding agent cannot file IRS Form W-2 against your earnings if you didn't voluntarily sign an IRS Form W-4 contract and thereby consent to donate your private property to a public office in the U.S. government and therefore a "public use".
    12.3. That donation process is accomplished by your own voluntary self-assessment and ONLY by that method. Before such a self-assessment, you are a "nontaxpayer" and a private person. After the assessment, you become a "taxpayer" and a public officer in the government engaged in the "trade or business" franchise.
    12.4. In order to have an income tax liability, you must complete, sign, and "file" an income tax return and thereby assess yourself:

> "Our system of taxation is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not distraint."
> [Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145 (1960)]

By assessing yourself, you implicitly give your consent to allow the public the right to control that use of the formerly PRIVATE property donated to a public use.

[215] An example of direct conversion would be the process of "registering" a vehicle with the Department of Motor Vehicles in your state. The act of registration constitutes consent by original ABSOLUTE owner to change the ownership of the property from ABSOLUTE to QUALIFIED and to convey legal title to the state and qualified title to himself.

[216] An example of a PUBLIC status is statutory "taxpayer" (public office called "trade or business"), statutory "citizen", statutory "driver" (vehicle), statutory voter (registered voters are public officers).

A THEFT of property has occurred on behalf of the government if it attempts to do any of the following:

1. Circumvents any of the above rules.
2. Blurs, confuses, or obfuscates the distinction between PRIVATE property and PUBLIC property.
3. Refuses to identify EXACTLY which of the mechanisms identified in item 10 above was employed in EACH specific case where it:
   3.1. Asserts a right to regulate the use of private property.
   3.2. Asserts a right to convert the character of property from PRIVATE to PUBLIC.
   3.3. Asserts a right to TAX what you THOUGHT was PRIVATE property.

The next time someone from the government asserts a tax obligation, you might want to ask them the following very insightful questions based on the content of this section:

1. Please describe at EXACTLY what point in the taxation process my earnings were LAWFULLY converted from EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE to PUBLIC and thereby became SUBJECT to civil statutory law and government jurisdiction. Check one or more. If none are checked, it shall CONCLUSIVELY be PRESUMED that no tax is owed:
   1.1. _____There is no private property. EVERYTHING belongs to us and we just "RENT" it to you through taxes. Hence, we are NOT a "government" because there is not private property to protect. Everything is PUBLIC property by default.
   1.2. _____When I was born?
   1.3. _____When I became a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen?
   1.4. _____When I changed my domicile to a CONSTITUTIONAL and not STATUTORY "State".
   1.5. _____When I indicated "U.S. citizen" or "U.S. resident" on a government form, and the agent accepting it FALSELY PRESUMED that meant I was a STATUTORY "national and citizen of the United States" per 8 U.S.C. §1401 rather than a CONSTITUTIONAL "citizen of the United States".
   1.6. _____When I disclosed and used a Social Security Number or Taxpayer Identification Number to my otherwise PRIVATE employer?
   1.7. _____When I submitted my withholding documents, such as IRS Forms W-4 or W-8?
   1.8. _____When the information return was filed against my otherwise PRIVATE earnings that connected my otherwise PRIVATE earnings to a PUBLIC office in the national government?
   1.9. _____When I FAILED to rebut the false information return connecting my otherwise PRIVATE earnings to a PUBLIC office in the national government?
   1.10. _____When I filed a "taxpayer" form, such as IRS Forms 1040 or 1040NR?
   1.11. _____When the IRS or state did an assessment under the authority if 26 U.S.C. §6020(b).
   1.12. _____When I failed to rebut a collection notice from the IRS?
   1.13. _____When the IRS levied monies from my EXCLUSIVELY private account, which must be held by a PUBLIC OFFICER per 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) before it can lawfully be levied?
   1.14. _____When the government decided they wanted to STEAL my money and simply TOOK it, and were protected from the THEFT by a complicit Department of Justice, who split the proceeds with them?
   1.15. _____When I demonstrated legal ignorance of the law to the government sufficient to overlook or not recognize that it is impossible to convert PRIVATE to PUBLIC without my consent, as the Declaration of Independence requires.
2. How can the conversion from PRIVATE to PUBLIC occur without my consent and without violating the Fifth Amendment Takings Clause?
3. If you won't answer the previous questions, how the HELL am I supposed to receive constitutionally mandated "reasonable notice" of the following:
   3.1. EXACTLY what property I exclusively own and therefore what property is NOT subject to government taxation or regulation?
   3.2. EXACTLY what conduct is expected of me by the law?
4. EXACTLY where in your publications is the first question answered and why should I believe it if even you refuse to take responsibility for the accuracy of said publications?
5. EXACTLY where in the statutes and regulations is the first question answered?
6. How can you refuse to answer the above questions if your own mission statement says you are required to help people obey the law and comply with the law?

5.6.12.5.12 Unlawful methods abused by government to convert PRIVATE property to PUBLIC property

There are a LOT more ways to UNLAWFULLY convert PRIVATE property to PUBLIC property than there are ways to do it lawfully. This section will address the most prevalent methods abused by state actors so that you will immediately recognize them when you are victimized by them. For the purposes of this section CONTROL and OWNERSHIP are synonymous. Hence, if the TITLE of the property remains in your name but there is any aspect of control over the USE of said property that does not demonstrably injure others, then the property ceases to be absolutely owned and therefore is owned by the government.

Based on the previous section, there is ONLY one condition in which PRIVATE property can be converted to PUBLIC property without the consent of the owner, which is when it is used to INJURE the rights of others. Any other type of conversion is THEFT. The U.S. Supreme Court describes that process of illegally CONVERTING property from PRIVATE to PUBLIC as follows. Notice that they only reference the "citizen" as being the object of regulation, which implies that those who are "nonresidents", "transient foreigners", and "state nationals" are beyond the control of those governments in whose territory they have not chosen a civil domicile:

> "The doctrine that each one must so use his own as not to injure his neighbor — sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas — is the rule by which every member of society must possess and enjoy his property; and all legislation essential to secure this common and equal enjoyment is a legitimate exercise of State authority. Except in cases where property may be destroyed to arrest a conflagration or the ravages of pestilence, or be taken under the pressure of an immediate and overwhelming necessity to prevent a public calamity, the power of the State over the property of the citizen [NOT EVERYONE, but only those consent to become citizens by choosing a domicile] does not extend beyond such limits."
> [Munn v. Illinois, 94 U.S. 113 (1876)]

Below is a list of the more prevalent means abused by corrupt and covetous governments to illegally convert PRIVATE property to PUBLIC PROPERTY without the express consent of the owner. Many of these techniques are unrecognizable to the average American and therefore surreptitious, which is why they continue to be abused so regularly and chronically by public dis-servants:

1. Deceptively label statutory PRIVILEGES as RIGHTS.
2. Confuse STATUTORY citizenship with CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship.
3. Refuse to admit that the court you are litigating in is a FRANCHISE court that has no jurisdiction over non-franchisees or people who do not consent to the franchise.
4. Abuse the words "includes" and "including" to add anything they want to the definition of "person" or "individual" within the franchise. All such "persons" are public officers and not private human beings. See:
   Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
5. Refuse to impose the burden of proof upon the government to show that you EXPRESSLY CONSENTED to convert PRIVATE property into PUBLIC property BEFORE they can claim jurisdiction over it.
6. Silently PRESUME that the property in question is PUBLIC property connected with the "trade or business" (public office per 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26)) franchise and force you to prove that it ISN'T by CHALLENGING false information returns filed against it, such as IRS Forms W-2, 1098, 1099, and K-1. See:
   Correcting Erroneous Information Returns, Form #04.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
7. Presume that the STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL contexts for geographical words are the same. They are NOT, and in fact are mutually exclusive.
8. Presume that because you submitted an application for a franchise, that you:
   8.1. CONSENTED to the franchise and were not under duress.
   8.2. Were requesting a "benefit" and therefore agreed to the obligations associated with the "benefit".

   > CALIFORNIA CIVIL CODE
   > DIVISION 3. OBLIGATIONS
   > PART 2. CONTRACTS
   > CHAPTER 3. CONSENT
   > Section 1589
   > 1589. A voluntary acceptance of the benefit of a transaction is equivalent to a consent to all the obligations arising from it, so far as the facts are known, or ought to be known, to the person accepting.

   8.3. Agree to accept the obligations associated with the status described on the application, such as "taxpayer", "driver", "spouse".

If you want to prevent the above, reserve all your rights on the application, indicate duress, and define all terms on the form as NOT connected with any government or statutory law.

9. PRESUME that the OWNER has a civil statutory status that he or she did not consent to, such as:
   9.1. "spouse" under the family code of your state, which is a franchise.
   9.2. "driver" under the vehicle code of your state, which is a franchise.
   9.3. "taxpayer" under the tax code of your state, which is a franchise.
10. PRESUME that physical PROPERTY that is situated on federal territory to which the general and exclusive jurisdiction of the national government applies, even though it is not. This is primarily done by playing word games with geographical "words of art" such as "State" and "United States".
11. Refuse to satisfy the burden of proving that the owner of the property expressly consented in a manner that he/she prescribed to change the status of either himself or the property over which they claim a public interest.
12. Judges will interfere with attempts to introduce evidence in the proceeding that challenges any of the above presumptions.
13. Unlawfully compel the use of Social Security Numbers or Taxpayer Identification Numbers in violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(a)(8) in connection with specific property as a precondition of rendering a usually essential service. It will be illegally compelled because:
    13.1. The party against whom it was compelled was not a statutory "Taxpayer" or "person" or "individual" or to whom a duty to furnish said number lawfully applies.
    13.2. The property was not located on territory subject to the territorial jurisdiction of that national government.
14. Use one franchise as a way to recruit franchisees under OTHER franchises that are completely unrelated. For instance, they will enact a vehicle code statute that allows for confiscation of REGISTERED vehicles only that are being operated by UNLICENSED drivers. That way, everyone who wants to protect their vehicle also indirectly has to ALSO become a statutory "driver" using the public road ways for commercial activity and thus subject to regulation by the state, even though they in fact ARE NOT intending to do so.
15. Issue a license and then refuse to recognize the authority and ability in court of those possessing said license to act in an EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE capacity. For instance:
    15.1. They may have a contractor's license but they are NOT allowed to operate as OTHER than a licensed contractor…OR are NOT allowed to operate in an exclusively PRIVATE capacity.
    15.2. They may have a vehicle registration but are NOT allowed to remove it or NOT use it during times when they are NOT using the public roadways for hire, which is most of the time. In other words, the vehicle is the equivalent to "off duty" at some times. They allow police officers, who are PUBLIC officers, to be off duty, but not anyone who DOESN'T work for the government.
16. Issue or demand GOVERNMENT ID and then presume that the applicant is a statutory "resident" for ALL purposes, rather than JUST the specific reason the ID was issued. Since a "resident" is a public officer, in effect they are PRESUMING that you are a public officer 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, and that you HAVE to assume this capacity without pay or "benefit" and without the ability to quit. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002, Section 13.4 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

What all of the above government abuses have in common is that they do one or more of the following:

1. Involve PRESUMPTIONS which violate due process of law and are therefore UNCONSTITUTIONAL. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. Refuse to RECOGNIZE the existence of PRIVATE property or PRIVATE rights.
3. Violate the very purpose of establishing government to begin with, which is to PROTECT PRIVATE property by LEAVING IT ALONE and not regulating or benefitting from its use or abuse until AFTER it has been used to injure the equal rights of anyone OTHER than the original owner.
4. Violate the Unconstitutional Conditions Doctrine of the U.S. Supreme Court.
5. Needlessly interfere with the ownership or control of otherwise PRIVATE property.
6. Often act upon property BEFORE it is used to institute an injury, instead of AFTER. Whenever the law acts to PREVENT future harm rather than CORRECT past harm, it requires the consent of the owner. The common law itself only provides remedies for PAST harm and cannot act on future conduct, except in the case of injunctions where PAST harm is already demonstrated.
7. Institute involuntary servitude against the owner in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment.
8. Represent an eminent domain over PRIVATE property in violation of the state constitution in most states.
9. Violate the takings clauses of the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

10. Violate the maxim of law that the government has a duty to protect your right to NOT receive a "benefit" and NOT pay for "benefits" that you don't want or don't need.

It ought to be obvious to the reader that the basis for Socialism is public ownership of ALL property.

Any system of law that recognizes no absolute and inviolable constitutional boundary between PRIVATE property and PUBLIC property, or which regards ALL property as being subject to government taxation and/or regulation is a socialist or collectivist system. That socialist system is exhaustively described in the following:

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court characterizes efforts to violate the rules for converting PRIVATE property into PUBLIC property listed above and thereby STEAL PRIVATE property. The text below the following line up to the end of the section comes from the case indicated:

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U.S. 113 (1876)

The question presented, therefore, is one of the greatest importance, — whether it is within the competency of a State to fix the compensation which an individual may receive for the use of his own property in his private business, and for his services in connection with it.

139*139 The validity of the legislation was, among other grounds, assailed in the State court as being in conflict with that provision of the State Constitution which declares that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, and with that provision of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution which imposes a similar restriction upon the action of the State. The State court held, in substance, that the constitutional provision was not violated so long as the owner was not deprived of the title and possession of his property; and that it did not deny to the legislature the power to make all needful rules and regulations respecting the use and enjoyment of the property, referring, in support of the position, to instances of its action in prescribing the interest on money, in establishing and regulating public ferries and public mills, and fixing the compensation in the shape of tolls, and in delegating power to municipal bodies to regulate the charges of hackmen and draymen, and the weight and price of bread. In this court the legislation was also assailed on the same ground, our jurisdiction arising upon the clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, ordaining that no State shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. But it would seem from its opinion that the court holds that property loses something of its private character when employed in such a way as to be generally useful. The doctrine declared is that property "becomes clothed with a public interest when used in a manner to make it of public consequence, and affect the community at large;" and from such clothing the right of the legislature is deduced to control the use of the property, and to determine the compensation which the owner may receive for it. When Sir Matthew Hale, and the sages of the law in his day, spoke of property as affected by a public interest, and ceasing from that cause to be juris privati solely, that is, ceasing to be held merely in private right, they referred to property dedicated by the owner to public uses, or to property the use of which was granted by the government, or in connection with which special privileges were conferred. Unless the property was thus dedicated, or some right bestowed by the government was held with the property, either by specific grant or by prescription of so long a time as 140*140 to imply a grant originally, the property was not affected by any public interest so as to be taken out of the category of property held in private right. But it is not in any such sense that the terms "clothing property with a public interest" are used in this case. From the nature of the business under consideration — the storage of grain — which, in any sense in which the words can be used, is a private business, in which the public are interested only as they are interested in the storage of other products of the soil, or in articles of manufacture, it is clear that the court intended to declare that, whenever one devotes his property to a business which is useful to the public, — "affects the community at large," — the legislature can regulate the compensation which the owner may receive for its use, and for his own services in connection with it. "When, therefore," says the court, "one devotes his property to a use in which the public has an interest, he, in effect, grants to the public an interest in that use, and must submit to be controlled by the public for the common good, to the extent of the interest he has thus created. He may withdraw his grant by discontinuing the use; but, so long as he maintains the use, he must submit to the control." The building used by the defendants was for the storage of grain: in such storage, says the court, the public has an interest; therefore the defendants, by devoting the building to that storage, have granted the public an interest in that use, and must submit to have their compensation regulated by the legislature.

If this be sound law, if there be no protection, either in the principles upon which our republican government is founded, or in the prohibitions of the Constitution against such invasion of private rights, all property and all business in the State are held at the mercy of a majority of its legislature. The public has no greater interest in the use of buildings for the storage of grain than it has in the use of buildings for the residences of families, nor, indeed, anything like so great an interest; and, according to the doctrine announced, the legislature may fix the rent of all tenements used for residences, without reference to the cost of their erection. If the owner does not like the rates prescribed, he may cease renting his houses. He has granted to the public, says the court, an interest in the use of the 141*141 buildings, and "he may withdraw his grant by discontinuing the use; but, so long as he maintains the use, he must submit to the control." The public is interested in the manufacture of cotton, woollen, and silken fabrics, in the construction of machinery, in the printing and publication of books and periodicals, and in the making of utensils of every variety, useful and ornamental; indeed, there is hardly an enterprise or business engaging the attention and labor of any considerable portion of the community, in which the public has not an interest in the sense in which that term is used by the court in its opinion; and the doctrine which allows the legislature to interfere with and regulate the charges which the owners of property thus employed shall make for its use, that is, the rates at which all these different kinds of business shall be carried on, has never before been asserted, so far as I am aware, by any judicial tribunal in the United States.

The doctrine of the State court, that no one is deprived of his property, within the meaning of the constitutional inhibition, so long as he retains its title and possession, and the doctrine of this court, that, whenever one's property is used in such a manner as to affect the community at large, it becomes by that fact clothed with a public interest, and ceases to be juris privati only, appear to me to destroy, for all useful purposes, the efficacy of the constitutional guaranty. All that is beneficial in property arises from its use, and the fruits of that use; and whatever deprives a person of them deprives him of all that is desirable or valuable in the title and possession. If the constitutional guaranty extends no further than to prevent a deprivation of title and possession, and allows a deprivation of use, and the fruits of that use, it does not merit the encomiums it has received. Unless I have misread the history of the provision now incorporated into all our State constitutions, and by the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments into our Federal Constitution, and have misunderstood the interpretation it has received, it is not thus limited in its scope, and thus impotent for good. It has a much more extended operation than either court, State, or Federal has given to it. The provision, it is to be observed, places property under the same protection as life and liberty. Except by due process of law, no State can 142*142 deprive any person of either. The provision has been supposed to secure to every individual the essential conditions for the pursuit of happiness; and for that reason has not been heretofore, and should never be, construed in any narrow or restricted sense.

No State "shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law," says the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution. By the term "life," as here used, something more is meant than mere animal existence. The inhibition against its deprivation extends to all those limbs and faculties by which life is enjoyed. The provision equally prohibits the mutilation of the body by the amputation of an arm or leg, or the putting out of an eye, or the destruction of any other organ of the body through which the soul communicates with the outer world. The deprivation not only of life, but of whatever God has given to everyone with life, for its growth and enjoyment, is prohibited by the provision in question, if its efficacy be not frittered away by judicial decision.

By the term "liberty," as used in the provision, something more is meant than mere freedom from physical restraint or the bounds of a prison. It means freedom to go where one may choose, and to act in such manner, not inconsistent with the equal rights of others, as his judgment may dictate for the promotion of his happiness; that is, to pursue such callings and avocations as may be most suitable to develop his capacities, and give to them their highest enjoyment.

The same liberal construction which is required for the protection of life and liberty, in all particulars in which life and liberty are of any value, should be applied to the protection of private property. If the legislature of a State, under pretence of providing for the public good, or for any other reason, can determine, against the consent of the owner, the uses to which private property shall be devoted, or the prices which the owner shall receive for its uses, it can deprive him of the property as completely as by a special act for its confiscation or destruction. If, for instance, the owner is prohibited from using his building for the purposes for which it was designed, it is of little consequence that he is permitted to retain the 143*143 title and possession; or, if he is compelled to take as compensation for its use less than the expenses to which he is subjected by its ownership, he is, for all practical purposes, deprived of the property, as effectually as if the legislature had ordered his forcible dispossession. If it be admitted that the legislature has any control over the compensation, the extent of that compensation becomes a mere matter of legislative discretion. The amount fixed will operate as a partial destruction of the value of the property, if it fall below the amount which the owner would obtain by contract, and, practically, as a complete destruction, if it be less than the cost of retaining its possession. There is, indeed, no protection of any value under the constitutional provision, which does not extend to the use and income of the property, as well as to its title and possession.

This court has heretofore held in many instances that a constitutional provision intended for the protection of rights of private property should be liberally construed. It has so held in the numerous cases where it has been called upon to give effect to the provision prohibiting the States from legislation impairing the obligation of contracts; the provision being construed to secure from direct attack not only the contract itself, but all the essential incidents which give it value and enable its owner to enforce it. Thus, in Bronson v. Kinzie, reported in the 1st of Howard, it was held that an act of the legislature of Illinois, giving to a mortgagor twelve months within which to redeem his mortgaged property from a judicial sale, and prohibiting its sale for less than two-thirds of its appraised value, was void as applied to mortgages executed prior to its passage. It was contended, in support of the act, that it affected only the remedy of the mortgagee, and did not impair the contract; but the court replied that there was no substantial difference between a retrospective law declaring a particular contract to be abrogated and void, and one which took away all remedy to enforce it, or encumbered the remedy with conditions that rendered it useless or impracticable to pursue it. And, referring to the constitutional provision, the court said, speaking through Mr. Chief Justice Taney, that > *"it would be unjust to the memory of the distinguished men who framed it, to suppose that it was designed to protect a mere barren and 144*144 abstract right, without any practical operation upon the business of life. It was undoubtedly adopted as a part of the Constitution for a great and useful purpose. It was to maintain the integrity of contracts, and to secure their faithful execution throughout this Union, by placing them under the protection of the Constitution of the United States. And it would but Ill. become this court, under any circumstances, to depart from the plain meaning of the words used, and to sanction a distinction between the right and the remedy, which would render this provision illusive and nugatory, mere words of form, affording no protection and producing no practical result."*

And in Pumpelly v. Green Bay Company, 13 Wall. 177, the language of the court is equally emphatic. That case arose in Wisconsin, the constitution of which declares, like the constitutions of nearly all the States, that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation; and this court held that the flooding of one's land by a dam constructed across a river under a law of the State was a taking within the prohibition, and required compensation to be made to the owner of the land thus flooded. The court, speaking through Mr. Justice Miller, said: —

> "It would be a very curious and unsatisfactory result, if, in construing a provision of constitutional law, always understood to have been adopted for protection and security to the rights of the individual as against the government, and which has received the commendation of jurists, statesmen, and commentators, as placing the just principles of the common law on that subject beyond the power of ordinary legislation to change or control them, it shall be held that, if the government refrains from the absolute conversion of real property to the uses of the public, it can destroy its value entirely, can inflict irreparable and permanent injury to any extent, can, in effect, subject it to total destruction without making any compensation, because, in the narrowest sense of the word, it is not taken for the public use. Such a construction would pervert the constitutional provision into a restriction on the rights of the citizen, as those rights stood at the common law, instead of the government, and make it an authority for invasion of private right under the pretext of the public good, which had no warrant in the laws or practices of our ancestors."

The views expressed in these citations, applied to this case, would render the constitutional provision invoked by the defendants effectual to protect them in the uses, income, and revenues of their property, as well as in its title and possession. The construction actually given by the State court and by this court makes the provision, in the language of Taney, a protection to "a mere barren and abstract right, without any practical operation upon the business of life," and renders it "illusive and nugatory, mere words of form, affording no protection and producing no practical result."

The power of the State over the property of the citizen under the constitutional guaranty is well defined. The State may take his property for public uses, upon just compensation being made therefor. It may take a portion of his property by way of taxation for the support of the government. It may control the use and possession of his property, so far as may be necessary for the protection of the rights of others, and to secure to them the equal use and enjoyment of their property. The doctrine that each one must so use his own as not to injure his neighbor — sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas — is the rule by which every member of society must possess and enjoy his property; and all legislation essential to secure this common and equal enjoyment is a legitimate exercise of State authority. Except in cases where property may be destroyed to arrest a conflagration or the ravages of pestilence, or be taken under the pressure of an immediate and overwhelming necessity to prevent a public calamity, the power of the State over the property of the citizen does not extend beyond such limits.

It is true that the legislation which secures to all protection in their rights, and the equal use and enjoyment of their property, embraces an almost infinite variety of subjects. Whatever affects the peace, good order, morals, and health of the community, comes within its scope; and every one must use and enjoy his property subject to the restrictions which such legislation imposes. What is termed the police power of the State, which, from the language often used respecting it, one would suppose to be an undefined and irresponsible element in government, can only interfere with the conduct of individuals in their intercourse with each other, and in the use of their property, so far 146*146 as may be required to secure these objects. The compensation which the owners of property, not having any special rights or privileges from the government in connection with it, may demand for its use, or for their own services in union with it, forms no element of consideration in prescribing regulations for that purpose. If one construct a building in a city, the State, or the municipality exercising a delegated power from the State, may require its walls to be of sufficient thickness for the uses intended; it may forbid the employment of inflammable materials in its construction, so as not to endanger the safety of his neighbors; if designed as a theatre, church, or public hall, it may prescribe ample means of egress, so as to afford facility for escape in case of accident; it may forbid the storage in it of powder, nitro-glycerine, or other explosive material; it may require its occupants daily to remove decayed vegetable and animal matter, which would otherwise accumulate and engender disease; it may exclude from it all occupations and business calculated to disturb the neighborhood or infect the air. Indeed, there is no end of regulations with respect to the use of property which may not be legitimately prescribed, having for their object the peace, good order, safety, and health of the community, thus securing to all the equal enjoyment of their property; but in establishing these regulations it is evident that compensation to the owner for the use of his property, or for his services in union with it, is not a matter of any importance: whether it be one sum or another does not affect the regulation, either in respect to its utility or mode of enforcement. One may go, in like manner, through the whole round of regulations authorized by legislation, State or municipal, under what is termed the police power, and in no instance will he find that the compensation of the owner for the use of his property has any influence in establishing them. It is only where some right or privilege is conferred by the government or municipality upon the owner, which he can use in connection with his property, or by means of which the use of his property is rendered more valuable to him, or he thereby enjoys an advantage over others, that the compensation to be received by him becomes a legitimate matter of regulation. Submission to the regulation of compensation in such cases is an implied condition 147*147 of the grant, and the State, in exercising its power of prescribing the compensation, only determines the conditions upon which its concession shall be enjoyed. When the privilege ends, the power of regulation ceases.

Jurists and writers on public law find authority for the exercise of this police power of the State and the numerous regulations which it prescribes in the doctrine already stated, that everyone must use and enjoy his property consistently with the rights of others, and the equal use and enjoyment by them of their property. "The police power of the State," says the Supreme Court of Vermont, "extends to the protection of the lives, limbs, health, comfort, and quiet of all persons, and the protection of all property in the State. According to the maxim, sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas, which, being of universal application, it must, of course, be within the range of legislative action to define the mode and manner in which every one may so use his own as not to injure others." Thorpe v. Rutland & Burlington Railroad Co., 27 Vt. 149. "We think it a settled principle growing out of the nature of well-ordered civil society," says the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, "that every holder of property, however absolute and unqualified may be his title, holds it under the implied liability that his use of it shall not be injurious to the equal enjoyment of others having an equal right to the enjoyment of their property, nor injurious to the rights of the community." Commonwealth v. Alger, 7 Cush. 84. In his Commentaries, after speaking of the protection afforded by the Constitution to private property, Chancellor Kent says: —

> *"But though property be thus protected, it is still to be understood that the law-giver has the right to prescribe the mode and manner of using it, so far as may be necessary to prevent the abuse of the right, to the injury or annoyance of others, or of the public. The government may, by general regulations, interdict such uses of property as would create nuisances and become dangerous to the lives, or health, or peace, or comfort of the citizens. Unwholesome trades, slaughter-houses, operations offensive to the senses, the deposit of powder, the application of steam-power to propel cars, the building with combustible materials, and the burial of the dead, may all be interdicted by law, in the-midst of dense masses of population, 148*148 on the general and rational principle that every person ought so to use his property as not to injure his neighbors, and that private interests must be made subservient to the general interests of the community. 2 Kent, 340.*

The Italics in these citations are mine. The citations show what I have already stated to be the case, that the regulations which the State, in the exercise of its police power, authorizes with respect to the use of property are entirely independent of any question of compensation for such use, or for the services of the owner in connection with it.

There is nothing in the character of the business of the defendants as warehousemen which called for the interference complained of in this case. Their buildings are not nuisances; their occupation of receiving and storing grain infringes upon no rights of others, disturbs no neighborhood, infects not the air, and in no respect prevents others from using and enjoying their property as to them may seem best. The legislation in question is nothing less than a bold assertion of absolute power by the State to control at its discretion the property and business of the citizen, and fix the compensation he shall receive. The will of the legislature is made the condition upon which the owner shall receive the fruits of his property and the just reward of his labor, industry, and enterprise. "That government," says Story, "can scarcely be deemed to be free where the rights of property are left solely dependent upon the will of a legislative body without any restraint. The fundamental maxims of a free government seem to require that the rights of personal liberty and private property should be held sacred." Wilkeson v. Leland, 2 Pet. 657. The decision of the court in this case gives unrestrained license to legislative will.

The several instances mentioned by counsel in the argument and by the court in its opinion, in which legislation has fixed the compensation which parties may receive for the use of their property and services, do not militate against the views I have expressed of the power of the State over the property of the citizen. They were mostly cases of public ferries, bridges, and turnpikes, of wharfingers, hackmen, and draymen, and of interest on money. In all these cases, except that of interest on money, which I shall presently notice there was some special 149*149 privilege granted by the State or municipality; and no one, I suppose, has ever contended that the State had not a right to prescribe the conditions upon which such privilege should be enjoyed. The State in such cases exercises no greater right than an individual may exercise over the use of his own property when leased or loaned to others. The conditions upon which the privilege shall be enjoyed being stated or implied in the legislation authorizing its grant, no right is, of course, impaired by their enforcement. The recipient of the privilege, in effect, stipulates to comply with the conditions. It matters not how limited the privilege conferred, its acceptance implies an assent to the regulation of its use and the compensation for it. The privilege which the hackman and drayman have to the use of stands on the public streets, not allowed to the ordinary coachman or laborer with teams, constitutes a sufficient warrant for the regulation of their fares. In the case of the warehousemen of Chicago, no right or privilege is conferred by the government upon them; and hence no assent of theirs can be alleged to justify any interference with their charges for the use of their property.

The quotations from the writings of Sir Matthew Hale, so far from supporting the positions of the court, do not recognize the interference of the government, even to the extent which I have admitted to be legitimate. They state merely that the franchise of a public ferry belongs to the king, and cannot be used by the subject except by license from him, or prescription time out of mind; and that when the subject has a public wharf by license from the king, or from having dedicated his private wharf to the public, as in the case of a street opened by him through his own land, he must allow the use of the wharf for reasonable and moderate charges. Thus, in the first quotation which is taken from his treatise De Jure Maris, Hale says that the king has > *"a right of franchise or privilege, that no man may set up a common ferry for all passengers without a prescription time out of mind or a charter from the king. He may make a ferry for his own use or the use of his family, but not for the common use of all the king's subjects passing that way; because it doth in consequent tend to a common charge, and is become a thing of public interest and use, and every man for his passage 150*150 pays a toll, which is a common charge, and every ferry ought to be under a public regulation, viz., that it give attendance at due times, keep a boat in due order, and take but reasonable toll; for if he fail in these he is finable."*

Of course, one who obtains a license from the king to establish a public ferry, at which "every man for his passage pays a toll," must take it on condition that he charge only reasonable toll, and, indeed, subject to such regulations as the king may prescribe.

In the second quotation, which is taken from his treatise De Portibus Maris, Hale says: —

> "A man, for his own private advantage, may, in a port or town, set up a wharf or crane, and may take what rates he and his customers can agree for cranage, wharfage, housellage, pesage; for he doth no more than is lawful for any man to do, viz., makes the most of his own. If the king or subject have a public wharf, unto which all persons that come to that port must come and unlade or lade their goods as for the purpose, because they are the wharves only licensed by the king, or because there is no other wharf in that port, as it may fall out where a port is newly erected, in that case there cannot be taken arbitrary and excessive duties for cranage, wharfage, pesage, &c.; neither can they be enhanced to an immoderate rate, but the duties must be reasonable and moderate, though settled by the king's license or charter. For now the wharf and crane and other conveniences are affected with a public interest, and they cease to be juris privati only; as if a man set out a street in new building on his own land, it is now no longer bare private interest, but is affected by the public interest."

The purport of which is, that if one have a public wharf, by license from the government or his own dedication, he must exact only reasonable compensation for its use. By its dedication to public use, a wharf is as much brought under the common-law rule of subjection to reasonable charges as it would be if originally established or licensed by the crown. All property dedicated to public use by an individual owner, as in the case of land for a park or street, falls at once, by force of the dedication, under the law governing property appropriated by the government for similar purposes.

I do not doubt the justice of the encomiums passed upon Sir 151*151 Matthew Hale as a learned jurist of his day; but I am unable to perceive the pertinency of his observations upon public ferries and public wharves, found in his treatises on "The Rights of the Sea" and on "The Ports of the Sea," to the questions presented by the warehousing law of Illinois, undertaking to regulate the compensation received by the owners of private property, when that property is used for private purposes.

The principal authority cited in support of the ruling of the court is that of Alnutt v. Inglis, decided by the King's Bench, and reported in 12 East. But that case, so far from sustaining the ruling, establishes, in my judgment, the doctrine that everyone has a right to charge for his property, or for its use, whatever he pleases, unless he enjoys in connection with it some right or privilege from the government not accorded to others; and even then it only decides what is above stated in the quotations from Sir Matthew Hale, that he must submit, so long as he retains the right or privilege, to reasonable rates. In that case, the London Dock Company, under certain acts of Parliament, possessed the exclusive right of receiving imported goods into their warehouses before the duties were paid; and the question was whether the company was bound to receive them for a reasonable reward, or whether it could arbitrarily fix its compensation. In deciding the case, the Chief Justice, Lord Ellenborough, said: —

> "There is no doubt that the general principle is favored, both in law and justice, that every man may fix what price he pleases upon his own property, or the use of it; but if, for a particular purpose, the public have a right to resort to his premises and make use of them, and he have a monopoly in them for that purpose, if he will take the benefit of that monopoly, he must, as an equivalent, perform the duty attached to it on reasonable terms."

And, coming to the conclusion that the company's warehouses were invested with "the monopoly of a public privilege," he held that by law the company must confine itself to take reasonable rates; and added, that if the crown should thereafter think it advisable to extend the privilege more generally to other persons and places, so that the public would not be restrained from exercising a choice of warehouses for the purpose, the company might be enfranchised from the restriction which 152*152 attached to a monopoly; but, so long as its warehouses were the only places which could be resorted to for that purpose, the company was bound to let the trade have the use of them for a reasonable hire and reward. The other judges of the court placed their concurrence in the decision upon the ground that the company possessed a legal monopoly of the business, having the only warehouses where goods imported could be lawfully received without previous payment of the duties. From this case it appears that it is only where some privilege in the bestowal of the government is enjoyed in connection with the property, that it is affected with a public interest in any proper sense of the terms. It is the public privilege conferred with the use of the property which creates the public interest in it.

In the case decided by the Supreme Court of Alabama, where a power granted to the city of Mobile to license bakers, and to regulate the weight and price of bread, was sustained so far as regulating the weight of the bread was concerned, no question was made as to the right to regulate the price. 3 Ala. 137. There is no doubt of the competency of the State to prescribe the weight of a loaf of bread, as it may declare what weight shall constitute a pound or a ton. But I deny the power of any legislature under our government to fix the price which one shall receive for his property of any kind. If the power can be exercised as to one article, it may as to all articles, and the prices of everything, from a calico gown to a city mansion, may be the subject of legislative direction.

Other instances of a similar character may, no doubt, be cited of attempted legislative interference with the rights of property. The act of Congress of 1820, mentioned by the court, is one of them. There Congress undertook to confer upon the city of Washington power to regulate the rates of wharfage at private wharves, and the fees for sweeping chimneys. Until some authoritative adjudication is had upon these and similar provisions, I must adhere, notwithstanding the legislation, to my opinion, that those who own property have the right to fix the compensation at which they will allow its use, and that those who control services have a right to fix the compensation at which they will be rendered. The chimney-sweeps may, I think, safely claim all the compensation which 153*153 they can obtain by bargain for their work. In the absence of any contract for property or services, the law allows only a reasonable price or compensation; but what is a reasonable price in any case will depend upon a variety of considerations, and is not a matter for legislative determination.

The practice of regulating by legislation the interest receivable for the use of money, when considered with reference to its origin, is only the assertion of a right of the government to control the extent to which a privilege granted by it may be exercised and enjoyed. By the ancient common law it was unlawful to take any money for the use of money: all who did so were called usurers, a term of great reproach, and were exposed to the censure of the church; and if, after the death of a person, it was discovered that he had been a usurer whilst living, his chattels were forfeited to the king, and his lands escheated to the lord of the fee. No action could be maintained on any promise to pay for the use of money, because of the unlawfulness of the contract. Whilst the common law thus condemned all usury, Parliament interfered, and made it lawful to take a limited amount of interest. It was not upon the theory that the legislature could arbitrarily fix the compensation which one could receive for the use of property, which, by the general law, was the subject of hire for compensation, that Parliament acted, but in order to confer a privilege which the common law denied. The reasons which led to this legislation originally have long since ceased to exist; and if the legislation is still persisted in, it is because a long acquiescence in the exercise of a power, especially when it was rightfully assumed in the first instance, is generally received as sufficient evidence of its continued lawfulness. 10 Bac. Abr. 264.[*]

There were also recognized in England, by the ancient common law, certain privileges as belonging to the lord of the manor, which grew out of the state of the country, the condition of the people, and the relation existing between him and 154*154 his tenants under the feudal system. Among these was the right of the lord to compel all the tenants within his manor to grind their corn at his mill. No one, therefore, could set up a mill except by his license, or by the license of the crown, unless he claimed the right by prescription, which presupposed a grant from the lord or crown, and, of course, with such license went the right to regulate the tolls to be received. Woolrych on the Law of Waters, c. 6, of Mills. Hence originated the doctrine which at one time obtained generally in this country, that there could be no mill to grind corn for the public, without a grant or license from the public authorities. It is still, I believe, asserted in some States. This doctrine being recognized, all the rest followed. The right to control the toll accompanied the right to control the establishment of the mill.

It requires no comment to point out the radical differences between the cases of public mills and interest on money, and that of the warehouses in Chicago. No prerogative or privilege of the crown to establish warehouses was ever asserted at the common law. The business of a warehouseman was, at common law, a private business and is so in its nature. It has no special privileges connected with it, nor did the law ever extend to it any greater protection than it extended to all other private business. No reason can be assigned to justify legislation interfering with the legitimate profits of that business, that would not equally justify an intermeddling with the business of every man in the community, so soon, at least, as his business became generally useful.

5.6.12.5.13 The public office is a "fiction of law"

The fictitious public office and "trade or business" to which all the government's enforcement rights attach is called a "fiction of law" by some judges. Here is the definition:

> "Fiction of law. An assumption or supposition of law that something which is or may be false is true, or that a state of facts exists which has never really taken place. An assumption [PRESUMPTION], for purposes of justice, of a fact that does not or may not exist. A rule of law which assumes as true, and will not allow to be disproved, something which is false*, but not impossible. Ryan v. Motor Credit Co., 30 N.J.Eq. 531, 23 A.2d. 607, 621. These assumptions are of an innocent or even beneficial character, and are made for the advancement of the ends of justice. They secure this end chiefly by the extension of procedure from cases to which it is applicable to other cases to which it is not strictly applicable, the ground of inapplicability being some difference of an immaterial character. See also Legal fiction."*
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 623]

The key elements of all fictions of law from the above are:

1. A PRESUMPTION of the existence or truth of an otherwise nonexistent thing.
2. The presumptions are of an INNOCENT or BENFICIAL character.
3. The presumptions are made for the advancement of the ends of justice.
4. All of the above goals are satisfied against BOTH parties to the dispute, not just the government. Otherwise the constitutional requirement for equal protection and equal treatment has been transgressed.

The fictitious public office that forms the heart of the modern SCAM income tax clearly does not satisfy the elements for being a "fiction of law" because:

1. All presumptions that violate due process of law or result in an injury to EITHER party affected by the presumption are unconstitutional. See:

   Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
2. The presumption does not benefit BOTH parties to a dispute that involves it. It ONLY benefits the government at the expense of innocent nontaxpayers and EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE parties.
3. The presumption of the existence of the BOGUS office does NOT advance justice for BOTH parties who to any dispute involving it. The legal definition of justice is the RIGHT TO BE LEFT ALONE. The presumption of the existence of the BOGUS office ensures that those who do not want to volunteer for the office but who are the subject of FALSE information returns are NEVER left alone and are continually harassed illegally by the IRS. Here is the legal definition of "justice" so you can see for yourself:

> Justice, as a moral habit, is that tendency of the will and mode of conduct which refrains from disturbing the lives and interests of others [INCLUDING us], and, as far as possible, hinders such interference on the part of others. This virtue springs from the individual's respect for his fellows as ends in themselves and as his co equals. The different spheres of interests may be roughly classified as follows: body and life; the family, or the extended individual life; property, or the totality of the instruments of action; honor, or the ideal existence; and finally freedom, or the possibility of fashioning one's life as an end in itself. The law defends these different spheres, thus giving rise to a corresponding number of spheres of rights, each being protected by a prohibition. . . . To violate the rights, to interfere with the interests of others, is injustice. All injustice is ultimately directed against the life of the neighbor; it is an open avowal that the latter is not an end in itself, having the same value as the individual's own life. The general formula of the duty of justice may therefore be stated as follows: Do no wrong yourself, and permit no wrong to be done, so far as lies in your power; or, expressed positively: Respect and protect the right."
> *[Readings on the History and System of the Common Law, Second Edition, Roscoe Pound, 1925, p. 2]*

Therefore it is clearly a CRUEL FRAUD for any judge to justify his PRESUMPTION of the existence of the BOGUS public office that is the subject of the excise tax by calling it a "fiction of law".

If you want to see an example of WHY this fiction of law was created as a way to usurp jurisdiction, read the following U.S. Supreme Court cite:

> *"It is true, that the person who accepts an office may be supposed to enter into a compact to be answerable to the government, which he serves, for any violation of his duty; and, having taken the oath of office, he would unquestionably be liable, in such case, to a prosecution for perjury in the Federal Courts. But because one man, by his own act, renders himself amenable to a particular jurisdiction, shall another man, who has not incurred a similar obligation, be implicated? If, in other words, it is sufficient to vest a jurisdiction in this court, that a Federal Officer is concerned; if it is a sufficient proof of a case arising under a law of the United States to affect other persons, that such officer is bound, by law, to discharge his duty with fidelity; a source of jurisdiction is opened, which must inevitably overflow and destroy all the barriers between the judicial authorities of the State and the general government. Anything which can prevent a Federal Officer from the punctual, as well as from an impartial, performance of his duty; an assault and battery; or the recovery of a debt, as well as the offer of a bribe, may be made a foundation of the jurisdiction of this court; and, considering the constant disposition of power to extend the sphere of its influence, fictions will be resorted to, when real cases cease to occur. A mere fiction, that the defendant is in the custody of the marshall, has rendered the jurisdiction of the King's Bench universal in all personal actions."
> SOURCE: http://scholar.google.com/scholar_case?case=3339893669697439168]

The reason for the controversy in the above case was that the bribe occurred on state land by a nonresident domiciled in the state, and therefore that federal law did not apply. In the above case, the court admitted that a "fiction" was resorted to usurp jurisdiction because no legal authority could be found. The fact that the defendant was in custody created the jurisdiction. It didn't exist before they KIDNAPPED him. Notice also that they mention an implied "compact" or contract related to the office being exercised, and that THAT compact was the source of their jurisdiction over the officer who was bribed. This is the SAME contract to which all those who engage in a statutory "trade or business" are party to.

5.6.12.6 Introduction to the Law of Agency[217]

A very important subject to learn is the law of agency. This law is intimately related to franchises because:

1. All franchises are contracts or agreements.
2. Contracts produce agency.
3. Agency, in turn, is how:
   3.1. PRIVATE property is converted to PUBLIC property.
   3.2. Public rights are associated with otherwise private individuals.
4. Civil statuses such as "taxpayer", "person", "spouse", "driver" are the method of representing the existence of the agency created by contracts and franchises.

In the following subsections, we will summarize the law of agency so that you can see how franchises implement it and thereby adversely impact and take away your PRIVATE rights by converting them to PUBLIC rights, often without your knowledge. Exploitation of the ignorance of the average American about this subject is the main method that governments use to unwittingly recruit more taxpayers, surety for government debt, and public officers called "citizens" and "residents".

If you would like to study the law of agency from a legal perspective, please read the following exhaustive free treatise at Archive.org, which we used in preparing the subsections which follow:

> A Treatise on the Law of Agency in Contract and Tort, George L Reinhard, A.B., LL. D., The Bowen-Merrill Company, 1902

5.6.12.6.1 Agency generally

Entire legal treatises hundreds of pages in length have been written about the laws of agency. To save you the trouble of reading them, we summarize the basics below:

1. The great bulk of trade and commerce in the world is carried on through the instrumentality of agents; that is to say, persons acting under authority delegated to them by others, and not in their own right or on their own account.
2. Parties: There are two parties involved in agency:
   2.1. The principal, who is the person delegating the authority or consent.
   2.2. The agent, who is the person receiving the authority.
3. Who is a principal: A person of sound independent mind who delegates authority to the agent. He is legally responsible or liable for the acts of the agent, so long as the agent is doing a lawful act authorized by the principal in his/her sui juris capacity.
4. Who is an agent: An agent-- sometimes called servant, representative, delegate, proxy, attorney-- is a person who undertakes, by some subsequent ratification of the principal, to transact some business or manage some affair for the latter, and to render an account of it. He is a substitute for a person, employed to manage the affairs of another. He is a person duly authorized to act on behalf of another, or one whose unauthorized act has been duly ratified. There are various classes of agents, each of which is known or recognized by some distinctive appellation or name; as factor, broker, employee, representative, etc.
5. What is agency: A legal relation, founded upon the express or implied contract of the parties, or created by law, by virtue of which one party—the agent—is employed or authorized to represent and act for the other—the principal—in business dealings with third persons.
6. Agency is usually acquired by contract. Contracts are not enforceable without consideration. Therefore, to prove that the agency was lawfully created, the principal has the burden of proving that the Agent received "consideration" or "benefit" not as the PRINCIPAL defines it, but as the AGENT defines it. We cover this in:

The Government "Benefits" Scam, Form #05.040 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7. Fundamental Principles of Agency: The fundamental principles of the law agency are:
   - 7.1. Whatever a person does through another, he does through himself.
   - 7.2. He who does not act through the medium of another is, in law, considered as having done it himself.
   - 7.3. Those who act through agents must have the legal capacity to do so. That is:
     - 7.3.1. Lunatics, infants, and idiots cannot delegate authority to someone to manage affairs that they themselves are incapable of managing personally.
     - 7.3.2. Those who delegate authority must be of legal age.
     - 7.3.3. The act to be delegated must be lawful. You cannot enforce a contract that delegates authority to commit a crime.
   - 7.4. The principal is usually liable for the acts of his agent. He is not liable in all cases for the torts of his agent or employee, but only for those acts committed in the course of the agency or employment; while the agent himself is, in such cases, for reasons of public policy, also liable for the same. Broom Legal Maxims 843.
   - 7.5. Those who receive the "benefits" of agency have a reciprocal duty to suffer the obligations also associated with it.
8. Each specific form of agency we voluntarily and explicitly accept has a specific civil status associated with it in the civil statutory law. Such statuses include:
   - 8.1. "Taxpayer" under the tax code.
   - 8.2. "Driver" under the vehicle code.
   - 8.3. "Spouse" under the family code.
9. Certain types of agency and the obligations attached to the agency may not be enforceable in court between the parties. These include:
   - 9.1. Agency to commit a crime. This is called a conspiracy.
   - 9.2. An alienation by the principle of an INALIENABLE right. This includes any surrender of constitutional rights by a state citizen protected by the Constitution to any government, even with consent.

5.6.12.6.2 Agency within the Bible

God is a spiritual being who most people have never seen in physical form. As such, to influence the affairs of this physical Earth, He must act through His agents. Those agents are called believers, Christians, "god's family", etc. in the case of Christianity. The law of agency governs His acts and the consequences of those acts as He influences the affairs of this Earth. This chapter will therefore summarize the law of agency so that it can be applied to the Bible, which we will regard in this document as a delegation order that circumscribes the exercise of God's agency on Earth by believers.

It is very important to study and know the law of agency, because the Bible itself is in fact a delegation of authority from God to believers. That delegation of authority occurred when God created the Earth in the book of Genesis and commanded Adam and Eve to have dominion over the Earth:

> *Then God said, "Let Us make man in Our image, according to Our likeness; let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, over the birds of the air, and over the cattle, over all the earth and over every creeping thing that creeps on the earth. " So God created man in His own image; in the image of God He created him; male and female He created them. Then God blessed them, and God said to them, "Be fruitful and multiply; fill the earth and subdue it; have dominion over the fish of the sea, over the birds of the air, and over every living thing that moves on the earth."
> [Gen. 1:26-28, Bible, NKJV]

Now some facts as we understand them about agency in the Bible:

1. God describes himself as Law itself:

> "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. He was in the beginning with God. All things were made through Him, and without Him nothing was made that was made. In Him was life, and the life was the light of men. And the light shines in the darkness, and the darkness did not comprehend it.
> [John 1:1-5, Bible, NKJV]

2. Those who sin are what Jesus called "lawless". Matt. 7:23. The word "sin" in Latin means "without". The thing that people who sin are "without" is the authority of God and His laws.
3. The "Kingdom of Heaven" is defined in scripture as "God's will displayed on Earth". See:

"Kingdom of Heaven" Defined in Scripture, Exhibit #01.014
http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm

4. Christians are "subjects" in the "Kingdom of Heaven". Psalm 47:7. A "subject" is an agent and franchise of a specific "king".
5. The Kingdom of Heaven is a private corporation and franchise created and granted by God and not Caesar. As such, those who are members of it owe nothing to Caesar to receive the "benefits" of participation in it. The creator of a thing is always the owner. See:

Hierarchy of Sovereignty: The Power to Create is the Power to Tax, Family Guardian Fellowship
http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Remedies/PowerToCreate.htm

6. Those who are acting as agents of God are referred to as being "in Him". By that we mean they are legally rather than physically WITHIN the corporation of the Kingdom of Heaven as agents and officers of God in Heaven.

> "My mother and My brothers are these who hear the word of God and do it."
> [Luke 8:21, Bible, NKJV]

> "He who has [understands and learns] My commandments [laws in the Bible (OFFSITE LINK)] and keeps them, it is he who loves Me. And he who loves Me will be loved by My Father, and I will love him and manifest Myself to him."
> [John 14:21, Bible, NKJV]

> "And we have known and believed the love that God has for us. God is love, and he who abides in love [obedience to God's Laws] abides in [and is a FIDUCIARY of] God, and God in him."
> [1 John 4:16, Bible, NKJV]

> "Now by this we know that we know Him [God], if we keep His commandments. He who says, "I know Him," and does not keep His commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. But whoever keeps His word, truly the love of God is perfected in him. By this we know that we are in Him [His fiduciaries]. He who says he abides in Him [as a fiduciary] ought himself also to walk just as He [Jesus] walked."
> [1 John 2:3-6, Bible, NKJV]

7. Those who accept God and become believers take on a new identity, which in effect is that of an agent and servant of God:

> Therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, put on tender mercies, kindness, humility, meekness, longsuffering; bearing with one another, and forgiving one another, if anyone has a complaint against another; even as Christ forgave you, so you also must do. But above all these things put on love, which is the bond of perfection. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to which also you were called in one body; and be thankful. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatever you do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through Him.
> [Colossians 3:12-17, Bible, NKJV]

The "one body" spoken of above is the private corporation called the "Kingdom of Heaven" to put it in legal terms. When it says "Let the word of Christ dwell in you", he means to follow your delegation order, which is God's word. When it says "do all in the name of the Lord Jesus", they mean that you are acting as an AGENT of the Lord Jesus 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. If God gets the credit or the "benefit", then He is the REAL actor and responsible party under the law of agency.

8. While acting as "agents" or "servants" of God in strict conformance with God's delegation of authority order in the Bible, the party liable for the consequences of those acts is the Master or Principal of the agency under the law of agency, which means God and not the person doing the act.
9. The phrase "free exercise of religion" found in the First Amendment refers to our right and ability to be faithful agents of God, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.
   9.1. Any attempt to interfere with the exercise of that agency is an interference of your right to contract.
   9.2. Any attempt to command agents of God to violate their delegation order is a violation of the First Amendment. This includes commanding believers to do what God forbids or forbidding them to do what God commands.
10. The law of agency allows that one can fulfill multiple agencies simultaneously. You can be a father, brother, son, employer, employee, taxpayer, citizen (even of multiple countries) all simultaneously, but in different contexts and in relation to different people or "persons". HOWEVER, the Bible forbids Christians from simultaneously being "subjects" under His law and "subjects" under the civil laws of Caesar. The reason is clear. It creates criminal conflict of interest and conflicting allegiances:

> "No one can serve two masters [two Kings or rulers, for instance]; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government]."
> [Luke 16:13, Bible, NKJV. Written by a tax collector]

11. The First Commandment of the Ten Commandments states that we shall not "serve other gods", meaning idols. To "serve" another god literally means to act as the AGENT of that false god or idol. When you execute the will of another, and especially an EVIL other, you are an agent of that other. Its unavoidable.
12. All agency begins with an act of consent, contract, or agreement.
    12.1. Agency cannot lawfully be created WITHOUT consent.
    12.2. Since God forbids us from becoming agents of false gods or idols and thereby "serving" them in violation of the First Commandment, He therefore also forbids us from legally allowing or creating that agency by consenting or exercising our right to contract.

> *"My son, if sinners [socialists, in this case] entice you,
> Do not consent [do not abuse your power of choice]
> If they say, "Come with us,
> Let us lie in wait to shed blood [of innocent "nontaxpayers"];
> Let us lurk secretly for the innocent without cause;
> Let us swallow them alive like Sheol,
> And whole, like those who go down to the Pit:
> We shall fill our houses with spoil [plunder];
> Cast in your lot among us,
> Let us all have one purse [the GOVERNMENT socialist purse, and share the stolen LOOT]"--
> My son, do not walk in the way with them [do not ASSOCIATE with them and don't let the government FORCE you to associate with them either by forcing you to become a "taxpayer"/government whore or a "U.S. citizen"],
> Keep your foot from their path;
> For their feet run to evil,
> And they make haste to shed blood.
> Surely, in vain the net is spread
> In the sight of any bird;
> But they lie in wait for their own blood.
> They lurk secretly for their own lives.
> So are the ways of everyone who is greedy for gain [or unearned government benefits];
> It takes away the life of its owners."
> [Proverbs 1:10-19, Bible, NKJV]

> "You shall make no covenant [contract or franchise] with them [foreigners, pagans], nor with their [pagan government] gods [laws or judges]. They shall not dwell in your land [and you shall not dwell in theirs by becoming a "resident" or domiciliary in the process of contracting with them], lest they make you sin against Me [God]. For if you serve their [government] gods [under contract or agreement or franchise], it will surely be a snare to you."
> [Exodus 23:32-33, Bible, NKJV]

> "Awake, awake, O Zion, clothe yourself with strength. Put on your garments of splendor, O Jerusalem, the holy city. The uncircumcised and defiled will not enter you again. Shake off your dust; rise up, sit enthroned, O Jerusalem [Christians]. Free yourself from the chains [contracts and franchises] on your neck, O captive Daughter of Zion. For this is what the LORD says: "You were sold for nothing [free government cheese worth a fraction of what you had to pay them to earn the right to "eat" it], and without money you will be redeemed."
> [Isaiah 52:1-3, Bible, NKJV]

> "I [God] brought you up from Egypt [slavery] and brought you to the land of which I swore to your fathers; and I said, 'I will never break My covenant with you. And you shall make no covenant [contract or franchise or agreement of ANY kind] with the inhabitants of this [corrupt pagan] land; you shall tear down their [man/government worshipping socialist] altars.' But you have not obeyed Me. Why have you done this?
> "Therefore I also said, 'I will not drive them out before you; but they will become as thorns [terrorists and persecutors] in your side and their gods will be a snare [slavery!] to you.'"
> So it was, when the Angel of the LORD spoke these words to all the children of Israel, that the people lifted up their voices and wept.
> [Judges 2:1-4, Bible, NKJV]

> 'For among My [God's] people are found wicked [covetous public servant] men; They lie in wait as one who sets snares; They set a trap; They catch men. As a cage is full of birds, So their houses are full of deceit. Therefore they have become great and grown rich. They have grown fat, they are sleek; Yes, they surpass the deeds of the wicked; They do not plead the cause, The cause of the fatherless [or the innocent, widows, or the nontaxpayer]; Yet they prosper, And the right of the needy they do not defend. Shall I not punish them for these things?' says the Lord. 'Shall I not avenge Myself on such a nation as this?'
> "An astonishing and horrible thing Has been committed in the land: The prophets prophesy falsely, And the priests [judges in franchise courts that worship government as a pagan deity] rule by their own power; And My people love to have it so. But what will you do in the end?"
> [Jer. 5:26-31, Bible, NKJV]

13. We all sin, and when we do so, we are agents of Satan:
    13.1. We are agents of Satan ONLY within the context of that specific sin, and not ALL contexts. Below is a commentary on Luke 4:7 which demonstrates this:

> Wilt worship before me (προσκυνησῃς ἐνωπιον ἐμου [proskunēsēis enōpion emou]). Matt. 4:9 has it more bluntly "worship me." That is what it really comes to, though in Luke the matter is more delicately put. It is a condition of the third class (ἐαν [ean] and the subjunctive). Luke has it "thou therefore if" (συ οὐν ἐαν [su oun ean]), in a very emphatic and subtle way. It is the ingressive aorist (προσκυνησῃς [proskunēsēis]), just bow the knee once up here in my presence. The temptation was for Jesus to admit Satan's authority by this act of prostration (fall down and worship), a recognition of authority rather than of personal merit. It shall all be thine (ἐσται σου πασα [estai sou pāsa]). Satan offers to turn over all the keys of world power to Jesus. It was a tremendous grand-stand play, but Jesus saw at once that in that case he would be the agent of Satan in the rule of the world by bargain and graft instead of the Son of God by nature and world ruler by conquest over Satan. The heart of Satan's program is here laid bare. Jesus here rejected the Jewish idea of the Messiah as an earthly ruler merely. "He rejects Satan as an ally, and thereby has him as an implacable enemy" (Plummer.)
> [Robertson, A. T. (1933). Word Pictures in the New Testament (Lk 4:7). Nashville, TN: Broadman Press]

    13.2. Those who sin and therefore act as "agents of Satan" are separated or removed from the protection of God and His Law. In effect, they have abandoned their office under His delegation order as Christians and are "off duty" acting in a private capacity rather than as an agent. They are serving or "worshipping" the ego of self rather than a greater being above them.
14. When we do good, we are agents of God fulfilling our delegation of authority order in the Bible. That is why the Bible says to do all for the glory of God RATHER than self.
15. Since we all sin and we all do good, then we serve both God and Satan at different times. In that sense, we are serving God and Mammon at the same time, but in different contexts and in relation to different audiences. For instance:
    15.1. When we serve government, we violate the First Commandment by "serving other gods" if that government has any rights above our own or above that of any ordinary man. That's idolatry.
    15.2. We are also sinning and therefore acting as agents of Satan if the government forces us to do things God forbids or NOT do things that He commands.

    In other words, we are exceeding our delegation order and therefore are acting in a PRIVATE capacity and therefore outside the protection of God's law and delegation order. This is EXACTLY the same mechanism that government uses to protect its own agents, and it's a cheap imitation of how God does the same thing.

If you would like an exhaustive treatise proving that the Bible is in fact a delegation of authority order from God to Christians, please read the following on our site:

Delegation of Authority Order from God to Christians, Form #13.007 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.12.6.3 Agency within government

The law of agency dictates the entire organization of government and the legal system it implements and enforces. For instance:

1. The source of sovereignty is the People as individuals.
2. The People as individuals get together and act as a collective to agree on a Constitution. The will of the majority is what delegates that authority.
3. The Constitution then delegates a portion of the sovereign powers of individual humans to public servants using the Constitution.

4. The people then elect "representatives" in the Legislative Branch, who are their agents, to implement the declared intent of the Constitution.
5. The representatives of the people in the Legislative Branch then vote to enact civil statutory codes that implement the Constitution among those who are employed by the government as public servants.

> "All the powers of the government [including ALL of its civil enforcement powers against the public] must be carried into operation by individual agency, either through the medium of public officers, or contracts made with [private] individuals."
> [Osborn v. Bank of U.S., 22 U.S. 738 (1824)]

> "The reason why States are "bodies politic and corporate" is simple: just as a corporation is an entity that can act only through its agents, "[t]he State is a political corporate body, can act only through agents, and can command only by laws." Poindexter v. Greenhow, supra, 114 U.S., at 288, 5 S.Ct. at 912-913. See also Black's Law Dictionary 159 (5th ed. 1979) ("[B]ody politic or corporate": "A social compact by which the whole people covenants with each citizen, and each citizen with the whole people, that all shall be governed by certain laws for the common good"). As a "body politic and corporate," a State falls squarely within the Dictionary Act's definition of a "person."*
> [Will v. Michigan Dept. of State Police, 491 U.S. 58, 109 S.Ct. 2304 (U.S.Mich.,1989)]

6. The civil statutory codes function in effect as a contract or compact that can and does impose duties only upon agents of the government called "citizens" and "residents".
   6.1. Those who did not consent to BECOME agents of the government called "citizens" or "residents" are non-resident non-persons. They are protected by the Constitution and the common law, rather than the statutory civil law.
   6.2. Disputes between "citizens" or "residents" on the one hand, and non-resident non-persons on the other, must be governed by the common law, because otherwise a taking of property without just compensation has occurred in which the rights enforced by the civil law are the property STOLEN by those enforcing it against non-residents.
7. The Executive Branch then executes the statutes, which in effect are their "delegation order".
   7.1. The first step in "executing" the statutes is to write interpretive regulations specifying how the statutes will be implemented.
   7.2. The interpretive regulations are then published in the Federal Register to give the public the constitutionally required "reasonable notice" of the obligations they create upon the public, if any.
   7.3. When the Executive Branch acts WITHIN the confines of their delegation order, they are agents of the state and are protected by official, judicial, and sovereign immunity.
   7.4. When the Executive Branch exceeds their delegation order in the statutes, they are deemed by the courts to be acting in a private capacity and therefore must surrender official, judicial, and sovereign immunity and come down to the level of an ordinary human who has committed a trespass.
8. The Judicial Branch then fulfills the role of arbitrating disputes:
   8.1. Under the civils statutory codes, we have disputes between:
      8.1.1. The Legislative and Executive Branch.
      8.1.2. The government and private humans.
      8.1.3. Two humans when they have injured each other.
   8.2. Under the constitution and the common law we have disputes between two EQUAL parties which have no duty to each other OTHER than that of "justice" itself, which is legally defined as the right to be left alone.

Some basic principles underlie the above chain of delegation of authority:

1. The People as individuals cannot delegate an authority to THE COLLECTIVE that they do not individually and personally have.

> Nemo dat qui non habet. No one can give who does not possess. Jenk. Cent. 250.

> Nemo plus juris ad alienum transfere potest, quam ispe habent. One cannot transfer to another a right which he has not. Dig. 50, 17, 54; 10 Pet. 161, 175.

> Nemo potest facere per alium quod per se non potest. No one can do that by another which he cannot do by himself.

> Qui per alium facit per seipsum facere videtur. He who does anything through another, is considered as doing it himself. Co. Litt. 258.

> Quicpuid acquiritur servo, acquiritur domino. Whatever is acquired by the servant, is acquired for the master. 15 Bin. Ab. 327.
> Quod per me non possum, nec per alium. What I cannot do in person, I cannot do by proxy [the Constitution]. 4 Co. 24.
> What a man cannot transfer, he cannot bind by articles [the Constitution].
> [Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856; SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm]

2. The People as a collective cannot delegate an authority to a government through a Constitution that the people individually and personally do not also have.
3. Those receiving an authority delegated through the Constitution have a fiduciary duty to the public they serve:

> "As expressed otherwise, the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer. [218] Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain from a discharge of their trusts*.* [219] That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political entity on whose behalf he or she serves. [220] and owes a fiduciary duty to the public. [221] It has been said that the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual. [222] Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy.[223] "
> [63C American Jurisprudence 2d, Public Officers and Employees, §247 (1999)]

4. The agent or public servant cannot be greater than or have more rights or powers than his master in the eyes of the law. In other words, public servants and people they serve must be EQUAL in the eyes of the law at all times:

> Remember the word that I [Jesus] said to you, "A [public] servant is not greater than his master." If they persecuted Me, they will also persecute you. If they kept My word, they will keep yours also.

5. The act of delegating specific authority from a private human with unalienable rights cannot cause a surrender of the authority from whom it is delegated, because according to the Declaration of Independence, rights created by God and bestowed upon human beings are UNALIENABLE, which means that you are legally incapable of surrendering them entirely.

> "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights*, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, --"*
> [Declaration of Independence]
> "Unalienable. Inalienable; incapable of being aliened, that is, sold and transferred."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1693]

5.6.12.6.4 Illegal uses of agency or compelled agency

1. Certain types of agency and the obligations attached to the agency may not be enforceable in court between the parties. Any attempt to enforce therefore constitutes a TORT and even in many cases a CRIME. These include:
   1.1. Agency to commit a crime. This is called a conspiracy.
   1.2. An alienation by the principle of an INALIENABLE right. This includes any surrender of constitutional rights by a state citizen protected by the Constitution to any government, even with consent.
2. Illegal uses of agency include:
   2.1. Duress: Duress occurs when someone is compelled to accept the duties of a specific civil status through threats, unlawful government enforcement, threats of unlawful enforcement, violence, or coercion of some kind. Examples include:
      2.1.1. Offering or enforcing franchises outside the exclusive territorial jurisdiction of a specific government. This is private business activity.
      2.1.2. Offering or enforcing franchises among those who are not eligible because their rights are Unalienable and therefore cannot lawfully be given away as per the Declaration of Independence.
      2.1.3. Tax collection notices sent to non-residents who are not statutory "taxpayers".
      2.1.4. Compelling people to fill out government applications signed under penalty of perjury that misrepresent their status. This is criminal witness tampering.
      2.1.5. Nor providing a status block on every government form to offer "Other" or "Nonresident" or "Not subject but not statutorily exempt".
      2.1.6. Threatening to withhold private employment or commercial relations unless people declare a civil status in relation to government that they do not want. This is extortion.[224]
   2.2. Identity theft occurs when someone is associated with a civil status, usually on a government form or application, that they do not consent to have or which they cannot lawfully have. See:

Government Identity Theft, Form #05.046 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. Duress: It is an important principle of law that when a party is under coercion or duress, the real actor is the SOURCE of the duress, and not the person forced to do the act. This principle also applies to those under the compulsion of a civil statute, as indicated by the U.S. Supreme Court in the State Action Doctrine:

> For petitioner to recover under the substantive count of her complaint, she must show a deprivation of a right guaranteed to her by the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Since the 'action inhibited by the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment is only such action as may fairly be said to be that of the States,' Shelley v. Kraemer, 334 U.S. 1, 13, 68 S.Ct. 836, 842, 92 L.Ed. 1161 (1948), we must decide, for purposes of this case, the following 'state action' issue: Is there sufficient state action to prove a violation of petitioner's Fourteenth Amendment rights if she shows that Kress refused her service because of a state-enforced custom compelling segregation of the races in Hattiesburg restaurants?
> *In analyzing this problem, it is useful to state two polar propositions, each of which is easily identified and resolved. On the one hand, the Fourteenth Amendment plainly prohibits a State itself from discriminating because of race. On the other hand, § 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment does not forbid a private party, not acting against a backdrop of state compulsion or involvement, to discriminate on the basis of race in his personal affairs as an expression of his own personal predilections. As was said in Shelley v. Kraemer, supra, § 1 of '(t)hat Amendment erects no shield against merely private conduct, however discriminatory or wrongful.' 334 U.S., at 13, 68 S.Ct., at 842.
> At what point between these two extremes a State's involvement in the refusal becomes sufficient to make the private refusal to serve a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment, is far from clear under our case law. If a State had a law requiring a private person to refuse service because of race, it is clear beyond dispute that the law would violate the Fourteenth Amendment and could be declared invalid and enjoined from enforcement. Nor can a State enforce such a law requiring discrimination through either convictions of proprietors who refuse to discriminate, or trespass prosecutions of patrons who, after being denied service pursuant to such a law, refuse to honor a request to leave the premises.40
> The question most relevant for this case, however, is a slightly different one. It is whether the decision of an owner of a restaurant to discriminate on the basis of race under the compulsion of state law offends the Fourteenth Amendment. Although this Court has not explicitly decided the Fourteenth Amendment state action issue implicit in this question, underlying the Court's decisions in the sit-in cases is the notion that a State is responsible for the discriminatory act of a private party when the State, by its law, has compelled the act. As* > *the Court said in Peterson v. City of Greenville, 373 U.S. 244, 248, 83 S.Ct. 1119, 1121 (1963): 'When the State has commanded a particular result, it has saved to itself the power to determine that result and thereby 'to a significant extent' has 'become involved' in it.' Moreover, there is much support in lower court opinions for the conclusion that discriminatory acts by private parties done under the compulsion of state law offend the Fourteenth Amendment. In Baldwin v. Morgan, supra, the Fifth Circuit held that '(t)he very act of posting and maintaining separate (waiting room) facilities when done by the (railroad) Terminal as commanded by these state orders is action by the state.' The Court then went on to say: 'As we have pointed out above the State may not use race or color as the basis for distinction. It may not do so by direct action or through the medium of others who are under State compulsion to do so.' Id., 287 F.2d at 755—756 (emphasis added). We think the same principle governs here.

[224] On this subject, Leon Trotsky, the Soviet communist said: ""In a country where the sole employer is the State...the old principle: who does not work shall not eat, has been replaced by a new one: who does not obey shall not eat."

> For state action purposes it makes no difference of course whether the racially discriminatory act by the private party is compelled by a statutory provision or by a custom having the force of law—in either case it is the State that has commanded the result by its law. Without deciding whether less substantial involvement of a State might satisfy the state action requirement of the Fourteenth Amendment, we conclude that petitioner would show an abridgement of her equal protection right, if she proves that Kress refused her service because of a state-enforced custom of segregating the races in public restaurants.

5.6.12.7 Synonyms for "trade or business"

Another important concept we need to be very aware of is that there are also synonyms for "trade or business" used within the Internal Revenue Code.

5.6.12.7.1 "wages"

The term "wages" is synonymous with a "trade or business". Below is the proof from 26 U.S.C. §3401, where it says that earnings not in the course of an employer's "trade or business" are exempted from "wages".

> § 3401. Definitions

The above is also completely consistent with the IRS Form W-2 itself, which is an information return that 26 U.S.C. §6041 says may ONLY be filed to document earnings in excess of $600 in the course of a "trade or business".

So if you aren't engaged in a "trade or business", then your private employer cannot lawfully or truthfully report "wages" on an IRS Form W-2 in connection with you. If they do, they are in criminal violation of 26 U.S.C. §7207, which provides for a $10,000 fine and imprisonment for up to one year for filing a false information return such as a W-2.

Those who do not serve in a "public office" therefore can only earn "wages" if they sign an agreement and stipulate to call their PRIVATE earnings wages. In the absence of such an agreement, it is false and fraudulent and a criminal offense to report any amount other than ZERO on an IRS Form W-2 in connection with a person who is not engaged in a "trade or business". These conclusions are confirmed by 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1:

> Title 26: Internal Revenue

If the employee executes a new Form W-4, the request upon which an agreement under section 3402 (p) is based shall be attached to, and constitute a part of, such new Form W-4.*

The above is also reiterated again in the Treasury Regulations below:

(1) Except as provided in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, the amounts referred to in paragraph (a) of this section include any remuneration for services performed by an employee for an employer which, without regard to this section, does not constitute wages under section 3401(a). For example, remuneration for services performed by an agricultural worker or a domestic worker in a private home (amounts which are specifically excluded from the definition of wages by section 3401(a) (2) and (3), respectively) are amounts with respect to which a voluntary withholding agreement may be entered into under section 3402(p). See §§31.3401(c)–1 and 31.3401(d)–1 for the definitions of "employee" and "employer".*

If you do not give your private employer an IRS Form W-4 or if it is signed under duress and indicates so, it is a criminal offense to report anything other than ZERO on any IRS Form W-2 that is sent to the IRS. Even if the IRS orders the private employer to withhold at single zero, he can STILL only withhold on "wages", which are ZERO for a person who never signed or submitted an IRS Form W-4. 100% of ZERO is still ZERO. Furthermore, nothing signed under any threat of duress, such as a threat to either fire you or not hire you for refusing to sign and submit an IRS Form W-4 can be described as a "voluntary agreement" pursuant to any of the above regulations and anyone who concludes otherwise is engaged in a criminal conspiracy against your rights. This is ESPECIALLY true if they are acting under the "color of law" as a voluntary officer of the government, such as an "employer".

> "An agreement [consent] obtained by duress, coercion, or intimidation is invalid, since the party coerced is not exercising his free will, and the test is not so much the means by which the party is compelled to execute the agreement as the state of mind induced.[225] Duress, like fraud, rarely becomes material, except where a contract or conveyance has been made which the maker wishes to avoid. As a general rule, duress renders the contract or conveyance voidable, not void, at the option of the person coerced,[226] and it is susceptible of ratification. Like other voidable contracts, it is valid until it is avoided by the person entitled to avoid it.[227] However, duress in the form of physical compulsion, in which a party is caused to appear to assent when he has no intention of doing so, is generally deemed to render the resulting purported contract void.[228]"
> [American Jurisprudence 2d, Duress, §21 (1999)]

Yet another confirmation of the conclusions of this section is found in the Individual Master File (IMF) that the IRS uses to maintain a record of your tax liability. The amount of "taxable income" is called NOT "income", but "wages" at the end of the report! Quite telling. See for yourself:

5.6.12.7.2 "personal services"

The term "personal services" in nearly all cases where it is used in the code means "work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business". Here is an example:

> 26 C.F.R. Sec. 1.469-9 Rules for certain rental real estate activities.
> (b)(4) PERSONAL SERVICES.
> Personal services means any work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business. However, personal services do not include any work performed by an individual in the individual's capacity as an investor as described in section 1.469-5T(f)(2)(ii).

The only place in the code where "personal services" is mentioned outside the context of a "trade or business" is the case where earnings from it are NOT taxable:

> 26 U.S.C. §861 Income from Sources Within the United States
> (a)(3) "...Compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States shall not be deemed to be income from sources within the United States if-
> (C) the compensation for labor or services performed as an employee of or under contract with--
> (i) a nonresident alien..not engaged in a trade or business in the United States..."

Therefore, whenever you see the term "personal services", it means "work performed by an individual in connection with a 'trade or business'" unless specifically defined otherwise. This will become very important when we are talking about earnings of "U.S. citizens" who are abroad.

5.6.12.7.3 "United States"

The term "sources within the United States" is also a synonym for "trade or business" under the I.R.C. in most cases. Under 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3), all earnings from originating within the statutory "United States", which is defined as federal territory that is not within the exclusive jurisdiction of any constitutional State of the Union in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) is also treated as "effectively connected with a trade or business".

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART I > § 864
> §864. Definitions and special rules
> (c) Effectively connected income, etc.
> (3) Other income from sources within United States
> All income, gain, or loss from sources within the United States (other than income, gain, or loss to which paragraph (2) applies) shall be treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

Therefore, whenever you see the phrase "sources within the United States" associated with any earnings, then indirectly, it is being associated with a "trade or business". This is the case for 26 U.S.C. §871(a), which identifies income of "nonresident aliens" only from within the statutory "United States" (federal territory) that is not connected to a "trade or business". 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3) says that this income is ALSO connected with a trade or business if it was derived from sources within the statutory but not constitutional "United States" (federal territory). 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(2) identifies all sources of income not associated with a "trade or business" and they include ONLY:

1. 26 U.S.C. §871(a)(1): Income of nonresident aliens other than capital gains derived from patents, copyrights, sale of original issue discounts, gains described in I.R.C. 631(b) or (c), interest, dividends, rents, salaries, premiums, annuities from sources within the statutory "United States" (federal territory).
2. 26 U.S.C. §871(h): Earnings of nonresident aliens from portfolio debt instruments
3. 26 U.S.C. §881(a): Earnings of foreign corporations from patents, copyrights, gains, and interest not connected with a trade or business.

26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) define the statutory "United States" in a "geographical sense" only as being federal territories and possessions.

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701. [Internal Revenue Code]

> CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES
> Sec. 110. Same; definitions
> (d) The term "State" includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

However, I.R.C. Section 864 above does not directly state or imply a "geographical sense", so it may have some other undefined meaning. We allege that the ONLY way that working for a living can be an excise taxable privilege or "trade or business" is where the Constitution itself, in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 requires all "public offices" ("trades or businesses"), to be exercised, which is the District of Columbia:

> United States Constitution
> Article I: Legislative Department
> Section 8: Powers of Congress
> Clause 17: Seat of Government
> *Congress shall have power * * * To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square) as may, by Cession of particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of Government of the United States, and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock–Yards, and other needful Buildings.*

Since accepting a public office in the federal government is a voluntary act, then the tax is voluntary. If you don't want to pay it, you don't accept or run for the office. In furtherance of the above, 4 U.S.C. §72 requires all "public offices" that are the subject of the tax upon a "trade or business" to be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and NOT elsewhere, except as "expressly provided by law":

> TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 3 > § 72
> § 72. Public offices; at seat of Government
> All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law.

Therefore, all persons engaged in public offices MUST serve ONLY in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere, and there is no enactment of Congress authorizing them to serve in any state of the Union. Therefore, the term "United States" as used throughout Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A:

1. Does not imply a "geographical sense", because that phrase is never used in combination with the term "United States" anywhere we could find. Instead, this definition is a red herring.
2. Does not imply any state of the Union or any part of any state of the Union.

Federal Enforcement Authority Within States of the Union, Form #05.032 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. Implies the United States government or "national government" and not the "federal government" of the states of the Union. See Federalist Paper #39 for details.
4. Applies only to persons domiciled on federal territory called the "United States" and subject to the exclusive or general or plenary jurisdiction of Congress. 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(3) requires that a person cannot have a "tax home" unless their "abode", meaning "domicile" is within the "United States". The tax is applied against the "tax home" of the "individual", which individual is a "public officer" within the United States government. States of the Union are not "territory" as that word is correctly understood within American legal jurisprudence.

Consequently, "sources within the United States*" really refers to payments to or from the U.S. government, all of which are enumerated and described and listed in 26 U.S.C. §871 in the context of "nonresident aliens". I.R.C., Subtitle A is therefore a "kickback program" for federal instrumentalities, domiciliaries, franchises, and employees, and the "profit and loss" statement for these instrumentalities is IRS Form 1040. The tax is on the "profit" of these instrumentalities, which the I.R.S. calls "income". 26 U.S.C. §643(b) confirms that "income" means the earnings of a trust or estate connected with a public office and NOT all earnings. That "trust" is the "public trust". Government is a "public trust" per Executive Order 12731 and 5 C.F.R. §2635.101(a). If you never received a payment from the government or accepted a payment on behalf of the government while acting in a representative capacity as a "public officer", then we allege that you cannot be a "taxpayer" or have a tax liability pursuant to I.R.C., Subtitle A This is also consistent with the holding of the U.S. Supreme Court on this subject:

> "Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98, was an action of trespass or, as appears by the original record, replevin, brought in the circuit court for the District of Columbia to try the right of Congress to impose a direct tax for general purposes on that District. 3 Stat. at L. 216, chap. 60. It was insisted that Congress could act in a double capacity: in one as legislating [182 U.S. 244, 260] for the states; in the other as a local legislature for the District of Columbia. In the latter character, it was admitted that the power of levying direct taxes might be exercised, but for District purposes only, as a state legislature might tax for state purposes; but that it could not legislate for the District under art. 1, 8, giving to Congress the power 'to lay and collect taxes, imposts, and excises,' which 'shall be uniform throughout the United States,' inasmuch as the District was no part of the > United States [described in the Constitution]. It was held that the grant of this power was a general one without limitation as to place, and consequently extended to all places over which the government extends; and that it extended to the District of Columbia as a constituent part of the United States. The fact that art. 1 , 2, declares that 'representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states . . . according to their respective numbers' furnished a standard by which taxes were apportioned, but not to exempt any part of the country from their operation. 'The words used do not mean that direct taxes shall be imposed on states only which are represented, or shall be apportioned to representatives; but that direct taxation, in its application to states, shall be apportioned to numbers.' That art. 1, 9, 4, declaring that direct taxes shall be laid in proportion to the census, was applicable to the District of Columbia, 'and will enable Congress to apportion on it its just and equal share of the burden, with the same accuracy as on the respective states. If the tax be laid in this proportion, it is within the very words of the restriction. It is a tax in proportion to the census or enumeration referred to.' It was further held that the words of the 9th section did not 'in terms require that the system of direct taxation, when resorted to, shall be extended to the territories, as the words of the 2d section require that it shall be extended to all the states. They therefore may, without violence, be understood to give a rule when the territories shall be taxed, without imposing the necessity of taxing them.'"

The conclusions of this section are also consistent with 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d), which both effectively kidnap a "taxpayers" identity and move it to the District of Columbia for the purposes of I.R.C., Subtitle A The "citizen" and "resident" they are talking about in these statutes are statutory and not constitutional "citizens" and "residents" which rely on the statutory term "United States", which means a person domiciled on federal territory and NOT domiciled within any state of the Union. Why would they need such a provision and why would they try to fool you into declaring yourself to be a "U.S. citizen" using their deceptive forms if they REALLY had jurisdiction within states of the Union? More about this later.

5.6.12.7.4 Statutory "citizen of the United States" or "U.S. citizen"

You may wonder as we have how it is that Congress can make it a crime to falsely claim to be a statutory "U.S. citizen" in 18 U.S.C. §911.

> TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 43 > § 911
> § 911. Citizen of the United States
> Whoever falsely and willfully represents himself to be a citizen of the United States[] shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

The reason is that you cannot tax or regulate something until abusing it becomes harmful. A "license", after all, is legally defined as permission from the state to do that which is otherwise illegal or harmful or both. And of course, you can only tax or regulate things that are harmful and licensed. Hence, they had to:

1. Create yet another franchise.
2. Attach a "status" to the franchise called "citizen of the United States", where "United States" implies the GOVERNMENT and not any geographical place.
3. Criminalize the abuse of the "status" and the rights that attach to the status.
4. Make adopting the status entirely discretionary on the part of those participating. Hence, invoking the "status" and the "benefits" and "privileges" associated with the status constitutes constructive consent to abide by all the statutes that regulate the status.

> California Civil Code
> DIVISION 3. OBLIGATIONS
> PART 2. CONTRACTS

> http://www.leginfo.ca.gov/cgi-bin/displaycode?section=civ&group=01001-02000&file=1565-1590]

5. Impose a tax or fine or "licensing fee" for those adopting or invoking the status. That tax, in fact, is the federal income tax codified in I.R.C., Subtitle A.

Every type of franchise works and is implemented exactly the same way, and the statutory "U.S. citizen" or "citizen of the United States" franchise is no different. This section will prove that being a "citizen of the United States" under the I.R.C. is, in fact, a franchise, that the franchise began in 1924 by judicial pronouncement, and that because the status is a franchise and all franchises are voluntary, you don't have to participate, accept the "benefits", or pay for the costs of the franchise if you don't consent.

As you will eventually learn, one becomes a "citizen" in a common law or constitutional sense by being born or naturalized in a country and exercising their First Amendment right of political association by voluntarily choosing a national and a municipal domicile in that country. How can Congress criminalize the exercise of the First Amendment right to politically associate with a "state" and thereby become a citizen? After all, the courts have routinely held that Congress cannot criminalize the exercise of a right protected by the Constitution.

> "It is an unconstitutional deprivation of due process for the government to penalize a person merely because he has exercised a protected statutory or constitutional right. United States v. Goodwin, 457 U.S. 368, 372 , 102 S.Ct. 2485, 2488, 73 L.Ed.2d. 74 (1982)."
> [People of Territory of Guam v. Fegurgur, 800 F.2d. 1470 (9th Cir. 1986)]

Even the U.S. Code recognizes the protected First Amendment right to not associate during the passport application process. Being a statutory and not constitutional "citizen" is an example of type of membership, because domicile is civil membership in a territorial community usually called a county, and you cannot be a "citizen" without a domicile:

> TITLE 22 > CHAPTER 38 > § 2721
> § 2721. Impermissible basis for denial of passports
> A passport may not be denied issuance, revoked, restricted, or otherwise limited because of any speech, activity, belief, affiliation, or membership, within or outside the United States, which, if held or conducted within the United States, would be protected by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The answer to how Congress can criminalize the exercise of a First Amendment protected right of political association that is the foundation of becoming a "citizen" therefore lies in the fact that the statutory "U.S. citizen" mentioned in 18 U.S.C. §911 is not a constitutional citizen protected by the Constitution, but rather is:

1. Not a human being or a private person but a statutory creation of Congress. The ability to regulate private conduct, according to the U.S. Supreme Court, is repugnant to the U.S. Constitution and therefore Congress can ONLY regulate public conduct and the public offices and franchises that it creates.

> *"The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. 2. A statutory franchise and a federal corporation created on federal territory and domiciled there. Notice the key language "Whenever the public and private acts of the government seem to comingle [in this case, through the offering and enforcement of PRIVATE franchises to the public at large such as income taxes], a citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place…" What Congress did was perform this substitution in the franchise agreement itself (the I.R.C.) BEFORE the controversy ever even reached the court such that this judicial doctrine could be COVERTLY applied! They want to keep their secret weapon secret.

> See Jones, 1 Cl.Ct. at 85 ("Wherever the public and private acts of the government seem to commingle, a citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place, and then the question be determined whether the action will lie against the supposed defendant"); O'Neill v. United States, 231 Ct.Cl. 823, 826 (1982) (sovereign acts doctrine applies where, "[w]ere [the] contracts exclusively between private parties, the party hurt by such governing action could not claim compensation from the other party for the governing action"). The dissent ignores these statements (including the statement from Jones, from which case Horowitz drew its reasoning literally verbatim), when it says, post at 931, that the sovereign acts cases do not emphasize the need to treat the government-as-contractor the same as a private party.

3. Property of the U.S. government. All franchises and statuses incurred under franchises are property of the government grantor. The government has always had the right to criminalize abuses of its property.
4. A public office in the government like all other franchise statuses.
5. An officer of a corporation, which is "U.S. Inc." and is described in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). All federal corporations are "citizens", and therefore a statutory "U.S. citizen" is really just the corporation that you are representing as a public officer.

> "A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only."
> [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

Ordinarily, and especially in the case of states of the Union, domicile within that state by the state "citizen" is the determining factor as to whether an income tax is owed to the state by that citizen:

> "domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

> "Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
> [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

We also establish the connection between domicile and tax liability in the following article.

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed that the statutory "citizen of the United States" mentioned in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §911 and at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) is not associated with either domicile OR with constitutional citizenship (nationality) of the human being who is the "taxpayer" in the following case. The party they mentioned, Cook, was domiciled within Mexico at the time, which meant he was NOT a statutory "citizen of the United States" under the Internal Revenue Code but rather a "non-resident non-person". However, because he CLAIMED to be a statutory "citizen of the United States" and the Supreme Court colluded with that FRAUD, they treated him as one ANYWAY.

> *We may make further exposition of the national power as the case depends upon it. It was illustrated at once in United States v. Bennett by a contrast with the power of a state. It was pointed out that there were limitations upon the latter that were not on the national power. The taxing power of a state, it was decided, encountered at its borders the taxing power of other states and was limited by them. There was no such limitation, it was pointed out, upon the national power, and that the limitation upon the states affords, it was said, no ground for constructing a barrier around the United States, 'shutting that government off from the exertion of powers which inherently belong to it by virtue of its sovereignty.'

> "The contention was rejected that a citizen's property without the limits of the United States derives no benefit from the United States. The contention, it was said, came from the confusion of thought in 'mistaking the scope and extent of the sovereign power of the United States as a nation and its relations to its citizens and their relation to it.' And that power in its scope and extent, it was decided, is based on the presumption that government by its very nature benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and that opposition to it holds on to citizenship while it 'belittles and destroys its advantages and blessings by denying the possession by government of an essential power required to make citizenship completely beneficial.' In other words, the principle was declared that the government, by its very nature, benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and therefore has the power to make the benefit complete. Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but upon his relation as citizen to the United States and the relation of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be legal—the government having power to impose the tax."
> [Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924)]

So the key thing to note about the above is that the tax liability attaches to the STATUS of BEING a statutory but not constitutional "citizen of the United States" under the Internal Revenue Code, and NOT to domicile of the party, based on the above case.

> "Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but upon his relation as citizen to the United States and the relation of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be legal—the government having power to impose the tax."

There are only two ways to reach a nonresident party through the civil law: Domicile and contract.[229] That status of being a statutory "U.S. citizen" under the Internal Revenue Code, in turn, can only be a franchise contract that establishes a "public office" in the U.S. government, which is the property of the U.S. Government that the creator of the franchise can regulate or tax ANYWHERE under the franchise "protection" contract. All rights that attach to STATUS are, in fact, franchises, and the Cook case is no exception. This, in fact, is why falsely claiming to be a "U.S. citizen" is a crime under 18 U.S.C. §911, because the status is "property" of the national government and abuse of said property or the public rights and "benefits" that attach to it is a crime. The use of the "Taxpayer Identification Number" then becomes a de facto "license" to exercise the privilege. You can't license something unless it is ILLEGAL to perform without a license, so they had to make it illegal to claim to be a statutory "U.S. citizen" before they could license it and tax it.

How can they tax someone without a domicile in the "United States" and with no earnings from the United States in the case of Cook, you might ask? Well, the REAL "taxpayer" is a public office in the U.S. government. That office REPRESENTS the United States federal corporation. All corporations are "citizens" of the place of their incorporation, and therefore under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), the effective domicile of the "taxpayer" is the District of Columbia.[230] All taxes are a civil liability that are implemented with civil law. The only way they could have reached extraterritorially with civil law to tax Cook without him having a domicile or residence anywhere in the statutory "United States" was through a private law franchise contract in which he was a public officer. It is a maxim of law that debt and contract know no place, meaning that they can be enforced anywhere.

> Debt and contract [franchise agreement, in this case] are of no particular place.
> Locus contractus regit actum.
> The place of the contract [franchise agreement, in this case] governs the act.
> [Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;
> SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm]

The feds have jurisdiction over their own public officers wherever they are but the EFFECTIVE civil domicile of all such offices and officers is the District of Columbia pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). Hence, the ONLY thing such a statutory "citizen of the United States" could be within the I.R.C. is a statutory creation of Congress that is actually a public office which is domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional "United States*" in order for the ruling in Cook to be constitutional or even lawful. AND, according to the Cook case, having that status is a discretionary choice that has NOTHING to do with your circumstances, because Cook was NOT a statutory "citizen of the United States" as someone not domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional "United States". Instead, he was a "non-resident non-person" because of his foreign domicile and the fact that he was no engaged in a public office in the national government. The court allowed him to accept the voluntary "benefit" of the statutory status and hence, it had nothing to do with his circumstances, but rather his CHOICE to nominate a "protector" and join a civil statutory franchise. Simply INVOKING the status of being a statutory "citizen of the United States" on a government form is the only magic word needed to give one's consent to become a "taxpayer" in that case. It is what the court called a "benefit", and all "benefits" are voluntary and the product of a franchise contract. It was a quasi-contract as all taxes are, because the consent was implied rather than explicit, and it manifested itself by using property of the government, which in this case was the STATUS he claimed.

[229] See section 5.2.4: The Two Sources of Federal Civil Jurisdiction: "Domicile" and "Contract"; http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm.

[230] "A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only." [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

> *"Even if the judgment is deemed to be colored by the nature of the obligation whose validity it establishes, and we are free to re-examine it, and, if we find it to be based on an obligation penal in character, to refuse to enforce it outside the state where rendered, see Wisconsin v. > [Milwaukee v. White, 296 U.S. 268 (1935)]

You might reasonably ask of the Cook case, as we have, the following question:

> "HOW did the government create the public office that they could tax and which Cook apparently occupied as a franchisee?"

Well, apparently the "citizen of the United States" status he claimed is a franchise and an office in the U.S. government that carries with it the "public right" to make certain demands upon those who claim this status. Hence, it represents a "property interest" in the services of the United States federal corporation. In law, all rights are property, anything that conveys rights is property, contracts convey rights and are therefore property, and all franchises are contracts and therefore property. A "public officer" is legally defined as someone in charge of the property of the public, and the property Cook was in possession of was the public rights that attach to the status of being a statutory "citizen of the United States".

> "Public office. The right, authority, and duty created and conferred by law, by which for a given period, either fixed by law or enduring at the pleasure of the creating power, an individual is invested with some portion of the sovereign functions of government for the benefit of the public. Walker v. Rich, 79 Cal.App. 139, 249 P. 56, 58. An agency for the state, the duties of which involve in their performance the exercise of some portion of the sovereign power, either great or small. State v. Brennan, 49 Ohio.St. 33, 29 N.E. 593.
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1235]

For Cook, the statutory status of being a "citizen of the United States" was the "res" that "identified" him within the jurisdiction of the federal courts, and hence made him a "res-ident" or "resident" subject to the tax with standing to sue in a territorial franchise court, which is what all U.S. District Courts are. In effect, he waived sovereign immunity and became a statutory "resident alien" by invoking the services of the federal courts, and as such, he had to pay for their services by paying the tax. Otherwise, he would have no standing to sue in the first place because he would be a "stateless person" and they would have had to dismiss his case.

If you would like a much more thorough discussion of all of the nuances of the Cook case, we strongly recommend the following:

Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.018, Section 4.4 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Here is another HUGE clue about what they think a "U.S. citizen" really is in federal statutes. Look at the definition below, and then consider that you CAN'T own a human being as property. That's called slavery:

> TITLE 46 > Subtitle V > Part A > CHAPTER 505 > § 50501
> § 50501. Entities deemed citizens of the United States
> (a) In General.—
> In this subtitle, a corporation, partnership, or association is deemed to be a citizen of the United States only if the controlling interest is owned by citizens of the United States. However, if the corporation, partnership, or association is operating a vessel in the coastwise trade, at least 75 percent of the interest must be owned by citizens of the United States.

Now look at what the U.S. Supreme Court said about "ownership" of human beings. You can't "own" a human being as chattel. The Thirteenth Amendment prohibits that. Therefore, the statutory "U.S. citizen" they are talking about above is an instrumentality and public office within the United States. They can only tax, regulate, and legislate for PUBLIC objects and public offices of the United States under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2. The ability to regulate PRIVATE conduct of human beings has repeatedly been held by the U.S. Supreme Court to be "repugnant to the constitution" and beyond the jurisdiction of Congress.

> "It [the contract] is, in substance and effect, a contract for servitude, with no limitation but that of time; leaving the master to determine what the service should be, and the place where and the person to whom it should be rendered. Such a contract, it is scarcely necessary to say, is against the policy of our institutions and laws. If such a sale of service could be lawfully made for five years, it might, from the same reasons, for ten, and so for the term of one's life. The door would thus be opened for a species of servitude inconsistent with the first and fundamental article of our declaration of rights, which, proprio vigore, not only abolished every vestige of slavery then existing in the commonwealth, but rendered every form of it thereafter legally impossible. That article has always been regarded, not simply as the declaration of an abstract principle, but as having the active force and conclusive authority of law.' Observing that one who voluntarily subjected himself to the laws of the state must find in them the rule of restraint as well as the rule of action, the court proceeded: 'Under this contract the plaintiff had no claim for the labor of the servant for the term of five years, or for any term whatever. She was under no legal obligation to remain in his service. There was no time during which her service was due to the plaintiff, and during which she was kept from such service by the acts of the defendants.'
> *Under the contract of service it was at the volition of the master to entail service upon these appellants for an indefinite period. So far as the record discloses, it was an accident that the vessel came back to San Francisco when it did. By the shipping articles, the appellants could not quit the vessel until it returned to a port of the 296 United States, and such return depended absolutely upon the will of the master. He had only to land at foreign ports, and keep the vessel away from the United States, in order to prevent the appellants from leaving his service.
> The supreme law of the land now declares that involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, of which the party shall have been duly convicted, shall not exist any where within the United States.
> [Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 17 S.Ct. 326 (U.S. 1897)]

Federal courts also frequently use the phrase "privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States". Below is an example:

> "The privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States do not necessarily include all the rights protected by the first eight amendments to the Federal Constitution against the powers of the Federal Government.
> The trial of a person accused as a criminal by a jury of only eight persons instead of twelve, and his subsequent imprisonment after conviction do not abridge his privileges and immunities under the Constitution as a citizen of the United States and do not deprive him of his liberty without due process of law."
> *[Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U.S. 581 (1900)]*

Note that the "citizen of the United States" described above is a statutory rather than constitutional citizen, which is why the court admits that the rights of such a person are inferior to those possessed by a "citizen" within the meaning of the United States Constitution. A constitutional but not statutory citizen is, in fact, NOT "privileged" in any way and none of the rights guaranteed by the Constitution can truthfully be called "privileges" without violating the law. It is a tort and a violation of due process, in fact, to convert rights protected by the Constitution and the common law into "privileges" or franchises or "public rights" under statutory law without at least your consent, which anyone in their right mind should NEVER give.

> "It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583. "Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied,' Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence [by converting them into statutory "privileges"/franchises],' Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345."
> [Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

It is furthermore proven in the following memorandum of law that civil statutory civil law pertains almost exclusively to government officers and employers and cannot and does not pertain to human beings or private persons not engaged in federal franchises/privileges:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Consequently, if a court refers to "privileges and immunities" in relation to you, chances are they are presuming, usually FALSELY, that you are a statutory "U.S. citizen" and NOT a constitutional citizen. 5.6.12.8 I.R.C. requirements for the exercise of a "trade or business"

Next, we must search the code for the uses of the term "trade or business" to define how it applies by using the context. Below is a summary of our findings:

1. For "individuals", who are ALL "aliens" under the I.R.C., only income "effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States" is considered "gross income" or originating from the statutory but not constitutional "United States" and earned by a nonresident alien under 26 U.S.C. §871(a). Statutory "U.S. citizens" can only be taxable when they are living abroad, in which case they become "aliens" under the provisions of a treaty with a foreign country. ONLY in that condition are they the proper subject of the Internal Revenue Code:

> NORMAL TAXES AND SURTAXES
> DETERMINATION OF TAX LIABILITY
> Tax on Individuals

Sec. 1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.

(a)(2)(ii) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1970, the tax imposed by section 1(d) [married individuals filing separately], as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1969, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by a married alien individual who is a nonresident of the United States for all or part of the taxable year or by a foreign estate or trust. For such years the tax imposed by section 1(c) [unmarried individuals], as amended by such Act, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by an unmarried alien individual (other than a surviving spouse) who is a nonresident of the United States for all or part of the taxable year. See paragraph (b)(2) of section 1.871-8." [26 C.F.R. §1.1-1]

2. Those who are "self employed" do not earn "gross income" unless it is connected to a "trade or business":

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 2 > §1402
§1402: Definitions

(a) Net earnings from self-employment

The term "net earnings from self-employment" means the gross income derived by an individual from any trade or business carried on by such individual*, less the deductions allowed by this subtitle which are attributable to such trade or business, plus his distributive share (whether or not distributed) of income or loss described in section 702(a)(8) from any trade or business carried on by a partnership of which he is a member; ….*

3. The only indirect excise taxable activity connected with a biological person and which is subject to Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is identified in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) as "income effectively connected with a trade or business" of a "nonresident alien". Therefore, the only earnings of a "nonresident alien" that can be included in "gross income" are those "effectively connected with a trade or business" (e.g. performance of a public office domiciled in the District of Columbia):

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 1—INCOME TAXES
Determination of Sources of Income

§1.861-8 Computation of taxable income from sources within the United States and from other sources and activities.

(f) Miscellaneous matters.

(1) Operative sections.

The operative sections of the Code which require the determination of taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources or activities and which give rise to statutory groupings to which this section is applicable include the sections described below.

(iv) Effectively connected taxable income.

Nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, under sections 871(b)(1) and 882(a)(1), on taxable income [federal payments] which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the [federal] United States. Such taxable income is determined in most instances by initially determining, under section 864(c), the amount of gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States. Pursuant to sections 873 and 882(c), this section is applicable for purposes of determining the deductions from such gross income (other than the deduction for interest expense allowed to foreign corporations (see section 1.882-5)) which are to be taken into account in determining taxable income. See example (21) of paragraph (g) of this section.

4. Statutory but not constitutional "U.S. Citizens" abroad whose earnings are subject to tax include only those with income "effectively connected with a trade or business". By statutory "U.S. Citizen" (8 U.S.C. §1401), we mean those born anywhere in the country and domiciled on federal territory within the District of Columbia or the territories of the United States, as discussed in chapter 4 starting in section 4.11 and NOT within any state of the Union:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART III > Subpart B > § 911
§ 911. Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad

(a) Exclusion from gross income

At the election of a qualified individual (made separately with respect to paragraphs (1) and (2)), there shall be excluded from the gross income of such individual, and exempt from taxation under this subtitle, for any taxable year -
(1) the foreign earned income of such individual, and
(2) the housing cost amount of such individual. (d) Definitions and special rules

(b) Foreign earned income

(1) Definition

For purposes of this section -

(A) In general

The term "foreign earned income" with respect to any individual means the amount received by such individual from sources within a foreign country or countries which constitute earned income attributable to services performed by such individual during the period described in subparagraph (A) or

(B) of subsection (d)(1), whichever is applicable. (B) Certain amounts not included in foreign earned income

The foreign earned income for an individual shall not include amounts -

(i) received as a pension or annuity,

(ii) paid by the United States or an agency thereof to an employee of the United States or an agency thereof,

(iii) included in gross income by reason of section 402(b) (relating to taxability of beneficiary of nonexempt trust) or section 403(c) (relating to taxability of beneficiary under a nonqualified annuity), or

(iv) received after the close of the taxable year following the taxable year in which the services to which the amounts are attributable are performed.

[. . .]

(d) Definitions and special rules

For purposes of this section -

[. . .]

(2) Earned income

(A) In general

The term "earned income" means wages, salaries, or professional fees, and other amounts received as compensation for personal services actually rendered, but does not include that part of the compensation derived by the taxpayer for personal services rendered by him to a corporation which represents a distribution of earnings or profits rather than a reasonable allowance as compensation for the personal services actually rendered.

*(B) Taxpayer engaged in trade or business

In the case of a taxpayer engaged in a trade or business in which both personal services and capital are material income-producing factors, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, a reasonable allowance as compensation for the personal services rendered by the taxpayer, not in excess of 30 percent of his share of the net profits of such trade or business, shall be considered as earned income.

The key "word of art" above is the term "personal services" which 26 C.F.R. §1.469-9 says means "work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business". Therefore, "U.S. citizens" abroad who are not involved in a "trade or business" do not earn "taxable income" because they are not engaged in an excise taxable activity. Notice also that the term "abroad" is never defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code AND that the 50 states of the Union are NOT

"domestic" as domestic is used in the Code. They instead are "foreign" for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction, as we emphasize throughout this chapter. Also notice that there is no mention anywhere within the entire I.R.C. of the status of taxability of earnings of statutory "U.S. citizens" situated outside the statutory "United States" (federal territory) within the code but NOT abroad. That is because they ARE NOT subject to the Internal Revenue Code, and can't even volunteer to be subject to a prima facie statute that they are not even within the territorial jurisdiction of.

5. Earnings from labor rendered by a "nonresident alien", even if within the "United States" (federal zone), to a foreign corporation or foreign partnership that is not involved in a "trade or business in the United States" (public office) is not includible as "gross income". Ditto for earnings from a "foreign country", which includes states of the Union, as we pointed out earlier in section 5.2.14. Here is the proof:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART I > §864
> §864. Definitions and special rules
> (b) Trade or business within the United States
> For purposes of this part, part II, and chapter 3, the term "trade or business within the United States" includes the performance of personal services within the United States at any time within the taxable year, but does not include —
> (1) Performance of personal services for foreign employer
> The performance of personal services—
> (A) for a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, or
> (B) for an office or place of business maintained in a foreign country or in a possession of the United States by an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States or by a domestic partnership or a domestic corporation,

6. Whether a legal "person" is considered "resident" or "nonresident" has nothing to do with where it was organized, incorporated or where it has a physical presence. Instead, it is determined by whether the organization is engaged in a "trade or business". Therefore, if you aren't engaged in a "trade or business", even if you are domiciled on federal territory within the statutory but not constitutional "United States", then you are a "nonresident". Here is the proof:

> 26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.
> A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

If you examine the above list, there are only four statuses or conditions throughout the I.R.C. that don't specifically mention that they must be connected to a "trade or business" in order to qualify as "gross income", which are:

1. "Married individuals" under 26 U.S.C. §1(a). Not mentioned in item 1 above.
2. "Heads of household" under 26 U.S.C. §1(b). Not mentioned in item 1 above.
3. Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISC) involved in foreign commerce.
4. Foreign Sales Corporations (FSC) involved in foreign commerce.

We know that the first two are ALSO involved in a "trade or business" because in the only place they are mentioned in the I.R.C., which is 26 U.S.C. §1(a) and 1(b), a graduated rate of tax appears there. There is no way to elect a flat 30% tax rate as a "Married individual" or "Head of household" without declaring oneself as a "nonresident alien" and coming under the provisions of 26 U.S.C. §871(a) INSTEAD of these two provisions. Furthermore, the requirement for "equal protection of the laws", found in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment and in 42 U.S.C. §1981(a), mandates that "Heads of Household" and "Married individuals" shall be subjected to the same burdens, taxes, and penalties as "Married individuals filing separately" or "Unmarried individuals" or they would be discriminated against. Therefore, they too must be engaged in a "trade or business" in order to earn "taxable income" as well. We also know that the graduated rate of tax cannot be implemented in states of the Union, because they are not "uniform", meaning that everyone doesn't pay the same percentage, as required by the U.S. Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1, which says:

> U.S. Constitution
> The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States; but all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform [same percentage] throughout the United States [and upon all "persons"];

The reason all excise taxes within states of the Union must be uniform throughout the states and have the same percentage on all persons is that if they weren't, then the federal government would be depriving sovereign American Nationals in the states of "equal protection of the laws". However, the Constitutional requirement for "equal protection" does not apply within areas under exclusive federal jurisdiction, such as the District of Columbia, under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17, and under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the Constitution. There have been at least two state supreme Court rulings consistent with this conclusion, which declared that graduated rate income taxes are unconstitutional within states of the Union. See Culliton v. Chase, 25 P.2d. 81 (1933) and Jensen v. Henneford, 53 P.2d. 607 (1936). You will learn later in this section that those who elect for a graduated rate of tax are "effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States" under 26 U.S.C. §871(b).

We'll now provide a table summarizing our findings to show the excise taxable activity for each type of entity to make the results of this survey of the I.R.C. crystal clear. Note that all the taxable activities must occur within exclusive federal jurisdiction under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution, or else they become "extortion under the color of law". The federal government cannot collect or assess taxes in areas where it has no legislative jurisdiction. If you aren't listed in the table below, then you are a "nontaxpayer":

5.6.12.9 What kind of tax is it?: Direct or Indirect, Constitutional or Unconstitutional?

We already proved in section 5.1.2 that the I.R.C., Subtitles A and C income tax is an excise or franchise tax upon public offices within the national but not state government. The next important questions we must answer are the following, which we frequently hear from our readers:

1. Is it DIRECT or INDIRECT as described in the U.S. Constitution?
2. Is it a CONSTITUTIONAL or UNCONSTITUTIONAL tax?

Of I.R.C., Subtitle A income taxes, the U.S. Supreme Court has said:

> "...the requirement to pay [excise] taxes involves the exercise of privilege."
> [Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)]

> "We are of opinion, however, that the confusion is not inherent, but rather arises from the conclusion that the 16th Amendment provides for a hitherto unknown power of taxation; that is, a power to levy an income tax which, although direct, should not be subject to the regulation of apportionment applicable to all other direct taxes. And the far-reaching effect of this erroneous assumption will be made clear by generalizing the many contentions advanced in argument to support it..."
> "[Taxation of "income" is] in its nature an excise entitled to be enforced as such unless and until it was concluded that to enforce it would amount to accomplishing the result which the requirement as to apportionment of direct taxation was adopted to prevent, in which case the duty would arise to disregard form and consider substance alone, and hence subject the tax to the regulation as to apportionment which otherwise as an excise would not apply to it" (That is, if the "income" tax ever comes to be administered as something other than an excise, or on something unsuited to an excise, the rule of apportionment must be applied.)
> [Brushaber v. Union Pacific R. Co., 240 U.S. 1 (1916)]

> "The provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment conferred no new power of taxation . . ."
> [Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

> "The Sixteenth Amendment, although referred to in argument, has no real bearing and may be put out of view. As pointed out in recent decisions, it does not extend the taxing power to new or excepted subjects..."
> [Peck v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 165 (1918)]

> "We must reject… …the broad contention submitted in behalf of the government that all receipts-- everything that comes in-- are income…"
> [So. Pacific v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 330 (1918)]

Therefore, I.R.C., Subtitle A describes an excise tax upon "privileges". If it ain't a privilege, then they can't tax it. Neither can the government lawfully tax the exercise of a right, such as the right to work and support yourself, unless that right is exercised coincident with a "privilege" of federal employment, agency, or benefits.

> "PRIVILEGE: A particular benefit or advantage enjoyed by a person, company, or class beyond the common advantages of others citizens. An exceptional or extraordinary power of exemption. A particular right, advantage, exemption, power, franchise, or immunity held by a person or class, not generally possessed by others."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1197]

> "It has been well said that 'the property which every man has in his own labor, as it is the original foundation of all other property, so it is the most sacred and inviolable. The patrimony of the poor man lies in the strength and dexterity of his own hands, and to hinder his employing this strength and dexterity in what manner he thinks proper, without injury to his neighbor, is a plain violation of this most sacred property'."
> [Butchers' Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884]

> "Included in the right of personal liberty and the right of private property- partaking of the nature of each- is the right to make contracts for the acquisition of property. Chief among such contracts is that of personal employment, by which labor and other services are exchanged for money or other forms of property"
> [Coppage v. Kansas, 236 U.S. 1 (1915)]

> "Every man has a natural right to the fruits of his own labor, is generally admitted; and no other person can rightfully deprive him of those fruits, and appropriate them against his will*..."*
> [The Antelope, 23 U.S. 66; 10 Wheat 66; 6 L.Ed. 268 (1825)]

Now that we have thoroughly analyzed why Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A describes an "excise" tax on a taxable activity called a "trade or business", we are now ready to address how this tax functions. We have prepared a table to clarify these mechanisms:

Table 5-68: What makes IRC Subtitle A an Excise Tax

#	Characteristics of indirect excise taxes	Description
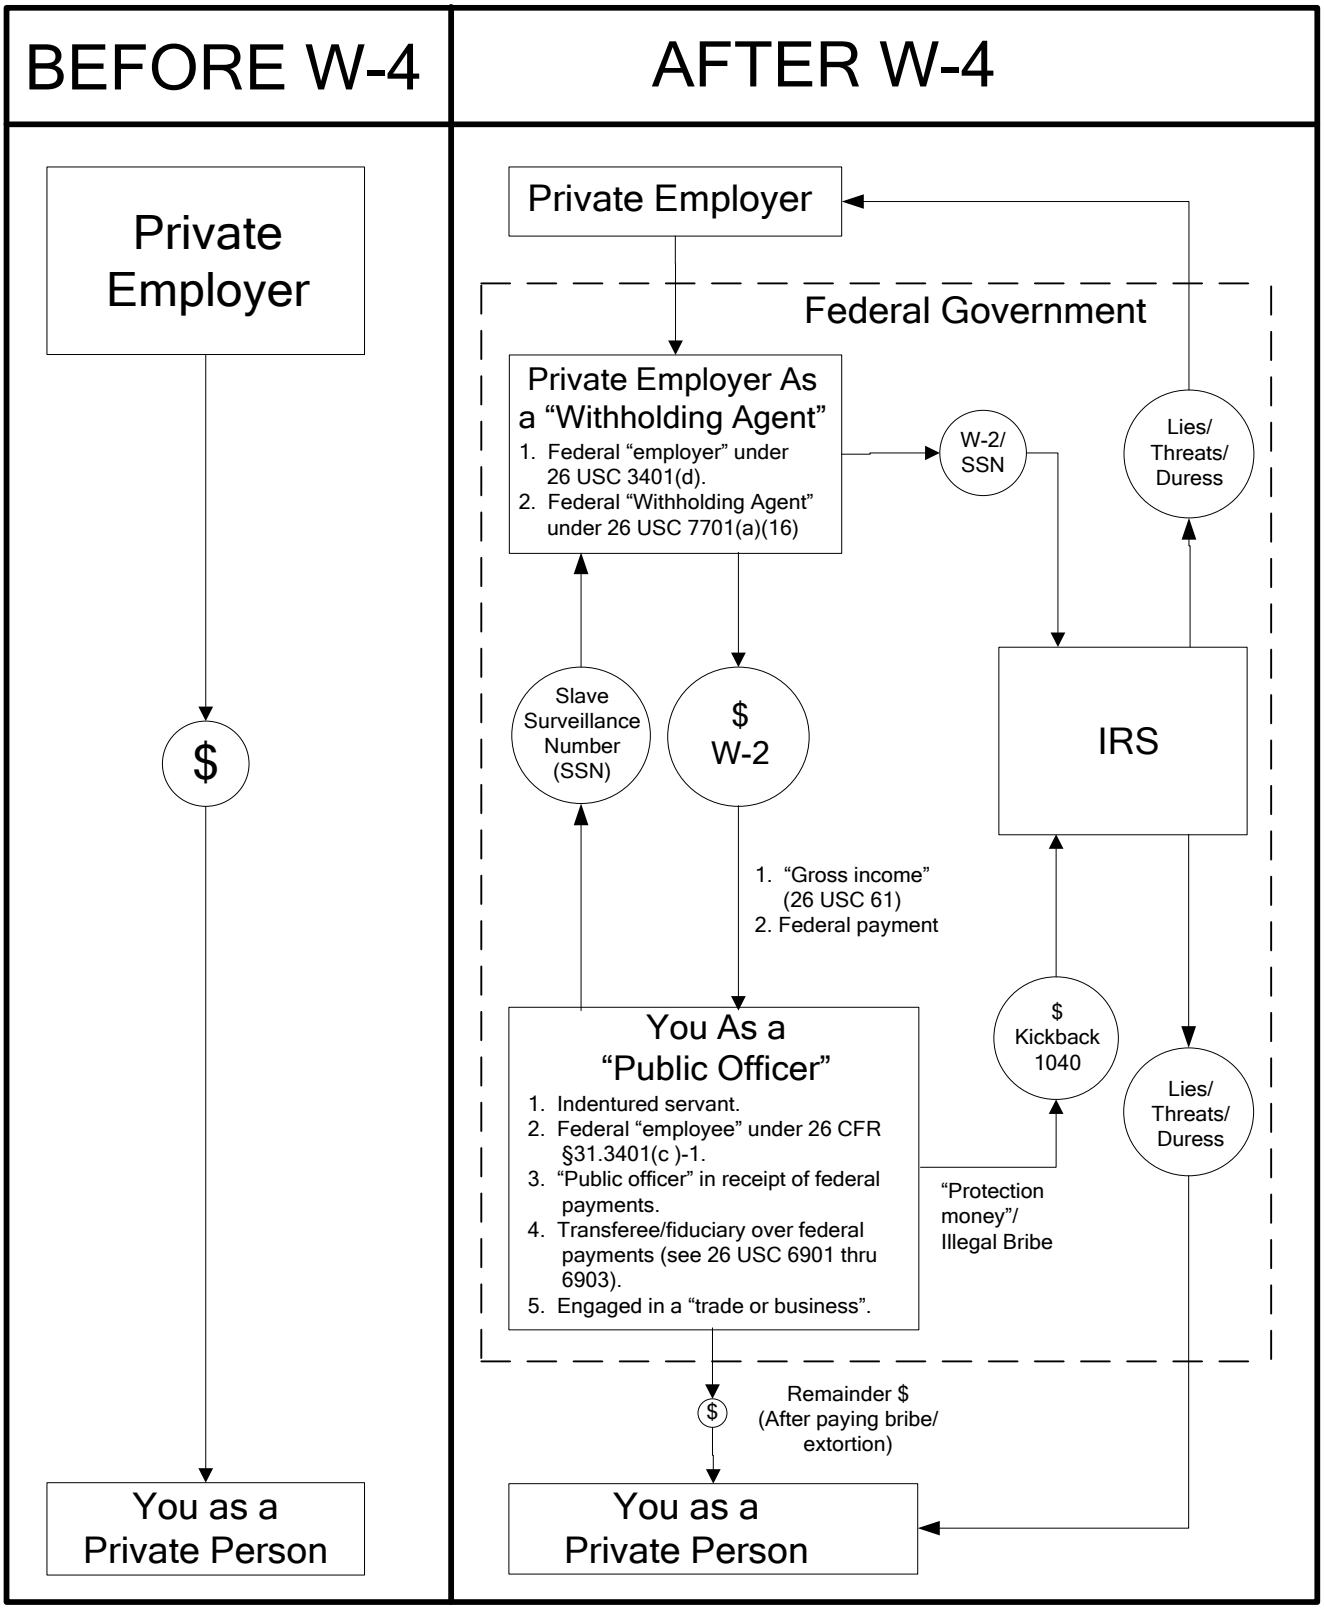
1	Taxable privilege	Exercising a "public office" in the United States government, which is called a "trade or business" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).
2	"License" that identifies us as engaging in the privilege	1. Filing a W-4 with your private employer. When you file a W-4, you signed an "agreement"/contract (see 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3). This agreement made you into a recipient, "transferee", and "fiduciary" over payments to the federal government under 26 U.S.C. §6901. It also constituted an agreement under 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1 to include all of your earnings from the employer receiving the W-4 on a tax "return" as "gross income". Your private employer is no longer paying you directly and you effectively become a "subcontractor" to the U.S. government, who is your intermediary and real "employer". Instead, your private employer is paying a "straw man" or artificial entity called a federal "employee" acting on behalf of the government as a "transferee" and "fiduciary". The all caps name on the W-4 and the SSN associated with the all caps name is the "res" or artificial entity that describes the federal subcontractor that you are representing. The SSN or TIN and the all caps "straw man" name on the pay stub that your private employer gives you is evidence that the payment is a payment to the federal government which is federal property because this number can only be used for keeping track of federal payments and "receipts". The money your private employer pays you are "earnings" of a U.S. government subcontractor. Recall that "income", within the meaning of the Constitution is "corporate profit". The U.S. government is described as a "federal corporation" in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). The "profit" of this federal corporation is the "tax" deducted from the payment and "returned" to the corporation using a tax "return". The SSN is a vehicle the government uses to keep track of federal payments and federal subcontractors called "employees" who are managing these payments and returning "taxes", which are "corporate profit" payments, to their rightful owner. 1. Filing a form 1040 rather than the correct 1040NR. The IRS Published Products catalog says this form can only be filed by "citizens or residents of the United States", all of whom are domiciled ONLY in the statutory "United States" (federal territory) (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d)). Under 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3), all earnings within the statutory "United States" (federal territory) are "effectively connected with a trade or business", so you must be engaged in a "trade or business" , so you must be engaged in a "trade or business" whether you realize it or not if you file form 1040 instead of the proper form 1040NR.
3	License number	Taxpayer Identification Number(TIN) or Social Security Number (SSN)
4	How privilege is exercised	1. Receiving payments destined for the federal government from private parties, like employers and financial institutions. These payments are public property that can only be handled by "public officers". 2. Ability to claim deductions on tax return. 3. Ability to apply graduated rate rather than fixed rate. 4. Ability to claim exemptions and earned income credit on a tax return. 5. Domiciled in the District of Columbia
5	Effect of accepting privilege	1. Acting as a "transferee", "fiduciary", and "trustee" over payments made to the federal government. 2. Lose control over earnings. They don't become yours until the federal overpayment is returned in the form of a "tax"/"kickback". 3. Subject to federal jurisdiction because in custody of federal overpayment. Jurisdiction is "in rem" under Article 4, Section 3. Clause 2 of the Constitution. 4. IRS can enforce I.R.C. without implementing regulations. See 44 U.S.C. §1501(a)(1), 5 U.S.C. §552(a)(1), 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(2).
6	Why tax is an excise tax	The tax is on an activity that can be avoided and therefore is not direct. If you don't want to pay the tax, then don't exercise any of the "privileges" associated with a "trade or business" listed in item 2 above.
7	Tax measured by	Taxable income, which is "gross income" minus deductions and exemptions.

A picture is worth a thousand words. Below is a diagram showing the condition of those who are employed by private employers and who have consented to participate in the federal tax system by completing an IRS Form W-4. This diagram shows graphically the relationships described in the table above.

Figure 5-7: Employment arrangement of those involved in a "trade or business"



NOTES ON ABOVE DIAGRAM:

6. The I.R.C., Subtitle A income tax is NOT implemented through public law or positive law, but primarily through private law. Private law always supersedes enacted positive law because no court or government can interfere with your right to contract. See Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution for the proof. The IRS Form W-4 is a contract or agreement, and the United States has jurisdiction over its own property and employees under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2, wherever they may reside, including in places where it has no legislative jurisdiction. The IRS Form W-4 you signed is a private contract that makes you into a federal employee, and neither the state nor the federal government may interfere with the private right to contract. 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1 identifies the W-4 as an "agreement", which is a contract. It doesn't say that on the form, because your covetous government doesn't want you to know you are signing a contract by submitting an IRS Form W-4.
7. The "tax" is not paid by you, but by your "straw man", who is a federal "public officer" engaged in a "trade or business" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). His workplace is the "District of Columbia" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d). That "public officer" you have volunteered to represent is working as a federal "employee" who is part of the United States government, which is defined as a federal corporation in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). In that sense, the "tax" is indirect, because you don't pay it, but your straw man, who is a "public officer", pays it to your "employer", the federal government, which is a federal corporation.
8. Because you are presumed by the IRS to be a federal "employee" and you work for an unspecified and unidentified federal corporation, then you are acting as an "officer or employee of a federal corporation" and you:
   8.1. Are the proper subject of the penalty statutes, as defined under 26 U.S.C. §6671(b).
   8.2. Are the proper subject of the criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code found in 26 U.S.C. §7343.
   8.3. May have the code enforced against you without implementing regulations as required by 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1) and 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(2)
9. The "activity" of performing a "trade or business" is only "taxable" when executed on federal territory, which is what the statutory "United States" is defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d). See 26 U.S.C. §864 and this section for evidence.
10. Those who file form 1040 instead of the proper form 1040NR provide evidence under penalty of perjury that they are "U.S. persons" (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30)) who are domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional "United States" (federal territory). The IRS Published Products Catalog, Document 7130 (2003) says the form can only be used for "citizens or residents" of the "United States", which is defined as federal territory in the I.R.C.

The words you use to describe this tax can get you into trouble in court and attract insincere and covetous judges and prosecutors to call you frivolous and try to penalize you to evade addressing the issues raised in this memorandum. We would now like to clarify the following important facts about the nature of the I.R.C., Subtitles A and C income tax to ensure that our readers stay out of harm's way:

1. Is NOT an Article 1, Section 8 tax. The states are not expressly included within the definition of "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and therefore are purposefully excluded per the rules of statutory construction.

> "Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98, was an action of trespass or, as appears by the original record, replevin, brought in the circuit court for the District of Columbia to try the right of Congress to impose a direct tax for general purposes on that District. 3 Stat. at L. 216, chap. 60. It was insisted that Congress could act in a double capacity: in one as legislating [182 U.S. 244, 260] for the states; in the other as a local legislature for the District of Columbia. In the latter character, it was admitted that the power of levying direct taxes might be exercised, but for District purposes only, as a state legislature might tax for state purposes; but that it could not legislate for the District under art. 1, 8, giving to Congress the power 'to lay and collect taxes, imposts, and excises,' which 'shall be uniform throughout the United States,' inasmuch as the District was no part of the United States [described in the Constitution]. It was held that the grant of this power was a general one without limitation as to place, and consequently extended to all places over which the government extends; and that it extended to the District of Columbia as a constituent part of the United States. The fact that art. 1 , 2, declares that 'representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states . . . according to their respective numbers' furnished a standard by which taxes were apportioned, but not to exempt any part of the country from their operation. 'The words used do not mean that direct taxes shall be imposed on states only which are represented, or shall be apportioned to representatives; but that direct taxation, in its application to states, shall be apportioned to numbers*.' That art. 1, 9, 4, declaring that direct taxes shall be laid in proportion to the census, was applicable to the District of Columbia, 'and will enable Congress to apportion on it it's just and equal share of the burden, with the same accuracy as on the respective states. If the tax be laid in this proportion, it is within the very words of the restriction. It is a tax in proportion to the census or enumeration referred to.' It was further held that the words of the 9th section did not 'in terms require that the system of direct taxation, when resorted to, shall be extended to the territories, as the words of the 2d section require that it shall be extended to all the states. They therefore may, without violence, be understood to give a rule when the territories shall be taxed, without imposing the necessity of taxing them.'"*
> [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

2. It is only applicable to those consensually and contractually engaging in business WITH the U.S. Inc. as public officers.
3. Extends ONLY where the GOVERNMENT extends.

> "It was held that the grant of this power was a general one without limitation as to place, and consequently extended to all places over which the government extends; and that it extended to the District of Columbia as a constituent part of the United States."
> [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

Sources WITHIN the government, in fact, are defined in the at 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3) as "sources within the United States".

4. It functions as what we call a "public officer kickback program" disguised to LOOK like a lawful national tax. That perspective is thoroughly explained in:
   4.1. IRS Humbug: Weapons of Enslavement, Frank Kowalik, ISBN 0-9626552-0-1, 1991.
   4.2. Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 5.6.10
   http://famguardian.org/Publications/GreatIRSHoax/GreatIRSHoax.htm
5. It is neither CONSTITUTIONAL nor UNCONSTITUTIONAL, but rather EXTRA-CONSTITUTIONAL. It is an EXTRA-constitutional tax because the Constitution doesn't protect what happens by consent to PUBLIC officers within the government. All those serving in public offices do so by consent and it is a maxim of law that you cannot complain of an injury for things you consent to.
6. While it is NOT a constitutional but an EXTRA-constitutional tax, if tax terms such as "direct, indirect, excise" used within the constitution WERE used to describe it, then it would have to be described as follows:
   6.1. It is a direct, unapportioned tax on INCOME as property. All direct taxes are on property. Note also that the ONLY place it can be administered as a "DIRECT TAX" is the District of Columbia, which is why the terms "United States" and "State" are both defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) as the District of Columbia and no part of any state of the Union. This is also why the ONLY remaining "internal revenue district" within which the I.R.S. can lawfully enforce pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7601 is the District of Columbia.

> "Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98, was an action of trespass or, as appears by the original record, replevin, brought in the circuit court for the District of Columbia to try the right of Congress to impose a direct tax for general purposes on that District. 3 Stat. at L. 216, chap. 60. It was insisted that Congress could act in a double capacity: in one as legislating [182 U.S. 244, 260] for the states; in the other as a local legislature for the District of Columbia. In the latter character, it was admitted that the power of levying direct taxes might be exercised, but for District purposes only, as a state legislature might tax for state purposes; but that it could not legislate for the District under art. 1, 8, giving to Congress the power 'to lay and collect taxes, imposts, and excises,' which 'shall be uniform throughout the United States,' inasmuch as the District was no part of the United States [described in the Constitution]. It was held that the grant of this power was a general one without limitation as to place, and consequently extended to all places over which the government extends; and that it extended to the District of Columbia as a constituent part of the United States. The fact that art. 1 , 2, declares that 'representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states . . . according to their respective numbers' furnished a standard by which taxes were apportioned, but not to exempt any part of the country from their operation. 'The words used do not mean that direct taxes shall be imposed on states only which are represented, or shall be apportioned to representatives; but that direct taxation, in its application to states, shall be apportioned to numbers.' That art. 1, 9, 4, declaring that direct taxes shall be laid in proportion to the census, was applicable to the District of Columbia, 'and will enable Congress to apportion on it it's just and equal share of the burden, with the same accuracy as on the respective states. If the tax be laid in this proportion, it is within the very words of the restriction. It is a tax in proportion to the census or enumeration referred to.' It was further held that the words of the 9th section did not 'in terms require that the system of direct taxation, when resorted to, shall be extended to the territories, as the words of the 2d section require that it shall be extended to all the states. They therefore may, without violence, be understood to give a rule when the territories shall be taxed, without imposing the necessity of taxing them.'"
> [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

   6.2. It is a DIRECT TAX because it involves both real estate and personal property or the "benefits" of such property. This definition of "direct" derives from Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1894).
   6.3. It is a direct tax upon PROPERTY owned BY THE GOVERNMENT because in POSSESSION of the government at the time of payment.
   6.4. The earnings of public offices are property of the government, because the OFFICE is owned by the government and was created by the government. The creator of a thing is always the owner.
   6.5. The "income" subject to the tax is payments FROM the government.
   6.6. It is an excise on the SOURCE of income.
   6.7. The SOURCE is the specific place the activity was accomplished, which is ALWAYS the government or a "U.S. source". A "U.S. source" means an activity WITHIN the government. Hence "INTERNAL revenue code". See:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/source.htm

> The source of your earned income is the place where you perform the services for which you received the income. Foreign earned income is income you receive for performing personal services in a foreign country. Where or how you are paid has no effect on the source of the income. For example, income you receive for work done in France is income from a foreign source even if the income is paid directly to your bank ac-count in the United States and your employer is located in New York City.
> If you receive a specific amount for work done in the United States, you must report that amount as U.S. source income. If you cannot determine how much is for work done in the United States, or for work done partly in the United States and partly in a foreign country, determine the amount of U.S. source income using the method that most correctly shows the proper source of your income.
> In most cases you can make this determination on a time basis. U.S. source income is the amount that results from multiplying your total pay (including allowances, re-imbursements other than for foreign moves, and noncash fringe benefits) by a fraction. The numerator (top number) is the number of days you worked within the United States. The denominator is the total number of days of work for which you were paid.
> [IRS Publication 54 (2000), p. 4]

6.8. It is INDIRECT in the sense that all indirect taxes are excise taxes upon activities that can be avoided by avoiding the activity. However, it becomes DIRECT, a THEFT, and slavery/involuntary servitude if the government:
6.8.1. Refuses to recognize or protect your right to NOT volunteer and not become a public officer.
6.8.2. Refuses to acknowledge the nature of the activity being taxed, or PRESUMES that it is NOT a public office.
6.8.3. Refuses to correct false information returns against those NOT engaging in the activity, and thereby through omission causes EVERYONE who is the subject of such false reports to essentially be elected into a public office through a criminally false and fraudulent information return.
6.8.4. Enforces it outside of the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress or against those who are not public officers and officers of a corporation as required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
6.9. The reason that direct and indirect can BOTH describe it, is that the constitution doesn't apply in the only place the activity can lawfully be exercised (per 4 U.S.C. §72), which is federal territory. It doesn't fit the constitution because it doesn't apply to the PRIVATE people who are the only proper subject of the constitution.

7. Civil choice of law rules found in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 and 28 U.S.C. §1652 dictate that the LOCAL state law governs the activity by default and that foreign law (under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 44.1) only becomes applicable if the party is acting as an officer of a foreign corporation. Hence, only by being lawfully engaged in a public office within the U.S. Government, which is a federal corporation and legislatively foreign corporation in respect to constitutional states of the Union, can the municipal laws of the District of Columbia be made applicable to the activity. Otherwise, there is no federal jurisdiction over the activity subject to tax.

> "A foreign corporation is one that derives its existence solely from the laws of another state, government, or country, and the term is used indiscriminately, sometimes in statutes, to designate either a corporation created by or under the laws of another state or a corporation created by or under the laws of a foreign country."
> "A federal corporation operating within a state is considered a domestic corporation rather than a foreign corporation. The United States government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state."
> [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §883 (2003)]

8. It is PRIVATE law and SPECIAL law, rather than PUBLIC law, that only applies to specific persons and things CONSENSUALLY engaged in activities on federal territory as AGENTS of the government ONLY. That is why the entire Title 26 of the U.S. Code is identified as NOT being "positive law" in 1 U.S.C. §204: Because it doesn't acquire the "force of law" or become legal evidence of an obligation until AFTER you consent to it. It is a maxim of law that anything done to you with your consent cannot form the basis for an injury or a remedy in a court of law. On the OTHER hand, if everyone fills out IRS Form W-4's and ACTS like a government statutory "employee", then for all intents and purposes it applies to EVERYONE and at least LOOKS like it is public law, even though it isn't.
9. Because it is PRIVATE and SPECIAL LAW, it is what the United States Supreme Court called "class legislation" in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1894). The specific "class" to which is applies is that SUBSET of all "citizens" who are lawfully serving in an elected or appointed public office.
10. The activities SUBJECT to the tax must also occur on federal territory in order to be the lawful subject of any congressional civil enactment.
10.1. All civil law is prima facie territorial.

10.2. The separation of powers doctrine, 40 U.S.C. §3112, 28 U.S.C. §1652, and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 all forbid the enforcement of federal civil law outside the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress or within a constitutional state of the Union.

10.3. If territory is divorced from the activity and the tax is enforced outside of federal territory, then the activity subject to tax becomes an act of private contract governed by the local CIVIL laws of the jurisdiction in which the activity occurred. And because it is private business activity, then there is a waiver of sovereign immunity AND it must be heard in a LOCAL state court having jurisdiction over the domicile of the public officer and NOT in a federal court. These facts are plainly stated in 40 U.S.C. §3112.

> "It is, we think, a sound principle, that when a government becomes a partner in any trading company, it divests itself, so far as concerns the transactions of that company, of its sovereign character, and takes that of a private citizen. Instead of communicating to the company its privileges and its prerogatives, it descends to a level with those with whom it associates itself, and takes the character which belongs to its associates, and to the business which is to be transacted. Thus, many states of this Union' who have an interest in banks are not suable even in their own courts; yet they never exempt the corporation from being sued."
> [Bank of the U.S., The v. The Planters' Bank of Georgia, 22 U.S. 904, 9 Wheat 904, 6 L.Ed. 244 (1824)]

11. If it is enforced or offered in a constitutional state, then:

11.1. An "invasion" has occurred under Article 4, Section 4. By "enforced", we mean that the ACTIVITY subject to the tax occurs within a constitutional state of the Union. Hence, "INTERNAL" in the phrase "INTERNAL Revenue Service", meaning INTERNAL to the government and INTERNAL to federal territory.

11.2. The franchise is being illegally enforced:

> "Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.
> But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects.
> Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."*
> [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

We would therefore strongly suggest that in describing this tax in court pleadings or to juries and in front of malicious judges, you:

1. Never describe it as either direct or indirect. It's irrelevant and could truthfully be described as either. The U.S. Supreme Court, for instance, calls it a "direct unapportioned tax" applicable only to the District of Columbia, while the Congressional Research Service calls it an INDIRECT tax. They are BOTH right! This is a red herring.
2. NOT argue about whether the Internal Revenue Code is constitutional or unconstitutional. It is entirely constitutional. What is unconstitutional is how it is wilfully and maliciously MISREPRESENTED and illegally enforced by both the Department of Justice and the Internal Revenue Service. 18 U.S.C. §912.
3. Demand written proof of your consent to occupy or be held accountable for the duties associated with the illegally created public office that is the subject of the tax.
4. Pay SPECIAL focus on the CONTEXT for terms: STATUTORY v. CONSTITUTIONAL. These two contexts are mutually exclusive and non-overlapping for the purpose of the income tax. They will attempt many different "fallacies by equivocation" in order to mislead the jury and undermine your defense. We talk about this at length in:

   Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5. Instead focus on:

5.1. The activity that is the subject of the tax and how you, as a private nonresident in a legislatively foreign state can lawfully engage in the activity.
5.2. How the choice of law rules documented herein do not permit the enforcement of the tax under federal law, and therefore, that there is no jurisdiction to enforce or collect the tax.
5.3. WHERE the activity may be lawfully exercised and that you are NOT located in that place, which is the District of Columbia and no part of any state of the Union.
5.4. The fact that it is a crime to impersonate a public office, even with your consent.
5.5. The fact that compelled withholding causes the crime of bribery to solicit you to be treated illegally as a public officer. 18 U.S.C. §211.

5.6.12.10 Who's "trade or business": The PAYER, the PAYEE, or BOTH?

Every transaction must involve the de facto government (Form #05.043) and therefore public rights and franchises in order to qualify as an excise taxable event. The income tax under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, as we all well know, is a franchise/excise tax. The only context in which the statutory definition of "United States" makes any sense at all is in fact to treat it as an excise/franchise tax. The "United States" in the I.R.C. then becomes the franchisor in a virtual and not a physical or geographical sense. The ability to regulate, tax, or burden private conduct is beyond the reach of the Constitution, and therefore the activity must involve publici juris and public rights to be taxable.

> "The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."
> [City of Boerne v. Florez, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

Every transaction involving the government has two parties: The payer and the payee. That is why the tax is upon both "trade or business" earnings and "U.S. source" earnings: The payer is always a public office in the government and the recipient is either a "resident alien individual" or a "nonresident alien individual" receiving payments from this "U.S. source" if the transaction is taxable to EITHER party. This is made clear by 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31), which says that the transaction is not "gross income" and is "foreign" and beyond the jurisdiction of the I.R.C. if it does not involve one of these two aspects, meaning if it does not involve a public officer payer OR an "individual" recipient:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > § 7701
> § 7701. Definitions
> (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—
> *(31) Foreign estate or trust
> (A) Foreign estate The term "foreign estate" means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.
> (B) Foreign trust The term "foreign trust" means any trust other than a trust described in subparagraph (E) of paragraph (30).

Whenever a taxable payment occurs, an information return is filed usually by the payer, who in law must always be treated as a public officer in the government, meaning a "source within the United States" (government, not geographical USA). 26 U.S.C. §6041(a) says that the information return can only be filed in connection with a "trade or business", meaning that at least one end of the transaction must involve a public officer in the government.

> required under the authority of section 6042 (a)(2), 6044 (a)(2), or 6045), of $600 or more in any taxable year, or, in the case of such payments made by the United States, the officers or employees of the United States having information as to such payments and required to make returns in regard thereto by the regulations hereinafter provided for, shall render a true and accurate return to the Secretary, under such regulations and in such form and manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by the Secretary, setting forth the amount of such gains, profits, and income, and the name and address of the recipient of such payment.

Our job is to figure out WHICH end of the transaction is a public officer, because that is the only one subject to the code and therefore a "taxpayer". The PAYOR can be a public officer and therefore a "taxpayer" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) while the PAYEE can be a nonresident and a "nontaxpayer". It makes no sense to report a transaction or withhold, in fact, if the PAYEE is not a "taxpayer".

26 U.S.C. §6041 gives us a clue to the puzzle: it says the PAYER must file the information return and is engaged in a "trade or business", but it doesn't say that the PAYEE ALSO is involved in a "trade or business" as a public officer. Therefore, as a bare minimum every transaction involves a PAYER who is a public officer and therefore a "taxpayer" engaged in a "trade or business". We still don't yet know how the PAYEE would be treated in such a transaction, but as a bare minimum, we know that it is in receipt of "U.S. source" income from a public office within the "United States" government. Some clues, though:

1. Congress only has jurisdiction over PUBLIC activity. The U.S. Supreme Court has held that the ability to regulate private conduct is "repugnant to the Constitution". The constitution exists, in fact, to keep private conduct beyond the reach of the government. Consequently, BOTH parties to the transaction must be acting in a public capacity as public officers and therefore "taxpayers".
2. If the PAYER was a public office and a "taxpayer" but the PAYEE was not, then the I.R.C. would be injuring private parties and interfering with the right to contract of both parties by imposing duties above and beyond the contract between them. The Constitution was created to protect your right to contract, and therefore they can't tax or withhold within such a transaction. Frank Kowalik in his wonderful book IRS Humbug: Weapons of Enslavement, Frank Kowalik, ISBN 0-9626552-0-1, 1991 analyzes this aspect of all such payments and agrees with us on this point.
3. 26 U.S.C. §6041(a) uses the phrase "another person" to refer to the payee. so the PAYEE obviously must also be a "taxpayer" and a "person" subject to the code in order for the reporting to occur. Furthermore, if the recipient were NOT such a "person", they would have no liability and therefore would also not be subject to withholding. Withholding is only required for "taxpayers".

An example of payment that would not be taxable or reportable is one made to a non-resident non-person. This would be the case with those in the military who file non-resident non-person withholding paperwork such as the IRS Form W-8BEN, who modify block 3 of the form to indicate that they are "non-resident non-persons", and who are enlisted rather than commissioned officers. When the transaction involves only one "taxpayer", the code does NOT create a liability to report against the withholding agent because the recipient is not a "person" (or "another person" as referred to in 26 U.S.C. §6041(a) and 26 U.S.C. §1461) as a nonresident. 26 U.S.C. §6041A(d)(1) and 26 U.S.C. §6049(d)(1) both establish that BOTH the PAYEE AND THE PAYOR must be STATUTORY "persons" and therefore public officers in order for a payment to be reportable as "gross income" on an information return (e.g. W-2, 1099, etc):

Note that:

1. As we frequently emphasize throughout our writings, Title 26 is called the "INTERNAL Revenue Code", which means INTERNAL to the U.S. government, not INTERNAL to the CONSTITUTIONAL or even the GEOGRAPHICAL "United States".
2. NOWHERE is the STATUTORY term "person" as used in the above two statutes defined to include anything OTHER than a GOVERNMENT or a PRIVILEGED FEDERAL CORPORATION. The "international organization" they are talking about above is, in fact a federal corporation involved in foreign commerce. That is how 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(18) defines an "international organization".

3. The definition of "person" above is the ONLY type of "person" to which information return reporting applies, because the definition SUPERSEDES that found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1) for the purposes of reporting only and this section.
   - 3.1. 26 U.S.C. §6041A(d)(1) and 26 U.S.C. §6049(d)(1) above do NOT say, for instance, "in ADDITION to the definition of person found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1)", but rather REPLACE THAT definition for the purposes of reporting.
   - 3.2. 26 U.S.C. §6041A(d) says "(d) Applications to governmental units" but this heading does not betray ANY meaning according to 26 U.S.C. §7806(b) or Railroad Trainmen v. B. & O.R. Co., 331 U.S. 519 (1947). That heading or subsection also does NOT indicate an ADDITION to the definition of "person" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1), and therefore does not imply such an addition.
4. When a definition is provided, it SUPERSEDES the common meaning and by implication EXCLUDES both the common meaning or ALL OTHER meanings provided elsewhere in the code:

> "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be > inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded."

> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484-485 (1987) ("It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term"); Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. at 392-393, n. 10 ("As a rule, `a definition which declares what a term "means" . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated'"); Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lenroot, 323 U.S. 490, 502 (1945); Fox v. Standard Oil Co. of N.J., 294 U.S. 87, 95-96 (1935) (Cardozo, J.); see also 2A N. Singer, Sutherland on Statutes and Statutory Construction § 47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute, read "as a whole," post at 998 [530 U.S. 943] (THOMAS, J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition. The code is civil law that is not enforceable against nonresidents per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). All civil law attaches to the choice of domicile of the parties and cannot operate beyond the territory of the law making power unless:

1. A contract or franchise extends its reach beyond the territory of the sovereign. That franchise or contract, if it is a GOVERNMENT contract, however, CANNOT operate within a state of the Union protected by the Constitution because the rights of those domiciled there are "unalienable", which means that they can't be sold, transferred, or bargained away through any commercial process. Franchises such as a "trade or business" are commercial processes and contracts.

> "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, -"
> [Declaration of Independence]

> "Unalienable. Inalienable; incapable of being aliened, that is, sold and transferred."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1693]

2. It operates on a domiciliary temporarily abroad but not within a state of the Union under 26 U.S.C. §911.

26 U.S.C. §1461 makes the PAYER liable to deduct and withhold payment to another "person" but a nonresident cannot be a "person" within the meaning of this civil provision because all civil law attaches to one's choice of domicile:

> § 1461. Liability for withheld tax

> Every person required to deduct and withhold any tax under this chapter is hereby made liable for such tax and is hereby indemnified against the claims and demands of any person for the amount of any payments made in accordance with the provisions of this chapter.*

> The foregoing considerations would lead, in case of doubt, to a construction of any statute as intended to be confined in its operation and effect to the territorial limits over which the lawmaker has general and legitimate power. 'All legislation is prima facie territorial.' Ex parte Blain, L. R. 12 Ch. Div. 522, 528; State v. Carter, 27 N.J.L. 499; People v. Merrill, 2 Park. Crim. Rep. 590, 596. Words having universal scope, such as 'every contract in restraint of trade,' 'every person who shall monopolize,' etc., will be taken, as a matter of course, to mean only everyone subject to such legislation, not all that the legislator subsequently may be able to catch. In the case of the present statute, the improbability of the United States attempting to make acts done in Panama or Costa Rica criminal is obvious, yet the law begins by making criminal the acts for which it gives a right to sue. We think it entirely plain that what the defendant did in Panama or Costa Rica is not within the scope of the statute so far as the present suit is concerned. Other objections of a serious nature are urged, but need not be discussed.*

The phrase "general or legitimate power" imply "general and exclusive jurisdiction", not subject matter jurisdiction. The feds only have general jurisdiction within federal territory. In a state, they have limited and subject matter jurisdiction ONLY and NOT general jurisdiction. That is not to say that they don't have jurisdiction over ALL PEOPLE within a state. They always have jurisdiction over those domiciled on federal territory, regardless of where they are situated, including in a state, but they don't have such jurisdiction within a state of those domiciled outside of federal territory and who therefore are not statutory "U.S. citizens", "U.S. residents", and "U.S. persons". The following article emphasizes this point, but is FLAT OUT WRONG in concluding that District Courts in the States of the Union are Article III courts. They have NEVER been given this power. The only thing they can or do is officiate over are Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 franchises such as income taxes, Social Security, etc. and crimes committed on federal territory where they enjoy general jurisdiction. The What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012 proves this with thousands of pages of evidence.

> Conflicts in a Nutshell
> §22 Federal Subject Matter Jurisdiction
> Because of our federal system, in which more than 50 sovereigns function within the framework of a national sovereign, the federal court structure is unique in that its principal trial court, the U.S. District Court, is a court of limited rather than general jurisdiction. The state is left to supply the "general" court. The federal constitution permits Congress to confer on federal courts of its creation only such jurisdiction as is outlined in section 2 of Article III. Hence the source of these federal limitations is the constitution itself.
> Even within the federal system, however, one can find courts of general jurisdiction. Areas within the jurisdiction of the United States that lack their own sovereignty, and thus a court system of their own, must depend on the federal legislature for a complete court system: the District of Columbia and the few remaining territories of the United States are in this category. For them, Congress has the power (from Article I of the constitution for the District and from Article IV of the constitution for the territories) to create courts of general jurisdiction. But Congress has no such power with respect to the states, for which reason all of the federal courts sitting within the states, including the district courts, must trace their powers to those within the limits of Article III and are hence courts of "limited" jurisdiction.
> This is one reason why issues of subject matter jurisdiction arise more frequently in the federal system than in state courts. Another is that for a variety of reasons, federal jurisdiction is often preferred by a plaintiff who has a choice of forums. Taken together, this means that more cases near the subject matter jurisdiction borderline appear in the federal than in the state courts.
> One of the major sources of federal subject matter jurisdiction is the diversity of citizenship of the parties. It authorizes federal suit even though the dispute involves no issues of federal law. The statute that authorizes this jurisdiction, however (28 U.S.C.A. 1332), requires that there be more than $75,000 in controversy. A plaintiff near that figure and who wants federal jurisdiction will try for it, while a defendant who prefers that the state courts hear the case may try to get it dismissed from federal court on the ground that it can't support a judgment for more than $75,000.
> A major source of federal jurisdiction is that the case "arises under" federal law, the phrase the constitution itself uses (Article III, §2). Unless it so arises, there is no subject matter jurisdiction under this caption, and whether it does or does not is often the subject of a dispute between the parties to a federal action.
> For these and other reasons, the study of "subject matter" jurisdiction is a more extensive one in federal than in state practice. Indeed, a law school course on federal courts is likely to be devoted in the main to subject matter jurisdiction, with a correspondingly similar time allotment left for mere procedure, rather the reverse of what usually occurs in a course studying the state courts.

So there are two criteria: The PAYER and the PAYEE must BOTH be "persons" and therefore "taxpayers" within the I.R.C., which is civil law that attaches to their mutual domiciles, in order for either reporting or withholding to lawfully occur. If only the PAYER is a "person" but the payee is NOT, then the transaction is not "gross income" TO THE PAYEE. The term "person" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1) to include "individuals", but "individual" in turn does not include statutory or constitutional "citizens" per 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3). The only time "individual" includes STATUTORY "U.S. citizens" is when they are abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911(d). Therefore, both the PAYER and the PAYEE MUST be aliens and not citizens engaged in privileged activities if they are not abroad. See:

Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Online, Form #10.004, Cites by Topic: Individual http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/individual.htm

All of these games with "words of art" relating to Effectively Connected Income (ECI) are designed to disguise and confuse WHICH end of the transaction is a "taxpayer": the PAYER, the PAYEE, or BOTH. Statutes such as 26 U.S.C. §881(a), for instance, refer to the "recipient", meaning the PAYEE:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART II > Subpart B > § 881
> § 881. Tax on income of foreign corporations not connected with United States business

> (4) gains from the sale or exchange after October 4, 1966, of patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, good will, trademarks, trade brands, franchises, and other like property, or of any interest in any such property, to the extent such gains are from payments which are contingent on the productivity, use, or disposition of the property or interest sold or exchanged,
> but only to the extent the amount so received is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

An amount can only be "received" by a PAYEE.

1. We already know the PAYER is a public officer and a "taxpayer" and therefore a "person" under the I.R.C. because 26 U.S.C. §6041(a) admitted he/she/it had to be engaged in a "trade or business" in order to report the transaction.
2. 26 U.S.C. §1461 also said that the PAYER is only liable if BOTH ends of the transaction are "persons" and therefore "taxpayers". A "nonresident" would NOT be subject to the code and therefore NOT a "person", "individual", or "taxpayer". See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31) also says that when NEITHER the PAYER nor the PAYEE are engaged in public office ("trade or business") and the payment does not originate from "sources within the United States", meaning the de facto government, then the transaction isn't taxable.

26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3) at first glance might appear to confuse this explanation, but in fact it doesn't. It implies that "sources within the United States" and "trade or business" are synonymous when in fact they aren't the same for BOTH parties to the transaction:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART I > § 864
> § 864. Definitions and special rules
> (c) Effectively connected income, etc.

> All income, gain, or loss from sources within the United States (other than income, gain, or loss to which paragraph (2) applies) shall be treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.*

There is no contradiction because the PAYER is ALWAYS a public officer and therefore a "U.S. source" and a "taxpayer" on one side of the coin while the PAYEE can be a nonresident and yet also not a "taxpayer", "individual", or "person" on the other side of the same coin. Everyone serving in a public office within the U.S. government is, by definition, a "source within the United States" if they are making a payment to someone else in their official capacity. Once again: EVERY TRANSACTION has two ends, and it depends which end you are looking at. You need to be VERY clear from the language which end it is and what you are looking for, because the language will try to confuse the ends to make it look like EVERYONE is a "taxpayer", "individual", and therefore "person". Clues to which end of the transaction they are talking about:

1. PAYER: Words used would be "paid", "making payment".
2. PAYEE: Words used would be "received", "amount received".

Another fact is also important that people like Pete Hendrickson chronically overlook. Yes, an information return always involves a "trade or business" because 26 U.S.C. §6041(a) says so. However, does it ALSO imply or require or impute that the PAYEE is engaged in a "trade or business"? A worthy exercise would be to go through all the instruction forms for information returns and the IRS publications to see what they say about WHICH ends of the transaction must be engaged in a "trade or business". We did a cursory look and they almost always talk to the FILER of the information return and use the phrase "YOUR trade or business", as though they are implying that the PAYER is the ONLY one engaged in the public office.

How then, does the PAYEE become involved in a "trade or business" if the information return doesn't imply it? Below are the MAIN techniques":

1. Taking deductions under 26 U.S.C. §162, all of which require those taking them to be engaged in a "trade or business". See section 5.6.12.12.1 later
2. Using a RESIDENT tax form, the 1040. The "United States" that a person is a "resident" (alien) in relation to is the GOVERNMENT, and not the geographical USA. The "United States" one is a "resident" of is the government, and the "person" who is the resident is the public office within the government, and not the human being filling the office. See section 5.6.12.12.5 later
3. Using government de facto license numbers such as SSNs and TINs. 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(b) says that these numbers are only required by those engaged in a "trade or business" and who are "U.S. persons", meaning people domiciled on federal territory that is no part of any state of the Union. See section 5.6.12.12.4 later and also the following:

About SSNs and TINs on Government Forms and Correspondence, Form #04.104 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

To summarize the findings of this section:

1. The language within the I.R.C. surrounding the use of the word "trade or business" is very deliberately and cunningly trying to confuse you about which end of the transaction is the public officer and therefore the "taxpayer" because they want you to assume EVERYONE is a "taxpayer", "person", and "individual". If they were more honest, they would have referred directly to the words "PAYER" and "PAYEE".
2. Every transaction has TWO parties, a PAYER, and a PAYEE.
   2.1. The PAYER is always a public officer and a "taxpayer", and therefore a "person" and "U.S. person" (26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30)) subject to federal law. A "public office" making payments to a nonresident, for instance, is a "U.S. source" and the PAYER is a "trade or business" but the payee is NOT. Some PAYERS unlawfully compel the nonresident to "elect" themself into public office by compelling them to procure and use an identifying numbers before they will make the payment. This is a criminal violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(a)(8) and 18 U.S.C. §912 and causes perjury on the Forms SS-5, W-7, and W-9 in the case of a nonresident domiciled in a state of the union who does not ALREADY occupy a public office BEFORE they made application for the number.
   2.2. The PAYEE most often is, in reality, a nonresident who is neither a "person", "individual", nor "taxpayer" but who wrongfully thinks they are because of the deliberate and calculated confusion in the code you point out.
3. Everything the PAYEE receives from the PAYER is, by definition, "U.S. source income" because the "U.S." means the government, and not the geographical sense. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) is a red herring, because it uses the phrase "geographical sense", but nowhere is the "geographical sense" of the word ever expressly invoked throughout the entire 9500 page Internal Revenue Code.

3.1. The payment is ECI IN RELATION TO THE PAYER while also being. . .

3.2. "U.S. source" and NOT ECI in relation to a PAYEE who is NOT engaged in a "trade or business" or who is nonresident.

3.3. It is only taxable, reportable, or subject to withholding if BOTH the PAYER and the PAYEE are "persons", "U.S. persons", and "taxpayers" domiciled on federal territory. It isn't taxable if either end of the transaction is a nonresident and therefore not a "person", "individual", or "taxpayer". Domicile is the origin of the liability for tax. That is why there are so many statutes mentioned in the Non-Resident Non-Person Position booklet that say that nonresidents don't earn reportable income. This is made clear below:

5.6.12.11 Public office generally

5.6.12.11.1 Legal requirements for holding a "public office"?

The subject of exactly what constitutes a "public office" within the meaning described in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) is not defined in any IRS publication we could find. The reason is quite clear: the "trade or business" scam is the Achilles heel of the IRS fraud and both the IRS and the Courts are loath to even talk about it because there is nothing they can defend themselves with other than unsubstantiated presumption created by the abuse of the word "includes" and certain key "words of art". In the face of such overwhelming evidence of their own illegal and criminal mis-enforcement of the tax codes, silence or omission in either admitting it or prosecuting it can only be characterized as FRAUD on a massive scale, in fact:

> "Silence can only be equated with fraud where there is a legal or moral duty to speak or where an inquiry left unanswered would be intentionally misleading."
> [U.S. v. Prudden, 424 F.2d. 1021 (5th Cir. 1970)]

> "Silence can be equated with fraud where there is a legal or moral duty to speak, or where an inquiry left unanswered would be intentionally misleading. . . We cannot condone this shocking behavior by the IRS. Our revenue system is based on the good faith of the taxpayer and the taxpayers should be able to expect the same from the government in its enforcement and collection activities."
> [U.S. v. Tweel, 550 F.2d. 297, 299 (5th Cir. 1977)]

> "Silence is a species of conduct, and constitutes an implied representation of the existence of the state of facts in question , and the estoppel is accordingly a species of estoppel by misrepresentation. When silence is of such a character and under such circumstances that it would become a fraud upon the other party to permit the party who has kept silent to deny what his silence has induced the other to believe and act upon, it will operate as an estoppel."
> [Carmine v. Bowen, 64 A. 932 (1906)]

The "duty" the courts are talking about above is the fiduciary duty of all those serving in public offices in the government, and that fiduciary duty was created by the oath of office they took before they entered the office. Therefore, those who want to know how they could lawfully be classified as a "public office" will have to answer that question completely on their own, which is what we will attempt to do in this section.

We begin our search with a definition of "public office" from Black's Dictionary:

> "Public office. The right, authority, and duty created and conferred by law, by which for a given period, either fixed by law or enduring at the pleasure of the creating power, an individual is invested with some portion of the sovereign functions of government for the benefit of the public. Walker v. Rich, 79 Cal.App. 139, 249 P. 56, 58. An agency for the state, the duties of which involve in their performance the exercise of some portion of the sovereign power, either great or small. Yaselli v. Goff, C.C.A., 12 F.2d. 396, 403, 56 A.L.R. 1239; Lacey v. State, 13 Ala.App. 212, 68 So. 706, 710; Curtin v. State, 61 Cal.App. 377, 214 P. 1030, 1035; Shelmadine v. City of Elkhart, 75 Ind.App. 493, 129 N.E. 878. State ex rel. Colorado River Commission v. Frohmiller, 46 Ariz. 413, 52 P.2d. 483, 486. Where, by virtue of law, a person is clothed, not as an incidental or transient authority, but for such time as denotes duration and continuance, with independent power to control the property of the public, or with public functions to be exercised in the supposed interest of the people, the service to be compensated by a stated yearly salary, and the occupant having a designation or title, the position so created is a public office. State v. Brennan, 49 Ohio.St. 33, 29 N.E. 593."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1235]

Black's Law Dictionary Sixth Edition further clarifies the meaning of a "public office" below:

"Essential characteristics of a 'public office' are:
(1) Authority conferred by law,
(2) Fixed tenure of office, and
(3) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.

Key element of such test is that "officer is carrying out a sovereign function. Spring v. Constantino, 168 Conn. 563, 362 A.2d. 871, 875. Essential elements to establish public position as 'public office' are:
Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.
Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,
Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.
Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and Position must have some permanency."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1230]

American Jurisprudence Legal Encyclopedia further clarifies what a "public office" is as follows:

"As expressed otherwise, the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer. [231] Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain from a discharge of their trusts. [232] That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political entity on whose behalf he or she serves. [233] and owes a fiduciary duty to the public. [234] It has been said that the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual. [235] Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy.[236]"
[63C American Jurisprudence 2d, Public Officers and Employees, §247 (1999)]

Ordinary or common-law employees of the government also do not qualify as "public officers":

§2 How Office Differs from Employment.-A public office differs in material particulars from a public employment, for, as was said by Chief Justice MARSHALL, "although an office is an employment, it does not follow that every employment is an office. A man may certainly be employed under a contract, express or implied, to perform a service without becoming an officer." [237]

"We apprehend that the term 'office,'" said the judges of the supreme court of Maine, "implies a delegation of a portion of the sovereign power to, and the possession of it by, the person filling the office; and the exercise of such power within legal limits constitutes the correct discharge of the duties of such office. Based on the foregoing, one cannot be a "public officer" if:

1. There is not a statute or constitutional authority that specifically creates the office. All "public offices" can only be created through legislative authority.
2. Their duties are not specifically and exactly enumerated in some Act of Congress.
3. They have a boss or immediate supervisor. All duties must be performed INDEPENDENTLY.
4. They have anyone but the law and the courts to immediately supervise their activities.
5. They are serving as a "public officer" in a location NOT specifically authorized by the law. The law must create the office and specify exactly where it is to be exercised. 4 U.S.C. §72 says ALL public offices of the federal and national government MUST be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere, except as expressly provided by law.
6. Their position does not carry with it some kind of fiduciary duty to the "public" which in turn is documented in and enforced by enacted law itself.
7. The beneficiary of their fiduciary duty is other than the "public". Public service is a public trust, and the beneficiary of the trust is the public at large and not any one specific individual or group of individuals. See 5 C.F.R. §2635.101(b) and Executive Order 12731.

All public officers must take an oath. The oath, in fact, is what creates the fiduciary duty that attaches to the office. This is confirmed by the definition of "public official" in Black's Law Dictionary:

> "Public official*. A person who,* upon being issued a commission, taking required oath*, enters upon, for a fixed tenure, a position called an office where he or she exercises in his or her own right some of the attributes of sovereign he or she serves for benefit of public. Macy v. Heverin, 44 Md.App. 358, 408 A.2d. 1067, 1069. The holder of a public office though not all persons in public employment are public officials, because public official's position requires the exercise of some portion of the sovereign power, whether great or small. The President of the Senate for the time being, shall also administer the said oath or affirmation to each Senator who shall hereafter be elected, previous to his taking his seat: and in any future case of a President of the Senate. who shall not have taken the said oath or affirmation, the same shall be administered to him by any one of the members of the Senate.*

And the members of the several State legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers of the several States, who shall be chosen or appointed after the said first day of August, shall, before they proceed to execute the duties of their respective offices, take the foregoing oath or affirmation, which shall be administered by the person or persons, who by the law of the State shall be authorized to administer the oath of office; and the person or persons so administering the oath hereby required to be taken, shall cause a re- cord or certificate thereof to be made, in the same manner, as, by the law of the State, he or they shall be directed to record or certify the oath of office.*

> SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the secretary of the Senate, and the clerk of the House of Representatives for the time being, shall, at the time of taking the oath or affirmation aforesaid, each take an oath or affirmation in the words following, to wit : "1, A. B. secretary of the Senate, or clerk of the House of Representatives (as the case may be) of the United States of America, do solemnly swear or affirm, that I will truly and faithfully discharge the duties of my said office, to the best of my knowledge and abilities."

Based on the above, the following persons within the government are "public officers":

1. Federal Officers:
   - 1.1. The President of the United States.
   - 1.2. Members of the House of Representatives.
   - 1.3. Members of the Senate.
   - 1.4. All appointed by the President of the United States.
   - 1.5. The secretary of the Senate.
   - 1.6. The clerk of the House of Representatives.
   - 1.7. All district, circuit, and supreme court justices.
2. State Officers:
   - 2.1. The governor of the state.
   - 2.2. Members of the House of Representatives.
   - 2.3. Members of the Senate.
   - 2.4. All district, circuit, and supreme court justices of the state.

At the federal level, all those engaged in the above "public offices" are statutorily identified in 5 U.S.C. §2105. Consistent with this section, what most people would regard as ordinary common law employees are not included in the definition. Note the phrase "an officer AND an individual":

> TITLE 5 > PART III > Subpart A > CHAPTER 21 > § 2105
> § 2105. Employee
> (a) For the purpose of this title, "employee", except as otherwise provided by this section or when specifically modified, means an officer and an individual who is—
> (1) appointed in the civil service by one of the following acting in an official capacity—

> (A) the President;
> (B) a Member or Members of Congress, or the Congress;
> (C) a member of a uniformed service;
> (D) an individual who is an employee under this section;
> (E) the head of a Government controlled corporation; or
> (F) an adjutant general designated by the Secretary concerned under section 709 (c) of title 32;
> (2) engaged in the performance of a Federal function under authority of law or an Executive act; and
> (3) subject to the supervision of an individual named by paragraph (1) of this subsection while engaged in the performance of the duties of his position.

Within the military, only commissioned officers are "public officers". Enlisteds or NCOs (Non-Commissioned Officers) are not.

Those holding Federal or State public office, county or municipal office, under the Legislative, Executive or Judicial branch, including Court Officials, Judges, Prosecutors, Law Enforcement Department employees, Officers of the Court, and etc., before entering into these public offices, are required by the U.S. Constitution and statutory law to comply with 5 U.S.C. §3331, "Oath of office." State Officials are also required to meet this same obligation, according to State Constitutions and State statutory law.

All oaths of office come under 22 C.F.R., Foreign Relations, Sections §§92.12 - 92.30, and all who hold public office come under 8 U.S.C. §1481 "Loss of nationality by native-born or naturalized citizen; voluntary action; burden of proof; presumptions."

Under Title 22 U.S.C., Foreign Relations and Intercourse, Section §611, a Public Official is considered a foreign agent. In order to hold public office, the candidate must file a true and complete registration statement with the State Attorney General as a foreign principle.

The Oath of Office requires the public officials in his/her foreign state capacity to uphold the constitutional form of government or face consequences, according to 10 U.S.C. §333, "Interference with State and Federal law"

> The President, by using the militia or the armed forces, or both, or by any other means, shall take such measures as he considers necessary to suppress, in a State, any insurrection, domestic violence, unlawful combination, or conspiracy, if it—

> (2) opposes or obstructs the execution of the laws of the United States or impedes the course of justice under those laws.
> In any situation covered by clause (1), the State shall be considered to have denied the equal protection of the laws secured by the Constitution.

Willful refusal action while serving in official capacity violates 18 U.S.C. §1918, "Disloyalty and asserting the right to strike against the Government"

> (2) is a member of an organization that he knows advocates the overthrow of our constitutional form of government;

AND violates 18 U.S.C. §1346:

> TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 63 § 1346. Definition of "scheme or artifice to defraud

> " For the purposes of this chapter, the term "scheme or artifice to defraud" includes a scheme or artifice to deprive another of the intangible right of honest services.

The "public offices" described in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) within the definition of "trade or business" are ONLY public offices located in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere. To wit:

> TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 3 > § 72
> § 72. Public offices; at seat of Government
> All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law.
> [SOURCE: http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/html/uscode04/usc_sec_04_00000072----000-.html]

The only provision of any act of Congress that we have been able to find which authorizes "public offices" outside the District of Columbia as expressly required by law above, is 48 U.S.C. §1612, which authorizes enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code within the U.S. Virgin Islands. To wit:

> TITLE 48 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER V > § 1612
> § 1612. Jurisdiction of District Court
> The District Court of the Virgin Islands shall have the jurisdiction of a District Court of the United States, including, but not limited to, the diversity jurisdiction provided for in section 1332 of title 28 and that of a bankruptcy court of the United States. The District Court of the Virgin Islands shall have exclusive jurisdiction over all criminal and civil proceedings in the Virgin Islands with respect to the income tax laws applicable to the Virgin Islands, regardless of the degree of the offense or of the amount involved, except the ancillary laws relating to the income tax enacted by the legislature of the Virgin Islands. Any act or failure to act with respect to the income tax laws applicable to the Virgin Islands which would constitute a criminal offense described in chapter 75 of subtitle F of title 26 shall constitute an offense against the government of the Virgin Islands and may be prosecuted in the name of the government of the Virgin Islands by the appropriate officers thereof in the District Court of the Virgin Islands without the request or the consent of the United States attorney for the Virgin Islands, notwithstanding the provisions of section 1617 of this title.

There is NO PROVISION OF LAW which would similarly extend public offices or jurisdiction to enforce any provision of the Internal Revenue Code to any place within the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union, because Congress enjoys NO LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION THERE.

> "It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states*, Hammer v. By law then, no "public office" may therefore be exercised OUTSIDE the District of Columbia except as "expressly provided by law", including privileged or licensed activities such as a "trade or business". This was also confirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court in the License Tax Cases, when they said:

> "Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses*, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other* licenses *necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. Since I.R.C., Subtitle A is a franchise or excise tax on "public offices", which is called a "trade or business", then the tax can only apply to those domiciled within the statutory but not constitutional "United States" (federal territory), wherever they are physically located to include states of the Union, but only if they are serving under oath in their official capacity as "public officers".

> "Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."

Another important point needs to be emphasized, which is that those working for the federal government, while on official duty, are representing a federal corporation called the "United States", which is domiciled in the District of Columbia.

Government employees, including "public officers", while on official duty representing the federal corporation called the "United States", maintain the character of the entity they represent and therefore have a legal domicile in the statutory but not constitutional "United States" (federal territory) within the context of their official duties. The Internal Revenue Code also reflects this fact in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d):

> § 7701. Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(39) Persons residing outside United States

(B) enforcement of summons

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 76 > Subchapter A > § 7408

If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in, and does not have his principal place of business in, any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated for purposes of this section as residing in the District of Columbia.

Kidnapping and transporting the legal identity of a person domiciled outside the District of Columbia in a foreign state, which includes states of the Union, is illegal pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §1201. Therefore, the only people who can be legally and involuntarily "kidnapped" by the courts based on the above two provisions of statutory law are those who individually consent through private contract to act as "public officers" in the execution of their official duties. The fiduciary duty of these "public officers" is further defined in the I.R.C. as follows, and it is only by an oath of "public office" that this fiduciary duty can lawfully be created:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 68 > Subchapter B > PART I > § 6671
§ 6671. Rules for application of assessable penalties

(b) Person defined

The term "person", as used in this subchapter, includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 75 > Subchapter D > § 7343
§ 7343. Definition of term "person"

The term "person" as used in this chapter includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

We remind our readers that there is no liability statute within I.R.C., Subtitle A that would create the duty documented above, and therefore the ONLY way it can be created is by the oath of office of the "public officers" who are the subject of the tax in question. This was thoroughly described in the following article:

> There's No Statute Making Anyone Liable to Pay IRC Subtitle A Income Taxes, Family Guardian Fellowship
> http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/NoStatuteLiable.htm

The existence of fiduciary duty of "public officers" is therefore the ONLY lawful method by which anyone can be prosecuted for an "omission", which is a thing they didn't do that the law required them to do. It is otherwise illegal and unlawful to prosecute anyone under either common law or statutory law for a FAILURE to do something, such as a FAILURE TO FILE a tax return pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7203. Below is an example of where the government gets its authority to prosecute "taxpayers" for failure to file a tax return, in fact:

"I: DUTY TO ACCOUNT FOR PUBLIC FUNDS

*§ 909. In general.-It is the duty of the public officer, like any other agent or trustee, although not declared by express statute, to faithfully account for and pay over to the proper authorities all moneys which may come into his hands upon the public account, and the performance of this duty may be enforced by proper actions against the officer himself, or against those who have become sureties for the faithful discharge of his duties."

In addition to the above, every attorney admitted to practice law in any state or federal court is described as an "officer of the court", and therefore ALSO is a "public officer":

Attorney at law. An advocate, counsel, or official agent employed in preparing, managing, and trying cases in the courts. An officer in a court of justice, who is employed by a party in a cause to manage it for him. In re Bergeron, 220 Mass. 472, 107 N.E. 1007, 1008, Ann.Cas.l917A, 549.*

An attorney was almost invariably also a solicitor. It is now provided by the judicature act. 1873, 8 87. that solicitors. Attorneys, or proctors of, or by law empowered to practice in, any court the jurisdiction of which is by that act transferred to the high court of justice or the court of appeal, shall be called "solicitors of the supreme court." Executive Order 12731 and 5 C.F.R. §2635.101(a) furthermore both indicate that "public service is a public trust":

Executive Order 12731
"Part 1 -- PRINCIPLES OF ETHICAL CONDUCT

"Section 101. Principles of Ethical Conduct. To ensure that every citizen can have complete confidence in the integrity of the Federal Government, each Federal employee shall respect and adhere to the fundamental principles of ethical service as implemented in regulations promulgated under sections 201 and 301 of this order:

"(a) Public service is a public trust, requiring employees to place loyalty to the Constitution, the laws, and ethical principles above private gain.

TITLE 5--ADMINISTRATIVE PERSONNEL
CHAPTER XVI--OFFICE OF GOVERNMENT ETHICS
PART 2635--STANDARDS OF ETHICAL CONDUCT FOR EMPLOYEES OF THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH--Table of Contents
Subpart A--General Provisions
Sec. 2635.101 Basic obligation of public service.

(a) Public service is a public trust. Each employee has a responsibility to the United States Government and its citizens to place loyalty to the Constitution, laws and ethical principles above private gain. To ensure that every citizen can have complete confidence in the integrity of the Federal Government, each employee shall respect and adhere to the principles of ethical conduct set forth in this section, as well as the implementing standards contained in this part and in supplemental agency regulations.

The above provisions of law imply that everyone who works for the government is a "trustee" of "We the People", who are the sovereigns they serve in the public. In law, EVERY "trustee" is a "fiduciary" of the Beneficiary of the trust within which he serves:

*"TRUSTEE. The person appointed, or required by law, to execute a trust; one in whom an estate, interest, or power is vested, under an express or implied agreement [e.g. PRIVATE LAW or CONTRACT] to administer or exercise it for the benefit or to the use of another called the cestui que trust. Pioneer Mining Co. v. Ty berg, C.C.A.Alaska, 215 F. 501, 506, L.R.A.l915B, 442; Kaehn v. St. Paul Co-op. Ass'n, 156 Minn. 113, 194 N.W. 112; Catlett v. Hawthorne, 157 Va. 372, 161 S.E. 47, 48. Person who holds title to res and administers it for others' benefit. Reinecke v. Smith, Ill., 53 S.Ct. 570, 289 U.S. 172, 77 L.Ed. 1109. In a strict sense, a "trustee" is one > 'who holds the legal title to property for the benefit of another, while, in a broad sense, the term is sometimes applied to anyone standing in a fiduciary or confidential relation to another. such as agent, attorney, bailee, etc. State ex rel. Lee v. Sartorius, 344 Mo. 912, 130 S.W.2d. 547, 549, 550. "Trustee" is also used In a wide and perhaps inaccurate sense, to denote that a person has the duty of carrying out a transaction, in which he and another person are interested, in such manner as will be most for the benefit of the latter, and not in such a way that he himself might be tempted, for the sake of his personal advantage, to neglect the interests of the other. In this sense, directors of companies are said to be "trustees for the shareholders." Sweet.

> [Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1684]

The fact that public service is a "public trust" was also confirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court, when it said:

> "Whatever these Constitutions and laws validly determine to be property, it is the duty of the Federal Government, through the domain of jurisdiction merely Federal, to recognize to be property.
> "And this principle follows from the structure of the respective Governments, State and Federal, and their reciprocal relations. They are different agents and trustees of the people of the several States, appointed with different powers and with distinct purposes, but whose acts, within the scope of their respective jurisdictions, are mutually obligatory. "
> [Dred Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. 393 (1856)]

An example of someone who is NOT a "public officer" is a federal worker on duty and who is not required to take an oath. These people may think of themselves as employees in an ordinary and not statutory sense and even be called employees by their supervisor or employer, but in fact NOT be the statutory "employee" defined in 5 U.S.C. §2105(a). Remember that 5 U.S.C. §2105(a) defines a STATUTORY "employee" as "an officer and an individual" and you don't become an "officer" in a statutory sense unless and until you take a Constitutional oath. Almost invariably, such workers also have some kind of immediate supervisor who manages and oversees and evaluates his activities pursuant to the position description drafted for the position he fills. He may be a "trustee" and he may have a "fiduciary duty" to the public as a "public servant", but he isn't an "officer" or "public officer" unless and until he takes an oath of office prescribed by law. A federal worker, however, can become a "public office" by virtue of any one or more of the following purposes that we are aware of so far:

1. Be elected to political office.
2. Being appointed to political office by the President or the governor of a state of the Union.

A "public office" is not limited to a human being. It can also extend to an entire entity such as a corporation. An example of an entity that is a "public office" in its entirety is a federally chartered bank, such as the original Bank of the United States described in Osborn v. United States, in which the U.S. Supreme Court identified the original and first Bank of the United States, a federally chartered bank corporation created by Congress, as a "public office":

> All the powers of the government must be carried into operation by individual agency, either through the medium of public officers, or contracts made with individuals. Can any public office be created, or does one exist, the performance of which may, with propriety, be assigned to this association [or trust], when incorporated? If such office exist, or can be created, then the company may be incorporated, that they may be appointed to execute such office. Is there any portion of the public business performed by individuals upon contracts, that this association could be employed to perform, with greater advantage and more safety to the public, than an individual contractor? If there be an employment of this nature, then may this company be incorporated to undertake it.
> There is an employment of this nature. Nothing can be more essential to the fiscal concerns of the nation, than an agent of undoubted integrity and established credit, with whom the public moneys can, at all times, be safely deposited. Nothing can be of more importance to a government, than that there should be some capitalist in the country, who possesses the means of making advances of money to the government upon any exigency, and who is under a legal obligation to make such advances. For these purposes the association would be an agent peculiarly suitable and appropriate. [. . .]
> The mere creation of a corporation, does not confer political power or political character. So this Court decided in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, already referred to. If I may be allowed to paraphrase the language of the Chief Justice, I would say, a bank incorporated, is no more a State instrument, than a natural person performing the same business would be. If, then, a natural person, engaged in the trade of banking, should contract with the government to receive the public money upon deposit, to transmit it from place to place, without charging for commission or difference of exchange, and to perform, when called upon, the duties of commissioner of loans, would not thereby become a public officer, how is it that this artificial being, created by law for the purpose of being employed by the government for the same purposes, should become a part of the civil government of the country? Is it because its existence, its capacities, its powers, are given by law? because the government has given it power to take and hold property in a particular form, and to employ that property for particular purposes, and in the disposition of it to use a particular name? because the government has sold it a privilege [22 U.S. 738, 774] for a large sum of money, and has bargained with it to do certain things; is it, therefore, a part of the very government with which the contract is made?

If the Bank be constituted a public office, by the connexion between it and the government, it cannot be the mere legal franchise in which the office is vested; the individual stockholders must be the officers. Their character is not merged in the charter. This is the strong point of the Mayor and Commonalty v. Wood, upon which this Court ground their decision in the Bank v. Deveaux, and from which they say, that cause could not be distinguished. Thus, aliens may become public officers, and public duties are confided to those who owe no allegiance to the government, and who are even beyond its territorial limits.

With the privileges and perquisites of office, all individuals holding offices, ought to be subject to the disabilities of office. But if the Bank be a public office, and the individual stockholders public officers, this principle does not have a fair and just operation. The disabilities of office do not attach to the stockholders; for we find them every where holding public offices, even in the national Legislature, from which, if they be public officers, they are excluded by the constitution in express terms.

If the Bank be a public institution of such character as to be justly assimilated to the mint and the post office, then its charter may be amended, altered, or even abolished, at the discretion of the National Legislature. All public offices are created [22 U.S. 738, 775] purely for public purposes, and may, at any time, be modified in such manner as the public interest may require. Public corporations partake of the same character. So it is distinctly adjudged in Dartmouth College v. Woodward. In this point, each Judge who delivered an opinion concurred. By one of the Judges it is said, that 'public corporations are generally esteemed such as exist for public political purposes only, such as towns, cities, parishes and counties; and in many respects they are so, although they involve some private interests; but, strictly speaking, public corporations are such only as are founded by the government for public purposes, where the whole interest belongs also to the government. If, therefore, the foundation be private, though under the charter of the government, the corporation is private, however extensive the uses may be to which it is devoted, either by the bounty of the founder, or the nature and objects of the institution. For instance, a bank, created by the government for its own uses, whose stock is exclusively owned by the government, is, in the strictest sense, a public corporation. So, a hospital created and endowed by the government for general charity. But a bank, whose stock is owned by private persons, is a private corporation, although it is erected by the government, and its objects and operations partake of a public nature. The same doctrine may be affirmed of insurance, canal, bridge, and turnpike companies. In all these cases, the uses may, in a certain sense, be called public, but the corporations are private; as much [22 U.S. 738, 776] so, indeed, as if the franchises were vested in a single person.[. . .]

In what sense is it an instrument of the government? and in what character is it employed as such? Do the government employ the faculty, the legal franchise, or do they employ the individuals upon whom it is conferred? and what is the nature of that employment? does it resemble the post office, or the mint, or the custom house, or the process of the federal Courts?

The post office is established by the general government. It is a public institution. The persons who perform its duties are public officers. No individual has, or can acquire, any property in it. For all the services performed, a compensation is paid out of the national treasury; and all the money received upon account of its operations, is public property. Surely there is no similitude between this institution, and an association who trade upon their own capital, for their own profit, and who have paid the government a million and a half of dollars for a legal character and name, in which to conduct their trade.

Again: the business conducted through the agency of the post office, is not in its nature a private business. It is of a public character, and the [22 U.S. 738, 786] charge of it is expressly conferred upon Congress by the constitution. The business is created by law, and is annihilated when the law is repealed. But the trade of banking is strictly a private concern. It exists and can be carried on without the aid of the national Legislature. Nay, it is only under very special circumstances, that the national Legislature can so far interfere with it, as to facilitate its operations.

The post office executes the various duties assigned to it, by means of subordinate agents. The mails are opened and closed by persons invested with the character of public officers. But they are transported by individuals employed for that purpose, in their individual character, which employment is created by and founded in contract. To such contractors no official character is attached. These contractors supply horses, carriages, and whatever else is necessary for the transportation of the mails, upon their own account. The whole is engaged in the public service. The contractor, his horses, his carriage, his driver, are all in public employ. But this does not change their character. All that was private property before the contract was made, and before they were engaged in public employ, remain private property still. The horses and the carriages are liable to be taxed as other property, for every purpose for which property of the same character is taxed in the place where they are employed. The reason is plain: the contractor is employing his own means to promote his own private profit, and the tax collected is from the individual, though assessed upon the [22 U.S. 738, 787] means he uses to perform the public service. To tax the transportation of the mails, as such, would be taxing the operations of the government, which could not be allowed. But to tax the means by which this transportation is effected, so far as those means are private property, is allowable; because it abstracts nothing from the government; and because, the fact that an individual employs his private means in the service of the government, attaches to them no immunity whatever."

[Osborn v. Bank of U.S., 22 U.S. 738 (1824)]

The record of the House of Representatives after the enactment of the first income tax during the Civil War in 1862, confirmed that the income tax was upon a "public office" and that even IRS agents, who are not "public officers" and who are not required to take an oath, are therefore exempt from the requirements of the revenue acts in place at the time. Read the amazing truth for yourself:

House of Representatives, Ex. Doc. 99, 1867
http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Evidence/PublicOrPrivate-Tax-Return.pdf

Below is an excerpt from that report proving our point. The Secretary of the Treasury at the time is comparing the federal tax liabilities of postal clerks to those of internal revenue clerks. At that time, the IRS was called the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue was established in 1862 as an emergency measure to fund the Civil War, which ended shortly thereafter, but the illegal enforcement of the revenue laws continued and expanded into the states over succeeding years:

House of Representatives, Ex. Doc. 99, 1867, pp. 1-2
39th Congress, 2d Session

Salary Tax Upon Clerks to Postmasters

Letter form the Secretary of the Treasury in answer to A resolution of the House of the 12th of February, relative to salary tax upon clerks to postmasters, with the regulations of the department

Postmasters' clerks are appointed by postmasters, and take the oaths of office prescribed in the 2d section of the act of July 2, 1862, and in the 2d section of the act of March 3, 1863.

Their salaries are not fixed in amount bylaw, but from time to time the Post master General fixes the amount', allotted to each postmaster for clerk hire, under the authority conferred upon him by tile ninth section of the act of June 5, 1836, and then the postmaster, as an agent for and in behalf of the United States, determines the salary to be paid to each of his clerks. These salaries are paid by the postmasters, acting as disbursing agents, .from United States moneys advanced to them for this purpose, either directly from the Post Office Department in pursuance of appropriations made by law, or from the accruing revenues of their offices, under the instructions of the Postmaster General. The receipt of such clerks constitute vouchers in the accounts of the postmasters acting as disbursing agents in the settlements made with them by the Sixth Auditor. In the foregoing transactions the postmaster acts not as a principal, but as an agent of the United States, and the clerks are not in his private employment, but in the public employment of the United States. Such being the facts, these clerks are subjected to and required to account for and pay the salary tax*, imposed by the one hundred and twenty-third section of the internal revenue act of June 30, 1864, as amended by the ninth section of the internal revenue act of July 13, 1866, upon payments for services to persons in the civil employment or service of the United States.*

Copies of the regulations under which such salary taxes are withheld and paid into the treasury to the credit of internal revenue collection account are herewith transmitted, marked A, b, and C. Clerks to assessors of internal revenue [IRS agents] are appointed by the assessors. Neither law nor regulations require them to take an oath of office, because, as the law at present stands, they are not in the public service of the United States, through the agency of the assessor, but are in the private service of the assessor, as a principal, who employs them.

The salaries of such clerks are neither fixed in amount by law, nor are they regulated by any officer of the Treasury Department over the clerk hire of assessors is to prescribe a necessary and reasonable amount which shall not be exceeded in reimbursing the assessors for this item of their expenses.

No money is advanced by the United States for the payment of such salaries, nor do the assessors perform the duties of disbursing agents of the United States in paying their clerks. The entire amount allowed is paid directly to the assessor, and he is not accountable to the United States for its payment to his clerks, for the reason that he has paid them in advance, out of his own funds, and this is a reimbursement to him of such amount as the department decides to be reasonable. No salary tax is therefore collected, or required by the Treasury Department to be accounted for, or paid, on account of payments to the assessors' clerks, as the United States pays no such clerks nor has them in its employ or service, and they do not come within the provisions of existing laws imposing such a tax.

Perhaps no better illustration of the difference between the status of postmasters' clerks and that of assessors' clerks can be given than the following: A postmaster became a defaulter, without paying his clerks,; his successor received from the Postmaster General a new remittance for paying them; and if at any time, the clerks in a post office do not receive their salaries, by reason of the death, resignation or removal of a postmaster, the new appointee is authorized by the regulations of the Post Office Department to pay them out of the proceeds of the > office; and should there be no funds in his hands belonging to the department, a draft is issued to place money in his hands for that purpose.

> If an assessor had not paid his clerks, they would have no legal claim upon the treasury for their salaries. A discrimination is made between postmasters' clerks and assessor's clerks to the extent and for the reasons hereinbefore set forth.
> I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant.
> H. McCulloch, Secretary of the Treasury
> [House of Representatives, Ex. Doc. 99, 1867, pp. 1-2]

Notice based on the above that revenue officers don't take an oath, so they don't have to pay the tax, while postal clerks take an oath, so they do. Therefore, the oath that creates the "public office" is the method by which the government manufactures "public officers", "taxpayers", and "sponsors" for its wasteful use or abuse of public monies. If you would like a whole BOOK full of reasons why the only "taxpayers" under the I.R.C., Subtitle A are "public officers", please see the following exhaustive analysis:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a "Public Officer" for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.12.11.2 De Facto Public Officers

Based on the previous section, we are now thoroughly familiar with all the legal requirements for:

1. How public offices are lawfully created.
2. The only places where they can lawfully be exercised.
3. The duties that attach to the public office.
4. The type of agency exercised by the public officer.
5. The relationship between the public office and the public officer.

What we didn't cover in the previous section is what are all the legal consequences when someone performs the duties of a public office without satisfying all the legal requirements for lawfully occupying the office? In law, such a person is called a "de facto officer" and books have been written about the subject of the "de facto officer doctrine". Below is what the U.S. Supreme Court held on the subject of "de facto officers":

> "None of the cases cited militates against the doctrine that, for the existence of a de facto officer, there must be an office de jure, although there may be loose expressions in some of the opinions, not called for by the facts, seemingly against this view. Where no office legally exists, the pretended officer is merely a usurper, to whose acts no validity can be attached; and such, in our judgment, was the position of the commissioners of Shelby county, who undertook to act as the county court, which could be constitutionally held only by justices of the peace. Their right to discharge the duties of justices of the peace was never recognized by the justices, but from the outset was resisted by legal proceedings, which terminated in an adjudication that they were usurpers, clothed with no authority or official function. "
> [Norton v. Shelby Co State of Tennessee, 118 U.S. 425, 6 S.Ct. 1121, 30 L.Ed. 178 (1886)]

As we have already established, all statutory "taxpayers" are public officers in the U.S. and not state government. This is exhaustively proven with evidence in:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a "Public Officer" for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

A person who fulfills the DUTIES of a statutory "taxpayer" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) without lawfully occupying a public office in the U.S. government BEFORE becoming a "taxpayer" would be a good example of a de facto public officer. Those who exercise the duties of a public officer without meeting all the requirements, from a legal perspective, are in fact committing the crime of impersonating a public officer.

> § 912. Officer or employee of the United States

> Whoever falsely assumes or pretends to be an officer or employee acting under the authority of the United States or any department, agency or officer thereof, and acts as such, or in such pretended character demands or obtains any money, paper, document, or thing of value, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

What are some examples where a person would be impersonating a public officer unlawfully? Here are a few:

1. You elect or appoint yourself into public office by filling out a tax form without occupying said office BEFORE being a statutory "taxpayer".
2. You serve in the office in a geographic place NOT expressly authorized by law. For instance, 4 U.S.C. §72 requires that ALL federal public offices MUST be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and NOT ELSEWHERE, unless expressly authorized by law.
3. A third party unilaterally ELECTS you into a public office by submitting an information return linking you to such a BOGUS office under the alleged but not actual authority of 26 U.S.C. §6041(a).
4. You occupy the public office without either expressly consenting to it IN WRITING or without even knowing you occupy such an office.

If a so-called "GOVERNMENT" is established in which:

1. The only kind of "citizens" or "residents" allowed are STATUTORY citizens and residents. CONSTITUTIONAL citizens or residents are either not recognized or allowed as a matter of policy and not law. . . .OR
2. All "citizens" and "residents" are compelled under duress to accept the duties of a public office or ANY kind of duties imposed by the government upon them. Remember, the Thirteenth Amendment forbids "involuntary servitude", so if the government imposes any kind of duty or requires you to surrender private property of any kind by law, then they can only do so through the medium of a public office. . .OR
3. Everyone is compelled to obey government statutory law. Remember, nearly all laws passed by government can and do regulate ONLY the government and not private people. See:

   Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

. . .then you end up not only with a LOT of public officers, but a de facto GOVERNMENT as well. That government is thoroughly described in:

De Facto Government Scam, Form #05.043
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Even at the state level, it is a crime in every state of the Union to pretend to be a public officer of the state government who does not satisfy ALL of the legal requirements for occupying the public office. Below is an itemized list by jurisdiction of constitutional and statutory requirements that are violated by those who either impersonate a state public officer OR who serve simultaneously serve in BOTH a FEDERAL public office and a STATE public office AT THE SAME TIME. That's right: When you either impersonate a state public officer OR serve in BOTH a FEDERAL public office and STATE public office AT THE SAME TIME, then you are committing a crime and have a financial conflict of interest and conflict of allegiance that can and should disqualify you from exercising or accepting the duties of the office:

5.6.12.11.3 How do ordinary government workers not holding "public office" become "taxpayers"?

A question we are asked frequently is whether ordinary government workers not otherwise engaged in a "public office" are "taxpayers" and how they become "taxpayers".

> Chapter XVIII: Public Agents and Officers
> § 488. Definitions and classifications.-
> Public agents are those persons who are chosen to perform the duties of the public,-that is, the government or municipality. They may be divided into two principal classes; namely, employes and officers. It is true the term "employe," in a sense, applies also to officers, for it may be said that every officer is an employe; but, on the other hand, a public employe is not necessarily a public officer; thus, a mere janitor of county or state buildings, a county physician, and other employes who do not take an official oath nor file an official bond, are not officers > but employes.[240] An employe of the government usually owes his position to some officer whose duty it is to make the employment, and it is based entirely upon contract.[241] On the other hand, an officer owes his selection to a source fixed by the constitution or statute[242], and not by contract.[243] Moreover, the term "public office" embraces the idea of tenure and duration, while a mere public employment may involve only transient or incidental duties.[244] An office is an entity which may continue even after the death or withdrawal of the incumbent.[245] A public office involves the delegation to the incumbent of a. portion of the sovereign power of the state, either to make, administer, or execute the laws; and it signifies that the incumbent is to exercise some functions of that nature, and take the fees and emoluments belonging to the position.[246] On the other hand, there may be and are many employments by the national, state, city or town government which do not constitute the employe a public officer. "The work of the commonwealth," said the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, "and of the cities and towns must be done by agents or servants, and much of it is of the nature of an employment. It is sometimes difficult to make the distinction between a public office and an employment, yet the title of 'public officer' is one well known to the law, and it is often necessary to determine what constitutes a public office. Every copying-clerk · or janitor of a building is not necessarily a public officer."[247] A mere employe may, of course, be engaged by the appointing power for a definite time, or to accomplish a definite purpose, and in that sense his position may involve the nature of duration also; while, on the other hand, his employment may be altogether for an indefinite period, and he be subject to removal at any time. An employe under contract may be discharged without cause, unless the statute or constitution directs otherwise, but a public officer cannot generally be removed without cause, although the power of removal is inherent in the appointing power: the reason being that the power of removal is generally restricted by constitutional or statutory provisions.[248] The English notion that an office is hereditary does not obtain in this country, though it is true that the rights and privileges of an officer are the rights and privileges of the incumbent; in this country both the power of appointment and that of removal inhere in the people and are subject to their control by constitutions and statutes.[249] An office not being the creature of a contract, but simply a delegation of a portion of the sovereign power, it follows, according to the weight of authority, that the incumbent has no right of property in the office.[250]

> [A Treatise on the Law of Agency in Contract and Tort, George L. Rienhard, The Bowen-Merrill Company, 1902, pp. 538-539]

The answer is they aren't. The reason is that the above treatise explains that the office CANNOT be a product of contract. They may file a false and fraudulent IRS Form W-4 AGREEMENT and therefore CONTRACT to be TREATED as if they are public officers, but it constitutes the crime of impersonating a public officer per 18 U.S.C. §912 to do so. The remainder of this section will explain why this is.

The previous section discussed the differences between a "public office" and "public employment" and clearly proved that they are NOT equivalent. Consequently, ordinary government workers or civil service employees are NOT "public officers" nor are they therefore engaged in the "trade or business" franchise and contract by default.

So how did sneaky Congress get around the road block that "public offices" and "public employments" are NOT equivalent in law? Here is how they did it:

1. They defined all STATUTORY "employees" as "officers" in 5 U.S.C. §2105.

2. They PRESUMED that since this "OFFICER" works for the public, he is a statutory "PUBLIC OFFICER", even though this is not strictly true. One can be an AGENT or OFFICER of the government WITHOUT also being a PUBLIC OFFICER.
3. They falsely told both the public and all government workers that:
   3.1. "employee" in the ORDINARY sense and "employee" in the STATUTORY sense were equivalent.
   3.2. Everyone in the public who works for a living is an "employee" subject to federal law. In fact, only PUBLIC OFFICERS are subject to federal law.
   3.3. "employee" under the Internal Revenue Code Section 3401 and "employee" under 5 U.S.C. §2105 are equivalent. In fact, "employee" under the I.R.C. includes only public officers or officials, but not "employees" under 5 U.S.C. §2105.

   The above deception is called a "fallacy by equivocation". It appeals to the legal ignorance of the public to STEAL from them. It does so by confusing contexts for key "words of art". In this case, the ORDINARY context was deliberately confused with the STAUTUTORY context in order to STEAL PRIVATE property from people the government was supposed to be protecting from such theft.

Earnings not connected to the "trade or business" and public office franchise are described in 26 U.S.C. §871(a) in the case of "nonresident aliens". The following article proves that nonresident aliens not engaged in the "trade or business" franchise cannot earn "wages" unless they consent to do so by signing a contract called IRS Form W-4:

> Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020, Section 6.5
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

I.R.C., Subtitle A is a franchise tax on public offices, which the I.R.C. calls a "trade or business". "Public office" and "public employment" are NOT equivalent in law. Even for government workers, they don't earn "wages" as legally defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401 unless they are ALREADY public officers in the government BEFORE they sign the IRS Form W-4. This is because:

1. If a government worker not engaged in a public office refuses to sign the IRS Form W-4 and is not otherwise engaged in a "public office", then they can't lawfully become the subject of W-2 information returns and if they are filed with nonzero "wages", they are FALSE in violation of 26 U.S.C. §7207 and 26 U.S.C. §7434.
2. It is "wages" which appear on IRS Form W-2 in block 1. This form connects the term "wages" to the "trade or business" franchise pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041(a).
3. 26 U.S.C. §871(a)(1) mentions "wages" as being taxable when not connected to the "trade or business" franchise and one can only earn "wages" if they consent under the IRS Form W-4 contract/agreement.

See §§31.3401(c)–1 and 31.3401(d)–1 for the definitions of "employee" and "employer".*

4. It is "wages" and NOT "all earnings", "income", or even "gross income" that appear in the IRS Individual Master File (IMF) as being taxable.
5. The income tax is upon "wages" but not even "public officers" earn "wages".

6. It is "wages" which are the subject of I.R.C., Subtitle C withholding and constitute I.R.C., Subtitle A "gross income" because "wages" is the code word for earnings of those who elect to become "public officers" and thereby donate their private property earnings to a "public office", a "public use", and a "public purpose" and thereby subject them to taxation by signing the IRS Form W-4 "public officer" job application and contract.
7. It is "wages" that 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(p)-1 says become "gross income" and therefore "trade or business" income ONLY AFTER one signs the IRS Form W-4.

8. It is for claiming that "wages" are not taxable that many tax protesters are properly sanctioned. See:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004, Section 9.2 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The IRS Form W-4 is being used to connect private earnings to "wages" as legally defined and the "trade or business"/"public office" franchise by all of the following mechanisms:

1. As a federal "election" form where you can elect yourself into public office within the government. You are the only voter in this "election". Now do you know why the IRS calls it an "election" whenever you consent to something in the I.R.C. They aren't lying!
2. As a permission form authorizing the filing of information returns connecting otherwise private persons to a public office and a "trade or business" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041(a). If the IRS Form W-2 is filed against a person who did NOT make such an election, then election fraud is occurring and the employer is committing the crime of impersonating a public officer in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912. Any withholdings against a person who did not submit the IRS Form W-4 is a bribe to procure a public office in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §211.
   https://www.law.cornell.edu/uscode/text/18/211

3. To CREATE public offices in the U.S. government unlawfully rather than tax those already in existence.
4. As a way to create a franchise that turns private labor into public property by donating it to a public use and a public office.

> "Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights,-'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;' and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property [or income] which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation. "

5. As a way to make private workers into a Kelly Girls and contractors for the government engaged in a "public office".
6. As a way to make you party to the franchise agreement codified in I.R.C., Subtitles A and C.
7. The SSN or TIN on the IRS Form W-4 is being used as a de facto "license" to act as a "public officer" in the U.S. government called a "taxpayer". The IRS Form 1042-S Instructions say the SSN is only required for those engaged in a "trade or business", which means a public office. The tax is on the office, not on the private person. The office is the "res" that is the subject of the tax and the use of the number is prima facie evidence of the existence of the "res". All tax proceedings are "in rem" against the office, which is the only real "citizen", "resident", and "taxpayer". The human being filling the office is not the "taxpayer", but he is surety for the "taxpayer". They don't call the SSN or TIN a "license number" even though it is for all intents and purposes, because they don't want to admit that they have no authority to license ANYTHING within a state of the Union:

> "But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize [e.g. LICENSE] a trade or business within a State in order to tax it*."*
> [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

Please show us a case where the License Tax cases was overruled? It's still in force. The feds can't license ANYTHING within a state, including "public offices" and the "trade or business" franchise that is being ILLEGALLY enforced within states of the Union at this time. To admit otherwise is to sanction a destruction of the separation of powers between the states and the federal government. There is NO PLACE within the I.R.C. that authorizes the CREATION of public offices using any tax form, and yet that is what the IRS is unlawfully using IRS Forms W-2, W-4, and 1040 for. 4 U.S.C. §72 says there MUST be a statute that authorizes the creation and exercise of such offices within a state in order for such public offices to be valid. Essentially what is happening is that the forms constitute an election to make you into a "resident agent" for an office that exists in the District of Columbia.

The existence of 26 U.S.C. §871(a) is a deception, because 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31) says the property of those not engaged in the "trade or business' franchise is a foreign estate not subject to the I.R.C. One's earnings are part of that "foreign estate".

26 U.S.C. §3401(a)(6) excludes earnings of "nonresident aliens" from statutory "wages", if regulations exist. Government workers who aren't public officers therefore have the same protections as ordinary private industry workers who are nonresident aliens not engaged in the "trade or business" franchise. The only way a nonresident alien not otherwise engaged in the "trade or business" franchise can become subject is to sign the IRS Form W-4 contract to:

1. Become engaged in the franchise and be eligible for "benefits" under the franchise agreement.
2. Waive sovereign immunity pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605.
3. Make an election to become a "resident alien".

Where within 26 U.S.C. §3401 is the term "wages" treated any differently for government workers who AREN'T "public officers"? It AIN'T, friend.

Remember: Information returns are the only way the IRS could find out about the earnings of a government employee, and these returns can ONLY be filed against those engaged in the "trade or business" franchise or who elect to be using the IRS

Form W-4 agreement/contract. 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3(a), 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1. How would the IRS find out about 871(a) income that is NOT connected with the "trade or business"? There is no information return that is NOT connected to a "trade or business" and it is a CRIME for a person not ALREADY engaged in a public office in the government BEFORE they signed the IRS Form W-4 to impersonate a public officer or engage in the activities of a public office. 18 U.S.C. §912.

The income tax is upon the COINCIDENCE of DOMICILE within the jurisdiction AND being engaged in the "trade or business" franchise. The VOLUNTARY use of an identifying number connects you to BOTH of these prerequisites:

1. SSNs and TINs can only be issued to "U.S. persons". 26 U.S.C. §6109(g), 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(g), and 20 C.F.R. §422.103(d).
2. The number is only MANDATORY for persons engaged in franchises. See IRS form 1042-s instructions AND section 10 of the following:

About SSNs and TINs on Government Forms and Correspondence, Form #05.012 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

You can STILL be a government worker as a "non-resident non-person" not engaged in a "trade or business", not have a domicile on federal territory, and therefore STILL be a "foreigner" who is free and sovereign. The domicile and the protection it pays for is where the government's authority comes from to collect the tax in the first place. It is a CIVIL liability and you aren't subject to their CIVIL statutory law without a domicile on federal territory, unless you contract with them to procure an identity or "res", and thereby become a "res-ident". When you contract with them, you create a "public office" in the government and become surety for the office you created using your signature. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), 26 U.S.C. §7408(d), and 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) then changes the choice of law to the District of Columbia for all functions of the "public office" because now you are acting in a representative capacity on behalf of the federal corporation as such public officer.

On the subject of contracting with the government, the Bible forbids Christians from nominating a King or Protector above them, or from contracting with the pagan government:

> "Do not walk in the [civil] statutes of your fathers [the heathens, by selecting a domicile or "residence" in their jurisdiction], nor observe their judgments, nor defile yourselves with their idols. I am the LORD your God: Walk in My statutes, keep My judgments, and do them; hallow My Sabbaths, and they will be a sign between Me and you, that you may know that I am the LORD your God."

> "You shall make no covenant [contract or franchise] with them [foreigners, pagans], nor with their [pagan government] gods [laws or judges]. They shall not dwell in your land [and you shall not dwell in theirs by becoming a "resident" in the process of contracting with them], lest they make you sin against Me [God]. For if you serve their gods [under contract or agreement or franchise], it will surely be a snare to you."

For when we were in the flesh, the sinful passions which were aroused by the law were at work in our members to bear fruit to death. But now we have been delivered from the law, having died to what we were held by, so that we should serve in the newness of the Spirit [and newness of the law, God's law] and not in the oldness of the letter."*

The government can't lawfully force you to choose a domicile in their jurisdiction or to nominate a protector or become a "resident" if you are a "national" who was born in this country. They can force an alien born in another country to become a privileged "resident", but they can't force a "national" who is born here to become a "resident", because they can't lawfully compel a "citizen" under the constitution to suffer any of the disabilities of alienage without engaging in involuntary servitude and violation of constitutional rights. This is also confirmed by the definition of "residence" at 26 C.F.R. §1.871-2, which only includes aliens and not "nonresident aliens" or even "non-resident non-persons". If they did force you to choose a domicile or residence and thereby become a "taxpayer", it would be a violation of the First Amendment prohibition against compelled association and the Thirteenth Amendment prohibition against involuntary servitude. It has always been lawful to refuse protection and refuse to be a domiciliary called a statutory "U.S. citizen", "U.S. person", or statutory "U.S. resident", and to refuse to contract with them or accept any "benefits" that might give rise to a "quasi-contractual" obligation to pay for "social insurance". See:

As Frank Kowalik points out in his wonderful book, IRS Humbug: Weapons of Enslavement, Frank Kowalik, the income tax is a public officer kickback program disguised to "look" like a legitimate income tax. It's smoke and mirrors. To make it look like an income tax, they had to throw the "domicile" stuff into it, but the public officer status is still the foundation. That is why 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31) says everything in the code is "foreign" that is not connected to the public office ("trade or business") franchise. To be "foreign" means it is outside the jurisdiction of the franchise agreement because not consensually connected to it.

5.6.12.12 Methods for Connecting You to the Franchise

The following subsections describe the main methods by which entities and persons are connected to the "trade or business" franchise agreement codified in I.R.C., Subtitle A.

5.6.12.12.1 IRS Form W-4 Agreements or Contracts: Illegal for PRIVATE people

Before you can file a W-4 form, you must be an "employee". Most people who file this form are NOT:

> 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1 Employee:
> "...the term [employee] includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a [federal] State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision, thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term 'employee' also includes an officer of a [federal and not state] corporation."

The above statutory "employee" is the same statutory "employee" defined in 5 U.S.C. §2105(a) as an officer of the national and not state government. The "corporation" they are talking about above is FEDERAL corporation and not a STATE corporation.

> "A foreign corporation is one that derives its existence solely from the laws of another state, government, or country, and the term is used indiscriminately, sometimes in statutes, to designate either a corporation created by or under the laws of another state or a corporation created by or under the laws of a foreign country."
> "A federal corporation operating within a state is considered a domestic corporation rather than a foreign corporation. The United States government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state."
> [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §883 (2003)]

26 U.S.C. §3402(p)(1)(A) only authorizes people receiving payments from the national government to enter into a W-4 agreement, not private people.

The "person" above, is a STATUTORY "nonresident alien" at home under 26 U.S.C. §871 and a STATUTORY "U.S. citizen" or STATUTORY "U.S. resident" (alien) abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911. By "home" we mean federal territory, such as a territory, possession, or federal enclave. See:

Why the Federal Income Tax is a Privilege Tax Upon Government, Form #04.404 https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The person above party submitting the W-4 Form is also ONLY receiving a "specified Federal Payment", meaning a payment from the national government to one of their officers or contractors. This is NOT a payment of a PRIVATE company to a PRIVATE human!

> (C)Specified Federal paymentsFor purposes of this paragraph, the term "specified Federal payment" means—*

> (ii) any payment referred to in the second sentence of section 451(d) [1] which is treated as insurance proceeds,*
> (iii) any amount which is includible in gross income under section 77(a), and*
> (iv) any other payment made pursuant to Federal law which is specified by the Secretary for purposes of this paragraph.*

If you are not a federal officer or statutory "employee" or if you are not receiving payments from the national government, then you aren't even ELIGIBLE to submit a W-4 form! If you submit this form, you indirectly are creating prima facie evicence that is FALSE that you are a federal statutory "employee". BAD IDEA! This is why we tell our members that they should NEVER submit IRS Form W-4 to anyone they work with or for.

The IRS Form W-4 also identifies itself as an agreement, not on the form, but in the regulations that implement it.

The laws of the United States make it a crime to use an IRS Form W-4 to in effect "elect" yourself into the public office that is the subject of the I.R.C., Subtitle A income tax:

1. 18 U.S.C. §912: Impersonating a public officer. Assuming the rights or obligations of a public officer such as a "taxpayer".
2. 18 U.S.C. §1512: Tampering with a witness. Workers are criminally threatened by ignorant payroll clerks to sign the IRS Form W-4 under penalty of perjury that is knowingly false and fraudulent and criminal.
3. 18 U.S.C. §210: Offer to procure appointive public office. The withholdings paid in under the IRS Form W-4 are the BRIBE to procure and to be treated illegally "as if" one is a public officer engaged in the trade or business franchise.

If the person submitting the form is NOT a public officer but a private human, then by signing and submitting the form, they are identifying themselves as THE statutory "employee" identified in the upper left corner of the form AND legally defined in 5 U.S.C. §2105(a) as a public officer and indirectly, electing themselves into office AND bribing the person receiving the form to TREAT them AS IF they are public officers. Earlier versions of the IRS Internal Revenue Manual recognized the difference between a PRIVATE worker and a PUBLIC statutory "employee" with the following language in order to PREVENT the commission of the above crimes by uninformed withholding agents:

> Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 5.14.10.2 (09-30-2004)
> Payroll Deduction Agreements
> 2. Private employers, states, and political subdivisions are not required to enter into payroll deduction agreements*. Taxpayers should determine whether their employers will accept and process executed agreements before agreements are submitted for approval or finalized.*
> [http://www.irs.gov/irm/part5/ch14s10.html]

After we pointed out the above IRM section, the IRS mysteriously deleted the above section from their website, even though technically it is still true and absolutely necessary in order to prevent the crimes indicated above.

Absent public notice in IRS publications and the IRM above, ignorant private companies hiring those who are NOT statutory public "employees" frequently coerce their workers to commit the above crimes. The IRS Form W-4 is frequently and illegally abused by private employers to recruit otherwise PRIVATE people into appointive public office. The following treatise on public officers says that all attempts to procure such appointments are immoral and illegal:

> Contracts [such as IRS W-4's] to procure the appointment of a person to public office fall within the same principles. These offices are trusts, held solely for the public good, and should be conferred from considerations of the ability, integrity, fidelity and fitness for the position of the appointee. No other considerations can properly be regarded by the appointing power. Whatever introduces other elements to control this power must necessarily lower the character of the appointments to the great detriment of the public good. Agreements for compensation to procure these appointments tend directly and necessarily to introduce such elements. The law, therefore, from this tendency alone, adjudges these agreements inconsistent with sound morals and public policy.[251]

5.6.12.12.2 Reductions in Liability: Graduated Rate of Tax, Deductions, and Earned Income Credits

All attempts to reduce one's assumed tax liability require the person filing the tax return to be engaged in the "trade or business" excise taxable franchise. This includes:

1. Applying the graduated rate of tax found in 26 U.S.C. §1. Without the graduated rate of tax, the flat 30% tax applies to "nonresident alien individuals" found in 26 U.S.C. §871(a). The Section 1 rate usually starts lower than 30%.
2. Applying for earned income credits in 26 U.S.C. §32.
3. Taking "trade or business" deductions found in 26 U.S.C. §162:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter B
> Part VI-Itemized deductions for Individuals and Corporations
> Sec. 162. - Trade or business expenses
> (a) In general
> There shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business, including –
> (1) a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered;

Why must you be engaged in a "trade or business" in order to reduce your liability as a "taxpayer"? Because this is a commercial "benefit" and only those who work for the government can receive any commercial benefit from the government. Otherwise, the government is abusing its taxing power to transfer wealth among private individuals:

> To lay, with one hand, the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms.
> Nor is it taxation. 'A tax,' says Webster's Dictionary, 'is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or State.' 'Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the Legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes.' Cooley, Const. Lim., 479.
> Coulter, J., in Northern Liberties v. St. John's Church, 13 Pa.St., 104 says, very forcibly, 'I think the common mind has everywhere taken in the understanding that taxes are a public imposition, levied by authority of the government for the purposes of carrying on the government in all its machinery and operations—that they are imposed for a public purpose.' See, also Pray v. Northern Liberties, 31 Pa.St., 69; Matter of Mayor of N.Y., 11 Johns., 77; Camden v. Allen, 2 Dutch., 398; Sharpless v. Mayor, supra; Hanson v. Vernon, 27 Ia., 47; Whiting v. Fond du Lac, supra."

Hoeing, 44 Ill. 113, 92 Am.Dec. 153.

IRS Publication 519 confirms the above by saying the following:

> Nonresident Aliens
> You can claim deductions to figure your effectively connected taxable income. You generally cannot claim deductions related to income that is not connected with your U.S. business activities. Except for personal exemptions, and certain itemized deductions, discussed later, you can claim deductions only to the extent they are connected with your effectively connected income.

5.6.12.12.3 Information Returns

Information returns include but are not limited to IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, 1099, and 8300. Receipt of "trade or business" earnings is the basis for nearly all Information Returns processed by the IRS, which are reports documenting financial payments made to government entities or officers. The requirement to file these reports is found at 26 U.S.C. §6041. The "person" they are referring to in the article is none other than a "public officer" in the government:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 61 > Subchapter A > PART III > Subpart B > § 6041
> All persons engaged in a trade or business and making payment in the course of such trade or business to another person, of rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable gains, profits, and income (other than payments to which section 6042 (a)(1), 6044 (a)(1), 6047 (e), 6049 (a), or 6050N (a) applies, and other than payments with respect to which a statement is required under the authority of section 6042 (a)(2), 6044 (a)(2), or 6045), of $600 or more in any taxable year, or, in the case of such payments made by the United States, the officers or employees of the United States having information as to such payments and required to make returns in regard thereto by the regulations hereinafter provided for, shall render a true and accurate return to the Secretary, under such regulations and in such form and manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by the Secretary, setting forth the amount of such gains, profits, and income, and the name and address of the recipient of such payment.

In most cases, these reports are not only false, but fraudulent. The IRS structures the ILLEGAL handling of these reports in order to encourage the filing of false reports so as to maximize their revenues from unlawful activities. That section also appears on our website below:

> The Information Return Scam, Family Guardian Fellowship
> http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Remedies/InformationReturnScam.htm

This "trade or business" scam is found in other titles of the U.S. Code as well. For instance, in Title 31, which is the Money and Finance title, we did a search for the word "trade or business" and were very surprised by what we found there. You may know that when you try to withdraw $10,000 or more from a bank account, banks will insist on preparing what is called a "Currency Transaction Report", or "CTR" documenting the withdrawal. This report is sent to the United States Treasury and inputted into the FINCEN computers at the Treasury. The report is used to catch money launderers and tax evaders who are handling large amounts of cash. Well, the only circumstance under which this report can lawfully be prepared is when the subject is engaged in a "trade or business"! Here is the section:

> 31 C.F.R. 103.30(d)(2) General
> (d) Exceptions to the reporting requirements of 31 U.S.C. 5331:
> (2) Receipt of currency not in the course of the recipient's trade or business. The receipt of currency in excess of $10,000 by a person other than in the course of the person's trade or business is not reportable under 31 U.S.C. 5331.

The "trade or business" they are talking about is exactly the same one that appears in the Internal Revenue Code, folks!

> Title 31: Money and Finance: Treasury
> PART 103—FINANCIAL RECORDKEEPING AND REPORTING OF CURRENCY AND FOREIGN TRANSACTIONS
> Subpart B—Reports Required To Be Made

§ 103.30 Reports relating to currency in excess of $10,000 received in a trade or business.

(c) Meaning of terms. The following definitions apply for purposes of this section--

(11) Trade or business. The term trade or business has the same meaning as under section 162 of title 26, United States Code.

Quite a scam, huh? The following memorandum of law describes this scam in detail:

The Money Laundering Enforcement SCAM, Form #05.044 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The "trade or business" scam in Title 31 in the context of CTR's explains why financial institutions can demand federal ID numbers from depositors, why the federal government needs to be able to track these deposits, and many other considerations. Banks and financial institutions are simply volunteering to help the federal government keep track of its "employees" and "subcontractors". The Slave Surveillance Numbers (SSN) is the license number used to track federal subcontractors and is used by the federal government to track their "corporate" assets. If you think Microsoft as a corporation is too big for its britches, then what about the mother corporation for all other corporations, the United States government? All of the assets owned by a person engaged in a "trade or business" become "effectively connected" with the U.S. government by virtue of the fact that if a federal employee fails to deduct and withhold the proper "kickback" for which they are liable under 26 U.S.C. §1461, then their assets must be tracked so the kickback can be recovered through administrative process without the need to litigate. Being "effectively connected" means they are administratively attachable without the need for litigation by using an automated "Notice of Levy" form that isn't even signed. If you are going to engage in "commerce" or business with the government, then you have to help them make it "efficient", right? Doesn't that come with the territory: Never look a gift horse in the mouth? Well, "Uncle" is your new "gift horse", your Master, and you are the slave. The assets of a federal subcontractor only cease to be administratively attachable at the point when the subcontractor fulfills their fiduciary duty as a "transferee" under 26 U.S.C. §§6901 and 6903 and deducts the correct amount of "tax", or "kickback" to send to their new "employer", the federal government. In effect, they are "Kelly Girls" for the federal government who handle their own payroll and send payments back to the mother corporation. The compensation they receive for doing their own payroll comes in the form of a reduced tax liability, procured by taking itemized deductions, earned income credit, and applying a graduated rate of tax. Those not engaged in a "trade or business" are not allowed to avail themselves of any such "privileges". If you don't want to continue to be treated inhumanely like a "taxpayer", then quit acting like one, quit sucking on the government tit, and quit asking for "Uncle" to take care of you by volunteering to engage in privileged activities in order to procure special incentives and favors you don't need anyway.

The "trade or business" requirement also extends to nearly all other types of payment reporting within the I.R.C. Here are just a few examples:

1. IRS Publication 334 entitled Tax Guide for Small Businesses, Year 2002, p. 12 says:

> *"Form 8300. You must file form 8300, Report of Cash Payments Over $10,000 Received in a Trade or Business, if you receive more than $10,000 in cash in one transaction, or two or more related business transactions. Cash includes U.S. and foreign coin and currency. It also includes certain monetary instruments such as cashier's and traveler's checks and money orders. Cash does not include a check drawn on an individual's personal account (personal check). 3. IRS Form 1099-MISC Instructions (2005), p. 1 says:

> *operate for gain or profit. However, nonprofit organizations are considered to be engaged in a trade or business and are subject to these reporting requirements. Nonprofit organizations subject to these reporting requirements include trusts of qualified pension or profit-sharing plans of employers, certain organizations exempt from tax under section 501(c) or (d), and farmers' cooperatives that are exempt from tax under section 521. 4. Treasury Regulation 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(11)-1(a) says that those who are not engaged in a "trade or business" can earn no reportable income on a W-2:

> Title 26: Internal Revenue
> PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE
> Subpart E—Collection of Income Tax at Source

> (a) Remuneration paid in any medium other than cash for services not in the course of the employer's trade or business is excepted from wages and hence is not subject to withholding.
> Cash remuneration includes checks and other monetary media of exchange. Remuneration paid in any medium other than cash, such as lodging, food, or other goods or commodities, for services not in the course of the employer's trade or business does not constitute wages. Remuneration paid in any medium other than cash for other types of services does not come within this exception from wages. For provisions relating to cash remuneration for service not in the course of employer's trade or business, see §31.3401(a)(4)–1.

5. Treasury Regulation 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(6)-1(b) says that remuneration earned outside the statutory "United States" (federal territory) is exempted from wages and not subject to withholding.

> Title 26: Internal Revenue
> PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE
> Subpart E—Collection of Income Tax at Source
> § 31.3401(a)(6)-1 Remuneration for services of nonresident alien individuals.
> (b) Remuneration for services performed outside the United States.
> Remuneration paid to a nonresident alien individual (other than a resident of Puerto Rico) for services performed outside the United States is excepted from wages and hence is not subject to withholding.

How does the IRS trap "nontaxpayers" who are "non-resident non-persons" or "nonresident aliens" who refuse to get identifying numbers or fill out an IRS Form W-4? IRS Publication 515 shows how they do it, which is entitled Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Entities. That publication capitalizes on the confusion of private employers about the meaning of "United States" and "trade or business" by saying the following:

> Income Not Effectively Connected
> This section discusses the specific types of income that are subject to NRA withholding. The income codes contained in this section correspond to the income codes used on Form 1042-S (discussed later), and in most cases on Tables 1 and 2 found at the end of this publication.
> You must withhold tax at the statutory rates shown in Chart C unless a reduced rate of exemption under a tax treaty applies. For U.S. source gross income that is not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business, the rate is usually 30%. Generally, you must withhold the tax at the time you pay the income to the foreign person. See "When to withhold under Withholding Agent, earlier.
> [IRS Publication 515: Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Entities (2002), p. 14]

Three "words of art" are used above that we must pay particular attention to:

1. "U.S. source": Originating from within the "United States" federal corporation or federal territory.
2. "gross income": Payment qualifies as "gross income" within the meaning of 26 U.S.C. §61. The only payment not connected with a "trade or business" that are explicitly identified in the code as "gross income" is Social Security payments, under 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(8).
3. "U.S. trade or business": the functions of a public office in the District of Columbia. "U.S." =federal territory in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d).

So what they are really saying is that if you are a "nonresident alien" not engaged in the "trade or business" franchise who is receiving payments from the U.S. government in the form of Social Security, then these payments are subject to withholding of 30%, but ONLY if the party doing the withholding has explicitly been designated as a "withholding agent" by the Secretary as required under 26 U.S.C. §3501. We also know that private employers are NOT required to act as withholding agents, by the admission of the IRS' own Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.):

> Internal Revenue Manual 5.14.10.2 (09-30-2004)
> Payroll Deduction Agreements
> 2. Private employers, states, and political subdivisions are not required to enter into payroll deduction [withholding] agreements. Taxpayers should determine whether their employers will accept and process executed agreements before agreements are submitted for approval or finalized.
> [SOURCE: http://www.irs.gov/irm/part5/ch13s10.html]

5.6.12.12.4 Government Identifying Numbers: SSN and TIN

Whenever you put a government issued identifying number on any document, you are implicitly establishing that you are engaged in the "trade or business" franchise. This fact is easily discerned by examining the following:

1. 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(b) indicates that in the case of a foreign person, identifying numbers are only required if that person is engaged in a "trade or business" or if they made an election to be a "U.S. person", meaning public officer in the government.

> (ii) A foreign person that has a U.S. office or place of business or a U.S. fiscal or paying agent at any time during the taxable year;
> (iii) A nonresident alien treated as a resident under section 6013(g) or (h);
> (iv) A foreign person that makes a return of tax (including income, estate, and gift tax returns), an amended return, or a refund claim under this title but excluding information returns, statements, or documents;
> (v) A foreign person that makes an election under Sec. 301.7701-3(c);

> (vi) A foreign person that furnishes a withholding certificate described in Sec. 1.1441-1(e)(2) or (3) of this chapter or Sec. 1.1441-5(c)(2)(iv) or (3)(iii) of this chapter to the extent required under Sec. 1.1441-1(e)(4)(vii) of this chapter;
> (vii) A foreign person whose taxpayer identifying number is required to be furnished on any return, statement, or other document as required by the income tax regulations under section 897 or 1445. This paragraph (b)(2)(vii) applies as of November 3, 2003; and
> (viii) A foreign person that furnishes a withholding certificate described in Sec. 1.1446-1(c)(2) or (3) of this chapter or whose taxpayer identification number is required to be furnished on any return, statement, or other document as required by the income tax regulations under section 1446. This paragraph (b)(2)(viii) shall apply to partnership taxable years beginning after May 18, 2005, or such earlier time as the regulations under Sec. Sec. 1.1446-1 through 1.1446-5 of this chapter apply by reason of an election under Sec. 1.1446-7 of this chapter.

1.1. The "U.S. person" they are describing in above is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) and it means a person in the "U.S." defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), which means a government public officer. Everything that public officer makes that originates from the government is "trade or business" earnings. This is also confirmed by 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3), which says that everything originating from the "U.S." described is "trade or business" earnings.

1.2. Notice also that the "foreign person" described above is only required to provide the number if they are engaged in the "trade or business" franchise or if they made an election under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) or (h) to be treated as a resident alien. Such an election would be ILLEGAL for those who are nationals but not aliens, such as those domiciled in a state of the Union. Only foreign nationals can make such an election.

2. IRS Form 1042-S Instructions (2006), p. 14. What all of the circumstances below have in common is that they involve a "benefit" that is usually financial or tangible to the recipient, and therefore require a franchisee license number called a Taxpayer Identification Number:

> Box 14, Recipient's U.S. Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN)
> You must obtain a U.S. taxpayer identification number (TIN) for:

5.6.12.12.5 Domicile, residence, and Resident Tax Returns such as IRS Form 1040

The requirement to pay an income tax originates from the coincidence of one's domicile along with the excise taxable activities they engage in within the place of domicile:

> "domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

The above requirement of domicile is then found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a) and is hidden within the words "citizen" and "resident":

> TITLE 26--INTERNAL REVENUE
> CHAPTER I--INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
> PART 1_INCOME TAXES--Table of Contents
> Sec. 1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.
> (1) Section 1 of the Code imposes an income tax on the income of every individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States and, to the extent provided by section 871(b) or 877(b), on the income of a nonresident alien individual. For optional tax in the case of taxpayers with adjusted gross income of less than $10,000 (less than $5,000 for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1970) see section 3. The tax imposed is upon taxable income (determined by subtracting the allowable deductions from gross income). The tax is determined in accordance with the table contained in section 1. See subparagraph (2) of this paragraph for reference guides to the appropriate table for taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1964, and before January 1, 1965, taxable years beginning after December 31, 1964, and before January 1, 1971, and taxable years beginning after December 31, 1970. In certain cases credits are allowed against the amount of the tax. See part IV (section 31 and following), subchapter A, chapter 1 of the Code. In general, the tax is payable upon the basis of returns rendered by persons liable therefor (subchapter A (sections 6001 and following), chapter 61 of the Code) or at the source of the income by withholding. For the computation of tax in the case of a joint return of a husband and wife, or a return of a surviving spouse, for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1971, see section 2. The computation of tax in such a case for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1970, is determined in accordance with the table contained in section 1(a) as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1969. For other rates of tax on individuals, see section 5(a). For the imposition of an additional tax for the calendar years 1968, 1969, and 1970, see section 51(a).

What "citizens" and "residents" have in common is a legal domicile in the "United States". Collectively, persons with a legal domicile within a jurisdiction are called "inhabitants" and "U.S. persons":

"Non-resident NON-person" if NOT a public officer in the U.S. government

NOTES:

1. "United States" is defined as federal territory within 26 U.S.C. §§7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), 7701(a)(39), and 7408(d), and 4 U.S.C. §110(d). It does not include any portion of a Constitutional state of the Union.
2. The "District of Columbia" is defined as a federal corporation but not a physical place, a "body politic", or a de jure "government" within the District of Columbia Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419, 426, Sec. 34. See:
   Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024; http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm.
3. "nationals" of the United States of America who are domiciled outside of federal jurisdiction, either in a state of the Union or a foreign country, are "nationals" but not "citizens" under federal law. They are by default "non-resident non-persons". They also qualify as "nonresident aliens" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) if and only if they are engaged in a public office. See sections 4.12.3 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 for details.

4. Temporary domicile in the middle column on the right must meet the requirements of the "Presence test" documented in IRS publications.
5. "FEDERAL ZONE"=District of Columbia and territories of the United States in the above table
6. The term "individual" as used on the IRS Form 1040 means an "alien" engaged in a "trade or business". All "taxpayers" are "aliens" engaged in a "trade or business". This is confirmed by 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3), 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2). Statutory "U.S. citizens" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 are not "individuals" unless temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 and subject to an income tax treaty with a foreign country. In that capacity, statutory "U.S. citizens" interface to the I.R.C. as "aliens" rather than "U.S. citizens" through the tax treaty.

The term "United States" is then defined as federal territory in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and nowhere expressly extended to include states of the Union. This is the same "United States" within which EVERYTHING is presumed to be "trade or business" earnings, which implies that what they are really referring to is the "United States" federal corporation or government, and not the geographical United States:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART I > § 864
> §864. Definitions and special rules

> (c) Effectively connected income, etc.
> (3) Other income from sources within United States
> All income, gain, or loss from sources within the United States (other than income, gain, or loss to which paragraph (2) applies) shall be treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

A person who therefore is a "citizen" or "resident" within the I.R.C. and who therefore has a legal domicile in the "United States" is equivalent to either the government or a public officer representing the government. This is established in the memorandum of law below:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a "Public Officer" for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Therefore, whenever you file a "resident" tax form, such as form 1040, then you are indirectly admitting a legal domicile within the "United States" and all of your earnings are therefore presumed to be connected with the "trade or business" franchise pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3).

> [IRS Published Products Catalog,Year 2003, p. F-15;
> http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSDoc7130.pdf]

This is also confirmed by the IRS Form 1040 itself, because everything on the form is subject to "trade or business" deductions under 26 U.S.C. §162. Those not engaged in the "trade or business" franchise cannot lawfully take such deductions. Everything listed in the deduction against which a deduction is taken therefore effectively becomes "private property donated to a public use to procure the benefits of the trade or business franchise". The deductions are the "benefit" or "privilege" of participating in the franchise and act essentially as employment compensation associated with the "public office".

The only way you can avoid participating in the "trade or business" franchise is to file a nonresident tax return, such as IRS Form 1040NR. Of this form, IRS Publication 519 says the following:

> *All income for your period of residence and all income that is effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States for your period of nonresidence, after allowable deductions, is added and taxed at the rates that apply to U.S. citizens and residents. Income that is not connected with a trade or business in the United States for your period of nonresidence is subject to the flat 30% rate or lower treaty rate. You cannot take any deductions against this income.

[IRS Publication 519 (2005), p. 30]

In fact, it is participation in the franchise that effectively makes you a "resident" under the I.R.C. Whether a "person" is a "resident" or "nonresident" has NOTHING to do with the nationality or residence, but with whether it is engaged in a "trade or business":

26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.

A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

The legal mechanism for becoming a "resident" by engaging in a commercial franchise with the government originates from the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2), which makes the person into a "resident" when they consensually engage in "commerce" within the exclusive jurisdiction of the sovereign within its own territory:

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1605
§ 1605. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

(a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case—

(2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States;

Once you engage in commerce within the jurisdiction of the sovereign and consent to the franchise agreement:

1. You are deemed "resident" and "present" within the jurisdiction of the sovereign.

In International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945), the Supreme Court held that a court may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant consistent with due process only if he or she has "certain minimum contacts" with the relevant forum "such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.' " Id. at 316 (quoting Milliken v. Meyer, 311 U.S. 457, 463 (1940)). Unless a defendant's contacts with a forum are so substantial, continuous, and systematic that the defendant can be deemed to be "present" in that forum for all purposes, a forum may exercise only "specific" jurisdiction - that is, jurisdiction based on the relationship between the defendant's forum contacts and the plaintiff's claim.

In this circuit, we analyze specific jurisdiction according to a three-prong test:

(1) The non-resident defendant must purposefully direct his activities or consummate some transaction with the forum or resident thereof*; or perform some act by which he purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, thereby invoking the benefits and protections of its laws;*
(2) the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant's forum-related activities; and
(3) the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice, i.e. it must be reasonable.

Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 F.3d. 797, 802 (9th Cir. 2004) (quoting Lake v. Lake, 817 F.2d. 1416, 1421 (9th Cir. 1987)). The first prong is determinative in this case. We have sometimes referred to it, in shorthand fashion, as the "purposeful availment" prong. Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. Despite its label, this prong includes both purposeful availment and purposeful direction. It may be satisfied by purposeful availment of the privilege of doing business in the forum; by purposeful direction of activities at the forum; or by some combination thereof.

(A) jurisdiction of courts, or
(B) enforcement of summons.

5.6.12.12.6 "Electing" (consenting) to treat your earnings as "effectively connected with a trade or business"[252]

"Effectively connected income" means PRIVATE earnings DONATED to Uncle Sam. Your homework is to write this 1000 times until you get it:

The phrase "effectively connected to a trade or business within the United States" means no ACTUAL office is required to exist. It is a product of CONSENT, not your status.

"trade or business" is defined and "United States" is defined. The phrase "connected to a trade or business" is not defined, but is self-explanatory. Adding the word "effectively" obviously would not be necessary where there is an ACTUAL connection to a trade or business. Keep in mind, the custom rule for construing a definition that uses the word "includes" allows the meaning of "trade or business" to be expanded beyond the literal performance of the functions of a public office, and embraces anything in the same general class. The word "effectively" seems to be added just to make it even more clear that no ACTUAL performance of the functions of a public office is required.

"effectively connected" is used ONLY in relation to "nonresident aliens". The term is not used with "United States persons", because United States person itself IS a "trade or business". It still need not involve the performance of the functions of a LITERAL public office, though, if you CONSENT to CALL IT "effectively connected".

The person who EARNED it is the ONLY one who can make it "effectively connected". That requirement would be necessary if it was voluntary. Consent is given through express or tacit consent. Therefore, "effectively connected" is just a fancy synonym for "donated to uncle".

In one of the nonresident alien provisions, it actually says "effectively connected to a trade or business" BY THE RECIPIENT

26 C.F.R. §1.872-1 Gross income of nonresident alien individuals.

(a) In general -

(1) Inclusions. The gross income of a nonresident alien individual for any taxable year includes only

(i) the gross income which is derived from sources within the United States and which is not effectively connected for the taxable year with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by that individual and

(ii) the gross income, irrespective of whether such income is derived from sources within or without the United States, which is effectively connected for the taxable year with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by that individual.

They say "by that individual" TWICE in that provision. There is NO NEED for the words "by that individual" to be there except to make it clear WHO has the power to make the gross income "effectively connected".

Note also that it says The gross income of a nonresident alien individual includes only:

> (i) the "gross income" which is derived from..." and
> (ii) the "gross income"...which is effectively connected to...

Why the use of the words "gross income" in the definition and not just the word "income"? We are after all defining what is "gross income" for nonresident aliens. Our guess is: they use the words "gross income" to make it abundantly clear that the Code does NOT purport to tax a nonresident alien on "everything that came in".

Contrast this with how "gross income" is defined a 26 U.S.C. §61 for anyone NOT a nonresident alien i.e. a United States person: the word "income" is used in that definition (not "gross income"). the regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.61-2 indicate that "wages and salary...are income TO THE RECIPIENTS unless excluded by law (by the recipients). The individual is the one with the power to make an item EFFECTIVELY connected "gross income". By the same token, the recipient of a wage or salary is the one who does the EXCLUDING of that wage or salary from his income and thus from his "gross income" as an item must FIRST be income in order to qualify as "gross income". Such exclusion must be BY LAW. The recipient cannot exclude an item from income contrary to law.

Back to 26 U.S.C. §61, which lists "compensation for services" as an item of "gross income". "Compensation for services" is a statutory term created by Congress in the 1923 Classification Act and refers to GOVERNMENT service.

Some of you might ask:

> So on the 1040NR, the U.S. business section, even for THAT, you don't have to put all the things listed there in that section? You can stick it in the NEC section if you don't consent?

This is true. The NEC section is for items not connected to a trade or business but which nonetheless are included in your "gross income" under 26 U.S.C. §871(a) and 26 U.S.C. §872. It is a placeholder for everything originating from the STATUTORY GEOGRAPHICAL "United States" (DC and Territories) that you decide NOT to "Elect" to be treated as "effectively connected".

Those who do not ELECT to treat earnings as "effectively connected" in the NEC section of form 1040NR are penalized for doing so because they are not able to take 26 U.S.C. §162 "trade or business" deductions on the amounts listed there.

The big mistake most state nationals would make if they had to fill out a CORRECT 1040NR Form instead of the INCORRECT 1040 Form is to put all their earnings NOT from the U.S. government and NOT from the geographical "United States" ANYPLACE on the return. It doesn't belong there and is exclusively private, not reportable, not "gross income". Once they make the mistake of putting private unreportable earnings from within a constitutional state (a "foreign state" in relation to the national government) in there, now they have to figure out how to reduce their taxable income, which then coerces them to elect to treat it as "effectively connected" so they can claim deductions to reduce taxable net income.

The W-8BEN Form makes it clear that a W-4 Form is predicated on the payee receiving "compensation for services in the United States" which is the actual meaning of "compensation for services" at 26 U.S.C. §61.

Part I Identification of Beneficial Owner (see instructions)

Performing STATUTORY "personal services" in the United States (federal corporation) as a STATUTORY federal "employee" is deemed a "trade or business". The statute below proves this:

> *(a) In general. As used in part I (section 861 and following) and part II (section 871 and following), subchapter N, chapter 1 of the Code, and chapter 3 (section 1441 and following) of the Code, and the regulations thereunder, the term "engaged in trade or business within the United States" does not include the activities described in paragraphs (c) and (d) of this section, but includes the performance of personal services within the United States [federal corporation, not geography] at any time within the taxable year except to the extent otherwise provided in this section.

Note the phrase: "includes the performance of personal services within the United States at any time within the taxable year". The term "engaged in trade or business within the United States"....includes the performance of personal services within the United States federal corporation at any time within the taxable year.

> 26 C.F.R. §1.864-2 Trade or business within the United States.
> (b) Performance of personal services for foreign employer -
> (1) Excepted services.
> *For purposes of paragraph (a) of this section, the term "engaged in trade or business within the United States" does not include the performance of personal services -
> (ii) For an office or place of business maintained in a foreign country or in a possession of the United States by an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States or by a domestic partnership or a domestic corporation, by a nonresident alien individual who is temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year and whose compensation for such services does not exceed in the aggregate gross amount of $3,000.

Everything a statutory citizen fiction does, apparently, is "personal services" because it's a franchise office or privilege. The United States is your employer you are performing services "within" the legal but not geographical United States as a federal corporation. The position of "taxpayer" or "person", in that case, is an office within the corporation. Technically, the OFFICE is performing the services and you are volunteering to animate it by calling what you earn "effectively connected".

Everything a statutory citizen or even statutory resident (alien) fictions do, apparently, are "personal services" because they are fictions of law created by Congress and therefore function as franchise offices. More precisely, an individual "United States person" ("citizen or resident alien") has effectively elected to have ALL wages and salary TREATED as though it is "income" under 26 C.F.R. §1.61-2. By "electing" the STATUS of STATUTORY "U.S. person" they elected to treat ALL their earnings as "connected to a trade or business". The STATUTORY "U.S. person" status is the "trade or business" and all otherwise PRIVATE earnings are therefore treated as STATUTORY "wages" and "salaries" and "income from a trade or business" and thus included by law in "gross income" for such a party.

On the other hand, when a "nonresident alien" converts his private earnings from PRIVATE to PUBLIC by "electing" to treat it as "effectively connected", that election is made on individual sources of income one at a time, and each item so elected becomes "effectively connected". By "private" we mean constitutionally protected and NONSTATUTORY wages or earnings.

Therefore, one's PRIVATE earnings are converted from PRIVATE to PUBLIC by one of TWO ways:

1. As a "nonresident alien" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B): By calling it "effectively connected" on a tax return. This would be state nationals and foreign nationals.
2. As a "U.S. person" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30): By ELECTING to be treated AS IF you are a STATUTORY citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or a STATUTORY "resident alien" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) even though you are NEITHER if you are domiciled within and physically present within a constitutional state or a state national.

Whatever the above method of conversion, the "election" transmutes or converts NON-INCOME to statutory "income" under 26 C.F.R. §1.61-2 to make it "reportable" under 26 U.S.C. §6041. If you didn't elect to convert it from PRIVATE to PUBLIC and thereby make it "reportable" and "trade or business", it remains PRIVATE and not "income" within the meaning of the 16th Amendment.

The conversion therefore has to occur at some point with consent, whether tacit in the case of electing (falsely claiming, in most cases under penalty of perjury no less) to be a "U.S. person" or directly by calling it "effectively connected" as a "nonresident alien". Thus, one way or another, to earn "gross income" as a private human, you MUST consent in some form to call the earnings "gross income" and "trade or business" earnings BEFORE it becomes taxable or reportable. This is compatible with the main purpose of government itself is to ensure that conversion is always CONSENSUAL.

In that context, "United States" is the corporation, and the OFFICE is WITHIN that corporation. More simply, the act of performing services within the United States (the corporate body) even if you are nonresident alien = engaged in a trade or business. The "compensation for services" one would receive from that is "gross income" per 26 U.S.C. §61.

The NONCONSENTING NRA status connected to a REAL office/trade or business is the only real liable party. Otherwise, its private and nonreportable. But connecting to an ACTUAL federal public office = consent to the terms and conditions.

5.6.12.13 Government propaganda and deception about the scam

5.6.12.13.1 Wilful government deception in connection with a "trade or business"

It's pretty obvious that your public servants don't want you to know about this "trade or business" scam, because then the gravy train of plunder and their welfare check would have to stop and they would have to get a REAL job. What steps have they taken to obfuscate the truth about this very important issue? Here is a brief summary of their dishonest techniques:

1. They made it "appear" in 26 U.S.C. §871(a) that income not connected with a "trade or business" from within the "United States" was subject to mandatory 30% tax. However:
   1.1. 26 C.F.R. §1.871-7(d)(2)(ii) says that the nonresident alien must be present in the United States for 183 days out of the year or more in order to be subject to the taxes on sale or exchange of capital assets, in which case he isn't a nonresident alien anymore by the "presence test". Quite a scam, huh?
   1.2. 26 C.F.R. §1.871-7(b)(1) says that the following types of income from within the District of Columbia are taxable to "nonresident alien individuals" not engaged in a "trade or business": "interest, dividends, rents, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, and emoluments, but other items of fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, or income are also subject to the tax, as, for instance, royalties, including royalties for the use of patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, and other like property". The Classification Act of 1923, 42 Stat. 1988, then defines all these types of income as being from the federal government only. See our article on this fraud: The Classification Act of 1923, section 6.5.16 later.
2. They never explicitly state the simple truth anywhere in any IRS publication that we could find that if you aren't involved in a "trade or business" within the "United States" as a "person" who has a domicile there (such as a statutory "U.S. citizen" or "resident alien"), then you don't earn "gross income" and are a "nontaxpayer" not subject to the I.R.C. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31), 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) are the only places that make this fact very clear, but it isn't simply and explicitly explained anywhere else in the code or regulations, and these sections are something that could easily be overlooked by the average American.

3. They did not directly state the excise taxable activities subject to tax in a single, simple list anywhere within the Internal Revenue Code. Instead, they left that statement to be made by the Secretary of the Treasury, which he did in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1). This section of regulations is one that few people read or refer to, and therefore they have kept the truth out of plain view of most tax professionals.
4. Those who have read and understand 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1) and who raise it in litigation have been persecuted and slandered by the IRS and corrupted federal judges and falsely called "frivolous" without justifying why it is frivolous. However, they are the frivolous ones because no federal judge that we know of has ever or would ever deal in their ruling directly with the issue of the "excise taxable activities" identified in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1) because they would have to admit that:
   - 4.1. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is an indirect excise tax.
   - 4.2. People and property within states of the Union are not the proper subject of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A.
   - 4.3. The only "taxable activities" under the I.R.C. are either public offices in the United States government or "foreign commerce" of federally registered corporations.
   - 4.4. Natural persons can only be involved in a "taxable activity" if they hold a public office in the United States government or a federal territory or possession, or are acting in the capacity as an officer of a federally chartered corporation that is involved in foreign commerce licensed under 26 U.S.C. §7001. Remember: The way an activity becomes excise taxable is the issuance of a "license". Requesting a "license" or accepting a government "privilege" is the essence of how a person volunteers to pay an excise tax.

Now, let's look at some of the devious ways that the IRS creates false presumptions to deceive people domiciled in the states of the Union into admitting under penalty of perjury on the wrong tax return, the 1040, that they are involved in a "trade or business" and that they are subject to exclusive federal jurisdiction, even though we know that neither is true. We refer you to IRS Publication 519 (2000) version, which says starting on p. 17:

> The 30% Tax
> Tax at a 30% (or lower treaty) rate applies to certain items of income or gains from U.S. sources but only if the items are not effectively connected with your U.S. trade or business.
> Fixed or Determinable Income
> The 30% (or lower treaty) rate applies to the gross amount of U.S. source fixed or determinable annual or periodic gains, profits, or income
> [. . .]
> Social Security Benefits
> A nonresident alien must include 85% of any U.S. social security benefit (and the social security equivalent part of a tier 1 railroad retirement benefit) in U.S. source fixed or determinable annual or periodic income. This income is exempt under some tax treaties. See Table 1 in Publication 901, U.S. Tax Treaties, for a list of tax treaties that exempt U.S. social security benefits from U.S. tax.
> [IRS Publication 519: U.S. Tax Guide for Aliens (2000), p. 17]

Well, first of all, the above statement is misleading, because they never defined the word "income" and the Supreme Court said in Eisner v. Macomber that the Congress can't define it and that ONLY the Constitution can define it, so they can't write any law authorizing the IRS to define it either! So what "income" are they talking about here? The only thing the Supreme Court has ever defined "income" to mean was profit from a corporation involved in foreign commerce, as we pointed out earlier in section 5.6.5. Why didn't they mention this? Because they don't want you to know!

Secondly, the only thing that it can be talking about is earnings not connected with a "trade or business" described in 26 U.S.C. §871(a), which is the only place the 30% tax rate appears. Those earnings can only relate to payments originating from "sources within the United States*" earned by "nonresident alien individuals", because that is what 26 U.S.C. §871 says. What are the items of income" that is subject to this 30% tax? These "items of income" are listed in 26 U.S.C. §§862(a) and 863(a). Most of these "items of income" are then elsewhere excluded, as we showed earlier in this section. We showed, for instance that:

1. Those who are "non-resident non-persons" and not "nonresident aliens" or "nonresident alien individuals" are nowhere mentioned as having any liability at all. This includes those domiciled in states of the Union who are not "aliens" and therefore not "individuals". The liability to file a tax return described in 26 C.F.R. §1.6012-1(b) only applies to "nonresident alien individuals", not "non-resident non-persons". For further details, see the following:

   Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31)(A) says that earnings not connected with a "trade or business" and not originating from the "United States" are a "foreign estate" not includible in "gross income". 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) defines this "United States" to mean the District of Columbia or federal statutory "State" (4 U.S.C. §110(d)) but not a state of the Union. Such an estate, including the earnings of people who are part of such an estate, would be "not subject" to the tax but at the same time not "exempt".

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > § 7701
> (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—
> (31) Foreign estate or trust
> (A) Foreign estate
> The term "foreign estate" means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.

3. 26 U.S.C. §864(b)(1)(A) excludes earnings of "nonresident alien individuals" who are working for nonresident aliens, even though 26 U.S.C. §862(a)(3) would appear to create the false impression that such earnings are includible in "gross income".
4. Self-employment income is not counted as "gross income" under 26 U.S.C. §1402 if it does not involve a "trade or business".
5. Under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv), only income "effectively connected with a trade or business" is includible in gross income for biological people.

So what is left after one excludes the earnings indicated in the above requirements because the party being taxed is a "national" and a "non-resident non-person" who is not a "nonresident alien", "nonresident alien individual", or an alien and all of whose earnings are not "effectively connected with a trade or business" and originate outside the statutory "United States" (federal territory)? CORPORATE PROFIT OF A FEDERAL AND NOT STATE CORPORATION INVOLVED IN FOREIGN COMMERCE! That's what we already showed the Supreme Court said constituted "income" within the meaning of the Sixteenth Amendment:

> "Income [corporate profit from foreign commerce, in the context of taxes upon states of the Union] has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (36 Stat. 112) in the 16th Amendment, and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed."
> [Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170 174, (1926)]

> *"The grant of the power to lay and collect taxes [on foreign commerce within the states ONLY] is, like the power to regulate commerce, made in general terms, and has never been understood to interfere with the exercise of the same power by the State; and hence has been drawn an argument which has been applied to the question under consideration. But the two grants are not, it is conceived, similar in their terms or their nature. Although many of the powers formerly [22 U.S. 1, 199] exercised by the States, are transferred to the government of the Union, yet the State governments remain, and constitute a most important part of our system. The power of taxation is indispensable to their existence, and is a power which, in its own nature, is capable of residing in, and being exercised by, different authorities at the same time. We are accustomed to see it placed, for different purposes, in different hands. Taxation is the simple operation of taking small portions from a perpetually accumulating mass, susceptible of almost infinite division; and a power in one to take what is necessary for certain purposes, is not, in its nature, incompatible with a power in another to take what is necessary for other purposes. Congress is authorized to lay and collect taxes [on foreign commerce ONLY within the states], and to pay the debts, and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States. This does not interfere with the power of the States to tax [internally] for the support of their own governments; nor is the exercise of that power by the States [to tax INTERNALLY], an exercise of any portion of the power that is granted to the United States [to tax EXTERNALLY]. In imposing taxes for State purposes, they are not > doing what Congress is empowered to do. Congress is not empowered to tax for those purposes which are within the exclusive province of the States. When, then, each government exercises the power of taxation, neither is exercising the power of the other.

> But, when a State proceeds to regulate commerce with foreign nations, or among the several States, it is exercising the very power that is granted to Congress, [22 U.S. 1, 200] and is doing the very thing which Congress is authorized to do. There is no analogy, then, between the power of taxation and the power of regulating commerce. "
> [Gibbons v. Ogden, 22 U.S. 1 (1824)]

26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1) lists all these taxable activities involving foreign commerce, and they all come under treaties or are connected with what is called a Domestic International Sales Corporation (DISC) or a Foreign Sales Corporation (FSC): These weasels are slippery, aren't they? What they are trying to do is make an exclusively municipal excise tax that only applies to federal territory "look" like it applies to everyone in the country by encrypting and hiding the truth using "words of art". They contradict themselves in their own publication, because elsewhere, they admit that those who have income from outside the statutory but not constitutional "United States" (federal territory) that is not connected with "trade or business" don't earn "gross income":

> Income Subject to Tax
> Income from sources outside the United States that is not effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States is not taxable if you receive it while you are a nonresident alien. The income is not taxable even if you earned it while you were a resident alien or if you became a resident alien or a U.S. citizen after receiving it and before the end of the year.
> http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSPub519.pdf]

The above claim within IRS Publication 519 originates from 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31), which we cited at the beginning of this article. What they are saying is that only earnings from within the statutory "United States" (federal territory) and which are not connected with a "trade or business" are subject to the 30% tax rate, and that the income must be earned by "nonresident alien individuals" who are aliens and not "nationals", because citizens can't be taxed at home and aliens and nonresident aliens are excluded. The only thing left is foreign "persons", such as foreign corporations. If they simply commute daily to work there, they are "nonresident aliens" and therefore don't earn "gross income". Anything not connected with a "trade or business" that is earned outside of the statutory "United States" (federal territory) is therefore not includible as "gross income" at all. Anything earned inside the statutory "United States" (federal territory) in connection with a public office is includible in "gross income" at the graduated, instead of 30% rate. Even then, one must consent voluntarily to be a "taxpayer" because there is no statute making anyone liable in either the D.C. Code or the I.R.C. That process is done by submitting a form and assessing oneself with a liability even though there is none. Once they "volunteer" by filling out and submitting the WRONG form, the 1040 form, and become "subject to" the I.R.C., they become virtual inhabitants of the District of Columbia under the provisions of 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d):

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
> (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—
> (39) Persons residing outside [the federal] United States
> If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing in the District of Columbia for purposes of any provision of this title relating to -
> (A) jurisdiction of courts, or
> ---
> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 76 > Subchapter A > § 7408
> (d) Citizens and residents outside the United States If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in, and does not have his principal place of business in, any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated for purposes of this section as residing in the District of Columbia.

If they REALLY had jurisdiction in a state of the Union to tax, do you think they would need provisions like those above? Note also that what statutory "citizens and residents" have in common is a legal "domicile" in the statutory but not constitutional "United States" (federal territory) pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(3) . When a human domiciled in a state of the Union who is rightfully a "non-resident non-person" fills out and sends in a 1040 form, rather than the correct 1040NR form, they are assumed to be a "citizen or resident of the United States" and an "individual", meaning a "resident alien" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). The "United States" in the context of I.R.C., Subtitle A means federal territory that is not part of the exclusive jurisdiction of any constitutional state of the Union. It is redefined in other titles to include the 50 states, but in Subtitle A, it's definition is limited to that found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d). Therefore, they are claiming that they are domiciled on federal territory within the statutory but not constitutional "United States". Did you know that by submitting an IRS Form 1040, you were making a "voluntary election" to be treated as a domiciliary of the federal zone? They didn't tell you THAT in the IRS publications, now did they? Why not? Because they want to manufacture your legal ignorance in the public schools and then use their incomplete and deceptive publications to "harvest" the fruits of your ignorance. The Soviets called these people "Useful Idiots". A fool and his money are soon parted. The public schools are the fool factory and the 1040 is the indenture that makes you into their willing, voluntary indentured slave. Below is what the IRS Published Products Catalog (2003) says about the purpose of the form 1040:

> 1040A 11327A Each
> U.S. Individual Income Tax Return
> Annual income tax return filed by citizens and residents of the United States*. There are separate instructions available for this item. The catalog number for the instructions is 12088U.*

Under I.R.C. §7701(a)(39) above, they then become the equivalent of "virtual inhabitants" of the District of Columbia. If we then look in the District of Columbia Code, we find that there isn't a liability statute in that code either so the IRS still requires our consent to call us a "taxpayer" no matter which way you look at it. This is covered in much more detail in the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, Chapter 3, section 3.5.3 if you want to investigate further. We also know that kidnapping is highly illegal under 18 U.S.C. §1201, and that making us into a "virtual inhabitant" of anything is the equivalent of kidnapping if done without our consent. Therefore, indirectly we must conclude that anyone who does not have a domicile on federal territory in the statutory but not constitutional "United States" must volunteer or consent to be a "taxpayer" before their "res" or legal identity can be transported to the federal zone. That process of volunteering is done using the IRS Form 1040 and is done under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) for those who file as "nonresident aliens".

It gets worse, folks. Let's look at some of the deceit in IRS Publication 519 that tries to convince people falsely that they are involved in a "trade or business", or tricks them into admitting they are in the process of pursuing the "privilege" of having additional deductions. Below is what they say about how you can increase your deductions by claiming you are engaged in a "trade or business", from p. 23 of the Year 2000 edition of IRS Publication 519:

> Itemized Deductions
> Nonresident aliens can claim some of the same itemized deductions that resident aliens can claim. However, nonresident aliens can claim itemized deductions only if they have income effectively connected with their U.S. trade or business.
> You can deduct certain itemized deductions if you receive income effectively connected with your U.S. trade or business. These deductions include state and local income taxes, charitable contributions to U.S. organizations, casualty and theft losses, and miscellaneous deductions. Use Schedule A of Form 1040NR to claim itemized deductions.
> If you are filing Form 1040NR–EZ, you can only claim a deduction for state or local income taxes. If you are claiming any other deduction, you must file Form 1040NR.
> [IRS Publication 519 (2000), p. 23]

Why do they do the above? Well, those who know they have no effectively connected income and therefore have a zero tax liability don't need deductions because they don't owe anything! The only reason to pursue a deduction is because one has "gross income", and few Americans we have ever met domiciled in the states even have "gross income".

Later on, in this same IRS Publication 519, we see that the IRS tries to create a false "presumption" in their favor by trying to convince people they are usually involved in a "trade or business". Notice that they never explicitly define what it means from the I.R.C, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office". As a matter of fact, if they DID explain this definition in their publication, boy would they ever have a LOT of explaining to do on their phone support line, so they conveniently leave it out. They don't mention its real definition because that would render everything listed below as basically irrelevant and moot. The reader would simply throw Pub 519 in the trash at that point and conclude he is a "nontaxpayer", so they instead tip toe around the definition and give examples without relating them to the legal definition in the I.R.C. Below is the IRS Publication 519 (2000) definition of "trade or Business in the United States" from pp. 15-16:

> Trade or Business in the United States
> Generally, you must be engaged in a trade or business during the tax year to be able to treat income received in that year as effectively connected with that trade or business. Whether you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States depends on the nature of your activities. The discussions that follow will help you determine whether you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States.
> Personal Services
> If you perform personal services in the United States [federal territory] at any time during the tax year, you usually are considered engaged in a trade or business in the United States.
> TIP: Certain compensation paid to a nonresident alien by a foreign employer is not included in gross income. For more information, see Services Performed for Foreign Employer in chapter 3.*
> Other Trade or Business Activities
> Other examples of being engaged in a trade or business in the United States follow.
> Students and trainees. You are considered engaged in a trade or business in the United States if you are temporarily present in the United States as a nonimmigrant under a "F," "J," "M," or "Q" visa. A nonresident alien temporarily present in the United States under a "J" visa includes a nonresident alien individual admitted to the United States as an exchange visitor under the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961. The taxable part of any scholarship or fellowship grant that is U.S. source income is treated as effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States.*
> Business operations. If you own and operate a business in the United States selling services, products, or merchandise, you are, with certain exceptions [not mentioned], engaged in a trade or business in the United States.*
> Partnerships. If you are a member of a partnership that at any time during the tax year is engaged in a trade or business in the United States, you are considered to be engaged in a trade or business in the United States.
> Beneficiary of an estate or trust. If you are the beneficiary of an estate or trust that is engaged in a trade or business in the United States, you are treated as being engaged in the same trade or business.*
> Trading in stocks, securities, and commodities.
> If your only U.S. business activity is trading in stocks, securities, or commodities (including hedging transactions) through a U.S. resident [alien] broker or other agent, you are not engaged in a trade or business in the United States.
> For transactions in stocks or securities, this applies to any nonresident alien, including a dealer or broker in stocks and securities.
> For transactions in commodities, this applies to commodities that are usually traded on an organized commodity exchange and to transactions that are usually carried out at such an exchange.
> U.S. office or other fixed place of business at any time during the tax year through which, or by the direction of which, you carry out your transactions in stocks, securities, or commodities.

> Trading for a nonresident alien's own account. You are not engaged in a trade or business in the United States if trading for your own account in stocks, securities, or commodities is your only U.S. business activity.
> This applies even if the trading takes place while you are present in the United States or is done by your employee or your broker or other agent.
> This does not apply to trading for your own account if you are a dealer in stocks, securities, or commodities. This does not necessarily mean, however, that as a dealer you are considered to be engaged in a trade or business in the United States. Determine that based on the facts and circumstances in each case or under the rules given above in Trading in stocks, securities, and commodities.
> Effectively Connected Income
> If you are engaged in a U.S. trade or business, all income, gain, or loss for the tax year that you get from sources within the United
> States (other than certain investment income) is treated as effectively connected income. This applies whether or not there is any connection between the income and the trade or business being carried on in the United States during the tax year.
> Two tests, described under Investment Income , determine whether certain items of investment income (such as interest, dividends, and royalties) are treated as effectively connected with that business.
> In limited circumstances, some kinds of foreign source income may be treated as effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States. For a discussion of these rules, see Foreign Income, later.
> [IRS Publication 519 (2000), pp. 15-16]

The first thing you notice is the statement: "Whether you are engaged in a trade or business in the United States depends on the nature of your activities". That statement is a tacit admission that the income tax is in fact an indirect excise tax on activities. They also said:

> "If you perform personal services in the United States [federal territory] at any time during the tax year, you usually are considered engaged in a trade or business in the United States."

Well, let's look at the definition of "personal services" used above to see what these weasels are up to:

> 26 C.F.R. Sec. 1.469-9 Rules for certain rental real estate activities.
> (b)(4) PERSONAL SERVICES.
> Personal services means any work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business. However, personal services do not include any work performed by an individual in the individual's capacity as an investor as described in section 1.469-5T(f)(2)(ii).

Notice that they used the word "means" instead of "includes" in the above definition and DID NOT confine the definition by stating "for the purposes of this section" or "for the purposes of this chapter". Instead, they provided an unambiguous universal definition of "personal services" which applies throughout the ENTIRE Internal Revenue Code and they indicated effectively that you aren't performing "personal services" UNLESS you are engaged in a "trade or business". So what they are doing when they say "If you perform personal services in the United States [federal territory] at any time during the tax year, you usually are considered engaged in a trade or business in the United States." is effectively making a circular statement that confirms itself. This is called a "tautology", which is a word that is defined using itself. It's only purpose is self-serving deception. Can you see how insidious this deception and double-speak is? It's all designed to take attention away from the nature of the taxed activity so that people will think the tax is on the money instead of the activity, isn't it? If they admitted that the income tax was an indirect excise tax on activities, they would dig a DEEP hole for themselves that would start an avalanche of people leaving the tax rolls. That is why they never come out and say EXACTLY what a "trade or business" is or how their explanation relates to the definition of a "trade or business" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), , which describes it as a "public office". Since when do people holding "public office" have time to do any of the above things in addition to fulfilling their office? Furthermore, under federal law, it is a conflict of interest to maintain any private business activities outside the workplace that might jeopardize one's objectivity. But then later on p. 26 of the same publication, under "Dual Status Tax Year", they finally admit the truth:

> Income Subject to Tax

> Income from sources outside the United States [federal territory] that is not effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States is not taxable if you receive it while you are a nonresident alien. The income is not taxable even if you earned it while you were a resident alien or if you became a resident alien or a U.S. citizen after receiving it and before the end of the year.
> [IRS Publication 519 (2000), p. 26]

An excellent way to confirm the conclusions of this section is to read the publications of the Joint Committee on Taxation. We would like to quote from JCT document 85-199 entitled "Explanation of Proposed Income Tax Treaty Between The United States and the United Kingdom". You can get this publication at:

http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/JointComteeOnTax/85199-US-GB-TreatyExplan.pdf

Now the excerpt, from pp. 4-5 is VERY revealing. We boldface and underline the important portions to bring attention to them. We have also added bracketed material to amplify exactly what they mean based on discussion earlier in this chapter and based on the definitions of terms found in the Internal Revenue Code:

> A. U.S. Tax Rules
> The United States taxes U.S. citizens [people born anywhere in the country but domiciled on federal territory in the District of Columbia or territories but excluding those domiciled in constitutional states of the Union], residents [who are all "aliens"], and corporations [registered ONLY in the District of Columbia and EXCLUDING state-only corporations] on their worldwide income [connected with a "trade or business"], whether derived in the United States [federal territory] or abroad [outside the states of the Union]. The United States generally taxes nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations on all their income that is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States (sometimes referred to as "effectively connected income"). The United States also taxes nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations on certain U.S.-source income that is not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business.
> Income of a nonresident alien individual or foreign corporation that is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States generally is subject to U.S. tax in the same manner and at the same rates as income of a U.S. person. Deductions are allowed to the extent that they are related to effectively connected income. A foreign corporation also is subject to a flat 30– percent branch profits tax on its "dividend equivalent amount," which is a measure of the effectively connected earnings and profits of the corporation that are removed in any year from the conduct of its U.S. trade or business. In addition, a foreign corporation is subject to a flat 30–percent branch-level excess interest tax on the excess of the amount of interest that is deducted by the foreign corporation in computing its effectively connected income over the amount of interest that is paid by its U.S. trade or business. U.S.-source fixed or determinable annual or periodical income of a nonresident alien individual or foreign corporation (including, for example, interest, dividends, rents, royalties, salaries, and annuities) that is not effectively connected with the conduct of a U.S. trade or business is subject to U.S. tax at a rate of 30 percent of the gross amount paid. Certain insurance premiums earned by a nonresident alien individual or foreign corporation are subject to U.S. tax at a rate of 1 or 4 percent of the premiums. These taxes generally are collected by means of withholding.
> Specific statutory exemptions from the 30–percent withholding tax are provided. For example, certain original issue discount and certain interest on deposits with banks or savings institutions are exempt from the 30–percent withholding tax. An exemption also is provided for certain interest paid on portfolio debt obligations. In addition, income of a foreign government or international organization from investments in U.S. securities is exempt from U.S. tax.
> U.S.-source capital gains of a nonresident alien individual or a foreign corporation that are not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business generally are exempt from U.S. tax, with two exceptions: (1) gains realized by a nonresident alien individual who is present in the United States [federal territory] for at least 183 days during the taxable year, and (2) certain gains from the disposition of interests in U.S. real property.
> Rules are provided for the determination of the source of income. For example, interest and dividends paid by a U.S. citizen or resident or by a U.S. corporation generally are considered U.S.-source income. Conversely, dividends and interest paid by a foreign corporation generally are treated as foreign-source income. Special rules apply to treat as foreign-source income (in whole or in part) interest paid by certain U.S. corporations with foreign businesses and to treat as U.S.-source income (in whole or in part) dividends paid by certain foreign corporations with U.S. businesses. Rents and royalties paid for the use of property in the United States are considered U.S.-source income.

They basically admitted everything we just got through saying throughout the preceding discussion, folks! They are very cleverly hiding the taxable activity by referring to it as a "trade or business", which is a "word of art", and not defining which "U.S." they are talking about or the fact that it only includes the District of Columbia. They also admitted the circumstances under which the 30% tax in 26 U.S.C. §871(a) applies. Recall that this section identified a 30% tax on nonresident alien income from sources inside the District of Columbia which is not connected with a "trade or business"/public office. Well, they just explained that the tax is only paid by foreign corporations as an indirect tax upon income derived from a "trade or business". Therefore, ALL income that is taxable under the I.R.C., Subtitle A derives exclusively from a "trade or business" and a "public office" in one way or another.

The first sentence of the above also tries to deceive the reader by saying that "U.S. citizens", "residents", and "corporations" are taxed on their "worldwide income" WITHOUT mentioning the requirement for being engaged in a "trade or business". We know based on our earlier analysis, however, that under I.R.C., Subtitle A, all natural persons who are "taxpayers" under the code, whether married, unmarried, heads of Household, etc. MUST be engaged in a "trade or business" in order to earn "taxable income". The taxable activity for international corporations is "foreign commerce" rather than the "trade or business" under other subtitles of the code, and the above tries to lump all of them together and thereby create an absolutely false presumption in the mind of the reader. Therefore, such a claim can ONLY apply to artificial entities engaged in foreign commerce under Subtitle D of the I.R.C. The only thing we didn't cover earlier was the difference in treatment between corporations and natural persons. In that scenario, under I.R.C., Subtitle D, these corporations are taxed on their worldwide income that derives from imports, which counts as "foreign commerce" under the constitution. These conclusions are supported by the Supreme Court, which said:

> "The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra."
> [Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, 298 U.S. 513, 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]

> "Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.
> But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."

5.6.12.13.2 Proving the government deception yourself

Another way to confirm the conclusions of this section is to look at older versions of the U.S. Code or Statutes at Large that show the definition of "gross income". Politicians of old were much more honest and direct than the weasels and thieves and traitors we have in office today, so their laws told the truth plainly. It wasn't until the socialists began to take over starting in 1913 and peaking with Franklin Roosevelt in 1930's that the I.R.C. really started to show signs of willful deceit. Below are two very old definitions of "gross income" that show the truth plainly to prove our point. These versions did not use the "trade or business" trick so they had to state the truth plainly:

- 26 U.S.C. §954 (1928 code):
  http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Authorities/FedLaw/26USCA954-1928-GrossIncome.pdf
- 26 U.S.C. §22 (1935 code):
  http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Authorities/FedLaw/26USCA22-1935-GrossIncome.pdf

You can also look at our resource on "gross income", which includes the above, at:

5.6.12.13.3 False IRS presumptions that must be rebutted

How can we know if the IRS "thinks" or "presumes" we are involved in a "trade or business"? Here is how within the context of I.R.C., Subtitle A:

1. Only people who are engaged in a "trade or business" are subject to the graduated rate of tax of tax. See 26 U.S.C. §871(b).
2. All income from within federal territory, which is the "United States" under the I.R.C. section 7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.S. §110(d), must be treated as "effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States", according to 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3). That's right: it is a "privilege" under 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3) to simply "live" and earn "income" on federal territory. Here is what it says:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART I > § 864
> §864. Definitions and special rules
> (c) Effectively connected income, etc.
> (3) Other income from sources within United States
> All income, gain, or loss from sources within the United States (other than income, gain, or loss to which paragraph (2) applies) shall be treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

3. Only people who are engaged in a "trade or business" can claim deductions on their "return". Otherwise, they can't. See 26 U.S.C. §162 for proof.
4. Only people who are engaged in a "trade or business" can owe a tax and therefore be the target of a Substitute For Return (SFR), which is an assessment that in most cases is illegally executed by the IRS.
5. Only "Citizens" or "residents" who file a 1040 and put a nonzero amount for income can be connected to a "trade or business within the United States" .
6. Only "Nonresident aliens" who file a 1040NR form and put a nonzero amount for "trade or business" income can be connected to a "trade or business within the United States".
7. Only people who complete, voluntarily sign, and submit a W-4 and thereby identify themselves as federal "employees" can be connected to a "trade or business". 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1 identifies all federal "employees" as "public officers". All "public officers" are by definition engaged in a "trade or business".
8. Those who receive Social Security Benefits. 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(8) says that Social Security benefits received must be included in "gross income" from "sources within the United States". Indirectly, they must also be saying that such earnings are to be treated as "effectively connected with a trade or business", because 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31) says that if these earnings were not connected with a "trade or business", then they cannot be reported as "gross income" and are part of a "foreign estate" not subject to the code. 26 U.S.C. §871(a)(3), on the other hand, associates Social Security benefits received by "nonresident aliens" with OTHER than a "trade or business" and also makes them reportable and taxable as "gross income".

Those who avail themselves of any of the above government "privileges" are presumed to be "taxpayers" in the context of the activities above as far as the IRS is concerned. This doesn't mean they are "taxpayers" for ALL their earnings, but only for those in which the above activities are undertaken. It's a "privilege" to have deductions and pay a usually lower graduated rate of tax on earnings that are otherwise "taxable". In effect, the government is exploiting people's ignorance and greed in the pursuit of exemptions or tax reductions they don't need in order to transform "nontaxpayers" into "taxpayers". Here is how one Congressman described this kind of very devious exploitation:

> "Objections to its [the income tax] renewal are long, loud, and general throughout the country. Those who pay are the exception, those who do not pay are millions; the whole moral force of the law is a dead letter. The honest man makes a true return; the dishonest hides and covers all he can to avoid this obnoxious tax. It has no moral force. This tax is unequal, perjury-provoking and crime encouraging, because it is a war with the right of a person to keep private and regulate his business affairs and financial matters. Deception, fraud, and falsehood mark its progress everywhere in the process of collection. It creates curiosity, jealousy, and prejudice among the people. It makes the tax-gatherer a spy…The people demand that it shall not be renewed, but left to die a natural death and pass away into the future as pass away all the evils growing out of the Civil War."

Those "taxpayers" in receipt of taxable privileges or "nontaxpayers" who are too stupid to know that they don't need to become a "taxpayer" in order to receive a "privilege" they don't need should definitely pay for the "privilege" they are taking advantage of. Therefore, if you are a "non-resident non-person" not engaged in a "trade or business" and any one of the above conditions applies to you, then the IRS is ASSUMING, usually wrongfully, that you are engaged in a "trade or business" or have income under 26 U.S.C. §871(a) originating from the statutory but not constitutional "United States" (federal territory) that is not connected with a "trade or business". The great irony of this whole fraudulent federal "scheme" is that those who were otherwise "nontaxpayers" and never had any "gross income" to begin with, in effect were fooled by deceptive IRS publications and phone advice into:

1. Falsely believing that their income was "taxable" and that they were "taxpayers".
2. Falsely believing that because they were "taxpayers" with "taxable income", then they needed deductions to reduce their liability.
3. Volunteering to make themselves into "taxpayers" to procure federal "privileges" called "deductions" that they never needed to begin with, but which the IRS was too dishonest to remind them that they didn't need. Once they took these deductions, they became "taxpayers" even if they weren't before.

The Bible describes this GREAT deception and fraud as follows:

> For thus says the LORD:
> "You have sold yourselves for nothing,
> And you shall be redeemed without money."
> [Isaiah 52:3, Bible, NKJV]

We call the above "government instituted slavery using privileges" or simply "privilege-induced slavery" earlier in section 4.3.12. Those with liberal arts degrees in business from prestigious but amoral or immoral universities might euphemistically refer to this devious brand of exploitation simply as "clever marketing", but in the end, it amounts to deceit in commerce, which the Bible says is the gravest of sins which God hates most of all sins:

> "As religion towards God is a branch of universal righteousness (he is not an honest man that is not devout), so righteousness towards men is a branch of true religion, for he is not a godly man that is not honest*, nor can he expect that his devotion should be accepted; for,*
> 1. Nothing is more offensive to God than deceit in commerce. A false balance is here put for all manner of unjust and fraudulent practices [of our public dis-servants] in dealing with any person [within the public], which are all an abomination to the Lord, and render those abominable [hated] to him that allow themselves in the use of such accursed arts of thriving. It is an affront to justice, which God is the patron of, as well as a wrong to our neighbour, whom God is the protector of. Men [in the IRS and the Congress] make light of such frauds, and think there is no sin in that which there is money to be got by, and, while it passes undiscovered, they cannot blame themselves for it; a blot is no blot till it is hit, Hos. 12:7, 8. But they are not the less an abomination to God, who will be the avenger of those that are defrauded by their brethren.
> 2. Nothing is more pleasing to God than fair and honest dealing, nor more necessary to make us and our devotions acceptable to him: A just weight is his delight. He himself goes by a just weight, and holds the scale of judgment with an even hand, and therefore is pleased with those that are herein followers of him.
> A [false] balance, [whether it be in the federal courtroom or at the IRS or in the marketplace,] cheats, under pretence of doing right most exactly, and therefore is the greater abomination to God."

5.6.12.13.4 Why the IRS and the Courts WON'T Talk About what a "trade or business" or "Public office" is and Collude to Cover Up the Scam

> "The 'Truth' about income taxes is so precious to the U.S. government that it must be surrounded by a bodyguard of lies."
> [Family Guardian Fellowship]

The government perpetuates the "trade or business" FRAUD and scam by the following means:

1. Refusing to discuss the meaning of a "trade or business" in their publications or their phone support.
2. Refusing to discuss the meaning of a "public office" in their publications or their phone support.

3. Calling those who raise the issues documented here as "frivolous" or "preposterous" without citing any relevant legal authority justifying such a conclusion that is consistent with the following pamphlet:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. Trying to cover up their fraud using the word "includes" scam documented below:

Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

There are many very good reasons why they try to deflect attention away from the scam. Some of the reasons are as follows:

1. The IRS would have to admit that they aren't part of the government and are a private corporation, which in fact they are. Remember: A "public officer" is someone who has no supervisor other than the law and the courts and who exercises a sovereign functions of the government INDEPENDENTLY of oversight other than the law and the courts:

   > "Essential characteristics of a 'public office' are:
   > (1) Authority conferred by law,
   > (2) Fixed tenure of office, and
   > (3) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.
   > Key element of such test is that "officer is carrying out a sovereign function. Spring v. Constantino, 168 Conn. 563, 362 A.2d. 871, 875. Essential elements to establish public position as 'public office' are:
   > Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.
   > Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,
   > Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.
   > Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and > Position must have some permanency."
   > [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1230]

   If the IRS was an administrative part of the government and ESPECIALLY if it were in the Executive Branch as they want to deceive you into believing, then they couldn't have any enforcement authority at all without admitting that the people they are enforcing against in fact ARE NOT "public officers" as legally defined because they are being supervised by other than ONLY the courts and the law alone. These considerations explain why:

   1.1. No statute authorizes or ever has authorized the creation of the IRS. See:

Letter from Congressman Pat Danner, Sept. 12, 1996 http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/Jurisdiction/IRSnotGov.pdf

   1.2. Historical Treasury Organization Charts do not show the IRS as being in the Dept. of the Treasury. See:

SEDM Exhibit #05.010 http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm

   1.3. Title 31 of the U.S. Code does not list the Internal Revenue Service as being within the Dept. of the Treasury, even though their letterhead FRAUDULENTLY says they are. See:

SEDM Exhibit #08.001 http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm

   1.4. The Dept. of Justice has admitted under oath during legal discovery that the IRS is not an agency of the Federal Government. See:

SEDM Exhibit #08.004 http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm

   For further details on the absolute FRAUD to cover up the above information, read the evidence for yourself:

Origins and Authority of the Internal Revenue Service, Form #05.005 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. All "public officers" have a fiduciary duty to the people they serve, which means they have a fiduciary duty to YOU to act in YOUR best interest as a human being protected by the Constitution. If you can prove your oppressors are "taxpayers" and therefore "public officers", then their omissions that injure you would become actionable and a tort in court.

   > "As expressed otherwise, the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer. [253] Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under > every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain from a discharge of their trusts. [254] That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political entity on whose behalf he or she serves. [255] and owes a fiduciary duty to the public. [256] It has been said that the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual. [257] Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy.[258] "

> [63C American Jurisprudence 2d, Public Officers and Employees, §247 (1999)]

3. Any officer of the state government, including a state judge, who is also a federal "taxpayer" would have to admit that he is violating the Constitution of his state by simultaneously being a "public officer" in the federal government and a public officer in the state government at the same time. Most state constitutions and/or state statutes forbid public officers within the state government from also being public officers in the federal government. This is done to prevent a violation of the separation of powers doctrine between the state and federal governments as well as to prevent conflicts of interest and allegiance by public servants. Why, then, do state courts have federal Employer Identification Numbers (EINs)? Shouldn't they be exempt from such requirement to preserve the separation of powers? Here is an example within the California Constitution:

> CALIFORNIA CONSTITUTION
> ARTICLE 7 PUBLIC OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES
> SEC. 7. A person holding a lucrative office under the United States or other power may not hold a civil office of profit [within the state government]. A local officer or postmaster whose compensation does not exceed 500 dollars per year or an officer in the militia or a member of a reserve component of the armed forces of the United States except where on active federal duty for more than 30 days in any year is not a holder of a lucrative office, nor is the holding of a civil office of profit affected by this military service.

For more information about the systematic destruction of the separation of powers by malicious public servants aimed squarely and undermining the enforcement of your constitutional rights, see:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. "Taxpayer" attorneys representing clients in state court would have to recuse themselves from the practice of law for violating the state constitutional prohibition against serving simultaneously in both a public office in the federal government and a public office in the state government. All attorneys are officers of the court they are licensed to practice in. If that court is a state court, they are public officers of the state government and therefore cannot also serve as public officers of the federal government called "taxpayers":

> Attorneys at Law
> §3 Nature of Attorneys Office
> An attorney is more than a mere agent or servant of his or her client; within the attorney's sphere, he or she is as independent as a judge, has duties and obligations to the court as well as to his or her client, and has powers entirely different from and superior to those of an ordinary agent. [259] In a limited sense an attorney is a public officer, [260] although an attorney is not generally considered a "public officer," "civil officer," or the like, as used

5. You as a "taxpayer" and a "public officer" could assert sovereign immunity against other agencies of the government on the basis that it violates the separation of powers doctrine for any agency of the federal government to interfere with the activities of any other agency or office. Taxation is a "legislative" and not a judicial function.[264] This situation is precisely the reason, for instance, why:
   5.1. The Anti-Injunction Act, 26 U.S.C. §7421, prohibits courts from interfering with the LAWFUL assessment or collection of income taxes from "public officers" in the Legislative Branch who consent.
   5.2. The Declaratory Judgments Act, 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) prohibits courts from making declaratory judgments in the case of federal "taxes". This prohibition also precludes the courts from identifying anyone as a "taxpayer" who says under penalty of perjury that they aren't.

6. It is ILLEGAL for an "alien" to be a "public officer" and you aren't an alien if you were born in this country. The I.R.C., Subtitle A tax is an excise tax upon a "trade or business", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office". All "taxpayers" in the I.R.C. are aliens engaged in a public office if not abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911(d) and it is ILLEGAL for aliens to hold public office! See 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) for proof that all "individuals" and "taxpayers" are aliens engaged in a "trade or business"/public office.

> 4. Lack of Citizenship

> §74. Aliens can not hold Office*. - - It is a general principle that an alien can not hold a public office. In all independent popular governments, as is said by Chief Justice Dixon of Wisconsin, "it is an acknowledged principle, which lies at the very foundation, and the enforcement of which needs neither the aid of statutory nor constitutional enactments or restrictions, that the government is instituted by the citizens for their liberty and protection, and that it is to be administered, and its powers and functions exercised only by them and through their agency."*
> In accordance with this principle it is held that an alien can not hold the office of sheriff.[265]

7. Courts would have to admit your evidence just as readily as that of any other government officer or employee involved in the action, or else they would be guilty of denying you equal protection of the law and all the "benefits" of the very office that they MUST impute to you in order to treat you as a "taxpayer". This would make them look hypocritical and juries would throw the book at the government for doing this. The Federal Rules of Evidence permit those engaged in a "public office" to receive preferential treatment in getting their evidence admitted in federal court, including evidence without signature and without foundational testimony. The government doesn't want to confer this advantage upon pro per litigants or those opposing the government tax scam. Federal Rule of Evidence 803(8) permits a "public records" exception to the Hearsay Rule, which means that any tax record, any evidence you gathered in the course of complying with your alleged "duties" as a "public officer" would not be excludible by the judges of federal district courts, which would severely undermine the government's civil or criminal tax case against you. The IRS and DOJ win in federal court primarily by getting federal judges to unlawfully exclude evidence of persons who are litigating against them in order to prejudice the case in favor of the government. Below is what the appropriate section of the Hearsay Exceptions Rule, Federal Rule of Evidence 803 says on this subject, noting that "activities of the office or agency", such as a "public office" fall within the protections of this rule:

> Rule 803. Hearsay Exceptions; Availability of Declarant Immaterial
> The following are not excluded by the hearsay rule, even though the declarant is available as a witness:
> (8) Public records and reports. Records, reports, statements, or data compilations, in any form, of public offices or agencies, setting forth (A) the activities of the office or agency, or (B) matters observed pursuant to duty imposed by law as to which matters there was a duty to report, excluding, however, in criminal cases matters observed by police officers and other law enforcement personnel, or (C) in civil actions and proceedings and against the Government in criminal cases, factual findings resulting from an investigation made pursuant to authority granted by law, unless the sources of information or other circumstances indicate lack of trustworthiness.

8. Financial institutions could no longer file Currency Transaction Reports on human beings who are "taxpayers" using IRS Form 8300 or Treasury Forms 103 and 104 . This is because 31 U.S.C. §5313(d)(1)(C) specifically exempts "Any entity established under the laws of the United States, any State, or any political subdivision of any State, or under an interstate compact between 2 or more States, which exercises governmental authority on behalf of the United States or any such State or political subdivision.". Statutory "taxpayers" are in fact such entities.

> 31 U.S. Code § 5313 - Reports on domestic coins and currency transactions
> (d)Mandatory Exemptions From Reporting Requirements.—
> (1)In general.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall exempt, pursuant to section 5318(a)(6), a depository institution from the reporting requirements of subsection (a) with respect to transactions between the depository institution and the following categories of entities:
> (B)A department or agency of the United States, any State, or any political subdivision of any State.
> *(C)Any entity established under the laws of the United States, any State, or any political subdivision of any State, or under an interstate compact between 2 or more States, which exercises governmental authority on behalf of the United States or any such State or political subdivision.
> (D)Any business or category of business the reports on which have little or no value for law enforcement purposes.

Statutory "taxpayers" are public officers and the "agency" or instrumentality they operate WITHIN is the Internal Revenue Service, which is under the Supervision and Control of the Treasury Department in the Executive Branch. In effect, the only thing that CTR reporting can then apply to are foreigners not protected by the Constitution and therefore who do not have the privacy protections of the Fourth Amendment. Even for those entities engaged in a "nonfinancial trade or business" identified in 31 U.S.C. §5331, those transactions occurring outside of the STATUTORY "United States", meaning with people OUTSIDE of the U.S. government, are not reportable:

> 31 U.S. Code § 5331 - Reports relating to coins and currency received in nonfinancial trade or business
> (c)Exceptions.—
> (1)Amounts received by financial institutions.—
> Subsection (a) shall not apply to amounts received in a transaction reported under section 5313 and regulations prescribed under such section.
> (2)Transactions occurring outside the united states.—

> Except to the extent provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, subsection (a) shall not apply to any transaction if the entire transaction occurs outside the United States.

They don't say WHICH of the two main "United States" they mean in the above, meaning the United States corporation in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A) or the geographcial United States in the District of Columbia at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), 4 U.S.C. §110(d), 31 U.S.C. §103, 31 U.S.C. §5112(t)(1)(C), and the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, 64 Stat. 873, Section 3(a)(3), but both are essentially synonymous, because of what the Supreme Court said was taxable in Downes v. Bidwell below. Note the language "It was held that the grant of this power was a general one without limitation as to place, and consequently extended to all places over which the government extends" because it Is in fact an excise tax UPON the government and its officers, and not private humans protected by the Constitution.

> "Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98, was an action of trespass or, as appears by the original record, replevin, brought in the circuit court for the District of Columbia to try the right of Congress to impose a direct tax for general purposes on that District. 3 Stat. at L. 216, chap. 60. It was insisted that Congress could act in a double capacity: in one as legislating [182 U.S. 244, 260] for the states; in the other as a local legislature for the District of Columbia. In the latter character, it was admitted that the power of levying direct taxes might be exercised, but for District purposes only, as a state legislature might tax for state purposes; but that it could not legislate for the District under art. 1, 8, giving to Congress the power 'to lay and collect taxes, imposts, and excises,' which 'shall be uniform throughout the United States,' inasmuch as the District was no part of the United States [described in the Constitution]. It was held that the grant of this power was a general one without limitation as to place, and consequently extended to all places over which the government extends; and that it extended to the District of Columbia as a constituent part of the United States.

9. Once the government truthfully admits that the income tax is an "excise tax" upon "public offices" within the United States government, those facing IRS enforcement actions would naturally introduce some very compromising questions that would put the IRS into a very tight spot that they could never get out of:

9.1. How can you force me to act as a "public officer" without my consent? Where is the evidence that I consented to act in this capacity?

9.2. Where is the constitutionally required oath of office for me to act as a "public officer"? This requirement is described earlier in section 5.6.12.11.

9.3. Where is the act of Congress that authorizes the specific "public office" that you allege that I am engaged in as required by 4 U.S.C. §72?

9.4. Where is the compensation to act as a "public officer", because I don't work for free and the Thirteenth Amendment prohibits involuntary servitude?

9.5. What if I don't think the compensation to act as a "public office" offered by I.R.C. Sections 1, 32, and 162 is adequate? How can I quit this form of federal agency and/or employment? Show me the forms to do this permanently.

9.6. How can people who submit false information returns that connect me to a "public office" have any lawful authority at all to donate or convert my private labor and property to a "public use" and a "public office" without my express written consent? If disinterested third parties can do that, it never was my property to begin with, now was it?

> "That property which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation."

9.7. Shouldn't my word as a "public officer" be taken over that of the private third parties who submit the false information returns that connect me to the alleged "office" to begin with, based on the Hearsay Exceptions Rule, Federal Rule of Evidence 803(8)? Why are you not granting to an alleged fellow "public officer" such as yourself this privilege or benefit of the office?

9.8. Are information returns filed against those not lawfully engaged in public offices being used as "federal election forms" to in effect "vote" people into public office, and is this a lawful use for such a form? Does withholding connected with these information returns then become bribery to procure an appointed or elected public office in the case of a person who was not otherwise lawfully engaged in such an office, in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §201?

On the subject of the Hearsay Exceptions Rule, Federal Rule of Evidence 803(8) above, below is what the Federal Civil Trials and Evidence, Rutter Group says on the Public Records exception to the Hearsay Rule:

> 7. [8:2780] Public Records and Reports (FRE 803(8)): The following are not inadmissible under the hearsay rule:
> "Records, reports, statements, or data compilations, in any form, of public offices or agencies, setting forth:
> "(A) the activities of the office or agency, or
> "(B) matters observed pursuant to duty to report, excluding, however, in criminal cases matters observed by police officers and other law enforcement personnel, or
> "(C) in civil actions and proceedings and against the Government in criminal cases, factual findings resulting "from an investigation made pursuant to authority granted by law,
> "unless the sources of information or other circumstances indicate lack of trustworthiness." [FRE 803(8) (emphasis added)]
> a. [8:2781] Compare—business records exception: The public records exception is much easier to invoke than the Rule 803(6) business records exception: the public records exception does not require the testimony of a custodian and often requires no foundation witness because the self-authentication provisions of FRE 902 will suffice (see ¶8:2905ff).
> b. [8:2782] Rationale: This hearsay exception is justified both by considerations of trustworthiness and necessity: Trustworthiness rests on the assumption that public officials perform their duties properly; necessity, on the assumption that they are unlikely to remember details independently of the record. [See Rule 803(8), Adv. Comm.Notes; Coleman v. Home Depot, Inc. (3rd Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d. 1333, 1341; Espinoza v. INS (9th Cir. 1995) 45 F.3d. 308, 310].
> The special provision for self-authentication of public records (FRE 902, see ¶8:2907 ff.) also eliminates the disruptive effect of bringing public officials to court. [Williams v. Tri-County Growers, Inc. (3rd Cir. 1984) 747 F.2d. 121, 133 (disapproved on another ground in Martin v. Cooper Elec. Supply Co. (3rd Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d. 896, 908, fn. 11)].
> c. [8:2783] Any form of record: The hearsay exception covers "[r]ecords, reports, statements or data compilations, in any form. . ." [FRE 803(8) (emphasis added)] > *d. [8:2784] Any government: The Rule applies to the records or reports of any "public office or agency" (FRE 803(8)). No distinction is made between federal and nonfederal offices and agencies.
> Thus, records of state or local government agencies may be admissible under this exception; likewise as to records of foreign governments. [See Hill v. Marshall (6th Cir. 1992) 962 F.2d. 1209, 1212—report by committee of state legislature; Matter of Oil Spill by Amoco Cadiz Off Coast of France on March 16, 1978 (7th Cir. 1992) 954 F.2d. 1279, 1308—records of French Commune]
> e. [8:2785] Types of records admissible: Rule 803(8) creates a hearsay exception for three separate categories of public record:
> - Records of a public agency's own activities (FRE 803(8)(A), see ¶8:2786 ff.(;
> - Records of matters observed pursuant to duty imposed by law (FRE 803(8)(B); see ¶8:2810 ff.(; and
> - Factual findings based on authorized investigative reports (FRE 803(8)(C); See ¶8:2835 ff.).

5.6.12.14 Defenses

5.6.12.14.1 How nonresidents in states of the Union are deceived and coerced to enlist in the scam

What about those who are smart enough to avoid the "trade or business" scam by properly declaring their status as:

1. "non-resident non-persons"

2. No income "effectively connected with a trade or business"
3. No sources of income inside the "United States" (federal government as a legal person)?

How does the IRS trap them? The IRS tricks them into volunteering into their jurisdiction using the IRS Form W-4. The regulations say that those who submit an IRS Form W-4:

1. MUST include all earnings listed on the W-2 as "gross income" on their tax return under 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1.
2. Are consenting to be bound by a private legal "contract" between you and the government under 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1. It doesn't say that on the form, but the regulations tell the truth plainly. The form itself simply identifies itself as an "Employee Withholding Allowance Certificate" and nowhere uses the word "agreement" or "contract". The reason it doesn't is because the government doesn't want you to know that you are signing a binding contract or that you have the choice NOT to sign or consent to it. This is obviously entrapment and does not constitute informed consent, but fraud.

Here is the regulation that proves this:

> Title 26
> CHAPTER I
> SUBCHAPTER C
> PART 31
> Subpart E
> (a) In general. An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of Sec. 31.3401(a)-3, made after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. (b) Form and duration of agreement. (1)(i) Except as provided in subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph, an employee who desires to enter into an agreement under section 3402(p) shall furnish his employer with Form W-4 (withholding exemption certificate) executed in accordance with the provisions of section 3402(f) and the regulations thereunder. The furnishing of such Form W-4 shall constitute a request for withholding.

Remember, however, that no law or court or government has the power to interfere with your right to contract. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court says on this subject:

> *"*Independent of these views, there are many considerations which lead to the conclusion that the power to impair contracts [either the Constitution or the Holy Bible], by direct action to that end, does not exist with the general [federal] government. In the first place, one of the objects of the Constitution, expressed in its preamble, was the establishment of justice, and what that meant in its relations to contracts is not left, as was justly said by the late Chief Justice, in Hepburn v. Griswold, to inference or conjecture. As he observes, at the time the Constitution was undergoing discussion in the convention, the Congress of the Confederation was engaged in framing the ordinance for the government of the Northwestern Territory, in which certain articles of compact were established between the people of the original States and the people of the Territory, for the purpose, as expressed in the instrument, of extending the fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty, upon which the States, their laws and constitutions, were erected. By that ordinance it was declared, that, in the just preservation of rights and property, 'no law ought ever to be made, or have force in the said Territory, that shall, in any manner, interfere with or affect private contracts or engagements bona fide and without fraud previously formed.' The same provision, adds the Chief Justice, found more condensed expression in the prohibition upon the States [in Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution] against impairing the obligation of contracts, which has ever been recognized as an efficient safeguard against injustice; and though the prohibition is not applied in terms to the government of the United States, he expressed the opinion, speaking for himself and the majority of the court at the time, that it was clear 'that those who framed and those who adopted the Constitution intended that the spirit of this prohibition should pervade the entire body of legislation, and that the justice which the Constitution was ordained to establish was not thought by them to be compatible with legislation [or judicial precedent] of an opposite tendency.' 8 Wall. 623. [99 U.S. 700, 765] Similar views are found expressed in the opinions of other judges of this court."
> [Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U.S. 700 (1878)]
> ---
> "A state can no more impair the obligation of a contract by her organic law [constitution] than by legislative enactment; for her constitution is a law within the meaning of the contract clause of the national constitution. Law, 637 And the obligation of her contracts is as fully protected by that instrument against impairment by legislation as are contracts between individuals exclusively. State v. > Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1; Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U.S. 358 ."
> [New Orleans Gas Company v. Louisiana Light Company, 115 U.S. 650 (1885)]

Neither states of the Union nor the federal government can therefore use their jurisdiction to protect you if you abuse your power to contract by signing a W-4 that gives away all your rights or sovereignty. Under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the Constitution, the federal government has jurisdiction over its own employees and property wherever they may be found, including in places where it otherwise has no legislative jurisdiction. Consequently, it has exclusive jurisdiction over all those who sign a W-4 wherever they may be found. The jurisdiction is "in rem" over all such "property".

In law, all rights are property. Anything that conveys rights is also property. Contracts convey rights and therefore are property. All franchises are contracts and therefore also are "property". A "trade or business"/"public office" is a franchise and therefore is also "property" within the meaning of Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution. These facts are the ONLY reason why the United States District Courts, which were established pursuant to Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution are even able to hear income tax cases: because they relate to federal franchises.

Sneaky, huh? That is why we repeatedly say DO NOT file form W-4's to stop withholding with your private employer: because you are signing a contract to elect yourself into a public office ILLEGALLY. God also warned us not to submit the W-4 agreement or contract when He said:

> "You shall make no covenant [contract or franchise] with them [foreigners, pagans], nor with their [pagan government] gods [laws or judges]. They shall not dwell in your land [and you shall not dwell in theirs by becoming a "resident" or domiciliary in the process of contracting with them], lest they make you sin against Me [God]. For if you serve their [government] gods [under contract or agreement or franchise], it will surely be a snare to you."
> [Exodus 23:32-33, Bible, NKJV]

Instead of submitting the form W-4, use ONLY the modified form W-8BEN, or you are asking for BIG trouble and walking right into their trap, folks! Below is a link that will show you how to fill out the W-8BEN properly, if you choose to use it.

Additional information beyond that above about how to handle tax withholding paperwork is also available in the following free book:

Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers, Form #09.001 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

A human domiciled in a state of the Union who has identified him or herself properly with their private employer as a "non-resident non-person" by filing the amended W-8BEN as we suggest, and who has had his earnings involuntarily withheld by his private employer is put into the unfortunate position of having to file a return to get the wrongfully withheld earnings back. Usually, they will incorrectly file the wrong form, the 1040, instead of the proper form 1040NR, and thereby make themselves effectively into a "resident alien". This gives the IRS jurisdiction over them because they are then treated as maintaining a domicile in the statutory but not constitutional "United States" (federal territory). The IRS will then drag their feet refunding the wrongfully withhold earnings, forcing the NRA to take deductions and apply a graduated rate to reduce the withholding, which effectively forces them into perjuring themselves on a tax form just to get back the earnings that always were theirs to begin with.

5.6.12.14.2 How to prevent being involuntarily or fraudulently connected to the "trade or business" franchise

Based on all the foregoing, if you are a "non-resident non-person" or even a "nonresident alien" not engaged the "trade or business"/public office franchise under 26 U.S.C. §871(b) with no income from the U.S. Government or federal territory under 26 U.S.C. §871(a), then you aren't even mentioned in the I.R.C. as a subject for any Internal Revenue tax and your estate is a "foreign estate" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31). Section 4.11 proves that nearly all Americans living in states of the Union are "non-resident non-persons", and so the above provision must apply to you, folks. Therefore, you are a "non-resident non-person" with no "sources of income" connected with a public office in the District of Columbia. If you want to prevent being involuntarily connected with the "trade or business" franchise, then you:

12. Must refuse to sign IRS Form W-4 and instead use one of the following two forms:
    12.1. Amended version of IRS Form W-8BEN. See:
    > About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
    > http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
    12.2. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
    http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
13. Must claim that you are not engaged in an excise taxable activity under the I.R.C., Subtitle A.
14. Must claim that you don't earn any "gross income".
15. Must claim that you have no taxable "sources of income" identified in 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(4)(A).
16. Must claim that you are a "nontaxpayer" not subject to the I.R.C. All portions within the I.R.C., IRS publications, and the Internal Revenue Manual that refer to "taxpayers" don't refer to you and can safely be disregarded and disobeyed.
17. Must claim that you are not subject to withholding on any payments you receive if you earn no statutory "income" from federal territory in the statutory "United States" or are not engaged in a "trade or business".
18. If any money was withheld from your pay by either a business or a financial institution, then you are due for a refund of all withholding and can lawfully ask for it back using the following form WITHOUT becoming a "taxpayer":
    > Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government, Form #15.001
    > http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
19. Cannot lawfully file an IRS Form 1040, because EVERYTHING that goes on that form is treated as "effectively connected with a trade or business". All entries on the form are subject to deductions and exemptions under 26 U.S.C. §162, which means EVERYTHING on the form is "trade or business" income. If you sign and submit this form, you are committing perjury under penalty of perjury. This is confirmed by examining 26 U.S.C. §871(b)(1), which says that all taxes imposed in I.R.C. Section 1 are connected with a "trade or business", and IRS Form 1040 is intended for those subject to this tax. The 1040 form is also for "aliens", and not "nonresident aliens", as was shown in section 5.5.3 of the Great IRS Hoax.
20. Cannot lawfully have Currency Transaction Reports (CTR's), IRS Form 8300 filed against you by financial institutions, such as IRS Form 8300. If anyone mistakenly attempts to file these fraudulent reports against you, then use the remedy below. See IRS Publication 334: Tax Guide for Small Businesses (2002), p. 12 above:
    > Demand for Verified Evidence of "Trade or Business" Activity: Currency Transaction Report (CTR), Form #04.008
    > http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
21. Cannot lawfully allow IRS Form 1042-S to be filed against you because this form is ONLY for persons engaged in a "trade or business". If a company does erroneously file this form, you can lawfully correct it using the article below:
    > Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1042's, Form #04.003
    > http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
22. Cannot lawfully allow IRS Form 1098 to be filed against you because this form is ONLY for persons engaged in a "trade or business". If a company does erroneously file this form, you can lawfully correct it using the article below:
    > Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1098's, Form #04.004
    > http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
23. Cannot lawfully allow IRS Form 1099 to be filed against you because this form is ONLY for persons engaged in a "trade or business". See IRS Publication 583: Starting a Business and Keeping Records, p. 8 above. If a company does erroneously file this form, you can lawfully correct it using the article below:
    > Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1099's, Form #04.005
    > http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
24. Cannot lawfully allow having any earnings reported on a W-2. 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(11)-1(a) says that those not engaged in a "trade or business" cannot earn reportable "wages". If wages are incorrectly reported by an ignorant private employer, you can and should correct them using the IRS Form 4852, as shown in the article at:
    > Correcting Erroneous IRS Form W-2's, Form #04.006
    > http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Keep all of the above fresh in your mind at all times as you decide how you are going to file in order to get all your ILLEGALLY STOLEN, I mean "withheld", money back from an ignorant employer or financial institution who refuses to read and obey the "code" (not "law", but "code"). Also keep in mind that most of this section is entirely "academic masturbation", as tax attorney Donald MacPherson colorfully calls it, because the Internal Revenue Code isn't law for "nontaxpayers" anyway and can't become law unless and until it is enacted into positive law. Therefore, the only people it pertains to are those who volunteer, and all these people are directly associated with the government as a federal "instrumentality" in some way.

5.6.12.14.3 Administrative Remedies to Prevent Identity Theft on Government Forms

We have prepared an entire short presentation showing you all the "traps" on government forms and how to avoid them:

Avoiding Traps in Government Forms, Form #12.023 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

All of the so-called "traps" described in the above presentation center around the following abuses and FRAUDS:

1. The perjury statement at the end of the form betrays where they PRESUME you geographically are. 28 U.S.C. 1746 identifies TWO possible jurisdictions, and if they don't use the one in 28 U.S.C. §1746(1), they are PRESUMING, usually falsely, that you are located on federal territory and come under territorial law.

> 28 U.S. Code § 1746 - Unsworn declarations under penalty of perjury
> Wherever, under any law of the United States or under any rule, regulation, order, or requirement made pursuant to law, any matter is required or permitted to be supported, evidenced, established, or proved by the sworn declaration, verification, certificate, statement, oath, or affidavit, in writing of the person making the same (other than a deposition, or an oath of office, or an oath required to be taken before a specified official other than a notary public), such matter may, with like force and effect, be supported, evidenced, established, or proved by the unsworn declaration, certificate, verification, or statement, in writing of such person which is subscribed by him, as true under penalty of perjury, and dated, in substantially the following form:
> (1) If executed without the United States [federal territory or the government]: "I declare (or certify, verify, or state) under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on (date).
> (2) If executed within the United States [federal territory or the government], its territories, possessions, or commonwealths: "I declare (or certify, verify, or state) under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on (date).

2. Telling you when you submit the form that the terms on the form have their ordinary, PRIVATE, non-statutory meaning but after they RECEIVE the form, INTERPRETING all terms in their PUBLIC and STATUTORY context. This is bait and switch, deception, and FRAUD.
3. Confusing the CONSTITUTIONAL context with the STATUTORY context for geographical words of art such as "United States" and "State".
4. Confusing CONSTITUTIONAL "Citizens" or "citizens of the United States" in the Fourteenth Amendment with STATUTORY "U.S. citizen", or "nationals and citizens of the United states at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1401.
5. Confusing CONSTITUTIONAL "persons" or "people" with STATUTORY "persons" or "individuals". CONSTITUTIONAL "persons" are all MEN OR WOMEN AND NOT ARTIFICIAL entities or offices, while civil STATUTORY persons are all PUBLIC offices and fictions of law created by Congress.
6. Connecting you with a civil status found in civil statutory law, which is a public office. The form itself does this:
   6.1. In the "status" block. It either doesn't offer a STATUTORY "non-resident non-person" status in the form or they don't offer ANY form for STATUTORY "non-resident non-persons".
   6.2. The Title of the form. The upper left corner of the 1040 identifies the applicant as a "U.S. individual", meaning a public office domiciled on federal territory.
   6.3. Underneath the signature, which usually identifies the civil status of the applicant, such as "taxpayer".

The remedy for the above types of deception and fraud is the following:

5. Avoid filling out any and every government form.
6. If FORCED to fill out a government form, ALWAYS attach a MANDATORY attachment that defines all geographical, citizenship, and status terms the form with precise definitions and betray whether the meaning is STATUTORY or CONSTITUTION. It CANNOT be both. If you think it is both, you are practicing a logical fallacy called "equivocation". State on the form you are attaching to that the form is "Not valid, false, and fraudulent if not accompanied by the following attachment:_____". The attachments on our site are good for this.

7. Tell the recipient that if they don't rebut the definitions you provide within a specified time limit, then they agree and are estopped from later challenging it.
8. Specify that none of the terms on the form submitted have the meaning found in any state or federal statutory code. Instead they imply only the common meaning.

There are many forms on our site you can attach to standard forms provided by the IRS, state revenue agencies, financial institutions, and employers that satisfy the above to ensure that your correct status is reflected in their records. Below are the most important ones.

6. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
7. Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
8. USA Passport Application Attachment, Form #06.007
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
9. Voter Registration Attachment, Form #06.003
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
10. Affidavit of Domicile: Probate, Form #04.223
    http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The language after the line below is language derived from Form #04.223 above. The language included is very instructive and helpful to our readers in identifying HOW the identity theft happens. We strongly suggest reusing this language in the administrative record of any entity who claims you are a statutory "taxpayer", "person", or "individual" under the Internal Revenue Code or state revenue code.

AFFIDVAVIT REGARDING ESTATE OF DECEDENT: _____

I certify that the following facts are true under penalty of perjury under the criminal perjury laws of the state I am in but NOT under any OTHER of the civil statutory codes. I am not under any other civil codes as a civil non-resident non-person. The content of this form defines all geographical, citizenship, and domicile terms used on any and all forms to which this estate settlement relates for all parties concerned.

1. Civil status and domicile of decedent: Decedent at the time of his death was:
   1.1. A CONSTITUTIONAL "Citizen" or "citizen of the United States" as defined in the Fourteenth Amendment.
   1.2. NOT a STATUTORY "U.S. citizen" or "national and citizen of the United States at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c), or 26 U.S.C. §3121(e). 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) identifies an 8 U.S.C. §1401 "U.S. citizen" as the ONLY type of "citizen" subject to the Internal Revenue Code. All such "U.S. citizens" are territorial citizens born within and domiciled within federal territory and NOT a CONSTITUTIONAL "State".
   1.3. Domiciled in the CONSTITUTIONAL "United States" and CONSTITUTIONAL State at the time of his death.

The Insular Cases were a series of Supreme Court decisions that addressed challenges to duties on goods transported from Puerto Rico to the continental United States. Puerto Rico, like the Philippines, had been recently ceded to the United States. The Court considered the territorial scope of the term "the United States" in the Constitution and held that this term as used in the uniformity clause of the Constitution was territorially limited to the states of the Union. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8 ("[A]ll Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States." (emphasis added)); see Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244, 251, 21 S.Ct. 770, 773, 45 L.Ed. 1088 (1901) ("[I]t can nowhere be inferred that the territories were considered a part of the United States. >
> The Court's conclusion in Downes was derived in part by analyzing the territorial scope of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments. The Thirteenth Amendment prohibits slavery and involuntary servitude "within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction." U.S. Const. amend. XIII, § 1 (emphasis added). The Fourteenth Amendment states that persons "born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside." U.S. Const. amend XIV, § 1 (emphasis added). The disjunctive "or" in the Thirteenth Amendment demonstrates that "there may be places within the jurisdiction of the United States that are no[t] part of the Union" to which the Thirteenth Amendment would apply. Downes, 182 U.S. at 251, 21 S.Ct. at 773. Citizenship under the Fourteenth Amendment, however, "is not extended to persons born in any place 'subject to [the United States '] jurisdiction,' " but is limited to persons born or naturalized in the states of the Union*. 1.4. NOT domiciled in the STATUTORY "United States" or "State" as that term is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) or 4 U.S.C. §110(d) or the state revenue codes. These areas are federal territory not within the exclusive jurisdiction of a state of the Union.

1.5. NOT a STATUTORY "U.S. person" as that term is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30), because it relies on the definition of "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) or 4 U.S.C. §110(d) or the state revenue codes.

1.6. An "individual" in an ordinary or CONSTITUTIONAL sense. By this we mean he was a PRIVATE man or woman protected by the CONSTITUTION and the COMMON LAW and NOT subject to the jurisdiction of the STATUTORY civil law.

1.7. NOT an "individual" in a STATUTORY sense or as used in any revenue code. 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) indicates that the ONLY types of "individuals" found anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code are both "foreign persons" and "aliens" or "nonresident aliens". Therefore the decedent could not possibly be an "individual" as that term is used in the Internal Revenue Code.

An alien individual who has made an election under section 6013(g) or (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a nonresident alien individual for purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder.*

2. Warning NOT to confuse STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL contexts for geographical or citizenship terms:

[267] Congress, under the Act of February 21, 1871, ch. 62, § 34, 16 Stat. 419, 426, expressly extended the Constitution and federal laws to the District of Columbia. See Downes, 182 U.S. at 261, 21 S.Ct. at 777 (stating that the "mere cession of the District of Columbia" from portions of Virginia and Maryland did not "take [the District of Columbia] out of the United States or from under the aegis of the Constitution.").

2.1. Recipient of this form is cautioned NOT to PRESUME that the STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL contexts of geographical, citizenship, or domicile terms are equivalent. They are NOT and are mutually exclusive.

2.2. One CANNOT lawfully have a domicile in two different places that are legislatively "foreign" and a "foreign estate" in relation to each other. This is what George Orwell called DOUBLETHINK and the result is CRIMINAL IDENTITY THEFT.

2.3. The U.S. Supreme Court held in Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 814 (1971) that an 8 U.S.C. §1401 STATUTORY "U.S. citizen" is NOT a CONSTITUTIONAL "citizen of the United States" under the Fourteenth Amendment. See also Valmonte v. I.N.S., 136 F.3d. 914 (C.A.2, 1998) earlier. Therefore, it is my firm understanding that the decedent:

2.3.1. Was NOT domiciled in the STATUTORY "United States" or "State" defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) or 4 U.S.C. §110(d) or the state revenue codes. These areas are federal territory under the exclusive jurisdiction of the national government.

2.3.2. Was NOT a STATUTORY "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, which is the ONLY type of "citizen" mentioned anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code. These are territorial citizens domiciled on federal territory, and the decedent was NOT so domiciled.

3. "Intention" of the Decedent:

The transaction to which this submission relates requires the affiant to provide legal evidence of the "domicile" of the decedent for the purposes of settling the estate. This requires that he/she make a "legal determination" about someone who he/she had a blood relationship with. "Domicile" is a legal term which includes both PHYSICAL presence in a place COMBINED with consent AND intent to dwell there permanently.

> "domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

3.1. Two types of domicile are involved in the estate of the decedent:

3.1.1. The domicile of the PRIVATE PHYSICAL MAN OR WOMAN under the common law and the constitution.

3.1.2. The domicile of any PUBLIC OFFICES he/she fills as part of any civil statutory franchises, such as the revenue codes, family codes, traffic codes, etc. These "offices" are represented by the civil statutory "person", "individual", "taxpayer", "driver", "spouse", etc.

3.2. Legal publications recognize the TWO components of a MAN OR WOMAN, meaning the PUBLIC and the PRIVATE components as follows:

> "A private person cannot make constitutions or laws, nor can he with authority construe them, nor can he administer or execute them."
> [United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 1 S.Ct. 601, 27 L.Ed. 290 (1883)]

> "All the powers of the government [including ALL of its civil enforcement powers against the public] must be carried into operation by individual agency, either through the medium of public officers, or contracts made with [private] individuals."
> [Osborn v. Bank of U.S., 22 U.S. 738 (1824)]

3.3. Man or woman can simultaneously be in possession of BOTH PUBLIC and PRIVATE rights. This gives rise to TWO legal "persons": PUBLIC and PRIVATE.

3.3.1. The CIVIL STATUTORY law attaches to the PUBLIC person. It can do so ONLY by EXPRESS CONSENT, because the Declaration of Independence, which is organic law, declares that all JUST powers derive from the CONSENT of the party. The implication is that anything NOT expressly and in writing consented to is UNJUST and a tort.

3.3.2. The COMMON law and the Constitution attach to and protect the PRIVATE person. This is the person most people think of when they refer to someone as a "person". They are not referring to the PUBLIC civil statutory "person".

This is consistent with the following maxim of law.

> Quando duo juro concurrunt in und personâ, aequum est ac si essent in diversis.
> When two rights [public right v. private right] concur in one person, it is the same as if they were two separate persons. 4 Co. 118.
> [Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;
> SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm]

3.4. The affiant would be remiss and malfeasant NOT to:

3.4.1. Distinguish between the PRIVATE man or woman and the PUBLIC office that are both represented by the decedent.

3.4.2. Condone or allow the recipient of the form to PRESUME that they are both equivalent. They are simply NOT.

3.4.3. Require all those enforcing PUBLIC rights associated with a PUBLIC office in the government (such as "person", "individual", "taxpayer", etc.) to satisfy the burden of proving that the decedent lawfully CONSENTED to the office by making an application, taking an oath, and serving where the office (also called a statutory "trade or business" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26)) was EXPRESSLY authorized to be executed.

3.5. Regarding the "intent" of the decedent, affiant is certain that the decedent had NO DESIRE to occupy, accept the benefits of, or accept the obligations of any offices he/she was compelled to fill, and therefore:

3.5.1. These offices DO NOT lawfully exist . . .and

3.5.2. It would be UNJUST to enforce the obligations of said offices WITHOUT written evidence of consent being presented by those doing the enforcing.

3.5.3. It would be criminal THEFT and IDENTITY THEFT to presume that the decent did hold any such PUBLIC offices or to enforce the obligations of such offices upon the decedent. These offices include any and all civil statuses he might have under the Internal Revenue Code (e.g. "taxpayer", "person", or "individual") or the state revenue codes. Detailed documentation on the nature of this identity theft is included in:

Government Identity Theft, Form #05.046 http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/GovernmentIdentityTheft.pdf

4. Location of decedent, estate, and property of the estate:

4.1. All property of the estate is WITHIN the CONSTITUTIONAL "United States" and the CONSTITUTIONAL State of domicile of the decedent.

4.2. All property is WITHOUT the STATUTORY "United States" defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), and 4 U.S.C. §110(d).

4.3. The CONSTITUTIONAL and the STATUTORY "United States" and "State" are mutually exclusive and non-overlapping.

5. The estate and all affiants are a STATUTORY "foreign estate" per 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31) because:

> (d) The term "State" includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

5.2. WITHIN the CONSTITUTIONAL "United States", meaning states of the CONSTITUTIONAL union of states.
5.3. NOT WITHIN the STATUTORY "State" or STATUTORY "United States" under the state revenue codes. It may be within these things in OTHER titles of the state codes, because other titles use different definitions for "State" and "United States".

> REVENUE AND TAXATION CODE – RTC

5.4. Not connected with a STATUTORY "trade or business" within the STATUTORY "United States" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). Decedent was NOT engaged in a public office within the national but not state government.

> 26 U.S.C. §7701
> (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—
> (26) trade or business
> "The term 'trade or business' includes the performance of the functions of a public office."

NOTE: The U.S. Supreme Court held in the License Tax Cases that Congress CANNOT establish the above "trade or business" in a state in order to tax it.

> "Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."
> [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

Keep in mind that the "license" they are talking about is the constructive license represented by the Social Security Number and Taxpayer Identification Number, which are only required for those ENGAGING in a STATUTORY "trade or business" per 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1. The number therefore behaves as the equivalent of what the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) calls a "franchise mark".

> "A franchise entails the right to operate a business that is "identified or associated with the franchisor's trademark, or to offer, sell, or distribute goods, services, or commodities that are identified or associated with the franchisor's trademark." The term "trademark" is intended to be read broadly to cover not only trademarks, but any service mark, trade name, or other advertising or commercial symbol. This is generally referred to as the "trademark" or "mark" element.
> The franchisor [the government] need not own the mark itself, but at the very least must have the right to license the use of the mark to others. Indeed, the right to use the franchisor's mark in the operation of the business - either by selling goods or performing services identified with the mark or by using the mark, in whole or in part, in the business' name - is an integral part of franchising. In fact, a supplier can avoid Rule coverage of a particular distribution arrangement by expressly prohibiting the distributor from using its mark."
> [FTC Franchise Rule Compliance Guide, May 2008;
> SOURCE: http://business.ftc.gov/documents/bus70-franchise-rule-compliance-guide]

Decedent, if he or she used any government issued identifying number, did so under compulsion, in violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(a)(8), and he/she hereby defines such use as NOT creating any presumption that he was engaged in any franchise or office, but rather evidence of unlawful duress against a non-resident non-person.

6. The above definitions of geographical and citizenship terms are NOT definitions as legally defined if they do not include all things or classes of things which are EXPRESSLY included. Furthermore, the rules of statutory construction require that anything and everything that is NOT EXPRESSLY INCLUDED in the above definitions is PURPOSEFULLY EXCLUDED:

> *"Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be > inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded."

> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

NOTE: Judges and even government administrators are NOT legislators and cannot by fiat or presumption add ANYTHING they want to the definition of statutory terms. If they do, they are violating the separation of powers and conducting a commercial invasion of the states in violation of Article 4, Section 4 of the United States Constitution.

> *"When the legislative and executive powers are united in the same person, or in the same body of magistrates, there can be no liberty; because apprehensions may arise, lest the same monarch or senate should enact tyrannical laws, to execute them in a tyrannical manner.
> Again, there is no liberty, if the judiciary power be not separated from the legislative and executive. Were it joined with the legislative, the life and liberty of the subject would be exposed to arbitrary control; for the judge would be then the legislator. Were it joined to the executive power, the judge might behave with violence and oppression [sound familiar?].
> There would be an end of everything, were the same man or the same body, whether of the nobles or of the people, to exercise those three powers, that of enacting laws, that of executing the public resolutions, and of trying the causes of individuals."
> In what a situation must the poor subject be in those republics! The same body of magistrates are possessed, as executors of the laws, of the whole power they have given themselves in quality of legislators. It is FRAUD to presume that the use of the word "includes" in any definition gives unlimited license to anyone to add whatever they want to a statutory definition. This is covered in:

Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014 http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/LegalDecPropFraud.pdf

7. The recipient of this form is NOT AUTHORIZED to add anything to the above definitions or PRESUME anything is included that does not EXPRESSLY APPEAR in said definitions of the STATUTORY "United States" or "State". Even the U.S. Supreme Court admits that it CANNOT lawfully do that.

> *"It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term. *Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. 379, 392, and n. 10 (1979). Congress' use of the term "propaganda" in this statute, as indeed in other legislation, has no pejorative connotation. 8. How NOT to respond to this submission: In responding to this submission, please DO NOT:
   8.1. Tell the affiant what to put or NOT to put in his/her paperwork. That would be practicing law on affiant's behalf, which I do not consent to.
   8.2. Try to censor this addition or submission. That would be criminal subornation of perjury. This affidavit and the attached paperwork are signed under penalty of perjury and therefore constitute "testimony of a witness". Any attempt to influence that witness or restrict his or her testimony is criminal subornation of perjury.
   8.3. Threaten to withhold service or in some way punish the affiant for submitting or insisting on including this mandatory affidavit. All such efforts constitute criminal witness tampering.
9. Invitation and time limit to rebut by recipient of this form: If the recipient disagrees about the civil status, domicile, or location of the estate of the decedent, you are required to provide court admissible evidence proving EXACTLY where the term "U.S. citizen",

"United States", and "State" as you used it in your communication includes CONSTITUTIONAL states of the Union or CONSTITUTIONAL "citizens" under the Fourteenth Amendment before the transaction that is related to this submission is completed. If you do not rebut the definitions appearing in this affidavit with court admissible evidence, then:

9.1. You constructively consent and stipulate to the definitions provided here both between us and between you and other parties who might be involved in this transaction.

9.2. You are equitably estopped and subject to laches in all future proceedings from contradicting the definitions herein provided.

10. Franchise agreement protecting commercial uses or abuses of this submission or any attachments: Any attempt to do any of the following shall constitute constructive irrevocable consent to the following franchise agreement by those accepting this submission or any of the attached forms or those third parties who use such information as legal evidence in any legal proceeding:

10.1. Commercially or financially benefit anyone OTHER than the affiant and his/her immediate blood relatives.

10.2. PRESUME any thing or class of thing is included in the STATUTORY definitions of "State", "United States", "U.S. citizen", or "national and citizen of the United States at birth" in 8 U.S.C. §1401.

10.3. Enforce any portion of the Internal Revenue Code or state revenue code against this FOREIGN estate. This includes any type of withholding, reporting, or compliance to these revenue codes using any information about or provided by the affiant or anyone associated with this transaction. Any attempt to do otherwise shall be treated as a criminal offense.

11. Violations of this affidavit and agreement: Any attempt to enforce any civil status of the decedent or affiant against the affiant is a criminal offense described in the following:

5.6.12.15 Rebutted Arguments Against this Memorandum

5.6.12.15.1 Argument is "frivolous"

ARGUMENT:

The argument is "frivolous".

REBUTTAL:

Stating that our arguments are "frivolous" without justifying such a determination with:

1. Legally admissible evidence signed under penalty of perjury or verified with an oath (as required by 26 U.S.C. §6065).
2. Deriving the evidence ONLY from the civil domicile of the accused party as required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). This means state law and NOT federal law.

. . .amounts to little more than accusing us of being "heretics" because we refuse to participate in the state-sponsored civil religion being run out of churches called "courts". Similar arguments apply to any other pejorative adjective label the courts might attempt to use that do not deal directly and completely with ALL the facts and arguments made herein on any given subject, such as:

1. "Ridiculous".
2. "Preposterous".
3. "Soundly rejected".
4. "Malicious".
5. "Irresponsible".
6. "Makes him/her a leech because he/she refuses to pay their 'fair share'".
7. "Manifestly erroneous".

All such adjectives do is prove that the judge is not acting in a judicial capacity as a neutral finder of facts and who reveals only facts, but who rather is:

1. Acting in a political rather than judicial capacity as a member of the Executive rather than Judicial branch. Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3 of the United States Constitution empower Congress and ONLY Congress to lay AND collect taxes. By undermining and interfering with attempts to stop unlawful collection enforcement, the judge is:
   1.1. Acting as a tax collector in the Executive Branch. Congress CANNOT lawfully delegate any function, including the tax collection function, to any other branch of the government, including the Judicial Branch.
   1.2. Violating the separation of powers doctrine by exercising Executive Branch functions.

> ". . .a power definitely assigned by the Constitution to one department can neither be surrendered nor delegated by that department, nor vested by statute in another department or agency. Compare Springer v. Philippine Islands,277 U.S. 189, 201, 202, 48 S.Ct. 480, 72 L.Ed. 845."
> [Williams v. U.S., 289 U.S. 553, 53 S.Ct. 751 (1933)]

> "It may be stated then, as a general rule inherent in the American constitutional system, that, unless otherwise expressly provided or incidental to the powers conferred, the Legislature cannot exercise either executive or judicial power; the executive cannot exercise either legislative or [277 U.S. 189, 202] judicial power; the judiciary cannot exercise either executive or legislative power. The existence in the various Constitutions of occasional provisions expressly giving to one of the departments powers which by their nature otherwise would fall within the general scope of the authority of another department emphasizes, rather than casts doubt upon, the generally inviolate character of this basic rule."
> [Springer v. Government of the Philippines, 277 U.S. 189 (1928)]

   1.3. Acting as a federal employment recruiter by illegally compelling private parties protected by the Constitution to become "public officers" within the government without compensation and often without their consent or even knowledge.
   1.4. Engaging in conversion in violation of 18 U.S.C. §654, whereby he is converting private property to a public use, a public purpose, and a public office without the consent of the owner and in violation of the Fifth Amendment takings clause.

> "Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights,-'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;' and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property [or income] which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit [e.g. SOCIAL SECURITY, Medicare, and every other public "benefit"]; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation."

The above rules are summarized below:

Table 5-71: Rules for converting private property to a public use or a public office

1	The owner of property justly acquired enjoys full and exclusive use and control over the property. This right includes the right to exclude government uses or ownership of said property.	Yes
2	He may not use the property to injure the equal rights of his neighbor. For instance, when you murder someone, the government can take your liberty and labor from you by putting you in jail or your life from you by instituting the death penalty against you. Both your life and your labor are "property". Therefore, the basis for the "taking" was violation of the equal rights of a fellow sovereign "neighbor".	No
3	He cannot be compelled or required to use it to "benefit" his neighbor. That means he cannot be compelled to donate the property to any franchise that would "benefit" his neighbor such as Social Security, Medicare, etc.	Yes
4	If he donates it to a public use, he gives the public the right to control that use.	Yes
5	Whenever the public needs require, the public may take it without his consent upon payment of due compensation. E.g. "eminent domain".	No

2. Entertaining "political questions" in violation of the separation of powers doctrine.
3. Abusing legal process to terrorize, discredit, and enslave the litigant in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1589(3).

> (3) by means of the abuse or threatened abuse of law or the legal process [against an innocent "nontaxpayer"],
> shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both. If death results from the violation of this section, or if the violation includes kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap, aggravated sexual abuse or the attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill, the defendant shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for any term of years or life, or both.

4. Obstructing justice due to people under the court's care and protection.
5. Not dealing directly with the issues at hand because doing so would jeopardize the CRIMINAL flow of plunder into his checking account.

Thank you for telling us that our arguments are truthful, accurate, and consistent with prevailing law and that we are right.

1. The courts have consistently held that you can't rely on anything the IRS says. See: http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm
2. The IRS website says you can't rely on anything they print, including any publication or form. See Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.8:

> "IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position." [Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.8 (05-14-1999)]

3. The entire Internal Revenue Code is identified in 1 U.S.C. §204 as nothing more than simply a statutory "presumption". "prima facie evidence" means presumption. Presumptions are NOT evidence, nor may they lawfully be used as a SUBSTITUTE for evidence in a court of law:

> (1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests:
> *A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In such cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a party's due process and equal protection rights. [Vlandis v. Kline (1973) 412 U.S. 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2235; Cleveland Bed. of Ed. v. > This court has never treated a presumption as any form of evidence. See, e.g., A.C. Aukerman Co. v. R.L. Chaides Constr. Co., 960 F.2d. 1020, 1037 (Fed.Cir.1992) ("[A] presumption is not evidence."); see also Del Vecchio v. Bowers, 296 U.S. 280, 286, 56 S.Ct. 190, 193, 80 L.Ed. 229 (1935) ("[A presumption] cannot acquire the attribute of evidence in the claimant's favor."); New York Life Ins. Co. v. Gamer, 303 U.S. 161, 171, 58 S.Ct. 500, 503, 82 L.Ed. 726 (1938) ("[A] presumption is not evidence and may not be given weight as evidence."). Although a decision of this court, Jensen v. Brown, 19 F.3d. 1413, 1415 (Fed.Cir.1994), dealing with presumptions in VA law is cited for the contrary proposition, the Jensen court did not so decide.
> [Routen v. West, 142 F.3d. 1434 C.A.Fed.,1998]

4. The Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §6065 requires everything prepared under the authority of the code to be signed under penalty of perjury. Nothing coming from the IRS ever is, and therefore it is UNTRUSTWORTHY.
5. The Bible forbids Christians to presume anything and by implication, to treat presumptions as a basis for any kind of belief or inference.

> "But the person who does anything presumptuously, whether he is native-born or a stranger, that one brings reproach on the LORD, and he shall be cut off from among his people."
> [Numbers 15:30, Bible, NKJV]

For more information on what DOES constitute a reasonable belief about one's tax liabilities, see:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Even if the government tried to define what the word "frivolous" means, we aren't allowed by their own statements and publications to trust their definition. Consequently, we are compelled to provide a definition for every word we hear from the government in order to avoid the Christian sin of presumption, and our definition is that the word "frivolous" means truthful, accurate, and consistent with prevailing law. Our definition is required to appear in all of the following forms of communication with the government as a mandatory part of the SEDM Member Agreement, Form #01.001:

1. All pleadings filed in federal court. See Section

Federal Pleading/Motion/Petition Attachment, Litigation Tool #01.002 http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm

2. All discovery in court:

Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status Options, Form #10.003 http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm

3. All tax forms filed with the IRS. See Section 4 of the following:

Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The very purpose of law is to give reasonable notice to all parties concerned the conduct expected of them. Simply calling something "frivolous" without defining why it is defective using civil law deriving ONLY from the domicile of the accused party per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b):

1. Fails to give reasonable notice of the conduct expected and therefore falls short of the purpose of law and causes a violation of due process of law. See:

   Requirement for Reasonable Notice, Form #05.022
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. Unconstitutionally involves the courts in political matters. The abuse of the word by courts by refusing to identify reasons simply amounts to little more than a political statement and labels the speaker as a "heretic" who refuses to join the state-sponsored religion of socialism described below:

   Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. Proves that if a federal court makes this assertion, that it is not a true Article III constitutional court, but a franchise court established under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution. They are administering the "trade or business" franchise and do not fulfill the main purpose for the establishment of government, which is the protection of private rights. Instead, they have made a lucrative PRIVATE business out of DESTROYING your PRIVATE rights, and protecting and expanding federal property by converting private property into public property by illegally abusing presumption and word games. This is exhaustively proven with thousands of pages of evidence in the following document:

   What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.12.15.2 "trade or business" includes lots of activities other than simply a public office

ARGUMENT:

"Trade or business" includes lots of activities OTHER than simply a "public office". Look at U.S. v. American Bar Endowment, 477 U.S. 105, 106 S.Ct. 2426 (1986).

> In the Tax Reform Act of 1969, Pub.L. 91-172, 83 Stat. 487, Congress defined a "trade or business" as "any activity which is carried on for the production of income from the sale of goods or the performance of services," § 513(c). The Secretary of the Treasury has provided further clarification of that definition in Treas.Reg. § 1.513-1(b) (1985), which provides: "in general, any activity of [an exempt] organization which is carried on for the production of income and which otherwise possesses the characteristics required to constitute 'trade or business' within the meaning of section 162" is a trade or business for purposes of 26 U.S.C. §§ 511-513.FN1
> FN1. Section 162 permits a taxpayer to deduct "all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business." Undoubtedly due to the desirability of tax deductions, § 162 has spawned a rich and voluminous jurisprudence. The standard test for the existence of a trade or business for purposes of § 162 is whether the activity "was entered into with the dominant hope and intent of realizing a profit." Brannen v. Commissioner, 722 F.2d. 695, 704 (CA11 1984) (citation omitted). Thus several Courts of Appeals have adopted the "profit motive" test to determine whether an activity constitutes a trade or business for purposes of the unrelated business income tax. See Professional Insurance Agents of Michigan v. Commissioner, 726 F.2d. 1097 (CA6 1984); Carolinas Farm & Power Equipment Dealers v. United States, 699 F.2d. 167 (CA4 1983); Louisiana Credit Union League v. United States, 693 F.2d. 525 (CA5 1982).
> 2430 ABE's insurance program falls within the literal language of these definitions. ABE's activity is both "the sale of goods" and "the performance of services," and possesses the 111 general characteristics of a trade or business. Certainly the assembling of a group of better-than-average insurance risks, negotiating on their behalf with insurance companies, and administering a group policy are activities that can be-and are-provided by private commercial entities in order to make a profit. ABE itself earns considerable income from its program. Nevertheless, the Claims Court and Court of Appeals concluded that ABE does not carry out its insurance program in order to make a profit. The Claims Court relied on the former Court of Claims holding, in Disabled American Veterans v. United States, 650 F.2d. 1178, 1187 (1981), that an activity is a trade or business only if "operated in a competitive, commercial manner." See 4 Cl.Ct., at 409. Because ABE does not operate its insurance program in a competitive, commercial manner, the Claims Court decided, that program is not a trade or business. The Court of Appeals adopted this reasoning. 761 F.2d, at 1577.

REBUTTAL:

There is no limit to the NUMBER of activities or actions that a lawfully serving "public officer" can execute ON BEHALF of the government as an AGENT or INSTRUMENTALITY of the government, and the actions described above are certainly included. HOWEVER, none of those actions can or do fall within the purview of a statutory "trade or business" (26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26)) or are subject to the government jurisdiction unless and until:

1. The actions are executed by a public officer lawfully elected or appointed into public office.
2. There is evidence on the record of a lawful appointment or election of the officer INTO office.
3. The public officer EXPRESSLY CONSENTED to lawfully occupy said office. Third party false information returns cannot unilaterally "elect" anyone to a public office.
4. There is proof of the record that the public officer is serving in the only place they are EXPRESSLY authorized by statute to serve per 4 U.S.C. §72.
5. There is evidence on the record of the proceeding that the owner of the property subject to tax CONSENTED to convert his otherwise PRIVATE property into a public use, public purpose, and/or public office BEFORE it can be taxed or regulated by the government. Otherwise, it is CONCLUSIVELY PRESUMD to be private property not subject to government since it was not used to injure anyone with.

The American Bar Endowment consented to be a public officer and therefore "taxpayer" by invoking the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitles A through C franchise and availing themselves of its "benefits", or by being a federal and not state corporation and creation and instrumentality of the national government.

To simply PRESUME that otherwise PRIVATE property and PRIVATE rights are connected with a PUBLIC OFFICE without the consent of the owner and without just compensation is an unconstitutional taking in violation of the Fifth Amendment.

5.6.12.16 Other important implications of the scam

Now that we completely understand how Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A works as an excise tax upon a voluntary and avoidable taxable activity called a "trade or business" within the statutory but not constitutional "United States" (federal territory), this explains the reason why proponents of the 861 Position described in section 5.7.5 later have been so vehemently hated and attacked by the government and the IRS. What they are doing, in most cases without even realizing it, is using the regulation at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1) to draw attention to the fact that the federal income tax is in fact an excise tax, and that the "taxable activities" are all enumerated individually in this regulation and nowhere else in either the I.R.C. or the Treasury

Regulations. This regulation also happens to be the only regulation that describes exactly how to apply earnings from each enumerated excise "taxable activity" to the process of computing one's tax liability. Is it any surprise that the government doesn't want evidence like this in the hands of people? This interferes with their "voluntary compliance" efforts and exposes their willful and malicious fraud for what it is, and this is why they don't like it. This observation is the reason why most of the helpful examples contained within this regulation have been systematically removed over the years: to prevent people from correctly concluding that they aren't engaged in foreign commerce or public office and therefore don't owe the government any money.

Unfortunately, proponents of the 861 Position such as Larken Rose and those before him such as Thurston Bell fail to fully comprehend how they fit into this carefully crafted legal deception, fail to understand the nature of federal jurisdiction, and fail to fully understand that a "code" which only applies to those who volunteer to become engaged in a "trade or business" doesn't apply to them if they choose not to volunteer. They have spent so much time looking at the trees that they forgot about the forest and are being maliciously persecuted by the IRS mainly because of this monumental oversight. They don't understand that the I.R.C. was not enacted into positive law and in fact constitutes essentially a voluntary contract. This is not intended as a personal criticism by any means, but simply a realistic observation intended to help keep you out of trouble. Those who choose not to "sign" or consent to the contract by submitting the W-4 or filing a 1040 form with a nonzero "income" can have no legal liabilities under the code and cannot be described as "taxpayers" who are subject to it. Larken Rose thinks the "code" is "law" or "public law" for everyone, but in fact it is "private law" that is only "law" for "taxpayers", all of whom have consented to it in one way or another at some point in time. See the following free memorandum of law which proves this point:

5.6.12.17 Conclusions and summary

This section summarizes everything we learned in this article and also ties this information in with everything else found on this website:

1. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A describes an excise tax upon a privileged activity called a "trade or business". All excise taxes involve franchises of one form or another and all franchises make those who participate into officers, agents, and instrumentalities of the government that granted the franchise. See:
   > Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
   > http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
2. A "trade or business" is statutorily defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office". A "public office" consists of employment or agency of the federal government in carrying out the sovereign and lawfully authorized functions of the government.
3. Those engaged in a "trade or business" are acting in a representative capacity as "public officers", and as such, take on the legal character of the U.S. government, who they represent in accordance with Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). All corporations are "citizens" under the laws they were created. The U.S. government is statutorily defined as a "federal corporation" in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). Therefore, those engaged in a "trade or business", while on official duty, become statutory "U.S. citizens", regardless of what they started out as.
4. 4 U.S.C. §72 requires that all public offices shall be exercised in the District of Columbia and NOT elsewhere except as expressly provided by law.

   > TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 3 > § 72
   > § 72. Public offices; at seat of Government
   > All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law.

5. All income taxes are based on domicile. Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954). Therefore, Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A may only lawfully be imposed or enforced against persons domiciled in the District of Columbia. See:
   > Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Family Guardian Fellowship
   > http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/DomicileBasisForTaxation.htm

6. Since Congress has not created and cannot lawfully create "public offices" within any state of the Union, then it cannot impose or enforce Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A there.

> "Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee. But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."
> [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

7. All federal identifying numbers, such as SSN's, TINs, and EINs, are government property. 20 C.F.R. §422.103(d). As such, anything you connect them with, including your labor, becomes "private property donated to a public use to procure the benefits of a federal franchise" and connects said property to a "trade or business". If you don't want to connect your labor or your property to a "public use" and a "public office", then you must rescind and remove all federal identifying numbers from it in accordance with:
   7.1. Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
   7.2. Following the withholding procedures in the following book:
   Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers, Form #09.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
8. No one can lawfully connect your private property, such as your labor or financial assets, to a "public office" or a "public use" without your consent. The very nature of the word "property" implies exclusive use and control, which implies the right to exclude control over it by anyone but you. Therefore, any third party who files a false information return that connects your earnings or your labor to a "public office" or a "public use" without your explicit consent is violating the following laws and others not mentioned:
   8.1. 26 U.S.C. §7434: Civil damages for fraudulent filing of information returns
   8.2. 26 U.S.C. §7206: Fraud and false statements
   8.3. 26 U.S.C. §7207: Fraudulent returns, statements, or other documents
   8.4. 18 U.S.C. §912: Impersonating a public officer.
   8.5. 18 U.S.C. §4: Misprision of felony in connection with all the above.
   8.6. 18 U.S.C. §654: Officer or employee of the United States converting property of another.
9. Everything that goes on an IRS Form 1040 represents government revenue in connection with a "trade or business" because:
   9.1. The IRS Form 1040 is for the tax imposed in 26 U.S.C. §1.
   9.2. Everything on the IRS Form 1040 is subject to deductions authorized under 26 U.S.C. §162 and the only income subject to such deductions, according to 26 U.S.C. §162 is "trade or business" income.
   9.3. 26 U.S.C. §871(b)(2) says that all taxes imposed in section 1 are connected with a "trade or business".
10. Those not engaged in a "trade or business" cannot truthfully file an IRS Form 1040. The only proper form for them to file is the IRS Form 1040NR, because this is the only form that includes a block for earnings not connected with a "trade or business".
11. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041, all information returns, such as IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, 1099, K-1, etc have the effect of connecting the revenue in question to a taxable activity and creating a "prima facie presumption" that the target of the information return is engaged in a "trade or business". Those who are not engaged in a "trade or business" need to rebut this false information return by filing corrected information returns so that they are not incorrectly compelled to associate with federal employment, agency, and contracts in violation of the First Amendment prohibition of compelled association.
12. A "public office" can only be created through the operation of private/special/contract law and your voluntary consent. If you don't consent to act as a public officer and do all the following, then you can't earn "gross income". The process of refusing to consent to engage in contacts and "public office" with the government is effected by:

12.1. Not taking any deductions or credits on a tax return. Only those engaged in a "trade or business" may take deductions and credits, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §§1, 32, and 162.

12.2. Not signing and submitting an IRS Form W-4 to your private employer. Since the W-4 causes a W-2 to be filed and the W-2 is an information return, only those engaged in a "trade or business" can fill out and sign the W-4. Private employers cannot lawfully compel signing or submitting of a W-4 for a person who is not engaged in a "trade or business" and if they do, they are engaged in theft and extortion. See:

> Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers, Family Guardian Fellowship
> http://famguardian.org/Publications/FedStateWHOptions/FedStateWHOptions.pdf

12.3. Challenging and rebutting all false information returns that connect you to a "trade or business". See:

12.3.1. Correcting Erroneous Information Returns, Form #04.001

> Demand for Verified Evidence of "Trade or Business" Activity: Currency Transaction Report (CTR), Form #04.008
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

12.5. Opening your financial accounts as a "non-resident non-person" instead of a "U.S. Person", and do so without a Social Security Number or TIN. See:

> About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202, Section 8
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

12.6. Terminating Social Security participation. The Social Security Act of 1935, Title 8, section 801 says that you agree to participate in payroll withholding for the income tax if you also participate in Social Security. See the following for the process of doing this:

> Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Family Guardian Fellowship
> http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/SSTrustIndenture.pdf

12.7. Properly declaring your citizenship status on government forms as a constitutional citizen but not a statutory citizen. This will ensure that your domicile is not presumed to be in the "United States" federal government. See:

12.7.1. Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

12.7.2. Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

13. Even people who are domiciled in the District of Columbia, unless they work or have contracts with the national government and thereby are engaged in a "public office", do not earn "gross income" under I.R.C., Subtitle A. The only exception to this is found in 26 U.S.C. §871(a).

14. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3), all earnings from within the "United States", which means "sources within the United States" are presumed to be connected with a "trade or business". Consequently, the term "United States" within the Internal Revenue Code, Section 7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) really implies employment, agency, or contracts within the United States national government, and does not mean or imply a geographical area.

15. The use of a Taxpayer Identification Number creates a prima facie presumption that the person using it is engaged in a "trade or business". You can't use a TIN unless you are engaged in a "trade or business".

16. Pursuant to 31 C.F.R. §103.30(d)(2), Currency Transaction Reports (CTRs), such as IRS Form 8300, Treasury form 8300, may only be filled out against persons engaged in a "trade or business". It is unlawful to fill out these forms against persons who are not engaged in a "trade or business". If you are not engaged in a "trade or business" and someone tries to incorrectly fill out this form against you, present the following form:

> Demand for Verified Evidence of "Trade or Business" Activity: Information Return, Form #04.007
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

17. Nonresident aliens not engaged in a "trade or business" as defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1(b)(i) cannot earn:
    17.1. "Self-employment income", in accordance with 26 U.S.C. §1402.
    17.2. "personal services" income, in accordance with 26 C.F.R. §1.469-9 and 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C)(i). Note that "compensation for personal services" is the only type of labor taxable under 26 U.S.C. §61(a)(1).
    17.3. "wages" in connection with any work performed outside the "United States" (government), in accordance with 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(6)-1
    17.4. "gross income" in connection with all compensation not paid in cash, in accordance with 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(11)-1. In other words, if you are paid in goods and not cash, such paying in gold or silver, you can't earn "gross income" even if you are engaged in a "trade or business".
18. The IRS wants to deceive you into thinking that I.R.C., Subtitle A describes a direct, unapportioned tax instead of an indirect excise tax upon avoidable privileges connected with a "public office". They willfully perpetuate this illusion in order to keep you from searching for ways to avoid the activity and the taxes associated with the privileged activity. That is why:
    18.1. None of their publications precisely define what a "trade or business" is. The one that comes closest is Publication 54, but even it doesn't do the subject justice.
    18.2. When you ask them about what a "trade or business" is, they won't tell you.
    18.3. When you show them the definition of "trade or business" from 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), they will try to argue that the word doesn't mean what it says there and that the use of the word "includes" causes the word to mean not what the law says, but whatever they WANT it to mean. This is NOT how law works, folks! See:

    > Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014
    > http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

19. The federal courts are helping the IRS in the above cover-up. We have been unable to locate a single court case that discusses the information contained in this article. The federal courts are making cases that bring it up "unpublished" so that slaves living on the federal plantation will not be able to remove their chains and go free. They are "accessories after the fact" to Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organization crimes against humanity, in violation of Title 18, Part 1, Chapter 5 and 18 U.S.C. §3. See: http://nonpublication.com. In this regard, the courts have become "predators" rather than "protectors".
20. Most IRS Forms illegally create false presumptions about your status that compel you to associate with the "trade or business" activity and become a "taxpayer". See the following article about this SCAM:

    > Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
    > http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

    IRS very deliberately DOES NOT provide any forms or instructions that help "nontaxpayers" protect their status or prevent becoming the target of unlawful enforcement actions. The best way to avoid these false presumptions is to do the following, in descending order of preference:
    20.1. Use standard IRS Forms and attach the following form to the IRS Form according to the instructions included with the form:

    > Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201
    > http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

    20.2. Use AMENDED IRS Forms found on the following page.
    http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSFormsPubs.htm
    20.3. Modify existing IRS Forms yourself either electronically or using a pen before you sign it, according to the instruction in the link above, section 1.
21. Anyone who presumes or assumes you are a "taxpayer" under I.R.C., Subtitle A absent authenticated, court-admissible evidence is:
    21.1. Assuming you work for the government as an agent, officer, contractor, or employee engaged in a "public office".
    21.2. Asserting "eminent domain" over your private labor and property, which is illegal unless you receive "just compensation" pursuant to the requirements of the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution.
    21.3. Engaging in slavery and involuntary servitude in criminal violation of the Thirteenth Amendment, 42 U.S.C. §1994, and 18 U.S.C. §1581 if you do not explicitly and voluntarily personally consent to work for the government without compensation.
    21.4. Depriving you of life, liberty, and property in the process of making the presumption, which is unconstitutional.

> (1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests: *A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. 5.6.12.18 Further study

Understanding the "trade or business" scam fits together all the pieces of the puzzle scattered throughout this chapter and explains them in such a cohesive way that it is impossible to argue with. It is far more than simply a "theory", but a fact you can verify yourself by reading the IRS Publications, the code, the Constitution, and the Treasury Regulations. All of them agree with the content of this section. If you would like to learn more about the "trade of business" scam, a whole very interesting and well-researched book has been written on this subject that we highly recommend. It's a short book being only 232 pages, so it is sure to keep your attention:

5.6.13 The Non-Resident Non-Person Position

The following subsections merely introduce the main approach towards taxation and jurisdiction taken by members of this ministry. If you would like a full, comprehensive treatment, we refer you to the following excellent memorandum on how to implement and defend this position in detail:

Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.13.1 Introduction[268]

The following subsections describe the foundation of the approach towards sovereignty, jurisdiction, and taxation which is taken by Members of this ministry called the Non-Resident Non-Person Position.

The concepts we will teach in the document do apply to other CIVIL contexts, such as franchises and driver's licensing. When used in those contexts, one must instead refer to themselves simply as a "non-resident non-person" and legislatively foreign but not a statutory or constitutional "alien" in relation to the government because not an officer or public officer within the government. All instances of "alien" we have found refer to foreign nationals, not those born or naturalized in either the United States of America (states of the Union) or federal territory.

5.6.13.1.1 Definition

The Non-Resident Non-Person Position describes the approach towards political and legal relations between a specific government and those who:

1. Consent to no civil domicile within that government.
2. Consent to no government franchises and therefore do not waive their sovereignty or sovereign immunity.
   - 2.1. All those who participate in such franchises are treated as agents or officers of the government. They are sometimes called "public officers".
   - 2.2. The First Commandment of the Ten Commandments forbids Christians from "serving" other gods. This prohibition also includes serving a government as a public officer IF AND ONLY IF it has superior or supernatural rights in relation to any and every human being. Such a superior relationship is called "idolatry" in religious jargon and it is the worst sin in the Bible.
3. Insist on perfect equality under the law between the PEOPLE and the government tasked with protecting them.
4. Insist that any attempt by a government to impose any kind of civil duty or obligation or penalty against them under the authority of the civil statutory (franchise) codes is slavery and a tort.
   - 4.1. The ONLY type of government force or enforcement that is just or righteous is that which restores the damage that they have done to another equal sovereign AFTER said injury has been proven to exist with evidence.
   - 4.2. Law can only operate justly when it is constrained to providing remedies for demonstrated injuries AFTER they occur. It cannot operate in a PREVENTIVE mode BEFORE the injury occurs because there is no injury. In other words, those who seek to prevent future conduct rather than remedy past conduct lack "standing" in a court of common law, and therefore, legislation cannot establish such standing without at least the consent of those it might affect, because it requires a surrender of constitutional rights without compensation and therefore is a violation of due process.

5. Insist on the protections of ONLY the Bill of Rights and the common law and NOT the civil statutory franchise codes.
6. Insist on perfect separation between what is PUBLIC and what is PRIVATE. Control or ownership of PRIVATE property should not be allowed to be shared with any government. This means that:
   6.1. The government cannot lawfully acquire control over exclusively private property.
   6.2. All property is PRESUMED to be PRIVATE until the government satisfies the burden of proving WITH EVIDENCE that the owner CONSENSUALLY, VOLUNTARILY, and IN WRITING consented to convert the property to a public use, public purpose, or public office.
   6.3. All PUBLIC uses of otherwise PRIVATE property should be allowed to be unilaterally converted back to exclusively PRIVATE without the consent of the government. Otherwise, governments will simply refuse their consent and make the original owners into perpetual slaves.
7. Insist that anything not expressly appearing in the civil statutory definitions of terms is PURPOSEFULLY excluded and therefore beyond the jurisdiction of the government per the rules of statutory construction. This requirement is the FOUNDATION of limited government of delegated powers itself described in the Ninth and Tenth Amendments:

> "When a statute includes an explicit definition, we must follow that definition, even if it varies from that term's ordinary meaning. Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484-485 (1987) ("It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term"); Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. at 392-393, n. 10 ("As a rule, `a definition which declares what a term "means" . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated'"); Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lenroot, 323 U.S. 490, 502 (1945) ; Fox v. Standard Oil Co. of N.J., 294 U.S. 87, 95-96 (1935) (Cardozo, J.); see also 2A N. Singer, Sutherland on Statutes and Statutory Construction § 47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute, read "as a whole," post at 998 [530 U.S. 943] (THOMAS, J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition. That definition does not include the Attorney General's restriction -- "the child up to the head." Its words, "substantial portion," indicate the contrary."

8. Insist on the right to be left alone by government, which is the legal definition of "justice" itself:

> Justice, as a moral habit, is that tendency of the will and mode of conduct which refrains from disturbing the lives and interests of others, and, as far as possible, hinders such interference on the part of others. This virtue springs from the individual's respect for his fellows as ends in themselves and as his co equals. The different spheres of interests may be roughly classified as follows: body and life; the family, or the extended individual life; property, or the totality of the instruments of action; honor, or the ideal existence; and finally freedom, or the possibility of fashioning one's life as an end in itself. The law defends these different spheres, thus giving rise to a corresponding number of spheres of rights, each being protected by a prohibition. . . . To violate the rights, to interfere with the interests of others, is injustice. All injustice is ultimately directed against the life of the neighbor; it is an open avowal that the latter is not an end in itself, having the same value as the individual's own life. The general formula of the duty of justice may therefore be stated as follows: Do no wrong yourself, and permit no wrong to be done, so far as lies in your power; or, expressed positively: Respect and protect the right.*
> [Readings on the History and System of Common Law, Second Edition, 1925, Roscoe Pound, p. 2]

9. Insist that any attempt to offer or enforce civil franchises within a constitutional state of the Union is a tort and an invasion within the meaning of Article 4, Section 4 of the United States constitution. Franchises can only be offered on federal territory or a constitutional violation, an injustice, and a commercial invasion has occurred.
10. Insist on the separation of powers between the states and federal government that is the foundation of the United States Constitution and the foundation of the protection of our PRIVATE rights and liberties.

> "We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S. Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 458 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid.
> [U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995)]

The term "Non-Resident Non-Person Position" is a term we developed. We have not seen it mentioned anywhere else, but we wanted to give it a name so that people can refer to it. The position does NOT advocate that people should have any civil status under the statutory codes of any government and therefore does not advocate that people be either "nonresident aliens" or "nonresident alien individuals".

5.6.13.1.2 Domicile or residence and not nationality is the basis for civil statutory jurisdiction and tax liability, and nonresidents have no domicile and therefore are not subject

The Non-Resident Non-Person Position is easier and simpler to defend in court than most other arguments about civil jurisdiction and taxation. It revolves around the following simple concepts:

1. Civil statutory jurisdiction and tax liability originate from one's choice of legal domicile and the obligation to pay for "protection" that attaches to that domicile:

> "domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges. "
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

> *"Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides,* the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter*. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."*
> [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

2. Domicile is not just where you PHYSICALLY LIVE, but where you WANT TO LIVE and where you CONSENT TO LIVE AND BE CIVILLY PROTECTED. No one can dictate what you consent to and therefore no one can lawfully choose your domicile and therefore the place where you are a STATUTORY "taxpayer" EXCEPT you. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. In America, there are TWO separate and distinct jurisdictions one may have a domicile within, and only one of the two is subject to federal income taxation:
   3.1. Federal territory. Called the "United States" in federal statutes.
   3.2. States of the Union. Legislatively foreign states not subject to federal jurisdiction.

> "It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to its objects, but extending all over the Union: the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these authorities was the law in question passed?"
> [Cohens v. Virginia, 19 U.S. 264, 6 Wheat. 265, 5 L.Ed. 257 (1821)]

4. Whether one is "foreign" or "alien" from a legislative perspective is determined by their civil DOMICILE, and NOT their NATIONALITY. One can be a national of the country United States by being born in a state of the Union, and yet be the following relative to the jurisdiction of the national government if domiciled outside of federal territory:
   4.1. A statutory "non-resident non-person" if not engaged in a public office.
   4.2. A statutory "nonresident alien" (per 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)) if engaged in a public office. In this case, the OFFICE is the legal "person" that has a domicile on federal territory while the OFFICER filling said office has legislatively foreign domicile.
5. Those who are neither domiciled on federal territory nor representing an entity domiciled there are not subject to federal statutory civil law or income taxation as confirmed by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). These people are called any of the following in relation to the federal/national government:
   5.1. Statutory "non-resident non-persons"
   5.2. "nonresidents".

5.3. "transient foreigners".
5.4. "sojourners".
5.5. "stateless" in relation to national jurisdiction.

6. The U.S. Supreme Court has, in fact, held that those WITHOUT a domicile within a jurisdiction and who are therefore nonresidents and who become the target of tax enforcement by a legislatively "foreign" jurisdiction that they are not domiciled within are the victims of EXTORTION, and possibly even crime:

> "The power of taxation, indispensable to the existence of every civilized government, is exercised upon the assumption of an equivalent rendered to the taxpayer in the protection of his person and property, in adding to the value of such property, or in the creation and maintenance of public conveniences in which he shares -- such, for instance, as roads, bridges, sidewalks, pavements, and schools for the education of his children. If the taxing power be in no position to render these services, or otherwise to benefit the person or property taxed, and such property be wholly within the taxing power of another state, to which it may be said to owe an allegiance, and to which it looks for protection, the taxation of such property within the domicil of the owner partakes rather of the nature of an extortion than a tax, and has been repeatedly held by this Court to be beyond the power of the legislature, and a taking of property without due process of law. Railroad Company v. Jackson, 7 Wall. 262; State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300; Tappan v. Merchants' National Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 499; Delaware &c. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U.S. 341, 358. In Chicago &c. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U.S. 226, it was held, after full consideration, that the taking of private property [199 U.S. 203] without compensation was a denial of due process within the Fourteenth Amendment. See also Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U.S. 97, 102; Missouri Pacific Railway v. Nebraska, 164 U.S. 403, 417; Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 509, 519."
> [Union Refrigerator Transit Company v. Kentucky, 199 U.S. 194 (1905)]

7. The term "United States" as used both in the IRS Publications and the Internal Revenue Code:
   7.1. Is used in TWO contexts:
      7.1.1. The GOVERNMENT corporation; OR
      7.1.2. Geographical sense, meaning federal territories and possessions and EXCLUDING states of the Union.
   7.2. Is geographically defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) to mean federal territory that is no part of the exclusive jurisdiction of any constitutional state of the Union. We call this area the "federal United States" or the "federal zone" throughout this book.
   7.3. Is typically NOT used in its geographic sense when referring to "sources within the United States", but rather in the GOVERNMENT sense, where "United States" means the government corporation rather than a geographic place. In that sense, the geographical definitions 26 U.S.C. §7701 are a red herring to distract attention away from the REAL meaning of the term.

   Consequently, the term "internal" as used within the phrase "INTERNAL revenue code" or "INTERNAL revenue service" refers to THE U.S. GOVERNMENT PUBLIC CORPORATION and does not and cannot include sources internal to any state of the Union or government of any state of the Union.
8. States of the Union are legislatively but not constitutionally "foreign" and "alien" with respect to federal legislative jurisdiction for the vast majority of subject matters, including income taxation. Federal jurisdiction within states of the Union is limited to the following, meaning that for every other subject matter, people domiciled in states of the Union are legislatively "foreign" and "alien":
   8.1. Postal fraud. See Article 1, Section 8, Clause 7 of the U.S. Constitution..
   8.2. Counterfeiting under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 6 of the U.S. Constitution.
   8.3. Treason under Article 4, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution.
   8.4. Interstate commercial crimes under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution.
   8.5. Jurisdiction over CONSTITUTIONAL aliens everywhere within the Union, to include states of the Union, for the purposes of immigration ONLY. See Chae Chan Ping v. U.S., 130 U.S. 581 (1889), Kleindienst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753 (1972). This source of jurisdiction is the reason that all "taxpayers" are aliens and not "citizens". See 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).
   8.6. Slavery, involuntary servitude, or peonage under the Thirteenth Amendment, 42 U.S.C. §1994, 18 U.S.C. §1581. and 18 U.S.C. §1589(3).

> "Other authorities to the same effect might be cited. It is not open to doubt that Congress may enforce the Thirteenth Amendment by direct legislation, punishing the holding of a person in slavery or in involuntary servitude except as a punishment for a crime. In the exercise of that power Congress has enacted these sections denouncing peonage, and punishing one who holds another in that condition of involuntary servitude. This legislation is not limited to the territories or other parts of the strictly national domain, but is operative in the states and wherever the sovereignty of the United States extends. We entertain no doubt of the validity of this legislation, or of its applicability to the case of any person holding another in a state of peonage, and this whether there be municipal ordinance or state law sanctioning such holding. It operates directly on every citizen of the Republic, wherever his residence may be."

[Clyatt v. U.S., 197 U.S. 207 (1905)]

9. The Internal Revenue Code describes actually two separate excise taxes for two mutually exclusive legislative jurisdictions:
   9.1. A municipal tax upon public offices domiciled on federal territory (the statutory but not constitutional "United States") under Subtitles A, B, and C per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17.
   9.2. An income tax upon foreign commerce within states of the Union under Subtitle D.
10. Anyone who is neither a statutory "U.S. citizen" (domiciled in the District of Columbia or a U.S. territory and born in any state of the Union or federal territory) pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 or a resident (alien) domiciled in the federal zone pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) is a "nonresident alien" under the I.R.C.
11. Those who are "nonresident aliens" are "nonresident" and therefore not within the civil legislative jurisdiction of almost all federal statutory law and are "nontaxpayers" under the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A in most cases. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §871, the only thing they have to pay income taxes on are earnings from "within the U.S. government". The term "sources within the United States" as used throughout the I.R.C. really means WITHINT THE U.S. GOVERNMENT, and not the geographical United States mentioned in the United States constitution. These "sources within the United States" include:
    11.1. Social security benefits.
    11.2. Distributions from Foreign Sales Corporations (FSCs) registered within the District of Columbia.
    11.3. Earnings from investments and real property on federal territory.
12. Important facts about "nonresidents":
    12.1. Those born within and domiciled within a state of the Union are:
        12.1.1. "nationals" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
        12.1.2. Not statutory "U.S. citizens" or "citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or any provision of the Internal Revenue Code.
        12.1.3. "non-resident non-persons" because not domiciled on federal territory and not legally connected to the national government.
        12.1.4. Not statutory "individuals", "persons", or "nonresident alien individuals" unless they are filling a public office in the national government.[269]
    12.2. Statutory "nonresident aliens" are a NOT a subset of statutory "aliens", but an entirely separate class.
    12.3. Only by exercising your right to contract with a foreign jurisdiction can you acquire a civil status under the laws of that jurisdiction. When one exercise this right to contract, the office or agency they acquire under the contract becomes "domestic" and they become surety for the office or "person" they are representing under said contract. An example of such agency is a public office in the national government created by a lawful election or appointment. That agency is the ONLY lawful subject of any and all I.R.C. Subtitles A and C income taxation.

[269] The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed this when they held:

> "Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98, was an action of trespass or, as appears by the original record, replevin, brought in the circuit court for the District of Columbia to try the right of Congress to impose a direct tax for general purposes on that District. 3 Stat. at L. 216, chap. 60. It was insisted that Congress could act in a double capacity: in one as legislating [182 U.S. 244, 260] for the states; in the other as a local legislature for the District of Columbia. In the latter character, it was admitted that the power of levying direct taxes might be exercised, but for District purposes only, as a state legislature might tax for state purposes; but that it could not legislate for the District under art. 1, 8, giving to Congress the power 'to lay and collect taxes, imposts, and excises,' which 'shall be uniform throughout the United States,' inasmuch as the District was no part of the United States [described in the Constitution]. It was held that the grant of this power was a general one without limitation as to place, and consequently extended to all places over which the government extends; and that it extended to the District of Columbia as a constituent part of the United States. The fact that art. 1 , 2, declares that 'representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states . . . according to their respective numbers' furnished a standard by which taxes were apportioned, but not to exempt any part of the country from their operation. 'The words used do not mean that direct taxes shall be imposed on states only which are represented, or shall be apportioned to representatives; but that direct taxation, in its application to states, shall be apportioned to numbers*.' That art. 1, 9, 4, declaring that direct taxes shall be laid in proportion to the census, was applicable to the District of Columbia, 'and will enable Congress to apportion on it its just and equal share of the burden, with the same accuracy as on the respective states. If the tax be laid in this proportion, it is within the very words of the restriction. It is a tax in proportion to the census or enumeration referred to.' It was further held that the words of the 9th section did not 'in terms require that the system of direct taxation, when resorted to, shall be extended to the territories, as the words of the 2d section require that it shall be extended to all the states. They therefore may, without violence, be understood to give a rule when the territories shall be taxed, without imposing the necessity of taxing them.'"*
> [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

13. All "taxpayers" within the I.R.C. Subtitles A and C are STATUTORY "aliens" lawfully engaged in a "trade or business", meaning a "public office" in the U.S. government pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) .
    13.1. The term "individual" does not include statutory "citizens" or "nationals" pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).
    13.2. Statutory "U.S. citizens" can be statutory "taxpayers" only in the case where they are abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(3) and avail themselves of the "benefits" of a tax treaty with the foreign country they are in. In that capacity, they interface to the foreign country as an "alien" and therefore a "taxpayer" and an "individual". That is why both "citizens" and "residents" are grouped together under 26 U.S.C. §911: Because they are both aliens when abroad in relation to the country they are in.
    13.3. It is unlawful for CONSTITUTIONAL aliens to engage in public offices in the government. Therefore, it is technically an impossibility for a constitutional alien to be a statutory "taxpayer". This is an unavoidable consequence of the fact that the income tax is a public officer kickback program disguised to look like a legitimate income tax to fool everyone.

> §74. Aliens cannot hold Office. - - It is a general principle that an alien can not hold a public office. In all independent popular governments, as is said by Chief Justice Dixon of Wisconsin, "it is an acknowledged principle, which lies at the very foundation, and the enforcement of which needs neither the aid of statutory nor constitutional enactments or restrictions, that the government is instituted by the citizens for their liberty and protection, and that it is to be administered, and its powers and functions exercised only by them and through their agency."
> In accordance with this principle it is held that an alien can not hold the office of sheriff.[2]

See:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a "Public Officer" for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

14. Those who file "resident" tax forms such as IRS Form 1040 and who are domiciled within a constitutional but not statutory state of the Union are:
    14.1. Indirectly making a voluntary "election" to be treated as a "resident" (alien) by the national government effectively domiciled on federal territory because representing an office so domiciled.
    14.2. Indirectly and unilaterally "electing" themselves into a public office in the U.S. government in criminal violation of the following, because all statutory "taxpayers" are public offices in the U.S. government:
        14.2.1. 18 U.S.C. §912.
        14.2.2. 18 U.S.C. §210.
        14.2.3. 18 U.S.C. §211.
    14.3. Availing themselves of the "benefits and protections" of the laws of the United States. The courts call this process "purposeful availment".
    14.4. Engaging in the equivalent of "contracting" under a franchise agreement. In law, all franchises are contracts.
    14.5. Waiving sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) , and agreeing to be treated as a "resident".
    14.6. Changing their status from "foreign" to "domestic" in relation to federal legislative jurisdiction.
    14.7. Violating the I.R.C. Subtitle A franchise agreement/contract if they are not human beings married to statutory "U.S. citizens". The only provision within the I.R.C. that expressly authorizes nonresidents to "elect" to be treated as "residents" is 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B) and 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h).

5.6.13.1.3 What the Non-Resident Non-Person Position is NOT

> *"For this is the will of God, that by doing good you may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men— as free, yet not using liberty as a cloak for vice, but as bondservants of God. Honor all people. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king."
> [1 Peter 2:13-17, Bible, NKJV]

Note that we DO NOT advocate any of the following flawed arguments or cognitive dissonance surrounding the term "non-resident non-person". Don't try to sabotage this pamphlet by making any of the following arguments without at LEAST providing court admissible evidence proving that any of the following are TRUE before you spout off your foolish mouth with idiotic, malicious, and unconstitutional presumptions founded upon your own legal ignorance:

1. That there is anything wrong, illegal, or criminal about the sovereignty possessed by those who advocate the Non-Resident Non-Person Position. See:

   Policy Document: Rebutted False Arguments About Sovereignty, Form #08.018
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. That those who advocate the position in this memorandum are lawless or anarchists. They are still subject to the common law and criminal but not penal laws. Sovereignty only affects civil obligations, not criminal obligations. Furthermore, the present government claims sovereignty and also claims that its powers are delegated by the people. You can't delegate what you don't personally have, so the people must be sovereign as well. The U.S. Supreme Court agrees with us on this subject. The following presentation proves that we are NOT anarchists under all law and expresses disapproval of those who take such a position:

   Policy Document: Problems with Atheistic Anarchism, Form #08.020
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. That those who advocate the position in this memorandum are elitists who are better than everyone else. The foundation of the common law is equality of rights of all under the law. Privileges and franchises such as the income tax destroy equality and replace it with inequality and privilege. We favor equality of treatment and rights (not privileges, but rights) as we prove in the following:

   Requirement for Equal Protection and Equal Treatment, Form #05.033
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. That there is no such thing as a statutory "non-person". All law is prima facie territorial. People present in China and domiciled there would, for instance, be civil "non-persons" because domicile IN THE UNITED STATES RATHER THAN CHINA is how they would acquire the civil status of "person" to begin with. The states of the Union are on equal footing from a civil statutory perspective to foreign countries in relation to jurisdiction of the national government and therefore the people in them, just like those in China, are "non-persons" under civil statutory law. We prove this in the following memorandum:

   Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5. That the PLACE one is "non-resident" to is the same both in the CONSTITUTION and the STATUTES of Congress. They are not. "United States" in the Constitution is mutually exclusive to and non-overlapping to the geographical term "United States" when used in ordinary acts of the national legislature. The specific place they are "non-resident" to is the federal zone and federal territory not within the exclusive jurisdiction of any CONSTITUTIONAL state of the Union.

6. That a "non-resident" is non-resident to BOTH the Constitution and the Bill of Rights AND "non-resident" to the civil statutory codes.
   6.1. There are TWO contexts for every legal term: CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY. Both of these contexts are mutually exclusive and non-overlapping geographically.
   6.2. In fact, one can be a CONSTITUTIONAL "Person" or "people" WITHOUT also being a statutory "person" or "individual".
   6.3. Domicile and residence are IRRELEVANT when one speaks of the protections of the CONSTITUTION. The Bill of Rights protects EVERYONE on land within constitutional states of the Union, not just "residents" or those who consent to become statutory "citizens" or "residents" in states of the Union. These protections, however, DO NOT constrain the government when dealing with those who are abroad, because they are not on said land. That is why it is called "the law of the land" in the Constitution.

> "It is locality that is determinative of the application of the Constitution, in such matters as judicial procedure, and not the status of the people who live in it."
> [Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922)]

7. That those who are "non-residents" under the laws of the national government are "non-residents" under state law as well. They are not, and this is a product of the separation of powers doctrine. See:

   Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.13.1.4 Biblical Basis for the Non-Resident Non-Person Position (NRNPP)

The Non-Resident Non-Person Position has extensive biblical foundations and qualifies as a "religious practice". The Bible identifies "non-residents" as "strangers", "pilgrims", or "foreigners". Most major figures in the Bible who were in fact following God's holy calling and acting out of obedience to His commands were asked by God to abandon a comfortable and complacent life to enter a foreign country and be strangers and foreigners there. These include:

1. Believers. In Eph. 2:19-22, Paul emphasizes that when we profess faith in God, we transition from being "foreign" to "domestic" in relation to Him and the Kingdom of Heaven. This implies that everyone who does NOT believe in God or obey his Commandments REMAINS a "foreigner", "stranger", and/or "alien":

> "Now, therefore, you are no longer strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God, having been built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief cornerstone, in whom the whole building, being fitted together, grows into a holy temple in the Lord, in whom you also are being built together for a dwelling place of God in the Spirit."
> [Eph. 2:19-22, Bible, NKJV]

2. Abraham. Hebrews 11:9. Abraham was called by God to pursue His promise by leaving a comfortable and rich life in Ur (now Iraq) and enter

> "By faith he dwelt in the land of promise as in a foreign country, dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise;"
> [Hebrews 11:9, Bible, NKJV]

3. Jesus.
   3.1. Matt. 8:16-22. When one of Christ's followers offered to become a disciple and follow Jesus, he was warned that the cost of discipleship was that he would "have no place to lay his head", meaning that he would have no domicile or home anywhere and therefore would be a "foreigner", "stranger", or "stateless person" everywhere with no political or legal bonds to any ruler or government. This, in fact, was the only way to ensure that the disciples could in fact speak truthfully and objectively and fearlessly to everyone about God: If they had nothing to lose.

> The Cost of Discipleship
> And when Jesus saw great multitudes about Him, He gave a command to depart to the other side. Then a certain scribe came and said to Him, "Teacher, I will follow You wherever You go."
> And Jesus said to him, "Foxes have holes and birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man has nowhere to lay His head."
> Then another of His disciples said to Him, "Lord, let me first go and bury my father."
> But Jesus said to him, "Follow Me, and let the dead bury their own dead."
> [Matt. 8:16-22, Bible, NKJV]

   3.2. Matt. 10:34-39. Christ said he came to bring division between believers and unbelievers, even within families. Those who are divided against each other are "foreign" or "alien" in relation to each other. To "take up the cross" is to become alien and foreign to all other causes, to profess exclusive allegiance to God even to the point of considering love and allegiance to family members subordinate and even unnecessary.

> Christ Brings Division
> "Do not think that I came to bring peace on earth. I did not come to bring peace but a sword. For I have come to 'set a man against his father, a daughter against her mother, and a daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law'; and 'a man's enemies will be those of his own household.' He who loves father or mother more than Me is not worthy of Me. And he who loves son or daughter more than Me is not worthy of Me. And he who does not take his cross and follow after Me is not worthy of Me. He who finds his life will lose it, and he who loses his life for My sake will find it.
> [Matt. 10:34-39, Bible, NKJV]

   3.3. Mark 3:35. Jesus said that the only members of His family are those who DO His commandments and not just talk about them. Hence, all those who aren't Christians and who don't regard the Bible as a law book automatically become "foreigners" and "aliens".

> "For whoever does the will of God is My brother and My sister and mother."
> [Jesus, in Mark 3:35, NKJV]

4. Moses. When God called Moses to rescue the Israelites from bondage to Pharaoh, He led them to a foreign land where they were and remained strangers and nomads to wander in the desert 40 years before not they but their progeny would eventually find a home. He proclaimed that their exile was a punishment for their disobedience and rebellion, and that they wouldn't have a home or a new land they could call a domicile until all the old guard socialists died off and the next generation was taught obedience to God's laws.

> Death Sentence on the Rebels
> And the LORD spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying, "How long shall I bear with this evil congregation who complain against Me? I have heard the complaints which the children of Israel make against Me. Say to them, 'As I live,' says the LORD, 'just as you have spoken in My hearing, so I will do to you: The carcasses of you who have complained against Me shall fall in this wilderness, all of you who were numbered, according to your entire number, from twenty years old and above. Except for Caleb the son of Jephunneh and Joshua the son of Nun, you shall by no means enter the land which I swore I would make you dwell in. But your little ones, whom you said would be victims, I will bring in, and they shall know the land which you have despised. But as for you, your carcasses shall fall in this wilderness. And your sons shall be shepherds in the wilderness forty years, and bear the brunt of your infidelity, until your carcasses are consumed in the wilderness. According to the number of the days in which you spied out the land, forty days, for each day you shall bear your guilt one year, namely forty years, and you shall know My rejection. I the LORD have spoken this. I will surely do so to all this evil congregation who are gathered together against Me. In this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die.'"
> Now the men whom Moses sent to spy out the land, who returned and made all the congregation complain against him by bringing a bad report of the land, those very men who brought the evil report about the land, died by the plague before the LORD. But Joshua the son of Nun and Caleb the son of Jephunneh remained alive, of the men who went to spy out the land.
> [Numbers 14:26-38, Bible, NKJV]

5. The Israelites who built the wall in the book of Nehemiah. When they felt convicted because of their sin in marrying foreigners and foreign wives, they repented, built their own city, and formed their own foreign government because the one ruling where they were was not obedient to God's laws. Separating oneself from foreigners means, literally becoming a "foreigner", "stranger", or "transient foreigner" from a legal perspective.

> "Then those of Israelite lineage separated themselves from all foreigners; and they stood and confessed their sins and the iniquities of their fathers. [3] And they stood up in their place and read from the Book of the Law of the LORD their God for one-fourth of the day; and for another fourth they confessed and worshiped the LORD their God.
> [Nehemiah 9:2-3, Bible, NKJV]

6. The Prophets. This includes Daniel, Ezekial, Elijah, etc. All of them were scorned and without honor in their own households and therefore "alien" and "foreign" in relation to their own relatives:

> "So they were offended at Him.
> But Jesus said to them, "A prophet is not without honor except in his own country and in his own house."
> [Matt. 13:57, Bible, NKJV]

7. King David.
   - 7.1. 1 Sam. 9-19. After King Saul was elected as Israel's first King in violation of God's desires and wishes, the Israelites offended God by electing a King who did not obey the Lord. David did not agree with Saul's actions and made Saul look bad and made Saul jealous of him. Eventually, David had to flee from the king, hide in caves to avoid the pagan King Saul's wrath. David therefore became a "foreigner" and a "stranger" in relation to the pagan government of his time so that he could avoid offending God and be obedient to God. 1 Sam. 19.
   - 7.2. Psalm 69:8-9. David in the Psalm revealed his basis for fleeing Saul by saying the following:

> I have become a stranger to my brothers,
> And an alien to my mother's children;
> Because zeal for Your house has eaten me up,
> And the reproaches of those who reproach You have fallen on me.
> [Psalm 69:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

The Bible also commands followers and Christians to remain separate and sanctified in relation to the sinful governments and entanglements of the world. From a legal perspective, that means we must become "foreigners", "strangers", "transient foreigners", and statutory "non-resident non-persons". Here are just a few examples, and there are many more where these came from:

> *"Come out from among them [the unbelievers and government idolaters]
> And be separate, says the Lord.
> Do not touch what is unclean,
> And I will receive you.
> I will be a Father to you,
> And you shall be my sons and daughters,
> Says the Lord Almighty."
> [2 Corinthians 6:17-18, Bible, NKJV]

> "Pure and undefiled religion before God and the Father is this: to visit orphans and widows in their trouble, and to keep oneself unspotted [foreign] from the world [the obligations and concerns of the world]. "
> [James 1:27, Bible, NKJV]

> "You shall have no other gods [including political rulers, governments, or Earthly laws] before Me [or My commandments]."
> [Exodus 20:3, Bible, NKJV]

> "Then all the elders of Israel gathered together and came to Samuel [the priest in a Theocracy] at Ramah, and said to him, 'Look, you [the priest within a theocracy] are old, and your sons do not walk in your ways. Now make us a king [or political ruler] to judge us like all the nations [and be OVER them]'.
> "But the thing displeased Samuel when they said, 'Give us a king [or political ruler] to judge us.' So Samuel prayed to the Lord. And the Lord said to Samuel, 'Heed the voice of the people in all that they say to you; for they have rejected Me [God], that I should not reign over them. According to all the works which they have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt, even to this day—with which they have forsaken Me [God as their ONLY King, Lawgiver, and Judge] and served other gods—so they are doing to you also [government or political rulers becoming the object of idolatry]."
> [1 Sam. 8:4-8, Bible, NKJV]

> "Do not walk in the statutes of your fathers [the heathens], nor observe their judgments, nor defile yourselves with their [pagan government] idols. I am the LORD your God: Walk in My statutes, keep My judgments, and do them; hallow My Sabbaths, and they will be a sign between Me and you, that you may know that I am the LORD your God."
> [Ezekial 20:10-20, Bible, NKJV]

> "Therefore, my brethren, you also have become dead to the law [man's law] through the body of Christ [by shifting your legal domicile to the God's Kingdom], that you may be married to another—to Him who was raised from the dead, that we should bear fruit [as agents, fiduciaries, and trustees] to God. For when we were in the flesh, the sinful passions which were aroused by the law were at work in our members to bear fruit to death. But now we have been delivered from the law, having died to what we were held by, so that we should serve in the newness of the Spirit [and newness of the law, God's law] and not in the oldness of the letter."
> [Rom. 7:4-6, Bible, NKJV]

Those who are believers and who are obedient to God's calling are kings and priests and princes of the only sovereign, who is God and are therefore exempt from Caesar's taxes.

> "You [Jesus] are worthy to take the scroll,
> And to open its seals;
> For You were slain,
> And have redeemed us to God by Your blood
> Out of every tribe and tongue and people and nation,

And have made us kings and priests to our God;
And we shall reign on the earth."
[Rev. 5:9-10, Bible, NKJV]

And when he had come into the house, Jesus anticipated him, saying, "What do you think, Simon? From whom do the kings [governments] of the earth [lawfully] take customs or taxes, from their sons [citizens and subjects] or from strangers [statutory "aliens", which are synonymous with "residents" in the tax code, and exclude "citizens"]?"

*Peter said to Him, "From strangers [statutory "aliens"/"residents" ONLY. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)]."*

*Jesus said to him, "*Then the sons [of the King, Constitutional but not statutory "citizens" of the Republic, who are all sovereign "nationals" and "non-resident non-persons"] are free [sovereign over their own person and labor. e.g. SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY]. "
[Matt. 17:24-27, Bible, NKJV]

Christians are PROHIBITED by the Bible to contract away their sovereignty to a pagan secular government, or to indirectly become Caesar's rather than God's property in the process.

"You [believers] shall make no covenant [contract or franchise] with them [foreigners, pagans], nor with their [pagan government] gods [laws or judges]. They shall not dwell in your land [and you shall not dwell in theirs by becoming a "resident" or domiciliary in the process of contracting with them*], lest they make you sin against Me [God]. For if you serve their [government] gods [under* contract or agreement or franchise*], it will surely be a snare to you."*
[Exodus 23:32-33, Bible, NKJV]

"You were bought at a price; do not become slaves of men [and remember that governments are made up exclusively of men]."
[1 Cor. 7:23, Bible, NKJV]

*"Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage [to the government or the income tax or the IRS or federal statutes that are not "positive law" and do not have jurisdiction over us]."*
[Galatians 5:1, Bible, NKJV]

Those believers who decide to violate the above Biblical requirements to be separate and not fornicate with, contract with, or do business with the corrupted government or civil rulers become "aliens" in relation to God and the Kingdom of Heaven:

*"Do you not know that friendship with the world is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend ["citizen", "resident", "taxpayer", "inhabitant", or "subject" under a king or political ruler] of the world [or any man-made kingdom other than God's Kingdom] makes himself an enemy of God. "*
[James 4:4, Bible, NKJV]

"This I say, therefore, and testify in the Lord, that you should no longer walk as the rest of the Gentiles [unbelievers] walk, in the futility of their mind, having their understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God, because of the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart; who, being past feeling, have given themselves over to lewdness, to work all uncleanness with greediness."
[Eph. 4:17-19, Bible, NKJV]

God treats your BODY as His property and His Church. A "temple" is a church, and neither the temple nor the fruit of the temple can be taxed or regulated by any government in a truly free society. Any attempt to do so is the crime of damaging religious property at 18 U.S.C. §247, in fact:

"Do you not know that you are the temple of God and that the Spirit of God dwells in you? If anyone defiles the temple of God, God will destroy him. For the temple of God is holy, which temple you are."
[1 Cor. 3:16-17, Bible, NKJV]

"A state-created orthodoxy [imposed through illegal enforcement or even involuntary enforcement of the revenue "codes" against religious institutions and "temples"] puts at grave risk that freedom of belief and conscience which are the sole assurance that religious faith is real, not imposed."

[Lee v. Weisman, 505 U.S. 577 (1992)]

Based on the content of this section:

1. The NRA Position is a religious practice within the meaning of the Bible and the Religious Freedom Restoration Act, 42 U.S.C. Chapter 21B.
2. The First Amendment prohibits interference with religious practices of those protected by the Constitution.
3. Those who are nonresidents in relation to the federal United States but who are physically present on land protected by the Constitution cannot be compelled to declare or accept the obligations of any status other than that of a nonresident.
4. Any attempt to enforce any other status, obligation, or "public right" against nonresident aliens who have no authority to contract with the Beast and therefore to participate in government franchises constitutes:
   4.1. Conspiracy against rights in violation of 18 U.S.C. §241.
   4.2. Peonage and involuntary servitude to pay off government debts in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment, 42 U.S.C. §1994, and 18 U.S.C. §1581.
   4.3. Destruction of PRIVATE religious property. 18 U.S.C. §247.
   4.4. Interference in the affairs of a temple and a church. The Bible identifies our body as God's temple. John 2:21, 1 Cor. 6:19.
   4.5. A breach of the Holy Bible trust indenture, which makes all Christians into God's fiduciaries, trustees, and agents 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Governments are created to protect your right to contract and interfering with this trust contract undermines the purpose of their creation. See:

5.6.13.1.5 Application to your circumstances

Americans domiciled in nonfederal areas of the 50 Union states are non-resident non-persons with respect to the Internal Revenue Code and the [federal] "United States". By "Americans", we mean people born anywhere in the American Union in either a state of the Union or federal territory or people from foreign countries who are naturalized to become Americans. These Americans have no "U.S." (government) source income unless they work for the U.S. government or are engaged in a "public office" or have investments within federal territory called the "United States". Whether you are a "nonresident" is determined by your place of domicile, not your place of birth. One becomes a "resident" under the I.R.C. by having a domicile on federal territory that is no part of the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If you disagree and think that "United States" includes places other than federal territory, then please explain why 26 C.F.R. §1.932-1(a)(1) says the following, which contradicts such a conclusion. Why would people who live in a "U.S. possession" be treated as nonresident aliens instead of residents, if they lived in the "United States"? Why would this section even be necessary because if you were right, they would be "residents" instead of "nonresident aliens"?:

Also explain why after the above was posted on the Family Guardian Website in 2005, this regulation mysteriously disappeared from the Government Printing Office website and was replaced with a temporary regulation that didn't tell the truth so plainly. The current version of the above regulation does not contain this language because the government wants to hide the truth from you about your true status.

The author of the Law of Nations upon which the writing of the Constitution was based, Vattel, admitted that those who are deprived of a right to earn a living have a right not to participate in and therefore not be statutory "citizens" or "residents" of any society that deprives them of the ability to earn a living and feed their own face:

> Law of Nations, Book 1: Of Nations Considered In Themselves
> The state is obliged to defend and preserve all its members (§ 17); and the prince owes the same assistance to his subjects. If, therefore, the state or the prince refuses or neglects to succour a body of people who are exposed to imminent danger, the latter, being thus abandoned, become perfectly free to provide for their own safety and preservation in whatever manner they find most convenient, without paying the least regard to those who, by abandoning them, have been the first to fail in their duty. The country of Zug, being attacked by the Swiss in 1352, sent for succour to the duke of Austria, its sovereign; but that prince, being engaged in discourse concerning his hawks, at the time when the deputies appeared before him, would scarcely condescend to hear them. Thus abandoned, the people of Zug entered into the Helvetic confederacy.[1] The city of Zurich had been in the same situation the year before. Being attacked by a band of rebellious citizens who were supported by the neighbouring nobility, and the house of Austria, it made application to the head of the empire: but Charles IV., who was then emperor, declared to its deputies that he could not defend it; — upon which Zurich secured its safety by an alliance with the Swiss.[2] The same reason has authorized the Swiss, in general, to separate themselves entirely from the empire, which never protected them in any emergency; they had not owned its authority for a long time before their independence was acknowledged by the emperor and the whole Germanic body, at the treaty of Westphalia.

> There are cases in which a citizen has an absolute right to renounce his country, and abandon it entirely — a right founded on reasons derived from the very nature of the social compact. 1. If the citizen cannot procure subsistence in his own country, it is undoubtedly lawful for him to seek it elsewhere. For, political or civil society being entered into only with a view of facilitating to each of its members the means of supporting himself, and of living in happiness and safety, it would be absurd to pretend that a member, whom it cannot furnish with such things as are most necessary, has not a right to leave it.
> 2. If the body of the society, or he who represents it, absolutely fail to discharge their obligations [under the law] towards a citizen, the latter may withdraw himself. For, if one of the contracting parties does not observe his engagements, the other is no longer bound to fulfil his; as the contract is reciprocal between the society and its members. It is on the same principle, also, that me society may expel a member who violates its laws.
> 3. If the major part of the nation, or the sovereign who represents it, attempt to enact laws relative to matters in which the social compact cannot oblige every citizen to submission, those who are averse to these laws have a right to quit the society, and go settle elsewhere. For instance, if the sovereign, or the greater part of the nation, will allow but one religion in the state, those who believe and profess another religion have a right to withdraw, and take with them their families and effects. For, they cannot be supposed to have subjected themselves to the authority of men, in affairs of conscience;[3] and if the society suffers and is weakened by their departure, the blame must be imputed to the intolerant party; for it is they who fail in their observance of the social compact — it is they who violate it, and force the others to a separation. We have elsewhere touched upon some other instances of this third case, — that of a popular state wishing to have a sovereign (§ 33), and that of an independent nation taking the resolution to submit to a foreign power (§ 195).
> [Law of Nations, Vattel, Book 1, Sections 202 and 223; Source: http://famguardian.org/Publications/LawOfNations/vattel_01.htm#§ 202. Their right when they are abandoned.]

Hence, it is indisputable that if you are either the object of criminal or illegal activity by the government and if you are deprived under any circumstance of the right to earn a living and support yourself, you have an absolute right to:

1. Abandon your country or municipal domicile either physically or legally or both.
2. Expatriate yourself from the country which you are a member and thereby abandon your "nationality".
3. Change your domicile to be outside that country and thereby become a "nonresident", "non-citizen" who is not protected by its civil laws and not a "person" or "individual" under said laws.

The Declaration of Independence states the same thing above, and actually calls it a "right" which you cannot be denied:

> "Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established, should not be changed for light and transient causes; and, accordingly, all experience [has] shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer while evils are sufferable than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But, when a long train > of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce [the people] under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security."

> [Thomas Jefferson: Declaration of Independence, 1776. ME 1:29, Papers 1:429]

5.6.13.2 "Non-resident non-persons" Described[270]

The following subsections will deal with the legal constraints surrounding the civil status of "non-resident non-person". The purpose of establishing government is solely to provide "protection". Those who wish to be protected by a specific government under the civil law must expressly consent to be protected by choosing a domicile within the civil jurisdiction of that specific government.

1. Those who have made such a choice and thereby become "customers" of the protection afforded by government are called by any of the following names under the civil laws of the jurisdiction they have nominated to protect them:
   1.1. "citizens", if they were born somewhere within the country which the jurisdiction is a part.
   1.2. "residents" (aliens) if they were born within the country in which the jurisdiction is a part 1.3. "inhabitants", which encompasses both "citizens", and "residents" but excludes foreigners
   1.4. "persons".
   1.5. "individuals".
2. Those who have not become "customers" or "protected persons" of a specific government are called by any of the following names within the civil laws of the jurisdiction they have refused to nominate as their protector and may NOT be called by any of the names in item 1 above:
   2.1. "nonresidents"
   2.2. "transient foreigners"
   2.3. "stateless persons"
   2.4. "in transitu"
   2.5. "transient"
   2.6. "sojourner"

In law, the process of choosing a domicile within the jurisdiction of a specific government is called "animus manendi". That choice makes you a consenting party to the "civil contract", "social compact", and "private law" that attaches to and therefore protects all "inhabitants" and things physically situated on or within that specific territory, venue, and jurisdiction. In a sense then, your consent to a specific jurisdiction by your choice of domicile within that jurisdiction is what creates the "person", "individual", "citizen", "resident", or "inhabitant" which is the only proper subject of the civil laws passed by that government. In other words, choosing a domicile within a specific jurisdiction causes an implied waiver of sovereign immunity, because the courts admit that the term "person" does not refer to the "sovereign":

> "Since in common usage, the term person does not include the sovereign, statutes not employing the phrase are ordinarily construed to exclude it."
> [United States v. Cooper Corporation, 312 U.S. 600 (1941)]

> "Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law for it is the author and source of law;"
> [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

> "There is no such thing as a power of inherent Sovereignty in the government of the United States. In this country sovereignty resides in the People, and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld."
> [Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884)]

A "non-resident non-person" is simply someone who:

1. Has not waived sovereign immunity. This is the SAME "sovereign immunity" delegated by We the People to the government itself, and you can't delegate what you don't have.
2. Is equal in dignity, immunity, and sovereignty to any and every government.
3. Has not chosen a civil statutory domicile within the government they are a non-resident in respect to. They thereby refuse to be civilly governed by the civil statutory law.
4. Is but are still protected civilly by the common law and the Constitution.

[270] Source: Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020, Section 2; http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm.

5. Is still protected by the criminal laws.
6. Is unenfranchised, and therefore legislatively "foreign" rather than "domestic" for civil purposes.

Even President Obama has admitted that Christians are "foreigners" in society, and that is what a "non-resident non-person" is from a CIVIL LEGISLATIVE perspective.

President Obama Admits People of Faith are foreigners and strangers in their own society, SEDM Youtube Channel https://youtu.be/UeKbkAkASX4

5.6.13.2.1 Civil status of "non-resident non-persons"

We don't mean to imply that those who are non-resident non-persons are, in fact, CONSTITUTIONAL "aliens" in relation to the federal government at all. Instead, they are:

1. Statutory status under federal law:
   1.1. "nationals" or "state nationals" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
   1.2. Not statutory "nationals and citizens of the United States at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1401.
   1.3. NOT "nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1408 if not born in a federal possession.
   1.4. If they were born in a federal possession, they are:
      1.4.1. "national, but not a citizen, of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1452 if they are domiciled in a federal possession.
      1.4.2. "national of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).
   1.5. Statutory "non-resident non-persons" relative to the legislative/statutory jurisdiction of the national and not federal government under Titles 4, 5, 26, 42, and 50 of the United States Code, but only if legally or physically present on federal territory. Statutory "non-resident non-person" status is a result of the separation of powers between the state and federal governments. One is "legally present" if they are either consensually conducting commerce within the United States Government, have the statutory status of "citizen" or "resident, or are filling a public office within said government.
2. Constitutional status:
   2.1. "citizens of the United States" per the Fourteenth Amendment AT BIRTH and non-residents AFTER birth.
   2.2. Not "aliens" in either a statutory or constitutional context.
3. Biblical status:
   3.1. "strangers"
   3.2. "foreigners"

Why do you want to ensure your status in government records correctly reflects your civil status as a "non-resident non-person"? Below are some very good reasons:

1. Nonresidents ONLY become a statutory "person" or "individual" by either engaging in a public office or having a contract with the United States Government. This is reflected in the following:
   1.1. The statutory definition of "person" found in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343. The "partnership" they are referring to is a contract between the "United States" as a legal person and an otherwise PRIVATE human being. That contract creates PUBLIC AGENCY of the otherwise PRIVATE human being.
   1.2. The following U.S. Supreme Court ruling:

> "All the powers of the government [ including ALL of its civil enforcement powers against the public] must be carried into operation by individual agency, either through the medium of public officers, or contracts made with [private] individuals. "
> [Osborn v. Bank of U.S., 22 U.S. 738 (1824)]

2. Non-resident non-persons do not have to have or use a Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN) to open a financial account if they are not engaged in a "trade or business", meaning a public office in the U.S. government.
3. "Non-resident non-persons" are not required to participate in Social Security withholding.
4. "Non-resident non-persons" are expressly exempted from the Healthcare Bill and just about every other federal law. See the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, H.R. 3590, Section 9022(a).
5. Non-resident non-persons do not have to pay tax on their worldwide earnings like statutory "U.S. persons", "U.S. citizens", and "U.S. residents" do.

6. Federal District Courts cannot entertain anything other than a common law or constitutional tort action in the case of a Non-resident non-person. NRAs are not present within or domiciled within any United States judicial district and therefore beyond the jurisdiction of federal courts.
7. Nonresident aliens pay a flat 30% tax on their earnings originating ONLY from the United States government under I.R.C. Section 871 rather than a graduated rate of tax under I.R.C. Section 1.
8. The IRS cannot lawfully file liens against Non-resident non-persons, because they are not within an Internal Revenue District and all liens must be filed in the district they are domiciled within. The Federal Lien Registration Act requires that the lien must be filed in the domicile of the "taxpayer", which is ALWAYS in the District of Columbia, because all statutory "taxpayers" are public offices that have a domicile in the District of Columbia.
9. Federal courts cannot lawfully kidnap the identity of Non-resident non-persons and move it to the District of Columbia like they can with statutory "U.S. persons", "U.S. citizens", and "U.S. residents" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d).
10. Non-resident non-persons are protected from the jurisdiction of federal district courts by the Minimum Contacts Doctrine, U.S. Supreme Court and the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part 4, Chapter 97. They instead have to go either to the U.S. Supreme Court or the Court of International Trade if they are prosecuted or wish to prosecute the national government.
11. Non-resident non-persons do not need to use the IRS Forms W-4 or W-4 Exempt.
12. There are no withholding forms that a non-resident non-person can use. The closest would be the IRS Form W-8BEN, but even that form would not apply because they are not public officers and therefore "individuals" or "persons" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343. There is therefore no status they could check in Block 3 of the form that would be accurate because the only option they give is "individual".
13. Non-resident non-persons are not eligible for any kind of state license or franchise, such as a driver's license.

For additional reasons and more details on some of the above reasons, see section 5.6.13.3.4.5 later.

All franchises relate to and regulate only public office within the government. "Domestic" is a synonym for government, in fact. Everyone outside the government in that context is "alien" or "foreign". Those who don't volunteer for a public office by signing up for a franchise therefore are "alien" and "foreign" in relation to the government granting the franchise. Those who start out as nonresident and alien and subsequently sign up for a franchise become "resident aliens" in relation to the government grantor of the franchise. That is why we refer to "citizens", "residents", "individuals", and "resident aliens" simply as government contractors and public officers within a de facto government. Declaring oneself to be "resident" is equivalent to identifying oneself as a government contractor and public officer. If you would like to learn more about this fascinating concept, please read:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.13.2.2 "non-resident non-persons" are civilly dead, but are still protected by the Constitution and common law

We define the term "civilly dead" as a human being who has no domicile within the civil statutory jurisdiction of a specific government, but who is still protected by the Bill of Rights, the Constitution, and the common law. In effect, they are immune from the civil statutory jurisdiction of the government with whom they are "civilly dead".

Because the civil statutory law is a civil protection franchise, we describe such people as "unenfranchised" rather than "disenfranchised". Being "disenfranchised" occurs without the consent of the party because of a felony conviction, whereas being "unenfranchised" occurs by a withdrawal of consent to be a civil statutory "person".

The "straw man" or fictional statutory "person" to whom franchises rights attach is the thing that is "dead" in the phrase "civilly dead". In other words, there are no "fictions of law" applicable to those who are "civilly dead".

> "Fiction of law. An assumption or supposition of law that something which is or may be false is true, or that a state of facts exists which has never really taken place. An assumption [PRESUMPTION], for purposes of justice, of a fact that does not or may not exist. A rule of law which assumes as true, and will not allow to be disproved, something which is false*, but not impossible. Ryan v. Motor Credit Co., 30 N.J.Eq. 531, 23 A.2d. 607, 621. These assumptions are of an innocent or even beneficial character, and are made for the advancement of the ends of justice. They secure this end chiefly by the extension of procedure from cases to which it is applicable to other cases to which it is not strictly applicable, the ground of inapplicability being some difference of an immaterial character. See also Legal fiction."*
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 623]

Franchise rights are what we call "public rights" throughout our writings. Those human beings who have no "public rights" possess only "private rights" created and OWNED by God. These PRIVATE rights, in turn are protected by the Constitution and the common law and exist even among those who have no civil statutory "status". PRIVATE rights attach to the LAND you stand on and not your "civil status", and are inalienable, meaning that they CANNOT lawfully be given away, even WITH your consent.

> "Unalienable. Inalienable; incapable of being aliened, that is, sold and transferred."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1693]

Terms related to "civil death" include the following:

1. "Civil law"

> "Civil death (Latin: civiliter mortuus)[1] is the loss of all or almost all civil rights by a person due to a conviction for a felony or due to an act by the government of a country that results in the loss of civil rights. It is usually inflicted on persons convicted of crimes against the state or adults determined by a court to be legally incompetent because of mental disability.[2]

6. Felony disenfranchisement. Those convicted of felonies are considered "civilly dead". https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Felony_disenfranchisement

An example of how "civil death" is created through either policy or law can be found on the California Franchise Tax Board Website. Tax Exempt Entities that fail to pay their taxes or fail to file annually with the Secretary of State are referred to as "FTB OR SOS SUSPENDED", which simply means that their contracts and status cannot be defended in any court of law:

> Contract voidability is defined as when a suspended or forfeited business entity loses the right to enforce its legal contracts. If a business enters into a contract while suspended or forfeited and then revives its active legal status, the business cannot enforce that contract unless it gets relief from contract voidability (RCV).
> For more information regarding RCV, see "Why would I need relief from contract voidability (RCV)?"
> [Suspended Exempt Entities, California FTB, Downloaded 10/29/2015;
> SOURCE: https://www.ftb.ca.gov/businesses/Exempt_organizations/Suspended.shtml]

The "suspension" they are talking about above is unilateral and involuntary suspension of all rights of the entity described by the GOVERNMENT. Clearly, the above type of suspension is a direct interference with the right and power to contract, and governments are CREATED to protect and enforce your right to contract. See Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution. Hence, the above entity must not be protected by the Constitution and therefore, must be on federal territory not within the limits of a constitutional state. Otherwise, "civil death" for nonpayment of taxes would be unconstitutional because it "impairs private contracts". The "law" that is used to defend the contracts in this case would have to be statute law rather than contract law, which is voluntary and avoidable. If the above suspension also impaired the right to defend contracts under the COMMON LAW rather than statute law for a PRIVATE, non-corporate or non-public entity, then it would clearly be unconstitutional.

If the government can implement "civil death" as a way to enforce public policy or tax enforcement, then certainly we can and should be able to do it as well against them. This is a requirement of equal protection and equal treatment that is the foundation of the United States Constitution.

In most cases, courts will simply refer to "non-resident non-persons" as "nonresidents". An entire book below has been written about legal remedies available to "nonresidents".

A Treatise On The Law of Non-Residents and Foreign Corporations, Conrad Reno, 1892 http://sedm.org/free-legal-treatises/

5.6.13.2.3 Simplified summary of taxation as a franchise/excise tax

> "The essence of genius is simplicity."
> [Albert Einstein]

A simple but accurate way to view the Non-Resident Non-Person Position is as follows:

1. One can only have a "status" under the civil statutory laws of a specific jurisdiction by having a domicile within that jurisdiction as required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) . See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. Those without a domicile on federal territory have no civil status under the Internal Revenue Code Subtitles A through C, and therefore are incapable of acquiring any of the following statutory statuses under the Internal Revenue Code Subtitles A through C except possibly through their express consent:
   2.1. "individual".
   2.2. "person".
   2.3. "alien".

2.4. "nonresident alien".
2.5. "taxpayer".

For further details on this subject, see:

Your Exclusive Right to Declare or Establish Your Civil Status, Form #13.008 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. The U.S. Supreme Court has held that the ability to regulate, tax, or burden PRIVATE rights and PRIVATE property is repugnant to the Constitution. Therefore, all of the above "statuses" are:
   3.1. Public property.
   3.2. Public offices.
   3.3. Publici juris.
   3.4. Instrumentalities of the government and not private, non-consenting human beings.
   3.5. Property of the national government under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the Constitution.

   For proof of the above, see:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a "Public Officer" for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. The Internal Revenue Code, Subtitles A through C is a franchise and excise tax. That franchise is called a statutory "trade or business", which is legally defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office".
   4.1. All franchises are legally defined as contracts or agreements that acquire the "force of law" only by consent of BOTH parties to the contract or agreement. Those who have not manifested consent to the compact or contract are "non-residents" and "non-persons" not subject to its provisions.
   4.2. Still protected by the Constitution while at the same time NOT protected by any act of Congress.
5. Within the I.R.C. franchise agreement, the statutory "taxpayer" is the PUBLIC OFFICE and NOT the PRIVATE human being or artificial entity CONSENSUALLY FILLING said office. CONSENSUALLY applying for identifying numbers (TIN/SSN) AND CONSENSUALLY USING them in connection with specific otherwise PRIVATE activities is the method of:
   5.1. Consenting to receive the "benefits" of a government franchise.
   5.2. Waiving sovereign immunity.
   5.3. Connecting a PRIVATE PERSON to a specific PUBLIC OFFICE.
   5.4. Donating otherwise PRIVATE property to a public use, public purpose, and public office in the national and not state government.
   5.5. Exercising your right to contract, because all franchises are contracts or agreements.

   The partnership between the otherwise PRIVATE human being and the PUBLIC OFFICE which is established by the above method is THE ONLY "partnership" meant in the legal definition of "person" found in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343.
6. Only earnings of otherwise PRIVATE parties VOLUNTARILY connected with the franchise and thereby "donated to a public use" are called "income" and "gross income" and are reportable and taxable.[271] Earnings must be "reportable" before they can be taxable, and 26 U.S.C. §6041(a) says that only earnings connected with the "trade or business" franchise are reportable. Earnings are "trade or business" earnings either DIRECTLY or INDIRECTLY, but both classes are reportable using information returns such as IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, and 1099:
   6.1. Directly connected: Earnings connected with a "trade or business" under 26 U.S.C. §871(b) .

---

[271] The term "income" is defined as in the Internal Revenue Code as follows:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter J > PART I > Subpart A > § 643
> § 643. Definitions applicable to subparts A, B, C, and D
> For purposes of this subpart and subparts B, C, and D, the term "income", when not preceded by the words "taxable", "distributable net", "undistributed net", or "gross", means the amount of income of the estate or trust for the taxable year determined under the terms of the governing instrument and applicable local law. Items of gross income constituting extraordinary dividends or taxable stock dividends which the fiduciary, acting in good faith, determines to be allocable to corpus under the terms of the governing instrument and applicable local law shall not be considered income.

Do you see a natural being mentioned above? Only trusts and executors for dead people, both of whom are transferees or fiduciaries for "taxpayers", meaning the government, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6901 and 26 U.S.C. §6903 respectively. These transferees and fiduciaries are all "public officers" of the government. The office is the "straw man" and you are surety for the office if you fill out tax forms connecting your name to the office or allow others to do so and don't rebut them.

6.2. Indirectly connected: Earnings originating from the statutory "United States", meaning the GOVERNMENT and not a geographic place as described in 26 U.S.C. §871(a) . These earnings are called "effectively connected income" and also qualify as "trade or business" earnings as described in 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3).

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART I > § 864
> § 864. Definitions and special rules
> (c) Effectively connected income, etc.
> (3) Other income from sources within United States
> All income, gain, or loss from sources within the United States (other than income, gain, or loss to which paragraph (2) applies) shall be treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States*.*

7. The franchise agreement has two classes of participants, all of whom are public offices and are collectively called statutory "persons" or "individuals":
   7.1. Full Time Participants: Called statutory "U.S. persons" per 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) , all of whom are instrumentalities and offices within the government and who represent a federal corporation as public officers all the time and in every context. Includes "residents" defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B) and "U.S. citizens" mentioned in 26 U.S.C. §911. A resident is an "alien" representing the United States government full time as a public officer. The "United States" is a corporation per 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A) , and those representing said corporation as public officers are "persons" per 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343. Note that statutory "U.S. citizens" (per 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c)) are NOT statutory "residents" unless they are abroad and come under a tax treaty with a foreign country per 26 U.S.C. §911.
   7.2. Part Time Participants: Participants called "Nonresident alien INDIVIDUALS". These parties only exercise agency of a public office through certain specific transactions and situations. Only earnings connected with identifying numbers and reported on IRS Information Returns, such as IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, and 1099 are taxable. Use of the identifying number is prima facie evidence of participation in the activity per 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(b) . Every place in the I.R.C. where obligations are associated with nonresident aliens is always associated with statutory but not common law "individuals". Hence, those who are NOT statutory "individuals" or statutory "persons" are NOT SUBJECT but also not statutorily "EXEMPT". An "exempt" person is someone who is a "person" or "individual" but who has a statutory exclusion for certain purposes. Those NOT SUBJECT are neither "persons" nor "individuals".
8. Those not subject at all to the "trade or business" franchise are called:
   8.1. Non-resident NON-persons or NON-individuals.
   8.2. Transient foreigners.
   8.3. Transients.
   8.4. Foreigners.
   8.5. Strangers (in the Holy Bible).
   8.6. PRIVATE human beings or PRIVATE persons.

   An example of a human who is NOT SUBJECT but also not statutorily "EXEMPT" is a human domiciled in a foreign country or state of the Union who is not lawfully engaged in a public office in the U.S. government AND who has no earnings from the U.S. government that could be treated as indirectly connected or "effectively connected" with the "trade or business" franchise within the U.S. government.
9. Why are EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE human beings and artificial entities not subject but also not statutorily "EXEMPT" from the I.R.C. Subtitles A and C franchise? Because:
   9.1. The ability to regulate PRIVATE conduct is repugnant to the CONSTITUTION, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court:

> "The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."
> [City of Boerne v. Florez, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

   9.2. A "citizen" is someone who exercises their First Amendment Constitutional right to associate by

VOLUNTARILY consenting to join a political community. That consent is manifested by:

9.2.1. PHYSICALLY taking up a presence there AND

9.2.2. Expressly consenting to become a LEGAL member of that society by choosing a DOMICILE or RESIDENCE there.

The act of choice manifested as described above makes the otherwise EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE human being into a consenting party to the social compact and associates them with the statutory status of "citizen" or "resident" under the CIVIL statutory laws of the place they associate with.

9.3. The statutory status of "citizen" or "resident" is associated with certain PUBLIC RIGHTS or PRIVILEGES, that cause the associating party to lose SOME of their otherwise EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE character. This conversion of PRIVATE RIGHTS into PUBLIC RIGHTS is described as follows:

> When one becomes a member of society [by choosing a legal DOMICILE within it], he necessarily parts with some rights or privileges which, as an individual not affected by his relations to others, he might retain. "A body politic," as aptly defined in the preamble of the Constitution of Massachusetts, "is a social compact by which the whole people covenants with each citizen, and each citizen with the whole people, that all shall be governed by certain laws for the common good." This does not confer power upon the whole people to control rights which are purely and exclusively private, Thorpe v. R. & B. Railroad Co., 27 Vt. 143; but it does authorize the establishment of laws requiring each citizen to so conduct himself, and so use his own property, as not unnecessarily to injure another. This is the very essence of government, and 125*125 has found expression in the maxim sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas. From this source come the police powers, which, as was said by Mr. Chief Justice Taney in the License Cases, 5 How. 583, "are nothing more or less than the powers of government inherent in every sovereignty, . . . that is to say, . . . the power to govern men and things."
> SOURCE: http://scholar.google.com/scholar_case?case=6419197193322400931]

9.4. The First Amendment protects your right NOT to associate, even in the case of those who are NOT statutory "citizens" or "residents". Hence, no one can force you to become a "citizen" or "resident" of a specific place within the country of your birth. Only in the case of those born in another country can they force anyone. Those who are in a foreign country other than that of their birth are constitutional aliens, and they can be deported if they don't get naturalized and do not have permission from the government to be there. Those who are STATUTORY aliens but CONSTITUTIONAL citizens CANNOT be deported or lawfully denied the right to work as EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE human beings.

10. Any so-called "government" that refuses to recognize one's constitutional right to remain EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE and beyond the CIVIL statutory jurisdiction of a specific government is:

10.1. Accomplishing a purpose OPPOSITE that for which governments are established. All governments, according to the Declaration of Independence, are instituted to protect PRIVATE rights. The FIRST step in protecting PRIVATE rights is for the government so established to PREVENT such PRIVATE rights from being converted to PUBLIC rights/franchises WITHOUT the EXPRESS and CONTINUING consent of the owner of the right. A so-called "government" that refuses to satisfy the MAIN purpose of its creation, the ONLY purpose in fact, is not a government but a terrorist mafia and private corporation that implicitly waives official, judicial, and sovereign immunity and consents to suit as a private party.

> "The rights of individuals and the justice due to them, are as dear and precious as those of states. Indeed the latter are founded upon the former; and the great end and object of them must be to secure and support the rights of individuals, or else vain is government."

10.2. A de facto government. See:

10.3. Violating your right to contract. The "social compact" as well as all franchises are contracts. Anyone who forces you to be subject to the civil aspects of either is compelling you to contract and thereby violating your right to contract or NOT contract.

10.4. A "mafia protection racket" and organized crime syndicate, in which illegally enforced franchises imposed against non-consenting parties by corrupt judges are the method of "organizing" the syndicate. A government established mainly to provide "protection" that refuses to protect you from its OWN abuses and criminal acts certainly doesn't deserve to be hired or to have the authority to protect you against ANYONE ELSE. Why? Because the main purpose of the Constitution is to protect the right to be LEFT ALONE, and a government that refuses to leave you alone unless you pay them bribes and go to work for them for free, is NO GOVERNMENT AT ALL, but a haven for financial terrorists:

> "The makers of our Constitution undertook to secure conditions favorable to the pursuit of happiness. They recognized the significance of man's spiritual nature, of his feelings and of his intellect. They knew that only a part of the pain, pleasure and satisfactions of life are to be found in material things. They sought to protect Americans in their beliefs, their thoughts, their emotions and their sensations. They conferred, as against the Government, the right to be let alone - the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men."
> [Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438, 478 (1928) (Brandeis, J., dissenting); see also Washington v. Harper, 494 U.S. 210 (1990)]

Consistent with the above, earlier versions of the Treasury Regulations told the truth plainly on this subject. So plainly, in fact, that they had to be repealed and replaced with something that hid the truth because it was too difficult for the IRS to avoid. Notice that they try to deceptively qualify the parties they are talking about to include foreign corporations or partnerships, but in fact, these are the ONLY "persons" within the I.R.C., as revealed by the definition of "person" in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343:

> *A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

5.6.13.2.4 Who is the "taxpayer" and therefore "nonresident"?

Throughout this document, we proceed upon the following proven facts as the basis for discussion:

1. The statutory "taxpayer" is:
   1.1. A creation of Congress OWNED by Congress. Congress can only tax or regulate what it creates and it owns whatever it creates.
   1.2. Not a human being or physical thing.
   1.3. An artificial entity, juristic person, and legal fiction.
   1.4. Defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) is a public office in the government and NOT a human being. This office is what is called a "straw man". See:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a "Public Officer" for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

   1.5. Not a "citizen" or "resident" or "person" within the meaning of the Constitution.

> "Citizens of the United States within the meaning of this Amendment must be natural and not artificial persons; a corporate body is not a citizen of the United States.14*

2. The statutory "taxpayer" becomes connected to a specific human being through an act of consent by that human being. That consent is culminated in a LAWFUL election or appointment to public office. At the point of consent and subsequent election or appointment, they become a public officer and surety for the acts of the office they consent to represent.
3. You cannot unilaterally "elect" or "appoint" yourself in to public office by filling out any government form.
4. The statutory "taxpayer" public office and the PUBLIC OFFICER can have two separate and completely different domiciles or residences.
5. A nonresident PUBLIC OFFICER can represent a RESIDENT OFFICE and "taxpayer". If collection notices are mailed to humans, then these humans are presumed to act essentially as a "resident agent" for the public office they represent.
6. A "nonresident alien individual" and statutory "taxpayer" is described in 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1(b)(1)(i).

> Title 26: Internal Revenue
> PART 1—INCOME TAXES
> nonresident alien individuals
> § 1.871-1 Classification and manner of taxing alien individuals.
> (b) Classes of nonresident aliens —
> (1) In general. For purposes of the income tax, nonresident alien individuals are divided into the following three classes:
> (i) Nonresident alien individuals who at no time during the taxable year are engaged in a trade or business in the United States,
> (ii) Nonresident alien individuals who at any time during the taxable year are, or are deemed under §1.871–9 to be, engaged in a trade or business in the United States, and
> (iii) Nonresident alien individuals who are bona fide residents of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year.
> An individual described in subdivision (i) or (ii) of this subparagraph is subject to tax pursuant to the provisions of subpart A (section 871 and following), part II, subchapter N, chapter 1 of the Code, and the regulations thereunder. See §§1.871–7 and 1.871–8. The provisions of subpart A do not apply to individuals described in subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph, but such individuals, except as provided in section 933 with respect to Puerto Rican source income, are subject to the tax imposed by section 1 or section 1201(b). See §1.876–1.

7. If a human has not expressly consented to the "taxpayer" status or to represent said "taxpayer" public office, then they are:
   7.1. NOT a statutory "taxpayer" per 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14).
   7.2. NOT a statutory "person" per 26 U.S.C. §7701(c), and 26 U.S.C. §§6671(b) and 7343.
   7.3. NOT a statutory "individual" per 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).
   7.4. NOT a statutory "nonresident alien individual" per 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1(b)(1) .
   7.5. Not subject to the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code.
   7.6. Not subject to the legislative jurisdiction of Congress if within a Constitutional state of the Union.
   7.7. Protected ONLY by the U.S. Constitution, the Bill of Rights, and the common law, all of which may be enforced WITHOUT supporting legislation because they are "self-executing".
   7.8. Criminally impersonating a public office in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912 if they either exercise the functions of a "taxpayer" or have any part of the civil statutory law enforced by the government against them.
8. If a PRIVATE human is compelled to do any of the following, then they are a victim of involuntary servitude, theft, and slavery in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment and are criminally impersonating a public office in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
   8.1. Compelled to fulfill the duties of a public office, including being compelled to file a tax return.
   8.2. Becomes surety for the public office and/or tax collection directed at the office.
   8.3. Does not receive compensation that they and not the government determine for fulfilling the duties of the office.
   8.4. Is prevented from quitting the office or invalidating evidence that they occupy the office.
   8.5. Is compelled to use government PUBLIC property in connection with an otherwise PRIVATE business transaction, such as a Social Security Number, a Taxpayer Identification Number, etc. These numbers function as de facto license numbers to represent a public office. All uses of such property connect PRIVATE property to PUBLIC property and therefore result in a CONVERSION of PRIVATE property to PUBLIC property WITHOUT the consent of the owner.

9. If the human abandons the public office, the "taxpayer" fiction is legally dead and must go through probate. That is why when the IRS collects the tax, they call it a "1040 tax" on their collection notices, meaning it is described NOT on IRS FORM 1040, but in SECTION 1040 of the Internal Revenue Code. See:

5.6.13.2.5 Divorcing the "state": Persons with no domicile, who create their own "state", or a domicile in the Kingdom of Heaven

If we divorce the society where we were born, do not abandon our nationality and allegiance to the state of our birth, but then choose a domicile in a place other than where we physically live and which is outside of any government that might have jurisdiction in the place where we live, then we become "transient foreigners" and "de facto stateless persons" in relation to the government of the place we occupy.

> "Transient foreigner. One who visits the country, without the intention of remaining."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1498]

A "de facto stateless person" is anyone who is not entitled to claim the protection or aid of the government in the place where they live:

> Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS)
> RS 02640.040 Stateless Persons
> A. DEFINITIONS
> DE FACTO—Persons who have left the country of which they were nationals and no longer enjoy its protection and assistance. They are usually political refugees. They are legally citizens of a country because its laws do not permit denaturalization or only permit it with the country's approval.
> [. . .]
> 2. De Facto Status
> Assume an individual is de facto stateless if he/she:
> a. says he/she is stateless but cannot establish he/she is de jure stateless; and
> b. establishes that:
> - he/she has taken up residence [chosen a legal domicile] outside the country of his/her nationality;
> - there has been an event which is hostile to him/her, such as a sudden or radical change in the government, in the country of nationality; and

> NOTE: In determining whether an event was hostile to the individual, it is sufficient to show the individual had reason to believe it would be hostile to him/her.
> - he/she renounces, in a sworn statement, the protection and assistance of the government of the country of which he/she is a national and declares he/she is stateless. The statement must be sworn to before an individual legally authorized to administer oaths and the original statement must be submitted to SSA.
> De facto [stateless] status stays in effect only as long as the conditions in b. continue to exist. If, for example, the individual returns [changes their domicile back] to his/her country of nationality, de facto statelessness ends. [SOURCE: Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS), Section RS 02650.040 entitled "Stateless Persons" > https://s044a90.ssa.gov/apps10/poms.nsf/lnx/0302640040*]*

Notice the key attribute of a "de facto stateless person" is that they have abandoned the protection of their government because they believe it is hostile to him or her and is not only not protective, but is even injurious. Below is how the Supreme Court describes such persons:

> The writers upon the law of nations distinguish between a temporary residence in a foreign country for a special purpose and a residence accompanied with an intention to make it a permanent place of abode. The latter is styled by Vattel [in his book The Law of Nations as] "domicile," which he defines to be "a habitation fixed in any place, with an intention of always staying there." Such a person, says this author, becomes a member of the new society at least as a permanent inhabitant, and is a kind of citizen of the inferior order from the native citizens, but is, nevertheless, united and subject to the society, without participating in all its advantages. This right of domicile, he continues, is not established unless the person makes sufficiently known his intention of fixing there, either tacitly or by an express declaration. Vatt. Law Nat. pp. 92, 93. Grotius nowhere uses the word "domicile," but he also distinguishes between those who stay in a foreign country by the necessity of their affairs, or from any other temporary cause, and those who reside there from a permanent cause. The former he denominates "strangers," and the latter, "subjects." The rule is thus laid down by Sir Robert Phillimore:
> *There is a class of persons which cannot be, strictly speaking, included in either of these denominations of naturalized or native citizens, namely, the class of those who have ceased to reside [maintain a domicile] in their native country, and have taken up a permanent abode in another. These are domiciled inhabitants. They have not put on a new citizenship through some formal mode enjoined by the law or the new country. They are de facto, though not de jure, citizens of the country of their [new chosen] domicile.
> [Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

We must remember that in America, the People, and not our public servants, are the Sovereigns. We The People, who are the Sovereigns, choose our associations and govern ourselves through our elected representatives.

> "The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ..."
> [Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

When those representatives cease to have our best interests or protection in mind, then we have not only a moral right, but a duty, according to our Declaration of Independence, 1776, to alter our form of self-government by whatever means necessary to guarantee our future security.

> "But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security."
> [Declaration of Independence]

The lawful and most peaceful means of altering that form of government is simply to do one of the following:

1. Form our own self-government based on the de jure constitution and change our domicile to it. See:
   Self Government Federation: Articles of Confederation, Form #13.002
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
2. Choose an existing government or country that is already available elsewhere on the planet as our protector.
3. Choose a domicile in a place that doesn't have a government. For instance, choose a domicile somewhere you have been in the past that doesn't have a government. For example, if you have legal evidence that you took a cruise, then choose your domicile in the middle of the ocean somewhere where the ship went.

4. Use God's laws as the basis for your own self-government and protection, as suggested in this book.

By doing one of the above, we are "firing" our local servants in government because they are not doing their job of protection adequately, and when we do this, we cease to have any obligation to pay for their services through taxation and they cease to have any obligation to provide any services. If we choose God and His laws as our form of government, then we choose Heaven as our domicile and our place of primary allegiance and protection. We then become:

1. "citizens of Heaven".
2. "nationals but not citizens" of the country in which we live.
3. Transient foreigners.
4. Ambassadors and ministers of a foreign state called Heaven.

Below is how one early state court described the absolute right to "divorce the state" by choosing a domicile in a place other than where we physically are at the time:

> "When a change of government takes place, from a monarchial to a republican government, the old form is dissolved. Those who lived under it, and did not choose to become members of the new, had a right to refuse their allegiance to it, and to retire elsewhere. By being a part of the society subject to the old government, they had not entered into any engagement to become subject to any new form the majority might think proper to adopt. That the majority shall prevail is a rule posterior to the formation of government, and results from it. It is not a rule upon mankind in their natural state. There, every man is independent of all laws, except those prescribed by nature. He is not bound by any institutions formed by his fellowmen without his consent"
> [Cruden v. Neale, 2 N.C., 2 S.E. 70 (1796)]

How do we officially and formally notify the "state" that we have made a conscious decision to legally divorce it by moving our domicile outside its jurisdiction? That process is documented in the references below:

1. Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Online, Form #10.004, Step 3.13: Correct Government Records documenting your citizenship status. Available free at: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Instructions/3.13ChangeUSCitizenshipStatus.htm

4. After accomplishing either of the above items, which are the same, making sure that all future government forms we fill out properly and accurately describe both our domicile and our citizenship status.
5. By making sure that at all times, we use the proper words to describe our status so that we don't create false presumptions that might cause the government to believe we are "residents" with a domicile in the "United States" (federal territory):
   5.1. Do not describe ourselves with the following words:
      5.1.1. "individual" as defined in 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).
      5.1.2. "taxpayer" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14).
      5.1.3. "U.S. person" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) .
      5.1.4. "resident" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
      5.1.5. "alien"
   5.2. Describe ourselves with the following words and phrases:
      5.2.1. "nontaxpayer" not subject to the Internal Revenue Code. See:
         5.2.1.1. "Taxpayer" v. "Nontaxpayer", Which One Are You?:

         5.2.1.2. Your Rights as a "nontaxpayer", item 5.8
            http://sedm.org/LibertyU/LibertyU.htm
      5.2.2. "nonresident alien" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) IF AND ONLY IF you are engaged in a public office. Otherwise you are a "non-resident non-person" or "transient foreigner".
      5.2.3. The type of "nonresident alien" defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1(b)(1)(i) ONLY IF YOU ARE ENGAGED IN A PUBLIC OFFICE. Otherwise, there is no regulation that describes your status.
      5.2.4. "national" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), but not "citizen" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401. This person is also described in 8 U.S.C. §1452, but only in the case of those born within U.S. possessions.
      5.2.5. Not engaged in a "trade or business" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).

5.2.6. Have not made any "elections" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B), 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) or (h), or 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1(a).

5.2.7. A "stateless person" who does not satisfy any of the criteria for diversity of citizenship described in 28 U.S.C. §1332 and who therefore cannot be sued in federal court. See Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989) :

> "In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a natural person must both be a citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a United States citizen, has no domicile in any State. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of § 1332(a)(3). Subsection 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a State sues aliens only, also could not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [490 U.S. 829]"
> [Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989)]

We emphasize that it isn't one's citizenship but one's choice of legal "domicile" that makes one sovereign and a "nontaxpayer". The way we describe our citizenship status is affected by and a result of our choice of legal "domicile", but changing one's citizenship status is not the nexus for becoming either a "sovereign" or a "nontaxpayer".

The only legal requirement for changing our domicile is that we must reside on the territory of the sovereign to whom we claim allegiance, and must intend to make membership in the community established by the sovereign permanent. In this context, the Bible reminds us that the Earth was created by and owned by our Sovereign, who is God, and that those vain politicians who claim to "own" or control it are simply "stewards" over what actually belongs to God alone. To wit:

> The heavens are Yours [God's], the earth also is Yours;
> The world and all its fullness, You have founded them.
> The north and the south, You have created them;
> Tabor and Hermon rejoice in Your name.
> You have a mighty arm;
> Strong is Your hand, and high is Your right hand."
> [Psalm 89:11-13, Bible, NKJV]

> "I have made the earth,
> And created man on it.
> I—My hands—stretched out the heavens,
> And all their host I have commanded."
> [Isaiah 45:12, Bible, NKJV]

> "Indeed heaven and the highest heavens belong to the Lord your God, also the earth with all that is in it."
> [Deuteronomy 10:14, Bible, NKJV]

Some misguided Christians will try to quote Jesus, when He said of taxes the following in relation to "domicile":

> "Render therefore to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's."
> [Matt. 22:15-22, Bible, NKJV]

However, based on the scriptures above, which identify God as the owner of the Earth and the Heavens, we must ask ourself:

> "What is left that belongs to Caesar if EVERYTHING belongs to God?"

The answer is NOTHING, except that which he STEALS from the Sovereign People and which they don't force him to return. Jesus knew this, but he gave a very indirect answer to keep Himself out of trouble when asked about taxes in the passage above. Therefore, when we elect or consent to change our domicile to the Kingdom of Heaven, we are acknowledging the Truth and the Authority of the Scripture and Holy Law above and the sovereignty of the Lord in the practical affairs of our daily lives. We are acknowledging our stewardship over what ultimately and permanently belongs ONLY to Him, and not to any man. Governments and civilizations come and go, but God's immutable laws are eternal. To NOT do this as a Christian amounts to mutiny against God. Either we honor the first four commandments of the Ten Commandments by doing this, or we will be dethroned as His Sovereigns and Stewards on earth.

> "Because you [Solomon, the wisest man who ever lived] have done this , and have not kept My covenant and My statutes [violated God's laws], which I have commanded you, I will surely tear the kingdom [and all your sovereignty] away from you and give it to your [public] servant."

[1 Kings 11:9-13, Bible, NKJV]

By legally and civilly divorcing the "state" in changing our domicile to the Kingdom of Heaven or to someplace on earth where there is not man-made government, we must consent to be governed exclusively by God's laws and express our unfailing allegiance to Him as the source of everything we have and everything that we are. In doing so we:

1. Are following God's mandate not to serve foreign gods, laws, or civil rulers.

> "You shall make no covenant [contract or franchise] with them [foreigners, pagans], nor with their [pagan government] gods [laws or judges]. They shall not dwell in your land [and you shall not dwell in theirs by becoming a "resident" or domiciliary in the process of contracting with them], lest they make you sin against Me [God]. For if you serve their [government] gods [under contract or agreement or franchise], it will surely be a snare to you."*
> [Exodus 23:32-33, Bible, NKJV]

2. Escape the constraints of earthly civil statutory law. This type of law is law exclusively for government and public officers, so in a sense we are abandoning civil government, any duties under it, and any privileges, public rights, or "benefits" that it conveys based on our civil "status" under it. See:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. Cease to be a statutory "citizen", "resident", or "inhabitant". Instead we become transient foreigners and nonresidents under the civil statutory law.
4. Retain the protections of the Constitution and the common law for our natural rights.
5. Retain the protections of the criminal law. These laws are enforced whether we consent or not.
6. Are not "lawless" or an anarchist in a legal sense, because we are still subject to God's law, the common law, and the criminal law.
7. Protect and retain our equality, sovereignty, and dignity in relation to every other person under the civil law. The Declaration of Independence calls this our "separate and equal station".

The above is the nirvana described by the Apostle Paul when he very insightfully said of this process of submission to God the following:

> "But if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under the law [man's law]."
> [Gal. 5:18, Bible, NKJV]

The tendency of early Christians to do the above was precisely the reason why the Romans persecuted the Christians when Christianity was in its infancy: It lead to anarchy because Christians, like the Israelites, refused to be governed by anything but God's laws:

> "Then Haman said to King Ahasuerus, "There is a certain people [the Jews, who today are the equivalent of Christians] scattered and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of your kingdom; their laws are different from all other people's [because they are God's laws!], and they do not keep the king's [unjust] laws. Therefore it is not fitting for the king to let them remain. If it pleases the king, let a decree be written that they be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver into the hands of those who do the work, to bring it into the king's treasuries."
> [Esther 3:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

Christians who are doing and following the will of God are "anarchists". An anarchist is simply anyone who refuses to have an earthly ruler and who instead insists on either self-government or a theocracy in which God, whichever God you believe in, is our only King, Ruler, Lawgiver and Judge:

> Main Entry: an·ar·chy
> Function: noun
> Etymology: Medieval Latin anarchia, from Greek, from anarchos having no [earthly] ruler, from an- + archos ruler -- more at ARCH-
> [Source: Merriam Webster Dictionary]

> "For the Lord is our Judge, the Lord is our Lawgiver, The Lord is our King; He will save us."
> [Isaiah 33:22, Bible, NKJV]

For a fascinating read on this subject, see:

Jesus Is an Anarchist, James Redford
http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Spirituality/ChurchvState/JesusAnarchist.htm

Christians who are doing the will of God by changing their domicile to Heaven and divorcing the "state" are likely to be persecuted by the government and privileged I.R.C. 501(c)(3) corporate churches just as Jesus was because of their anarchistic tendencies because they render organized government irrelevant and unnecessary:

> "If the world hates you, you know that it hated Me before it hated you. If you were of the world, the world would love its own. Yet because you are not of the world, but I chose you out of the world, therefore the world hates you*.* Remember the word that I said to you, 'A servant is not greater than his master.' If they persecuted Me, they will also persecute you. If they kept My word, they will keep yours also. But all these things they will do to you for My name's sake, because they do not know Him who sent Me. If I had not come and spoken to them, they would have no sin, but now they have no excuse for their sin. He who hates me hated My father also. If I had not done among them the works which no one else did, they would have no sin; but now they have seen and also hated both Me and My Father*. But this happened that the word might be fulfilled which is written in their law, 'They hated Me without a cause.'"*
> [John 15:18-25, Bible, NKJV]

Being "chosen out of the world" simply means, in legal terms, that we do not have a domicile here and are "transient foreigners".

Those who do choose God as their sole source of law and civil (not criminal) government:

1. Become a "foreign government" in respect to the United States government and all other governments.
2. Are committing themselves to the ultimate First Amendment protected religious practice, which is that of adopting God and His sovereign laws as their only form of self-government.
3. Are taking the ultimate step in personal responsibility, by assuming responsibility for every aspect of their lives by divorcing the state and abandoning all government franchises:
   Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
4. Effectively become their own self-government and fire the government where they live in the context of all civil matters.
5. Are protected by the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part IV, Chapter 97.
6. Are protected by the Minimum Contacts Doctrine and therefore exempt from the jurisdiction of federal and state courts except as they satisfy the provisions of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act or the "Longarm Statute" passed by the state where they temporarily inhabit.
7. Are internationally protected persons pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §112.
8. Are on an equal footing with any other nation and may therefore assert sovereign immunity in any proceeding against the government. This implies that:
   8.1. Any attempt to drag you into court by a government must be accompanied by proof that you consented in writing to the jurisdiction of the government attempting to sue you. Such consent becomes the basis for satisfying the criteria within the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part IV, Chapter 97.
   8.2. You may use the same defense as the government in proving a valid contractual obligation, by showing the government the delegation of authority order constraining your delegated authority as God's "public officer". Anything another government alleges you consented in writing to must be consistent with the delegation of authority order or else none of the rights accrued to them are defensible in court. In this sense, you are using the same lame excuse they use for getting out of any obligations that you consented to, but were not authorized to engage in by the Holy Bible. This is explained in the document below:
   Delegation of Authority Order from God to Christians, Form #13.007
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
9. Become ministers, ambassadors, "employees", "public officers", and officers of a foreign state called Heaven.
10. May not simultaneously act as "public officers" for any other foreign government, which would represent a conflict of interest.

> "No one can serve two masters [two employers, for instance]; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government]."
> [Matt 6:24, Bible, NKJV. Written by a tax collector]

11. Are expressly exempt from taxation pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §892(a)(1).

12. May file IRS Form W-8EXP as a nonresident alien and exempt all of their earnings from federal and state income taxation.
13. May use IRS Publication 515 to control their withholding as nonresident aliens if engaged in a public office, or must modify all existing forms if not engaged in a public office.

The other very interesting consequences of the above status which makes it especially appealing are the following:

1. Nowhere in the Internal Revenue Code are any of the following terms defined: "foreign", "foreign government", "government". Therefore, it would be impossible for the IRS to prove that you aren't a "foreign government".
2. The most important goal of the Constitutional Convention, and the reasons for the adoption of the Ninth and Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution was to preserve as much self-government to the people and the states as possible. Any attempt to compel anyone to become a "subject" or accept more government than they need therefore violates the legislative intent of the United States Constitution.

> The determination of the Framers Convention and the ratifying conventions to preserve complete and unimpaired state self-government in all matters not committed to the general government is one of the plainest facts which emerges from the history of their deliberations*. And adherence to that determination is incumbent equally upon the federal government and the states.* State powers can neither be appropriated on the one hand nor abdicated on the other. As this court said in Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 725, 'The preservation of the States, and the maintenance of their governments, are as much within the design and care of the Constitution as the preservation of the Union and the maintenance of the National government. The Constitution, in all its provisions, looks to an indestructible Union, composed of indestructible States.' Every journey to a forbidden end begins with the first step; and the danger of such a step by the federal government in the direction of taking over the powers of the states is that the end of the journey may find the states so despoiled of their powers, or-what may amount to the same thing-so [298 U.S. 238, 296] relieved of the responsibilities which possession of the powers necessarily enjoins, as to reduce them to little more than geographical subdivisions of the national domain. It is safe to say that if, when the Constitution was under consideration, it had been thought that any such danger lurked behind its plain words, it would never have been ratified.
> And the Constitution itself is in every real sense a law-the lawmakers being the people themselves, in whom under our system all political power and sovereignty primarily resides, and through whom such power and sovereignty primarily speaks. It is by that law, and not otherwise, that the legislative, executive, and judicial agencies which it created exercise such political authority as they have been permitted to possess. The Constitution speaks for itself in terms so plain that to misunderstand their import is not rationally possible. 'We the People of the United States,' it says, 'do ordain and establish this Constitution.' Ordain and establish! These are definite words of enactment, and without more would stamp what follows with the dignity and character of law. The framers of the Constitution, however, were not content to let the matter rest here, but provided explicitly-'This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; ... shall be the supreme Law of the Land.' (Const. art. 6, cl. 2.) The supremacy of the Constitution as law is thus declared without qualification. That supremacy is absolute; the supremacy of a statute enacted by Congress is not absolute but conditioned upon its being made in pursuance of the Constitution. And a judicial tribunal, clothed by that instrument with complete judicial power, and, therefore, by the very nature of the power, required to ascertain and apply the law to the facts in every case or proceeding properly brought for adjudication, must apply the supreme law and reject the inferior stat-[298 U.S. 238, 297] ute whenever the two conflict. In the discharge of that duty, the opinion of the lawmakers that a statute passed by them is valid must be given great weight, Adkins v. Children's Hospital, 261 U.S. 525, 544 , 43 S.Ct. 394, 24 A.L.R. 1238; but their opinion, or the court's opinion, that the statute will prove greatly or generally beneficial is wholly irrelevant to the inquiry. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States, 295 U.S. 495, 549 , 550 S., 55 S.Ct. 837, 97 A.L.R. 947.

3. If another government attempts to interfere with the affairs of your own foreign self-government, then they:
   3.1. Are violating your First Amendment right to practice your religion by living under the laws of your God. This tort is cognizable under the Religious Freedom Restoration Act, 42 U.S.C. Chapter 21B and constitutes a tort against the foreign invader.
   3.2. Are hypocrites, because they are depriving others equal right to the same authority that they themselves have. No legitimate government can claim to be operating lawfully which interferes with the equal right of others to self-government.
   3.3. Are in a sense attempting to outlaw the ultimate form of personal responsibility, which is entirely governing your own life and supporting yourself. The outlawing of personal responsibility and replacing or displacing it with collective responsibility of the "state" can never be in the public interest, especially considering how badly our present government mismanages and bankrupts nearly everything it puts its hands on.

5.6.13.2.6 How do "transient foreigners" and "nonresidents" protect themselves in state court?

Now that we understand the differences between those who have contracted to be protected, called "citizens", "residents", and "inhabitants", and those who have not, called "transient foreigners" or "nonresidents", the next issue we must deal with is to determine how those who are "nonresidents" or "transient foreigners" in relation to a specific state government can achieve a remedy for the protection of their rights in state court. It will interest the reader to learn that "transient foreigners" have the same constitutional protections for their rights as citizens or residents. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court said on this subject. Those who are "transient foreigners" are STATUTORY "non-resident non-persons" in respect to the governments identified in the cite below. The "aliens" they are talking about are foreign nationals born in foreign countries.

> "There are literally millions of aliens within the jurisdiction of the United States[]. The Fifth Amendment, as well as the Fourteenth Amendment, protects every one of these persons from deprivation of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. Wong Yang Sung v. McGrath, 339 U.S. 33, 48-51, 70 S.Ct. 445, 453-455, 94 L.Ed. 616, 627-629; Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U.S. 228, 238, 16 S.Ct. 977, 981, 41 L.Ed. 140, 143; see Russian Fleet v. United States, 282 U.S. 481, 489, 51 S.Ct. 229, 231, 75 L.Ed. 473, 476. Even one whose presence in this country is unlawful, involuntary, or transitory is entitled to that constitutional protection. Wong Yang Sung, supra ; Wong Wing, supra.
> The fact that all persons, aliens and citizens alike, are protected by the Due Process Clause does not lead to the further conclusion that all aliens are entitled to enjoy all the advantages of citizenship or, indeed, to the conclusion that all aliens must be placed in a single homogeneous legal classification. For a host of constitutional and statutory provisions rest on the premise that a legitimate distinction between citizens and aliens may justify attributes and benefits for one class not accorded to the other; 12 and the class of aliens is itself a heterogeneous multitude of persons with a wide-ranging variety of ties to this country.13"

In order to get to the point where we can identify how remedies for constitutional rights violations are achieved, we must first describe the TWO types of jurisdictions that the state courts exercise, because it is mainly state courts where such rights violations would be vindicated. We don't have space here to cover all the nuances of this subject, but we will summarize these differences and point you to more information if you want to look into it. There are two types of jurisdictions within each state government:

1. The de jure republic under the Articles of Confederation called the "Republic of_____". This jurisdiction controls everything that happens on land protected by the Constitution. It protects EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE property using ONLY the common law and NOT civil law.
2. The federal corporation under the United States Constitution called the "State of_____". This jurisdiction handles everything that deals with government agency, office, employment, "benefits", "public rights", and territory and it's legislation is limited to those domiciled on federal territory or contracting with either the state or federal governments. Collectively, the subject of legislation aimed at this jurisdiction is the "public domain" or what the courts call "publici juris".

The differences between the two jurisdictions above are exhaustively described in the following fascinating document:

Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

In the above document, a table is provided comparing the two types of jurisdictions which we repeat here, extracted from section 14.7. Understanding this table is important in determining how we achieve a remedy in a state court for an injury to our constitutional PRIVATE rights.

1 Table 5-72: Comparison of Republic State v. Corporate State

#	Attribute	Republic State	Corporate State
1	Nature of government	De jure	De facto if offered, enforced, or forced against those domiciled outside of federal territory.
2	Composition	Physical state (Attaches to physical territory)	Virtual state (Attaches to status of people on the land)
3	Name	"Republic of _____" "The State"	"State of _____" "this State"
4	Name of this entity in federal law	Called a "state" or "foreign state"	Called a "State" as defined in 4 U.S.C. §110(d)
5	Territory over which "sovereign"	All land not under exclusive federal jurisdiction within the exterior borders of the Constitutional state.	Federal territory within the exterior limits of the state borrowed from the federal government under the Buck Act, 4 U.S.C. §110(d).
6	Protected by the Bill of Rights, which is the first ten amendments to the United States Constitution?	Yes	No (No rights. Only statutory "privileges", mostly applied for)
7	Form of government	Constitutional Republic	Legislative totalitarian socialist democracy
8	A corporation?	Yes	Yes
9	A federal corporation?	No	Yes
10	Exclusive jurisdiction over its own lands?	Yes	No. Shared with federal government pursuant to Buck Act, Assimilated Crimes Act, 18 U.S.C. §13, and Agreement on Coordination of Tax Administration (A.C.T.A.).
11	"Possession" of the United States?	No (sovereign and "foreign" with respect to national government)	Yes
12	Subject to exclusive federal jurisdiction?	No	Yes
13	Subject to federal income tax?	No	Yes
14	Subject to state income tax?	No	Yes
15	Subject to state sales tax?	No	Yes
16	Subject to national military draft? (See SEDM Form #05.030 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm)	No	Yes
17	Citizenship of those domiciled therein	3. Constitutional but not statutory citizen. 4. "national" or "state national" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §§1101(a)(21). Not a statutory "U.S. citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401.	Statutory "U.S. citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401
18	Licenses such as marriage license, driver's license, business license required in this jurisdiction?	No	Yes
19	Voters called	"Electors"	"Registered voters"
20	How you declare your domicile in this jurisdiction	4. Describing yourself as a "state national" but not a statutory "U.S. citizen on all government forms. 5. Registering as an "elector" rather than a voter. 6. Terminating participation in all federal benefit programs.	4. Describing yourself as a statutory "U.S. citizen" on any state or federal form. 5. Applying for a federal benefit. 6. Applying for and receiving any kind of state license.
21	Standing in court to sue for injury to rights	Constitution and the common law.	Statutory civil law
22	"Rights" within this jurisdiction are based upon	The Bill of Rights (PRIVATE rights)	Statutory franchises (privileges/PUBLIC rights)
23	"Citizens", "residents", and "inhabitants" of this jurisdiction are	Private human beings	Public entities such as government employees, instrumentalities, and corporations (franchisees of the government) ONLY
24	Civil jurisdiction originates from	Voluntary choice of domicile on the territory of the sovereign AND your consent. This means you must be a "citizen" or a "resident" BEFORE this type of law can be enforced against you.	Your right to contract by signing up for government franchises/"benefits". Domicile/residence is a prerequisite but is often ILLEGALLY ignored as a matter of policy rather than law.

When we say that we are a "transient foreigner" or "nonresident" within a court pleading or within this document, we must be careful to define WHICH of the TWO jurisdictions above that status relates to in order to avoid ambiguity and avoid being called "frivolous" by the courts. Within this document and elsewhere, the term "transient foreigner" or "nonresident" relates to the jurisdiction in the right column above but NOT to the column on the left. You can be a "nonresident" of the Corporate state on the right and yet at the same time ALSO be a "citizen" or "resident" of the Republic/De Jure State on the left above. This distinction is critical. If you are at all confused by this distinction, we strongly suggest reading the Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024 document referenced above so that the distinctions are clear.

The Corporate state on the right above enacts statutes that can and do only relate to those who are public entities (called "publici juris") that are government instrumentalities, employees, officers, and franchisees of the government called "corporations", all of whom are consensually associated with the government by virtue of exercising their right to contract with the government. Technically speaking, all such statutes are franchises implemented using the civil law. This is explained further in the following:

> Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The U.S. Supreme Court has held that the ability to regulate private conduct is repugnant to the Constitution. Consequently, the government cannot enact statutes or law of any kind that would regulate the conduct of private parties. Therefore, nearly all civil statutes passed by any state or municipal government, and especially those relating to licensed activities, can and do only relate to public and not private parties that are all officers of the government and not human beings. This is exhaustively analyzed and proven in the following:

> Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

We will now spend the rest of this section applying these concepts to how one might pursue a remedy for an injury to so-called "right" within a state court by invoking the jurisdiction of the Republic/De Jure state on the left and avoiding the jurisdiction of the Corporate state on the right.

Civil law attaches to one's voluntary choice of domicile/residence. Criminal law does not. De jure criminal law depends only on physical presence on the territory of the sovereign and the commission of an injurious act against a fellow sovereign on that territory. Laws like the vehicle code do have criminal provisions, but they are not de jure criminal law, but rather civil law that attaches to the domicile/residence of the party within a franchise agreement, which is the "driver license" and all the rights it confers to the government to regulate your actions as a "driver" domiciled in the Corporate state.

Within the forms and publications on this website there are two possible statuses that one may declare as a sovereign:

1. You are a transient foreigner and a citizen of ONLY the Kingdom of Heaven on earth. "My state" in this context means the Holy Bible.
2. You are a state national with a domicile in the Republic/De Jure state but not the Corporate state. "My state" in this context means the de jure state and excludes just about everything passed by the corporate state government, including all franchises such as marriage licenses, income taxes, etc. Franchises cannot lawfully be implemented in the De Jure State but can only occur in the Corporate State. The reason why franchises cannot lawfully be implemented in the De Jure State is because rights are "unalienable" in the De Jure State, which means you aren't allowed to contract them away to a real, de jure government.

Both of the above statuses have in common that those who declare themselves to be either cannot invoke the statutory law of the Corporate State, but must invoke only the common law and the Constitution in their defense. There is tons of reference material on the common law in the following:

> Sovereignty and Freedom: Section 7, Self Government, Family Guardian Fellowship > http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Freedom/Freedom.htm

The following book even has sample pleadings for the main common law actions:

Handbook of Common Law Pleading, Second Edition, Benjamin Shipman, 1895
http://books.google.com/books?id=7gk-AAAAIAAJ&printsec=titlepage

Transient foreigners may not have a domicile or be subject to the civil laws in relation only to the place they have that status, but they don't need the civil laws to be protected. The Constitution attaches to the land, and not the status of the persons on that land.

> "It is locality that is determinative of the application of the Constitution, in such matters as judicial procedure, and not the status of the people who live in it."
> [Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922)]

The Constitution and the common law are the only thing one needs to protect oneself as a PRIVATE and not PUBLIC entity. That is why we place so much emphasis on the common law on this website. Englishman John Harris explains why in the following wonderful video:

It's an Illusion, John Harris
http://www.rinf.tv/video/john-harris-its-illusion

Those who are believers AND transient foreigners but not "citizens", "residents" or "inhabitants" of either the Republic/De Jure State or the Corporate State DO in fact STILL have a state, which is the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth. That state has all the elements necessary to be legitimate: territory, people, and laws. The territory is the Earth, which the Bible says belongs to the Lord and not Caesar. It has people, which are your fellow believers. The laws are itemized in the Holy Bible and enumerated below:

Laws of the Bible, Form #13.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

In conclusion, those who are "transient foreigners" or "Nonresidents" in relation to the Corporate state can use the state court for protection, but they must:

1. Be careful to define which of the two possible jurisdictions they are operating within using the documents referenced in this section.
2. Avoid federal court. All federal circuit and district courts are Article IV territorial courts in the executive and not judicial branch of the government that may only officiate over franchises. They are not Article III constitutional courts that may deal with rights protected by the constitution. This is exhaustively proven with thousands of pages of evidence in:
   What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012
   http://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Ebooks/WhatHappJustice/WhatHappJustice.htm
3. Properly declare their status consistent with this document in their complaint. See the following forms as an example how to do this:
   3.1. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
   3.2. Federal Pleading/Motion/Petition Attachment, Litigation Tool #01.002
   http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm
   3.3. Rules of Presumption and Statutory Interpretation, Litigation Tool #01.006
   http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm
4. Respond to discovery relating to their status and standing with the following:
   Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status Options, Form #10.003
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
5. Invoke the common law and not statutory law to be protected.
6. Be careful to educate the judge and the jury to prevent common injurious presumptions that would undermine their status. See:
   Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
7. Follow the rules of pleading and practice for the common law.
8. Ensure that those who sit on the jury have the same status as them by ensuring that those who are statutory "U.S. citizens" or franchise participants are excluded as having a financial conflict of interest.

5.6.13.2.7 Serving civil legal process on nonresidents is the crime of "simulating legal process"

Some freedom lovers try to form their own private courts or grand juries to try or indict offenses against their rights by actors within the de facto government. Such private courts are sometimes called:

1. Common law courts.
2. Ecclesiastical courts in the case of churches.
3. Franchise courts for the regulation of specific activities such as "driving". This would include family courts, traffic courts, and social security administrative courts.

Those who convene such courts must be careful how they describe their activities to those outside the group, or the participants could be indicted for simulating legal process. Legal process served by these groups can be called by a number of different names, such as the following:

1. Non-statutory abatement.
2. Private Administrative Process (PAP).

Below is a definition of "simulating legal process":

> "A person commits the offense of simulating legal process if he or she "recklessly causes to be delivered to another any document that simulates a summons, complaint, judgment, or other court process with the intent to . . . cause another to submit to the putative authority of the document; or take any action or refrain from taking any action in response to the document, in compliance with the document, or on the basis of the document."
> [Texas Penal Code Annotated, § 32.48(a)(2)]

Therefore, those forming common law courts or ecclesiastical courts may not use the words "complaint", "judgment", "summons" when issuing documents to parties OUTSIDE the group of people who expressly consented to their jurisdiction. In other words, those who are not in the group or who are not "citizens" within whatever community they have formed, may not receive documents that are connected with any existing state or municipal court or which could be confused with such courts.

Below is one ruling by a Texas court relating to a "simulating legal process" charge against an ecclesiastical court:

> Free Exercise of Religion
> Government action may burden the free exercise of religion, in violation of the First Amendment,272[10] in two quite different ways: by interfering with a believer's ability to observe the commands or practices of his faith and by encroaching on the ability of a church to manage its internal affairs. Westbrook v. Penley, 231 S.W.3d. 389, 395 (Tex. 2007). In appellant's pro se motions, he refers to the "exercise of one's faith." More specifically, he raised the issue of ecclesiastical abstention in the trial court and cites to cases concerning this doctrine on appeal. His arguments are directed at the trial court's jurisdiction over this matter, not the constitutionality of section 32.48. So, it appears the judiciary's exercise of jurisdiction over the matter, rather than the Legislature's enactment of section 32.48, is the target of his challenge. We, then, will address that aspect of the constitutional issue he now presents on appeal; we will determine whether the trial court's exercise of jurisdiction violated appellant's right to free exercise of religion by encroaching on the ability of his church to manage its internal affairs.
> The Constitution forbids the government from interfering with the right of hierarchical religious bodies to establish their own internal rules and regulations and to create tribunals for adjudicating disputes over religious matters. See Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 708–09, 724–25, 96 S.Ct. 2372, 49 L.Ed.2d. 151 (1976). Based on this constitutionally-mandated abstention, secular courts may not intrude into the church's governance of "religious" or "ecclesiastical" matters, such as theological controversy, church discipline, ecclesiastical government, or the conformity of members to standards of morality. See In re Godwin, 293 S.W.3d. 742, 748 (Tex.App.—San Antonio 2009, orig. proceeding).
> The record shows that Coleman, to whom the "Abatement" was delivered, was not a member of appellant's church. That being so, the church's position on the custody matter is not a purely ecclesiastical matter over which the trial court should have abstained from exercising its jurisdiction. This is not an internal affairs issue because the record conclusively establishes that the recipient is not a member of the church. The ecclesiastical abstention doctrine does not operate to prevent the trial court from exercising its jurisdiction over this matter. We overrule appellant's final issue.

> SOURCE: http://scholar.google.com/scholar_case?case=13768262149764043927]

Therefore, if you form a common law or ecclesiastical court you should be careful to:

1. Draft a good membership or citizenship agreement.
2. Require all members to sign the membership or citizenship agreement.
3. Keep careful records that are safe from tampering.
4. NOT serve "legal process" of any kind against those who are NOT consenting members or citizens.

We take the same position in protecting OUR members from secular courts as the secular courts take toward private courts. The First Amendment requires that you have a right to either NOT associate or to associate with any group you choose INCLUDING, but not limited to the "state" having general jurisdiction where you live. That means you have a RIGHT to NOT be:

1. A "citizen" or "resident" in the area where you physically are.
2. A "driver" under the vehicle code.
3. A "spouse" under the family code.
4. A "taxpayer" under the tax code.

The dividing line between who are "members" and who are NOT members is who has a domicile in that specific jurisdiction. The subject of domicile is extensively covered in this document.

We allege that secular franchise courts such as tax court, traffic court, family court, social security administrative court, and even civil court in your area are equally culpable for the SAME crime of "simulating legal process" if they serve legal process upon anyone who is NOT a "member" of their "state" and who has notified them of that fact. As such, any at least CIVIL process served upon them by secular courts of the de facto government is ALSO a criminal simulation of legal process because instituted against non-consenting parties who are non-residents and "non-members", just as in the above case. Membership has to be consensual.

> The record shows that Coleman, to whom the "Abatement" was delivered, was not a member of appellant's church. That being so, the church's position on the custody matter is not a purely ecclesiastical matter over which the trial court should have abstained from exercising its jurisdiction. This is not an internal affairs issue because the record conclusively establishes that the recipient is not a member of the church. *The ecclesiastical abstention doctrine does not operate to prevent the trial court from exercising its jurisdiction over this matter. > SOURCE: http://scholar.google.com/scholar_case?case=13768262149764043927]

We also argue that just like the above ruling, the secular government in fact and in deed is ALSO a church, as described in the following exhaustive proof of that fact:

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

In support of the above, Black's Law Dictionary defines "franchise courts" such as traffic court and family court as PRIVATE courts:

> "franchise court. Hist. A privately held court that (usu.) exists by virtue of a royal grant [privilege], with jurisdiction over a variety of matters, depending on the grant and whatever powers the court acquires over time. In 1274, Edward I abolished many of these feudal courts by forcing the nobility to demonstrate by what authority (quo warranto) they held court. If a lord could not produce a charter reflecting the franchise, the court was abolished. - Also termed courts of the franchise.
> Dispensing justice was profitable. Much revenue could come from the fees and dues, fines and amercements. This explains the growth of the second class of feudal courts, the Franchise Courts. They too were private courts held by feudal lords. Sometimes their claim to jurisdiction was based on old pre-Conquest grants ... But many of them were, in reality, only wrongful usurpations of private jurisdiction by powerful lords. These were put down after the famous Quo Warranto enquiry in the reign of Edward 1." W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 56-57 (2d ed. 1949)."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Seventh Edition, p. 668]

As a BARE minimum, we think that if you get summoned into any franchise court for violations of the franchise, such as tax court, traffic court, and family court, then the government as moving party who summoned you should at LEAST have the burden of proving that you EXPRESSLY CONSENTED in writing to become a "member" of the group that created the court, such as "taxpayer", "driver", "spouse", etc. and that if they CANNOT satisfy that burden of proof, then:

1. All charges should be dismissed.
2. The franchise judge and government prosecutor should BOTH be indicted and civilly sued for simulating legal process under the common law and not statutory civil law.

5.6.13.2.8 Expatriation unnecessary (AND HARMFUL!) in the case of state nationals in order to be a "non-resident non-person"

A number of freedom advocates endorse or promote expatriation in order to allegedly regain their sovereignty. We think expatriation to restore sovereignty is a BAD idea that actually accomplishes the OPPOSITE effect. We don't recommend expatriation because:

1. You can only do it at a Department of State facility abroad and not in states of the Union.
2. If you do it, you have no right to return to the United States THE COUNTRY and can arbitrarily be denied access to see relatives and friends.
3. If you don't have citizenship in ANOTHER country BEFORE you expatriate, you will be "stateless" and without civil status, rights, or privileges in ANY COUNTRY. The ultimate form of homelessness!
4. You won't be eligible for a USA passport AFTER you do it.
5. You will need to take on an even more prejudicial status in order to return to the USA and stay there. That status is "permanent resident", and they are privileged and NOT free.

> "Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the country. Being bound to the society by reason of their [intention of] dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizenship. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children."
> [The Law of Nations, p. 87, E. De Vattel, Volume Three, 1758, Carnegie Institution of Washington

BAD IDEA!

The non-resident non-person position documented in the memorandum of law does not require expatriation in the case of those born within and located in a constitutional state of the Union. As we will point out repeatedly, DOMICILE on federal territory is the method of acquiring a civil status under the laws of the national Congress. Those domiciled in a state of the Union do not have such a domicile and therefore, cannot be anything but statutory "non-resident non-persons". We cover this subject extensively in our memorandum on domicile:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Note that changing your domicile from federal territory to a constitutional state of the Union:

1. Is NOT an act of "expatriation" as legally defined.
2. Does NOT change your "nationality".
3. Is an act of political and legal DISASSOCIATION protected by the First Amendment.
4. If interfered with, accomplishes the equivalent of eminent domain and an unconstitutional taking of property without the consent of the owner in violation of the Fifth Amendment takings clause.

To introduce the subject, below is the statutory definition of "expatriation":

> TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part III > § 1481
> § 1481. Loss of nationality by native-born or naturalized citizen; voluntary action; burden of proof; presumptions

> (a) A person who is a national of the United States[] whether by birth or naturalization, shall lose his nationality by voluntarily performing any of the following acts with the intention of relinquishing United States nationality—*

You can't abandon your "nationality" unless you had it in the first place. If the Department of State will allow you to expatriate as a state national, then you must be a "national" or a "state national" to begin with! They don't like talking about this, but you can be a "national" in an ordinary or constitutional sense WITHOUT being a "citizen" in the statutory sense under the laws of Congress.

Those who are born in a constitutional state of the Union and present in a constitutional state are what we call "state nationals". Below is at STATUTORY definition of "national":

> 8 U.S.C. §1101: Definitions
> (a)(21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

Note based on the above definition of "national":

1. Since there are THREE geographical definitions of "United States" according to the U.S. Supreme Court, then there are THREE types of "nationals" and "citizens" within each geography. Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945).
2. The term "state" above can mean a state of the Union or it can mean a confederation of states called the "United States" or "United States OF AMERICA" in the case of what we call a "state national". Either of these two groups would be "non-resident non-persons" as described in this memorandum of law.
3. You can be a "national of the United States OF AMERICA" or "national of the United States" without being a statutory "national" under any act of Congress.

The reason "state" is in lower case in the above statutory definition is because it refers in most cases to a legislatively foreign state, and all states of the Union are foreign with respect to the federal government for the purposes of legislative (but not CONSTITUTIONAL) jurisdiction for nearly all subject matters. All upper case "States" in federal law refer to territories or possessions owned by the federal government under 4 U.S.C. §110(d):

> "Foreign States: Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state. The term 'foreign nations', ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

Sneaky, huh? You'll never hear especially a federal lawyer agree with you on this because it destroys their jurisdiction to impose an income tax on you, but it's true!

WARNING: We are NOT suggesting that you SHOULD expatriate, but using the process to illustrate that it is completely consistent with our research. In order to move oneself outside of federal legislative jurisdiction, a human being born in a state of the Union and outside the federal United States (a "national" of the USA) would want to ONLY move his domicile outside of the federal zone (assuming that they were domiciled in the federal zone to begin with) AND NOT expatriate his nationality. Likewise, a "National and citizen of the United states at birth" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 would also want to move their domicile outside of the federal zone.

The nuances of citizenship are beyond the scope of this already too long document. If you would like to study the subject further, we recommend the following:

5.6.13.3 Criminal Identity Theft: How "Non-resident Non-Person Nontaxpayers" are deceived or compelled into becoming "Taxpayers" or "Residents" of federal territory[273]

5.6.13.3.1 Introduction

In order to reach nonresident parties or enforce civil law against them, any government must satisfy the criteria documented in the following:

1. Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. §1605, in the case of the federal government.
2. The Longarm Statutes of a specific state, in the case of state governments. These statutes may be found in:
   SEDM Jurisdictions Database Online, Litigation Tool #09.004
   http://sedm.org/GIS/JurisdictionDB.aspx
3. The Minimum Contacts Doctrine of the U.S. Supreme Court. See International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945).
4. Requirement for Consent, Form #05.003, Section 8.3
   FORMS PAGE: http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
   DIRECT LINK: http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Consent.pdf

The only way the above criteria can be satisfied is by one of the following means:

1. Describing themselves as a statutory "individual", "person", "resident", or "taxpayer" on a government form. Such forms are usually required by the business associates of people doing business with the nonresident, such as tax withholding documents.
2. Having a usually false information return filed against them connecting them to "trade or business" franchise earnings.

The following subsections will show how the above two criteria are satisfied in order that the federal or state governments can reach nonresident parties such as nonresident aliens. Most of the methods documents involve some kind of fraud or crime, and you must understand these mechanisms before you can successfully prevent and prosecute them as injuries in a court of law.

All of the techniques documented in this section effect the crime of identity theft. If you want an extremely detailed coverage of all the ways the corrupt government accomplishes identity theft in order to compel you into a commercial or contractual relationship with them, see:

5.6.13.3.2 Rigging Government Forms

5.6.13.3.2.1 Rigging forms generally go kidnap your legal identity and transport it to the "District of Criminals"

The government's main tool for compelling you to surrender your non-resident non-person status is through rigging their forms. Below are general resources for identifying how they rig their maliciously deceptive forms and how to prevent being victimized by it:

1. Avoiding Traps in Government Forms, Form #12.023

5.6.13.3.2.2 Jurat/Perjury statement on IRS Forms

Signing a perjury statement not only constitutes the taking of an oath, but also constitutes the conveying of consent to be held accountable for the accuracy and truthfulness of what appears on the form. It therefore constitutes an act of contracting that conveys consent and rights to the government to hold you accountable for the accuracy of what is on the form. Governments are created to protect your right to contract and the Constitution forbids them from interfering with or impairing the exercise of that inalienable right. Governments are created to ensure that every occasion you give consent or contract is not coerced.

> "Independent of these views, there are many considerations which lead to the conclusion that the power to impair contracts, by direct action to that end, does not exist with the general [federal] government. In the first place, one of the objects of the Constitution, expressed in its preamble, was the establishment of justice, and what that meant in its relations to contracts is not left, as was justly said by the late Chief Justice, in Hepburn v. Griswold, to inference or conjecture. As he observes, at the time the Constitution was undergoing discussion in the convention, the Congress of the Confederation was engaged in framing the ordinance for the government of the Northwestern Territory, in which certain articles of compact were established between the people of the original States and the people of the Territory, for the purpose, as expressed in the instrument, of extending the fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty, upon which the States, their laws and constitutions, were erected. By that ordinance it was declared, that, in the just preservation of rights and property, 'no law ought ever to be made, or have force in the said Territory, that shall, in any manner, interfere with or affect private contracts or engagements bona fide and without fraud previously formed.' The same provision, adds the Chief Justice, found more condensed expression in the prohibition upon the States [in Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution] against impairing the obligation of contracts, which has ever been recognized as an efficient safeguard against injustice; and though the prohibition is not applied in terms to the government of the United States, he expressed the opinion, speaking for himself and the majority of the court at the time, that it was clear 'that those who framed and those who adopted the Constitution intended that the spirit of this prohibition should pervade the entire body of legislation, and that the justice which the Constitution was ordained to establish was not thought by them to be compatible with legislation [or judicial precedent] of an opposite tendency.' 8 Wall. 623. [99 U.S. 700, 765] Similar views are found expressed in the opinions of other judges of this court."
> [Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U.S. 700 (1878)]

The presence of coercion, penalties, or duress of any kind in the process of giving consent renders the contract unenforceable and void.

> "An agreement [consensual contract] obtained by duress, coercion, or intimidation is invalid, since the party coerced is not exercising his free will, and the test is not so much the means by which the party is compelled to execute the agreement as the state of mind induced. [274] Duress, like fraud, rarely becomes material, except where a contract or conveyance has been made which the maker wishes to avoid. As a general rule, duress renders the contract or conveyance voidable, not void, at the option of the person coerced, [275] and it is susceptible of ratification. Like other voidable contracts, it is valid until it is avoided by the person entitled to avoid it. [276] However, duress in the form of physical compulsion, in which a party is caused to appear to assent when he has no intention of doing so, is generally deemed to render the resulting purported contract void. [277]"
> [American Jurisprudence 2d, Duress, §21 (1999)]

Any instance where you are required to give consent cannot be coerced or subject to penalty and must therefore be voluntary. Any penalty or threat of penalty in specifying the terms under which you provide your consent is an interference or impairment with your right to contract. This sort of unlawful interference with your right to contract happens all the time when the IRS illegally penalizes people for specifying the terms under which they consent to be held accountable on a tax form.

The perjury statement found at the end of nearly every IRS Form is based on the content of 28 U.S.C. §1746:

[275] Barnette v. Wells Fargo Nevada Nat'l Bank, 270 U.S. 438, 70 L.Ed. 669, 46 S.Ct. 326 (holding that acts induced by duress which operate solely on the mind, and fall short of actual physical compulsion, are not void at law, but are voidable only, at the election of him whose acts were induced by it); Faske v. Gershman, 30 Misc.2d. 442, 215 N.Y.S.2d. 144; Glenney v. Crane (Tex Civ App Houston (1st Dist)), 352 S.W.2d. 773, writ ref n r e (May 16, 1962); Carroll v. Fetty, 121 W.Va. 215, 2 S.E.2d. 521, cert den 308 U.S. 571, 84 L.Ed. 479, 60 S.Ct. 85.

[276] Faske v. Gershman, 30 Misc.2d. 442, 215 N.Y.S.2d. 144; Heider v. Unicume, 142 Or. 416, 20 P.2d. 384; Glenney v. Crane (Tex Civ App Houston (1st Dist)), 352 S.W.2d. 773, writ ref n r e (May 16, 1962)

[277] Restatement 2d, Contracts § 174, stating that if conduct that appears to be a manifestation of assent by a party who does not intend to engage in that conduct is physically compelled by duress, the conduct is not effective as a manifestation of assent.

TITLE 28 > PART V > CHAPTER 115 > § 1746
§1746. Unsworn declarations under penalty of perjury

> Wherever, under any law of the United States or under any rule, regulation, order, or requirement made pursuant to law, any matter is required or permitted to be supported, evidenced, established, or proved by the sworn declaration, verification, certificate, statement, oath, or affidavit, in writing of the person making the same (other than a deposition, or an oath of office, or an oath required to be taken before a specified official other than a notary public), such matter may, with like force and effect, be supported, evidenced, established, or proved by the unsworn declaration, certificate, verification, or statement, in writing of such person which is subscribed by him, as true under penalty of perjury, and dated, in substantially the following form:
> (1) If executed without the United States: "I declare (or certify, verify, or state) under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on (date). (Signature)".
> (2) If executed within the United States, its territories, possessions, or commonwealths: "I declare (or certify, verify, or state) under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on (date). (Signature)".

The term "United States" as used above means the territories and possessions of the United States and the District of Columbia and excludes states of the Union mentioned in the Constitution. Below is the perjury statement found on the IRS Form 1040 and 1040NR:

> "Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this return and accompanying schedules and statements, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, they are true, correct, and complete. Declaration of preparer (other than taxpayer) is based on all information of which preparer has any knowledge."
> [IRS Forms 1040 and 1040NR jurat/perjury statement]

Notice, based on the above perjury statement, that:

1. You are a "taxpayer". Notice it uses the words "(other than taxpayer)". The implication is that you can't use any standard IRS Form WITHOUT being a "nontaxpayer". As a consequence, signing any standard IRS Form makes you a "taxpayer" and a "resident alien". See:
   Who are "Taxpayers" and Who Needs a "Taxpayer Identification Number"?, Form #05.013
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
2. The perjury statement indicated in 28 U.S.C. §1746(2) is assumed and established, which means that you are creating a presumption that you maintain a domicile on federal territory.

Those who want to avoid committing perjury under penalty of perjury by correcting the IRS form to reflect the fact that they are not a "taxpayer" and are not within the "United States" face an even bigger hurdle. If they try to modify the perjury statement to conform with 28 U.S.C. §1746(1), frequently the IRS or government entity receiving the form will try to penalize them for modifying the form. The penalty is usually $500 for modifying the jurat. This leaves them with the unpleasant prospect of choosing the lesser of the following two evils:

1. Committing perjury under penalty of perjury by misrepresenting themselves as a resident of the federal zone and destroying their sovereignty immunity in the process pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1603(b).
2. Changing the jurat statement, being the object of a $500 penalty, and then risking having them reject the form.

How do we work around the above perjury statement at the end of most IRS Forms in order to avoid either becoming a "resident" of the federal "United States" or a presumed "taxpayer"? Below are a few examples of how to do this:

1. You can write a statement above the signature stating "signature not valid without the attached signed STATEMENT and all enclosures" and then on the attachment, redefine the ENTIRE perjury statement:

> "IRS frequently and illegally penalizes parties not subject to their jurisdiction such as 'nontaxpayers" who attempt to physically modify language on their forms. They may only lawfully administer penalties to public officers and not private persons, because the U.S. Supreme Court has held that the ability to regulate private conduct is 'repugnant to the constitution'. I, as a private human and not statutory "person" and a 'nontaxpayer' not subject to IRS penalties, am forced to create this attachment because I would be committing perjury if I signed the form as it is without making the perjury statement consistent with my circumstances as indicated in 28 U.S.C. §1746. Therefore, regardless of what the perjury statement says on your form, here is what I define the words in your perjury statement paragraph to mean:

> "Under penalties of perjury from without the 'United States" pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1746(1), I declare that I have examined this return and accompanying schedules and statements, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, they are true, correct, and complete. I declare that I am a 'nontaxpayer' not subject to the Internal Revenue Code, not domiciled in the 'United States', and not participating in a 'trade or business' and that it is a Constitutional tort to enforce the I.R.C. against me. I also declare that any attempt to use the content of this form to enforce any provision of the I.R.C. against me shall render everything on this form as religious and political statements and beliefs rather than facts which are not admissible as evidence pursuant to Fed.Rul.Ev. 610.
> If you attempt to penalize me, you will be penalizing a person for refusing to commit perjury and will become an accessory to a conspiracy to commit perjury."

2. You can write a statement above the signature stating "signature not valid without the attached signed STATEMENT and all enclosures" and then attach the following form:

   Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. You can make your own form or tax return and use whatever you want on the form. They can only penalize persons who use THEIR forms. If you make your own form, you can penalize THEM for misusing YOUR forms or the information on those forms. This is the approach taken by the following form. Pay particular attention to section 1 of the form:

   Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government-Long, Form #15.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.13.3.2.3 Not offering an option on the W-8BEN form to accurately describe the status of state nationals who are "nonresidents" but not "individuals"

> "The foregoing considerations would lead, in case of doubt, to a construction of any statute as intended to be confined in its operation and effect to the territorial limits over which the lawmaker has general and legitimate power. 'All legislation is prima facie territorial.' Ex parte Blain, L. R. 12 Ch.Div. 522, 528; State v. Carter, 27 N.J.L. 499; People v. Merrill, 2 Park.Crim.Rep. 590, 596. Words having universal scope, such as 'every contract in restraint of trade,' 'every person who shall monopolize,' etc., will be taken, as a matter of course, to mean only everyone subject to such legislation [e.g. "individuals" with a domicile on federal territory who are therefore subject to the civil laws of Congress], not all that the legislator subsequently may be able to catch. In the case of the present statute, the improbability of the United States attempting to make acts done in Panama or Costa Rica criminal is obvious, yet the law begins by making criminal the acts for which it gives a right to sue. We think it entirely plain that what the defendant did in Panama or Costa Rica is not within the scope of the statute so far as the present suit is concerned. Other objections of a serious nature are urged, but need not be discussed."
> [American Banana Co. v. U.S. Fruit, 213 U.S. 347 at 357-358]

The term "individual" is provided in Block 3 of the Standard IRS Form W-8BEN. Like the "beneficial owner" scam above, it too has a malicious intent/aspect:

1. Like the term "beneficial owner", it is associated with statutory creations of Congress engaged in federal privileges, "public rights", and "public offices." The only way you can be subject to the code is to engage in a franchise. Those who are not privileged cannot refer to themselves as anything described in any government statute, which is reserved only for government officers, agencies, and instrumentalities and not private persons. See:

   Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. The term "individual" appears in 26 C.F.R. §1.6012-1(b), where "nonresident alien individuals" are made liable to file tax returns. However, those who are NOT STATUTORY "individuals" are neither "nonresident aliens" nor "persons" under the Internal Revenue Code and are nowhere mentioned as having any duty to do anything. We call these people "non-resident non-persons". You can be an "individual" in an ORDINARY sense WITHOUT being a STATUTORY "individual" because all STATUTORY individuals are public officers or agents of the government as we prove in Form #05.037. Consequently, YOU DON'T WANT TO DESCRIBE YOURSELF AS AN "INDIVIDUAL" BECAUSE THEN THEY CAN PROSECUTE YOU FOR FAILURE TO FILE A RETURN! Some ways you can create a usually false presumption that you are an "individual" include:
   2.1. Filing IRS Form 1040, which says "U.S. INDIVIDUAL Income Tax Return" in the upper left corner.
   2.2. Applying for a "INDIVIDUAL Taxpayer Identification Number" (ITIN) using IRS Forms W-7 or W-9. Only "aliens" can lawfully apply for such a number pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(d)(3). If you were born in a state of the Union or on federal territory, you AREN'T an "alien". See:

Why It is Illegal for Me to Request or Use a "Taxpayer Identification Number", Form #04.205 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2.3. Filling out the IRS Form W-8BEN and checking the box for "individual" in block 3.

2.4. Filling out any other government form and identifying yourself as an "Individual". If they don't have "Union state Citizen" or "transient foreigner" as an option, then ADD IT and CHECK IT!

Our Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201, prevents the presumption from being created that you are an "individual" with any form you submit, even using standard IRS forms, by redefining the word "individual" so that it doesn't refer to the same word as used in any federal law, but instead refers ONLY to the common and NOT the legal definition. This, in effect, prevents what the courts call "compelled association". That is why our Member Agreement, Form #01.001 specifies that you MUST attach the Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201 to any standard tax form you are compelled to submit: To protect you from being prosecuted for tax crimes under the I.R.C. by preventing you from being connected to any federal franchise or obligation.

3. The term "individual", like that of "beneficial owner", is nowhere defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code and it is EXTREMELY dangerous to describe yourself as anything that isn't defined statutorily, because you just invite people to make prejudicial presumptions about your status. The term "individual" is only defined in the treasury regulations. The definition in the regulations is found at 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i):

> 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1 Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.
> (c) Definitions
> (3) Individual.
> (i) Alien individual.
> The term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States. See Sec. 1.1-1(c).
> _____
> 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1T Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.
> (c) Definitions
> (3) Individual.
> (ii)* Nonresident alien individual.
> The term nonresident alien individual means persons described in section 7701(b)(1)(B), alien individuals who are treated as nonresident aliens pursuant to § 301.7701(b)-7 of this chapter for purposes of computing their U.S. tax liability, or an alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under § 301.7701(b)-1(d) of this chapter. An alien individual who has made an election under section 6013(g) or (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a nonresident alien individual for purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder.

Do you see statutory "U.S. citizens" (which are defined under 8 U.S.C. §1401) mentioned above under the definition of "individual" in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)? They aren't there, which means the only way they can become "taxpayers" is to visit a foreign country and become an "alien" under the terms of a tax treaty with a foreign country under the provisions of 26 U.S.C. §911. When they do this, they attach IRS Form 2555 to the IRS Form 1040 that they file. Remember: The 1040 form is for "U.S. persons", which includes statutory "U.S. citizens" and "residents", both of whom have a domicile on federal territory, which is what the term "United States" is defines as in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d).

In fact, the only place that the term "individual" is statutorily defined that we have found is in 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2), which means:

> TITLE 5 -GOVERNMENT ORGANIZATION AND EMPLOYEES
> PART I > CHAPTER 5 > SUBCHAPTER II > § 552a
> § 552a. Records maintained on individuals
> (a) Definitions.— For purposes of this section—

> (2) the term "individual" means a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence;

The above statute is the Privacy Act, which regulates IRS use and protection of your tax information. Notice that:

1. "nonresident aliens" don't appear there and therefore are implicitly excluded. This is a result of a legal maxim called "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius".
2. The "individual" they are referring to must meet the definitions found in BOTH 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) because the Privacy Act is also the authority for protecting tax records, which means he or she or it can ONLY be a "resident", meaning an alien with a domicile on federal territory called the "United States". Therefore, those who claim to be "individuals" indirectly are making a usually invisible election to be treated as a "resident", which is an alien with a domicile in "United States" federal territory. Nonresident aliens are nowhere mentioned in the Privacy Act.
3. The code section is under Title 5 of the U.S. Code, which is called "GOVERNMENT ORGANIZATION AND EMPLOYEES". They are treating you as part of the government, even though you aren't. The reason is that unless you have a domicile on federal territory (which is what "United States" is defined as under I.R.C. Subtitle A in 26 U.S.C. §§7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d)) or have income connected with a " trade or business", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office", you can't be a "taxpayer" without at least volunteering by submitting an IRS form W-4, which effectively amounts to an "election" to become a "public officer" and a "Kelly Girl" on loan to your private employer from Uncle Sam.

What the IRS Form W-8BEN is doing is fooling you into admitting that you are an "individual" as defined above, which means that you just made an election or choice to become a "resident alien" instead of a "nonresident alien". They don't have any lawful authority to maintain records on "nonresident aliens" under the Privacy Act, so you have to become a "resident" by filling out one of their forms and lying about your status by calling yourself a statutory "individual" and therefore public officer. This effectively conveys your consent and permission to become and be treated as a public officer in the national government, even if you are not aware you are doing so. We call this devious process "invisible consent". Instead, what you really are is a "transient foreigner"

> "Transient foreigner. One who visits the country, without the intention of remaining."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1498]

Our Amended IRS Form W-8BEN solves this problem by adding an additional option indicating "Union State Citizen" under Block 3 of the form and by putting the phrase "(public officer)" after the word "individual". As an alternative, you could make your own Substitute form as authorized by IRS Form W-8 Instructions for Requester of Forms W-8BEN, W-8ECI, W-8EXp, and W-8IMF, Catalog 26698G and add an option for Block 3 called "transient foreigner". Either way, you have deprived the IRS of the ability to keep records about you because you do not fit the definition of "individual", as required by the Privacy Act above. If you don't want to be subject to the code, you can't be submitting government paperwork and signing it under penalty of perjury that indicates that you fit the description of anyone or anything that they have jurisdiction over.

5.6.13.3.2.4 Excluding "Not subject" from Government Forms and offering only "Exempt"

Another devious technique frequently used on government forms to trick "nonresident aliens" into making an unwitting election to become "resident aliens" is:

1. Omit the "not subject" option.
2. Present the "exempt" option as the only method for avoiding the liability described.
3. Do one of the following:
   3.1. Statutorily define the term "exempt" to exclude persons who are "not subject".
   3.2. PRESUME that the word "exempt" excludes persons who are "not subject" and hope you don't challenge the presumption.

This form of abuse exploits the common false presumption among most Americans, which is the following:

1. That the ONLY options available are STATUTORY. The CONSTITUTION does not provide a way to make one's earnings CONSTITUTIONALLY exempt but not STATUTORILY exempt.
2. Government form presents ALL of the lawful options available to avoid the liability described. In fact, government is famous for limiting options in order to advantage or benefit them. In fact, they only present the STATUTORY options, but deliberately omit CONSTITUTIONAL options and argue that there are not CONSTITUTIONAL options.

In effect, they are constraining your options to compel you to select the lesser of evils and remove the ability to avoid all evil. This devious technique is also called an "adhesion contract". In summary, they are violating the First Amendment by instituting compelled association in which you are coerced to engage in commercial activity with them and become subject to their pagan laws.

On the subject of "exempt", the U.S. Supreme Court has held the following:

> *In imposing a tax, says Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, the legislature acts upon its constituents. "All subjects," he adds, "over which the power of a State extends are objects of taxation, but those over which it does not extend are, upon the soundest principles, exempt from taxation. This proposition 334 may almost be pronounced self-evident." McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 428.
> [United States v. Erie R. Co., 106 U.S. 327 (1882)]

From the above, we can see that:

1. The civil laws enacted by the legislature act ONLY upon "constituents" and "subjects". They DO NOT act upon "all people", but only on "constituents" and "subjects".
2. You have to VOLUNTEER to become a "constituent" or "subject". See:
   Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
3. "Constituents" and "subjects" include STATUTORY "citizens" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(e) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) and exclude CONSTITUTIONAL citizens, who are "non-residents" under federal statutory law. If you are not a STATUTORY citizen, which the court calls a "SUBJECT" or "constituent", then you can't be taxed. The court refers to those who can't be taxed as "aliens", and they can only mean STATUTORY aliens, not CONSTITUTIONAL aliens.
4. Federal tax liability is a CIVIL liability, and therefore, those who are not STATUTORY citizens domiciled on federal territory cannot have such a CIVIL liability.
5. Like most other legal "words of art", there are TWO contexts in which the word "exempt" can be used:
   5.1. Statutory law. This includes people who are "subjects" or "constituents", but who otherwise are granted a privilege or exemption by virtue of their circumstances. An example would be the "exempt individual" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(5).
   5.2. Common law. This implies people who never consented to be and therefore are NOT "subjects" or "constituents". Those who are NOT "subjects", are "not subject".

1.1.1.1 Earnings "not taxable by the Federal Government under the Constitution"

The present treasury regulations RECOGNIZE that earnings can be "not taxable by the Federal Government under the Constitution" WITHOUT being "exempt" under the Internal Revenue Code. Earlier versions the Internal Revenue Code and Treasury Regulations refer to this type of exemption as "fundamental law. Earnings "Not taxable by the Federal Government under the Constitution" are recognized in 26 C.F.R. §1.312-6:

Title 21
Part 1-Income Taxes
§ 1.312-6 Earnings and profits.

(b) Among the items entering into the computation of corporate earnings and profits for a particular period are all income exempted by statute, income not taxable by the Federal Government under the Constitution, as well as all items includible in gross income under section 61 or corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts. Gains and losses within the purview of section 1002 or corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts are brought into the earnings and profits at the time and to the extent such gains and losses are recognized under that section. Interest on State bonds and certain other obligations, although not taxable when received by a corporation, is taxable to the same extent as other dividends when distributed to shareholders in the form of dividends.

This omission is designed to make you believe that the ONLY way to avoid a tax liability is to find a STATUTORY "exemption" or to be a statutory "exempt individual" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(5). This is clearly a ruse designed to DECEIVE and ENSLAVE YOU.

The early U.S. Supreme Court recognized CONSTITUTIONAL but not statutory exemptions when it held:

"All subjects," he adds, "over which the power of a State extends are objects of taxation, but those over which it does not extend are, upon the soundest principles, exempt from taxation. This proposition 334* may almost be pronounced self-evident." McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 428.

There are limitations upon the powers of all governments, without any express designation of them in their organic law; limitations which inhere in their very nature and structure, and this is one of them, — that no rightful authority can be exercised by them over alien subjects, or citizens resident abroad or over their property there situated. This doctrine may be said to be axiomatic. . ."

[United States v. Erie R. Co., 106 U.S. 327 (1882)]

The Internal Revenue Code very deliberately does NOT define what is "not taxable by the Federal Government under the Constitution". If they did, they probably would lose MOST of their income tax revenues! The U.S. Supreme Court calls the Constitution "fundamental law" in Marbury v. Madison.

"Certainly all those who have framed written constitutions contemplate them as forming the fundamental and paramount law of the nation*, and, consequently, the theory of every such government must be, that an act of the legislature, repugnant to the constitution, is void."*
[Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 (1803)]

The Founding Fathers in the Federalist Papers also recognized the U.S.A. Constitution as fundamental law:

*"No legislative act [including a statutory presumption] contrary to the Constitution can be valid. To deny this would be to affirm that the deputy (agent) is greater than his principal; that the servant is above the master; that the representatives of the people are superior to the people; that men, acting by virtue of powers may do not only what their powers do not authorize, but what they forbid…[text omitted] It is not otherwise to be supposed that the Constitution could intend to enable the representatives of the people to substitute their will to that of their constituents. It is far more rational to suppose, that the courts were designed to be an intermediate body between the people and the legislature, in order, among other things, to keep the latter within the limits assigned to their authority. The interpretation of the laws is the proper and peculiar province of the courts.* A Constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by judges, as fundamental law*. If there should happen to be an irreconcilable variance between the two, the Constitution is to be preferred to the statute."*
[Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper # 78]

Earlier versions of the Internal Revenue Code and Treasury Regulations recognized in the statutes themselves exemptions under "fundamental law":

Treasury Regulations of (1939)

"Sec. 29.21-1. Meaning of net income. The tax imposed by chapter 1 is upon income. Neither income exempted by statute or fundamental law*... enter into the computation of net income as defined by section 21."*

Internal Revenue Code (1939)

> *"Sec 22(b). No other items are exempt from gross income except
> (1) those items of income which are, under the Constitution, not taxable by the Federal Government;
> (2) those items of income which are exempt from tax on income under the provisions of any Act of Congress still in effect; and (3) the income exempted under the provisions of section 116."

Not surprisingly, the IRS also does NOT provide a line or box on any tax form we have seen to deduct "income exempt by fundamental law". They do this in order to create the false PRESUMPTION that everything you earn is taxable. The U.S. Supreme Court, however, recognized that not EVERYTHING you earn is "income" or falls into the category of "gross income".

> *"We must reject in this case, as we have rejected in cases arising under the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (Doyle, Collector, v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 38 Sup.Ct. 467, 62 L.Ed.--), the broad contention submitted on behalf of the government that all receipts—everything that comes in-are income within the proper definition of the term 'gross income,' and that the entire proceeds of a conversion of capital assets, in whatever form and under whatever circumstances accomplished, should be treated as gross income.
> Certainly the term "income' has no broader meaning in the 1913 act than in that of 1909 (see Stratton's Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 416, 417 S., 34 Sup.Ct. 136), and for the present purpose we assume there is not difference in its meaning as used in the two acts."
> [Southern Pacific Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 330, 335, 38 S.Ct. 540 (1918)]

What the U.S. Supreme Court is recognizing indirectly above is that the income tax is an excise tax on the "trade or business" (public office) activity, and that only earnings connected to that activity constitute "income" or "gross income". Such earnings, in turn, are the only earnings reportable on an information return under 26 U.S.C. §6041(a). The statutory definition of "income" itself in the I.R.C. also recognizes that not everything one makes is "income":

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter J > PART I > Subpart A > § 643
> § 643. Definitions applicable to subparts A, B, C, and D
> For purposes of this subpart and subparts B, C, and D, the term "income", when not preceded by the words "taxable", "distributable net", "undistributed net", or "gross", means the amount of income of the estate or trust for the taxable year determined under the terms of the governing instrument and applicable local law. Items of gross income constituting extraordinary dividends or taxable stock dividends which the fiduciary, acting in good faith, determines to be allocable to corpus under the terms of the governing instrument and applicable local law shall not be considered income.

The "trust" they are talking about above is the PUBLIC trust, meaning the national government. PRIVATE trusts are not engaged in the "trade or business" excise taxable activity because the ability to regulate or tax PRIVATE activity or PRIVATE rights is repugnant to the constitution. The "estate" they are talking about is that of a deceased public officer and not private human being.

1.1.1.2 Avoiding deception on government tax forms

There are two ways that one can use to describe oneself on government forms:

1. "Exempt". This is a person who is otherwise subject to the provision of law administering the form because they are an "individual" or "person" and yet who is expressly made exempt by a particular provision of the statutes forming the franchise agreement. This option appears on most government forms.
2. "Not subject". This would be equivalent to a nonresident "nontaxpayer" who is not a "person" or franchisee within the meaning of the statute in question. You almost never see this option on government forms.

There is a world of difference between these two statuses and we MUST understand the difference before we can know whether or how to fill out a specific government form describing our status. In this section we will show you how to choose the correct status above and all the affects that this status has on how we fill out government forms.

We will begin our explanation with an illustration. If you are domiciled in California, you would describe yourself as "subject" to the laws in California. However, in relation to the laws of every other civil jurisdiction outside of California, you would describe yourself as:

1. "Not subject" to the civil laws of that place unless you are physically visiting that place.
2. Not ANYTHING described in the civil law that the government has jurisdiction over or may impose a "duty" upon, such as a "person", "individual", "taxpayer", etc.
3. Not a "foreign person" because not a "person" under the civil law.
4. "foreign".
5. A "nonresident".
6. A "transient foreigner".

A human being who is domiciled in California, for instance, would not be subject to the civil laws of China unless he was either visiting China or engaged in commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of China with people who were domiciled there and therefore protected by the civil laws there. He would not describe himself as being "exempt" from the laws of China, because one cannot be "exempt" without FIRST also being "subject" by having a domicile or residence within that foreign jurisdiction. Another way of stating this is that he would not be a "person" under the civil laws of China and would be "foreign" unless and until he either physically moved there or changed his domicile or residence to that place and thereby became a "protected person" subject to the civil jurisdiction of the Chinese government.

All income taxation within the United States of America takes the form of an excise tax upon an "activity" implemented by the civil law. In the case of the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, that activity is called a "trade or business". This fact exhaustively proven in the following amazing article:

The "Trade or Business" Scam, Form #05.001 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

A "trade or business" is then defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as follows:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > § 7701
> § 7701. Definitions
>
> (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—
> (26) "The term 'trade or business' includes the performance of the functions [activities] of a public office."

Those who therefore lawfully engage in a public office in the U.S. government BEFORE they sign or submit any tax form are then described as a "franchisee" called a "taxpayer" under the terms of the excise tax or franchise agreement codified in Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. Those who are not "public officers" also cannot lawfully "elect" themselves into "public office" by signing or submitting a tax form either, because this would constitute impersonating an officer or employee of the government in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912. This is confirmed by 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31) , which describes all those who are nonresident within the "United States" (federal territory not within any state of the Union) and not engaged in the "trade or business"/"public office" activity as being a "foreign estate", which simply means "not subject", to the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A franchise or excise tax:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > § 7701
> § 7701. Definitions
>
> (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—
> (31) Foreign estate or trust
> (A) Foreign estate
> The term "foreign estate" means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.

The entity or "person" described above would NOT be "exempt", but rather simply "not subject". The reason is that the term "exempt" has a specific legal definition that does not include the situation above. Notice that the term "exempt" is used along with the word "individual", meaning that you must be a "person" and an "individual" BEFORE you can call yourself "exempt":

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
> Sec. 7701. - Definitions

In the case of an individual all of whose compensation is*

The Internal Revenue Code itself does not and cannot regulate the conduct of those who are not "taxpayers".

> "Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law."
> [Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]

Consequently, all tax forms you (a human being) fill out PRESUPPOSE that the applicant filling it out is a franchisee called a "taxpayer" who occupies a public office within the U.S. government and who is therefore a statutory "person", "individual", "employee", and public officer under 5 U.S.C. §2105(a). Since the Internal Revenue Code is civil law, it also must presuppose that all "persons" or "individuals" described within it are domiciled on federal territory that is no part of a state of the Union. This is confirmed by the definition of "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d), which is defined as federal territory and not part of any state of the Union. If you do not lawfully occupy such a public office, it would therefore constitute fraud and impersonating a public officer in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912 to even fill such a form out. If a company hands a "nontaxpayer" a tax form to fill out, the only proper response is ALL of the following, and any other response will result in the commission of a crime:

1. To not complete or sign any provision of the form.
2. To line out the entire form.
3. To write above the line "Not Applicable".
4. To NOT select the "exempt" option within the form or select any status at all on the form. If you aren't subject to the Internal Revenue Code because you don't have a domicile on federal territory and don't engage in taxable activities, then you can't be described as a "person", "individual", "taxpayer", or anything else who might be subject to the I.R.C.

> "The foregoing considerations would lead, in case of doubt, to a construction of any statute as intended to be confined in its operation and effect to the territorial limits over which the lawmaker has general and legitimate power. 'All legislation is prima facie territorial.' Ex parte Blain, L. R. 12 Ch.Div. 522, 528; State v. Carter, 27 N.J.L. 499; People v. Merrill, 2 Park.Crim.Rep. 590, 596. Words having universal scope, such as 'every contract in restraint of trade,' 'every person who shall monopolize,' etc., will be taken, as a matter of course, to mean only everyone subject to such legislation, not all that the legislator subsequently may be able to catch.
> In the case of the present statute, the improbability of the United States attempting to make acts done in Panama or Costa Rica criminal is obvious, yet the law begins by making criminal the acts for which it gives a right to sue. We think it entirely plain that what the defendant did in Panama or Costa Rica is not within the scope of the statute so far as the present suit is concerned. Other objections of a serious nature are urged, but need not be discussed."
> [American Banana Co. v. U.S. Fruit, 213 U.S. 347 at 357-358]

5. To either not return the form to the person who asked for it or to return it with the modifications above.
6. If you return the form to the person who asked for it, to clarify on the form why you are not "exempt", but rather "not subject".
7. To attach the following form to the tax form:

Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Another alternative to all the above would be to simply add a "Not subject by fundamental law" option or to select "Exempt" and then redefine the word to add the "not subject by fundamental law" option to the definition. Then you could attach the Tax Form Attachment mentioned above, which also redefines words on the government form to immunize yourself from government jurisdiction.

If we had an honorable government that loved the people under its care and protection more than it loved deceiving you out of and stealing your money, then they would indicate at the top of the form in big bold letters EXACTLY what laws are being enforced and who the intended audience is so that those who are not required to fill it out would not do so. However, if they did that, hardly anyone would ever pay taxes again. Of this SCAM, the Bible and a famous bible commentary says the following:

> "Getting treasures by a lying tongue [or by deliberate omission intended to deceive] is the fleeting fantasy of those who seek death."
> [Prov. 21:6, Bible, NKJV]

> "As religion towards God is a branch of universal righteousness (he is not an honest man that is not devout), so righteousness towards men is a branch of true religion, for he is not a godly man that is not honest, nor can he expect that his devotion should be accepted; for, 1. Nothing is more offensive to God than deceit in commerce. A false balance is here put for all manner of unjust and fraudulent practices [of our public dis-servants] in dealing with any person [within the public], which are all an abomination to the Lord, and render those abominable [hated] to him that allow themselves in the use of such accursed arts of thriving. It is an affront to justice, which God is the patron of, as well as a wrong to our neighbour, whom God is the protector of. Men [in the IRS and the Congress] make light of such frauds, and think there is no sin in that which there is money to be got by, and, while it passes undiscovered, they cannot blame themselves for it; a blot is no blot till it is hit, Hos. 12:7, 8. But they are not the less an abomination to God, who will be the avenger of those that are defrauded by their brethren. 2. Nothing is more pleasing to God than fair and honest dealing, nor more necessary to make us and our devotions acceptable to him: A just weight is his delight. He himself goes by a just weight, and holds the scale of judgment with an even hand, and therefore is pleased with those that are herein followers of him. A balance cheats, under pretence of doing right most exactly, and therefore is the greater abomination to God."
> [Matthew Henry's Commentary on the Whole Bible; Henry, M., 1996, c1991, under Prov. 11:1]

In the case of income tax forms, for instance, the warning described above would say the following:

1. This form is only intended for those who satisfy all the following conditions:
   1.1. "taxpayer" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14):

> "Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them[non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws."
> [Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]

   1.2. Lawfully engaged in a "public office" in the U.S. government, which is called a "trade or business" in the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).
   1.3. Exercising the public office ONLY within the District of Columbia as required by 4 U.S.C. §72, which is within the only remaining internal revenue district, as confirmed by Treasury Order 150-02.
4. If you do not satisfy all the requirements indicated above, then you DO NOT need to fill out this form, nor can you claim the status of "exempt".
5. This form is ONLY for use by "taxpayers". If you are a "nontaxpayer", then we don't have a form you can use to document your status. This is because our mission statement only allows us to help "taxpayers". It is self-defeating to help "nontaxpayers" because it only undermines our revenue and importance. We are a business and we only focus our energies on things that make money for us, such as deceiving "nontaxpayers" into thinking they are "taxpayers". That is why we don't put a "nontaxpayer" or "not subject" option on our forms: Because we want to self-servingly and prejudicially presume that EVERYONE is engaged in our franchise and subject to our plunder and control.

We hope that you have learned from this section that:

1. He who makes the rules or the forms always wins the game. The power to create includes the power to define.
2. All government forms are snares or traps designed to trap the innocent and ignorant into servitude to the whims of corrupted politicians and lawyers.

> "The Lord is well pleased for His righteousness' sake; He will exalt the law and make it honorable. But this is a people robbed and plundered! [by the IRS] All of them are snared in [legal] holes [by the sophistry of greedy IRS lawyers], and they are hidden in prison houses; they are for prey, and no one delivers; for plunder, and no one says, "Restore!".
> Who among you will give ear to this? Who will listen and hear for the time to come? Who gave Jacob for plunder, and Israel to the robbers? [IRS] Was it not the Lord, He against whom we have sinned? For they would not walk in His ways, nor were they obedient to His law, therefore He has poured on him the fury of His anger and the strength of battle; it has set him on fire all around, yet he did not know; and it burned him, yet he did not take it to heart."*
> [Isaiah 42:21-25, Bible, NKJV]a

3. The snare is the presumptions which they deliberately do not disclose on the forms and which are buried in the "words of art" contained in their void for vagueness codes. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. The main reason for reading and learning the law is to reveal all the presumptions and deceptive "words of art" that are hidden on government forms so that you can avoid them.

> "My [God's] people are destroyed [and enslaved] for lack of knowledge [of God's Laws and the lack of education that produces it]."
> [Hosea 4:6, Bible, NKJV]
> "And thou shalt teach them ordinances and laws [of both God and man], and shalt shew them the way wherein they must walk, and the work [of obedience to God] that they must do."
> [Exodus 18:20, Bible, NKJV]
>
> "This Book of the Law shall not depart from your mouth, but you shall meditate in it day and night, that you may observe to do according to all that is written in it. For then you will make your way prosperous, and then you will have good success. Have I not commanded you? Be strong and of good courage; do not be afraid, nor be dismayed, for the LORD your God is with you wherever you go."
> [Joshua 1:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

5. Government forms deliberately do not disclose the presumptions that are being made about the proper audience for the form in order to maximize the possibility that they can exploit your legal ignorance to induce you to make a "tithe" to their state-sponsored civil religion and church of socialism. That religion is exhaustively described below:

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

6. All government forms are designed to encourage you to waive sovereign immunity and engage in commerce with the government. Government does not make forms for those who refuse to do business with them such as "nontaxpayers", "nonresidents", or "transient foreigners". If you want a form that accurately describes your status as a "nontaxpayer" and which preserves your sovereignty and sovereign immunity, you will have to design your own. Government is never going to make it easy to reduce their own revenues, importance, power, or control over you. Everyone in the government is there because they want the largest possible audience of "customers" for their services. Another way of saying this is that they are going to do everything within their power to rig things so that it is impossible to avoid contracting with or doing business with them. This approach has the effect of compelling you to contract with them in violation of Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution, which is supposed to protect your right to NOT contract with the government.
7. The Thirteenth Amendment prohibits involuntary servitude. Consequently, the government cannot lawfully impose any duty, including the duty to fill out or submit a government form. Therefore, you should view every opportunity that presents itself to fill out a government form as an act of contracting away your rights.
8. In the case of government tax forms, the purpose of all government tax forms is to ask the following presumptuous and prejudicial question:

> "What kind of 'taxpayer' are you?"

. . .rather than the question:

> "Are you a 'taxpayer'?"

The above approach results in what the legal profession refers to as a "leading question", which is a question contaminated by a prejudicial presumption and therefore inadmissible as evidence. Federal Rule of Evidence 611(c) expressly forbids such leading questions to be used as evidence, which is also why no IRS form can really qualify as evidence that can be used against anyone: It doesn't offer a "nontaxpayer" or a "foreigner" option. An example of such a question is the following:

> "Have you always beat your wife?"

The presumption hidden within the above leading question is that you are a "wife beater". Replace the word "wife beater" with "taxpayer" and you know the main method by which the IRS stays in business.

9. If none of the above traps, or "springes" as the U.S. Supreme Court calls them, work against you, the last line of defense the IRS uses is to FORCE you to admit you are a "taxpayer" by:
   9.1. Telling you that you MUST have a "Taxpayer Identification Number".
   9.2. Telling you that BECAUSE you have such a number, you MUST be a "taxpayer".
   9.3. Refusing to talk to you on the phone until you disclose a "Taxpayer Identification Number" to them. We tell them that it is a NONTAXPAYER Identification Number (NIN), and make them promise to treat us as a NONTAXPAYER before it will be disclosed. We also send them an update to the original TIN application making it a NONTAXPAYER number and establishing an anti-franchise franchise that makes THEM liable if they use the number for any commercial purpose that benefits them. See, for instance:

5.6.13.3.2.5 Illegally and FRAUDULENTLY Filing the WRONG return, the IRS 1040

Only persons with a domicile in the statutory "United States", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) as federal territory not within any constitutional State of the Union, may lawfully file IRS Form 1040. This is confirmed by IRS Published Products Catalog (2003), Document 7130, the IRS Published Products Catalog, which says the following:

> 1040A 11327A Each
> U.S. Individual Income Tax Return
> Annual income tax return filed by citizens and residents of the United States. There are separate instructions available for this item. The catalog number for the instructions is 12088U.
> W:CAR:MP:FP:F:I Tax Form or Instructions
> [IRS Published Products Catalog, Year 2003, p. F-15]

The above is also confirmed by the IRS 1040 Instruction Booklet itself, which says at the top of the page describing the filing requirement the following:

> Filing Requirements
> These rules apply to all U.S. citizens, regardless of where they live, and resident aliens.
> [IRS 1040 Instruction Booklet (2001), p. 15;
> SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IncomeTaxRtn/Federal/IRSForm1040Instr.pdf]

What the above deceptive publication very conveniently and deliberately doesn't tell you are the following very important facts:

1. The "U.S. citizen" they are referring to above is a statutory "U.S. citizen" defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401.
2. You cannot be either a statutory "U.S. citizen" or a "resident" (alien) unless you have a domicile on federal territory within the "United States", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) as the District of Columbia and territories and possessions of the United States and nowhere "expressly extended" to include any other place.
3. Persons born within and domiciled within states of the Union do not have a domicile in the "United States" and therefore cannot lawfully be statutory "U.S. citizens" or "residents" (aliens), but rather are non-residents. They are also "nonresident aliens" per 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) but only if they are engaged in a public office. If they claim to be a

"U.S. citizen" on a federal form, they are committing a crime in violation of 18 U.S.C. §911.

4. The only way that the place where you physically live is irrelevant as mentioned above is under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17, which says that if you are acting in a representative capacity as a "public officer" within the federal corporation called the "United States", the laws of the place of incorporation of the corporation apply, regardless of where you physically are. THE OFFICE has a domicile in the District of Columbia and while you fill it, your effective domicile is also there, regardless of where you live. ONLY in this condition is the place you live irrelevant. It is furthermore a criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912 for a private person not lawfully elected into public office consistent with federal law to serve in a public office or "pretend" to be a public officer engaged in the "trade or business" franchise.

The group of persons that includes statutory "U.S. citizens" and "residents" (aliens) who collectively are the only ones who can lawfully file IRS Form 1040 above are called "U.S. persons", and they are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). A nonresident alien is NOT a "U.S. person" and may NOT lawfully elect to be treated as one if he is NOT married to one. The only authority for making an election as a nonresident alien to be treated as a "resident alien" is if he is married to one and wants to file jointly pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B) . This option is discussed in the next section.

People born with and/or domiciled within states of the Union are statutory "non-resident non-persons", and most of them are ILLEGALLY filing IRS Form 1040 and thereby:

1. Making an ILLEGAL election to be treated as "resident aliens" when no statute authorizes it.
2. Impersonating a "U.S. citizen" in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §911.
3. Impersonating an officer or employee of the federal government in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
4. Needlessly subjecting themselves to the jurisdiction of federal district courts that would otherwise be "foreign" in relation to them if they had properly described their status as nonresident aliens.

The above is a HUGE mistake on their part and a FRAUD on the IRS' part. The IRS looks the other way and permits this, because this is how they ILLEGALLY manufacture nearly all of the "taxpayers" who they illegally terrorize, uhhh, I mean "service". Any refunds paid out to nonresident aliens who filed IRS Form 1040 and who have not made a lawful election as a person married to a "U.S. person" are unauthorized and unlawful, and would be cognizable under the following I.R.C. provisions:

1. 26 U.S.C. §7405: Action for recovery of erroneous refunds.
2. 26 U.S.C. §7206: Fraud and false statements
3. 26 U.S.C. §7207: Fraudulent returns, statements, or other documents.

Those who would argue otherwise are asked to produce the statute AND implementing regulation specifically authorizing nonresident aliens who are NOT married to "U.S. persons" to make an election to be treated as "resident aliens". It doesn't exist!

5.6.13.3.2.6 Making a lawful election on a government form to become a "resident"

The government has a vested interest to maximize the number of "taxpayers". Their authority to impose an income tax has as a prerequisite a "domicile" within the "United States", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) to include only federal territory not within any Constitutional state of the Union and is not expanded elsewhere under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A to include states of the Union:

> "Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
> [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

If you would like to learn more about the relationship of domicile to income taxation, please read the following free article:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

As we have repeatedly pointed out throughout this document, people born in and domiciled within states of the Union are "nationals" or "state nationals" and not statutory "U.S. citizens". They are "Citizens" under the Fourteenth Amendment but NOT statutory "citizens of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1401. The only real "taxpayers" on an IRS Form 1040 are "aliens" of one kind or another. IRS Published Products Catalog (2003), Document 7130, in fact, says that the only people who can use IRS Form 1040 are "citizens and residents of the United States", both of whom have in common a domicile within the statutory "United States", meaning federal territory. Collectively, "citizens and residents of the United States" having a domicile on federal territory within the statutory "United States" are called "U.S. persons" and are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). Therefore, the government has a vested interest in making "nonresident aliens" in states of the Union into "resident aliens". They do this primarily by encouraging nonresident aliens to volunteer to engage in privileged, excise taxable activities. Under subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code, the only such taxable activity is a "trade or business" or a public office.

In order to learn how the federal government manufactures "taxpayers" out of "nontaxpayers", we therefore should be looking for ways in which "nonresident aliens" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) and domiciled in the states of the Union are turned into "resident aliens" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). From a high level view, it would appear simple, because the only way nonresident alien can become a resident is by changing his domicile and declaring that change on government forms. As our research reveals, this process is a lot more devious and indirect than that. It is so subtle that most people miss it. Once we found out how it was accomplished and identified it in our publications, they immediately hid the evidence!

This ingenious process our corrupted politicians invented to manufacture more "taxpayers" out of people in the states of the Union who started out as nonresident alien "nontaxpayers" is essentially the mechanism by which our public dis-servants destroy the separation of powers that is at the heart of the United States Constitution and thereby assault and destroy our rights and liberties. That separation of powers is insightfully described in the article below:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/Articles/SeparationOfPowersDoctrine.htm

A breakdown of the separation of taxing authority can only occur by the voluntary consent of the people themselves. The states cannot facilitate that breakdown of the separation of powers:

> "State officials thus cannot consent to the enlargement of the powers of Congress beyond those enumerated in the Constitution."
> [New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 142; 112 S.Ct. 2408; 120 L.Ed.2d. 120 (1992)]

That consent to allow federal income taxation within states of the Union requires a voluntary personal exercise of our private right to contract. Our right to contract is the most dangerous right we have, because the exercise of that right can destroy ALL of our other rights, folks! The most dangerous thing about this right is that if we use it unwisely, the government cannot come to our aid. The purpose of the United States Constitution, in fact, is to protect its exercise and it forbids any state, in Article 1, Section 10, to pass any law that would impair the obligation of any contract we sign. The abuse of your right to contract is as dangerous as the abuse of your pecker can be to your marriage, your family, and the lives of generations of people yet unborn!

A person domiciled in a state of the Union, who starts out as a "nonresident alien", can become a "resident", a "taxpayer", and an "individual" under the Internal Revenue Code by making the necessary "elections" in order to be treated as a "resident" engaged in a "trade or business" instead of a "nonresident alien" not engaged in a "trade or business". That election is made as follows:

1. If the "nonresident alien" voluntarily signs and submits Social Security Administration Form SS-5, he becomes a "resident alien". 20 C.F.R. §422.104 says that only "citizens and permanent residents" are eligible to join the program. "nonresident aliens are NOT eligible, so they must voluntarily consent or "elect" to become a "resident" by private law/agreement in order to join.

> Title 20: Employees' Benefits
> PART 422—ORGANIZATION AND PROCEDURES
> Subpart B—General Procedures
> §422.104 Who can be assigned a social security number.

> (a) Persons eligible for SSN assignment. We can assign you a social security number if you meet the evidence requirements in §422.107 and you are:
> (1) A United States citizen; or
> (2) An alien lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence or under other authority of law permitting you to work in the United States (§422.105 describes how we determine if a nonimmigrant alien is permitted to work in the United States); or
> [https://law.justia.com/cfr/title20/20-2.0.1.1.12.2.469.3.html]

Note also that the "nonresident alien" must ALSO become a federal "employee" or "public officer" in order to join, because the above regulation appears in Title 20, which is entitled "Employee benefits". Congress cannot legislate for private employees, but only its own "public employees" or "public officers", and those officers must be engaged in a taxable "trade or business" in order to pay for the employment privileges that they are availing themselves of:

> "The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."
> [City of Boerne v. Florez, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

By becoming a "public officer", you agree to act as a trustee and officer of the "U.S. Inc." corporation defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A) , which has a domicile in the District of Columbia. Therefore, your domicile assumes that of the corporation you represent pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). The exact mechanisms for how the Social Security System transforms a "nonresident alien" into a "resident alien federal employee" are described in detail in the following informative pamphlet:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. Pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3(a), a "nonresident alien" may submit an IRS Form W-4 to his private employer and thereby elect to call his earnings "wages", which makes him "effectively connected with a trade or business". This means, according to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) that he is engaged in a "public office".

> 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements
> Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)–3.

Once you begin earning "wages", your compensation is documented and reported on a W-2 pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041, which says that only "trade or business" earnings can be reported on a W-2. This means, according to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) that the worker is engaged in a "public office". 4 U.S.C. §72 says that all public offices exist ONLY in the District of Columbia, and therefore, you consented to be treated as a "resident" of the District of Columbia for the purposes of the income tax, because you are representing a federal corporation in the District of Columbia as a "public officer" and your effective domicile is the domicile of the corporation pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b):

> TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 3 > § 72
> § 72. Public offices; at seat of Government
> All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law.

3. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4) and 26 U.S.C. §6013(g), he can decide to file an IRS Form 1040, and thereby become a "resident alien". IRS Published Products Catalog (2003), Document 7130 identifies the IRS Form 1040 as being only suitable for use by "citizens and residents of the United States". The "individual" in the title "U.S. Individual Income Tax Return" means a "resident alien" in that scenario. This is explained in the following sources:

3.1. Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 5.5.3: You're Not a U.S. citizen if you file a 1040 form, You're an alien

3.2. Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 5.5.4 entitled: "You're not the U.S. citizen mentioned at the top of the 1040 form if you are a U.S. citizen domiciled in the federal United States"

4. After making the above elections, if the IRS then writes us some friendly "dear taxpayer" letters, and we respond and don't deny that we are "taxpayers" or provide exculpatory proof that we are not, then we are admitting that:

4.1. We are subject to the IRC.

4.2. We are "taxpayers".

The bottom line is that if you act like a duck and quack like one, then the IRS is going to think you are one! That deception usually occurs because we deceived the government about our true status by either filling out the wrong form, or filing the right form out incorrectly and in a way that does not represent our true status. This is covered in our article below:

"Taxpayer" v. "Nontaxpayer": Which one are You?, Family Guardian Fellowship
http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/TaxpayerVNontaxpayer.htm

Through the elections made by the nonresident alien above, it contractually agreed to become a representative of a legal fiction that is a "resident" or "resident alien" or "permanent resident", all of which are equivalent and are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). A "resident" is within the legislative jurisdiction of the of "United States". A "domicile" or "residence" is what puts them within the legislative jurisdiction of the "United States". The "nonresident alien" therefore became a "resident alien" not because they have a physical presence there, but because the SS-5 federal employment contract they signed made them into "representatives" and "public officers" for the federal corporation called the "United States". Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), their effective domicile or residence is that of the federal corporation they represent, which is the "United States", as indicated in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). That corporation, like all corporations, is a "citizen" of the place of its incorporation, which in this case is the District of Columbia:

> "A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only."
> [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

The above mechanisms for DESTROYING the sovereignty of We the People and breaking down the separation of Powers between the state and federal governments are consistent with the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. §1602 to 1611. 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) says that a foreign sovereign, such as a "nonresident alien", surrenders their sovereign immunity by conducting "commerce" within the legislative jurisdiction of the "United States". A nonresident alien who has accomplished one or more of the above steps meets the criteria for the surrender of sovereign immunity because:

1. He is conducting "commerce" within the legislative jurisdiction of the United States pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) as a public officer or a representative of a Social Security Trust that is a "public officer".

> TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1605
> § 1605. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state
> (a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case—
> (2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States;

Through the SS-5 federal job or contract application, the nonresident alien contractually agreed to become a federal "employee" or "public officer" engaged in a "trade or business" who is conducting "commerce" with the government. The Social Security Act and the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are the "employment contract" or "franchise agreement" that they must observe while acting in a representative capacity as a "public officer". That "franchise agreement" governs choice of law should any of the terms of the contract need to be litigated. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d) say that all litigation over the terms of the contract must occur in a federal court under the laws of the District of Columbia.

> § 7701. Definitions

> (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—
> (39) Persons residing outside United States
> If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing in the District of Columbia for purposes of any provision of this title relating to—
> (A) jurisdiction of courts, or

Another way of saying this is that you can't become a federal "employee" or contractor unless you agree to obey what your new boss tells you to do, and the only way that boss, the government, can direct your activities is through "law". This is what we call a "roach trap statute", which is a statute whose benefits entice you into a trap that causes you to acquire the equivalent of a new land-lord. Since kidnapping and identity theft are illegal, then they need your consent or permission to kidnap your legal identity or "res" and move it to the District of Columbia so that it can be "identified" there. See 18 U.S.C. §1201. This is how you became a "res"+"ident", or a "resident" of the District of Columbia. Therefore, you must also agree to be subject to federal law as a "resident" before you can become a "public officer", federal benefit recipient, or contractor. Once you become any one of these three types of entities, 44 U.S.C. §1505(a) and 5 U.S.C. §553(a) say that you also agreed to obey all commands of your new boss, which is Congress, without the need for implementing regulations published in the federal register. The Legislative Branch is the boss, and the Executive Branch works for the Legislative Branch to implement and enforce the will of the sovereign people. In the process of becoming a federal "employee" or "public officer", you also implicitly surrendered ALL of your constitutional rights in the context of your official duties:

> *"The restrictions that the Constitution places upon the government in its capacity as lawmaker, i.e., as the regulator of private conduct, are not the same as the restrictions that it places upon the government in its capacity as employer. We have recognized this in many contexts, with respect to many different constitutional guarantees. Private citizens perhaps cannot be prevented from wearing long hair, but policemen can. Kelley v. Johnson, 425 U.S. 238, 247 (1976). Private citizens cannot have their property searched without probable cause, but in many circumstances government employees can. O'Connor v. Ortega, 480 U.S. 709, 723 (1987) (plurality opinion); id., at 732 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment). Private citizens cannot be punished for refusing to provide the government information that may incriminate them, but government employees can be dismissed when the incriminating information that they refuse to provide relates to the performance of their job. Gardner v. Broderick, 392 U.S. 273, 277 -278 (1968). With regard to freedom of speech in particular: Private citizens cannot be punished for speech of merely private concern, but government employees can be fired for that reason. Connick v. 2. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1332(c) and (d), the nonresident alien, by making the necessary elections, has lost his sovereign immunity as a "foreign sovereign" because he became a "resident" or "citizen" of that foreign state for the purposes of federal law. This is what 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3) below says:

> TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1603
>
> For purposes of this chapter—
> (a) A "foreign state", except as used in section 1608 of this title, includes a political subdivision of a foreign state or an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state as defined in subsection (b).
> (b) An "agency or instrumentality of a foreign state" means any entity—
> (1) which is a separate legal person, corporate or otherwise, and
> (2) which is an organ of a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, or a majority of whose shares or other ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, and
> (3) which is neither a citizen of a State of the United States as defined in section 1332 (c) and (d) of this title, nor created under the laws of any third country.

Only AFTER the above "elections" or consent have been voluntarily procured completely absent any duress can the party become the object of involuntary IRS enforcement, and NOT before.

If no consent was ever explicitly (in writing) or implicitly (by conduct) given or if consent was procured through deceit, fraud, or duress, or was procured without full disclosure and "reasonable notice" ON THE AGREEMENT ITSELF of all rights being surrendered, the contract is voidable at the option of the person subject to the duress but not automatically void:

> "An agreement [consent] obtained by duress, coercion, or intimidation is invalid, since the party coerced is not exercising his free will, and the test is not so much the means by which the party is compelled to execute the agreement as the state of mind induced.[278] Duress, like fraud, rarely becomes material, except where a contract or conveyance has been made which the maker wishes to avoid. As a general rule, duress renders the contract or conveyance voidable, not void, at the option of the person coerced,[279] and it is susceptible of ratification. Like other voidable contracts, it is valid until it is avoided by the person entitled to avoid it. [280] However, duress in the form of physical compulsion, in which a party is caused to appear to assent when he has no intention of doing so, is generally deemed to render the resulting purported contract void. [281] [4]"
> [American Jurisprudence 2d, Duress, §21 (1999)]

AFTER a nonresident alien domiciled in a state of the Union has made the elections necessary to be treated as though he is "effectively connected with a trade or business" by voluntarily signing and submitting an IRS Form W-4, the code says he becomes a "resident alien". In fact, we allege that the term "effectively connected" is a code word for "contracted" or "consented" to procure "social insurance" as a federal "employee". The act of engaging in a "trade or business" makes nonresident aliens subject to the code, and under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d), their "effective domicile" shifts to the District of Columbia. Beyond that point, they become parties to federal law and whenever they walk into a federal district court, the courts are obligated to treat them as though they effectively reside in the District of Columbia. The older versions of the Treasury Regulations demonstrate EXACTLY how this election process works to transform "nonresident aliens" into "residents" who are then "taxpayers":

> A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.
> [Amended by T.D. 8813, Federal Register: February 2, 1999 (Volume 64, Number 21), Page 4967-4975]

Shortly after we posted the information contained in this article on our website, the Treasury deleted the above regulation and replaced it on the Government Printing Office website with a temporary regulation that doesn't tell the truth quite so plainly. They don't want you to know how they made you into a "resident". This is their secret weapon, folks.

The trouble and inherent corruption associated with this deceitful manufacturing process is that:

1. The government won't admit on its website or its publications or its phone support that your voluntary consent is necessary as a nonresident alien nontaxpayer in order to become a resident alien taxpayer.
2. The IRS Publications don't contain either legal definitions that would help you understand the full extent of your tax obligation and they won't talk with you about the law on the phone, because then you would instantly realize that they have no authority.
3. The courts refuse to hold the IRS responsible for telling the truth. See:
   Federal Courts and the IRS' Own IRM Say IRS is NOT RESPONSIBLE for Its Actions or Its Words or For Following Its Own Written Procedures, Family Guardian Fellowship
   http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm
4. The IRS won't tell you how to "unvolunteer" or how your consent was procured, because they want everyone to be indentured government slaves in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment.
5. The IRS deceives you on their website by omitting key truths contained in this pamphlet from their website and by refusing to address completely in their propaganda literature, such as the following:
   Rebutted Version of the IRS "The Truth About Frivolous Tax Arguments", Form #08.005
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
6. If you confront them with the truth, they are silent and won't respond, because if they did, their Ponzi scheme would cave in and people would leave the system in droves.
7. Those who expose these truths are often persecuted by the IRS for reminding people that you can unvolunteer.
8. Private companies and financial institutions who file false information returns (e.g. W-2, 1099) that connect you to a "trade or business" (pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041) or who compel you to sign or submit either an SS-5 to get an identifying number or W-4 to procure a job and who threaten to either not hire you or fire you if they don't are engaged in extortion, money laundering, and racketeering for which the government should be prosecuting them. However, the Dept. of Justice looks the other way because they want the plunder to continue flowing into their checking account.

The sin and corruption that keeps our tax system going is therefore mainly a sin of "omission", rather than "commission". Silence by the IRS and failure to act properly or in the best interests of all Americans, in fulfillment of the fiduciary duty that public servants have, by informing Americans of exactly what the law says and requires is what allows the fraud to continue.

Lastly, THE MOST IMPORTANT thing you can have in your administrative record with the government is evidence of duress being instituted against you as described above. An affidavit of duress should be maintained at all times documenting the unlawful and coerced nature of all information returns filed against you, all W-4's, SS-5 forms, etc. that were instituted against you, so that you have legal recourse to recover taxes or penalties unlawfully or illegally collected against you using Form #04.001. Treasury Decision 3445 says that if you pay a tax or have it levied or deducted from your pay, the MOST important thing you can do is establish proof on the record of the company that did it of duress and that it is being collected "under protest", or else you forfeit your right to recover it in court:

> The principle that taxes voluntarily paid can not be recovered back is thoroughly established. It has been so declared in the following cases in the Supreme Court: United States v. New York & Cuba Mail Steamship Co. (200 U.S. 488, 493, 494); Chesebrough v. United States (192 U.S. 253); Little v. Bowers (134 U.S. 547, 554); Wright v. Blakeslee (101 U.S. 174, 178); Railroad Co. v. Commissioner (98 U.S. 541, 543); Lamborn v. County Commissioners (97 U.S. 181); Elliott v. Swartwout (10 Pet. 137). And there are numerous like cases in other Federal corn: Procter & Gamble Co. v. United States (281 Fed. 1014); Vaughan v. Riordan (280 Fed. 742, 745); Beer v. Moffatt (192 Fed. 984, affirmed 209 Fed. 779); Newhall v. Jordan (160 Fed. 661); Christie Street Commission Co. v. United States (126 Fed. 991); Kentucky Bank v. Stone (88 Fed. 383); Corkie v. Maxwell (7 Fed.Cas. 3231).
> And the rule of the Federal courts is not at all peculiar to them. It is the settled general rule of the State courts as well that no matter what may be the ground of the objection to the tax or assessment if it has been paid voluntarily and without compulsion it can not be recovered back in an action at law, unless there is some constitutional or statutory provision which gives to one so paying such a right notwithstanding the payment was made without compulsion. --Adams v. New Bedford (155 Mass. 317); McCue v. Monroe County (162 N.Y. 235); Taylor v. Philadelphia Board of Health (31 P. St. 73); Williams v. Merritt (152 Mich. 621); Gould v. Hennepin County (76 Minn. 379); Martin v. Kearney County (62 Minn. 538); Gar v. Hurd (92 Ills. 315); Slimmer v. Chickasaw County (140 Iowa. 448); Warren v. San Francisco (150 Calif. 167); State v. Chicago & C. R. Co. (165 No. 597).
> And it has been many times held, in the absence of a statute on the subject, that mere payment under protest does not save a payment from being voluntary, in the sense which forbids a recovery back of the tax paid, if it was not made under any duress, compulsion, or threats, or under the pressure of process immediately available for the forcible collection of the tax.--Dexter v. Boston (176 Mass. 247); Flower v. Lance (59 N.Y. 603); Williams v. Merritt (152 Mich. 621); Oakland Cemetery Association v. Ramsey County (98 Minn. 404); Robins v. Latham (134 No. 466); Whitbeck v. Minch (48 Ohio.St. 210); Peebles v. Pittsburgh.(l0l Pa. St. 304); Montgomery v. Cowlitz County (14 Wash. 230); Cincinnati & C. R. Co. v. Hamilton County (120 Tenn. 1).

The principle that a tax or an assessment voluntarily paid can not be recovered back is an ancient one in the common lam and is of general application. See Cooley on Taxation (vol. 2, 3d ed. p. 1495). That eminent authority also points out that every man is supposed to know the law, and if he voluntarily makes a payment which the law would not compel him to make he can not afterwards assign his ignorance of the law as a reason why the State should furnish him with legal remedies to recover it back. And he adds:

5.6.13.3.3 Compelled Use of Taxpayer Identification Numbers (TINs)

The use of a Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN) in connection with any financial transaction creates a legal presumption that the party using it is a person with a domicile on federal territory. This is confirmed by 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(g)(1)(i), in which "nonresident aliens" are not listed:

26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(g)

(g) Special rules for taxpayer identifying numbers issued to foreign persons—

(1) General rule—

(i) Social security number.

A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the Internal Revenue Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may establish a different status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service under such procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the Internal Revenue Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the Internal Revenue Service will assign this status to the individual's social security number.

The only legal requirement to use taxpayer identification numbers is found in the following regulation at 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(b)(1):

26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(b)

(b) Requirement to furnish one's own number—

(1) U.S. persons.

Every U.S. person who makes under this title a return, statement, or other document must furnish its own taxpayer identifying number as required by the forms and the accompanying instructions.

The above regulation only imposes such a requirement upon a "U.S. person". That "person" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) as an entity with a domicile on federal territory. Note that "citizens" and "residents" and federal corporations and all other entities listed below have in common a domicile in the "United States", which is federal territory:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(30) United States person

The term "United States person" means -
(A) a [corporate] citizen or resident [alien] of the [federal] United States,
(B) a domestic partnership,
(C) a domestic corporation*,*
(D) any estate (other than a foreign estate, within the meaning of paragraph (31)), and
(E) any trust if -

(i) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust, and
(ii) one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust.

If you look on the following:

IRS Form SS-4 Application for an Employer Identification Number (EIN) http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSFormSS4.pdf

... the form allows you to fill it out in such a way that you are NOT an "employer" or a "taxpayer", but if you don't do so, then the implication is that you are in fact a "U.S. person".

Both SSNs and TINs are made equivalent by the following authorities: 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(41), 26 U.S.C. §6109(d), and 26 C.F.R. §301.7701-1. The following statute makes it a crime to compel use of Social Security Numbers, and by implication, Taxpayer Identification Numbers.

> TITLE 42 - THE PUBLIC HEALTH AND WELFARE
> CHAPTER 7 - SOCIAL SECURITY
> SUBCHAPTER II - FEDERAL OLD-AGE, SURVIVORS, AND DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS
> Sec. 408. Penalties
> (a) In general
> Whoever -...
> (8) discloses, uses, or compels the disclosure of the social security number of any person in violation of the laws of the United States; shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction thereof shall be fined under title 18 or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both.

Consequently, the use of a government identifying number is presumed to be voluntary and not compelled, unless you, the person being compelled, state otherwise in correspondence to them and the people you do business with. Therefore, providing such a number in the context of any transaction constitutes consent and a voluntary "election" to be treated as a "U.S. person" and a person with a domicile on federal territory. If you started out as a nonresident alien, that election is authorized by 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h), but ONLY if are an alien and NOT a national or non-citizen national.

Those who start out as "non-resident non-persons" and who open a financial account at banks as human beings by default:

1. Are required to provide a Social Security Number (SSN) or Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN) when opening the account.
2. Open all such accounts as statutory "U.S. persons" with a domicile on federal territory because they provided a government identifying number.

Banks in implementing the above policies, are acting as agents of the national government in a quasi-governmental capacity and also become the equivalent of federal employment recruiters. 31 C.F.R. §202.2 confirms that all banks who participate in FDIC insurance are agents of the national government. 12 U.S.C. §90 also makes all national banks into agents of the U.S. Government. It would be more advantageous to open an international bank account to avoid this issue. In their capacity as agents of the national government, you can be sure that banks subject to federal regulation are going to want to recruit more "employee" and "public officers" engaged in the "trade or business" franchise.

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Even for those people smart enough to know about the IRS form W-8BEN and how to properly fill it out, most banks opening business accounts even in the case of businesses that are "non-resident non-person" refuse to open such accounts without an Employer Identification Number (EIN) as a matter of policy and not law.

1. If you ask them what law authorizes such a policy, typically they:
   1.1. Can't produce the law and are operating on policy rather than law.
   1.2. May often say that the USA Patriot Act "requires it", but this act doesn't apply outside of federal territory and there is no such provision contained within it anyway. They are lying.

2. If you attempt to offer them forms that correctly describe your status as a "foreigner", a "non-resident non-person", but not a "foreign person" who therefore has no requirement to supply a number, they may just say that their policy is not to accept such forms and to refuse you an account. Therefore, you have to commit perjury to even get an account with them.
3. If they won't accept your forms correctly describing your status and you modify their forms to correctly reflect your status, they may also tell you that they have a policy not to open an account for you and they may even refuse to explain why.

In practical terms then, the law doesn't require businesses who properly identify themselves as "non-resident non-persons not engaged in a trade or business" to have or use identifying numbers but most are compelled by adhesion contracts of banking monopolies into having one anyway. As a matter of fact, 26 C.F.R. §306.10, Footnote 2, 31 C.F.R. §103.34(a)(3)(x), 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(b)(2) all expressly exclude "nonresident aliens" who are not engaged in the "trade or business"/"public office" franchise from the requirement to furnish identifying numbers. In that sense, most banks are acting as the equivalent of federal employment recruiters and compelling their customers to commit perjury on their applications by stating indirectly that they are "resident aliens" with a domicile on federal territory who are lawfully engaged in a public office within the U.S. government. This is a huge scam that is the main source of jurisdiction of the IRS over otherwise private companies.

5.6.13.3.4 Deception through "words of art"

5.6.13.3.4.1 Introduction to identity theft using language abuse: abusing "words of art", the rules of statutory construction, and unconstitutional presumptions

> "Old age and treachery will always overcome youth and skill."
> [Federal judge]

Other famous and very frequent tactics of corrupt judges and administrative personnel is to:

1. Abuse the word "includes" as a way to essentially to turn a specific statutory "definitions" into NON-definition that can mean anything they want it to mean. For instance, they will say that "includes" is not used as a term of LIMITATION and that they can "include" anything they want in the definition, such as the definition of "includes" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(c).

> 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701(c) INCLUDES AND INCLUDING.
> The terms 'include' and 'including' when used in a definition contained in this title shall not be deemed to exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined."

The purpose for providing a statutory definition is to SUPERSEDE the common or ordinary meaning of a word, not ENLARGE it. The only other use for the word "includes" is in an additive sense, but this application is a method of ADDING to EXISTING statutory definitions, not adding the ORDINARY meaning to the STATUTORY meaning. This constructive fraud is the most common method of unlawfully enlarging federal jurisdiction and is exhaustively rebutted in:

Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. Abuse the rules of statutory construction to add things or classes of things that do not expressly appear in statutory definitions of especially geographical "words of art", such as "State" and "United States". This violates the following rules of statutory construction:

> "When a statute includes an explicit definition, we must follow that definition, even if it varies from that term's ordinary meaning. Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484-485 (1987) ("It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term"); Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. at 392-393, n. 10 ("As a rule, `a definition which declares what a term "means" . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated'"); Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lenroot, 323 U.S. 490, 502 (1945); Fox v. Standard Oil Co. of N.J., 294 U.S. 87, 95-96 (1935) (Cardozo, J.); see also 2A N. Singer, Sutherland on Statutes and Statutory Construction § 47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute, read "as a whole," post at 998 [530 U.S. 943] (THOMAS, J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition. That definition does not include the Attorney General's restriction -- "the child up to the head." Its words, "substantial portion," indicate the contrary."
> [Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914 (2000)]

> "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100.Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

3. Make conclusive presumptions about your status that are not substantiated with evidence and which cannot be used as a substitute for evidence without violating due process of law and rendering the final judgment void:

> This court has never treated a presumption as any form of evidence. See, e.g., A.C. Aukerman Co. v. R.L. Chaides Constr. Co., 960 F.2d. 1020, 1037 (Fed.Cir.1992) ("[A] presumption is not evidence."); see also Del Vecchio v. Bowers, 296 U.S. 280, 286, 56 S.Ct. 190, 193, 80 L.Ed. 229 (1935) ("[A presumption] cannot acquire the attribute of evidence in the claimant's favor."); New York Life Ins. Co. v. Gamer, 303 U.S. 161, 171, 58 S.Ct. 500, 503, 82 L.Ed. 726 (1938) ("[A] presumption is not evidence and may not be given weight as evidence."). Although a decision of this court, Jensen v. Brown, 19 F.3d. 1413, 1415 (Fed.Cir.1994) , dealing with presumptions in VA law is cited for the contrary proposition, the Jensen court did not so decide.
> [Routen v. West, 142 F.3d. 1434 C.A.Fed.,1998]

> *(1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests: A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. > [Federal Civil Trials and Evidence, Rutter Group, paragraph 8:4993, p. 8K-34]

Examples of unconstitutional presumptions that violate due process of law and render a void judgment include:

3.1. Presume that CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY contexts of geographical terms are equivalent. They are not and in fact are MUTUALLY exclusive.

3.2. Presume that the STATUTORY definition and the COMMON definition are equivalent. For instance, an "employee" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) and 5 U.S.C. §2105(a) is a public officer in the U.S. government and is NOT equivalent to a PRIVATE employee because the ability to regulate PRIVATE conduct is repugnant to the Constitution. Governments are instituted to PROTECT private rights and you protect them by not burdening or regulating or punishing their exercise.

> "The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."
> [City of Boerne v. Florez, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

Of course all of the above methods are abused to unlawfully extend federal jurisdiction into legislatively foreign jurisdictions such as states of the Union, and to unconstitutionally break down the separation of powers between the states and the national government that is the foundation of the constitution. This constitutes a conspiracy against rights protected by the Constitution and is exhaustively described in:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.13.3.4.2 Deliberately Confusing Statutory "Nonresident Aliens" with "Aliens"

A popular technique promoted and encouraged by the IRS is to:

1. Deliberately confuse "nonresident aliens" with "aliens". "nonresident aliens" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) are NOT a subset of "aliens" defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
2. Deliberately confuse CONSTITUTIONAL "non-resident aliens" with STATUTORY "nonresident aliens" under the I.R.C. They are NOT the same. One can be a CONSTITUTIONAL "non-resident alien" as the U.S. Supreme Court calls it while NOT being an "nonresident alien" under the I.R.C. because the two contexts rely on DIFFERENT definitions and contexts for the terms.
3. Falsely tell you or imply that "nonresident aliens" include only those aliens that are not resident within the jurisdiction of the United States.
4. Deceive you into believing that "nonresident aliens" and "nonresident alien individuals" are equivalent. They are not. It is a maxim of law that things that are similar are NOT the same:

> Talis non est eadem, nam nullum simile est idem.
> What is like is not the same, for nothing similar is the same. 4 Co. 18.
> [Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;
> SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm]

5. Refuse to define what a "nonresident alien" is and what is included in the definition within 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B).
6. Define what it ISN'T, and absolutely refuse to define what it IS.
7. Refuse to acknowledge that "nationals" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) are "nonresident aliens" if they are engaged in a public office in the national government and "non-resident non-persons" if not engaged in a public office.

All of the confusion and deception surrounding "nonresident alien" status is introduced and perpetuated mainly in the IRS Publications and the Treasury Regulations. It is not found in the Internal Revenue Code. "Nonresident aliens" and "aliens" are not equivalent in law, and confusing them has the following direct injurious consequences against those who are state nationals:

1. Prejudicing their ability to claim "nonresident alien" status at financial institutions and employers. This occurs because without either a Treasury Regulation or IRS publication they can point to which proves that they are a "nonresident alien", they will not have anything they can show these institutions in order that their status will be recognized when they open accounts or pursue employment. This compels them in violation of the law because of the ignorance of bank clerks and employers into declaring that they are "U.S. persons" and enumerating themselves just in order to obtain the services or employment that they seek.
2. Unlawfully preventing state nationals from being able to change their domicile if they mistakenly claim to be "residents" of the United States. 26 C.F.R. §1.871-5 says that an intention of an "alien" to change his domicile/residence is insufficient to change it whereas a similar intention on the part of a state national is sufficient.

The above injuries to the rights of state nationals is very important, because we prove in the following document and elsewhere on our website that all humans born within and domiciled within the exclusive jurisdiction of a state of the Union are state nationals pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), and so this injury is widespread and vast in its consequences:

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Let's show some of the IRS deception to disguise the availability of "nonresident alien" status to state nationals so that they don't use it. Below is the definition of "nonresident alien":

An alien individual who has made an election under section 6013(g) or (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a nonresident alien individual for purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder.*

> (a) As used in this chapter—

> *(3) The term "alien" means any person not a citizen or national of the United States.

Notice based on the above definitions that:

1. They define what "alien" and "nonresident alien" are NOT, but not what they ARE.
2. The definition of "nonresident alien" is NOT equivalent to "alien". The two overlap, but neither is a subset of the other. Otherwise, why have two definitions?
3. There are three classes of entities that are "nonresident aliens", which include:
   3.1. "Aliens" with no domicile or residence within the STATUTORY "United States", meaning federal territory.

3.2. State citizens born within and domiciled within Constitutional states of the Union and defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
3.3. "non-citizen nationals of the United States" born in possessions and defined in 8 U.S.C. §1408. These areas include American Samoa and Swains Island.

NOTE that Items 3.2 and 3.3 above are not "ALIENS" OF any kind. Under Title 8, you cannot simultaneously be an "alien" in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) and a "national of the United States" in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22). Item 3.3 above is corroborated by:

1. The content of IRS Publication 519, Tax Guide for Aliens, which obtusely mentions what it calls "U.S. nationals", which it then defines as persons domiciled in American Samoa and Swains Island who do not elect to become statutory "U.S. citizens".

> "A U.S. national is an alien who, although not a U.S. citizen, owes his or her allegiance to the United States. U.S. nationals include American Samoans, and Northern Mariana Islanders who choose to become U.S. nationals instead of U.S. citizens"
> [IRS Publication 519, Tax Guide for Aliens (2007), p. 43]

The above statement is partially false. A statutory "U.S. national" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) is NOT an "alien", because aliens exclude "nationals of the United States" based on the definition of "alien" found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3). The "U.S. national" to which they refer also very deliberately is neither mentioned nor defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code or the Treasury Regulations as being "nonresident aliens", even though they in fact are and Pub. 519 admits that they are. The only statutory definition of "U.S. national" is found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) and 8 U.S.C. §1408. However, the existence of this person is also found on IRS Form 1040NR itself, which mentions it as a status as being a "nonresident alien". By the way, don't let the government fool you by using the above as evidence in a legal proceeding because it ISN'T competent evidence and cannot form the basis for a reasonable belief or willfulness. The IRS itself says you cannot and should not rely on anything in any of their publications. The IRS, in fact, routinely deceives and lies in their publications and their forms and does so with the blessings and even protection of the federal district courts, even though they hypocritically sue the rest of us for "abusive tax shelters" if we offer the public equally misleading information. For details on this subject, see:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. 26 U.S.C. §877(a), which describes a "nonresident alien" who lost citizenship to avoid taxes and therefore is subject to a special assessment as a punishment for that act of political dis-association. Notice the statute doesn't say a "citizen of the United States" losing citizenship, but a "nonresident alien". The "citizenship" they are referring to is the "nationality" described in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and NOT the statutory "U.S. citizen" status found in 8 U.S.C. §1401.

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART II > Subpart A > § 877
> § 877. Expatriation to avoid tax
> (a) Treatment of expatriates

> Every nonresident alien individual to whom this section applies and who, within the 10-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year, lost United States citizenship shall be taxable for such taxable year in the manner provided in subsection (b) if the tax imposed pursuant to such subsection (after any reduction in such tax under the last sentence of such subsection) exceeds the tax which, without regard to this section, is imposed pursuant to section 871.

So let's get this straight: 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i) both say that you cannot be an "alien" if you are a "national" and yet, the IRS Publications such as IRS Publication 519, Tax Guide for Aliens and the Treasury Regulations frequently identify these same "nationals" as "aliens". Earth calling IRS. Hello? Anybody home? The IRS knows that the key to being sovereign as an American National born in a state of the Union and domiciled there is being a nonresident alien not engaged in a trade or business. So what do they do to prevent people from achieving this status? They surround the status with cognitive dissonance, lies, falsehoods, and mis-directions. Hence one of our favorite sayings:

> "The truth about the income tax is so precious to the government that it must be surrounded by a bodyguard of lies."
> [SEDM]

Nowhere within the Internal Revenue Code, the Treasury Regulations, or IRS Publication 519, Tax Guide for Aliens will you find a definition of the term "national" which is mentioned in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), and which describes a person born within and domiciled within a state of the Union. However, these persons are treated the same as "U.S. nationals", which means they are "nonresident aliens" and not "aliens". Consequently, unlike aliens, those who are "nationals":

1. Are not bound by any of the regulations pertaining to "aliens", because they are NOT "aliens" as legally defined..
2. Do not have to file IRS Form 8840 in order to associate with the "foreign state" they are domiciled within in order to be automatically exempt from Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A taxes.
3. Are forbidden to file a "Declaration of Intention" to become "U.S. residents" pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-4 and IRS Form 1078.

If you are still confused at this point about state nationals and who they are, you may want to go back to section 4.12.8 earlier and examine the tables and diagrams there until the relationships become clear in your mind.

Moving on, why does the IRS play this devious sleight of hand? Remember: everything happens for a reason, and here are the reasons:

1. IRS has a vested interest to maximize the number of "taxpayers" contributing to their scam. Taxation is based on legal domicile.

> "Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
> [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

   Therefore, IRS has an interest in compelling persons domiciled in states of the Union into falsely declaring their domicile within the statutory "United States". The status that implies domicile is "U.S. persons" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). "U.S. persons" include either statutory "nationals and citizens of the United States" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 or "resident aliens" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) and both have in common a legal domicile in the "United States".
2. IRS does not want people born within and domiciled within states of the Union, who are "nationals" but NOT "U.S. nationals" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not STATUTORY "citizens" per 8 U.S.C. §1401 to know that "nationals" are included in the definition of "nonresident alien". This would cause a mass exodus from the tax system and severely limit the number of "taxpayers" that they may collect from.
3. IRS wants to prevent state nationals from using the nonresident alien status so as to force them, via presumption, into falsely declaring their status to be that of a "U.S. person" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). This will create a false presumption that they maintain a domicile on federal territory and are therefore subject to federal jurisdiction and "taxpayers".
4. By refusing to define EXACTLY what is included in the definition of "nonresident alien" in both Treasury Regulations and IRS Publications or acknowledging that "nationals" are included in the definition, those opening bank accounts at financial institutions and starting employment will be deprived of evidence which they can affirmatively use to establish their status with these entities, which in effect compels presumption by financial institutions and employers within states of the Union that they are "U.S. persons" who MUST have an identifying number, such as a Social Security Number or a Taxpayer Identification Number. This forces them to participate in a tax system that they can't lawfully participate in without unknowingly making false statements about their legal status by mis-declaring themselves to be "U.S. persons".

Below are several examples of this deliberate, malicious IRS confusion between "aliens" and "nonresident aliens" found within the IRS Publications and Treasury Regulations, where "nonresident aliens" are referred to as "aliens" that we have found so far. All of these examples are the result of a false presumption that "nonresident aliens" are a subset of all "aliens", which is NOT the case. We were able to find no such confusion within the I.R.C., but it is rampant within the Treasury Regulations.

1. IRS Publication 515: Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Entities. This confusion is found throughout this IRS publication.

2. IRS Publication 519, Tax Guide for Aliens. This publication should not even be discussion "nonresident aliens", because they aren't a subset of "aliens" unless the word "nonresident alien" is followed with the word "individual".

PART 1_INCOME TAXES--Table of Contents
Sec. 1.872-2 Exclusions from gross income of nonresident alien individuals.

(b) Compensation paid by foreign employer to participants in certain exchange or training programs.

(1) Exclusion from income.

Compensation paid to a nonresident alien individual for the period that the nonresident alien individual is temporarily present in the United States as a nonimmigrant under subparagraph (F) (relating to the admission of students into the United States) or subparagraph (J) (relating to the admission of teachers, trainees, specialists, etc., into the United States) of section 101(a)(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(15) (F) or (J)) shall be excluded from gross income if the compensation is paid to such alien by his foreign employer. Compensation paid to a nonresident alien individual by the U.S. office of a domestic bank which is acting as paymaster on behalf of a foreign employer constitutes compensation paid by a foreign employer for purposes of this paragraph if the domestic bank is reimbursed by the foreign employer for such payment. A nonresident alien individual who is temporarily present in the United States as a nonimmigrant under such subparagraph (J) includes a nonresident alien individual admitted to the United States as an "exchange visitor" under section 201 of the U.S. Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948 (22 U.S.C. 1446), which section was repealed by section 111 of the Mutual Education and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961 (75 Stat. 538).

7. 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(6)-1A(c).
8. 26 C.F.R. §509.103(b)(3).
9. 26 C.F.R. §509.108(a)(1)

"Nonresident aliens" are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B). Aliens are defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3). "Resident aliens" are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B). The relationship between these three entities are as follows, in the context of income taxes:

1. "non-resident non-person": Those with no domicile on federal territory and who are born either in a foreign country, a state of the Union, or within the federal zone. Also called a "nonresident", "stateless person", or "transient foreigner". They are exclusively PRIVATE and beyond the reach of the civil statutory law because:
   1.1. They are not a "person" or "individual" because not engaged in an elected or appointed office.
   1.2. They have not waived sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97.
   1.3. They have not "purposefully" or "consensually" availed themselves of commerce within the exclusive or general jurisdiction of the national government within federal territory.
   1.4. They waived the "benefit" of any and all licenses or permits in the context of a specific transaction or agreement.
   1.5. In the context of a specific business dealing, they have not invoked any statutory status under federal civil law that might connect them with a government franchise, such as "U.S. citizen", "U.S. resident", "person", "individual", "taxpayer", etc.
   1.6. If they are demanded to produce an identifying number, they say they don't consent and attach the following form to every application or withholding document:

Why It is Illegal for Me to Request or Use a "Taxpayer Identification Number", Form #04.205 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. "Aliens" or "alien individuals": Those born in a foreign country and not within any state of the Union or within any federal territory.
   2.1. "Alien" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) as a person who is neither a citizen nor a national.
   2.2. "Alien individual" is defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i).
   2.3. An alien is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) as a person who is neither a statutory "U.S. citizen" per 8 U.S.C. §1401 nor a "national of the United States" per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).
   2.4. An alien with no domicile in the "United States" is presumed to be a "nonresident alien" pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-4(b).

3. "Residents" or "resident aliens": An "alien" or "alien individual" with a legal domicile on federal territory.
   3.1. "Resident aliens" are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
   3.2. A "resident alien" is an alien as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) who has a legal domicile on federal territory that is no part of the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union.
   3.3. An "alien" becomes a "resident alien" by filing IRS Form 1078 pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-4(c)(ii) and thereby electing to have a domicile on federal territory.
4. "Nonresident aliens": Those with no domicile on federal territory and who are born either in a foreign country, a state of the Union, or within the federal zone. They serve in a public office in the national but not state government.
   4.1. Defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B).
   4.2. A "nonresident alien" is defined as a person who is neither a statutory "citizen" pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) nor a statutory "resident" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
   4.3. A person who is a "non-citizen national" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1452 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) is a "nonresident alien", but only if they are lawfully engaged in a public office of the national government.
5. "Nonresident alien individuals": Those who are aliens and who do not have a domicile on federal territory.
   5.1. Status is indicated in block 3 of the IRS Form W-8BEN under the term "Individual".
   5.2. Includes only nonresidents not domiciled on federal territory but serving in public offices of the national government. "person" and "individual" are synonymous with said office in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343.
6. Convertibility between "aliens", "resident aliens", and "nonresident aliens", and "nonresident alien individuals":
   6.1. A "nonresident alien" is not the legal equivalent of an "alien" in law nor is it a subset of "alien".
   6.2. IRS Form W-8BEN, Block 3 has no block to check for those who are "non-resident non-persons" but not "nonresident aliens" or "nonresident alien individuals". Thus, the submitter of this form who is a statutory "non-resident non-person" but not a "nonresident alien" or "nonresident alien individual" is effectively compelled to make an illegal and fraudulent election to become an alien and an "individual" if they do not add a block for "transient foreigner" or "Union State Citizen" to the form. See section 5.3 of the following:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

   6.3. 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B) authorize a "nonresident alien" who is married to a statutory "U.S. citizen" as defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) to make an "election" to become a "resident alien".
   6.4. It is unlawful for an unmarried "state national" pursuant to either 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) or 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) to become a "resident alien". This can only happen by either fraud or mistake.
   6.5. An alien may overcome the presumption that he is a "nonresident alien" and change his status to that of a "resident alien" by filing IRS Form 1078 pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-4(c)(ii) while he is in the "United States".
   6.6. The term "residence" can only lawfully be used to describe the domicile of an "alien". Nowhere is this term used to describe the domicile of a "state national" or a "nonresident alien". See 26 C.F.R. §1.871-2.
   6.7. The only way a statutory "alien" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) can become both a "state national" and a "nonresident alien" at the same time is to be naturalized pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1421 and to have a domicile in either a U.S. possession or a state of the Union.
7. Sources of confusion on these issues:
   7.1. One can be a "non-resident non-person" without being an "individual" or a "nonresident alien individual" under the Internal Revenue Code. An example would be a human being born within the exclusive jurisdiction of a state of the Union who is therefore a "state national" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) who does not participate in Social Security or use a Taxpayer Identification Number.
   7.2. The term "United States" is defined in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).
   7.3. The term "United States" for the purposes of citizenship is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38).
   7.4. Any "U.S. Person" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) who is not found in the "United States" (District of Columbia pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10)) shall be treated as having an effective domicile within the District of Columbia pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d) .
   7.5. The term "United States" is equivalent for the purposes of statutory "citizens" pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) and "citizens" as used in the Internal Revenue Code. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).
   7.6. The term "United States" as used in the Constitution of the United States is NOT equivalent to the statutory definition of the term used in:
      7.6.1. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).
      7.6.2. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38).
      The "United States" as used in the Constitution means the states of the Union and excludes federal territory, while the term "United States" as used in federal statutory law means federal territory and excludes states of the Union.
   7.7. A constitutional "citizen of the United States" as mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment is NOT equivalent to a statutory "national and citizen of the United States" as used in 8 U.S.C. §1401. See:

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7.8. In the case of jurisdiction over CONSTITUTIONAL aliens only (meaning foreign NATIONALS), the term "United States" implies all 50 states and the federal zone, and is not restricted only to the federal zone. See:

7.8.1. Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7.8.2. Kleindienst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753 (1972)

> In accord with ancient principles of the international law of nation-states, the Court in The Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U.S. 581, 609 (1889), and in Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893), held broadly, as the Government describes it, Brief for Appellants 20, that the power to exclude aliens is "inherent in sovereignty, necessary for maintaining normal international relations and defending the country against foreign encroachments and dangers - a power to be exercised exclusively by the political branches of government . . . ." Since that time, the Court's general reaffirmations of this principle have [408 U.S. 753, 766] been legion. 6 The Court without exception has sustained Congress' "plenary power to make rules for the admission of aliens and to exclude those who possess those characteristics which Congress has forbidden." Boutilier v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, 387 U.S. 118, 123 (1967). "[O]ver no conceivable subject is the legislative power of Congress more complete than it is over" the admission of aliens. Oceanic Navigation Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U.S. 320, 339 (1909).

7.8.3. Chae Chan Ping v. U.S., 130 U.S. 581 (1889)

> While under our constitution and form of government the great mass of local matters is controlled by local authorities, the United States, in their relation to foreign countries and their subjects or citizens, are one nation, invested with powers which belong to independent nations, the exercise of which can be invoked for the maintenance of its absolute independence and security throughout its entire territory. *The powers to declare war, make treaties, suppress insurrection, repel invasion, regulate foreign commerce, secure republican governments to the states, and admit subjects of other nations to citizenship, are all sovereign powers, restricted in their exercise only by the constitution itself and considerations of public policy and justice which control, more or less, the conduct of all civilized nations. As said by this court in the case of Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 413, speaking by the same great chief justice: 'That the United States form, for many, and for most important purposes, a single nation, has not yet been denied. In war, we are one people. In making peace, we are one people. In all commercial regulations, we are one and the same people. In many other respects, the American people are one; and the government which is alone capable of controlling and managing their interests in all these respects is the government of the Union. It is their government, and in that character they have no other. America has chosen to [130 U.S. 581, 605] be in many respects, and to many purposes, a nation; and for all these purposes her government is complete; to all these objects, it is competent.* The people have declared that in the exercise of all powers given for these objects it is supreme. It can, then, in effecting these objects, legitimately control all individuals or governments within the American territory."
> *"The power of exclusion of foreigners being an incident of sovereignty belonging to the government of the United States as a part of those sovereign powers delegated by the constitution, the right to its exercise at any time when, in the judgment of the government, the interests of the country require it, cannot be granted away or restrained on behalf of any one.* The powers of government are delegated in trust to the United States, and are incapable of transfer to any other parties. They cannot be abandoned or surrendered. Nor can their exercise be hampered, when needed for the public good, by any considerations of private interest. The exercise of these public trusts is not the subject of barter or contract. "

NOTES:

1. Domicile is a prerequisite to having any civil status per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17. One therefore cannot be a statutory "alien" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) without a domicile on federal territory. Without such a domicile, you are a transient foreigner and neither an "alien" nor a "nonresident alien".
2. "United States" is described in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), (a)(36) and 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f) and includes only federal territory and possessions and excludes all Constitutional Union states. This is a product of the separation of powers doctrine that is the heart of the United States Constitution.
3. A "nonresident alien individual" who has made an election under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) to be treated as a "resident alien" is treated as a "nonresident alien" for the purposes of withholding under I.R.C. Subtitle C but retains their status as a "resident alien" under I.R.C. Subtitle A. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) for the definition of "individual", which means "alien".
4. A "non-person" is really just a transient foreigner who is not "purposefully availing themselves" of commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of the United States on federal territory under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97. The real transition from a "NON-person" to an "individual" occurs when one:
   - 4.1. "Purposefully avails themself" of commerce on federal territory and thus waives sovereign immunity. Examples of such purposeful availment are the next three items.
   - 4.2. Lawfully and consensually occupying a public office in the U.S. government and thereby being an "officer and individual" as identified in 5 U.S.C. §2105(a). Otherwise, you are PRIVATE and therefore beyond the civil legislative jurisdiction of the national government.
   - 4.3. Voluntarily files an IRS Form 1040 as a citizen or resident abroad and takes the foreign tax deduction under 26 U.S.C. §911. This too is essentially an act of "purposeful availment". Nonresidents are not mentioned in section 911. The upper left corner of the form identifies the filer as a "U.S. individual". You cannot be an "U.S. individual" without ALSO being an "individual". All the "trade or business" deductions on the form presume the applicant is a public officer, and therefore the "individual" on the form is REALLY a public officer in the government and would be committing FRAUD if he or she was NOT.

4.4. VOLUNTARILY fills out an IRS Form W-7 ITIN Application (IRS identifies the applicant as an "individual") AND only uses the assigned number in connection with their compensation as an elected or appointed public officer. Using it in connection with PRIVATE earnings is FRAUD.

5. What turns a "non-resident NON-person" into a "nonresident alien individual" is meeting one or more of the following two criteria:
   5.1. Residence/domicile in a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1).
   5.2. Residence/domicile as an alien in Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-1(d).
6. All "taxpayers" are STATUTORY "aliens" or "nonresident aliens". The definition of "individual" found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) does NOT include "citizens". The only occasion where a "citizen" can also be an "individual" is when they are abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911 and interface to the I.R.C. under a tax treaty with a foreign country as an alien pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1)

> And when he had come into the house, Jesus anticipated him, saying, "What do you think, Simon? From whom do the kings [governments] of the earth [lawfully] take customs or taxes, from their sons [citizens and subjects] or from strangers ["aliens", which are synonymous with "residents" in the tax code, and exclude "citizens"]?"

> Peter said to Him, "From strangers ["aliens"/"residents" ONLY. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii)]."

> Jesus said to him, "Then the sons [of the King, Constitutional but not statutory "citizens" of the Republic, who are all sovereign "nationals" and "non-resident non-persons" under federal law] are free [sovereign over their own person and labor. e.g. SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY]. "

It is a maxim of law that things with similar but not identical names are NOT the same in law:

We prove extensively on this website that the only persons who are "taxpayers" within the Internal Revenue Code are "resident aliens". Here is just one example:

> NORMAL TAXES AND SURTAXES
> DETERMINATION OF TAX LIABILITY
> Tax on Individuals
> Sec. 1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.
> (a)(2)(ii) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1970, the tax imposed by section 1(d), as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1969, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by a married alien individual who is a nonresident of the United States for all or part of the taxable year or by a foreign estate or trust*. For such years the tax imposed by section 1(c), as amended by such Act, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by an* unmarried alien individual (other than a surviving spouse) who is a nonresident of the United States for all or part of the taxable year. See paragraph (b)(2) of section 1.871-8." [26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii)]

It is a self-serving, malicious attempt to STEAL from the average American for the IRS to confuse a state national who is a non-resident non-person and a "nontaxpayer" with a "resident alien taxpayer". This sort of abuse MUST be stopped IMMEDIATELY. These sort of underhanded and malicious tactics:

1. Are a violation of constitutional rights and due process of law because they cause an injury to rights based on false presumption. See:

   1.3. Vlandis v. Kline, 412 U.S. 441 (1973):

> Statutes creating permanent irrebuttable presumptions have long been disfavored under the Due Process Clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments. *In Heiner v. Donnan, 285 U.S. 312, 52 S.Ct. 358, 76 L.Ed. 772 (1932) , the Court was faced with a constitutional challenge to a federal statute that created a conclusive presumption that gifts made within two years prior to the donor's death were made in contemplation of death, thus requiring payment by his estate of a higher tax. In holding that this irrefutable assumption was so arbitrary and unreasonable as to deprive the taxpayer of his property without due process of law, the Court stated that it had 'held more than once that a statute creating a presumption which operates to deny a fair opportunity to rebut it violates the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.' Id., at 329, 52 S.Ct., at 362. See, e.g., Schlesinger v. Wisconsin, 270 U.S. 230, 46 S.Ct. 260, 70 L.Ed. 557 (1926); Hoeper v. Tax Comm'n, 284 U.S. 206, 52 S.Ct. 120, 76 L.Ed. 248 (1931) . 2. Destroy the separation of powers between the state and federal government. The states of the Union and the people domiciled therein are supposed to be foreign, sovereign, and separate from the Federal government in order to protect their constitutional rights:

> [U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995)]

3. Destroy the sovereignty of people born and domiciled within states of the Union who would otherwise be "stateless persons" and "foreign sovereigns" in relation to the federal government.
4. Cause a surrender of sovereign immunity pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605(b)(3) by involuntarily connecting sovereign individuals with commerce with the federal government in the guise of illegally enforced taxation.
5. Cause Christians to have to serve TWO masters, being the state and federal government, by having to pay tribute to TWO sovereigns. This is a violation of the following scriptures.

> "No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon."

5.6.13.3.4.3 Deliberately confusing CONSTITUTIONAL "non-resident aliens" (foreign nationals) with STATUTORY "nonresident aliens" (foreign nationals AND state nationals)

This section builds on the previous section to show how the confusion between "nonresident alien" and "alien" is exploited by financial institutions to illegally and FRAUDULENTLY make people into "taxpayers" and/or "U.S. persons" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). A frequent tactic employed especially by the I.R.S. and financial institutions is to falsely presume the following:

1. That CONSTITUTIONAL "non-resident aliens" are the same as STATUTORY "nonresident aliens". They are NOT.
   1.1. By Constitutional we mean those born or naturalized in a foreign COUNTRY.
   1.2. By STATUTORY "nonresident alien" we mean those defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B).
2. That "nonresident aliens" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) are a SUBSET of ALL "aliens" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
3. That because "nonresident aliens" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) are a subset of "aliens" 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A), then an state citizen not domiciled on federal territory CANNOT possibly be a "nonresident alien" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B).

The above false presumptions are reinforced by the fact that both STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL "aliens" (8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3)) DO IN FACT imply the SAME thing, and that thing is a human being born or naturalized in a foreign country. People therefore try to mistakenly apply the same rules to the term "nonresident alien". These types of false presumptions are extremely damaging to your constitutional rights and the purpose of making them, in fact, is to DESTROY your rights. Most of the time, such presumptions go unnoticed by the average American, which is why they are so frequently employed by covetous and crafty lawyers in the government who want to STEAL from you by deceiving you.

In the legal field CONTEXT is everything. There are two main contexts for legal "terms":

1. Statutory.
2. Constitutional.

These two contexts are completely different and oftentimes mutually exclusive and have a profound effect on the meaning of the citizenship terms used in federal law and more importantly, in the Internal Revenue Code itself. This is especially true with geographic terms such as "citizen", "national", "resident", and "alien", "United States", etc.

Those opening financial accounts are frequently victimized by such DELIBERATELY false presumptions and must be especially sensitive to them. The best place to start in learning about this deception is to read the following memorandum on this website:

> Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The best way to deal with this sort of malicious presumptions by ignorant financial institutions is to:

1. Show them the definitions of "State" and "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and that CONSTITUTIONAL states are NOT listed and therefore purposefully excluded.

> "When a statute includes an explicit definition, we must follow that definition, even if it varies from that term's ordinary meaning. Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484-485 (1987) ("It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term"); Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. at 392-393, n. 10 ("As a rule, `a definition which declares what a term "means" . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated'"); Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lenroot, 323 U.S. 490, 502 (1945); Fox v. Standard Oil Co. of N.J., 294 U.S. 87, 95-96 (1935) (Cardozo, J.); see also 2A N. Singer, Sutherland on Statutes and Statutory Construction § 47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute, read "as a whole," post at 998 [530 U.S. 943] (THOMAS, J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition. That definition does not include the Attorney General's restriction -- "the child up to the head." Its words, "substantial portion," indicate the contrary."
> [Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914 (2000)]

2. Ask them for a definition of "United States" in the Internal Revenue Code that EXPRESSLY includes the GEOGRAPHICAL states of the Union. This will reinforce that the CONSTITUTIONAL "United States" (states of the Union) is NOT the same as the STATUTORY "United States" (federal territory).
3. Ask them for proof that there are any Internal Revenue Districts within the state you are in. Absent such proof, the IRS is limited to the only remaining Internal Revenue District in the District of Columbia per 26 U.S.C. §7601.
4. Show them the IRS Form 1040NR, which lists "U.S. nationals" as being "nonresident aliens". Then show that these people identified in 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452 are NOT "aliens" as defined in either 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) or 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(a)(A). This will prove to them that "aliens" are NOT the ONLY thing included in the term "nonresident alien".
5. Show them the definition of the term "person" found in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343 and ask them to prove that you are included in the definition. And if you aren't included, than you are PURPOSEFULLY EXCLUDED and therefore neither an "individual" nor a "person". Explain to them that both of these things are PUBLIC OFFICERS in the government engaged in the "trade or business" franchise (26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26)) as an instrumentality and agent of the national government.
6. Explain that it is a CRIME to impersonate a public officer under 18 U.S.C. §912 and that all "persons" are public officers. Explain that for them to TREAT you as a "person" or "individual" and therefore a public officer is such a crime, and that the only people who can use government numbers (which are government PUBLIC property) are such officers. The reason is that the ability to regulate PRIVATE rights and PRIVATE property is repugnant to the constitution as held by the U.S. Supreme Court.

One of our members who has studied the citizenship issue carefully and was attempting to document how this deception is perpetrated by financial institutions against those opening financial account crafted a diagram to simply explaining it to bank personnel. This member also approached a retired justice of the none other than the United States Supreme Court and had it reviewed by this justice for accuracy. The result of the review was that the justice indicated that it was entirely correct, but that few people understand or can explain why. Below is the diagram for your edification. The member also asked that their identity be protected, so please don't ask us either who this member is or the name of the supreme court justice, because we are not allowed to tell you.

Permanent residence in the United States² ("red circle") is DOMICILE. It establishes CIVIL STATUS, a.k.a. tax status. That status is "United States person," defined as a "citizen or resident of the United States." In this context, "citizen" means domicile. This is what the bank is really asking, but they believe they are inquiring about your NATIONALITY.

If you have a DOMICILE in the United States³ ("blue circle") you are a "nonresident alien" for the purposes of the Federal Income Tax because United States³ is territorially foreign to United States².

"U.S. person" must always give a SSN.
See 31 CFR §103.121.

A "nonresident alien" must provide a SSN only in the course of a "trade or business."
See 31 CFR §103.34(a)(3)(x).

HOW FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS DECEIVE AND ENSLAVE THEIR CUSTOMERS:

When you go to the bank and try to claim your true and correct tax status of "nonresident alien", the bank is going to demand a passport. They are confusing NATIONALITY/POLITICAL STATUS with DOMICILE/CIVIL STATUS. The problem is that the "U.S.A." is not an available "selection" in their "drop-down" list of countries. This errant construction of the bank Customer Identification Program (CIP) has the practical effect of forcing Americans into a "United States person" tax status-a status that is 100% subject to governmental mandates. You are not being controlled at the point of a gun- rather, you are being controlled financially through a scheme of legislation designed to introduce precisely this type of misunderstanding. Financial institutions are unknowingly doing the "dirty work" for the government – driving a tax status which mandates participation in Social Security, Medicare, and the new Affordable Health Care Act. These programs are 100% voluntary, thus they are constitutional. The "nonresident alien" tax status is your remedy and protection from certain governmental mandates, but some financial institutions are blocking it.

5.6.13.3.4.4 How "non-resident non-persons" are illegally compelled to become "individuals" and therefore public officers

We already know that a "non-resident non-person" cannot have a civil STATUTORY status under the laws of the jurisdiction to which he/she/it is a "non-resident non-person". Such civil statuses include "individual", "person", "resident", "taxpayer", etc. There is one exception to this rule, which is the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. §1601-1611, in which the non-resident is "purposefully availing themselves" of commerce with a PROTECTED STATUTORY "person" of that jurisdiction, which "person" HAS NOT waived their right to said protection as a result of said commerce. This exception is also called the "Minimum Contacts Doctrine" by the U.S. Supreme Court in International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945).

The following questions then naturally arise from the above consideration:

1. How does a "non-resident non-person" involuntarily become a STATUTORY "individual" or "person" against their consent? The answer is that they CAN'T without violating their constitutional rights and committing identity theft.
2. Can they become a COMMON LAW "person" or "individual" against their consent WITHOUT becoming a STATUTORY "person" or "individual"? The answer is YES.
3. Can the TWO parties to the commerce that gives rise to said jurisdiction literally contract the government out of their relationship by contractually WAIVING the STATUTORY protection of the government and insisting ONLY upon COMMON LAW protection? The answer is YES.

The mechanism by which Item 1 above is accomplished essentially is fraud and duress. The government essentially deceives the "non-resident non-persons" into becoming a "nonresident alien INDIVIDUAL" subject to federal jurisdiction by a combination of word games with definitions and compelled use of identifying numbers. Here is how it works:

1. Define the phrase "nonresident alien" ONLY in the context of "nonresident alien INDIVIDUALS" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B), thus making them synonymous. This definition, by the way, describes what a "nonresident alien" IS NOT, but never describes what it IS. The reason they do this is because they can't define things they have no jurisdiction over!
2. Add the word "individual" to the term "nonresident alien" and to define an "individual" as a person subject to federal jurisdiction and engaged in the "trade or business" franchise.
3. Compel nonresidents to procure an INDIVIDUAL Taxpayer Identification Number (ITIN) as a precondition of opening a bank account or conducting a particular business transaction. ITINs are described in IRS Publication 1915 and 26 U.S.C. §6109. This is an act of criminal identity theft, because it converts your identity against your consent to that of a "taxpayer". It also violates the Unconstitutional Conditions Doctrine of the U.S. Supreme Court.
4. Compel nonresidents to fill out an IRS Form W-9 as a precondition of opening a bank account or conducting a particular business transaction. This is an act of criminal identity theft, because it converts your identity against your consent to that of a "taxpayer". It also violates the Unconstitutional Conditions Doctrine of the U.S. Supreme Court.

There are two types of "nonresidents":

1. "Nonresident alien individuals". These persons are described as subject to federal law and having a requirement to file a tax return found in 26 C.F.R. §1.6012-1(b).
2. "Non-resident non-persons". These entities are not "individuals" and therefore not "persons" subject to any provision of federal law.

One cannot be an "individual" without also being a "person", pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(c). One can also be a "nonresident" without being a "nonresident alien individual" and this is the only status that is truly sovereign and foreign in respect to federal jurisdiction. The only way you are going to be free and sovereign is to have a status that is not completely defined in the I.R.C., which is private law and a franchise agreement relating only to statutory franchisees called "taxpayers", "persons", or "individuals". If you are not a franchisee called a "taxpayer", "individual", or "person" and are therefore not subject to the franchise agreement, then it cannot describe you or impose any duty upon you.

> "Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them[non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws."
> [Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]

26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) defines a "nonresident alien" as an "individual" and as a person who is neither a citizen or a resident. The title of the section, however, indicates "nonresident alien" and not "nonresident alien individual".

> 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) Nonresident alien
> An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of the United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

They very conveniently don't address those who are not "individuals" because they are "non-resident non-persons" and yet who also meet the criteria of being "neither a citizen nor resident of the United States". They also don't expressly include in the definition the MANY additional types of entities listed in IRS Form W-8BEN Block 3, such as:

1. Individual.
2. Corporation.
3. Disregarded entity.
4. Partnership.
5. Simple trust.
6. Grantor trust.
7. Complex trust
8. Estate.
9. Government.
10. International organization
11. Central bank of issue
12. Tax-exempt organization.
13. Private foundation.

None of the above entities would be STATUTORY "nonresident aliens" or "persons" or "individuals" or "taxpayers" WITHOUT EITHER:

1. Serving in a public office BEFORE they apply for or use a government issued identification number. They can't lawfully possess or use such property WITHOUT being a public officer.
2. Engaging in commerce as a foreigner with a STATUTORY protected "person".

This "individual" scam is also found on the IRS Form W-8BEN, which only offers "Individual" as an option for those who are human beings and does not offer simply "Transient foreigner", or "Union State Citizen", all of whom would NOT be subject to the I.R.C. We prove this in the following article:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

If you want to avoid labeling yourself as a "individual" who is therefore a "person" subject to the I.R.C. and a "taxpayer", you will need to use an Amended IRS Form W-8BEN or modify the form yourself. The AMENDED version of the form is available in the article above. The two options it adds are "Transient foreigner" and "non-resident non-person" to block 3 of the form.

This section also brings up a bigger issue that relates to domicile. If you are a "nonresident" because you do not have a domicile within a jurisdiction, then you aren't subject to the civil laws of that jurisdiction unless you engage in commerce with that jurisdiction and therefore surrender sovereign immunity pursuant to the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. §1605.

> *In International Shoe Co. v. We have sometimes referred to it, in shorthand fashion, as the "purposeful availment" prong. Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. A "nonresident alien" becomes a "nonresident alien individual" and thereby makes an "election" to be treated as a "person" and therefore an "individual" and a "resident alien" at the point that they engage in commerce with the United States government by participating in the "trade or business" franchise as a public officer in the U.S. government.

Without said participation, they are not an "individual" and retain their sovereign and "foreign" status. Only at that point when they waive sovereign immunity can they be subject to the laws of the sovereignty, a "resident" (alien), and a "person" subject to the civil law of that sovereign. If you refuse to engage in the commerce, which Black's Law Dictionary defines as "intercourse", with what the Bible refers to as "the Beast", which is the government, you retain your sovereignty and sovereign immunity and cannot be described as an "Individual" or a "person" subject to the I.R.C.

> *"Commerce. ...*Intercourse by way of trade and traffic between different peoples or states and the citizens or inhabitants thereof, including not only the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities, but also the instrumentalities [governments] and agencies by which it is promoted and the means and appliances by which it is carried on..."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 269]

The specific "commerce" and fornication which causes the surrender of sovereign immunity to "the beast" is the "trade or business" franchise, which we also call the "socialism franchise".

5.6.13.3.4.5 Obfuscation of the word "citizen" by the U.S. Supreme Court to make POLITICAL and CIVIL citizens FRAUDULENTLY appear equivalent[282]

The U.S. Supreme Court has participated in the illegal extension of the federal income tax to EXTRATERRITORIAL jurisdictions both abroad and within states of the Union. In the following subsections, we discuss their devious tactics for implementing this FRAUD.

1.1.1.3 Extraterritorial Tax Jurisdiction of the National Government

We wish to elaborate on the case of Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924) as it relates to extraterritorial taxing jurisdiction. That case is important because it is frequently cited as authority by federal courts as the origin of their extraterritorial jurisdiction to tax. Ordinarily, and especially in the case of states of the Union, domicile within that state by the state "citizen" is the determining factor as to whether an income tax is owed to the state by that citizen:

> "domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

> "Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
> [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

We also establish the connection between domicile and tax liability in the following article.

> Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Only in the case of the national government for statutory but not constitutional "U.S. citizens" abroad are factors OTHER than domicile even relevant, as pointed out in Cook v. Tait. What "OTHER" matters might those be? Well, in the case of Cook, the thing taxed is a voluntary franchise, and that status of being a statutory but not constitutional "U.S. citizen" abroad exercising what the courts call "privileges and immunities" of the national (rather than FEDERAL) government is the franchise. Note the language in Cook v. Tait, which attempted to connect the American located and domiciled "abroad" in Mexico with receipt of a government "benefit" and therefore excise taxable "privilege" and franchise/contract.

> *"We may make further exposition of the national power as the case depends upon it. It was illustrated at once in United States v. Bennett by a contrast with the power of a state. It was pointed out that there were limitations upon the latter that were not on the national power. The taxing power of a state, it was decided, encountered at its borders the taxing power of other states and was limited by them. There was no such limitation, it was pointed out, upon the national power, and that the limitation upon the states affords, it was said, no ground for constructing a barrier around the United States, 'shutting that government off from the exertion of powers which inherently belong to it by virtue of its sovereignty.'

> "The contention was rejected that a citizen's property without the limits of the United States derives no benefit from the United States. The contention, it was said, came from the confusion of thought in 'mistaking the scope and extent of the sovereign power of the United States as a nation and its relations to its citizens and their relation to it.' And that power in its scope and extent, it was decided, is based on the presumption that government by its very nature benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and that opposition to it holds on to citizenship while it 'belittles and destroys its advantages and blessings by denying the possession by government of an essential power required to make citizenship completely beneficial.' In other words, the principle was declared that the government, by its very nature, benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and* > therefore has the power to make the benefit complete. Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but upon his relation as citizen to the United States and the relation of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be legal—the government having power to impose the tax."

> [Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924)]

So the key thing to note about the above is that the tax liability attaches to the STATUS of BEING or REPRESENTING a statutory but not constitutional "citizen of the United States" under the Internal Revenue Code, and NOT to domicile of the human being, based on the above case.

> "Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but upon his relation as citizen to the United States and the relation of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be legal—the government having power to impose the tax."
> [Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924)]

There are only two ways to reach a nonresident party through the civil law: Domicile and contract.[283]

> "All the powers of the government [including ALL of its civil enforcement powers against the public] must be carried into operation by individual agency, either through the medium of public officers, or contracts made with [private] individuals."
> [Osborn v. Bank of U.S., 22 U.S. 738 (1824)]

The voluntary choice of electing to be treated as a statutory "U.S. citizen" under the Internal Revenue Code, in turn, can only be a franchise contract/agreement that implements a "public office" in the U.S. government. The office, in turn, is chattel property of the U.S. Government that the creator of the franchise can regulate or tax ANYWHERE under the franchise "protection" contract. All rights that attach to STATUS are, in fact, franchises, and the Cook case is no exception. This, in fact, is why falsely claiming to be a statutory "U.S. citizen" is a crime under 18 U.S.C. §911: Because the franchise status is a creation of and therefore "property" of the national government and abuse of said property or the public rights and "benefits" that attach to it is a crime.

The government can only tax what it creates, and it created the PUBLIC OFFICE but not the OFFICER filling the office. The "Taxpayer Identification Number" functions as a de facto "license" to exercise the privilege/franchise. A license is permission from the state to do that which is otherwise illegal. You can't license something unless it is FIRST ILLEGAL to perform WITHOUT a license, so they had to make it illegal to claim to be a statutory "U.S. citizen" per 18 U.S.C. §911 before they could license it and tax it. Hence:

1. The statutory "taxpayer" (self-proclaimed statutory "U.S. citizen") at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) is a public office in the U.S. Government.
2. The U.S. government, in turn, is a federal corporation.
3. All federal corporations are domiciled in the District of Columbia per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
4. The term "citizen of the United States" is a synonym for the "taxpayer" status and also a public office in the corporation.
5. All corporations are franchises and all those serving in offices within the corporation are acting in a representative capacity as "officers of a corporation" and therefore "persons" as statutorily defined in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343.
6. The human being is:
   - 6.1. Filling the public office of statutory "taxpayer" and statutory self-proclaimed "citizen of the United States"
   - 6.2. Representing the federal corporation as an officers of said corporation.
   - 6.3. Representing the office, which is the real statutory "person" defined in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343 because acting as a public officer.
   - 6.4. Surety for public office he fills but he/she is NOT the office.
   - 6.5. Availing himself of the "benefits" and "protections" and "privileges" of a federal franchise.

[283] See Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 5.2.4: The Two Sources of Federal Civil Jurisdiction: "Domicile" and "Contract"; http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm.

7. Because the human being consented to act as an officer and accept the franchise "benefits" of the public office, he must ALSO accept all the statutory franchise obligations that GO with the office. You can't take the "goodies" of the office and refuse to also accept the obligations that go with those goodies. Here is how the California Civil Code describes this:

> California Civil Code
> DIVISION 3. OBLIGATIONS
> PART 2. CONTRACTS
> TITLE 1. NATURE OF A CONTRACT
> 1589. A voluntary acceptance of the benefit of a transaction is equivalent to a consent to all the obligations arising from it, so far as the facts are known, or ought to be known, to the person accepting.

8. Invoking the franchise status causes a waiver of sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2). This waiver of sovereign immunity is also called "purposeful availment" by the courts, which simply means that you consensually and purposefully directed your activities towards instigating commerce with the Beast (government, Rev. 19:19). Hence by voluntarily calling yourself a statutory "U.S. citizen", you are fornicating with the Beast and you are among the "seas of people nations and tongues" who are part of Babylon the Great Harlot mentioned in the Bible Book of Revelations. Black's Law Dictionary, in fact, defines "commerce" as "intercourse". This makes all those who engage in such commerce with government instead of God into fornicators and harlots.

> "Commerce. ...Intercourse by way of trade and traffic between different peoples or states and the citizens or inhabitants thereof, including not only the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities, but also the instrumentalities [governments] and agencies by which it is promoted and the means and appliances by which it is carried on..."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 269]

9. Domicile is still important even within the Internal Revenue Code. The domicile at issue in the I.R.C., however, is the domicile of the OFFICE and NOT the PERSON FILLING said office. The OFFICE can have a different domicile than the OFFICER. The statutory "taxpayer" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) is a public office. The human being filling the office is NOT the "taxpayer", but a PARTNER with the office and surety for the office. That partnership is mentioned in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343.

1.1.1.4 International Terrorism and legislating from the bench by Ex-President Taft and the U.S. Supreme Court in Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924)

The severe problems with the U.S. Supreme Court's interpretation in Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924) are that:

1. They say that state taxing authority stops at the state's borders because it collides with adjacent states, and yet they don't apply the same extraterritorial limitation upon United States taxing jurisdiction, even though it:
   1.1. Similarly collides with and interferes with neighboring countries
   1.2. Violates the sovereignty and EQUALITY of adjacent nations under the law of nations.
2. Americans domiciled abroad ought to be able to decide when or if they want to be protected by the United States government while abroad and that method ought to be DIRECT and explicit, by expressly asking in writing to be protected and receiving a BILL for the cost of the protection. Instead, based on the outcome in Cook, the Supreme Court made the request for protection and INDIRECT RUSE by associating it with the voluntary choice of calling oneself a statutory "U.S. citizen" under national law. This caused the commission of a crime under current law and additional confusion because:

2.1. 18 U.S.C. §911 makes it is a crime to claim to be a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401.
2.2. Under current law, you cannot be a statutory "citizen" without a domicile in a place and you can only have a domicile in one place at a time. Cook had a domicile in Mexico and therefore was a statutory "resident" or "citizen" of Mexico AND NOWHERE ELSE. You can only be a statutory "citizen" in one place at a time because you can only have a DOMICILE in one place at a time. Therefore, Cook COULD NOT be a statutory "citizen of the "United States" at the same time and was LYING to claim that he was.

3. If an American domiciled abroad doesn't want to be protected and says so in writing, they shouldn't be forced to be protected or to pay for said protection through "taxation".
4. The U.S. government cannot and should not have the right to FORCE you to both be protected and to pay for such protection, because that is THEFT and SLAVERY, and especially if you regard their protection as an injury or a "protection racket".
5. YOU and not THEY should have the right to define whether what they offer constitutes "PROTECTION" because YOU are the "customer" for protection services and the customer is ALWAYS right. You can't be sovereign if they can define their mere existence as "protection" or a so-called "benefit", force you to pay for that "protection" or "benefit", and charge whatever they want for said protection. After all, they could injure you and as long as they are the only ones who can define words in a dispute, then they can call it a "benefit" and even charge you for it!

> "Society in every state is a blessing, but government even in its best state is but a necessary evil; in its worst state an intolerable one; for when we suffer, or are exposed to the same miseries by a government, which we might expect in a country without government, our calamity is heightened by reflecting that we furnish the means by which we suffer."
> [Thomas Paine, "Common Sense" Feb 1776]

6. If the government is going to enforce their right to force you to accept their "protection" and/or franchise "benefits" and pay for them, then by doing so they are:
   6.1. "Purposefully availing themselves" of commerce within your life and your private jurisdiction.
   6.2. Conferring upon you the same EQUAL right to tax THEM and regulate THEM that they claim they have the right to do to you under the concept of equal rights and equal protection.
   6.3. Conferring upon you the right to decide how much YOU get to charge THEM for invading your life, stealing your resources, time, and property, and enslaving you.

   The above are an unavoidable consequence of the requirements of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97. That act applies equally to ALL governments, not just to foreign governments, under the concept of equal protection. YOU are your own "government" for your own "person", family, and property. According to the U.S. Supreme Court, ALL the power of the U.S. government is delegated to them from YOU and "We the People". Therefore, whatever rights they claim you must ALSO have, including the right to enforce YOUR franchises against them without THEIR consent. Hence, the same rules they apply to you HAVE to apply to them or they are nothing but terrorists and extortionists. The U.S. Supreme Court affirmed that when they tax nonresidents without their consent, it is more akin to crime and extortion than a lawful government function.

> "The power of taxation, indispensable to the existence of every civilized government, is exercised upon the assumption of an equivalent rendered to the taxpayer in the protection of his person and property, in adding to the value of such property, or in the creation and maintenance of public conveniences in which he shares -- such, for instance, as roads, bridges, sidewalks, pavements, and schools for the education of his children. If the taxing power be in no position to render these services, or otherwise to benefit the person or property taxed, and such property be wholly within the taxing power of another state, to which it may be said to owe an allegiance, and to which it looks for protection, the taxation of such property within the domicil of the owner partakes rather of the nature of an extortion than a tax, and has been repeatedly held by this Court to be beyond the power of the legislature, and a taking of property without due process of law. Railroad Company v. Jackson, 7 Wall. 262; State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300; Tappan v. Merchants' National Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 499; Delaware &c. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U.S. 341, 358. In Chicago &c. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U.S. 226, it was held, after full consideration, that the taking of private property [199 U.S. 203] without compensation was a denial of due process within the Fourteenth Amendment. See also Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U.S. 97, 102; Missouri Pacific Railway v. Nebraska, 164 U.S. 403, 417; Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 509, 519."*
> [Union Refrigerator Transit Company v. Kentucky, 199 U.S. 194 (1905)]

Of course, the U.S. Supreme Court in Cook v. Tait DID NOT address any of the problems or "cognitive dissonance" deliberately created above by their hypocritical double standard and self-serving word games, and if they had reconciled the problems described, they would have had to expose the FALSE, injurious, and prejudicial presumptions they were making and the deliberate conflict of law and logic those presumptions created, and thereby reconcile them.

As you will eventually learn, most cases in federal court essentially boil down to a criminal conspiracy by the judge and the government prosecutor to "hide their presumptions" and "hide the consent of the governed" in order to advantage the government and conceal or protect their criminal conspiracy to steal from you and enslave you. This game is done by quoting words out of context, confusing the statutory and constitutional contexts, and abusing "words of art" to deceive and presume in a way that "benefits" them RATHER than the people they are supposed to be protecting. Their "presumptions" serve as the equivalent of religious faith, and the false god they worship in their religion is SATAN himself and the money and power he tempts them with. They know that:

1. They can't govern you civilly without your consent as the Declaration of Independence requires.
2. The statutory "person", "individual", "citizen", "resident", and "inhabitant" they civilly govern is created by your consent.
3. When you call them on it and say you aren't a "person", "citizen", "individual", or "resident" under the civil law because you never consented to be governed, and instead are a nonresident, then instead of proving your consent to be governed as the Declaration of Independence requires, the criminals on the bench call you frivolous to cover up their FRAUD and THEFT of your property.

Likewise, corrupt governments frequently try to hide the prejudicial and injurious presumptions they are making because having to justify and defend them would expose the cognitive conflicts, irrationality, and deception in their reasoning. They know that all presumptions that prejudice rights protected by the Constitution are a violation of due process of law and render a void judgment so they try to hide them. For instance, in the Cook case, the presumption the Supreme Court made was that the term "citizen of the United States" made by Plaintiff Cook meant a STATUTORY citizen pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, and NOT a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen. However, the only thing the Plaintiff reasonably could have been was a CONSTITUTIONAL and NOT STATUTORY citizen by virtue of being domiciled abroad. It is a fact that you can only have a domicile in one place at a time, that your statutory status as a "citizen" comes from that choice of domicile, and that you can therefore only be a statutory "citizen" of ONE place at a time. The Plaintiff in Cook was a citizen or resident of Mexico and NOT of the statutory "United States" (federal territory). Hence, he was not a "taxpayer" because not the statutory "citizen of the United States" that they fraudulently acquiesced to allow him to claim that he was. Allowing him to claim that status was FRAUD, but because it padded their pockets they tolerated it and went along with it, and used it to deceive even more people with a vague ruling describing their ruse.

If the Supreme Court had exposed all of their presumptions in the Cook case and were honest, they would have held that:

1. Cook was NOT a statutory "citizen of the United States" under the federal revenue laws at that time. The Internal Revenue Code was not in existence at that time and wasn't introduced until 1939.
2. Cook could not truthfully claim to be a statutory "citizen of the United States" if he was domiciled in Mexico as he claimed and as they accepted. He didn't have a domicile on federal territory called the "United States" therefore his claim that we was such a statutory "citizen" was FRAUD that they could not condone, even if it profited them. Compare Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989), in which a foreign domiciled American was declared "stateless" and therefore beyond the jurisdiction of the federal courts.
3. Cook was a nonresident alien and "stateless person" in relation to federal jurisdiction by virtue of his foreign domicile in Mexico. Hence, he was beyond the reach of the federal courts:

> The tax which is sustained is, in my judgment, a tax upon the income of non-resident aliens and nothing else.
> [. . .]
> The government thus lays a tax, through the instrumentality of the company [PUBLIC OFFICE/WITHHOLDING AGENT], upon the income of a non-resident alien over whom it cannot justly exercise any control, nor upon whom it can justly lay any burden.
> [. . .]
> The power of the United States to tax is limited to persons, property, and business within their jurisdiction, as much as that of a State is limited to the same subjects within its jurisdiction. State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300."
> "A personal tax," says the Supreme Court of New Jersey, "is the burden imposed by government on its own citizens for the benefits which that government affords by its protection and its laws, and any government which should attempt to impose such a tax on citizens of other States would justly incur the rebuke of the intelligent sentiment of the civilized world." State v. Ross, 23 N.J.L. 517, 521.

> In imposing a tax, says Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, the legislature acts upon its constituents. "All subjects," he adds, "over which the power of a State extends are objects of taxation, but those over which it does not extend are, upon the soundest principles, exempt from taxation. This proposition 334 may almost be pronounced self-evident." McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 428.*
> There are limitations upon the powers of all governments, without any express designation of them in their organic law; limitations which inhere in their very nature and structure, and this is one of them, — that no rightful authority can be exercised by them over alien subjects, or citizens resident abroad or over their property there situated.
> [United States v. Erie R. Co., 106 U.S. 327 (1882)]

4. As a private human being, Cook did not lawfully occupy a public office in the federal government as that term is legally defined. Hence, he could not lawfully be a statutory "individual" or "person". All "persons" and "individuals" within the Internal Revenue Code are public offices and/or instrumentalities of the national and not state government. Hence, Cook was a "non-resident NON-person". The U.S. Supreme Court has held that the ability to regulate EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE conduct is repugnant to the constitution. Hence, only activities of public officers and agents may be regulated or taxed without violating the USA Constitution. Any other approach results in slavery and involuntary servitude. See the following for proof that all statutory "taxpayers" are public officers engaged in the "trade or business" and public officer franchise defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26):

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a "Public Officer" for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5. Since all public offices must be executed in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere, and since Cook wasn't in the District of Columbia, then the I.R.C. could not be used to CREATE that public office and the "taxpayer" status that attaches to it in Mexico where he was.

In order to sidestep the SIGNFICANT issues raised by the above considerations, the U.S. Supreme Court:

1. Made their ruling far too ambiguous and short.
2. Refused to address:
   2.1. All the implications described above and generated more rather than less confusion.
   2.2. The holding in United States v. Erie R. Co., 106 U.S. 327 (1882) above.
3. Cited NO statutory authority or legal authority for their decision to create the statutory "citizen of the United States" franchise that exists INDEPENDENT of the domicile of a domestic national. It was created entirely by judicial fiat and "legislating from the bench". The reason they had to do this is that Congress cannot write law that operates extraterritorially outside the country without the party who is subject to it consenting to it or to a status under it.
4. The entire exercise was based on prejudicial "presumption" that injured the rights and property of Cook, who was the party they allegedly were "protecting".
   4.1. The injury to Cook's rights and property came by having to pay a tax based on a civil law statute that did not and could not apply in a foreign country.
   4.2. The only rationale given by the U.S. Supreme Court was their unsubstantiated "presumption" that because they were a "government" or part of a government, then their very EXISTENCE as a government was a so-called "benefit", even though they never proved with evidence that there was any "benefit" or protection directly to Cook in that case. In fact, he was INJURED by having to pay the tax, rather than protected, and got NOTHING in return for it.
   4.3. They made this presumption in SPITE of the fact that the very same court said that all presumptions that prejudice or injure rights are unconstitutional. The only defense they could rationally have for inflicting such an injury is that the Bill of Rights does NOT protect Americans in foreign countries and only operates within states of the Union. Hence, when not restrained by the Constitution, its' OK to STEAL from anyone without any statutory authority using nothing but judicial fiat:

> "The power to create presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional [or territorial] restrictions,"
> [New York Times v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254 (1964)]

5. Left everyone speculating and afraid about what it meant, and how someone could owe a tax without a domicile in the statutory "United States" (federal territory), even though in every other case domicile is the only reason that people owe an income tax.
6. Used the fear and speculation and presumption that uncertainty creates and compels to force people to believe things that are simply not supportable by evidence nor true about tax liability, such as that EVERYONE IN THE WORLD, regardless of where they physically are or where they are domiciled, owe a tax to the place of their birth, if that place of birth is the United States of America.

The above factors, when combined, amount to acts of INTERNATIONAL TERRORISM against nonresident parties. Terrorists, after all, engage primarily in kidnapping and extortion. Their self-serving presumptions about your status and their abuse of "words of art"[284] are the means of kidnapping you without your consent or knowledge, and the result of the kidnapping is that they get to treat you as a "virtual resident" of what Mark Twain calls "the District of Criminals" who has to bend over for King Congress on a daily basis as a compelled public officer of the national government. And they have the GALL to call this kind of abuse a "benefit" and charge you for it! If you want to know how these international terrorists describe THEMSELVES, see:

Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Online, Form #10.004, Cites by Topic: Terrorism http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/terrorism.htm

The judicial fiat that created this extraterritorial PLUNDER, ahem, I mean "tax" is completely hypocritical, because the United States, even to this day, is the ONLY major industrialized country that in fact invokes an income tax on "citizens of the United States" ANYWHERE IN THE WORLD, and thus interferes with the EQUAL taxing powers of other countries and causes Americans to falsely believe that they are subject to DOUBLE taxation of their foreign earnings.

What a SCAM these shysters pulled with this ruling. And why did they do it? Because the Federal Reserve printing presses were running full speed starting in 1913, and yet paper money was still redeemable in gold, so they had to have a way to sop up all the excess currency they were printing. And WHO issued this ruling? None other than the person responsible for:

1. Introducing the Sixteenth Amendment, which was the Income Tax Amendment and getting it fraudulently ratified in 1913.
2. Starting the Federal Reserve in 1913.

President William Howard Taft, the only President of the United States to ever serve as a U.S. Supreme Court Justice, assumed the role of Chief Justice in 1921, and this landmark ruling of Cook v. Tait was his method to expand the implementation of that tax to have worldwide scope. It wouldn't surprise us if Cook was an insider government minion commissioned secretly to undertake this critical case. He probably even setup this case to make sure it would come before him and secretly HIRED Cook to bring it all the way up to the Supreme Court on his watch. That's how DEVIOUS these bastards are. Is it any wonder that in 1929, Congress handed Taft a marble palace to conduct his job in? That's right: The current U.S. Supreme Court building and marble palace of the civil religion of socialism was authorized during his tenure as a reward for his monumental exploits as both a President of the United States and a U.S. Supreme Court justice.[285] They didn't finish that palace until 1933, shortly after he died on March 30, 1930. That was his prize for creating a scam of worldwide scope by:

1. Learning the tax ropes as a collector of internal revenue from 1882-1884. See:
Biography of William Howard Taft, SEDM Exhibit 11.003 http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm
2. Being elected President of the United States in 1909.
3. Introducing the current Sixteenth Amendment in 1909. This was one of his first official acts as President. See:
Congressional Record, June 16, 1909, pp. 3344-3345, SEDM Exhibit #02.001 http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm
4. Getting the Sixteenth Amendment fraudulently ratified in 1913 after he was voted out of office but while he still occupied said office as a lame duck President.
5. Passing the Federal Reserve Act in 1913 during the Christmas recess when only five congressmen were present to vote.
6. Being appointed U.S. Supreme Court Justice in 1921.
7. Giving the new income tax he created a worldwide scope with the Cook v. Tait ruling.
8. Introducing and passing the Writ of Certiorari Act of 1925, in which Congress consented to allow the U.S. Supreme Court to turn the appeal process into a franchise in which they had the discretion NOT to rule on cases before them and [284] See Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014; http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm.

[285] Maybe we should have used the phrase "heavy duty" instead of "monumental". After all, President William Howard Taft was literally the fattest person to ever serve as president, weighing in at over 300 pounds. Maybe the phrase "It ain't' over till the fat lady sings" should be changed to "It ain't over till the fat man talks."

thereby INTERFERE with the rights of the litigants. The cases they would then refuse to rule on would be those in which income tax laws were unlawfully enforced. Thus, they denied justice to the people who were abused by the unlawful enforcement of the revenue laws and FRAUDS that protect it.

It also shouldn't surprise you to learn that Taft was the ONLY president to ALSO serve as a collector of internal revenue. Even as President and later as a Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, he apparently continued in that role. Here is what Wikipedia says on this subject:

> Legal career
> After admission to the Ohio bar, Taft was appointed Assistant Prosecutor of Hamilton County, Ohio,[286] based in Cincinnati. In 1882, he was appointed local Collector of Internal Revenue.[287] Taft married his longtime sweetheart, Helen Herron, in Cincinnati in 1886.[288] In 1887, he was appointed a judge of the Ohio Superior Court.[289] In 1890, President Benjamin Harrison appointed him Solicitor General of the United States[290]. As of January 2010, at age 32, he is the youngest-ever Solicitor General.[291] Taft then began serving on the newly created United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in 1891.[292] Taft was confirmed by the Senate on March 17, 1892, and received his commission that same day.[293] In about 1893, Taft decided in favor of one or more patents for processing aluminium belonging to the Pittsburg Reduction Company, today known as Alcoa, who settled with the other party in 1903 and became for a short while the only aluminum producer in the U.S.[294] Another of Taft's opinions was Addyston Pipe and Steel Company v. United States (1898). Along with his judgeship, between 1896 and 1900 Taft also served as the first dean and a professor of constitutional law at the University of Cincinnati.[295]

The bottom line is that any entity that can FORCE you to accept protection you don't want, call it a "benefit" even though you call it an injury and a crime, and force you to pay for it is a protection racket and a mafia, not a government. And such crooks will always resort to smoke and mirrors like that of Taft above to steal from you to subsidize their protection racket.

Prior to implementing the Taft international terrorism SCAM, a dissenting opinion of the same U.S. Supreme Court earlier described it for what it is, and the court was naturally completely silent in opposing the objections made, and therefore AGREED to ALL OF THEM under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(b)(6). The issue was withholding of a tax upon English citizens by an American company situated abroad. The English citizens were aliens in relation to both the United States and the corporation doing the withholding, and therefore nonresident aliens. Field basically said that withholding on them was theft and violated the law of nations. You aren't surprised that Taft very conveniently omitted to address the issues raised in this dissenting opinion, are you? He was a THIEF, a LIAR, and a charlatan intent on SUPPRESSING the truth and effectively legislating from the bench INTERNATIONALLY, which is a thing that not even Congress can do. Here is the text of that marvelous dissenting opinion by Justice Field:

[295] Cincinnati Law School: 2006 William Howard Taft Lecture on Constitutional Law

*I am not able to agree with the majority of the court in the decision of this case. The tax which is sustained is, in my judgment, a tax upon the income of non-resident aliens and nothing else. The 122d section of the act of June 30, 1864, c. 173, as amended by that of July 13, 1866, c. 184, subjects the interest on the bonds of the company to a tax of five per cent, 331 and authorizes the company to deduct it from the amount payable to the coupon-holder, whether he be a non-resident alien or a citizen of the United States. The company is thus made the agent of the government [PUBLIC OFFICER!] for the collection of the tax. It pays nothing itself; the tax is exacted from the creditor, the party who holds the coupons for interest. No collocation of words can change this fact. And so it was expressly adjudged with reference to a similar tax in the case of United States v. Railroad Company, reported in the 17th of Wallace. There a tax, under the same statute, was claimed upon the interest of bonds held by the city of Baltimore. And it was decided that the tax was upon the bondholder and not upon the corporation which had issued the bonds; that the corporation was only a convenient means of collecting it; and that no pecuniary burden was cast upon the corporation. This was the precise question upon which the decision of that case turned.

A paragraph from the opinion of the court will show this beyond controversy. "It is not taxation," said the court, "that government should take from one the profits and gains of another. That is taxation which compels one to pay for the support of the government from his own gains and of his own property. In the cases we are considering, the corporation parts not with a farthing of its own property. Whatever sum it pays to the government is the property of another. Whether the tax is five per cent on the dividend or interest, or whether it be fifty per cent, the corporation is neither richer nor poorer. Whatever it thus pays to the government, it by law withholds from the creditor. If no tax exists, it pays seven per cent, or whatever be its rate of interest, to its creditor in one unbroken sum. If there be a tax, it pays exactly the same sum to its creditor, less five per cent thereof, and this five per cent it pays to the government. The receivers may be two, or the receiver may be one, but the payer pays the same amount in either event. It is no pecuniary burden upon the corporation, and no taxation of the corporation. The burden falls on the creditor. He is the party taxed*. In the case before us, this question controls its decision. If the tax were upon the railroad, there is no defence; it must be paid.* But we hold that the tax imposed by the 122d section is in substance and in law a tax upon the 332* income of the creditor or stockholder, and not a tax upon the corporation." See also Haight v. Railroad Company, 6 Wall. 15, and Railroad Company v. Jackson, 7 id. 262, 269.

The bonds, upon the interest of which the tax in this case was laid, are held in Europe, principally in England; they were negotiated there; the principal and interest are payable there; they are held by aliens there, and the interest on them has always been paid there. The money which paid the interest was, until paid, the property of the company; when it became the property of the bondholders it was outside of the jurisdiction of the United States.

*Where is the authority for this tax? It was said by counsel on the argument of the case — somewhat facetiously, I thought at the time — that Congress might impose a tax upon property anywhere in the world, and this court could not question the validity of the law, though the collection of the tax might be impossible, unless, perchance, the owner of the property should at some time visit this country or have means in it which could be reached. This court will, of course, never, in terms, announce or accept any such doctrine as this. And yet it is not perceived wherein the substantial difference lies between that doctrine and the one which asserts a power to tax, in any case, aliens who are beyond the limits of the country. The debts of the company, owing for interest, are not property of the company, although counsel contended they were, and would thus make the wealth of the country increase by the augmentation of the debts of its corporations. Debts being obligations of the debtors are the property of the creditors, so far as they have any commercial value, and it is a misuse of terms to call them anything else; they accompany the creditors wherever the latter go; their situs is with the latter. I have supposed heretofore that this was common learning, requiring no argument for its support, being, in fact, a self-evident truth, a recognition of which followed its statement. Nor is this the less so because the interest may be called in the statute a part of the gains and profits of the company. Words cannot change the fact, though they may mislead and bewilder. The thing remains through all disguises of terms. If the company makes no gains or profits on its business and borrows the money to 333 meet its interest, though it be in the markets abroad, it is still required under the statute to withhold from it the amount of the taxes. If it pays the interest, though it be with funds which were never in the United States, it must deduct the taxes. The government thus lays a tax, through the instrumentality of the company [PUBLIC OFFICE/WITHHOLDING AGENT], upon the income of a non-resident alien over whom it cannot justly exercise any control, nor upon whom it can justly lay any burden.

The Chief Justice, in his opinion in this case, when affirming the judgment of the District Court, happily condensed the whole matter into a few words. "The tax," he says, "for which the suit was brought, was the tax upon the owner of the bond, and not upon the defendant. It was not a tax in the nature of a tax in rem upon the bond itself, but upon the income of the owner of the bond, derived from that particular piece of property. The foreign owner of these bonds was not in any respect subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, neither was this portion of his income. His debtor was, and so was the money of his debtor; but the money of his debtor did not become a part of his income until it was paid to him, and in this case the payment was outside of the United States, in accordance with the obligations of the contract which he held. The power of the United States to tax is limited to persons, property, and business within their jurisdiction, as much as that of a State is limited to the same subjects within its jurisdiction. State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300."

"A personal tax," says the Supreme Court of New Jersey, "is the burden imposed by government on its own citizens for the benefits which that government affords by its protection and its laws, and any government which should attempt to impose such a tax on citizens of other States would justly incur the rebuke of the intelligent sentiment of the civilized world." State v. Ross, 23 N.J.L. 517, 521.

In imposing a tax, says Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, the legislature acts upon its constituents. "All subjects," he adds, "over which the power of a State extends are objects of taxation, but those over which it does not extend are, upon the soundest principles, exempt from taxation. This proposition 334* may almost be pronounced self-evident." McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 428.

There are limitations upon the powers of all governments, without any express designation of them in their organic law; limitations which inhere in their very nature and structure, and this is one of them, — that no rightful authority can be exercised by them over alien subjects, or citizens resident abroad or over their property there situated. This doctrine may be said to be axiomatic, and courts in England have felt it so obligatory upon them, that where general terms, used in acts of Parliament, seem to contravene it, they have narrowed the construction to avoid that conclusion. In a memorable case decided by Lord Stowell, which involved the legality of the seizure and condemnation of a French vessel engaged in the slave trade, which was, in terms, within an act of Parliament, that distinguished judge said: "That neither this British act of Parliament nor any commission founded on it can affect any right or interest of foreigners unless they are founded upon principles and impose regulations that are consistent with the law of nations. That is the only law which Great Britain can apply to them, and the generality of any terms employed in an act of Parliament must be narrowed in construction by a religious adherence thereto." The Le Louis, 2 Dod. 210, 239.

Similar language was used by Mr. Justice Bailey of the King's Bench, where the question was whether the act of Parliament, which declared the slave trade and all dealings therewith unlawful, justified the seizure of a Spanish vessel, with a cargo of slaves on board, by the captain of an English naval vessel, and it was held that it did not. The odiousness of the trade would have carried the justice to another conclusion if the public law would have permitted it, but he said, "That, although the language used by the legislature in the statute referred to is undoubtedly very strong, yet it can only apply to British subjects, and can only render the slave trade unlawful if carried on by them; it cannot apply in any way to a foreigner. It is true that if this were a trade contrary to the law of nations a foreigner could not maintain this action. But it is not; and as a Spaniard could not be considered as bound by the acts of the British legislature prohibiting this trade, it would be unjust to deprive 335* him of a remedy for the heavy damage he has sustained." Madrazo v. Willes, 3 Barn. & Ald. 353.

In The Apollon, a libel was filed against the collector of the District of St. Mary's for damages occasioned by the seizure of the ship and cargo whilst lying in a river within the territory of the King of Spain, and Mr. Justice Story said, speaking for the court, that "The laws of no nation can justly extend beyond its own jurisdiction, except so far as regards its own citizens. They can have no force to control the sovereignty or rights of any other nation within its own jurisdiction. And however general and comprehensive the phraseology used in our municipal laws may be, they must always be restricted in construction to places and persons upon whom the legislatures have authority and jurisdiction." 9 Wheat. 362.

When the United States became a separate and independent nation, they became, as said by Chancellor Kent, "subject to that system of rules which reason, morality, and custom had established among the enlightened nations of Europe as their public law," and by the light of that law must their dealings with persons of a foreign jurisdiction be considered; and according to that law there could be no debatable question, that the jurisdiction of the United States over persons and property ends where the foreign jurisdiction begins.

What urgent reasons press upon us to hold that this doctrine of public law may be set aside, and that the United States, in disregard of it, may lawfully treat as subject to their taxing power the income of non-resident aliens, derived from the interest received abroad on bonds of corporations of this country negotiable and payable there? If, in the form of taxes, the United States may authorize the withholding of a portion of such interest, the amount will be a matter in their discretion; they may authorize the whole to be withheld. And if they can do this, why may not the States do the same thing with reference to the bonds issued by corporations created under their laws. They will not be slow to act upon the example set. If such a tax may be levied by the United States in the rightful exercise of their taxing power, why may not a similar tax be levied upon the interest on bonds of the same corporations by the States within their respective jurisdictions in the rightful 336* exercise of their taxing power? What is sound law for one sovereignty ought to be sound law for another.

It is said, in answer to these views, that the governments of Europe — or at least some of them, where a tax is laid on incomes — deduct from the interest on their public debts the tax due on the amount as income, whether payable to a non-resident alien or a subject of the country. This is true in some instances, and it has been suggested in justification of it that the interest, being payable at their treasuries, is under their control, the money designated for it being within their jurisdiction when set apart for the debtor, who must in person or by agent enter the country to receive it. That presents a case different from the one before us in this, — that here the interest is payable abroad, and the money never becomes the property of the debtor until actually paid to him there. So, whether we speak of the obligation of the company to the holder of the coupons, or the money paid in its fulfilment, it is held abroad, not being, in either case, within the jurisdiction of the United States. And with reference to the taxation of the interest on public debts, Mr. Phillimore, in his Treatise on International Laws, says: "It may be quite right that a person having an income accruing from money lent to a foreign State should be taxed by his own country on his income derived from this source; and if his own country impose an income tax, it is, of course, a convenience to all parties that the government which is to receive the tax should > deduct it from the debt which, in this instance, that government owes to the payer of the tax, and thus avoid a double process; but a foreigner, not resident in the State, is not liable to be taxed by the State; and it seems unjust to a foreign creditor to make use of the machinery which, on the ground of convenience, is applied in the cases of domestic creditors, in order to subject him to a tax to which he is not on principle liable." Vol. ii. pp. 14, 15.

> Here, also, is a further difference: the tax here is laid upon the interest due on private contracts. As observed by counsel, no other government has ever undertaken to tax the income of subjects of another nation accruing to them at their own domicile upon property held there, and arising out of ordinary business, or contracts between individuals.
> 337 This case is decided upon the authority of Railroad Company v. Collector, reported in 100 U.S., and the doctrines from which I dissent necessarily flow from that decision. When that decision was announced I was apprehensive that the conclusions would follow which I now see to be inevitable. It matters not what the interest may be called, whether classed among gains and profits, or covered up by other forms of expression, the fact remains, the tax is laid upon it, and that is a tax which comes from the party entitled to the interest, — here, a non-resident alien in England, who is not, and never has been, subject to the jurisdiction of this country.
> In that case the tax is called an excise on the business of the class of corporations mentioned, and is held to be laid, not on the bondholder who receives the interest, but upon the earnings of the corporations which pay it. How can a tax on the interest to be paid be called a tax on the earnings of the corporation if it earns nothing — if it borrows the money to pay the interest? How can it be said not to be a tax upon the income of the bondholder when out of his interest the tax is deducted?
> *That case was not treated as one, the disposition of which was considered important, as settling a rule of action. The opening language of the opinion is: "As the sum involved in this suit is small, and the law under which the tax in question was collected has long since been repealed, the case is of little consequence as regards any principle involved in it as a rule of future action." But now it is invoked in a case of great magnitude, and many other similar cases, as we are informed, are likely soon to be before us; and though it overrules repeated and solemn adjudications rendered after full argument and mature deliberation, though it is opposed to one of the most important and salutary principles of public law, it is to be received as conclusive, and no further word from the court, either in explanation or justification of it, is to be heard. I cannot believe that a principle so important as the one announced here, and so injurious in its tendencies, so well calculated to elicit unfavorable comment from the enlightened sentiment of the civilized world, will be allowed to pass unchallenged, though the court is silent upon it.

Note some key points from the above dissenting opinion of Justice Field:

1. The tax imposed is an EXCISE and FRANCHISE tax upon the "benefits" of the protection of a specific municipal government. Those who DON'T WANT or NEED and DO NOT CONSENT to such protection are NOT the lawful subjects of the tax. Those who consent call themselves statutory "citizens". Those who don't call themselves statutory "non-residents".

> "A personal tax," says the Supreme Court of New Jersey, "is the burden imposed by government on its own citizens for the benefits which that government affords by its protection and its laws, and any government which should attempt to impose such a tax on citizens of other States would justly incur the rebuke of the intelligent sentiment of the civilized world." State v. Ross, 23 N.J.L. 517, 521.

2. The United States has no jurisdiction outside its own borders or outside its own TERRITORY, meaning federal territory. Constitutional states of the Union are NOT federal territory.

> *". . . the jurisdiction of the United States over persons and property ends where the foreign jurisdiction begins."

3. The only way that any legal PERSON, including a government, can reach outside its own territory is by exercising its right to contract, which means that it can ONLY act upon those who EXPRESSLY consent and thereby contract with the sovereign. That consent is manifested by calling oneself a STATUTORY "citizen". Those who don't consent to the franchise protection contract call themselves statutory "nonresident aliens".

> Debitum et contractus non sunt nullius loci.
> Debt and contract [franchise agreement, in this case] are of no particular place.

4. The tax is upon the RECIPIENT, not the company making the payment. The "taxpayer" is the recipient of the payment, and hence, the company paying the recipient is NOT the "taxpayer". The company, in turn, is identified as an "agent of the government", meaning a withholding agent and therefore PUBLIC OFFICER. WHY? Because the Erie railroad is a FEDERAL and not STATE corporation. They hid this from their ruling. If they had been a PRIVATE company that was NOT a FEDERAL corporation, they could not lawfully act as agents of the government.

> "It is not taxation," said the court, "that government should take from one the profits and gains of another. That is taxation which compels one to pay for the support of the government from his own gains and of his own property. In the cases we are considering, the corporation parts not with a farthing of its own property. Whatever sum it pays to the government is the property of another. Whether the tax is five per cent on the dividend or interest, or whether it be fifty per cent, the corporation is neither richer nor poorer. Whatever it thus pays to the government, it by law withholds from the creditor. If no tax exists, it pays seven per cent, or whatever be its rate of interest, to its creditor in one unbroken sum. If there be a tax, it pays exactly the same sum to its creditor, less five per cent thereof, and this five per cent it pays to the government. The receivers may be two, or the receiver may be one, but the payer pays the same amount in either event. It is no pecuniary burden upon the corporation, and no taxation of the corporation. The burden falls on the creditor. He is the party taxed. In the case before us, this question controls its decision. If the tax were upon the railroad, there is no defence; it must be paid. But we hold that the tax imposed by the 122d section is in substance and in law a tax upon the 332* income of the creditor or stockholder, and not a tax upon the corporation." See also Haight v. Railroad Company, 6 Wall. 15, and Railroad Company v. Jackson, 7 id. 262, 269.

5. The recipient is a non-resident alien BECAUSE he has a legislatively FOREIGN DOMICILE. NOT because he has a FOREIGN NATIONALITY.
6. The FOREIGN DOMICILE makes the target of the tax a STATUTORY "alien" but not necessarily a CONSTITUTIONAL alien.

> "Here, also, is a further difference: the tax here is laid upon the interest due on private contracts. As observed by counsel, no other government has ever undertaken to tax the income of subjects of another nation accruing to them at their own domicile upon property held there, and arising out of ordinary business, or contracts between individuals."

7. The "non-resident alien" is COMPLETELY outside the jurisdiction of the United States. Hence, it is LEGALLY IMPOSSIBLE for such a person to become a statutory "taxpayer". The only way to CRIMINALLY force him to become a taxpayer is to:
   7.1. Let the company illegally withhold earnings of a nontaxpayer.
   7.2. Make getting a refund of amounts withheld a "privilege" in which he has to request a "INDIVIDUAL Taxpayer Identification Number" (ITIN) that makes him a statutory "individual".
   7.3. After he gets the number ILLEGALLY, force him to file "taxpayer" tax return. If he refuses to do that, then they refuse to refund the amount withheld. That's international terrorism and extortion.

> "The government thus lays a tax, through the instrumentality [PUBLIC OFFICE] of the company, upon the income of a non-resident alien over whom it cannot justly exercise any control, nor upon whom it can justly lay any burden."

8. The laws of a nation ONLY apply to its own STATUTORY "citizens" who have a domicile on FEDERAL TERRITORY. They do NOT apply to STATUTORY aliens with a legislatively FOREIGN DOMICILE. These statutory "citizens" can ONLY become statutory citizens by SELECTING and CONSENTING to a domicile on federal territory AND physically being on said territory.

> "The laws of no nation can justly extend beyond its own jurisdiction, except so far as regards its own citizens. They can have no force to control the sovereignty or rights of any other nation within its own jurisdiction. And however general and comprehensive the phraseology used in our municipal laws may be, they must always be restricted in construction to places and persons upon whom the legislatures have authority and jurisdiction." 9 Wheat. 362.

9. If you are not a STATUTORY citizen (per 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(d) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c)), which Justice Field calls a "SUBJECT", then you can't be taxed. Field refers to those who can't be taxed as "aliens", and he can only mean STATUTORY aliens, not CONSTITUTIONAL aliens:

> "All subjects," he adds, "over which the power of a State extends are objects of taxation, but those over which it does not extend are, upon the soundest principles, exempt from taxation. This proposition *334 may almost be pronounced self-evident." McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 428.

10. The court KNEW they were pulling a FRAUD on the people, because they were SILENT on so many important issues that Field pointed out. Per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(b)(6), they AGREED with his conclusions because they did not EXPRESSLY DISAGREE or disprove ANY of his arguments.

> "though it is opposed to one of the most important and salutary principles of public law, it is to be received as conclusive, and no further word from the court, either in explanation or justification of it, is to be heard. I cannot believe that a principle so important as the one announced here, and so injurious in its tendencies, so well calculated to elicit unfavorable comment from the enlightened sentiment of the civilized world, will be allowed to pass unchallenged, though the court is silent upon it."

11. Justice Field says the abuse of "words of art" mask the nature of the above criminal extortion:

> "Words [of art] cannot change the fact, though they may [DELIBERATELY] mislead and bewilder. The thing remains through all disguises of terms."

12. If you want to search for cases on "nonresident aliens" defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) , the Supreme Court spells them differently than the code itself. You have to search for "non-resident alien" instead.

1.1.1.5 Supporting evidence for doubters

Those skeptical readers who doubt the conclusions of the previous section or who challenge the significance of the Cook v. Tait ruling to federal jurisdiction are invited to compare the following two cases and try to explain the differences between them:

1. Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924).
2. Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989).

In BOTH of the above cases, the parties:

1. Were domiciled in a legislatively foreign state AND a foreign country. Cook was domiciled in Mexico while Bettison was domiciled in Venezuela.
2. Were statutory nonresidents and "nonresident aliens" under the Internal Revenue Code based on their chosen domicile.
3. Became the party to a controversy with someone domiciled in the statutory "United States", meaning federal territory.
4. Because of their legislatively foreign domicile, were technically "stateless persons" and therefore not statutory "persons" under federal law.
5. Were born in America (the COUNTRY) and therefore an American national and Constitutional citizen.

The only difference between the two cases is the DECLARED STATUS of the litigant and the CONTEXT in which that status is interpreted or applied or MIS-applied by the court. Recall that there are TWO main contexts in which legal terms can be used: CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY.

In Newman-Green, Bettison was presumed by the court to be a CONSTITUTIONAL "U.S. citizen" by virtue of his foreign domicile. Here is what the court said about him:

> Petitioner Newman-Green, Inc., an Illinois corporation, brought this state law contract action in District Court against a Venezuelan corporation, four Venezuelan citizens, and William L. Bettison, a United States citizen domiciled in Caracas, Venezuela. Newman-Green's complaint alleged that the Venezuelan corporation had breached a licensing agreement, and that the individual defendants, joint and several guarantors of royalty payments due under the agreement, owed money to Newman-Green. Several years of discovery and pretrial motions followed. The District Court ultimately granted partial summary judgment for the guarantors and partial summary judgment for Newman-Green. 590 F.Supp. 1083 (ND Ill.1984). Only Newman-Green appealed.

> *At oral argument before a panel of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Easterbrook inquired as to the statutory basis for diversity jurisdiction, an issue which had not been previously raised either by counsel or by the District Court Judge. In its complaint, Newman-Green had invoked 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(3), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of one State sues both aliens and citizens of a State (or States) different from the plaintiff's. In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a > natural person must both be a citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a United States citizen, has no domicile in any State. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of § 1332(a)(3). Subsection 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a State sues aliens only, also could not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [490 U.S. 829]

> [Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989)]

In the above context, the phrase "United States citizen" was used in its CONSTITUTIONAL sense. Bettison could not have been a STATUTORY "United States citizen" without a domicile a statutory "State". He was therefore a CONSTITUTIONAL "United States citizen".

> "The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a United States citizen, has no domicile in any State. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of § 1332(a)(3)."
> [Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989)]

Comparing the Cook v. Tait case, the phrase "citizen of the United States" was interpreted in its STATUTORY sense.

> "Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but upon his relation as citizen to the United States and the relation of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be legal—the government having power to impose the tax."
> [Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924)]

Because Bettison in the Newman-Green case was a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen but not a STATUTORY citizen with a legislatively foreign domicile, he had to be dismissed from the class action and be treated as BEYOND the jurisdiction of the court and OUTSIDE the class of involved in the CLASS action.

Cook, on the other hand, personally petitioned the court for protection and they heard his case, even though he technically had the SAME CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY "U.S. citizen" status as Bettison. The U.S. Supreme Court, however, instead of claiming he was ALSO a "stateless person" and dismissing either him or the case the as they did with Bettison, rather claimed they HAD jurisdiction and ruled on the matter in the government's favor and AGAINST Cook. The U.S. Supreme Court did so based on the UNSUBSTANTIATED PRESUMPTION that the "U.S. citizen" he claimed to be was a STATUTORY rather than CONSTITUTIONAL "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401. SCAM!

1.1.1.6 Summary and conclusion

What the U.S. Supreme Court has done to extend federal taxing jurisdiction both unconstitutionally and in violation of international law is summarized below:

1. Meaning of the term "citizen" or "citizen of the United States" within various statutory contexts:
   1.1. Every reference to "citizen" and "national" within Title 8 of the U.S. Code is a POLITICAL citizen and not a CIVIL citizen.

> 8. Citizen defined
> Citizenship implies membership in a political society*, the relation of allegiance and protection, identification with the state, and a participation in its functions, and while a temporary absence may suspend the relation between a state and its citizen, his identification with the state remains where he intends to return. Pannill v. Roanoke Times Co., W.D.Va.1918, 252 F. 910. Aliens, Immigration, And Citizenship 678*
> Mere residence [meaning also DOMICILE] in a foreign country, even by a naturalized American, has no effect upon such person's citizenship. U.S. v. Howe, S.D.N.Y.1916, 231 F. 546. Aliens, Immigration, And Citizenship 683(1)
> Citizenship is membership in a political society and imposes a duty of allegiance on the part of a member and a duty of protection on the part of society. U.S. v. Polzin, D.C.Md. 1942, 48 F.Supp. 476. Aliens, Immigration, And Citizenship 650; Aliens, Immigration, And Citizenship 672
> Distinction between citizenship and electorship pervades the public law of the United States. 1857, 8 Op.Atty.Gen. 300.

9. Classes of citizens--Generally

In regard to the protection of our citizens in their rights at home and abroad, we have in the United States no law which divides them into classes or makes any difference whatever between them. 1859, 9 Op.Atty.Gen. 357. [8 U.S.C.A. §1401, Westlaw, 2009]

1.2. "citizen of the United States" as used in Title 8 means a POLITICAL status and not a CIVIL status.
1.3. "citizen" as used in every OTHER title of the U.S. Code, INCLUDING and especially the Internal Revenue Code, means a CIVIL status and NOT a POLITICAL status.
1.4. "POLITICAL"/CONSTITUTIONAL status does not change with changes in CIVIL domicile, but CIVIL status DOES. The only thing that can change political status is either BIRTH or NATURALIZATION.
1.5. Domicile on federal territory is ALWAYS the origin of any and every civil liability, INCLUDING tax liability. Domicile, in turn is ALWAYS voluntary and discretionary. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17.
1.6. One may be a POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL member of a society WITHOUT be a CIVIL/STATUTORY member subject to the CIVIL statutory laws of that society. DOMICILE is the only method by which they can ALSO be subject to the CIVIL statutory laws of that society per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17.
1.7. Since DOMICILE is and must be voluntary, then being a CIVIL/STATUTORY citizen with a "civil status" under the tax code MUST be voluntary.

"The law of England, and of almost all civilized countries, ascribes to each individual at his birth two distinct legal states or conditions: one, by virtue of which he becomes the subject of some particular country, binding him by the tie of natural allegiance, and which may be called his political status; another by virtue of which he has ascribed to him the character of a citizen of some particular country, and as such is possessed of certain municipal rights, and subject to certain obligations, which latter character is the civil status or condition of the individual, and may be quite different from his political status. And then, while maintaining that the civil status is universally governed by the single principle of domicil, domicilium, the criterion established by international law for the purpose of determining civil status, and the basis on which the personal rights of the party, that is to say, the law which determines his majority or minority, his marriage, succession, testacy or intestacy, must depend, he yet distinctly recognized that a man's political status, his country, patria, and his "nationality, that is, natural allegiance," "may depend on different laws in different countries." Pp. 457, 460. He evidently used the word "citizen" not as equivalent to "subject," but rather to "inhabitant," and had no thought of impeaching the established rule that all persons born under British dominion are natural-born subjects."
[United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

1.8. For further background on how POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL status and CIVIL/STATUTORY status interact but are NOT equal in any respect, see:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2. How the FRAUD is perpetuated and protected by the corrupt courts:
2.1. The FRAUD of extraterritorially extending Internal Revenue Taxes outside of federal territory is perpetuated by:
2.1.1. A usually MALICIOUS failure or absolute refusal to distinguish a POLITICAL status from a CIVIL status. The "citizen" mentioned in the Internal Revenue Code is a STATUTORY citizen domiciled on federal territory, not a POLITICAL citizen under the constitution.
2.1.2. Confusing DOMICILE with NATIONALITY, or PRESUMING that they are EQUAL or synonymous.
2.1.3. Interfering with attempts by victims of the false presumptions to challenge said presumptions.
2.2. In Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924), former President William H. Taft acting then as a Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court ADDED to the confusion between CIVIL and POLITICAL status by deliberately REFUSING to distinguish WHICH "citizen of the United States" that Cook was.
3. Consequences of the fraud of deliberately confusing CIVIL and POLITICAL status of the word "citizen".
3.1. ILLEGALLY extends income taxes to POLITICAL citizens everywhere.
3.2. Perpetuates the FALSE presumption that CIVIL and POLITICAL citizens are equivalent.
3.3. Creates a WORLDWIDE TAX and made every American into essentially a dog on a leash until they expatriate. Being a "national" was the leash according to Cook v. Tate, but that simply can't be the case because DOMICILE and not NATIONALITY is the only proper origin of tax liability.
3.4. Removed DISCRETION and CONSENT from the taxation process, because being a CIVIL citizen is discretionary, whereas being a POLITICAL citizen is not.
4. To remove the confusion, government MUST at all times:
4.1. Distinguish between POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL "citizens" and CIVIL/STATUTORY citizens throughout all their statutes and forms.
4.2. Restore DISCREATION and CHOICE to the "protection" services they offer by allowing people to be ONLY POLICIAL/CONSTITUTIONAL citizens.

4.3. Allow people to determine whether then want to be protected when abroad or in a state of the Union, and telling them that that if they choose NO, then they don't have to pay income taxes when abroad or in a state of the Union. Otherwise, an "adhesion contract" and SLAVERY and THEFT results.

Our attempts to become a "non-resident " represent an attempt to prevent the false presumption that the CIVIL and POLITICAL status of "citizen" are equivalent, and thus to draw attention to the FRAUD of confusing them.

5.6.13.3.5 Social Security Administration HIDES your citizenship status in their NUMIDENT records

Your citizenship status is represented in the Social Security NUMIDENT record maintained by the Social Security Administration. The field called "CSP" within NUMIDENT contains a one character code that represents your citizenship status. This information is DELIBERATELY concealed and obfuscated from public view by the following Social Security policies:

1. The meaning of the CSP codes is NOT listed in the Social Security Administration, Program Operations Manual System (POMS) online so you can't find out.
   https://s044a90.ssa.gov/apps10/poms.nsf/partlist!OpenView
2. Employees at the SSA offices are NOT allowed to know and typically DO NOT know what the code means.
3. If you submit a Freedom Of Information Act (FOIA) request to SSA asking them what the CSP code means, they will respond that the values of the codes are CLASSIFIED and therefore UNKNOWABLE by the public. You ARE NOT allowed to know WHAT citizenship status they associate with you. See the following negative response:
   Social Security Admin. FOIA for CSP Code Values, Exhibit #01.011
   http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm
4. The ONLY option they give you in block 5 entitled "CITIZENSHIP" are the following. They REFUSE to distinguish WHICH "United States" is implied in the term "U.S. citizen", and if they told the truth, the ONLY citizen they could lawfully mean is a STATUTORY "U.S. citizen" per 8 U.S.C. §1401 and NOT a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen, who is a STATUTORY nonresident and alien in relation to the national government with a foreign domicile:
   4.1. "U.S. citizen"
   4.2. "Legal Alien Allowed to Work"
   4.3. "Legal Alien NOT allowed to Work" (See Instructions on Page 1)
   4.4. "Other" (See instructions on page 1)
   See:
   Social Security Administration Form SS-5
   http://www.famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/ss-5.pdf

Those who are domiciled outside the statutory "United States" or in a constitutional state of the Union and who want to correct the citizenship records of the SSA must submit a new SSA Form SS-5 to the Social Security Administration (SSA) and check "Other" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) in Block 5. This changes the CSP code in their record from "A" to "D". If you go into the Social Security Office and try to do this, the local offices often will try to give you a run-around with the following abusive and CRIMINAL tactics:

1. When you ask them about the meaning of Block 5, they will refuse to indicate whether the citizenship indicated is a CIVIL/STATUTORY status or a POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL status. It can't be both. It must indicate NATIONALITY or DOMICILE, but not BOTH.
2. They will first try to call the national office to ask about your status in Block 5.
3. They will ABSOLUTELY REFUSE to involve you in the call or to hear what is said, because they want to protect the perpetrators of crime on the other end. Remember, terrorists always operate anonymously and they are terrorists. You should bring your MP3 voice record, insist on being present, and put the phone on speaker phone, and do EXACTLY the same thing they do when you call them directly by saying the following:

   "This call is being monitored for quality assurance purposes, just like you do to me without my consent ALL THE TIME."

4. After they get off the phone, they will refuse to tell you the full legal name of the person on the other end of the call to protect those who are perpetuating the fraud.
5. They will tell you that they want to send your SSA Form SS-5 to the national office in Baltimore, Maryland, but refuse to identify EXACTLY WHO they are sending it to, because they don't want this person sued personally as they should be.

6. The national office will sit on the form forever and refuse to make the change requested, and yet never justify with the law by what authority they:
   6.1. Perpetuate the criminal computer fraud that results from NOT changing it.
   6.2. Perpetuate the criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §911 by NOT changing it.
7. They will allow you to change ANYTHING ELSE on the form without their permission, but if you want to change your CITIZENSHIP, they essentially interfere with it illegally and criminally.

The reason they play all the above obfuscation GAMES and hide or classify information to conceal the GAMES is because they want to protect what they certainly know are the following CRIMES on their part and that of their employees:

1. They can't offer federal benefits to CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY citizens with a domicile outside of federal territory. If they do, they would be criminally violating 18 U.S.C. §911.
2. They can't pay public monies to PRIVATE parties, and therefore you CANNOT apply with the SS-5 for a "benefit" unless you are a public officer ALREADY employed with the government. If they let PRIVATE people apply they are conspiring to commit the crime of impersonating a public officer in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
3. They aren't allowed to offer or enforce any government franchise within the borders of a Constitutional but not STATUTORY state of the Union, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court, so they have to make you LOOK like a STATUTORY citizen, even though you aren't, in order to expand their Ponzi Scheme outside their GENERAL jurisdiction and into legislatively foreign states.

> "Congress cannot authorize [LICENSE, using a de facto license number called a "Social Security Number"] a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."
> [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

The only status a state domiciled CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY citizen can put on the form is "Other" or "Legal [STATUTORY] Alien Allowed to Work". The instructions say following about "Other" option:

> "If you check "Other", you need to provide proof that you are entitled to a federally-funded benefit for which Social Security number is required as a condition for you to receive payment."

In answer to the above query in connection with the "Other" option, we suggest:

> "DO NOT seek any federally funded benefit. I want a NONtaxpayer number that entitles me to ABSOLUTELY NOTHING as a NONRESIDENT not subject to federal law and NOT qualified to receive benefits of any kind. I am only applying because:
> 1. I am being illegally compelled to use a number I know I am not qualified to ask for.
> 2. The number was required as a precondition condition of PRIVATE employment or opening an PRIVATE financial account by a NONRESIDENT ALIEN who is NOT a "U.S. citizen" or "U.S. person" and who is NOT required to have or use such a number by 31 C.F.R. §306.10, Note 2, 31 C.F.R. §1020.410(b)(3)(x), and 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(b)(2) , and IRS Publication 515: Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Entities.
> I ask that you criminally prosecute them under 42 U.S.C. §408(a)(8) for doing so AND provide a statement on SSA letterhead indicating that I am NOT eligible that I can show them. Furthermore, if you do have any numbers on file connected with my name, I ask that they be rescinded permanently from your records."

Then you may want to attach the following forms to the application to ENSURE that they reject your application and TELL you that you are NOT eligible so you can show it to the person who is COMPELLING you to use a number:

1. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
2. Why It is Illegal for Me to Request or Use a "Taxpayer Identification Number", Form #04.205
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.13.3.6 Federal courts refusing to recognize sovereignty of litigant

A nonresident is an entity with no civil domicile within the venue or forum. This means that they are:

1. Not a "taxpayer" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) or 26 U.S.C. §1313.

> "Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them[non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws." [Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]

2. Not a "person" or "individual" under the civil law of the forum. See our article on domicile:
   Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
3. Protected by the Minimum Contacts Doctrine of the U.S. Supreme Court.
4. Protected by the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part 4, Chapter 97. The government as the moving party asserting a liability has the burden of showing that you expressly waived sovereign immunity by either:
   4.1. Mistakenly declaring yourself a "citizen" or "resident" pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3) who therefore has domicile (nationals) or a residence (aliens) within federal territory.
   4.2. Consensually conducting commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of the sovereign pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605.
5. "foreign" and a "foreigner" in relation to the forum.
6. NOT a "foreign person" because not a "person".
7. Protected from federal government enforcement by the USA Constitution if situated in a CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY "State".
   7.1. Constitutional rights, according to the Declaration of Independence, are "inalienable", meaning that we AREN'T ALLOWED by law to consent to give them away or bargain them away.
   7.2. Constitutional rights attach to the LAND we stand on and not our civil or STATUTORY status.
   7.3. Constitutional rights are inalienable.
8. Protected by the common law of the state they are physically in. There is no federal common law applicable to states of the Union. United States v. Erie R. Co., 106 U.S. 327 (1882)
9. Protected by 18 U.S.C. §112 if they are representing their CONSTITUTIONAL state as a jurist or a voter. All such states are legislatively but not constitutionally "foreign".

In order to compel federal courts to recognize all the requirements of the above, we have prepared the following, which you should attach to all your pleadings in federal court:

Federal Pleading/Motion/Petition Attachment, Litigation Tool #01.002
http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm

Even after the above is attached and even after sovereign immunity is properly invoked by a "nonresident alien" who is NOT an "individual" or "person", even then some federal courts will further interfere with the sovereign immunity of people litigating before them by creating a "presumption" that the litigants are domiciliaries of the forum through the following means:

1. Refusing to recognize that:
   1.1. You, the litigant are a "nontaxpayer".
   1.2. "Nontaxpayers" even exist. The result is that EVERYONE is "presumed" to be a "taxpayer", which means they are PRESUMED guilty until proven innocent. This turns the foundation of American Jurisprudence upside down, which is the presumption of innocent until proven guilty.

> "The presumption of innocence, although not articulated in the Constitution, is a basic component of a fair trial under our system of criminal justice. Long ago this Court stated:
> The principle that there is a presumption of innocence in favor of the accused is the undoubted law, axiomatic and elementary, and its enforcement lies at the foundation of the administration of our criminal law." [Coffin v. United States, 156 U.S. 432, 453 (1895).]

> "In Calder v. Bull, which was here in 1798, Mr. Justice Chase said, that there were acts which the Federal and State legislatures could not do without exceeding their authority, and among them he mentioned a law which punished a citizen for an innocent act; a law that destroyed or impaired the lawful private [labor] contracts [and labor compensation, e.g. earnings from employment through compelled W-4 withholding] of citizens; a law that > made a man judge in his own case; and a law that took the property from A [the worker]. and gave it to B [the government or another citizen, such as through social welfare programs]. 'It is against all reason and justice,' he added, 'for a people to intrust a legislature with such powers, and therefore it cannot be presumed that they have done it. They may command what is right and prohibit what is wrong; but they cannot change innocence [a "nontaxpayer"] into guilt [a "taxpayer", by presumption or otherwise], or punish innocence as a crime, or violate the right of an antecedent lawful private [employment] contract [by compelling W-4 withholding, for instance], or the right of private property. To maintain that a Federal or State legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT!] if they had not been expressly restrained, would, in my opinion, be a political heresy altogether inadmissible in all free republican governments.' 3 Dall. 388."

> [Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U.S. 700 (1878)]

1.3. The Anti-Injunction Act, 26 U.S.C. §7421 does not apply to "nontaxpayers". See section 5.8 of the following for details:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

1.4. That the Declaratory Judgments Act, 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) does not apply to "nontaxpayers". See section 5.9 of the Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid document above for details.

2. Refusing to require your government opponent to justify why the Minimum Contacts Doctrine invoked by you is satisfied and why the court therefore has jurisdiction to hear the civil case.
3. Refusing to require your government opponent to justify why the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part 4, Chapter 97, invoked by you is satisfied and why the court therefore has jurisdiction to hear the civil case.
4. Citing irrelevant cases litigated by "citizens" or "residents" against you. All such case law amounts to little more than political propaganda which is IRRELEVANT to the circumstances of a nonresident, who never consented to be protected by the laws of the forum and who shouldn't have and hopefully didn't invoke them in his defense.
5. Calling attempts to identify yourself as other than a "person" or an "individual" to be "frivolous" without explaining why. This tactic is described in section 6.15 of the document below:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.6.13.3.7 How people are compelled to become "residents" or prevented from receiving all of the benefits of being a "nonresident"[296]

Based on the foregoing discussion, it ought to be obvious that the government doesn't want you to know any of the following facts:

1. That all income taxation is based primarily upon domicile.
2. That domicile is a voluntary choice.
3. That because they need your consent to choose a domicile, they can't tax you without your consent.
4. That domicile is based on the coincidence of physical presence and intent to permanently remain in a place.
5. That unless you choose a domicile within the jurisdiction of the government that has general jurisdiction where you live, they have no authority to institute income taxation upon you.
6. That no one can determine your domicile except you.
7. That if you don't want the protection of government, you can fire them and handle your own protection, by changing your domicile to a different place or choosing no domicile at all. This then relieves you of an obligation to pay income taxes to support the protection that you no longer want or need.

Therefore, governments have a vested interest in hiding the relationship of "domicile" to income taxation by removing it or at least obfuscating it in their "codes". A number of irreconcilable conflicts of law are created by COMPELLING EVERYONE to have either a specific domicile or an earthly domicile. For instance:

1. If the First Amendment gives us a right to freely associate and also implies a right to DISASSOCIATE, how can we be compelled to associate with a "state" or the people in the locality where we live without violating the First Amendment? It may not be presumed that we moved to a place because we wanted to associate with the people there.
2. Domicile creates a duty of allegiance, according to the cite above. All allegiance MUST be voluntary. How can the state compel allegiance by compelling a person to have or to choose an earthly domicile? What gives them the right to insist that the only legitimate type of domicile is associated with a government? Why can't it be a church, a religious group, or simply an association of people who want to have their own police force or protection service separated from the state? Since the only product that government delivers is "protection", why can't people have the right to fire the government and provide their own protection with the tax money they would have paid the government?

3. When one chooses a domicile, they create a legal or contractual obligation to support a specific government, based on the above. By compelling everyone to choose an earthly domicile whose object is a specific government or state, isn't the state interfering with our right to contract by compelling us to contract with a specific government for our protection? The Constitution, Article 1, Section 10 says no state shall make any law impairing the obligation of contracts. Implicit in this right to contract is the right NOT to contract. Every right implies the opposite right. Therefore, how can everyone be compelled to have a domicile without violating their right to contract?
4. The U.S. Supreme Court also said that income taxation based on domicile is "quasi-contractual" in nature.

> "Even if the judgment is deemed to be colored by the nature of the obligation whose validity it establishes, and we are free to re-examine it, and, if we find it to be based on an obligation penal in character, to refuse to enforce it outside the state where rendered, see Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Co., 127 U.S. 265 , 292, et seq. 8 S.Ct. 1370, compare Fauntleroy v. Lum, 210 U.S. 230 , 28 S.Ct. 641, still the obligation to pay taxes is not penal. It is a statutory liability, quasi contractual in nature, enforceable, if there is no exclusive statutory remedy, in the civil courts by the common-law action of debt or indebitatus assumpsit. United States v. Chamberlin, 219 U.S. 250 , 31 S.Ct. 155; Price v. United States, 269 U.S. 492 , 46 S.Ct. 180; Dollar Savings Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 227; and see Stockwell v. United States, 13 Wall. 531, 542; Meredith v. United States, 13 Pet. 486, 493. This was the rule established in the English courts before the Declaration of Independence. Attorney General v. Weeks, Bunbury's Exch. Rep. 223; Attorney General v. Jewers and Batty, Bunbury's Exch. Rep. 225; Attorney General v. Hatton, Bunbury's Exch. Rep. [296 U.S. 268, 272] 262; Attorney General v. _ _, 2 Ans.Rep. 558; see Comyn's Digest (Title 'Dett,' A, 9); 1 Chitty on Pleading, 123; cf. Attorney General v. Sewell, 4 M.&W. 77. "
> [Milwaukee v. White, 296 U.S. 268 (1935)]

The "quasi-contract" they are referring to above is your voluntary choice of "domicile", no doubt. How can they compel such a contract if the person who is the object of the compulsion refuses to "do business" with the state and also refuses to avail themselves of any of the benefits of membership in said state? Wouldn't that amount to slavery, involuntary servitude, and violate the Thirteenth Amendment prohibition against involuntary servitude?

Do you see how subtle this domicile thing is? It's a very sneaky way to draw you into the world system and force you to adopt and comply with earthly laws and a government that are hostile towards and foreign to God's laws. All of the above deceptions and ruses are designed to keep you enslaved and entrapped to support a government that does nothing for you and which you may even want to abandon or disassociate with.

5.6.13.3.7.1 Why it is UNLAWFUL for a state nationals to become a "resident alien"

Americans domiciled in states of the Union:

1. Are "nationals of the United States of America" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
2. Wrongfully File 1040 usually.
3. Commit fraud and misrepresent their status as resident aliens by filing IRS form 1040. The 1040 form is only for those with a domicile on federal territory that is no part of a state of the Union and who are "resident aliens". Even statutory "U.S. citizens" under 26 U.S.C. §911 are "resident aliens" in relation to the foreign country they are temporarily in while abroad. All "taxpayers", in fact, are aliens pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).

The ONLY way for a "nonresident alien" to lawfully become a "resident alien" is to make an election to do so as a person married to a statutory but not constitutional "citizen of the United States" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 and to do so under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h).

Some of our readers, in seeking to justify how they can lawfully become "taxpayers" and Social Security franchise participants, have pointed to the language at 26 U.S.C. §7701(b) as a justification for why and how a "nonresident alien" who is not an "individual" can lawfully elect to become a "resident alien" To wit:

> 26 U.S.C. §7701(b):

(b)Definition of resident alien and nonresident alien

(1) In general

For purposes of this title (other than subtitle B)—

(A) Resident alien

An alien individual shall be treated as a resident of the United States with respect to any calendar year if (and only if) such individual meets the requirements of clause (i), (ii), or (iii):

Paragraph (b)(6) in the above statute defines "lawful permanent resident" as follows:

(6) Lawful permanent resident

For purposes of this subsection, an individual is a lawful permanent resident of the United States at any time if—

(A) such individual has the status of having been lawfully accorded the privilege of residing permanently in the United States as an immigrant in accordance with the immigration laws, and

(B) such status has not been revoked (and has not been administratively or judicially determined to have been abandoned).

Notice that it DOES NOT SAY:

Such individual HAS BEEN lawfully accorded the privilege of residing permanently in the United States.

It DOES SAY:

Such individual HAS THE STATUS OF HAVING BEEN accorded the privilege . . . .

Those invoking the above statute to justify an election to become a "resident alien" will then say:

This is a HUGE difference. If a nonresident alien submits resident forms unwittingly, he therefore obtains administratively the STATUS of resident, and thus meets the legal definition of paragraph (6). If he meets the definition of paragraph (6), then he also meets the definition of (b)(1)(A)(i) above, and can thus be legally treated as if a resident alien for the purposes of banking, and submitting form W-9 as a contractor. This of course is done unwittingly, but it is legal.

I believe this is the legal mechanism that allows the masses to legally wrongfully represent themselves to financial institutions and payers while indemnifying the acceptance agent . . . which is the whole objective anyway. It's my personal feeling that these guys are slick enough to not blatantly do something that big that would be ALL-OUT illegal.

I'm not trying to walk the tightrope here and have it both ways. But as I have said in the past, I have seen some inconsistencies in application of the law (my opinion) that can be labeled as "curve fitting." An officer in the military earns "wages" and is required to participate in Social Security. There is no way around that. Furthermore, the code and regs clearly state that if you have a SSN, you may NOT obtain a TIN, but you MAY change the status of the number. I have no problem paying my lawful tax. And I don't have a problem receiving a military pension. I don't like Social Security as I understand how the system is implemented. But that doesn't relieve me of my obligations under law, it is on the shoulders of those who engineered the scheme.

If a nonresident alien receives "United States" payments . . . he better be paying Federal Income Tax on them. That is my personal opinion and conclusion. I have not seen ONE thing that relieves a nonresident alien of that burden.

The above logic of justifying how a "nonresident alien" who is a state national domiciled in a state of the Union can lawfully become a statutory "resident alien" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b) is, in fact, unlawful and in most cases a crime for the average American. A state national pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) domiciled in a state of the Union and not lawfully occupying a public office in the District of Columbia as required by 4 U.S.C. §72 cannot lawfully engage in the "trade or business" franchise or to elect to be treated as a "resident alien" because of the following considerations:

1. The term "lawful permanent resident" is defined in Title 8 and it doesn't include anyone born in a state of the Union and certainly nowhere expressly includes a state national pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). Yes, we agree that a state national is a statutory "nonresident alien" within the meaning of the I.R.C., if he is engaged in a public office, but he is not a statutory "alien" per 8 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) because "nonresident aliens" are NOT a subset of "aliens" in the Internal Revenue Code. We proved this in section 5.6.13.3.4.3 earlier. If you disagree, please show us proof to the contrary.
2. The rights of people domiciled in states of the Union are INALIENABLE according to the Declaration of Independence, which is organic law. Therefore, they can't be contracted or bargained away or converted into a privilege in relation to a REAL, de jure government. The only way around this problem are for the judge/IRS to admit that they don't represent a real government but a private corporate franchise. Only by being a private corporation and acting in a private capacity can they lawfully contract in that way with you if you are domiciled in a state of the Union protected by the organic law. We know this is the case, but we also know that they don't ever want to admit that.
3. Nowhere is the status of "resident alien" declared or expressly conferred by simply filing IRS Form 1040. The IRS has a hard time even telling the truth about who the form is really used by. The only place you can go to find out that the 1040 is a "U.S. person", "U.S. citizen", and "U.S. resident" form is IRS Published Products Catalog (2003), Document 7130. They don't put that in the IRS 1040 Booklet or on the form. It's a scam because they are digging a hole and hoping that your own false presumptions will cause you to fall into it. Even if you raise the issue that the 1040 form is ONLY for resident aliens and not citizens unless abroad, they routinely call you a crack pot. Therefore, if you asked the IRS whether you can change your status from being a state national and "non-resident non-person" to a resident alien by filing form 1040, they would say no. Your hypothesis can't therefore be true.
4. You can't be a "resident" in a place without a physical presence there. The state national in the state who made the UNLAWFUL election to be treated as a statutory "resident alien" is committing perjury because the physical place where he/she lives didn't change. In reality, all he/she did was unlawfully elect himself into a "public office" by filling out a tax form and sending a bribe/kickback to someone to treat him like a public officer. That, too is a CRIME. 18 U.S.C. §211 makes it a crime to bribe someone to get them appointed into a public office, and probably everyone in the IRS could and probably should be prosecuted for THAT crime, because all "taxpayers" are public officers. Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), the "taxpayer" is representing an office with a domicile in the District of Columbia, but he never physically moved there so technically he CAN'T be a statutory "resident alien" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b). Furthermore, aliens are NOT permitted to serve in public offices, hence, even if he was lawfully appointed, he is serving ILLEGALLY. EVERYTHING they are doing right now is illegal and a SCAM from the get go.

What the above reader is trying to do is come up with a way for a sovereign party protected by the Constitution who CAN'T lawfully bargain away ANY right in relation to government to waive sovereign immunity under 28 U.S.C. §1605 and change his status from a protected party to a privileged statutory "resident alien". It can't be done because his/her rights are INALIENABLE in relation to a REAL, DE JURE government. Only those not protected by the Constitution can do so, which means they fit one of the following criteria:

1. They are domiciled on federal territory not protected by the Constitution. The District of Columbia IS protected by the Constitution because it was inside of Virginia before it was ceded and was protected by the Constitution at the time it was ceded, and according to the U.S. Supreme Court in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) the protection of the Constitution against that land can't be removed by any Act of Congress. That is because rights are unalienable and can't be bargained away, which is further confirmation of what we are saying.
2. They are in a foreign country (other than a state of the Union) under 26 U.S.C. §911 AND continue to maintain a domicile in the statutory "United States" on federal territory. They don't enjoy the protections of the Constitution while abroad, as agreed by the U.S. Supreme Court in Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924).

The average American doesn't satisfy either of the above two conditions, and certainly doesn't while in a constitutional but not statutory "state" applying for a bank account. Consequently, the ONLY way to truthfully describe what banks are doing by allowing state national domiciled in a state to open bank accounts as statutory "resident aliens" with a Taxpayer Identification Number" is that they are helping depositors commit the following crimes:

1. Impersonating a statutory but not constitutional "U.S. citizen". 18 U.S.C. §911.
2. Impersonating a public officer. 18 U.S.C. §912. All public offices can be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and NOT elsewhere and they don't work in the District of Columbia as required by 4 U.S.C. §72.

3. Conspiracy to defraud the "United States". 18 U.S.C. §287. Everyone participating in a public benefit who does not in fact qualify because not a public officer in the government is committing a fraud upon the United States.
4. Filing false information returns. 26 U.S.C. §§7206, 7207. They file information returns against depositors and all these are false because the depositors do not lawfully occupy a public office and therefore are NOT engaged in the "trade or business" franchise as required by 26 U.S.C. §6041(a).
5. Fraud in connection with computers. 18 U.S.C. §1030. All their account holder records are knowingly fraudulent because they misrepresent the status of nearly all their depositors.
6. Bribing public officials. 18 U.S.C. §201. Taxes paid by those not lawfully occupying a public office and paid to those in the District of Columbia who ARE public officers is bribery of public officials.

5.6.13.3.7.2 How the tax code compels choice of domicile

The government has compelled domicile or interfered with receiving the benefits of your choice by any of the following means:

1. Nowhere in Internal Revenue Code is the word "domicile" admitted to be the source of the government's jurisdiction to impose an income tax, even though the U.S. Supreme Court admitted this in Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954). The word "domicile", in fact, is only used in two sections of the entire 9,500 page Internal Revenue Code, Title 26. This is no accident, but a very devious way for the government to avoid getting into arguments with persons who it is accusing of being "taxpayers". It avoids these arguments by avoiding showing Americans the easiest way to challenge federal jurisdiction, which is demanding proof from the government required by 5 U.S.C. §556(d), who is the moving party, that you maintain a domicile on federal territory. The two sections below are the only places where domicile is mentioned:
   1.1. 26 U.S.C. §7448(j)(1)(B)(vi): Annuities to surviving spouses and dependent children of judges.
   1.2. 26 U.S.C. §6091: Defines where returns shall be submitted in the case of deceased "taxpayers", which is the "domicile" of the decedent when he died.
2. They renamed the word "domicile" on government tax forms. They did this so that income taxation "appears" to be based entirely on physical presence, when in fact is also requires voluntary consent as well. If you knew that the government needed your consent to become a "taxpayer", then probably everyone would "un-volunteer" and the government would be left scraping for pennies. Below are some examples of other names they gave to "domicile":
   2.1. "permanent address"
   2.2. "permanent residence"
   2.3. "residence": defined above, and only applying to nonresident aliens. There is no definition of "residence" anywhere in the I.R.C. in the case of a "citizen". Below is how Volume 28 of the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) legal encyclopedia, Domicile, describes the distinction between "residence" and "domicile":

> Corpus Juris Secundum
> §4 Domicile and Residence Distinguished
> b. Use of Terms in Statutes
> The terms "domicile" and "residence," as used in statutes, are commonly, although not necessarily, construed as synonymous. Whether the term "residence," as used in a statute, will be construed as having the meaning of "domicile," or the term "domicile" construed as "residence," depends on the purpose of the statute and the nature of the subject matter, as well as the context in which the term is used. 32 It has been declared that the terms "residence" and "domicile" are almost universally used interchangeably in statute, and that since domicile and legal residence are synonymous, the statutory rules for determining the place of residence are the rules for determining domicile.34 However, it has been held that "residence," when used in statutes, is generally interpreted by the courts as meaning "domicile," but with important exception.
> Accordingly, whenever the terms "residence" and "domicile" are used in connection with subjects of domestic policy, the terms are equivalent, as they also are, generally, where a statute prescribes residence as a qualification for the enjoyment of a privilege or the exercise of a franchise. "Residence" as used in various particular statutes has been considered synonymous with "domicile." 39 However, the terms are not necessarily synonymous.40
> [28 Corpus Juris Secundum, Domicile, §4 Domicile and Resident Distinguished]

3. By telling you that you MUST have a "domicile". For instance, the Volume 28 of the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) section on "Domicile" says the following on this subject:

> Corpus Juris Secundum
> Domicile, §5 Necessity and Number
> "It is a settled principle that every person must have a domicile somewhere.3 The law permits no individual to be without a domicile,42 and an individual is never without a domicile somewhere.13 Domicile is a continuing thing, and from the moment a person is born he must, at all times, have a domicile ."
> [28 Corpus Juris Secundum, Domicile, §5 Necessity and Number]
> ---
>
> Corpus Juris Secundum
> §9 Domicile by Operation of Law
> "Whenever a person does not fix a domicile for himself, the law will fix one for him in accordance with the facts and circumstances of the case; l2 and an infant's domicile will be fixed by operation of law where it cannot be determined from that of the parents.73"
> [28 Corpus Juris Secundum, Domicile, §9 Domicile by Operation of Law]

Indirectly, what they are suggesting in the above by FORCING you to have a domicile is that:

3.1. You cannot choose God as your sole Protector, but MUST have an earthly protector who cannot be yourself.

3.2. Although the First Amendment gives you the right to freely associate, it does not give you the right to disassociate with ALL governments. This is an absurdity.

3.3. Government has a monopoly on protection and that individuals are not allowed to fire the government and provide their own protection, either individually or collectively.

4. By inventing new words that allow them to avoid mentioning "domicile" in their vague "codes" while giving you the impression that an obligation exists that actually is consensual. For instance, in 26 U.S.C. §911 is the section of the I.R.C. entitled "Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad". This section identifies the income tax liabilities of persons domiciled in the "United States" (federal zone) who are living temporarily abroad. We showed earlier that if they have a domicile abroad, then they cannot be either "citizens" or "residents" under the I.R.C., because domicile is a prerequisite for being either. In that section, they very deceptively:

4.1. Use the word "abode" in 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(3) to describe one's domicile so as to remove the requirement for "intent" and "consent" from consideration of the subject, even though they have no authority to ignore this requirement for consent in the case of anything but an "alien".

4.2. Don't even use the word "domicile" at all, and refuse to acknowledge that what "citizens" or "residents" both have in common is a "domicile" within the United States. They did this to preserve the illusion that even after one changes their domicile to a foreign country while abroad, the federal tax liability continues, when in fact, it legally is not required to. After domicile is changed, those Americans who changed it while abroad then are no longer called "citizens" under federal law, but rather "nationals" and "nonresident aliens".

4.3. They invented a new word called a "tax home", as if it were a substitute for "domicile", when in fact it is not. A "tax home" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §911 as a place where a person who has a temporary presence abroad treats himself or herself as a privileged "resident" in the foreign country but still also maintains a privileged "resident" and "domicile" status in the "United States".

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART III > Subpart B > § 911
> § 911. Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad
> (d) Definitions and special rules For purposes of this section—
> (3) Tax home
> *The term "tax home" means, with respect to any individual, such individual's home for purposes of section 162 (a)(2) (relating to traveling expenses while away from home). An individual shall not be treated as having a tax home in a foreign country for any period for which his abode [domicile] is within the United States [federal zone].

The only way the government can maintain your status as a "taxpayer" is to perpetuate you in a "privileged" state, so they simply don't offer any options to leave the privileged state by refusing to admit to you that the terms "citizen" and "resident" presume you made a voluntary choice of domicile within their jurisdiction. I.R.C. section 162 mentioned above is the section for privileged deductions, and the only persons who can take deductions are those engaged in the privileged "trade or business" excise taxable franchise. Therefore, the only person who would derive any benefit from deductions is a person with a domicile in the "United States" (federal government/territory) and who has earnings from that place which are connected with a "trade or business", which means U.S. government (corporation) source income as a "public officer".

5.6.13.3.7.3 How the Legal Encyclopedia compels choice of domicile

Even the legal encyclopedia tries to hide the nature of domicile. For instance, Volume 28 of the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) at:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Domicile-28CJS-20051203.pdf

which we quoted in the previous section does not even mention the requirement for "allegiance" as part of domicile or the fact that allegiance must be voluntary and not compelled, even though the U.S. Supreme Court said this was an essential part of it:

> "Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter*."*
> [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

The legal encyclopedia in the above deliberately and maliciously omits mention of any of the following key concepts, even though the U.S. Supreme Court has acknowledged elements of them as we have shown:

1. That allegiance that is the foundation of domicile must be voluntary and cannot be coerced.
2. That external factors such as the withdrawal of one's right to conduct commerce for failure to give allegiance causes domicile choice to no longer be voluntary.
3. That a choice of domicile constitutes an exercise of your First Amendment right of freedom of association and that a failure to associate with a specific government is an exercise of your right of freedom from compelled association.
4. That you retain all your constitutional rights even WITHOUT choosing a domicile within a specific government because rights attach to the land you are standing on and not the civil status you choose by exercising your right to associate and becoming a member of a "state" or municipality.

The result of maliciously refusing to acknowledge the above concepts is a failure to acknowledge the foundation of all just authority of every government on earth, which is the consent of the governed mentioned in our Declaration of Independence.

> "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed*, --That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness."*
> [Declaration of Independence]

A failure to acknowledge that requirement results in a complete destruction of the sovereignty of the people, because the basis of all your sovereignty is that no one can do anything to you without your consent, unless you injured the equal rights of others. This concept is exhaustively described in the following document:

Requirement for Consent, Form #05.003

5.6.13.3.7.4 How governments compel choice of domicile: Government ID

In order to do business within any jurisdiction, and especially with the government and financial institutions, one usually needs identification documents. Such documents include:

1. State driver's license. Issued by the Department of Motor Vehicles in your state.
2. State ID card. Issued by the Department of Motor Vehicles in your state.
3. Permanent resident green card.
4. National passport. Issued by the U.S. Dept. of State.
5. U.S. Citizen Card. Issued by the Dept. of State. These are typically used at border crossings.

All ID issued by the state governments, and especially the driver's license, requires that the applicant be a "resident" of the "State of____". If you look up the definition of "resident" and "State of" or "State" or "in this State" within the state tax code, these terms are defined to mean a privileged alien with a domicile on federal territory not protected by the Constitution.

USA passports also require that you provide a domicile. The Department of State Form DS-11 in Block 17 requires you to specify a "Permanent Address", which means domicile. See:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/DOS-DS11-20080320.pdf

Domicile within the country is not necessary in order to be issued a national passport. All you need is proof of birth within that country. If you would like tips on how to obtain a national passport without a domicile within a state and without government issued identifying numbers that connect you to franchises, see:

Getting a USA Passport as a "state national", Form #09.007
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

State ID, however, always requires domicile within the state in order to be issued either a state driver's license or a state ID. Consequently, there is no way to avoid becoming privileged if you want state ID. This situation would seem at first to be a liability until you also consider that they can't lawfully issue a driver's license to non-residents. Imagine going down to the DMV and telling them that you are physically on state land but do not choose a domicile here and that you can't be compelled to and that you would like for them to certify that you came in to request a license and that you were refused and don't qualify. Then you can show that piece of paper called a "Letter of Disqualification" to the next police officer who stops you and asks you for a license. Imagine having the following dialog with the police officer when you get stopped:

> Officer: May I see your license and registration please?
> You: I'm sorry, officer, but I went down to the DMV to request a license and they told me that I don't qualify because I am a non-resident of this state. I have a Letter of Disqualification they gave me while I was there stating that I made application and that they could not lawfully issue me a license. Here it is, officer.
> Officer: Well, then do you have a license from another state?
> You: My domicile is in a place that has no government. Therefore, there is no one who can issue licenses there. Can you show me a DMV office in the middle of the ocean, which is where my domicile is and where my will says my ashes will be PERMANENTLY taken to when I die. My understanding is that domicile or residence requires an intention to permanently remain at a place and I am not here permanently and don't intend to remain here. I am a perpetual traveler, a transient foreigner, and a vagrant until I am buried.
> Officer: Don't get cute with me. If you don't produce a license, then I'm going to cite you for driving without a license.
> You: Driving is a commercial activity and I am not presently engaged in a commercial activity. Do you have any evidence to the contrary? Furthermore, I'd love to see you explain to the judge how you can punish me for refusing to have that which the government says they can't even lawfully issue me. That ought to be a good laugh. I'm going to make sure the whole family is there for that one. It'll be better than Saturday Night Live!

We allege that the purpose of the vehicle code in your state is NOT the promotion of public safety, but to manufacture statutory "residents" and "taxpayers". The main vehicle by which states of the Union, in fact, manufacture "residents", who are privileged "public officers" that are "taxpayers" and aliens with respect to the government is essentially by compelling everyone to obtain and use state driver's licenses. This devious trap operates as follows:

1. You cannot obtain a state driver's license without being a "resident". If you go into any DMV office and tell them you are not a "resident", then they are not allowed to issue you a license. You can ask from them what is called a "Letter of Disqualification", which states that you are not eligible for a driver's license. You can keep that letter and show it to any police officer who stops you and wants your "license". He cannot then cite you for "driving without a license" that the state refuses to issue you, nor can he impound your car for driving without a license!

   > California Vehicle Code

"14607.6. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as provided in this section, a motor vehicle is subject to forfeiture as a nuisance if it is driven on a highway in this state by a driver with a suspended or revoked license, or by an unlicensed driver, who is a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment and has a previous misdemeanor conviction for a violation of subdivision (a) of Section 12500 or Section 14601, 14601.1, 14601.2, 14601.3, 14601.4, or 14601.5.

(b) A peace officer shall not stop a vehicle for the sole reason of determining whether the driver is properly licensed.

(c) (1) If a driver is unable to produce a valid driver's license on the demand of a peace officer enforcing the provisions of this code, as required by subdivision (b) of Section 12951, the vehicle shall be impounded regardless of ownership, unless the peace officer is reasonably able, by other means, to verify that the driver is properly licensed. Prior to impounding a vehicle, a peace officer shall attempt to verify the license status of a driver who claims to be properly licensed but is unable to produce the license on demand of the peace officer.

(2) A peace officer shall not impound a vehicle pursuant to this subdivision if the license of the driver expired within the preceding 30 days and the driver would otherwise have been properly licensed.

(3) A peace officer may exercise discretion in a situation where the driver without a valid license is an employee driving a vehicle registered to the employer in the course of employment. A peace officer may also exercise discretion in a situation where the driver without a valid license is the employee of a bona fide business establishment or is a person otherwise controlled by such an establishment and it reasonably appears that an owner of the vehicle, or an agent of the owner, relinquished possession of the vehicle to the business establishment solely for servicing or parking of the vehicle or other reasonably similar situations, and where the vehicle was not to be driven except as directly necessary to accomplish that business purpose. In this event, if the vehicle can be returned to or be retrieved by the business establishment or registered owner, the peace officer may release and not impound the vehicle.

(4) A registered or legal owner of record at the time of impoundment may request a hearing to determine the validity of the impoundment pursuant to subdivision (n).

(5) If the driver of a vehicle impounded pursuant to this subdivision was not a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment, or if the driver of the vehicle was a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment but the driver does not have a previous conviction for a violation of subdivision (a) of Section 12500 or Section 14601, 14601.1, 14601.2, 14601.3, 14601.4, or 14601.5, the vehicle shall be released pursuant to this code and is not subject to forfeiture.

(d) (1) This subdivision applies only if the driver of the vehicle is a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment. Except as provided in paragraph (5) of subdivision (c), if the driver of a vehicle impounded pursuant to subdivision (c) was a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment, the impounding agency shall authorize release of the vehicle if, within three days of impoundment, the driver of the vehicle at the time of impoundment presents his or her valid driver's license, including a valid temporary California driver's license or permit, to the impounding agency. The vehicle shall then be released to a registered owner of record at the time of impoundment, or an agent of that owner authorized in writing, upon payment of towing and storage charges related to the impoundment, and any administrative charges authorized by Section 22850.5, providing that the person claiming the vehicle is properly licensed and the vehicle is properly registered. A vehicle impounded pursuant to the circumstances described in paragraph (3) of subdivision (c) shall be released to a registered owner whether or not the driver of the vehicle at the time of impoundment presents a valid driver's license.

(2) If there is a community property interest in the vehicle impounded pursuant to subdivision (c), owned at the time of impoundment by a person other than the driver, and the vehicle is the only vehicle available to the driver's immediate family that may be operated with a class C driver's license, the vehicle shall be released to a registered owner or to the community property interest owner upon compliance with all of the following requirements:

(A) The registered owner or the community property interest owner requests release of the vehicle and the owner of the community property interest submits proof of that interest.

(B) The registered owner or the community property interest owner submits proof that he or she, or an authorized driver, is properly licensed and that the impounded vehicle is properly registered pursuant to this code.

(C) All towing and storage charges related to the impoundment and any administrative charges authorized pursuant to Section 22850.5 are paid.

(D) The registered owner or the community property interest owner signs a stipulated vehicle release agreement, as described in paragraph (3), in consideration for the nonforfeiture of the vehicle. This requirement applies only if the driver requests release of the vehicle.

(3) A stipulated vehicle release agreement shall provide for the consent of the signator to the automatic future forfeiture and transfer of title to the state of any vehicle registered to that person, if the vehicle is driven by a driver with a suspended or revoked license, or by an unlicensed driver. The agreement shall be in effect for only as long as it is noted on a driving record maintained by the department pursuant to Section 1806.1.

(4) The stipulated vehicle release agreement described in paragraph (3) shall be reported by the impounding agency to the department not later than 10 days after the day the agreement is signed.

(5) No vehicle shall be released pursuant to paragraph (2) if the driving record of a registered owner indicates that a prior stipulated vehicle release agreement was signed by that person.

(e) (1) The impounding agency, in the case of a vehicle that has not been redeemed pursuant to subdivision (d), or that has not been otherwise released, shall promptly ascertain from the department the names and addresses of all legal and registered owners of the vehicle.

(2) The impounding agency, within two days of impoundment, shall send a notice by certified mail, return receipt requested, to all legal and registered owners of the vehicle, at the addresses obtained from the department, informing them that the vehicle is subject to forfeiture and will be sold or otherwise disposed of pursuant to this section. The notice shall also include instructions for filing a claim with the district attorney, and the time limits for filing a claim. The notice shall also inform any legal owner of its right to conduct the sale pursuant to subdivision (g). If a registered owner was personally served at the time of impoundment with a notice containing all the information required to be provided by this paragraph, no further notice is required to be sent to a registered owner. However, a notice shall still be sent to the legal owners of the vehicle, if any. If notice was not sent to the legal owner within two working days, the impounding agency shall not charge the legal owner for more than 15-days' impoundment when the legal owner redeems the impounded vehicle.

(3) No processing charges shall be imposed on a legal owner who redeems an impounded vehicle within 15 days of the impoundment of that vehicle. If no claims are filed and served within 15 days after the mailing of the notice in paragraph (2), or if no claims are filed and served within five days of personal service of the notice specified in paragraph (2), when no other mailed notice is required pursuant to paragraph (2), the district attorney shall prepare a written declaration of forfeiture of the vehicle to the state. A written declaration of forfeiture signed by the district attorney under this subdivision shall be deemed to provide good and sufficient title to the forfeited vehicle. A copy of the declaration shall be provided on request to any person informed of the pending forfeiture pursuant to paragraph (2). A claim that is filed and is later withdrawn by the claimant shall be deemed not to have been filed.

(4) If a claim is timely filed and served, then the district attorney shall file a petition of forfeiture with the appropriate juvenile, municipal, or superior court within 10 days of the receipt of the claim. The district attorney shall establish an expedited hearing date in accordance with instructions from the court, and the court shall hear the matter without delay. The court filing fee, not to exceed fifty dollars ($50), shall be paid by the claimant, but shall be reimbursed by the impounding agency if the claimant prevails. To the extent practicable, the civil and criminal cases shall be heard at the same time in an expedited, consolidated proceeding. A proceeding in the civil case is a limited civil case."

2. Most state vehicle codes define "resident" as a person with a domicile in the "State". Below is an example from the California Vehicle Code:

California Vehicle Code

516. "Resident" means any person who manifests an intent to live or be located in this state on more than a temporary or transient basis. Presence in the state for six months or more in any 12-month period gives rise to a rebuttable presumption of residency.
The following are evidence of residency for purposes of vehicle registration:
(a) Address where registered to vote.
(b) Location of employment or place of business.
(c) Payment of resident tuition at a public institution of higher education.
(d) Attendance of dependents at a primary or secondary school.
(e) Filing a homeowner's property tax exemption.
(f) Renting or leasing a home for use as a residence.
(g) Declaration of residency to obtain a license or any other privilege or benefit not ordinarily extended to a nonresident.
(h) Possession of a California driver's license.
(i) Other acts, occurrences, or events that indicate presence in the state is more than temporary or transient.

(D) Other acts, occurrences, or events that indicate presence in the state is more than temporary or transient.
(2) California residency is required of a person in order to be issued a commercial driver's license under this code.

(b) The presumption of residency in this state may be rebutted by satisfactory evidence that the licensee's primary residence is in another state.

(c) Any person entitled to an exemption under Section 12502, 12503, or 12504 may operate a motor vehicle in this state for not to exceed 10 days from the date he or she establishes residence in this state, except that he or she shall obtain a license from the department upon becoming a resident before being employed for compensation by another for the purpose of driving a motor vehicle on the highways.

3. The term "State" is then defined in the revenue codes to mean the federal areas within the exterior limits of the state. Below is an example from the California Revenue and Taxation Code:

Consequently, the vehicle code in most states, in the case of individuals not involved in "commercial activity", applies mainly to "public officers" who are effectively "residents" of the federal zone with an effective "domicile" or "residence" there:

These "persons" are "taxpayers". They are Americans who have contracted away their Constitutional rights in exchange for government "privileges" and they are the only "persons" who inhabit or maintain a "domicile" or "residence" in the "State" as defined above. Only people with a domicile in such "State" can be required to obtain a "license" to drive on the "highways". While they are exercising "agency" on behalf of or representing the government corporation, they are "citizens" of that corporation and "residents", because the corporation itself is a "citizen" and therefore a person with a domicile in the place where the corporation was formed, which for the "United States" is the District of Columbia:

> "Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes; but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property*. It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be disseised,' without due process of law, is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal government, by the amendments to the constitution."*

IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.
Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant; Capacity

(b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

(1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;
(2) for a corporation[or one REPRESENTING a PUBLIC CORPORATION called the government as a "public officer"], by the law under which it was organized; and
(3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:
(A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution or laws; and
(B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue or be sued in a United States court.
[SOURCE: http://www.law.cornell.edu/rules/frcp/Rule17.htm]

If you don't want to be a "public officer" who has an effective "domicile" or "residence" in the District of Columbia, then you have to divorce the state, create your own "state", and change your domicile to that new "state". For instance, you can form an association of people and choose a domicile within that association. This association would be referred to as a "foreign jurisdiction" within the vehicle code in most states. The association can become the "government" for that group, and issue its own driver's licenses and conduct its own "courts". In effect, it becomes a competitor to the de facto state for the affections, allegiance, and obedience of the people. This is capitalism at its finest, folks!

California Vehicle Code

12502. (a) The following persons may operate a motor vehicle in this state without obtaining a driver's license under this code:

(1) A nonresident over the age of 18 years having in his or her immediate possession a valid driver's license issued by a foreign jurisdiction of which he or she is a resident, except as provided in Section 12505.
[SOURCE: http://www.leginfo.ca.gov/cgi-bin/displaycode?section=veh&group=12001-13000&file=12500-12527]

As long as the driver's licenses issued by the government you form meet the same standard as those for the state you are in, then it doesn't matter who issued it.

California Vehicle Code

12505. (a) (1) For purposes of this division only and notwithstanding Section 516, residency shall be determined as a person's state of domicile. "State of domicile" means the state where a person has his or her true, fixed, and permanent home and principal residence and to which he or she has manifested the intention of returning whenever he or she is absent.

[. . .]

(e) Subject to Section 12504, a person over the age of 16 years who is a resident of a foreign jurisdiction other than a state, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or Canada, having a valid driver's license issued to him or her by any other foreign jurisdiction having licensing standards deemed by the Department of Motor Vehicles equivalent to those of this state, may operate a motor vehicle in this state without obtaining a license from the department, except that he or she shall obtain a license before being employed for compensation by another for the purpose of driving a motor vehicle on the highways.

As long as you take and pass the same written and driver's tests as the state uses, even your church could issue it! As a matter of fact, below is an example of a church that issues "Heaven Driver's Licenses" called "Embassy of Heaven":

http://www.embassyofheaven.com/

You can't be compelled by law to grant to your public "servants" a monopoly that compels you into servitude to them as a "public officer". In the United States, WE THE PEOPLE are the government, and not their representatives and "servants" who work for them implementing the laws that they pass. Consequently, you and your friends or church, as a "self-governing body" can make your own driver's license and in fact and in law, those licenses will by definition be "government-issued". To wit:

> "The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives [they are the government, not their servants]. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ..."
> [Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

> "From the differences existing between feudal sovereignties and Government founded on compacts, it necessarily follows that their respective prerogatives must differ. Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here, never in a single instance; our Governors are the agents of the people, and at most stand in the same relation to their sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes have personal powers, dignities, and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in the sovereignty otherwise, or in any other capacity, than as private citizens. "
> [Chisholm, Ex'r. v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 454, 457, 471, 472 (1794)]

Anyone who won't accept such a driver's license should be asked to contradict the U.S. Supreme Court and to prove that you AREN'T part of the government as a person who governs his own life and the lives of other members of the group you have created. The following article also emphasizes that "We The People" are the government, and that our servants have been trying to deceive us into believing otherwise:

We The People Are The American Government, Nancy Levant http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/Articles/WeAreGovernment.pdf

5.6.13.3.7.5 How employers and financial institutions compel choice of domicile

Whenever you open a financial account or start a new job these days, most employers, banks, or investment companies will require you to produce "government ID". Their favorite form of ID is the state issued ID. Unfortunately, unless you are an alien domiciled on federal territory within the exterior limits of the state who is not protected by the Constitution, you don't qualify for state ID or even a state driver's license. By asking for "government ID", employers and financial institutions indirectly are forcing you to do the following as a precondition of doing business with them:

1. Surrender the benefits and protections of being a "citizen" in exchange for being a privileged alien, and to do so WITHOUT consideration and without recourse.
2. Become a statutory "resident alien" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). domiciled on federal territory and subject to federal jurisdiction, who is a public officer within the federal government engaged in the "trade or business" franchise. See:

The "Trade or Business" Scam, Form #05.001 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. Become a privileged "resident alien" franchisee who is compelled to participate in what essentially amounts to a "protection racket".

> "Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the country. Being bound to the society by reason of their [intention of] dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizenship. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged > character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children."

> [The Law of Nations, p. 87, E. De Vattel, Volume Three, 1758, Carnegie Institution of Washington; emphasis added.]

4. Serving two masters and subject simultaneously to state and federal jurisdiction. The federal government has jurisdiction over aliens, including those within a state.

> "No one can serve two masters [two employers, for instance]; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government]."
> [Luke 16:13, Bible, NKJV. Written by a tax collector]

One thing you can show financial institutions as an alternative to state ID or a state driver's license that doesn't connect you to the "protection franchise" and a domicile on federal territory is a USA passport. What they do to deal with "difficult" people like that is say that they need TWO forms of government ID in order to open the account. Here is an example of what you might hear on this subject:

> "I'm sorry, but the Patriot Act [or some other obscure regulation] requires you to produce TWO forms of government issued ID to open an account with us."

Most people falsely presume that the above statement means that they ALSO need state ID in addition to the passport but this isn't true. It is a maxim of law that the law cannot require an impossibility. If they are going to impose a duty upon you under the color of law by saying that you need TWO forms of ID, they must provide a way to comply without:

5. Compelling you to politically associate with a specific government in violation of the First Amendment.
6. Compelling you to participate in government franchises by providing an identifying number.
7. Misrepresenting your status as a privileged "resident alien".
8. Violating your religious beliefs by nominating an Earthly protector and thereby firing God as your only protector.

There are lots of ways around this trap. For instance, the U.S. Supreme Court said WE are the government and that we govern ourselves through our elected representatives.

> "The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ..."
> [Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

So what does "government id" really mean? A notary public is also a public officer and therefore part of the government.

> Chapter 1
> Introduction
> §1.1 Generally
> A notary public (sometimes called a notary) is a public official appointed under authority of law with power, among other things, to administer oaths, certify affidavits, take acknowledgments, take depositions, perpetuate testimony, and protect negotiable instruments. Notaries are not appointed under federal law; they are appointed under the authority of the various states, districts, territories, as in the case of the Virgin Islands, and the commonwealth, in the case of Puerto Rico. The statutes, which define the powers and duties of a notary public, frequently grant the notary the authority to do all acts justified by commercial usage and the "law merchant".*
> [Anderson's Manual for Notaries Public, Ninth Edition, 2001, ISBN 1-58360-357-3]

If you hand the financial institution any of the following, you have satisfied their requirement for secondary ID without violating the law or being compelled to associate with or contract with the government:

1. Notarized piece of paper with your picture and your birth certificate on it. The notary is a government officer and therefore it is government ID.
2. Certified copy of your birth certificate by itself. The certification is from the government so its government ID.
3. ID issued by a government you formed and signed by the "Secretary of State" of that government. The people are the government according to the Supreme Court, so you can issue your own ID.

You have to be creative at times to avoid the frequent attempts to compel you to sign up for government franchises, but it is still doable.

Another thing that nearly all financial institutions and private employers habitually do is PRESUME, usually wrongfully, that:

1. You are a "citizen" or a "resident" of the place you live or work. What citizens and residents have in common is a domicile within a jurisdiction. Otherwise, you would be called "nonresidents" or "transient foreigners".
2. Whatever residence or mailing address you give them is your domicile.

By making such a false presumption, employers and financial institutions in effect are causing you to make an "invisible election" to become a citizen or resident or domiciliary and to provide your tacit consent to be governed without even realizing it.

If you want to prevent becoming a victim of the false presumption that you are a "citizen", "resident", and therefore domiciliary of the place you live or work, you must take special precautions to notify all of your business associates by providing a special form to them describing you as a "nonresident" of some kind. At the federal level, that form is the IRS Form W-8BEN or a suitable substitute, which identifies the holder as a "nonresident alien". IRS does not make a form for "nonresidents" who are not "aliens", unfortunately, so you must therefore modify their form or make your own form. For an article on how to fill out tax forms to ensure that you are not PRESUMED, usually prejudicially and falsely, to be a resident or citizen or domiciliary, see the following article:

> About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Sometimes, those receiving your declaration of nonresident status may try to interfere with that choice. For such cases, the following pamphlet proves that the only one who can lawfully declare or establish your civil status, including your "nonresident" status, is you. If anyone tries to coerce you to declare a civil status for yourself that you don't want to accept and don't consent to, you should provide an affidavit indicating that you were under duress and that they threatened to financially penalize you or not contract with you if you don't LIE on government forms and declare a status you don't want. The following pamphlet is also useful in proving that they have no authority to coerce you to declare any civil status you don't want:

> Your Exclusive Right to Declare or Establish Your Civil Status, Form #13.008
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

We should always keep in mind that whenever a financial institution or employer asks for a tax form, they are doing so under the color of law as a "withholding agent" (26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(16)) who is a public officer of the government. Because they are a public officer of the government in their capacity as a withholding agent, they still have a legal duty not to violate your rights, even if they otherwise are a private company. The Constitution applies to all officers and agents of the government, including "withholding agents" while acting in that capacity.

5.6.14 The Information Return Scam

As we said in the preceding section, the income tax described by Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is a franchise and excise tax upon "public offices" within the U.S. government, which the code defines as a "trade or business". Before an income tax can lawfully be enforced or collected, the subject of the tax must be connected to the activity with court-admissible evidence. Information returns are the method by which the activity is connected to the subject of the tax under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6041(a). When this connection is made, the person engaging in the excise taxable activity is called "effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States".

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 61 > Subchapter A > PART III > Subpart B > § 6041
> § 6041. Information at source
> (a) Payments of $600 or more
> All persons engaged in a trade or business and making payment in the course of such trade or business to another person, of rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or* > other fixed or determinable gains, profits, and income (other than payments to which section 6042 (a)(1), 6044 (a)(1), 6047 (e), 6049 (a), or 6050N (a) applies, and other than payments with respect to which a statement is required under the authority of section 6042 (a)(2), 6044 (a)(2), or 6045), of $600 or more in any taxable year, or, in the case of such payments made by the United States, the officers or employees of the United States having information as to such payments and required to make returns in regard thereto by the regulations hereinafter provided for, shall render a true and accurate return to the Secretary, under such regulations and in such form and manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by the Secretary, setting forth the amount of such gains, profits, and income, and the name and address of the recipient of such payment.

The government cannot lawfully regulate private conduct. The ability to regulate private conduct is, in fact, "repugnant to the constitution" as held by the U.S. Supreme Court. The only thing the government can regulate is "public conduct" and the "public rights" and franchises that enforce or implement it. Consequently, the government must deceive private parties into submitting false reports connecting their private labor and private property to such a public use, public purpose, and public office in order that they can usurp jurisdiction over it and thereby tax and plunder it.

> "The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876) ; United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883) ; James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903) . Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964) ; United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966) , their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."
> [City of Boerne v. Florez, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

In a sense, the function of an information return therefore is to:

1. Provide evidence that the owner is consensually and lawfully engaged in the "trade or business" and public office franchise. These reports cannot lawfully be filed if this is not the case. 26 U.S.C. §7206 and 7207 make it a crime to file a false report.
2. Donate formerly private property described on the report to a public use, a public purpose, and a public office with the consent of the owner without any immediate or monetary compensation in order to procure the "benefits" incident to participation in the franchise.
3. Subject the property to excise taxation upon the "trade or business" activity.
4. Subject the property to use and control by the government:

> "Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights,-'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;' and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property [or income] which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit [e.g. SOCIAL SECURITY, Medicare, and every other public "benefit"]; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use*; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation."*
> [Budd v. People of State of New York, 143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

On the other hand, if the information return:

1. Was filed against an owner of the property described who is not lawfully engaged in a public office or a "trade or business" in the U.S. government. . .OR
2. Was filed in a case where the owner of the private property did not consent to donate the property described to a public use and a public office by signing a contract or agreement authorizing such as an IRS Form W-4. . .OR
3. Was filed mistakenly or fraudulently.

. . .then the following crimes have occurred:

1. A violation of the Fifth Amendment Takings Clause has occurred:

> U.S. Constitution, Fifth Amendment
> No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be > deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

2. A violation of due process has occurred. Any taking of property without the consent of the owner is a violation of due process of law.
3. The subject of the information return is being compelled to impersonate a public officer in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.

> TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 43 > § 912
> § 912. Officer or employee of the United States
> Whoever falsely assumes or pretends to be an officer or employee acting under the authority of the United States or any department, agency or officer thereof, and acts as such, or in such pretended character demands or obtains any money, paper, document, or thing of value, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

4. An unlawful conversion of private property to public property has occurred in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §654. Only officers of the government called "withholding agents" appointed under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(16) and the I.R.C. can lawfully file these information returns or withhold upon the proceeds of the transaction. All withholding and reporting agents are public officers, not private parties, whether they receive direct compensation for acting in that capacity or not.

> TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 31 > § 654
> § 654. Officer or employee of United States converting property of another
> Whoever, being an officer or employee of the United States or of any department or agency thereof, embezzles or wrongfully converts to his own use the money or property of another which comes into his possession or under his control in the execution of such office or employment, or under color or claim of authority as such officer or employee, shall be fined under this title or not more than the value of the money and property thus embezzled or converted, whichever is greater, or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both; but if the sum embezzled is $1,000 or less, he shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

If you would like to learn more about how the above mechanisms work, see:

The "Trade or Business" Scam, Form #05.001, Section 2 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Nearly all private Americans are not in fact and in deed lawfully engaged in a "public office" and cannot therefore serve within such an office without committing the crime of impersonating a public officer. This is exhaustively proven in the following:

The "Trade or Business" Scam, Form #05.001, Section 10 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

What makes someone a "private American" is, in fact, that they are not lawfully engaged in a public office or any other government franchise. All franchises, in fact, make those engaged into public officers of one kind or another and cause them to forfeit their status as a private person and give up all their constitutional rights in the process. See:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

IRS therefore mis-represents and mis-enforces the Internal Revenue Code by abusing their tax forms and their untrustworthy printed propaganda as a method:

1. To unlawfully create public offices in the government in places they are forbidden to even exist pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72.
2. To "elect" the average American unlawfully into such an office.
3. To cause those involuntarily serving in the office to unlawfully impersonate a public officer in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
4. To enforce the obligations of the office upon those who are not lawfully occupying said office.

5. Of election fraud, whereby the contributions collected cause those who contribute them to bribe a public official to procure the office that they occupy with unlawfully collected monies, in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §210. IRS Document 6209 identifies all IRS Form W-2 contributions as "gifts" to the U.S. government, which is a polite way of describing what actually amounts to a bribe.

> TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 11 > § 210
> § 210. Offer to procure appointive public office
> Whoever pays or offers or promises any money [withheld unlawfully] or thing of value, to any person, firm, or corporation in consideration of the use or promise to use any influence to procure any appointive [public] office or place under the United States for any person*, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.*

For instance, innocent Americans ignorant of the law are deceived into volunteering to unlawfully accept the obligations of a public office by filing an IRS Form W-4 "agreement" to withhold pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §3402(p) , 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3(a) , and 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1. To wit:

> Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)–3).

> 26 C.F.R. § 31.3402(p)-1 Voluntary withholding agreements.
> An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of §31.3401(a)–3, made after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. See §31.3405(c)–1, Q&A–3 concerning agreements to have more than 20-percent Federal income tax withheld from eligible rollover distributions within the meaning of section 402.

Those who have not voluntarily signed and submitted the IRS Form W-4 contract/agreement and who are were not lawfully engaged in a "public office" within the U.S. government BEFORE they signed any tax form cannot truthfully or lawfully earn reportable "wages" as legally defined in 26 U.S.C. §3402. Therefore, even if the IRS sends a "lock-down" letter telling the private employer to withhold at a rate of "single with no exemptions", he must withhold ONLY on the amount of "wages" earned, which is still zero. If a W-2 is filed against a person who does not voluntarily sign and submit the W-4 or who is not lawfully engaged in a public office:

1. The amount reported must be ZERO for everything on the form, and especially for "wages".
2. If any amount reported is other than zero, then the payroll clerk submitting the W-2 is criminally liable for filing a false return under 26 U.S.C. §7206, punishable as a felony for up to a $100,000 fine and three years in jail.
3. If you also warned the payroll clerk that they were doing it improperly in writing and have a proof you served them with it, their actions also become fraudulent and they additionally liable under 26 U.S.C. §7207, punishable as a felony for up to $10,000 and up to one year in jail.

The heart of the tax fraud and SCAM perpetrated on a massive scale by our government then is:

1. To publish IRS forms and publications which contain untrustworthy information that deceives the public into believing that they have a legal obligation to file false information returns against their neighbor.

> "IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position."

[Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.8 (05-14-1999)]

2. To reinforce the deliberate deception and omissions in their publications with verbal advice that is equally damaging and untrustworthy:

> p. 21: "As discussed in §2.3.3, the IRS is not bound by its statements or positions in unofficial pamphlets and publications."
> p. 34: "6. IRS Pamphlets and Booklets. The IRS is not bound by statements or positions in its unofficial publications, such as handbooks and pamphlets."
> p. 34: "7. Other Written and Oral Advice. Most taxpayers' requests for advice from the IRS are made orally. Unfortunately, the IRS is not bound by answers or positions stated by its employees orally, whether in person or by telephone. According to the procedural regulations, 'oral advice is advisory only and the Service is not bound to recognize it in the examination of the taxpayer's return.' 26 C.F.R. §601.201(k)(2). In rare cases, however, the IRS has been held to be equitably estopped to take a position different from that stated orally to, and justifiably relied on by, the taxpayer. The Omnibus Taxpayer Bill of Rights Act, enacted as part of the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988, gives taxpayers some comfort, however. It amended section 6404 to require the Service to abate any penalty or addition to tax that is attributable to advice furnished in writing by any IRS agent or employee acting within the scope of his official capacity. Section 6404 as amended protects the taxpayer only if the following conditions are satisfied: the written advice from the IRS was issued in response to a written request from the taxpayer; reliance on the advice was reasonable; and the error in the advice did not result from inaccurate or incomplete information having been furnished by the taxpayer. Thus, it will still be difficult to bind the IRS even to written statements made by its employees. As was true before, taxpayers may be penalized for following oral advice from the IRS."
> [Tax Procedure and Tax Fraud, Patricia Morgan, 1999, ISBN 0-314-06586-5, West Group]

3. To make it very difficult to describe yourself as either a "nontaxpayer" or a person not subject to the Internal Revenue Code on any IRS form. IRS puts the "exempt" option on their forms, but has no option for "not subject". You can be "not subject" and a "nontaxpayer" without being "exempt" and if you want to properly and lawfully describe yourself that way, you have to either modify their form or create your own substitute. You cannot, in fact be an "exempt individual" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(5) without first being an "individual" and therefore subject to the I.R.C.. The following entity would be "not subject" but also not an "exempt individual" or "exempt", and could include people as well as property:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > § 7701
> § 7701. Definitions
>
> (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—
> (31) Foreign estate or trust
> (A) Foreign estate
> The term "foreign estate" means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States*, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.*

4. For the IRS to be protected by a judicial "protection racket" implemented by judges who have a conflict of interest as "taxpayers" in violation of 18 U.S.C. §208, 28 U.S.C. §144, and 28 U.S.C. §455. This protection racket was instituted permanently upon federal judges with the Revenue Act of 1932 as documented in:
   4.1. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)
   4.2. O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939)
   4.3. United States v. Hatter, 121 S.Ct. 1782 (2001)
5. To receive what they know in nearly all cases are false information returns against private parties.
6. To protect the filers of these false reports.
   6.1. IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, and 1099 do not contain the individual identity of the person who prepared the form.

6.2. Only IRS forms 1096 and W-3 contain the identity and statement under penalty of perjury signed by the specific individual person who filed the false information return.

6.3. If you send a FOIA to the Social Security Administration asking for the IRS Forms 1096 and W-3 connected to the specific information returns filed against you, they very conveniently will tell you that they don't have the documents, even though they are the ONLY ones who receive them in the government! They instead tell you to send a FOIA to the IRS to obtain them. For example, see the following:

6.4. The IRS then comes back and says they don't keep the original Forms 1096 and W-3 either! Consequently, there is no way to identify the specific individual who filed the original false reports or to prosecute them criminally under 26 U.S.C. §§7206 and 7207 or civilly under 26 U.S.C. §7434. In that sense, IRS FOIA offices act as "witness protection programs" for those communist informants for the government willfully engaged in criminal activity.

Information Returns Transcripts - 1099 Information

1. Generally, information returns are destroyed upon processing. Therefore, original returns cannot be retrieved. In addition, the IRS may not have record of all information returns filed by payers. The Information Returns Master File (IRMF), accessed by CC IRPTR, contains records of many information returns. The master files are not complete until October of the year following the issuance of the information document, and contain the most current year and five (5) previous years. Taxpayers should be advised to first seek copies of information documents from the payer. However, upon request, taxpayers or their authorized designee may receive "information return " information.
2. Follow guidelines IRM 3.5.20.1 through 3.5.20.11, to ensure requests are complete and valid.
3. This information can be requested on TDS.
4. This information is also available using IRPTR with definer W.
5. If IRPTR is used without definer W, the following items must be sanitized before the information is released:
   - CASINO CTR
   - CMIR Form 4790
   - CTR
6. Form 1099 information is not available through Latham.

7. To deliberately interfere with efforts to correct these false reports by those who are the wrongful subject of them:
   7.1. By penalizing filers of corrected information returns up to $5,000 for each Form 4852 filed pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6702.
   7.2. By not providing forms to correct the false reports for ALL THOSE who could be the subject of them. IRS Form 4852, for instance, says at the top "Attach to Form 1040, 1040A, 1040-EZ, or 1040X." There is no equivalent form for use by non-resident non-persons who are victims of false IRS Form W-2 or 1099-R and who file a Form 1040NR.
   7.3. To refuse to accept IRS W-2C forms filed by those other than "employers".
   7.4. To refuse to accept custom, substitute, or modified forms that would correct the original reports.
   7.5. To not help those submitting the corrections by saying that they were not accepted, why they were not accepted, or how to make them acceptable.
8. To ignore correspondence directed at remedying all the above abuses and thereby obstruct justice and condone and encourage further unlawful activity.

So what we have folks is a deliberate, systematic plan that:

1. Turns innocent parties called "nontaxpayers" into guilty parties called "taxpayers", which the U.S. Supreme Court said they cannot do.

> "In Calder v. Bull, which was here in 1798, Mr. Justice Chase said, that there were acts which the Federal and State legislatures could not do without exceeding their authority, and among them he mentioned a law which punished a citizen for an innocent act; a law that destroyed or impaired the lawful private [labor] contracts [and labor compensation, e.g. earnings from employment through compelled W-4 withholding] of citizens; a law that made a man judge in his own case; and a law that took the property from A [the worker]. and gave it to B [the government or another citizen, such as through social welfare programs]. 'It is against all reason and justice,' he added, 'for a people to intrust a legislature with such powers, and therefore it cannot be presumed that they have done it. They may command what is right and prohibit what is wrong; but they cannot change innocence into guilt, or punish [being a "nontaxpayer"] as a crime [being a "taxpayer"], or violate the right of an antecedent lawful private [employment] contract [by compelling W-4 withholding, for instance], or the right of private property. To maintain that a Federal or State legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT!] if they had not been expressly restrained, would, in my opinion, be a political heresy altogether inadmissible in all free republican governments.' 3 Dall. 388."

2. Constitutes a conspiracy to destroy equal protection and equal treatment that is the foundation of the Constitution, assigning all sovereignty to the government, and compelling everyone to worship and serve it without compensation.
3. Constitutes a conspiracy to destroy all Constitutional rights by compelling Americans through false reports to service the obligations of an office they cannot lawfully occupy and derive no benefit from:

> "It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583. "Constitutional > rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied,' Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence,' Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345."

> *[*Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

4. Constitutes an abuse of tax forms as a federal election device to unlawfully elect those who aren't eligible and without their consent into public office in the government, in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
5. Encourages Americans on a massive scale to file false reports against their neighbor that compel them into economic servitude and slavery without compensation:

> "You shall not circulate a false report [information return]. Do not put your hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness."
> [Exodus, 23:1, Bible, NKJV]

> "You shall not bear false witness [or file a FALSE REPORT or information return] against your neighbor."

> "A false witness will not go unpunished, And he who speaks lies shall perish."
> [Prov. 19:9, Bible, NKJV]

> "If a false witness rises against any man to testify against him of wrongdoing, then both men in the controversy shall stand before the LORD, before the priests and the judges who serve in those days. And the judges shall make careful inquiry, and indeed, if the witness is a false witness, who has testified falsely against his brother, then you shall do to him as he thought to have done to his brother; [enticement into slavery (pursuant to 42 U.S.C. §1994)] to the demands of others without compensation] so you shall put away the evil from among you. And those who remain shall hear and fear, and hereafter they shall not again commit such evil among you. Your eye shall not pity: life shall be for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot."

6. Constitutes a plan to implement communism in America. The Second Plank of the Communist Manifesto, Karl Marx is a heavy, progressive income tax that punishes the rich and abuses the taxation powers of the government to redistribute wealth.
7. Constitutes a conspiracy to replace a de jure Constitutional Republic into nothing but a big for-profit private corporation and business in which:
   7.1. Government becomes a virtual or political entity rather than physical entity tied to a specific territory. All the "States" after the Civil War rewrote their Constitutions to remove references to their physical boundaries. Formerly "sovereign" and independent states have become federal territories and federal corporations by signing up for federal franchises:

> *At common law, a "corporation" was an "artificial perso[n] endowed with the legal capacity of perpetual succession" consisting either of a single individual (termed a "corporation sole") or of a collection of several individuals (a "corporation aggregate"). 3 H. Stephen, Commentaries on the Laws of England 166, 168 (1st Am. ed. 1845) . The sovereign was considered a corporation. See id., at 170; see also 1 W. Blackstone, Commentaries 467. Under the definitions supplied by contemporary law dictionaries, Territories would have been classified as "corporations" (and hence as "persons") at the time that 1983 was enacted and the Dictionary Act recodified. See W. Anderson, A Dictionary of Law 261 (1893) ("All corporations were originally modeled upon a state or nation"); 1 J. Bouvier, A Law Dictionary Adapted to the Constitution and Laws of the United States of America 318-319 (11th ed. 1866) ("In this extensive sense the United States may be termed a corporation"); Van Brocklin v. Tennessee, 117 U.S. 151, 154 (1886) ("`The United States is a . . . great corporation . . . ordained and established by the American people'") (quoting United [495 U.S. 182, 202] States v. Maurice, 26 F.Cas. 1211, 1216 (No. 15,747) (CC Va. 1823) (Marshall, C. J.)); Cotton v. United States, 11 How. 229, 231 (1851) (United States is "a corporation"). See generally Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 561-562 (1819) (explaining history of term "corporation").

   7.2. All rights have been replaced with legislatively created corporate "privileges" and franchises. See:
   Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
   7.3. "citizens" and "residents" are little more than "employees" and officers of the corporation described in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b), 26 U.S.C. §7343, and 5 U.S.C. §2105. See:
   Proof That There Is a "Straw Man", Form #05.042

   7.4. You join the club and become an officer and employee of the corporation by declaring yourself to be a statutory but not constitutional "U.S. citizen" on a government form. See:

> Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7.5. Social Security Numbers and Taxpayer Identification Numbers serve as de facto license numbers authorizing those who use them to act in the capacity of a public officer, trustee, and franchisee within the government. See:

> Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7.6. Federal Reserve Notes (FRNs) serve as a substitute for lawful money and are really nothing but private scrip for internal use by officers of the government. They are not lawful money because they are not redeemable in gold or silver as required by the Constitution. See:

> The Money Scam, Form #05.041
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7.7. So-called "Income Taxes" are nothing but insurance premiums to pay for "social insurance benefits". They are also used to regulate the supply of fiat currency. See:

> The Government "Benefits" Scam, Form #05.040
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7.8. The so-called "law book", the Internal Revenue Code, is the private law franchise agreement which regulates compensation to and "kickbacks" from the officers of the corporation, which includes you. See:

> The "Trade or Business" Scam, Form #05.001

7.9. Federal courts are really just private binding corporate arbitration for disputes between fellow officers of the corporation. See:

> What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012

7.10. Terms in the Constitution have been redefined to limit themselves to federal territory not protected by the original de jure constitution through judicial and prosecutorial word-smithing.

> "When words lose their meaning, people will lose their liberty."

8. Constitutes a plan to unwittingly recruit the average American into servitude of this communist/socialist effort.

> TITLE 50 > CHAPTER 23 > SUBCHAPTER IV > Sec. 841.
> Sec. 841. - Findings and declarations of fact
> The Congress finds and declares that the Communist Party of the United States [consisting of the IRS, DOJ, and a corrupted federal judiciary], although purportedly a political party, is in fact an instrumentality of a conspiracy to overthrow the [de jure] Government of the United States [and replace it with a de facto government ruled by the judiciary]. It constitutes an authoritarian dictatorship [IRS, DOJ, and corrupted federal judiciary in collusion] within a [constitutional] republic, demanding for itself the rights and privileges [including immunity from prosecution for their wrongdoing in violation of Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8 of the Constitution] accorded to political parties, but denying to all others the liberties [Bill of Rights] guaranteed by the Constitution. Unlike political parties, which evolve their policies and programs through public means, by the reconciliation of a wide variety of individual views, and submit those policies and programs to the electorate at large for approval or disapproval, the policies and programs of the Communist Party are secretly [by corrupt judges and the IRS in complete disregard of the tax laws] prescribed for it by the foreign leaders of the world Communist movement [the IRS and Federal Reserve]. Its members [the Congress, which was terrorized to do IRS bidding recently by the framing of Congressman Traficant] have no part in determining its goals, and are not permitted to voice dissent to party objectives. Unlike members of political parties, members of the Communist Party are recruited for indoctrination [in the public schools by homosexuals, liberals, and socialists] with respect to its objectives and methods, and are organized, instructed, and disciplined [by the IRS and a corrupted judiciary] to carry into action slavishly the assignments given them by their hierarchical chieftains. Unlike political parties, the Communist Party [thanks to a corrupted federal judiciary] acknowledges no constitutional or statutory limitations upon its conduct or upon that of its members. The Communist Party is relatively small numerically, > and gives scant indication of capacity ever to attain its ends by lawful political means. The peril inherent in its operation arises not from its numbers, but from its failure to acknowledge any limitation as to the nature of its activities, and its dedication to the proposition that the present constitutional Government of the United States ultimately must be brought to ruin by any available means, including resort to force and violence [or using income taxes]. Holding that doctrine, its role as the agency of a hostile foreign power [the Federal Reserve and the American Bar Association (ABA)] renders its existence a clear present and continuing danger to the security of the United States. It is the means whereby individuals are seduced into the service of the world Communist movement, trained to do its bidding, and directed and controlled in the conspiratorial performance of their revolutionary services. Therefore, the Communist Party should be outlawed

9. Constitutes an effort to create and perpetuate a state-sponsored religion and to compel "tithes" called income tax to the state-sponsored church, which is the government:

5.6.15 All compensation for your personal labor is deductible from "gross income" on your tax return

It may surprise you to learn that the Internal Revenue Code allows for anyone to deduct the full market value and compensation received in exchange for their personal labor. This section will summarize why this is, and is based on a free pamphlet available below:

How the Government Defrauds You Out of Legitimate Deductions for the Market Value of Your Labor, Form #05.026
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The following subsections do not advocate the position that all the costs of producing one's own labor (i.e. food, shelter, clothing, health maintenance expenses) should be deducted from the earnings arising therefrom in computing "profit". Instead, this document establishes that no part of one's own labor constitutes "profit" under Natural Law or within the context of the United States Constitution or the legislative intent of Congress. Others have attempted to deduct the cost of keeping one's body whole (e.g. food, shelter, clothing, medicine) as a deduction for the production of their own labor. This is a complete misunderstanding of the value of one's own labor as their own exclusive property, as further established herein with cogent legal authorities. The primary reason why one cannot deduct the costs for producing their own labor is because then the government could tell you what size house you could live in, what car you drive, and what food you eat as reasonable deductions for the production of said labor. We certainly don't want the government meddling in or dictating any of these choices that only we have a protected right to make. If you want an example of how NOT to approach the issues raised in this pamphlet, it may be instructive to read a book by former U.S. Attorney John C. Garrison entitled The New Income Tax Scandal. In that book, he wrongfully tries to establish that we should be allowed deductions associated with the cost of producing our labor, rather than the approach established herein of saying that there is no such thing as "profit" in the context of one's own labor on one's own tax return.

5.6.15.1 Why One's Own Labor is not an article of Commerce and cannot Produce "profit" in the Context of Oneself

The following question naturally arises from the preceding sections relating to "profit":

QUESTION: What is "profit" in the context not of a business, but a private individual who offers his valuable labor in exchange for some other valuable commodity?

ANSWER: In the context of private individuals who sell their labor in exchange for money, there cannot lawfully be any such thing as "profit". The exchange of valuable labor for some other valuable commodity is an EQUAL exchange which does not have any profit involved, and therefore cannot be the subject of any kind of tax upon profits. If labor has no value in the exchange, then no one would be willing to pay anything for it! Anyone who argues with this premise can do nothing but contradict themselves.

The above conclusions are confirmed by the U.S. Code, which says that "the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce":

> TITLE 15 > CHAPTER 1 > § 17
> § 17. Antitrust laws not applicable to labor organizations
> The labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce. Nothing contained in the antitrust laws shall be construed to forbid the existence and operation of labor, agricultural, or horticultural organizations, instituted for the purposes of mutual help, and not having capital stock or conducted for profit, or to forbid or restrain individual members of such organizations from lawfully carrying out the legitimate objects thereof; nor shall such organizations, or the members thereof, be held or construed to be illegal combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade, under the antitrust laws.

If "the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce", then at least in the context of oneself, it cannot produce "profit" in the context of oneself as a natural person. Consequently, there can be neither "profit" NOR its inverse, which is "loss", in connection with one's own labor. The full market value of the labor, which is the full amount we received as payment for it and not more, may lawfully be deducted from the compensation received in EQUAL exchange for it pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §83, thus rendering neither profit not loss. We cannot lawfully take deductions in connection with the expenses needed to produce our own labor, because these expenses might exceed the compensation and thereby produce a loss which compels the government to in effect subsidize people who work for less than the full Fair Market Value or Cost of Producing their labor by giving them a tax break.

The debates on the Sixteenth Amendment, which the government frequently identifies as the source of their authority to tax the labor of a human being, also abundantly confirm that the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment never included the goal of taxing the labor of a human being. Instead, the main purpose of that amendment was to tax passive, unearned profits large corporations and trusts that had grown to gargantuan proportions at that time. You can read the entire Sixteenth Amendment Congressional debates below, and it is electronically searchable for your convenience:

Congressional Debates on the Sixteenth Amendment, Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/History/Congress/1909-16thAmendCongrRecord.pdf

Among the statements during those debates were the following, which confirm the findings of this section:

> "Mr. Brandegee. Mr. President, what I said was that the amendment exempts absolutely everything that a man makes for himself. Of course it would not exempt a legacy which somebody else made for him and gave to him. If a man's occupation or vocation—for vocation means nothing but a calling—if his calling or occupation were that of a financier it would exempt everything he made by underwriting and by financial operations in the course of a year that would be the product of his effort [LABOR]. Nothing can be imagined that a man can busy himself about with a view of profit which the amendment as drawn would not utterly exempt."
> [50 Cong.Rec. p. 3839, 1913]

The U.S. Supreme Court has also admitted that labor is not taxable, when it said:

> "Every man has a natural right to the fruits of his own labor, is generally admitted; and no other person can rightfully deprive him of those fruits, and appropriate them against his will..."
> [The Antelope, 23 U.S. 66, 10 Wheat 66, 6 L.Ed. 268 (1825)]

> "There is a clear distinction in this particular case between an individual and a corporation, and that the latter has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for an examination at the suit of the State. The individual may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no such duty to the State, since he receives nothing therefrom, beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights."
> [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43, 74 (1906)]

So the question for our esteemed readers is: What part of:

> "He owes NOTHING [including so-called "income taxes"] to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights."

. . .do you NOT understand? Why is this? Because the government cannot tax or regulate the exercise of RIGHTS protected by the Constitution. The only "persons" they can tax or regulate are those who engage in "privileges". To wit:

> The power to tax the exercise of a privilege is the power to control or suppress its enjoyment. Magnano Co. v. Hamilton, 292 U.S. 40, 44 , 45 S., 54 S.Ct. 599, 601, and cases cited. Those who can tax the exercise of this religious practice can make its exercise so costly as to deprive it of the resources necessary for its maintenance. Those who can tax the privilege of engaging in this form of missionary evangelism can close its doors to all those who do not have a full purse. Spreading religious beliefs in this ancient and honorable manner would thus be denied the needy. Those who can deprive religious groups of their colporteurs can take from them a part of the vital power of the press which has survived from the Reformation.
> It is contended, however, that the fact that the license tax can suppress or control this activity is unim- [319 U.S. 105, 113] portant if it does not do so. But that is to disregard the nature of this tax. It is a license tax-a flat tax imposed on the exercise of a privilege granted by the Bill of Rights. A state may not impose a charge for the enjoyment of a right granted by the federal constitution. Thus, it may not exact a license tax for the privilege of carrying on interstate commerce (McGoldrick v. Berwind-White Co., 309 U.S. 33 , 56-58, 60 S.Ct. 388, 397, 398, 128 A.L.R. 876), although it may tax the property used in, or the income derived from, that commerce, so long as those taxes are not discriminatory. Id., 309 U.S. at page 47, 60 S.Ct. at page 392, 128 A.L.R. 876 and cases cited. A license tax applied to activities guaranteed by the First Amendment would have the same destructive effect. It is true that the First Amendment, like the commerce clause, draws no distinction between license taxes, fixed sum taxes, and other kinds of taxes. But that is no reason why we should shut our eyes to the nature of the tax and its destructive influence. The power to impose a license tax on the exercise of these freedoms is indeed as potent as the power of censorship which this Court has repeatedly struck down. Lovell v. Griffin, 303 U.S. 444 , 58 S.Ct. 666; Schneider v. State, supra; Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 306 , 60 S.Ct. 900, 904, 128 A.L.R. 1352; Largent v. Texas, 318 U.S. 418 , 63 S.Ct. 667, 87 L.Ed. --; Jamison v. Texas, supra. It was for that reason that the dissenting opinions in Jones v. Opelika, supra, stressed the nature of this type of tax. 316 U.S. at pages 607-609, 620, 623, 62 S.Ct. at pages 1243, 1244, 1250, 1251, 141 A.L.R. 514. In that case, as in the present ones, we have something very different from a registration system under which those going from house to house are required to give their names, addresses and other marks of identification to the authorities. In all of these cases the issuance of the permit or license is dependent on the payment of a license tax. And the license tax is fixed in amount and unrelated to the scope of the activities of petitioners or to their realized revenues. It is not a nominal fee [319 U.S. 105, 114] imposed as a regulatory measure to defray the expenses of policing the activities in question. 8 It is in no way apportioned. It is a flat license tax levied and collected as a condition to the pursuit of activities whose enjoyment is guaranteed by the First Amendment. Accordingly, it restrains in advance those constitutional liberties of press and religion and inevitably tends to suppress their exercise. That is almost uniformly recognized as the inherent vice and evil of this flat license tax. As stated by the Supreme Court of Illinois in a case involving this same sect and an ordinance similar to the present one, a person cannot be compelled 'to purchase, through a license fee or a license tax, the privilege freely granted by the constitution.' 9 Blue Island v. Kozul, 379 Ill. 511, 519, 41 N.E.2d. 515, 519. So it may not be said that proof is lacking that these license taxes either separately or cumulatively have restricted or are likely to restrict petitioners' religious activities. On their face they are a restriction of the free exercise of those freedoms which are protected by the First Amendment.

The ability to exchange your labor, which has an intrinsic and definable value, for some other valuable commodity is a right guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States of America. This is the reason for the existence of 26 U.S.C. §83 and the reason why no part of your own personal labor, including that connected with privileged activities such as a "trade or business", can be the subject of any tax. There is no such thing as "profit" in the context of your own personal labor, because they can't tax or regulate the enjoyment of a right guaranteed by the Constitution. The state may tax profits associated with other people you hire in the context of your business[297], but not your OWN personal labor in the context of your OWN personal income tax return. You have a RIGHT to enjoy property, and you are your own property! Lynch v. Household Finance Corp., 405 U.S. 538 (1972). You own, govern, and control the exclusive and enjoyment of yourself.[298] Anyone who interferes with the enjoyment of that right is instituting involuntary servitude in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment. Please view the fascinating animation on this subject below:

Philosophy of Liberty http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Freedom/Articles/PhilosophyOfLiberty.htm

[297] If in fact Congress has expressly extended the authority of the Secretary of the United States Treasury to operate outside the District of Columbia and within the several 50 states of the Union pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72. As of the time of this writing, no officer of the United States has been able to produce even one statute or law which so extends the authority of the Secretary to the 50 states of the Union pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72.

[298] You have an exclusive right to decide whether you go to work today, how much you want to work for, or whether you want to give away your labor for free. You don't have to ask the government's permission to make ANY one of these decisions. Therefore, your labor is completely and exclusively your own property, and no one can dictate what one can do with that property or the fruits of that property in a truly free society.

5.6.15.2 Why Labor is Property

"Property" is legally defined as follows:

> "Property. That which is peculiar or proper to any person; that which belongs exclusively to one. In the strict legal sense, an aggregate of rights which are guaranteed and protected by the government. Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co. v. State, 65 Misc.Rep. 263, 121 N.Y.S. 536. The term is said to extend to every species of valuable right and interest. More specifically, ownership; the unrestricted and exclusive right to a thing; the right to dispose of a thing in every legal way, to possess it, to use it, and to exclude every one else from interfering with it. That dominion or indefinite right of particular things or subjects. The exclusive right of possessing, enjoying, and disposing of a thing. The highest right a man can have to anything; being used to refer to that right which one has to lands or tenements, goods or chattels, which no way depends on another man's courtesy.
> The word is also commonly used to denote everything which is the subject of ownership; corporeal or incorporeal, tangible or intangible, visible or invisible, real or personal; everything that has an exchangeable value or which goes to make up wealth or estate. It extends to every species of valuable right and interest, and includes real and personal property, easements, franchises, and incorporeal hereditaments, and includes every invasion of one's property rights by actionable wrong. Labberton v. General Cas. Co. of America, 53 Wash.2d. 180, 332 P.2d. 250, 252, 254.
> [. . .]
> Property within constitutional protection, denotes group of rights inhering in citizen's relation to physical thing, as right to possess, use and dispose of it. Cereghino v. State By and Through State Highway Commission, 230 Or. 439, 370 P.2d. 694, 697."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1216]

The U.S. Supreme Court defined "labor" as property"

> "Among these unalienable rights, as proclaimed in that great document [the Declaration of Independence] is the right of men to pursue their happiness, by which is meant, the right any lawful business or vocation, in any manner not inconsistent with the equal rights of others, which may increase their prosperity or develop their faculties, so as to give them their highest enjoyment...It has been well said that, THE PROPERTY WHICH EVERY MAN HAS IN HIS OWN LABOR, AS IT IS THE ORIGINAL FOUNDATION OF ALL OTHER PROPERTY SO IT IS THE MOST SACRED AND INVIOLABLE... to hinder his employing this strength and dexterity in what manner he thinks proper without injury to his neighbor, is a plain violation of this most sacred property."
> [Butchers' Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884), Concurring opinion of Justice Field]

There is ample case law to support the principle of statutory construction which makes the term "any property" all inclusive; meaning that nothing is to be excluded by the word "any". This is confirmed by the following cases where the United States contends successfully that "any property" is all inclusive and means all property (see U.S. v. Monsanto, 491 U.S. 600, 607-611 and (syllabus) (1989); United States v. Alvarez-Sanchez, 511 U.S. 350, 357 (1994); US. v. Gonzales, 520 U.S. 1, 4-6 (1997); Department of Housing and Urban Renewal v. Rucker, X35 U.S. 125, 130-31 (2002) citing Gonzalez and Monsanto). Monsanto is quoted below:

> "Heroin manufacturer Monsanto argues that he should be allowed to keep enough money for attorney's fees, but the DOJ argues successfully that "any property" is all inclusive and therefore means the U.S. can seize any and all property unless Monsanto can point to a specific exclusion of attorney's fees under the law. DOJ can seize everything owned by defendant."
> [U.S. v. Monsanto, 491 U.S. 600, 607-611]

As used in statutes and regulations, the terms "any" or "any property" are to be construed as all-inclusive until Congress "expressly" provides an exception to support the notion that such terms are not all inclusive. Since the 1989 Monsanto decision regarding "any property," three very recent decisions supra deal directly with the same question as to how to interpret the term "any"; as all-inclusive and not subject to derogation.

The U.S. Supreme Court has also affirmed the RIGHT of everyone to exchange their labor, which is property, for something of equal value. When any third party, including the government, interferes with such an exchange, for instance by involuntarily withholding a portion of that exchange and thereby depriving either party to the contract of liberty and property, then that party is violating rights. Such interference, we might add, also includes levying involuntary taxes upon one's labor. To wit:

> "Included in the right of personal liberty and the right of private property-partaking of the nature of each- is the right to make contracts for the acquisition of property. Chief among such contracts is that of personal employment, by which labor and other services are exchanged for money or other forms of property. If this right be struck down or arbitrarily interfered with, there is a substantial impairment of liberty in the long-established constitutional sense. The right is as essential to the laborer as to the capitalist, to the poor as to the rich; for the vast majority of persons have no other honest way to begin to acquire property, save by working for money.
> An interference with this liberty so serious as that now under consideration, and so disturbing of equality of right, must be deemed to be arbitrary, unless it be supportable as a reasonable exercise of the police power of the state. But, notwithstanding the strong general presumption in favor of the validity of state laws, we do not think the statute in question, as construed and applied in this case, can be sustained as a legitimate exercise of that power. To avoid possible misunderstanding, we should here emphasize, what has been said before, that so far as its title or enacting clause expresses a purpose to deal with coercion, compulsion, duress, or other undue influence, we have no present concern with it, because nothing of that sort is involved in this case. As has [236 U.S. 1, 15] been many times stated, this court deals not with moot cases or abstract questions, but with the concrete case before it. California v. San Pablo & T. R. Co. 149 U.S. 308, 314 , 37 S. L.Ed. 747, 748, 13 Sup.Ct.Rep. 876; Richardson v. McChesney, 218 U.S. 487, 492 , 54 S. L.Ed. 1121, 1122, 31 Sup.Ct.Rep. 43; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Cade, 233 U.S. 642, 648 , 58 S. L.Ed. 1135, 1137, 34 Sup.Ct.Rep. 678. We do not mean to say, therefore, that a state may not properly exert its police power to prevent coercion on the part of employers towards employees, or vice versa.
> As to the interest of the employed, it is said by the Kansas supreme court to be a matter of common knowledge that 'employees, as a rule, are not financially able to be as independent in making contracts for the sale of their labor as are employers in making a contract of purchase thereof.' No doubt, wherever the right of private property exists, there must and will be inequalities of fortune; and thus it naturally happens that parties negotiating about a contract are not equally unhampered by circumstances. This applies to all contracts, and not merely to that between employer and employee. Indeed, a little reflection will show that wherever the right of private property and the right of free contract coexist, each party when contracting is inevitably more or less influenced by the question whether he has much property, or little, or none; for the contract is made to the very end that each may gain something that he needs or desires more urgently than that which he proposes to give in exchange. And, since it is self-evident that, unless all things are held in common, some persons must have more property than others, it is from the nature of things impossible to uphold freedom of contract and the right of private property without at the same time recognizing as legitimate those inequalities of fortune that are the necessary result of the exercise of those rights. But the 14th Amendment, in declaring that a state shall not 'deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law,' gives to each of these an equal sanction; it recognizes 'liberty' and 'property' as coexistent human rights, and debars the states from any unwarranted interference with either.*
> And since a state may not strike them down directly, it is clear that it may not do so indirectly, as by declaring in effect that the public good requires the removal of those [236 U.S. 1, 18] inequalities that are but the normal and inevitable result of their exercise, and then invoking the police power in order to remove the inequalities, without other object in view. The police power is broad, and not easily defined, but it cannot be given the wide scope that is here asserted for it, without in effect nullifying the constitutional guaranty. "*
> In short, an interference with the normal exercise of personal liberty and property rights is the primary object of the statute [or tax], and not an incident to the advancement of the general welfare. But, in our opinion, the 14th Amendment debars the states from striking down personal liberty or property rights, or materially restricting their normal exercise, excepting [236 U.S. 1, 19] so far as may be incidentally necessary for the accomplishment of some other and paramount object, and one that concerns the public welfare. The mere restriction of liberty or of property rights cannot of itself be denominated 'public welfare,' and treated as a legitimate object of the police power; for such restriction is the very thing that is inhibited by the Amendment. "*

5.6.15.3 Why the Cost of Labor is Deductible from Gross Receipts In Computing Profit

The conversion they are talking about is the conversion of "labor" and "capital" into finished goods. The code reflects the requirement for "profit" in 26 U.S.C. §83, which says that profit in the context of labor is any amount collected in excess of the value of the labor collected. Below is an enumerated analysis of how this works:

1. Because labor is property and has a basis of its own that is deductible from the cost of procuring it, then it is a violation of 26 U.S.C. §§83 , 212, 1001 , 1011, and 1012 to report the entirety of "compensation for services" as described in 26 U.S.C. §61(a)(1) as "gross income".
2. Moreover, the law and the regulations govern what the Secretary or his alleged Delegates can do with regard to the calculation of "Gross Income" as previously cited in 26 U.S.C. §§83, 212 , 1001, 1011, and 1012 above.

> "The regulations...now govern, and will continue to govern, the abbreviated application process. See Fort Stewart Schools v. FLRA, 495 U.S. 641, 654, 110 S.Ct. 2043, 2051, 109 L.Ed.2d. 659 (1990). No matter what an agency said in the past, or what it did not say, after an agency issues regulations it must abide by them. " [Schering Corp. v. Shalala, 995 F.2d. 1103 (D.C.Cir. 1993)]

3. The plain language of 26 U.S.C. §83 states that when compensation is received in [exchange] for services rendered, ONLY the "excess" of the "property" [compensation] over the "amount paid" [labor] in costs is to be included in gross income:

> § 83. Property transferred in connection with performance of services
> If, in connection with the performance of services [labor], property is transferred [compensation] to any person [employee] other than the person for whom such services are performed [employer], the excess of—
> (1) the fair market value of such property [compensation] (determined without regard to any restriction other than a restriction which by its terms will never lapse) at the first time the rights of the person having the beneficial interest in such property are transferable or are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture, whichever occurs earlier, over
> (2) the amount (if any) paid [labor] for such property [compensation], shall be included in the gross income of the person who performed such services [employee] in the first taxable year in which the rights of the person having the beneficial interest in such property are transferable or are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture, whichever is applicable. The preceding sentence shall not apply if such person sells or otherwise disposes of such property in an arm's length transaction before his rights in such property become transferable or not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture.

4. Here is the formula for 26 U.S.C. §83:
   4.1. "Gross Income" = "Excess"; and
   4.2. "Excess" = ("property")—(the "amount paid")… or 4.3. "Excess"=("compensation")---(value of labor)
5. The "amount paid" is defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3(g) as: definition of cost:

> 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3(g)
> (g) Amount paid. For purposes of section 83 and the regulations thereunder, the term "amount paid" refers to the value of any money or property [labor is property.] paid for the transfer of property [compensation] to which section 83 applies...

6. The value of the "amount paid" [labor] is determined by what the employer paid for the services [labor] rendered. 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3(g) is all inclusive and includes "any money or property."
7. The fair market value ("FMV"") of property ("amount paid" or "labor") is established through the terms of an "arm's length transaction."[299]
8. To confirm that this understanding is correct, we can come to the same conclusion by reviewing other sections of the IRC and the regulations thereunder.
9. To properly calculate what constitutes "Gross Income", pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §83, one needs to know "the amount paid" (cost of labor) so it can be deducted from the "property" (compensation) in order to calculate the "excess" [profit] which is to be included in the "Gross Income". To determine these factors, one must turn to the regulations:

> "If property [compensation] to which 1.83-1 applies is transferred [from employer to employee] at an arm's length [Blacks law pg. 109), the basis [cost of labor] of the property [compensation] in the hands of the transferee [recipient or employee] shall be determined under section 1012 and the regulations thereunder"

[299] See 27 C.F.R. § 70.150(b); U.S. v. Cartwright, 411 U.S. 546, 552 (1973); Hicks v. U.S., 335 F.Supp. 474, 481 (Colo.1971); Pledger v. CIR, supra; Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, "Arm's length transaction."

[26 C.F.R. § 1.83-4(b)(2)]

10. Before one can determine the "excess", one must identify the "amount paid."
11. As property, labor has a value with regard to the related compensation transaction and 26 U.S.C. §1012 will either include or exclude said cost for labor.

§ 1012. Basis of property—cost

The basis of property [labor] shall be the cost [compensation] of such property*...*

12. The regulations confirm the basis of property:

26 C.F.R. §1.1012 -1 Basis of property.

(a) General rule. In general, the basis of property [compensation] is the cost thereof. The cost is the amount paid [labor] for such property [compensation] in cash or other property [labor]...

13. Congress has cited what it considers to be a "cost". The "amount paid for such property in cash or other property". The Secretary will take note that nothing is excluded from that which is considered by Congress to be a cost. If Congress intended to exclude labor from that which is a cost, 26 U.S.C. §1012 would reflect such an exclusion. Since it is not excluded, it is to be considered as a cost in the calculation of the "excess" which is included in "Gross Income" and in the determination as to whether one has enough "gross income" to make it necessary to even file a return.
14. The "amount paid" [labor] is the value of the cost [labor] and is also known as the "adjusted basis". Regulations require that this amount be "withdrawn" from the amount realized in the [payment for services] transaction and that it be "restored to the taxpayer."

26 C.F.R. §1.1011-1 Adjusted basis.

The adjusted basis for determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property is the cost or other basis prescribed in section 1012 or other applicable provisions of subtitle A of the code, adjusted to the extent provided in sections 1016, 1017, and 1018 or as otherwise specifically provided for under applicable provisions of internal revenue laws.

26 C.F.R. § 1.1001-1*(a)*

(a) ...from the amount realized upon the sale or exchange there shall be withdrawn a sum sufficient to restore the adjusted basis prescribed by section 1011 and the regulations thereunder...The amount which remains [excess] after the adjusted basis [cost of labor] has been restored to the taxpayer constitutes the realized gain [profit].

15. After determining the value of property (labor) that is a cost, as defined by United States law (see 26 C.F.R. § 1.1012-1(a) , and 26 C.F.R. § 1.1001-1(a), the value of the "amount paid," or the "adjusted basis" (labor), must be subtracted from the amount realized (compensation) BEFORE including ONLY the "excess" balance which remains (if any) in "Gross Income". The Federal 1040 type returns do not accommodate § 83 in any way and therefore it is not possible for any Citizen to complete a 1040 return and claim the right as articulated by Congress in § 83.
16. Again, the conclusion reached by reviewing additional sections of the IRC and the regulations thereunder, as cited above, is the same conclusion articulated by Congress in 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3(g) where the "amount paid" is defined as "any money or property" (labor is not excluded):

26 C.F.R. §1.83-3(g)

(g) Amount paid. For purposes of section 83 and the regulations thereunder, the term "amount paid" [labor] refers to the value of any money or property [labor] paid for the transfer of property [compensation] to which section 83 applies...

17. The sections of the IRC which embraces intangible personal property as a cost (see 26 U.S.C. §1012) is calculated as one's cost when having only sold one's labor, and 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3(g) does the same. In fact, in order to impose amounts which are not to be included in "Gross Income" upon those who may be "taxpayers", the Secretary must deny even "taxpayers" their rights as identified by Congress in 26 U.S.C. §§83, 1011, and 1012.

18. The law does not exclude any property for which there is no basis from cost. The cost equals the value of any and all property (labor) disposed to obtain other property (compensation), unless it is expressly excluded under 26 U.S.C. §1012.
19. The difference between cost and income is further articulated by Congress in 26 U.S.C. §212 as follows:

> § 212. Expenses for production of income
> In the case of an individual, there shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses [cost] paid or incurred during the taxable year*—*
> (1) for the production or collection of income;
> (2) for the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production of income; or
> (3) in connection with the determination, collection, or refund of any tax.

20. The Secretary has a duty to notice that a deduction is mandated ("shall") but it is not specified from where or what the expenses are to be deducted. Based on 26 U.S.C. §83, the deduction (labor) is to be taken from "such property" (compensation) to create the "excess" which then is included in "Gross Income".
21. The Secretary is hereby put on notice that to deny the rights of Sovereign Americans simply for the purpose of converting them into a "taxpayer" status or to exact amounts from them in excess of that which is provided by law is criminal conversion and United States law mandates filing of a criminal complaint, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §4, against the Secretary and his subordinates pursuant for any violation of United States law or denial of rights.

In conclusion, if you run into either a public servant or a judge who tries to argue with you about whether there is a cost to produce labor that the laborer should be compensated for, indirectly, they are:

1. Admitting that their labor is worth nothing.
2. Receiving unjust compensation or enrichment. Anyone who paid anything for something that worth nothing has benefited from unjust enrichment.

> Unjust enrichment doctrine. General principle that one person should not be permitted unjustly to enrich himself at expense of another, but should be required to make restitution of or for property or benefits received, retained or appropriated, where it is just and equitable that such restitution be made, and where such action involves no violation or frustration of law or opposition to public policy, either directly or indirectly. Tulalip Shores, Inc. v. Mortland, 9 Wash.App. 271, 511 P.2d. 1402, 1404. Unjust enrichment of a person occurs when he has and retains money or benefits which in justice and equity belong to another. L & A Dry7wall, Inc. v. Whitmore Cons. Co., Inc., Utah, 608 P.2d. 626, 630.
> Three elements must be established in order to sustain a claim based on unjust enrichment: A benefit conferred upon the defendant by the plaintiff; and appreciation or knowledge by the defendant of the benefit; and the acceptance or retention by the defendant of the benefit under such circumstances as to make it inequitable for the defendant to retain the benefit without the payment of its value. Everhart v. Miles, 47 Md.App. 131, 136, 422 A.2d. 28. See also Quantum meruit.
> Unjust enrichment. Retention of a benefit conferred by another without offering compensation in circumstances where compensation is reasonably expected. A benefit obtained from another not intended as a gift and not legally justifiable for which the beneficiary must make restitution or recompense. The area of law dealing with unjustifiable benefits of this kind.
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Seventh Edition, p. 1536]

3. Asking for a pay cut and are admitting they are paid too much.
4. Admitting the corporations, which routinely deduct the cost of labor from their earnings in computing corporate profits, are being given favored status and that you are not entitled to the same equal protection. This violates the requirement for equal protection of the law mandated in Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1.

Therefore, tell them their labor isn't worth anything and that the government pays them too much and that they should refund all their pay and benefits. After all, if it isn't an equal exchange of value, any amount of money accepted for it amounts to STEALING from the government.

5.6.16 IRS Has no Authority to Convert a Tax Class 5 "gift" into a Tax Class 2 liability

This section builds on the content of section 5.6.8, where we showed that payroll deductions you make to the federal government are classified as Tax Class 5, which means estate and gift taxes, and that these taxes are donations or gifts to the U.S. government. In this section we will add to this analysis to also show that the IRS has no delegated authority to change a Tax Class 5 gift into a Tax Class 2 Liability that would appear on an IRS Form 1040. This is equivalent to saying that the IRS has no authority to do a Substitute For Return (SFR) on a natural person.

The table below establishes the various tax classes.

Table 5-74: Tax Class as appearing in Section 4 of the 6209 or ADP/IDRS Manual

Tax Class (Third digit of Document Locator Number or DLN)	Tax Class
0	Employee Plans Master File (EPMF)
1	Withholding and Social Security
2	Individual Income Tax, Fiduciary Income Tax, Partnership return
3	Corporate Income Tax, 990C, 990T, 8083 Series, 8609, 8610
4	Excise Tax
5	Information Return Processing (IRP), Estate and Gift Tax
6	NMF
7	CT-1
8	FUTA
9	Mixed-Segregation by tax class not required

When you submit IRS Form W-4 to your private employer, he becomes the equivalent of a de facto, unlawful withholding agent for Tax Class 5 gifts to the U.S. government. After you submit this form, he will complete and submit an IRS Form W-2 at the end of each year, which is called an "Information Return". The above table also classifies Information Returns as Tax Class 5, which means a gift or estate tax. Since an Information Return is NOT a tax, then the only type of tax it can be is one of these two types. However, notice that:

1. IRS Form 1040 is Tax Class 2, which means "Individual Income Tax, Fiduciary Tax, Partnership return".
2. Tax Class 5 is NOT the same as Tax Class 2, and that they may not be interchanged, because doing so would convert what amounts to a gift into a liability.
3. There is no statute in the Internal Revenue Code nor implementing regulation in 26 C.F.R. that authorizes the IRS to convert what amounts to a gift made through withholding into a liability that is owed.
4. Only the filing of an IRS Form 1040 or some variant can turn the gift into a liability, which is why when you file a 1040, you must staple the Information Returns, including W-2, 1099's, etc to the return and sign the form under penalty of perjury indicating a liability.
5. No statute or authorizes the IRS to do an involuntary Substitute For Return upon a natural person. This was covered earlier in section 5.4.15.
6. No provision within the Internal Revenue Manual authorizes Substitute For Returns against natural persons. In fact, Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 5.1.11.6.8 specifically exempts IRS Form 1040 and all its variants from the Substitute For Return program.

One of our readers did a Freedom Of Information Act request asking the IRS for the statute, implementing regulation, and the Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section authorizing the IRS to convert a Tax Class 5 Information Return into a Tax Class 2 liability, and below is the response they got back:

> "We have no documents responsive to your request."

What they are admitting indirectly is that they have no authority to perform involuntary assessments or Substitute For Returns against natural persons who would ordinarily file an IRS Form 1040. This is consistent with Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 5.1.11.6.8, which indicates that SFR's using IRS Form 1040 are NOT legally allowed.

5.6.17 Taxes are not "debts" and therefore not a liability

Another very good reason we aren't liable to pay taxes is that no less than the U.S. Supreme Court has indicated that "taxes" as legally defined are not "debts". If "taxes" are not debts, then a Notice of Federal Tax Lien cannot and does not create a valid or collectible "debt" as legally defined.

> In his work on the Constitution, the late Mr. Justice Story whose praise as a jurist is in all civilized lands, speaking of the clause in the Constitution giving to Congress the power to lay and collect taxes, says of the theory which would limit the power to the object of paying the debts that, thus limited, it would be only a power to provide for the payment of debts then existing. [Footnote 4] And certainly if a narrow and limited interpretation would thus restrict the word "debts" in the Constitution, the same sort of interpretation would in like manner restrict the > same word in the act. Such an interpretation needs only to be mentioned to be rejected. We refer to it only to show that a right construction must be sought through larger and less technical views. We may, then, safely decline either to limit the word "debts" to existing dues, or to extend its meaning so as to embrace all dues of whatever origin and description.

> What, then, is its true sense? The most obvious, and, as it seems to us, the most rational answer to this question is that Congress must have had in contemplation debts originating in contract or demands carried into judgment, and only debts of this character. This is the commonest and most natural use of the word. Some strain is felt upon the understanding when an attempt is made to extend it so as to include taxes imposed by legislative authority, and there should be no such strain in the interpretation of a law like this.
> We are the more ready to adopt this view because the greatest of English elementary writers upon law, when treating of debts in their various descriptions, gives no hint that taxes come within either, [Footnote 5] while American state courts of the highest authority have refused to treat liabilities for taxes as debts in the ordinary sense of that word, for which actions of debt may be maintained.
> The first of these cases was that of Pierce v. City of Boston, [Footnote 6] 1842, in which the defendant attempted to set off against a demand of the plaintiff certain taxes due to the city. The statute allowed mutual debts to be set off, but the court disallowed the right to set off taxes. This case went, indeed, upon the construction of the statute of Massachusetts, and did not turn on the precise point before us, but the language of the court shows that taxes were not regarded as debts within the common understanding of the word.
> The second case was that of Shaw v. Pickett, [Footnote 7] in which the Supreme Court of Vermont said,
>
> "The assessment of taxes does not create a debt that can be enforced by suit, or upon which a promise to pay interest can be implied. It is a proceeding in invitum."
> The next case was that of the City of Camden v. Allen, [Footnote 8] 1857. That was an action of debt brought to recover a tax by the municipality to which it was due. The language of the Supreme Court of New Jersey was still more explicit: "A tax, in its essential characteristics," said the court, "is not a debt nor in the nature of a debt. A tax is an impost levied by authority of government upon its citizens or subjects for the support of the state. It is not founded on contract or agreement. It operates in invitum. A debt is a sum of money due by certain and express agreement. It originates in and is founded upon contracts express or implied."
> These decisions were all made before the acts of 1862 were passed, and they may have had some influence upon the choice of the words used. Be this as it may, we all think that the interpretation which they sanction is well warranted.
> We cannot attribute to the legislature an intent to include taxes under the term debts without something more than appears in the acts to show that intention.
>
> The Supreme Court of California, in 1862, had the construction of these acts under consideration in the case of Perry v. Washburn. [Footnote 9] The decisions which we have cited were referred to by Chief Justice Field, now holding a seat on this bench, and the very question we are now considering, "What did Congress intend by the act?" was answered in these words:
> "Upon this question, we are clear that it only intended by the terms debts, public and private, such obligations for the payment of money as are founded upon contract."
>
> In whatever light, therefore, we consider this question, whether in the light of the conflict between the legislation of Congress and the taxing power of the states, to which the interpretation, insisted on in behalf of the County of Lane, would give occasion, or in the light of the language of the acts themselves, or in the light of the decisions to which we have referred, we find ourselves brought to the same conclusion, that the clause making the United States notes a legal tender for debts has no reference to taxes imposed by state authority, but relates only to debts in the ordinary sense of the word, arising out of simple contracts or contracts by specialty, which include judgments and recognizances. [Footnote 10]
> Whether the word "debts," as used in the act, includes obligations expressly made payable or adjudged to be paid in coin has been argued in another case. We express at present, no opinion on that question. [Footnote 11]
> [Lane County v. Oregon, 74 U.S. 7 Wall. 71 71 (1868)]

5.6.18 The "Constitutional Rights" Position

> "It is elementary when the constitutionality of a statute is assailed, if the statute be reasonably susceptible of two interpretations, by one of which it would be unconstitutional and by the other valid, it is our plain duty to adopt that construction which will save the statute from constitutional infirmity. [Cite omitted.] And unless this rule be considered as meaning that our duty is to first decide that a statute is unconstitutional, and then proceed to hold that such ruling was unnecessary because the statute is susceptible of two constructions, by one of which grave and doubtful constitutional questions are avoided, our duty is to adopt the latter."
> [United States v. Delaware & Hudson Co., 213 U.S. 366; 29 S.Ct. 527 (1909)]

Any tax system creates a threat to individual liberty because "the power to tax involves the power to destroy," as Chief Justice John Marshall observed.[300] But the federal income tax and its illegal enforcement within states of the union by the IRS harm civil liberties much more than necessary to raise needed funds for the government. Certainly, the IRS performs poorly and too easily abuses the rights of citizens. But ultimately Congress is to blame for creating an excessively complex and high-rate tax system. New laws to increase taxpayer protections and replacement of the income tax with a simpler, flatter consumption-based tax could greatly reduce the following 10 areas of civil liberties abuse.

1. "Vertical" Inequality. Although equality under the law is a bedrock American principle, the income tax treats citizens unequally. "Vertical" inequality is created by hugely different tax burdens on citizens at different income levels. For example, households earning between $30,000 and $75,000 pay an average 10 percent of their income in federal income taxes, compared to 27 percent for households earning more than $200,000.[301] Fully 36 percent of U.S. households pay no income tax.[302] Besides violating the spirit of equal protection guarantees of the Constitution, such unequal burdens distort perceptions about the costs and benefits of government because programs appear to be free of cost to many.

2. "Horizontal" Inequality. Even people with similar incomes are treated unequally by the many exemptions, deductions, credits, and other intricacies of the income tax. For example, there are 59 income tax provisions that vary depending on marital status.[303][4] Likewise, the tax differences between homeowners and renters with the same incomes can be thousands of dollars because of itemized deductions for property taxes and mortgage interest. Another disparity is the unequal access to savings vehicles in the tax code depending on individuals' work situations and other factors. If all individual savings were exempt from tax, as under a consumption-based system, individuals would be treated more equally.

3. Complexity, Ambiguity, and Uncertainty. Certainty in the law is a bulwark against arbitrary and abusive government. But there is no certainty under the income tax because it rests on an inherently difficult-to-measure tax base, uses no consistent definition of "income" or other concepts, and is a labyrinth of narrow and limited provisions created by politicians intent on social engineering.[304] The current IRS commissioner concedes that the income tax has become too complex for accurate administration, which is evident in the 28 percent IRS error rate on phone inquiries and 60 percent error rate on audits.[305] Business tax rules are so ambiguous that many disputes drag on for years and are valued in the hundreds of millions of dollars.[306] Individuals are baffled by the complex rules on capital gains, pension and savings plans, and a growing list of targeted incentives. Those complexities would be eliminated under a flat consumption-based tax system.

4. Huge Size and Instability of Tax Code. Citizens are required to know the country's laws and comply with them. Yet federal tax rules are massive in scope and constantly changing. Tax statutes, regulations, and related documentation span 45,662 pages.[307] There were 441 changes to tax rules in last year's tax-cut law alone.[308] That law guaranteed a decade of tax instability with phased-in changes lasting until 2010. Income tax instability is typified by changes in taxes on capital. There have been 25 substantial changes in the treatment of long-term capital gains since 1922.[309] Pension taxing statutes have been substantially changed nearly every year since the early 1980s, creating regulatory backlogs and leaving employers unsure about how to comply.[310] Last year's tax-cut law alone had 64 separate rule changes for pension and saving plans.[311]

5. Lack of Financial Privacy. The broad-based income tax necessitates a large invasion of financial privacy that a low-rate consumption-based tax could avoid. The IRS regularly gains access to a myriad of personal records, such as mortgage records, credit card data, phone records, banking and investment records, real property transaction data, and personal correspondence. This broad IRS authority to obtain records without court supervision has been referred to by the Supreme Court as "a power of inquisition."[312]

6. Denial of Due Process. The Fifth Amendment right to due process is ignored in many respects by the federal income tax regime. Due process requires that government provide accused citizens a clear notice of a claim against them and allow the accused a hearing before executing enforcement action. But the IRS engages in many summary judgments, and enforces them prior to any judicial determinations. Moreover, the very complexity and ambiguity of the income tax seems to violate due process. In 1926, the Supreme Court noted that a statute that is "so vague that men of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, violates that first essential of due process of law."[313]

7. Shifting of the Burden of Proof. For non-criminal tax cases -- the vast majority of cases -- the tax code reverses the centuries-old common law principle that the burden of proof rests with the accuser. Except in some narrow circumstances, the IRS does not have to prove the correctness of its determinations. When the IRS makes erroneous assessments, as it often does, citizens carry the burden to prove that they are wrong. Efforts to shift the burden of proof to the IRS in the 1998 IRS Restructuring and Reform Act did not accomplish that goal. In addition, the new rules do not apply to the 97 percent of IRS actions that are deemed administrative in nature.[314]

8. No Trial by Jury in U.S. Tax Court. Despite Sixth and Seventh Amendment guarantees of trial by jury, the federal tax system carefully sidesteps such protections. To contest an IRS tax calculation prior to assessment, one must file a petition in the U.S. Tax Court. But since this is an administrative court, not an Article III court, no jury trial is required. To obtain a jury trial and related rights for civil tax cases, one must file suit in a U.S. District Court. But before that can happen, the alleged tax, penalties, and interest must be paid in full. And if the citizen wins, there is a burdensome route to retrieving the disputed money. For most people, those rules effectively eliminate the right to trial by jury in tax cases.

9. Unreasonable Searches and Seizures. In most situations, the Fourth Amendment guarantees that, before the government can search private property and seize records, it must demonstrate to a court that there is "probable cause" to believe that lawless conduct exists. However, the IRS's summons authority under tax code section 7602 allows it to obtain records of every description from any person without showing probable cause and without a court order. There has also been an explosion in information reporting required by the IRS and a big expansion in its computer searching for personal records. Recently, the IRS won the power to access financial data on Visa cards issued by foreign banks. Many examples of abusive IRS searches and seizures were revealed in U.S. Senate hearings in 1997.[315]

10. Forced Self-Incrimination. The requirement to file tax returns sworn to under penalty of perjury operates to invalidate the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination. Citizens face a legal dilemma. On the one hand, refusing to file a return would expose a citizen to prosecution for failure to file. On the other hand, disclosing information sought in tax returns constitutes a waiver of Fifth Amendment protections. The IRS can and does release that information to federal, state, and local agencies for both tax and non-tax related enforcement purposes.

Below is a summarized listing of Constitutional Provisions that are violated or conflicted as a result of imposing direct federal income taxes on earnings from within the United States of America, also called the 50 union states. See section 5.2.2 of this book for further details on these issues:

Table 5-75: Laws that income taxes violate

Subject	Law	Explanation
Direct taxes	Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 states that: "No Capitation or other direct tax shall be laid unless in proportion to the Census or Enumeration herein before directed to be taken."	Congress cannot directly tax incomes without apportionment among the states and based on a Census or Enumeration and not on incomes.
Direct taxes	Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution states that: "Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States"	Congress cannot directly tax incomes without apportionment among the states. Income taxes are direct taxes.
Prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizure by the government without probably cause and without a warrant	4th Amendment	4th Amendment prohibits unreasonable searches and seizure by the government without probable cause and without a warrant. Also protects security of property and personal effects from the government.
Prohibition of individuals being compelled to be a witness against oneself	5th Amendment	Being compelled to file a 1040 tax form and become a witness against oneself is unconstitutional
Prohibition against slavery	13th Amendment abolished slavery	Being compelled to pay income taxes is a form of slavery
Violation of due process—government cannot take property from a Citizen without a court hearing	5th and 14th Amendments require that citizens cannot be deprived of their property without a court hearing	Tax collections violate due process protections, because seizures and levies are commonly instituted without a hearing
Definition of "income"	Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 Sixteenth Amendment	Supreme court indicated in several cases that "income" means ONLY corporate profit, and not what most people think it is. See Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920); Stratton's Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399 (1913); Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179 (1918); Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911); Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170 (1926)
Privacy	Fourth Amendment	"The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

Of great interest is the idea that we can use the above conflicts of constitutional law to point out precisely where the federal income tax can lawfully operate. The only place it can operate legally and not conflict with the above statutes and Constitutional provisions are those places that do not have Constitutional rights (Bill of Rights), and those areas are limited to foreign countries, U.S. territories and possessions, and enclaves within the states that are not covered by the Constitution, as we pointed out earlier in sections 4.8 and 5.2.12. You don't want to live there or mistakenly tell the government you live there by signing the default perjury statement they provide at the end of their tax forms (see 28 U.S.C. §1746 for more about this)! Below are some of the rights you don't have in such areas:

1. Free speech (First Amendment)

2. Due process of law (Fourth and Fifth Amendment)
3. A jury trial (Sixth and Seventh Amendment)
4. Freedom from direct taxes (1:9:4, 1:2:3 of Constitution).
5. Freedom from slavery (Thirteenth Amendment)
6. Financial Privacy (see Fourth Amendment)

Without due process of law, then the government can define its jurisdiction and the word "includes" any way it likes. If you then petition your case to U.S. Tax Court as a "taxpayer" and/or a "U.S. person" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) or statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 (a federal serf), which is an Article I court that exercises authority only within such areas, this is exactly the kind of tyranny you have volunteered to subject yourself to.

- No rights. 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) took away the ability of the court to rule on your rights related to federal taxes. This legislation alone would be illegal if you lived in the 50 Union states and were a "national" as we pointed out in section 5.2.12.
- No jury trial. We show later on in section 6.12.2 that the federal courts aren't even obligated to give you a jury trial if you are suing the federal government for wrongdoing, because they have sovereign immunity and the Constitution doesn't require it! In the case of U.S. Tax Court, one person who isn't even a judge rules on the case, and the only reason he has any authority at all is because you gave him jurisdiction by petitioning to hear your case in that court. You didn't have to and you are a fool to do this. You could have gone to U.S. District court instead and been much more likely to get a jury trial.
- No freedom from direct taxes. Why would a kangaroo Tax Court judge tell you that you don't owe taxes, especially after you realize that the term of his appointment is 15 years and if he rules in your favor, he could be fired? If the IRS can audit and harass him for not enforcing taxes, why would he rule in your favor, even if the law required it?
- No free speech. They will suppress your legitimate evidence, and refuse to allow you to bring up religious or first amendment issues.
- No due process of law. The pseudo-judge can, for instance, define the word "includes" any way he likes to legally expand federal jurisdiction because he doesn't have a Fifth Amendment right he would be violating for doing so! He can even deny your demand that the government meet its burden of proof by showing the statute that makes you liable for income taxes, which we now know doesn't even exist!
- Slavery. Remember that volunteering into the jurisdiction of the U.S. Tax court virtually guarantees that you are volunteering into federal slavery. When you are inside the federal zone, you are inside of a totalitarian monarchy where the king (Congress/President) are false gods and you are one of their subjects/serfs.

The judge in U.S. Tax Court laughs at people who expect their rights to be honored and respected, because he's not obligated to by law under 26 U.S.C. §2201(a)! Your lie to him about your citizenship status and filing a 1040 form, which is the wrong form, describing yourself as a "U.S. individual" (which is a "U.S. person" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30)) at the top of the form was the only thing he needed to know in order to conclude that you live in a federal territory not covered by the Constitution and that you are a federal serf/slave! Shut up BOY, or we'll empty your pocket, throw you in federal prison, give you 40 lashes and send you to bed hungry without a blanket!

Later in section 6.9.4, we will talk about First Amendment violations of church rights by the IRS. We will show how the IRS violates freedom of speech and assembly by denying 501(c) tax exemptions to religious organizations that are politically active. However, since the First Amendment doesn't apply within foreign countries, federal territories, and selected enclaves within the states not covered by the Constitution, then the IRS and the federal courts can legally silence those churches whose members have incorrectly claimed that they are "U.S. citizens", which we said in section 4.11.3 means that they have volunteered into the jurisdiction of the federal courts and have lied to the government that they reside inside the federal zone.

Some members of the legal profession like to contradict the content of this section by asserting that rights can be taxed and they will cite some of the following Supreme Court Cases as their ammunition:

> "[T]he laws of all civilized states recognize in every citizen the absolute right to his own earnings, and to the enjoyment of his own property, and the increase thereof, during his life, except so far as the state may require him to contribute his share for public expenses ..."
> [U.S. v. Perkins, 163 U.S. 625, 627 (1896)]

> "Taxes, which are but the means of distributing the burden of the cost of government, are commonly levied on property or its use, but they may likewise be laid on the exercise of personal rights and privileges." [Carmichael v. Southern Coal & Coke Co., 301 U.S. 495, 508 (1937)]

> "Government in casting about for proper subjects of taxation is not confined by the traditional classification of interests or estates. It may tax, not only ownership, but any right or privilege that is a constituent of ownership."
> [Burnett v. Wells, 289 U.S. 670 (1933)]

> "However absolute the right of an individual may be, it is still in the nature of that right, that it must bear a portion of the public burdens; and that portion must be determined by the legislature."
> [Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514, 563 (1830)]

The above cases, for instance, are cited by the following at the address below as proof that income taxes do not violate rights:

Anti-Tax Protester, Brian Rookyard http://www.geocities.com/b_rookard/letters.html

What all of the above cases have in common is that all of the entities who were being taxed were in receipt of government privileges and/or made some kind of voluntary choice to accept those privileges. We have analyzed each of these cites below for your benefit:

- U.S. v. Perkins, 163 U.S. 625, 627 (1896): This case was about a state trying to tax the inheritance of a man who died within its jurisdiction and who bequeathed his entire estate to the United States Government. The court ruled that the state had a right to tax the inheritance. The court ruled that the tax was on the deceased and the right of transfer of his property, and not upon the recipient, which in this case was the United States government. The case had nothing to do with personal income taxes and is therefore irrelevant to the theme of this book. The constitution does not forbid inheritance taxes, nor does it even mention them, and we don't dispute anywhere in this book that inheritance taxes are authorized.
- Carmichael v. Southern Coal & Coke Co., 301 U.S. 495, 508 (1937): This case was filed by two corporations against the government to stop it from levying an unemployment tax against them. Corporations don't have rights, only government granted privileges. The Supreme Court ruled against the corporations and in favor of the state, as they should have. Private rights of a private business that was not a corporation were not in question in this case. Neither were the private rights of a natural person in question.
- Burnett v. Wells, 289 U.S. 670 (1933): This case dealt with whether life insurance on the creator of a trust which was paid for by the trust he created is considered taxable income, given that the recipient was already a "taxpayer" for his other income and was already filing returns on his other income. Since he was already a "taxpayer" and was therefore "liable" for taxes on income, then it's silly to argue that certain of his income was taxable while other income wasn't. By claiming to be a "taxpayer", his goose was cooked and he gave the government an opportunity to tax whatever he made. This case has no relationship to the audience for this book, which is entirely and only "nontaxpayers". This case doesn't decide anything as it relates to "nontaxpayers". Since Mr. Burnett was a "taxpayer" and identified himself as such by filing a return, he had no rights and essentially admitting to being domiciled in the federal zone and being a "public officer" of the United States government. Saying that the government can tax rights by using as an example a natural person who put himself in the unfortunate position of having no rights is ridiculous.
- Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514, 563 (1830): This case concerned a state-chartered banking corporation in Rhode Island that sought to avoid taxation by a state. Corporations are creatures of law in receipt of government privileges, and must submit to taxation by the government or state that created them, and the Supreme Court agreed.

Can you see the kind of deception that Mr. Rookyard attempted on his unsuspecting readers? He accuses tax honesty advocates of deception all the time but he is guilty of worse deception. In fact, the hypothesis that the government may not tax the exercise of rights of natural persons remains intact, since he has given no concrete examples of the government's ability to tax a natural person who was a "nontaxpayer", who was not in receipt of privileges, and who therefore had rights.

The one thing we want to emphasize from this section is that yes, the exercise of rights of a natural person can be taxed, but only if these rights have been relinquished through an informed, voluntary choice of a natural person. That informed choice manifests itself in one of two ways:

1. The choice of volunteering or consenting to become a "taxpayer" who is therefore "liable" for tax.
2. The choice to become part of a group of people who have formed a corporation or partnership in receipt of government privileges.

The other thing we want to emphasize is that businesses, corporations, partnerships, and trusts are not natural persons and therefore neither they nor the people who function within them have rights relative to the entity they are part of. For instance, neither a corporation nor its officers have a Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate the corporation if they are put on the stand and asked questions about the conduct of the corporation. The only basis they have to refuse to answer under the Fifth Amendment is if they personally were involved in criminal activity. Likewise, a corporation or business does not have a First Amendment right of free speech or freedom of religion.

On the basis that income taxes violate all of the constitutional provisions mentioned in this section in the context of natural persons (biological people), Americans domiciled in states of the Union (but NOT in the federal zone) have a massive case against the federal government for fraud, extortion, and racketeering, and a class action lawsuit for these issues is long overdue!

5.6.19 The Internal Revenue Code was Repealed in 1939 and we have no tax law

What? You didn't know that the Internal Revenue Code was repealed in 1939? Well maybe you should write your Congressman and ask him! We didn't know either until we started to read the Internal Revenue Code for ourselves. Below is the section of the REAL statute that accomplished this:

> Internal Revenue Code of 1939, Chapter 2, 53 Stat 1
> Sec. 4. Repeal and Savings Provisions.—(a) The Internal Revenue Title, as hereinafter set forth, is intended to include all general laws of the United States and parts of such laws, relating exclusively to internal revenue, in force on the 2d day of January 1939 (1) of a permanent nature and (2) of a temporary nature if embraced in said Internal Revenue Title. In furtherance of that purpose, all such laws and parts of laws codified herein, to the extent they relate exclusively to internal revenue, are repealed, effective, except as provided in section 5, on the day following the date of enactment of this act.

> (c) All offenses committed, and all penalties or forfeitures incurred under any statute hereby repealed, may be prosecuted and punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if this act had not been passed.
> Sec. 5. Continuance of Existing Law.—Any provision of law in force on the 2d day of January 1939 corresponding to a provision contained in the Internal Revenue Title shall remain in force until the corresponding provision under such Title takes effect.

If you want to read this for yourself, the link is below:

https://sedm.org/law-dvd/Federal/RevenueActs/Revenue%20Act%20of%201939.pdf

Some people look at the above and try to argue the point that it was repealed. They will cite paragraph 4(b) above and say that the repeal changed nothing. The reason for that paragraph is that for certain persons who had installment agreements and existing liabilities under the old code, the government needed a way to continue their debts until after they were paid off following the repeal. Likewise, there are no committees, employments, positions, etc established by the code so there is nothing to continue. In fact, we have a letter from a Congressman indicating the entire IRS was NOT established by law, so what is there to disestablish if the "code" is repealed?:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Evidence/IRSNotEstByLaw/IRSnotGov.pdf

Paragraph 4(b) is therefore a red herring. These weasels are slippery and they don't want you to know the truth. What they did was enact the "Title" but not the code within the Title. It is only enacted in the sense that it represents the Statutes at Large from which it was derived, but it DOES NOT and cannot obligate anyone to do anything who does not live on federal property unless they at least volunteer, as we pointed out earlier. The Congress and the Supreme Court both have said many times that the income tax is an indirect excise tax, and all such excise taxes are avoidable by avoiding the activity that is taxed.

Based on the above, the Internal Revenue Code of 1939 is not positive law and has been repealed. Every revision of the Internal Revenue Code since then, including the 1954 code, the 1986 code, etc, have all been "amendments" to this repealed code. How can you amend something that isn't an enacted positive law?

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If you don't believe it was repealed, then please answer some questions for us:

1. Why would the legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204 say that Title 26 is NOT enacted into positive law?
2. Since the IRS does not exist by the authority of any part of the I.R.C., then of what significance is it to say above that "nor shall any office, position, employment board, or committee, be abolished by such repeal, but the same shall continue under the pertinent provisions of the Internal Revenue Title."? The I.R.C. doesn't establish any committees, employments, offices, or positions whatsoever so this provision has not significance.

The 1939 code and all of its successors can therefore not have any effect on anyone except those in government by and for whom it was written. The phrase

> "all rights and liabilities under said acts shall continue, and may be enforced in the same manner, as if said repeal had not been made".

is deliberately misleading. At this point in this chapter, we now know by now that there are not "liabilities" under I.R.C., Subtitles A and C, and that the only natural person made "liable" for anything is in 26 U.S.C. §1461 is the paymaster for Congressmen and the President. Therefore, no rights or liabilities of natural persons in the general public are affected by the Internal Revenue Code since 1939, except for those who declare themselves to be any one of the following three things:

1. "employees", which are elected or appointed, of the United States government as defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c), 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1.
2. "nonresident aliens" engaged in a "trade or business in the United States" as required by 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv). "Trade or business" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as the "functions of a public office", and that public office is in the United States Government.
3. Those ignorant and mislead members of the general public who enter into "voluntary withholding agreements" with the federal government using an IRS Form W-4 and thereby declare themselves to be "employees" of the federal government, who by implication are involved in a "trade or business within the United States government". Look at the upper left corner of the IRS Form W-4. It says "Employee Withholding Allowance Certificate".

We also learned earlier in the chapter that the IRS is not an "enforcement" agency, that there are not implementing regulations authorizing collection or enforcement of Subtitle A income taxes (see section 5.4.15 through 5.4.19), and that the revenues collected under Subtitle A are therefore donations and gifts to the United States government, which are defined in 31 U.S.C. §321(d). Consequently, the repeal of the code in 1939 meant that only government employees could be affected by it from that point forward, and that no one else's rights could be affected domiciled in states of the Union. The IRS had their "balls" chopped off at that point, so why are they still with us?

Sometimes, the truth about our tax system can be stranger than fiction, folks! This is so because money is the root of all evil, and the great lengths that politicians will go to steal your money astounds the average person when they find out about it.

5.6.20 Use of the Term "State" in Defining State Taxing Jurisdiction

Most state constitutions do not allow residents of the state to be liable for state income taxes because of the constraints imposed by the first ten amendments to the U.S. Constitution under the Fourteenth Amendment. This creates a difficult situation for the states in collecting income taxes. The legislators at the state level had to play the same kind of word games as the federal government to fool natural persons who are state residents into thinking they were liable for state income taxes. How did they do it? They played with the definition of the word "State" in their tax codes!

For the sake of comparison, we begin by crafting a definition of "State" which is deliberately designed to create absolutely no doubt or ambiguity about its meaning:

> For the sole purpose of establishing a benchmark of clarity, the term "State" means any one of the 50 States of the Union, the District of Columbia, the territories and possessions belonging to the Congress, and the federal enclaves lawfully ceded to the Congress by any of the 50 States of the Union.

Now, compare this benchmark with the various definitions of the word "State" that are found in Black's Law Dictionary and in the Internal Revenue Code. Black's is a good place to start, because it clearly defines two different kinds of "states". The first kind of state defines a member of the Union, i.e., one of the 50 Union states which are united by and under the U.S. Constitution:

> The section of territory occupied by one of the United States. One of the component commonwealths or states of the United States of America.
> [emphasis added]

The second kind of state defines a federal state, which is entirely different from a member of the Union:

> Any state of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and any territory or possession subject to the legislative authority of the United States. Uniform Probate Code, Section 1-201(40).
> [emphasis added]

The term "State" is also defined in 4 U.S.C. §§105-113 as part of the Buck Act of 1940. 4 U.S.C. §110(d) defines "State" as follows:

> TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES
> CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES
> (d) The term "State" includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

Notice carefully that a state of the Union is not defined as being "subject to the legislative authority of the United States" because states are sovereign. Also, be aware that there are several different definitions of "State" in the IRC, depending on the context. One of the most important of these is found in a chapter specifically dedicated to providing definitions, that is, Chapter 79 (not exactly the front of the book). To de-code the Code, read it backwards! In this chapter of definitions, we find the following:

> When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof -- ...
> (10) State. -- The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.
> [I.R.C. §7701(a)(10)]

Already, it is obvious that this definition leaves much to be debated because it is ambiguous and it is not nearly as clear as our "established benchmark of clarity" (which will be engraved in marble a week from Tuesday). Does the definition restrict the term "State" to mean only the District of Columbia? Or does it expand the term "State" to mean the District of Columbia in addition to the 50 States of the Union? And how do we decide? We would argue the that confusion created by this definition on the part of the authors in Congress is deliberate!

The California Revenue and Taxation Code (R&TC) capitalizes on this confusion by introducing a similar definition of the term "State" that is consistent with the one above but is more clear:

> 17018. "State" includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.
> [California Revenue and Taxation Code, Section 17018]
> [which don't include the 50 sovereign states but do include federal enclaves within those states]

You can read the above for yourself at:

http://leginfo.legislature.ca.gov/faces/codes_displayText.xhtml?lawCode=RTC&division=2.&title=&part=10.&chapter=1.&article=

This definition basically says that "State" means federal enclaves within the borders of the state. We only present California law here as an example, but most states do the same thing in their tax code as California with their definition of "State".

Why does the definition of "State" matter? Because California, it turns out, only taxes nonresidents of California! California's Franchise Tax Board Form 590, the Withholding Exemption Certificate, says:

> I certify that for the reasons checked below, the entity or individual named on this form is exempt from California income tax withholding requirements on payment(s) made to the entity or individual. Read the following carefully and check the box that applies to the vendor/payee:
> Individuals—Certification of Residency
> I am a resident of California and I reside at the address shown above. If I become a nonresident at any time, I will promptly inform the withholding agent. See instructions for Form 590. General Information D. for the definition of resident.
> B. Law
> R&TC Section 18662 and the related regulations require withholding of income or franchise tax on payments of California source income made to nonresidents of this state*.*

So you only pay income tax if you are a nonresident of California. But how do they fool residents of California into declaring they are nonresidents or have income as a nonresident? They do it with the word "State". On line 12 of the California form 540 income tax return, the state companion to the 1040, they state:

> "12. State income".

Why didn't they just put "income" on this line, you might ask? The answer is that they wanted to fool you! So what they are saying is that the income appearing on line 12 is income originating from within federal enclaves within California! If you put anything other than zero on this line, you are admitting that you:

1. Are a nonresident of California because you live in a federal enclave within the state.
2. Have income from within that federal enclave within the state.
3. Because you live within that enclave, you have no Constitutional rights under the Fourteenth Amendment because the Fourteenth Amendment only applies on nonfederal land within the states.
4. Without Constitutional rights, you are liable for paying income taxes and can't claim the Fifth Amendment protections of due process and the privilege of not incriminating yourself.

The Federal government has cooperated with them in the above fraud by passing what is called the Assimilated Crimes Act, found in 18 U.S.C. §13. Subsection (a) of this section of the federal criminal code at first glance would appear attempt to apply prevailing state law inside of federal enclaves within States. However, the definition of "State" used in that section actually means federal States and not the sovereign 50 Union states or areas within those states outside of federal jurisdiction. Otherwise, the Separation of Powers Doctrine would be nullified. You can read more about this trickery earlier in section 5.2.14.

When you expose this fraud for what it is on your state tax return as we have and call the bluff of your state taxing authority, they will respond with an automated letter that has all kinds of court case cites, but if you look at the cites closely, they are almost entirely from federal courts. They couldn't cite any cases from their own state courts even if they wanted to, because they know that the federal zone is outside of their territorial jurisdiction and if you are paying income taxes, you by implication reside there and are a nonresident of your state! As we pointed out in section 5.2.14, the states are "foreign countries" and "foreign states" with respect to the federal government, which means that your state in effect is admitting in their responsive letter that you reside inside of the federal zone by using federal courts as their authority! Leave it to a slimy state tax lawyer to think up a scheme and a scam like this! This is a conspiracy against rights if we ever saw one and it should have been exposed on a massive scale a long time ago.

5.6.21 Why you aren't an "exempt" individual

Below is a definition of "exempt" from Black's Law Dictionary:

> "Exempt. To release, discharge, waive, relieve from liability. To relieve, excuse, or set free from a duty or service imposed upon the general class to which the individual exempted belongs; as to exempt from military service. [. . .] See also Exemption; Exemption laws."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 571]

"Exempt individuals" are statutorily defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(5).

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
> Sec. 7701. - Definitions
> (b)(5) Exempt individual defined
> For purposes of this subsection –
> (A) In general
> An individual is an exempt individual for any day if, for such day, such individual is -
> (i) a foreign government-related individual,
> (ii) a teacher or trainee,
> (iii) a student, or
> (iv) a professional athlete who is temporarily in the United States to compete in a charitable sports event described in section 274(l)(1)(B).
> (B) Foreign government-related individual
> The term "foreign government-related individual" means any individual temporarily present in the United States by reason of -
> (i) diplomatic status, or a visa which the Secretary (after consultation with the Secretary of State) determines represents full-time diplomatic or consular status for purposes of this subsection,
> (ii) being a full-time employee of an international organization, or > (iii) being a member of the immediate family of an individual described in clause (i) or (ii).
> (C) Teacher or trainee
> The term "teacher or trainee" means any individual -
> (i) who is temporarily present in the United States under subparagraph (J) or (Q) of section 101(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (other than as a student), and > (ii) who substantially complies with the requirements for being so present.
> (D) Student
> The term "student" means any individual -
> (i) who is temporarily present in the United States -
> (I) under subparagraph (F) or (M) of section 101(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, or > (II) as a student under subparagraph (J) or (Q) of such section 101(15), and (ii) who substantially complies with the requirements for being so present.
> (E) Special rules for teachers, trainees, and students
> (i) Limitation on teachers and trainees
> An individual shall not be treated as an exempt individual by reason of clause (ii) of subparagraph (A) for the current year if, for any 2 calendar years during the preceding 6 calendar years, such person was an exempt person under clause (ii) or (iii) of subparagraph (A). In the case of an individual all of whose compensation is described in section 872(b)(3), the preceding sentence shall be applied by substituting "4 calendar years" for "2 calendar years".
> (ii) Limitation on students
> For any calendar year after the 5th calendar year for which an individual was an exempt individual under clause (ii) or (iii) of subparagraph (A), such individual shall not be treated as an exempt individual by reason of clause (iii) of subparagraph (A), unless such individual establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that such individual does not intend to permanently reside in the United States and that such individual meets the requirements of subparagraph (D)(ii).

To be "exempt", one must first be otherwise liable in general for something and then lose the liability by virtue of meeting some special provision of the I.R.C. listed above. Most people are not "exempt individuals" because they do not meet any of the above criteria, and only those who are "exempt" should be filling out the word "EXEMPT" on an IRS Form W-4. As we point out repeatedly throughout this book and especially the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, the W-4, in fact, is the WRONG form to be using to stop withholding for most Americans. The correct form is the W-8BEN form, which may be used by "nationals" and "non-resident non-persons". The form should be modified to add to Block 3 "non-resident non-person non-taxpayers". We showed earlier in section 5.6.13 and following that this is the status of Americans born in states of the Union and living and working outside of federal jurisdiction.

Being an "exempt individual" and being an "nontaxpayer" are entirely different things that are not equivalent. The term "nontaxpayer" is not even defined in the Internal Revenue Code or the legal dictionary and is only defined by the courts, but it means someone who is not subject to the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code because he or she does not come under its provisions. This condition may be caused by any one of the following factors and possibly others not listed:

1. One is a "nonresident" of the jurisdiction, meaning that he is not subject to the territorial jurisdiction of the law or statute.
2. One is not engaged in any excise taxable activity identified in the code and has no earnings that would "effectively connect" them to the I.R.C. Recall that 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) says that only income of "aliens" and "nonresident aliens" which is "effectively connected with a trade or business" is subject to the code. Since "trade or business" is statutorily defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as the "functions of a public office", if one is not engaged in a public office, is not a federal corporation involved in interstate or foreign commerce coming under the provisions of Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution, then one is not the proper subject of the code.
3. One is not the subject of the code by virtue of a Constitution restriction on the taxing power of Congress. For instance, Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 specifically state that the federal government has no power to institute direct taxes on anything other than a State, and may not directly tax individuals. If one is an individual domiciled in a state of the Union, then one is not the proper subject of any direct federal tax, and this includes all of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A.

Of the two statuses, "exempt" and "nontaxpayer", the preferable one to have is that of a "nontaxpayer", which is a person not subject to the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code at all. For instance, people domiciled in China are all "nontaxpayers" relative to the Internal Revenue Code. As soon as they either get involved in importing goods into the country, which is foreign commerce, or hold a "public office" in the United States government for compensation, then they become subject to federal jurisdiction because they involved themselves in an excise taxable privileged activity. Likewise, a person who lives in California is a "nonresident" and an "alien" with respect to an adjacent state such as Nevada, and therefore is a "nontaxpayer" with respect to Nevada state tax laws.

5.7 Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid

The following subsections will list all of the flawed arguments relating to taxes that we are aware of.

5.7.1 Summary of Flawed Arguments

Our website contains a free pamphlet below, which summarizes most of the flawed tax arguments you should avoid in your dealings with the government:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid

5.7.2 Rebutted Version of the IRS Pamphlet "The Truth About Frivolous Tax Arguments"

The pamphlet available below on our website contains a detailed rebuttal to most of the false statements and propaganda you are likely to hear from the IRS. In an effort to conserve space, we have not included it in this book. If you are writing a representative of the IRS to complain about the illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code, you may wish to send this document and ask them to rebut the rebuttal:

5.7.3 Rebutted Version of Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A entitled "Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax"

The pamphlet available below on our website contains a detailed rebuttal to the Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A entitled Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax. If you write your Congressman to complain about the illegal activities of the IRS, in many cases, you will receive the original copy of this report. It is filled with errors and propaganda that we believe you should know about. If you are writing your Congressman or political representative to complain about the illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code, you might want to send them this rebutted report and ask them to rebut it:

5.7.4 Rebutted Version of Dan Evans "Tax Resister FAQ"

The pamphlet available below on our website contains a detailed rebuttal to most of the false statements and propaganda you are likely to hear from members of the legal profession concerning the illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code. Mr. Evans is an asset protection attorney. If you are dealing with a state-licensed tax professional, you may want to present him with this document and ask him to rebut the rebuttal.

5.7.5 The Irwin Schiff Position

There are many different approaches to rid oneself of income taxes illegally enforced by the IRS. The most popular approach by far as of the writing of this book is the Irwin Schiff approach. Mr. Schiff has been de-taxing people since 1985, which is longer than most other people in the freedom movement. During that time, he has perfected his approach to make many of his techniques very effective. His overall approach has some serious flaws that have drawn warranted government ire, but there is still much that we can learn from his approach. We'll give a summary of his approach in this section to show you how what we have learned elsewhere in this book applies to the practical aspects of untaxing yourself. We have attended his seminars and are impressed with the thoroughness of his approach but we don't recommend his zero return method because he uses the wrong form, which is the 1040 instead of the 1040NR. You are also encouraged to visit his website at:

Pay No Income Tax Website, Irwin Schiff
http://paynoincometax.com

The Irwin Schiff approach relies on the following basic elements:

Table 5-76: Summary of the Irwin Schiff Position

#	Element	Description
1. JURISDICITON AND AUTHORITY
1.1	The IRS has no delegated authority to do anything! The 1954 code removed all references to the Commissioner of the IRS from the 1939 code and replaced these references with the Secretary of the Treasury.	Read the code yourself or search it electronically online at http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/. You will not find a single reference anywhere giving the IRS authority to do anything. There are also NO delegation of authority orders from the Secretary of the Treasury to the IRS delegating that authority.
1.2	Most IRS agents are ignorant of the law. They are just clerks with no delegated authority and: "Clerks are jerks!" Holding an Internal Revenue Code book in front of an IRS agent is like holding a cross in front of a vampire!	IRS agents are taught about procedures and not law. If they knew the law and that what they were doing was illegal, they would quit in droves because they were being asked to do things that they knew were illegal and unethical.
2. LIABILITY
2.1	We don't file tax returns, we file "confessions". Since the constitution says that we can't be compelled to testify against ourself under the Fifth Amendment, then we can't be compelled to file tax returns or assess ourself.	Justice Hugo Black declared in U.S. v. Kahriger, 345 U.S. 22 (1953) that, "The United States has a system of taxation by confession." (Italics added). Since the courts are corrupt, however, Irwin recommends filing zero returns to avoid "Willful Failure to File" convictions under 26 U.S.C. 7203. Doing so ensures that the clock starts on the statute of limitations so they can't go back indefinitely for taxes not paid (there is no statute of limitations for back taxes if you don't file).
2.2	"Income" means Corporate Profit according to the Supreme Court	Congress cannot either define statutorily or change the definition of "income". The Constitution is the only thing that can define it. The Supreme Court has ruled repeatedly that the income tax is an indirect excise tax on corporate profits. See section 5.6.5 earlier for an exhaustive treatment of this subject.

#	Element	Description
2.3	We have no taxable "income" as defined by the Supreme Court.	Because natural persons or biological people can't have a "profit" and they aren't corporations, then they have no taxable income. Look at 26 U.S.C. §61 and you will find that it defines "gross income" without defining "income". You can't have "gross income" until you have "income".
2.4	Without any taxable income, we are NOT LIABLE for payment of income taxes.	You only pay tax if you have taxable income.
2.5	Most state income taxes require a federal liability before there is a state liability. Therefore, if you file a federal return saying you have zero income, then you would be committing perjury to not do the same thing on your state return.	California is one example of this, but it also applies in New York and Texas and other states.
2.6	Payment of income taxes is strictly voluntary..	See Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145 (1960) for the Supreme Court's opinion on the voluntary nature of income taxes. The privacy act notice in the 1040 booklet doesn't say we are liable. It says "you must file a return or statement for any tax you are liable for." But there is NO LAW that makes you liable! The government tries to confuse people on this issue by throwing in the word "compliance" after the word "voluntary" to keep people in cognitive dissonance so they think they have to comply, but in fact, they aren't liable for any tax. If you look in the index for the Internal Revenue Code, under the subject of "Liability for tax", you will find NO MENTION of income taxes!
2.7	You aren't obligated to incriminate yourself	The 1040 Privacy Act Notice also tries to confuse the government's ability to ask for information with your legal liability to provide it. Under the Fifth Amendment, you cannot be forced to testify against yourself, nor to answer any questions at a summons or IRS examination. Even the IRS' own Handbook for Special Agents says you don't have to provide ANYTHING, including books or records, about yourself.
2.8	There IS NO law that makes us liable for the payment of income taxes.	Ask the IRS to show you the law! Show them the code book and demand that they show you the law!
2.9	The income tax system is based on self-assessment. The IRS CANNOT assess you. Only YOU can assess yourself.	No IRS agent has a delegation order that allows them to prepare a Form 1040 for you because income taxes are voluntary. The Internal Revenue Manual (IRM) does not allow IRS agents to prepare form 1040's for persons either. See Section 5500.
2.10	Assessing yourself for having ZERO INCOME means you don't have to pay income taxes, since the IRS can't assess you.	You aren't liable unless you have taxable income.
2.11	The courts and the legal profession are corrupt and we should try to stay out of them. Don't go to a lawyer if you want the truth about income taxes.	Irwin Schiff's methods help you stay out of court.
3. EXAMINATIONS, RECORDS, AND ASSESSMENTS

#	Element	Description
3.1	The Internal Revenue Code says the only person other than the person filing the return who is authorized to do assessments is the Secretary of the Treasury, not the IRS, and he is NOT authorized to do assessments on other than stamp taxes for cigarettes and alcohol.	See 26 U.S.C. Section 6201(a)(1) for further details.
3.2	Since we have never been assessed as having anything other than zero income, then we can't be expected to pay any tax.	The IRS likes to try to drag people into tax court so the corrupt pseudo-judges there can extort your money. He has proven techniques to win in U.S. Tax Court as well.
3.3	The IRS must issue a "Notice and Demand" before it can attempt collection activity, including liens, levies, and seizures and it never issues a valid one.	See 26 C.F.R. §301.6303-1. This regulation, however, does not have the force of law because it is not a legislative regulation and does not point to a statute for its authority. It exceeds the delegated authority of the IRS to issue such a notice and demand. See also item 3.4 below.
3.4	There is no law requiring us to keep records of income or expenses under Subtitles A and C income taxes. 26 U.S.C. Section 6001 says the Secretary of the Treasury must personally notify us of the requirement to keep records and absent a regulation requiring records, we aren't liable to do this.	26 U.S.C. §6001 says: "Whenever in the judgment of the Secretary it is necessary, he may require any person, by notice served upon such person or by regulations, to make such returns, render such statements, or keep such records, as the Secretary deems sufficient to show whether or not such person is liable for tax under this title." There are not laws mentioning records under Subtitles A and C, even though the other subtitles have such requirements. See 26 U.S.C. Sections 4403, 5114, 5124, and 5741 and their implementing regulations for examples.
4. COLLECTIONS AND DISTRAINT
4.1	The IRS must issue a "Notice and Demand" before it can attempt collection activity, including liens, levies, and seizures and it never issues a valid one.	See 26 C.F.R. §301.6303-1. This regulation, however, does not have the force of law because it is not a legislative regulation and does not point to a statute for its authority. It exceeds the authority of the delegated authority of the IRS to issue such a notice and demand. See also item 3.4 below.
4.2	Collection activity requires a proper delegation order by the agent administering the code, and NO agents have enforcement or collection authority as indicated by their pocket commission.	Agents must have enforcement ability and an "E" suffix on their badge in order to institute collections. See Internal Revenue Manual (IRM), [1.16.4]3.1 through [1.16.4] 3.2.
4.3	We should at all times question authority of everyone we are dealing with at the IRS by insisting on seeing their pocket commission and their Delegation Orders.	IRS agents routinely try to exceed their delegated authority in order to maximize their "productivity" (the amount of extorted assets) so that they can get raises and promotions. Read the Supreme Court case of Federal Crop Insurance v. Merrill, 332 U.S. 380-388 for the following quote: "Anyone entering into an arrangement with the government takes the risk of having accurately ascertained that he who purports to act for the government stays within the bounds of his authority, even though the agent himself may be unaware of the limitations upon his authority."

#	Element	Description
4.4	There are three types of regulations: legislative, interpretive, and procedural. Only legislative regulations have the force of law. Only those regulations that have a citation of a specific statute at the bottom are legislative and have the force of law. Most regulations that purport to try to enforce Subtitle A income taxes are not legislative regulations and do not have the force of law as indicted by the absence of a statutory citation at the bottom	Examples of regulations that are NOT legislative because they do NOT refer to a section of the Internal Revenue Code in the notes are: 26 C.F.R. §301.6303-1 (Notice and Demand) 26 C.F.R. §301.6331-1 (Levy and distraint) These are bogus or bootleg regulations that you must remind everyone do not have the force of law!
4.5	The Parallel Table of Authorities in the 26 C.F.R. indicates that the only regulations that authorize distraint are contained in 27 U.S.C. having to do with Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. There are NO regulations for any of the enforcement provisions of Subtitle F that point anywhere in Subtitles A and C, for instance.	Look at the Parallel Table of Authorities for yourself at: http://www.access.gpo.gov/nara/cfr/parallel/parallel_table.html

Because we describe most of the above issues he raises elsewhere in this book and even in this chapter, we won't repeat them here to keep the size of the book to a minimum. We did, however, want to summarize his position very succinctly to give you a flavor for how the most popular untaxing advocate in the country approaches the problem. Based on the above approaches, Mr. Schiff recommends to his thousands of students the annual filing of a "zero return" on an IRS Form 1040. A zero return is one where everything on the return is zero except for the tax paid, and therefore, by filing a return you are requesting everything back. Even if you have a nonzero number reported on the W-2's from your employer, the "income" is zero because the Supreme Court defines "income" as corporate profit. Mr. Schiff is correct on this point, but what he fails to realize is that anyone who works for the government works for a federal corporation as an "employee", and especially those who file even the W-4 Exempt. As such, they earn "corporate profit" for the federal corporation, which is their "employer" and the tax return is a "profit and loss statement" for what essentially amounts to a privileged federal business trust that is a "public office" wholly owned by the national government, for which all "employees" are trustees and "public officers" completely subject to the I.R.C. See:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/SSTrustIndenture.pdf

Schiff describes his "zero return" approach in a book he publishes entitled The Federal Mafia: How the Government Illegally Imposes and Unlawfully Collects Income Taxes, ISBN 0-930374-09-6 available from Freedom Books, Las Vegas, NV 89104; 702-385-6920 for $38. Mr. Schiff's tangles with the federal government have been numerous over the years, and his Mafia book is a storyteller's perspective on his odyssey, which is quite interesting.

Mr. Schiff publishes an annual product called his "Schiff Reports" for $100 per year which is a series of audio cassettes that contain excerpts from his lectures and seminars and which address selected topics. Each new Schiff report incorporates the latest updates to his procedures based on lessons learned to that point. These reports are where you learn about his processes and the practical aspects of how to deal with the IRS. He does not discuss processes in any of his books because he says they are too dynamic. He therefore does not document or publish a description of his processes and procedures as we attempt to do in Chapter 3 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008. Everything is in audio format and is not indexed, which means that it may be more difficult than necessary to find the specific help that you need for your given situation. Nevertheless, his materials are very good and we recommend them highly.

The weak point of Mr. Schiff's approach is that he thinks citizenship is irrelevant and unimportant and that it doesn't matter what tax return or withholding form you file, so he says filing an IRS Form 1040 filled with zeros and a W-4 Exempt is fine. This is a HUGE mistake. We instead use either a "not liable" or a one cent return and file an IRS Form 1040NREZ instead of a 1040 so that our return reflects our proper status as "non-resident non-persons" to the foreign jurisdiction known as the Internal Revenue Code. For our withholding forms, we use a modified version of the W-8BEN form. See:

> About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

We believe that the reason Mr. Schiff has gotten into so much trouble in the federal courts over the years most likely is because of what we perceive are the following weaknesses in his position which he doesn't seem inclined to want to fix:

1. He is obstinate, arrogant, and refuses to learn from the research of others or listen to anything they have to say. It is difficult to get a word in edge wise when he is in the same room with you.
2. Files form 1040, indicating that he is an "alien" domiciled inside the federal zone, which means he has no Constitutional rights. At the same time, he wonders why the federal courts disregard his Constitutional rights. We instead suggest filing the 1040NREZ. IRS Document 7130 says that the 1040 form is only for use by statutory "U.S. citizens and residents" , who collectively are "U.S. persons" defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) who have a domicile in the federal zone. This needlessly subjects Schiff to the jurisdiction of what actually are foreign courts for a person domiciled in a state of the Union. Bad idea!
3. Doesn't know what a "nontaxpayer" is or doesn't declare himself to be a "nontaxpayer" as we discussed earlier in section 5.3.1. He therefore erroneously uses the Internal Revenue Code for his basis of claims against the U.S. government, never realizing that he should instead not be using any part of the IRC in his legal defense other than to prove he is a "nontaxpayer" and file a due process violation suit under 28 U.S.C. §1331 and 28 U.S.C. §1332, claiming "diversity of citizenship". Instead, he never claims diversity of citizenship, creating a false presumption by the court that he is a "U.S. citizen", which means he has no Constitutional rights. The lack of Constitutional rights then forms the basis for why the court can disregard his rights, so he just sits there and goes in circles, runs up legal fees unnecessarily, and litigates the wrong issues.
4. Erroneously thinks he is a statutory "U.S. citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, which makes him a "U.S. person" domiciled in the federal zone and needlessly gives federal courts jurisdiction they wouldn't otherwise have over him. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) says that the law applicable to anyone is the law of their domicile, and if you have a domicile outside the federal zone, then you aren't subject to federal law, including the I.R.C.
5. Uses form W-4 Exempt to stop withholding, which constitutes an erroneous assertion that you are a "U.S. person" and a federal "employee", which is a "public officer" of the United States government as defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c) who is completely subject to the penalty provisions of the I.R.C. §6671(b) and 7343. We instead use one of the following two forms:
   5.1. Amended IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
   http://sedm.org/Forms/04-Tax/W-8BEN/AboutIRSFormW-8BEN.htm
   5.2. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
   http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
6. Doesn't think it's important to modify the perjury statement on the forms he files with the government to put him OUTSIDE of federal jurisdiction so that he is outside of the legislative and judicial jurisdiction of the government.
7. Attacks other freedom advocates for their weaknesses and doesn't complement them for the things they do right. This isolates him and makes him an easy government target for persecution. Without friends and a support network of like-minded freedom fighters, he is literally a sitting duck.
8. Schiff doesn't understand federal jurisdiction or any of the implications of the separation of powers doctrine. Consequently, he, like many others, does not endorse or agree with the Non-Resident Non-Person Position that is the foundation of this book. This incomplete understanding is the main reason the government keeps hauling him into court: Because his own behavior has given them false evidence on government forms he has submitted over the years which demonstrates that he has a domicile in the foreign jurisdiction of the federal government.
9. Doesn't understand that I.R.C., Subtitle A describes an indirect excise tax upon a "trade or business". Therefore, he doesn't rebut information returns that create a prima facie presumption that his earnings are "taxable income". This is a HUGE oversight. See:

   > Income Tax Withholding and Reporting Course, Form #12.004
   > http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Other than the above defects, we believe that Mr. Schiff's ideas summarized above correct but terribly incomplete and inadequate and unusable for the average American. We follow his zero income tax return idea but use the 1040NR form instead, and use our own letter instead of the one he sells on CD-ROM to his students. Our example letter remedies the weaknesses in his position above by emphasizing non-resident non-person status, rescission of signatures, and amendment of government records to correctly reflect your "national" citizenship status. You can find that letter at:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IncomeTaxRtn/Federal/1040NRFedLetter.htm

While at his seminar on October 7, 2001, we asked Mr. Schiff what he had to say about various other untaxing experts and the various positions mentioned in this book and this chapter that they advocate. We have summarized his answers in the list below for your benefit.

DISCLAIMER: The views expressed below are not those of the author, but those imputed to Mr. Irwin Schiff. We are simply reporting what we heard for the purpose of expanding your education about freedom and taxes.

1. Avoid Bill Conklin. He is a fraud. All he wants is your money but he can't do anything for you. He'll charge you $700 and then tell you that you should pay your taxes in full and ask for a refund, which you will never get. He advises not filing W-4 Exempts and it's perfectly legal and proper to do so.
2. Otto Skinner is way off base. His books are ridiculous nonsense. He spends more time criticizing other untaxing experts than he spends helping his own people with his flawed arguments.
3. The 861 argument advocated by Larken Rose is myopic and doesn't look at the big picture. It's way too complicated for the average person to deal with and doesn't focus on the real issues of the voluntary nature of income taxes and the limited authority and jurisdiction of the IRS.
4. Changing your citizenship, becoming a nonresident alien, or expatriating to avoid tax are unnecessary, because the law very clearly says Citizens aren't liable for income taxes. The problem is not our citizenship or the tax code. The Internal Revenue Code is fine and it clearly says most Americans born in and living within states of the Union aren't liable for income taxes. The problem is the corruption in the federal courts and the legal profession. We agree with him on that!
5. The biggest collection of criminals in the country sits on the federal bench. You are a fool if you trust a lawyer to protect your rights when it comes to income taxes. Most lawyers are incompetent wimps who are only interested in their own pocketbook. And after they get tired of practicing law, they promote themselves to the next highest level of incompetence consistent with the Peter Principle and become corrupt federal judges!

5.7.6 The 861 "Source" Position

The "861 source" argument is a complicated argument used most often by those who profess themselves to be any of the following:

1. Statutory "U.S. citizens" under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).
2. Statutory "residents" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
3. Statutory "taxpayers" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) and 26 U.S.C. §1313.

. . .instead of their proper status as "nationals" and "non-resident non-persons" (see discussion starting in section 5.6.13 later). Most often, this position is used by itself with no other supporting arguments or defenses by those who prefer to "live within the code" (the I.R.C.) and keep their position simple and easy to deal with administratively. On a number of occasions, it has embarrassed the IRS, who gave its proponents refunds. In the case of Dave Bossett, an accountant, he got several thousand dollars back in refunds. The IRS was so embarrassed by the highly publicized event that they sued to get their refund money back. Starting in February 2001, the IRS went on a rampage against those who promoted this argument, including Thurston Bell, who now has an injunction against him, Larken Rose, who was convicted on failure to file in August 2005, and Dave Bossett, who had an injunction issued against him. As of 2005, federal courts have taken a dim view of those who use this argument, even though not one case has actually dealt directly with the issues. Consequently, they are proceeding under presumption and legislating from the bench on this issue to keep the dam from breaking.

The 861 position relies on 26 U.S.C. §861 and implementing regulations to show that "income" as legally defined from "within the (federal) United States" and not associated with specific taxable activities or sources is not subject to tax. The weakness of the 861 argument is that because the people who use it are simplistic in their legal approach, they most often don't understand the following:

1. The effect of "domicile" on one's status and liability. See section 5.4.8 earlier, which has some VERY important information on this subject.
2. The separation of powers between the state and federal government and the affect this has on the legislative jurisdiction of the federal government within states of the Union.
3. The fact that the Internal Revenue Code is not "positive law", and therefore Subtitles A and C are irrelevant to those outside of exclusive/general federal jurisdiction. See section 5.4.4 and following.
4. The definition of words of art like "United States", or "State" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701 or in section 4.6.
5. "income" means corporate profit because Subtitle A income taxes are indirect excise taxes as we discussed earlier in section 5.6.5
6. The definitions of "employee", and "trade or business" found earlier in sections 3.12.1.5 or 3.12.1.22.
7. The very limited territorial jurisdiction of the U.S. government and federal courts, which is limited to the federal zone for all matters relating to the Internal Revenue Code Subtitles A through C.
8. Their proper citizenship status as "nationals" or "state nationals" rather than "U.S. citizens", which we clarified earlier in chapter 4.
9. The lack of liability statutes under Subtitle A and no implementing regulations authorizing enforcement activity like penalties or collection. Consequently, the code can only be enforced against federal employees without implementing regulations, as shown in 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1). We explained this, for instance, earlier in sections 5.4.15, 5.4.17, and 5.4.18.
10. That I.R.C., Subtitle A is primarily a tax upon a "trade or business", and that most people end up owing money primarily because the forms that they file or are filed against them in most cases contain false information that creates a false presumption that they are "taxpayers". They don't understand, for instance, that these false reports must be corrected to remove the prima facie presumption that they are "taxpayers", and that life will be hell if they don't correct these false reports. See:

Income Tax Withholding and Reporting Course, Form #12.004 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

In our own personal case, we avoid this argument because it is too complicated to defend and overlooks much more important issues like those above. Because of their relative ignorance (in most but not all cases), proponents of the 861 position therefore get trapped into committing fraud on their tax returns by incorrectly claiming that they are "U.S. individuals", which is what it says at the top of the 1040 form they file, and they are tricked and confused by specious and downright incorrect arguments of the IRS that invalidate the 861 position. They also misrepresent their domicile status on the 1040 form they file by basically admitting that they live in the federal united States (see 28 U.S.C. §1746(2)). Their relative ignorance, in turn, needlessly subjects them to the jurisdiction of the federal courts, which then use their ignorance to financially and legally abuse and enslave them and deprive them of constitutional rights. This is the same failing of Irwin Schiff and his followers, because they also file form 1040 and claim to be statutory "U.S. citizens" and "U.S. Individuals". Remember that once you falsely conclude that you live inside the federal zone as 861 proponents do:

1. You lose your constitutional rights because constitutional rights don't apply to federal territories over which the U.S. is sovereign as per Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901).
2. All of your earnings are classified as a "trade or business" under 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3). See our article on the trade or business scam starting earlier in section 5.6.12.

The above considerations are why we said in Chapter 4 that you are making a BIG mistake to claim you are a "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or "resident" (alien), under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A), because most people don't maintain a domicile in the federal zone. We know based on the definition of "United States" in 26 U.S.C. §7701 that Natural born persons born in the 50 Union states are born as " nationals" who are regarded as non-resident non-persons with respect to federal jurisdiction. Because of their ignorance, they then deceive the government into thinking that they are domiciliaries of the federal zone by getting a Social Security Number and claiming to be a statutory "U.S. citizen" on the SSA Form SS-5 they fill out. When they reach age 18, they complete the masochistic process of becoming a "U.S. citizen" by filing their first IRS Form 1040, which is explained in 26 C.F.R. §1.871-10 as an "Election to treat their income as effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States". This process is also described in IRS Publication 54 as "making a choice". In effect, however, they are telling their government that they live in the District of Columbia or other federal territory or enclave within the "federal zone", hold public office (see the definition of "trade or business" in section 3.12.1.22), and therefore are in receipt of government privileges and are accordingly liable for paying the communistic graduated income tax. This whole process is sheer fraud that anyone with minimal legal training and a little time surfing the web could easily figure out for themselves, like we did.

Some tax freedom advocates like Lynne Meredith (author of Vultures in Eagles Clothing) claim that the 861 argument isn't even relevant unless and until we declare our proper status as "non-resident non-persons", and we agree with her! Why? Because as "U.S. citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, we have no constitutional rights, and filing the 1040 form amounts to an admission that we have a domicile in the federal zone and are subject to the sovereignty of the U.S. government. Without rights or Constitutional protections, are taxable sources or due process protections under the Bill of Rights even relevant? Definitely not!

The 861 position was first popularized by Save-A-Patriot Fellowship (http://www.save-a-patriot.org/). Rumor has it that it was discovered by Thurston Bell, who then left Save-A-Patriot Fellowship to join Taxgate, John Feld (http://www.taxgate.com/). He later left Taxgate to start his own de-taxing business called the National Institute for Taxpayer Education (NITE) at http://www.nite.org/. That business is now defunct and has been illegally shut down by a corrupted judge in an act of obstruction of justice. The 861 position most recently has been championed by a fellow named Larken Rose, whose name you may recognize from earlier sections of this book. Larken maintains a website called TaxableIncome.net (http://www.taxableincome.net/). Larken has also been affiliated with the We The People group (http://www.givemeliberty.org) and has appeared at Congressional Hearings on the subject of taxation along with We the People Representative Bob Schulz. In about June of 2002, Larken began selling a fine non-profit video he produced titled Theft By Deception that very clearly explains the 861 position in a way that the average American can understand. The video is available at http://www.theft-by-deception.com at a price of $20, which is a very good bargain and it makes an excellent defense against willful failure to file. We bought a copy for use as a defense of our beliefs in court. Larken has been careful to stay out of the federal cross-hairs by avoiding giving legal advice or telling people how to stop paying taxes, and that is one of the main reasons he is still around after all these years while all of his compatriots were shut down.

We have prepared a series of deposition questions that focus on the 861 position for use in an administrative due process hearing or an IRS deposition. You can use this series of questions to reveal the truth to the IRS and defeat most of their bogus arguments. These questions are derived from the We The People Truth in Taxation Hearing Questions. We have expanded the original questions considerably to make them more potent. These questions are found at:

Tax Deposition Questions, Family Guardian Fellowship

Refer to section 11 entitled "Taxable 'Sources'" in the above deposition. This part of the 861 position questions may be found at:

5.7.6.1 Introduction and definitions

Recall from section 5.6.5 earlier that "income" is defined as corporate profit. This is a direct consequence of the fact that Title 26 Subtitle A revenues are indirect excise taxes on federal privileges within the territorial jurisdiction of the U.S. government, which is the federal zone. The Congress and especially the IRS have a vested interest in hiding these critical facts from the average American. The only way they could hide these facts was to obfuscate the tax code over the years to obscure the truth. We talk about how they did it later in Chapter 6, sections 6.7 and 6.8 and their subsections. Most of this obfuscation occurs in the regulations, which are written by the Secretary of the Treasury, who incidentally has no delegated authority to legislate by enlarging the scope of the statutes to illegally expand their jurisdiction. The Secretary, however, has done his very best over the years to confuse the regulations he is responsible to write and has tried to systematically scare people away from reading the regulations associated with 26 U.S.C. §861, because they reveal the truth about the very limited nature of Subtitle A income taxes. The federal circuit courts have also colluded in this fraud by sanctioning those who focus their litigation on the nature of income taxes as indirect excise taxes. In effect, the courts have repeatedly avoided ruling on which of the five constitutional taxes that the income tax is from in section 5.1. We will describe how they continue to do this later in section 6.6 and its subsections.

The key to unraveling the fraud is to realize that Subtitle A federal income taxes are and always have been indirect excise taxes on federal corporate privileges according to the U.S. Supreme Court. Excise taxes are always tied to taxable activities, which are also called "sources" in the regulations under section 861. The people who lose the 861 position argument with the IRS usually don't understand this simple fact. Once we know that Subtitle A income taxes are indirect excise taxes, we also know that the tax is on privileged taxable "sources" or "activities", as they are called in the regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861. These privileged activities are associated with "operative sections" and "statutory groupings" of the code, which are identified in the regulations as corporate activities under 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1), to include mainly profit of Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISC) or Foreign International Sales Corporations (FSC).

To fully understand and use the 861 position, you must review older versions of the Internal Revenue Code to show how the truth has been carefully obscured and hidden by the government over the years. Earlier versions of the law were written much more clearly to show the truth. The law still tells the truth, but it has been obfuscated over the years to conceal and confuse the truth. This is especially true of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8, which is the main regulation upon which the 861 position is based. This regulation especially has been considerably obfuscated over the years to hide the truth from the average American and illegally expand the perceived jurisdiction of Subtitle A federal income taxes. Regulation 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 has been obfuscated, for instance, with needless confusing terms and definitions and the inclusion of an unnecessary procedure that shows how to compute taxable income. Even the title of the section has also been disguised by the government to hide what it is to be used for. Those who know the law, however, also know that titles of code sections have no legislative effect or significance under 26 U.S.C. §7806(b).

Some devious opponents of the 861 position such as IRS agents like to point to the title of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(2), which says "Allocation and apportionment of deductions in general", and say that the regulation is only to be used for calculating deductions and not for identifying proper "sources" of taxable gross income. This position, however, is simply frivolous and false, because it would be meaningless to group deductions by taxable source or activity if we aren't going to identify what a taxable source or activity is and the amount of taxable gross income from each source! It is also frivolous to give any credence at all to the title of any section of the code or regulations as we said earlier, because 26 U.S.C. §7806(b) specifically says that section titles and tables of contents don't mean anything from a legal perspective.

Before we launch into an explanation of the 861 position, some critical definitions are in order for the enlightenment of the reader. Most of the terms below are used in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8:

DISC	Domestic International Sales Corporation (DISC). A corporation which is incorporated under the laws of any State and satisfies the following conditions for the taxable year: (A) 95 percent or more of the gross receipts (as defined in section 993(f)) of such corporation consist of qualified export receipts (as defined in section 993(a)), (B) the adjusted basis of the qualified export assets (as defined in section 993(b)) of the corporation at the close of the taxable year equals or exceeds 95 percent of the sum of the adjusted basis of all assets of the corporation at the close of the taxable year, (C) such corporation does not have more than one class of stock and the par or stated value of its outstanding stock is at least $2,500 on each day of the taxable year, (D) the corporation has made an election pursuant to subsection (b) to be treated as a DISC and such election is in effect for the taxable year, and (E) such corporation is not a member of any controlled group of which a FSC is a member.	26 U.S.C. §992(a)(1)
FSC	Foreign International Sales Corporation (FSC). Purposes of this title, the term "FSC" means any corporation - (1) which - (A) was created or organized - (i) under the laws of any foreign country which meets the requirements of section 927(e)(3), or (ii) under the laws applicable to any possession of the United States, (B) has no more than 25 shareholders at any time during the taxable year, (C) does not have any preferred stock outstanding at any time during the taxable year, (D) during the taxable year - (i) maintains an office located outside the United States in a foreign country which meets the requirements of section 927(e)(3) or in any possession of the United States, (ii) maintains a set of the permanent books of account (including invoices) of such corporation at such office, and (iii) maintains at a location within the United States the records which such corporation is required to keep under section 6001, (E) at all times during the taxable year, has a board of directors which includes at least one individual who is not a resident of the United States, and (F) is not a member, at any time during the taxable year, of any controlled group of corporations of which a DISC is a member, and (2) which has made an election (at the time and in the manner provided in section 927(f)(1)) which is in effect for the taxable year to be treated as a FSC.	26 U.S.C. §922
"effectively connected income"	Income in connection with a "trade or business" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).	26 U.S.C. §1446(c) 26 U.S.C. §245(c)(4)(B) 26 U.S.C. §864(c)	26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26)

5.7.6.2 The Basics of the Federal Law

The laws enacted by Congress through the legislative process are compiled into statutes in the 50 "Titles" of the United States Code. (Each "Title" deals with a category of law, and Title 26 is the federal tax title, often called the "Internal Revenue Code.") A federal agency then has the duty (assigned by Congress) to implement and enforce the statutes by writing and publishing regulations, which explain that agency's interpretation of the statutes, as well as setting the rules which govern how the agency will enforce the statutes. The regulations, when published in the Federal Register, are the official notice to the public of what the law requires, and are binding on the federal agencies (including the IRS). For federal taxes, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to write such regulations.

> "Sec. 7805. Rules and regulations
> (a) Authorization - … the Secretary [of the Treasury] shall prescribe all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of this title [Title 26]…" [26 U.S.C. §7805]

(The citation "26 U.S.C. §7805" refers to Section 7805 of the statutes of Title 26, with "USC" meaning "United States Code." The symbol "§" means "section." Citations of regulations are similar, but contain "CFR" instead, meaning "Code of Federal Regulations.")

Section 1 of the Title 26 statutes imposes the "income tax" in five different categories (unmarried people, married people filing jointly, etc.). In each case, the wording reads "there is hereby imposed on the taxable income of…" The law generally defines "taxable income" in the following section of the statutes:

> "Sec. 63. Taxable income defined
> (a) In general - …the term "taxable income" means gross income minus the deductions allowed by this chapter…" [26 U.S.C. §63]

In other words, when someone determines his "gross income," and then subtracts all allowable deductions, the remainder is "taxable income." (So for income to be "taxable income," it must first be "gross income.") The following section of the statutes gives a general definition of "gross income":

> "Sec. 61. Gross income defined
> (a) General definition - … gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) the following items:
> (1) Compensation for services...;
> (2) Gross income derived from business;
> (3) Gains derived from dealings in property;
> (4) Interest;
> (5) Rents;
> (6) Royalties;
> (7) Dividends;… [more items listed]" [26 U.S.C. §61]

This is the point at which many tax "experts" err, either by assuming that the "items" of income listed constitute "sources" of income, or by assuming that "from whatever source derived" means that all of the "items" of income listed, regardless of where they come from, are subject to the "income tax." Both of these assumptions are provably incorrect and even the Supreme Court agrees:

> "The Court has hitherto consistently held that a literal reading of a provision of the Constitution which defeats a purpose evident when the instrument is read as a whole, is not to be favored... [and one of the examples they give is...]'From whatever source derived,' as it is written in the Sixteenth Amendment, does not mean from whatever source derived. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 , 40 S.Ct. 550, 11 A.L.R. 519. See, also, Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 281 , 282 S., 17 S.Ct. 326; Gompers v. United States, 233 U.S. 604, 610 , 34 S.Ct. 693, Ann.Cas.1915D, 1044; Bain Peanut Co. v. Pinson, 282 U.S. 499, 501 , 51 S.Ct. 228, 229; United States v. Lefkowitz, 285 U.S. 452, 467 , 52 S.Ct. 420, 424, 82 A.L.R. 775."
> [Wright v. U.S., 302 U.S. 583 (1938)]

The difference and relationship between "items" and "sources" will be explained below.

5.7.6.3 English vs. Legalese

In our system of written law, Congress may use a term to mean almost anything, as long as the law itself defines that meaning. When the written law explains the meaning of a term used in the law, standard English usage becomes irrelevant. For example, by the definition in 26 U.S.C. § 7701(a)(1), the term "person" includes estates, companies and corporations. While no one would call Walmart a "person" in everyday conversation, Walmart is a "person" under federal tax code. The legal use of a term is often significantly different from basic English, and therefore reading one section of the law alone can be very misleading.

As a good example, 26 U.S.C. §5841 states that "[t]he Secretary [of the Treasury] shall maintain a central registry of all firearms in the United States which are not in the possession or under the control of the United States." The law has a far more limited application than this section by itself would seem to imply. In 26 U.S.C. §5845(a) it is made clear that the term

"firearm" in these sections does not include the majority of rifles and handguns (while the term "firearm" in basic English obviously would), but does include poison gas, silencers and land mines. The average American reading the law will naturally tend to assume that he already knows what the words in the law mean, and may have difficulty accepting that the legal meaning of the words used in the law may bear little or no resemblance to the meaning that those words have in common English. For example, reading the phrase "all firearms" in Section 5841 in a way that excludes most rifles and handguns is contrary to instinctive reading comprehension. (But any lawyer reviewing Sections 5841 and 5845 would confirm that such a reading would be absolutely correct.)

Reading one section of the law without being aware of the legal definitions of the words being used can give an entirely incorrect impression about the application of the law.

As demonstrated, sometimes the apparent meaning of a simple phrase in the law is very different from the legal meaning. The "income tax" is imposed on "income from whatever source derived." If the law did not explain what constitutes "sources of income," then the law would be interpreted using basic English. However, the law does explain what the term means, and therefore standard English usage is irrelevant.

5.7.6.4 Sources of Income

Recall in our previous discussion that in the case of United States v. Burke, 504 U.S. 229, 119 L.Ed.2d. 34, 112 S.Ct. 1867 (1992), the Supreme Court ruled that "gross income" that was to be taxed had to come from a "source". Why? Because otherwise the income tax code would be so broad as to tax EVERYONE in the world! Federal government income taxes are imposed on government sources (taxable activities) within specific geographical boundaries, and not the income itself, per United States v. Burke. Since the income tax is an indirect excise tax as ruled by the U.S. Supreme Court, then the income received is just a way to compute the amount of tax but the tax itself is on some taxable activity within a geographic government jurisdiction. Clearly, there has to be some section of the Internal Revenue Code that ties the income taxes we pay to some geographical boundary and taxable activity, or the code would be "void for vagueness" as we point out later in section 5.10 and following. The sections of the code that identify such privileged "taxable activities" are called "operative sections" in the regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(1). This section deals with that subject.

There is often a lot of confusion in people's mind over the significance of the word "source" that we'd like to clear up before we go on. Therefore we'd like to refine the use of the term before continuing on with an explanation of specific "sources". Merriam Webster Dictionary of Law defines "source" as follows:

> source
> 1: a point of origin
> Example: the source of the conflict

There are actually two uses of the word "source" in the Internal Revenue Code. "Source" is used to describe a TAX source (a source for government revenue) in 26 U.S.C. §861, the 16th Amendment, and the IRS regulations (26 C.F.R. §1.861) we discuss subsequently. Revenue or tax "sources" for the government are always tied to a territorial jurisdiction and the occurrence of a specific privileged taxable activity or situation (called a "situs"). With all excise taxes, the occurrence of a privileged taxable activity within the territorial jurisdiction of the taxing authority creates a situs (or situation or government right) for taxation and w*e already know based on our earlier discussion that the income tax is indeed an indirect excise tax*, as confirmed both by the U.S. Supreme Court and the Congressional Research Service. For instance, there is a federal excise tax on gasoline. The privileged activity or event of a corporation selling imported gasoline (foreign commerce) to consumers within the geographical boundaries of the United States of America is an occasion for paying that particular federal excise tax. Note that the federal government can only tax this transaction if the gasoline was imported because Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 limits federal taxing power to matters of trade and commerce external to the states and to the country.[316] So if a privileged corporation sells imported gasoline in California, for instance, then we have created a situs for imposing the tax, which is described in 26 U.S.C. §4611. But remember that such excise taxes fall under Subtitles D of the Internal Revenue Code, which applies throughout the country (the 50 states), instead of just within the federal zone. This is confirmed by the definitions found in 26 U.S.C. §4612(a)(4)(A) , which define the term "United States" to mean the 50 States. Note that this definition of "United States" is different than that one found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), where the "United States" there includes only the District of Columbia. Subtitle A income taxes are different because they only apply to persons domiciled inside the federal zone and to federal payments from the government. If the sale of imported gasoline occurs outside of the geographical boundaries of the U.S.A or the "United States of America" or doesn't involve the selling of imported gasoline, then the tax can't be enforced and no one is liable because there is therefore no situs for taxation:

> situs. Lat. Situation; location; e.g. location or place of crime or business. Site; position; the place where a thing is considered, for example, with reference to jurisdiction over it, or the right or power to tax it. It imports fixedness of location. Situs of property, for tax purposes, is determined by whether the taxing state has sufficient contact with the personal property sought to be taxed to justify in fairness the particular tax. Town of Cady v. Alexander Const. Co., 12 Wis.2d. 236, 107 N.W.2d. 267, 270.
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1387]

"Source" is also used to describe an INCOME source for individuals or "persons" (as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1)) in Chapter 24 of the I.R.C, which is entitled "CHAPTER 24 - COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE ON WAGES " and section 3402 of the I.R.C. These sections deal with withholding, but the withholding is occurring on the natural person's income "source" as defined under 26 U.S.C. §61. The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(3) identify sources of income for people that fall under 26 U.S.C. §61 as "classes of gross income". This "source" of income for the person then becomes a "source" of tax revenue from the government upon receipt by the government of taxes paid by the person. In this case, the withholding on wages occurs as an imputed "excise tax" based on the "event" or situs of a "resident" receiving income from their employer in connection with a "trade or business" conducted within the territorial jurisdiction of the "United States" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9), which is the District of Columbia ONLY. Note, however, that indirect excise taxes that are Constitutional always occur on business or corporate transactions. In particular, the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that all such taxes are on profit from corporations involved in foreign commerce. Excise taxes are referred to in the Constitution as indirect taxes, as we learned in our discussion of the Supreme Court case of Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 74 U.S. 433 (1868) in section 6.12.4.2 and they always fall on consumers of the product made by the business. These taxes are built into the cost of the product we buy, and because the choice to buy the product is voluntary, the payment of the tax is voluntary. If you want to avoid the tax, then you don't have to buy the product!

Valid federal excise taxes CANNOT fall directly on natural persons within states of the Union or citizens because then they become unapportioned direct taxes. Unapportioned direct taxes on biological people violate Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution, which states "No Capitation or other direct tax shall be laid unless in proportion to the Census or Enumeration herein before directed to be taken." Unapportioned direct taxes also violate Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution. This prohibition, by the way, relates exclusively to states of the Union, and does not prohibit such taxes inside the federal zone or "federal United States". However, there is no such prohibition if the direct tax is only imposed upon "residents" or legal "persons" that have a domicile within exclusive federal jurisdiction, such as the District of Columbia..

In the case of federal excise taxes on natural persons, the income taxes on "wages" are deducted and paid by the employer (the business) with the consent or permission of the employee (W-4), but in actuality they also REDUCE the income of the recipient and the taxes must be accounted for and a return prepared by the citizen/recipient, not the business, which makes them act like a direct tax that is clearly unconstitutional if it is within states of the Union but which is perfectly legal inside the federal zone. It is very important to understand this distinction between direct taxes and indirect taxes. A good way to think about this is if a tax reduces the income of a biological or natural person from what they otherwise would have received and if it is involuntary and not discretionary, then it's a direct tax. This issue was settled in the Supreme Court Case of Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895).

One of the devious tricks that both the IRS and the state taxing authorities like to pull is to try to confuse the definition of "source" for the layman, so that proponents of the 861 position cannot use their arguments successfully. The most famous case they will cite in this dishonest, devious, and underhanded obfuscation is the case of Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Company, 348 U.S. 426, 429 (1955). Here is the portion of the case they will try to cite, which appears in IRS Notice 2001-40:

> "Congress applied no limitations as to the source of taxable receipts."

The above is correct, but misleading. Congress doesn't have to apply any limitations because the Constitution itself, which is "fundamental law", implies all the needed limitations on sources as we have shown. Even the Supreme Court admits this:

> "It is elementary law that every statute is to be read in the light of the constitution,"...
> "However broad and general its language, it cannot be interpreted as extending beyond those matters which it was within the constitutional power of the legislature to reach"

[McCullough v. Com. Of Virginia, 172 U.S. 102 (1898)]

*"The Court has hitherto consistently held that a literal reading of a provision of the Constitution which defeats a purpose evident when the instrument is read as a whole, is not to be favored... [and one of the examples they give is...]'From whatever source derived,' as it is written in the Sixteenth Amendment, does not mean from whatever source derived. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245, 40 S.Ct. 550, 11 A.L.R. 519. See, also, Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 281, 282 S., 17 S.Ct. 326; Gompers v. United States, 233 U.S. 604, 610, 34 S.Ct. 693, Ann.Cas.1915D, 1044; Bain Peanut Co. v. Pinson, 282 U.S. 499, 501, 51 S.Ct. 228, 229; United States v. Lefkowitz, 285 U.S. 452, 467, 52 S.Ct. 420, 424, 82 A.L.R. 775."
[Wright v. U.S., 302 U.S. 583 (1938)]

Thieves and deceivers in the government who use this specious argument will then try to expand the above to conclude by induction that the "source" of income doesn't matter, and that all sources are taxable without saying which of the above two "sources" (sources within under IRC 861 and sources without under IRC 862 the federal "United States") they are referring to, as if to say that there is no reason to even have 26 U.S.C. Section 861 through 865 at all and that everyone in the world is subject to U.S. federal income taxes because all government sources are taxable everywhere, including China!. This is an absurd conclusion to reach that is completely inconsistent with law, but that is what you have to believe if you believe their specious and deceptive arguments. In effect, what they are trying to do is dishonestly remove the territorial jurisdiction and requirement for a situs to impose the tax so that everything one receives becomes "gross income" which is taxable. This simply isn't true, however, because 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C)(i) specifically says that monies earned by a "nonresident alien" not derived from a "trade or business in the [federal] United States" is not classified as "gross income" and therefore is not taxable. That is the position that this book, as a matter of fact, tries to get you to take.

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART I > Sec. 861.
Sec. 861. - Income from sources within the [federal] United States

(a) Gross income from sources within United States

(3) Personal services

Compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States; except that compensation for labor or services performed in the United States shall not be deemed to be income from sources within the United States if -

(A) the labor or services are performed by a nonresident alien individual temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year,

(B) such compensation does not exceed $3,000 in the aggregate, and

(C) the compensation is for labor or services performed as an employee of or under a contract with -

(i) a nonresident alien, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, or

When you read double-speak of liars and deceivers like the above cite from the Supreme Court, you therefore need to be very clear what type of "source" they are talking about. Taxable "sources" of income for legal "persons" are found in 26 U.S.C. §61, and taxable "sources" of revenue for the government with a situs requirement are found in 26 U.S.C. §861 and 862. What the Supreme Court is talking about in the Glenshaw case are taxable sources of income for persons and the ruling simply expands I.R.C. section 61, but does NOT invalidate or render ineffective any part of the situs to tax established in 26 U.S.C. Sections 861 through 865 and the supporting regulations. We talk about this devious deceit and show you the error in the governments deception later in section 5.7.6.11.7. We strongly encourage you to read that section if you are going to use the 861 position, because we can virtually guarantee that the deceitful feds or your state government will try to bring up this case when you try to use 861 in an effort to confuse and dissuade you from using the 861 position, which stands up quite well against this U.S. Supreme Court case.

With that out of the way, we'll spend the remainder of this section talking about government "sources" and situs of income, so let's review: the "income tax" is imposed on "taxable income," which means "gross income" minus deductions. "Gross income" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §61 as "all income from whatever source derived." The phrase "from whatever source derived" may initially appear all-encompassing, but for the specifics about "*income from sources," the reader of the law is repeatedly referred to Section 861 and following (of the statutes) and the related regulations. For example, in the full version of Title 26 (with all notes and amendments) which appears on Congress' own website, Section 61 itself has the following cross-reference:

> "Income from sources -
> Within the United States, see section 861 of this title.*
> Without the United States, see section 862 of this title."

So the section which generally defines "gross income" specifically refers to 26 U.S.C. §861 regarding income from "sources" within the United States (the federal zone). A similar reference is also found in the indexes of the United States Code, which (although they vary somewhat in the exact wording) have entries such as:

> "Income tax
> Sources of income*
> Determination, 26 § 861 et seq.*
> Within the U.S., 26 § 861"*

Again, income from "sources" within the United States (the federal zone) is specifically dealt with by Section 861, and "determination" of sources of income is also dealt with by Section 861 and the following sections. In addition, Sections 79, 105, 410, 414 and 505 each identify Section 861 as the section which determines what constitutes "income from sources within the United States," and Section 306 even uses the phrase "part I of subchapter N (sec. 861 and following, relating to determination of sources of income)."

As shown, 26 U.S.C. §861 and following (which make up Part I of Subchapter N of the Code) are very relevant to determining what is considered a "source of income," and Section 861 in particular deals with income from "sources" within the United States (the federal zone). Not surprisingly, Section 861 is entitled "Income from sources within the United States," and the first two subsections of Section 861 are entitled "Gross income from sources within the United States*" and "Taxable income from sources within the United States*." Section 861 is also the first section of Subchapter N of the Code, which is entitled "Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States." Clearly this is relevant to a tax on "income from whatever source derived*."

As mentioned before, the statutes passed by Congress are interpreted and implemented by regulations published in the Code of Federal Regulations ("CFR") by the Secretary of the Treasury. The Index of the CFR, under "Income taxes," has an entry that reads "Income from sources inside or outside U.S., determination of sources of income, 26 C.F.R. §1 (1.861-1--1.864-8T)." This is the only entry in the Index relating to income from sources within the United States (the federal zone), and the regulations listed (26 C.F.R. §1.861-1 and following) correspond to Section 861 of the statutes. (The "26" refers to Title 26, the "1" after "CFR" refers to Part 1 of the regulations ("Income Taxes"), and the ".861" refers to Section 861 of the statutes.) These regulations fall under the heading "Determination of sources of income." The following is how these regulations begin:

> "Sec. 1.861-1 Income from sources within the United States.
> (a) Categories of income. Part I (section 861 and following), subchapter N, chapter 1 of the Code, and the regulations thereunder determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-1]

The meaning of this is unmistakable. The "income tax" is imposed on "income from whatever source derived," and Section 861 and following, and the related regulations, determine what is considered a "source" of income "for purposes of the income tax." The first sentence of the regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861 has stated this since 1954, when Section 861 first came into existence. Note that these define "the" sources of income subject to the tax, meaning there are no others. Therefore, the meaning of "income from whatever source derived" (the definition of "gross income" in Section 61) is limited by Section 861 (and following sections) and the related regulations. The meaning of the phrase "whatever source*" depends completely on the meaning of the word "source." The word "whatever" does not expand the meaning of "source" any more than the phrase "all firearms*" (in the example above) expands the legal meaning of the word "firearm."

The above section of regulations also refutes the common but incorrect position that the "items" of income listed in Section 61 are "sources," since Section 61 is obviously not the section which determines the "sources" of income for purposes of the income tax.

(There is a chart at the end of this report showing the outline of Part I of Subchapter N and related regulations, and showing many of the citations used in this report.)

While the significance of Section 861 and the related regulations may be obvious, the point needs to be thoroughly proven, since most tax professionals concede that Section 861 and its regulations are not about the income of United States citizens living and working exclusively within the 50 Union states of the United States. (Below it will be shown why it is so significant that "section 861 and following... and the regulations thereunder, determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax."). The IRS's own publications clarify the issue of "source" for us. In IRS Publication 54 (2000), p. 4, we read the following:

> The source of your earned income is the place where you perform the services for which you received the income. Foreign earned income is income you receive for performing personal services in a foreign country. Where or how you are paid has no effect on the source of the income. For example, income you receive for work done in France is income from a foreign source even if the income is paid directly to your bank ac-count in the United States and your employer is located in New York City.
> If you receive a specific amount for work done in the United States, you must report that amount as U.S. source income. If you cannot determine how much is for work done in the United States, or for work done partly in the United States and partly in a foreign country, determine the amount of U.S. source income using the method that most correctly shows the proper source of your income.
> In most cases you can make this determination on a time basis. U.S. source income is the amount that results from multiplying your total pay (including allowances, re-imbursements other than for foreign moves, and noncash fringe benefits) by a fraction. The numerator (top number) is the number of days you worked within the United States. The denominator is the total number of days of work for which you were paid.

IMPORTANT NOTE: The term "United States" in the Internal Revenue Code by default actually means the "federal zone" and not the 50 Union states of the United States. That is because of the definition of the terms "United States" and "State" found in 26 U.S.C. section 7701(a)(9) and 7701(a)(10) respectively. There are two exceptions to this rule found in I.R.C. sections 3121 and 4612, which have to do with taxes other than personal income taxes. This finding is also consistent with Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution, which both forbid direct taxes on natural persons without using apportionment.

This is also suggested by the title of Part I of Subchapter N (of which 861 is the first section), "Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income." Under the usual overly-broad (and incorrect) interpretation of the legal scope of the term "gross income," this would appear as a contradiction, since "Income from sources within the United States" (the title of Section 861) would at first glance seem to be the opposite of "foreign income." The specific taxable sources shown later demonstrate that income from within the United States (the federal zone) can be taxable only if received by certain individuals outside of the United States (the federal zone), thus making the income foreign income. For the purposes of the income tax, as we discussed in section 5.3, income earned from within the 50 Union states is counted as "foreign income".

While the title of a part of the statutes may indicate what that part is about, it should be mentioned that 26 U.S.C. §7806(b) states that such titles do not change the actual meaning of the law ("nor shall any… descriptive matter relating to the contents of this title be given any legal effect"). The above explanation for the title of Part I, Subchapter N is therefore not crucial, but does give a possible explanation of why the title is as it is.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Does Part I (Section 861 and following) of Subchapter N, and related regulations, determine what is considered a "source" of income for purposes of the federal income tax?

5.7.6.5 Determining Taxable Income from U.S. Sources

In addition to the fact that Section 861 and following, and related regulations, determine what is considered a "source" of income subject to the income tax, the regulations also repeatedly state that these are also the specific sections to be used to determine "gross income" and "taxable income" from sources within and/or without the United States (the federal zone).

> "Rules are prescribed for determination of gross income and taxable income derived from sources within and without the United States, and for the allocation of income derived partly from sources within the United States > and partly without the United States or within United States possessions. §§ 1.861-1 through 1.864. (Secs. 861-864; '54 Code.)"

> [Treasury Decision 6258]

The sections which are specifically for determining taxable income from sources within the United States (the federal zone) are 26 U.S.C. §861(b) of the statutes, and the corresponding regulations found at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8. (The regulations under Section 63, the section defining "taxable income," do not explain how to determine taxable income.) While the relevance of these sections may quickly become obvious, the repeated documentation is important since most tax professionals are already aware that these sections are not about the income of most Americans.

Section 861(b) (as mentioned above) is entitled "Taxable income from sources within the United States*." This section states that taxable income from sources within the United States (the federal zone) is the gross income described in 861(a) minus allowable deductions. The regulations under Section 861 state (in the first paragraph):

> "The statute provides for the following three categories of income:
> (1) Within the United States. The gross income from sources within the United States… See Secs. 1.861-2 to 1.861-7, inclusive, and Sec. 1.863-1. The taxable income from sources within the United States… shall be determined by deducting therefrom, in accordance with sections 861(b) and 863(a), [allowable deductions]. See Secs. 1.861-8 and 1.863-1."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-1(a)(1)]

(The other two categories of income are income from "without" (outside of) the United States (the federal zone), dealt with by Section 862 and related regulations, and income from sources partly within and partly without the U.S., dealt with by Section 863 and related regulations.)

As the above citation states, items of "gross income" from sources within the U.S. are dealt with by 861(a) of the statutes and 1.861-2 through 1.861-7 of the regulations. Taxable income is determined by 861(b) of the statutes, and the corresponding regulations in 1.861-8. These regulations are predictably entitled "Computation of taxable income from sources within the United States and from other sources and activities," and reiterate the point:

> "Sections 861(b) and 863(a) state in general terms how to determine taxable income of a taxpayer from sources within the United States after gross income from sources within the United States has been determined."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8]

In the regulations under Section 863 (concerning income from sources inside and outside the U.S.), the following is stated:

> "Determination of taxable income. The taxpayer's taxable income from sources within or without the United States will be determined under the rules of Secs. 1.861-8 through 1.861-14T for determining taxable income from sources within the United States."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.863-1(c)]

(The vast majority of tax professionals do not use these sections to determine taxable income from sources within the United States of America. At this point, the average American reading this report may guess that there must be some "context," or some other section, or something somewhere which would justify the tax professionals blatantly disregarding and disobeying the clear language used in the citations shown above. There is not.)

Note how sections 1.861-8 and following of the regulations are identified as the sections "for determining taxable income from sources within the United States," as well as being the sections to be used whether the income is from sources within or without the United States (the federal zone). A similar structure occurs in the regulations under Section 862 (dealing with income from outside of the United States):

> "(b) Taxable income. The taxable income from sources without the United States… shall be determined on the same basis as that used in Sec. 1.861-8 for determining the taxable income from sources within the United States."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.862-1]

Section 1.863-6 of the regulations (dealing with income from within a foreign country or federal possession) also identifies sections 1.861-1 through 1.863-5 as applying "[t]he principles… for determining the gross and the taxable income from sources within and without the United States." Over and over again it is shown that 26 U.S.C. §861(b) of the statutes and 26

C.F.R. §1.861-8 of the regulations are to be used to determine the taxable income from sources within the United States (the federal zone).

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Are 26 U.S.C. §861(b) and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 the sections to be used to determine taxable income from government sources of tax revenue within the United States?

After all the preceding discussion on taxable sources of income for the government, let us summarize with a picture/table, exactly what we mean. The table on the following page was constructed directly from the Internal Revenue Code and the underlying Treasury regulations to clearly show what is and is not subject to federal tax. In order for income received by an American to be taxable, it must fit into at least one category in each of the three vertical columns appearing in the table. If it does not, then the income cannot be lawfully taxed.

Table 5-78: Liability for tax summary: Income earned must fall into ALL THREE columns to be taxable

(a) General definition. Gross income means all income from whatever source derived, unless excluded by law. Gross income includes income realized in any form, whether in money, property, or services. Income may be realized, therefore, in the form of services, meals, accommodations, stock, or other property, as well as in cash. Section 61 lists the more common items of gross income for purposes of illustration. For purposes of further illustration, Sec. 1.61-14 mentions several miscellaneous items of gross income not listed specifically in section 61. Gross income, however, is not limited to the items so enumerated. (b) Cross references. (1) For examples of items specifically included in gross income, see Part II (section 71 and following), Subchapter B, Chapter 1 of the Code. 		Regulations: 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 (cont) (i) Overall limitation to the foreign tax credit. Under the overall limitation to the foreign tax credit, as provided in section 904(a)(2) (as in effect before enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1976, or section 904(a) after such enactment) the amount of the foreign tax credit may not exceed the tentative U.S. tax (i.e., the U.S. tax before application of the foreign tax credit) multiplied by a fraction, the numerator of which is the taxable income from sources without the United States and the denominator of which is the entire taxable income. Accordingly, in this case, the statutory grouping is foreign source income (including, for example, interest received from a domestic corporation which meets the tests of section 861(a)(1)(B), dividends received from a domestic corporation which has an election in effect under section 936, and other types of income specified in section 862). Pursuant to sections 862(b) and 863(a) and sections 1.862-1 and 1.863-1, this section provides rules for identifying the deductions to be taken into account in determining taxable income from sources without the United States. See section 904(d) (as in effect after enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1976) and the regulations thereunder which require separate treatment of certain types of income. See example (3) of paragraph (g) of this section for one example of the application of this section to the overall limitation. (ii)[Reserved] (iii) DISC and FSC taxable income. Sections 925 and 994 provide rules for determining the taxable income of a FSC and DISC, respectively, with respect to qualified sales and leases of export property and qualified services. The combined taxable income method available for determining a DISC's taxable income provides, without consideration of export promotion expenses, that the taxable income of the DISC shall be 50 percent of the combined taxable income of the DISC and the related supplier derived from sales and leases of export property and from services. In the FSC context, the taxable income of the FSC equals 23 percent of the combined taxable income of the FSC and the related supplier. Pursuant to regulations under section 925 and 994, this section provides rules for determining the deductions to be taken into account in determining combined taxable income, except to the extent

Such taxable income is determined in most instances by initially determining, under section 864(c), the amount of gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States. Pursuant to sections 873 and 882(c), this section is applicable for purposes of determining the deductions from such gross income (other than the deduction for interest expense allowed to foreign corporations (see section 1.882-5)) which are to be taken into account in determining taxable income. See example (21) of paragraph (g) of this section. (v) Foreign base company income. Section 954 defines the term "foreign base company income" with respect to controlled foreign corporations. Section 954(b)(5) provides that in determining foreign base company income the gross income shall be reduced by the deductions of the controlled foreign corporation "properly allocable to such income". This section provides rules for identifying which deductions are properly allocable to foreign base company income. (vi) Other operative sections. NOTES:

1. This table is used for determining the portion of a "person's" income that is subject to tax. Each "item" of gross income received by a "person" (which is a corporation or partnership involved in foreign commerce) must fall into a category found in each of the three columns, 1 through 3.
2. We will now give you some simplified examples of how to apply this table:
   - 2.1. Let's say you are an U.S. citizen who has profit from an investment within the U.S. (also called the federal zone, which is federal property only).
     - 2.1.1. Your income does not meet the description of "income" subject to tax under the U.S. Supreme Court in Column 1, and is therefore not taxable on this basis alone.
     - 2.1.2. Your income meets the definition of gross income under 26 C.F.R. § 1.61(a) above.
     - 2.1.3. Your income cannot be allocated to a taxable source within the United States as identified in Column 3 and within 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f). Therefore, it is not subject to federal tax and the recipient cannot be liable for federal tax on the amount based on this exclusion alone.
   - 2.2. You are a non-resident non-person not involved in a "trade or business/public office in the U.S." (holding political office) in receipt of wage income as a federal statutory "employee".
     - 2.2.1. Your income does not meet the definition of "income" found in Column 1 per the Supreme Court because it is not profit from a corporation involved in foreign commerce.
     - 2.2.2. Your income meets the definition of "gross income" found in Column 2 and 26 C.F.R. §1.61(a) above.
     - 2.2.3. Your income also cannot be allocated to a taxable source of income "within the United States" under Column 3 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f). Because the income cannot be allocated to something found in all three columns, then it is not taxable and the recipient cannot be liable for tax.

2.3. You are a U.S. Congressman who is a nonresident alien and who is in receipt of wages connected with political office.

2.3.1. Your income does not meet the definition of "income" found in Column 1 as defined by the Supreme Court, and is not taxable on that basis alone.

2.3.2. Your income meets the definition of "gross income" found in Column 2 and 26 C.F.R. §1.61(a).

2.3.3. Your income does fall in a taxable source from within the U.S.* as found in Column 3 above and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) (entitled Effectively Connected Income).

5.7.6.6 Specific Taxable Sources

Source rules for purposes of gross income that is the subject of taxation are identified in 26 U.S.C. Sections 861 through 863. Section 861 covers sources "within" the "United States", meaning income derived or effectively connected with a trade or business within the only the District of Columbia. Section 862 covers sources "without" the "United States", which is to say income received from within or between the 50 Union states of the United States of America. We will now cover the requirements relating to these sources independently.

5.7.6.6.1 Sources "within" the United States: Income originating inside The District of Columbia

Section 861 of the statutes uses general language that at first seems to apply to all income coming from within the United States of America, by saying

> "The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States*:"*

However, as we emphasized in section 4.8 (entitled "The Federal Zone") we need to keep reminding ourselves of the definition of the term "United States" as we read this section and all the implementing regulations. Once again, the "United States", as defined in Section 7701 of the IRC, actually consists of only the "District of Columbia" and does not include the 50 Union states! The main reason for going through the mental exercise in this section of identifying specific sources in the implementing regulations is to confirm this limited jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code and that Congress stays within its Constitutional constraints in Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 1 through 3 and 1:9:4. As we will see, the statutes and the regulations are indeed completely consistent with these Constitutional constraints and the definition of the term "United States" as only the "federal zone" and not the 50 Union states.

Following the introductory statement indicated above, section 861 then lists similar "items" of income to those listed in Section 61 (while specifying that they are coming from within the United States). As with Section 61, it is easy to misconstrue this list of "items" as being a list of "sources," which it is not. The regulations related to Section 861 contradict this possible misinterpretation. (And, as will be shown later, the older regulations and statutes make the correct application of the law crystal clear.)

The regulations in Section 1.861-8 begins by saying that Section 861(b) of the statutes describes "in general terms" how to determine taxable income from sources within the United States (the federal zone). These same regulations later specify that Section 861 is about items of income derived from "specific sources."

> "(ii) Relationship of sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b). Sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b) are the four provisions applicable in determining taxable income from specific sources*."*
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(3)(ii)]

In the first paragraph of Section 1.861-8 of the regulations (the section "for determining taxable income from sources within the United States"), it is again made clear that the section applies only to the listed "items" of income when derived from "specific sources."

> "The rules contained in this section apply in determining taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources and activities…"
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)]

Again, a few paragraphs later, in defining the term "statutory grouping," these regulations again state that taxable income must come from a "specific source."

> "…the term 'statutory grouping' means the gross income from a specific source or activity which must first be determined in order to arrive at 'taxable income' from which specific source or activity…"
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

In 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1) it is again made clear that Section 1.861-8 (the section "for determining taxable income from sources within the United States") is applicable only to income derived from "specific sources."

> "…the determination of taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources or activities and which gives rise to statutory groupings [see previous citation] to which this section is applicable*…"*

[26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)]

From these it is clear that the term "source" as used in Sections 61 and 861 does not simply mean any activity from which income is derived. If it did, there would be no need for Section 861 and following, and related regulations, to "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." The following citations show that Section 1.861-8(f)(1) lists the "specific sources" of income subject to the income tax.

Again, the first paragraph of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 states the following (the meaning of "operative section" will be explained below):

> "The rules contained in this section apply in determining taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources and activities under other sections of the Code, referred to in this section as operative sections. See paragraph (f)(1) of this section for a list and description of operative sections."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(1)]

The definition of "statutory grouping" (mentioned above) also refers to "paragraph (f)(1)" as the list of "specific sources."

> "…the term 'statutory grouping' means the gross income from a specific source or activity which must first be determined in order to arrive at 'taxable income' from which specific source *or activity under an operative section. (See paragraph (f)(1) of this section.)"*
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

The regulations twice identify "paragraph (f)(1) of this section" (26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)) as the list of specific sources. Paragraph (f)(1) itself confirms this again, and then lists the "specific sources" subject to the income tax:

> "The operative sections of the Code which require the determination of taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources or activities and which gives rise to statutory groupings to which this section is applicable include the sections described below.
> (i) Overall limitation to the foreign tax credit…
> (ii) [Reserved]
> (iii) DISC and FSC taxable income… [international and foreign sales corporations]
> (iv) Effectively connected taxable income. Nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States…
> (v) Foreign base company income…
> (vi) Other operative sections*. The rules provided in this section also apply in determining--*
> (A) The amount of foreign source items…
> (B) The amount of foreign mineral income…
> (C) [Reserved]
> (D) The amount of foreign oil and gas extraction income…
> (E) (deals with Puerto Rico tax credits)
> (F) (deals with Puerto Rico tax credits)
> (G) (deals with Virgin Islands tax credits)
> (H) The income derived from Guam by an individual…
> (I) (deals with China Trade Act corporations)
> (J) (deals with foreign corporations)
> (K) (deals with insurance income of foreign corporations)
> (L) (deals with countries subject to international boycott*)*
> (M) (deals with the Merchant Marine Act of 1936)" [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)]

None of these "sources" apply to natural persons (people rather than artificial "person") who live and work exclusively within the 50 Union states of the United States of America. (Federal "possessions," such as Guam, Puerto Rico, etc., are considered "foreign" under the law.) This is the only list of "sources" in Part I of Subchapter N, or the regulations thereunder, which (as the regulations say) "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." We can see quite clearly that all of these taxable sources are part of the "federal zone", which includes the District of Columbia and all federal possessions, or pertain to foreign commerce as allowed under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the constitution.

The next subsection (1.861-8(g)) gives examples about how 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 works, and states that "[i]n each example, unless otherwise specified, the operative section which is applied and gives rise to the statutory grouping of gross income is the overall limitation to the foreign tax credit under section 904(a)," again showing that there must be some "operative section" in order for the section to apply, and in order for there to be taxable income.

So, to review, the sections which "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax" (namely, 861 and following and related regulations) apply only to income from the "specific sources" listed in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1). Most people do not receive income from these "sources of income for purposes of the income tax," and most people do not, therefore, receive "income from whatever source derived" (the general definition of "gross income") subject to the income tax.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Under 26 U.S.C. §861 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8, is income taxable only if derived from "specific sources" related to international and foreign commerce (including federal possessions)?

5.7.6.6.2 Sources "without" the United States: Income originating inside the 50 Union states, territories and possessions, and foreign nations

This section deals with income from sources "without" the [federal] United States (the federal zone). Because the term "United States" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701 to include only the District of Columbia, then income from "without" the "United States" includes all income earned in the 50 Union states and in any foreign nation. The states of the Union are also considered "foreign countries" and "foreign nations" for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, which is considered municipal (private or special) law that applies only to the federal zone:

> "The state governments, in their separate powers and independent sovereignties, in their reserved powers, are just as much beyond the jurisdiction and control of the National Government as the National Government in its sovereignty is beyond the control and jurisdiction of the state government."
> "...a State has the same undeniable and unlimited jurisdiction over all persons and things within its territorial limits, as any foreign nation..."
> [Mayer, etc. of the City of New York v. Miln., 36 U.S. 102, 11 Pet. 102, 9 L.Ed. 648 (1837)]
> ---
> "The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties, except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They continue to be nations, with all their rights, and under all their national obligations, and with all the rights of nations in every particular; except in the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the Constitution. The rights of each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute."
> [Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 38 U.S. (13 Pet.) 519, 10 L.Ed. 274 (1839)]

By implication, any income derived from "without" the "United States" is "foreign income" connected with a "foreign business" and a "foreign corporation" (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(5)). The only exception to this is if you work for a corporation that is registered in the District of Columbia and recognized by the U.S. Government, in which case you work for a "domestic corporation" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(4). Keep in mind also that corporations within a state can be "U.S. citizens" at law, which is how the extortionists in Congress and the IRS get their jurisdiction to tax them.

IRS publication 54 refers to areas where you receive "foreign income" as a "foreign country". Interestingly, if you occupy one of the 50 Union states of the United States, you do indeed occupy a "foreign country" per the IRS' own "word of art" definitions found in publication 54. We explain and justify this in both section 5.2.14 entitled "The definition of 'foreign income' relative to the Internal Revenue Code" and in section 5.3.2 entitled "What's Your Proper Federal Income Tax Filing Status?". This all sounds rather confusing, we'll admit, but then again, that's the way the IRS and our Congress likes to keep things so they have plenty of wiggle room to manipulate and abuse ignorant Americans into paying an unlawfully enforced income tax.

Section 862 of the I.R.C. describes income from sources "without" the United States as follows:

> Sec. 862. Income from sources without the United States
> (a) Gross income from sources without United States
> The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources without the United States:
> (1) interest other than that derived from sources within the United States as provided in section 861(a)(1);
> (2) dividends other than those derived from sources within the United States as provided in section 861(a)(2);

> (3) compensation for labor or personal services performed without the United States;
> (4) rentals or royalties from property located without the United States or from any interest in such property, including rentals or royalties for the use of or for the privilege of using without the United States patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, good will, trade-marks, trade brands, franchises, and other like properties;
> (5) gains, profits, and income from the sale or exchange of real property located without the United States;
> (6) gains, profits, and income derived from the purchase of inventory property (within the meaning of section 865(i)(1)) within the United States and its sale or exchange without the United States;
>
> (7) underwriting income other than that derived from sources within the United States as provided in section 861(a)(7); and
> (8) gains, profits, and income from the disposition of a United States real property interest (as defined in section 897(c)) when the real property is located in the Virgin Islands.
> (b) Taxable income from sources without United States
> From the items of gross income specified in subsection (a) there shall be deducted the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto, and a ratable part of any expenses, losses, or other deductions which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder, if any, shall be treated in full as taxable income from sources without the United States. In the case of an individual who does not itemize deductions, an amount equal to the standard deduction shall be considered a deduction which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income.

On the surface, it would appear that everything without the U.S.(the federal zone) fits into the category of "gross income". But examining the regulations further, we find a completely different story! In 26 C.F.R. §1.864-2(b)(i), we can see that income from personal services derived from "without" the United States and received by a nonresident alien individual is not subject to tax. Keep in mind that the definition of "foreign" in the below case is anything outside the territorial jurisdiction of the United States, which includes only the federal zone:

> Sec. 1.864-2 Trade or business within the United States.
> (b) Performance of personal services for foreign employer--(1) Excepted services. For purposes of paragraph (a) of this section, the term ``engaged in trade or business within the United States'' does not include the performance of personal services--
>
> (i) For a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year, or
> (ii) For an office or place of business maintained in a foreign country or in a possession of the United States by an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States or by a domestic partnership or a domestic corporation, by a nonresident alien individual who is temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year and whose compensation for such services does not exceed in the aggregate gross amount of $3,000.

You will note that most of us fit in the above category, because we do not inhabit the U.S./federal zone and are a non-resident NON-person. We will explain why shortly. Even more enlightening is that *the graduated income tax that most of us have needlessly paid all these years applies ONLY to income effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States:

> 26 U.S.C. §871(b)(2)-GRADUATED RATE OF TAX…
> "(2) DETERMINATION OF TAXABLE INCOME.—In determining taxable income…gross income includes ONLY gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a TRADE OR BUSINESS within the United States."

26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) makes it clear that public officers are engaged in a "trade or business". Residents and Citizens of the 50 Union states (which is most of us) are American Citizens who are NOT performing any of the functions of a public office* and, therefore, we are not engaged in, and have earned no income effectively connected to a "trade or business" within the United States (federal zone) or the U.S. Government.

> *26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) Definitions. Trade or Business. The term "trade or business" includes [only] the performance of the functions of a public office."

Following is a definition of "public office":

> Public Office, pursuant to Black's Law Dictionary, Abridged Sixth Edition, means:
> "Essential characteristics of a 'public office' are:
> (11) Authority conferred by law,
> (12) Fixed tenure of office, and
> (13) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.
> (14) Key element of such test is that "officer is carrying out a sovereign function'.
> (15) Essential elements to establish public position as 'public office' are:
> (a) Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.
> (b) Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,
> (c) Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.
> (d) Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and
> (e) Position must have some permanency."

For the purposes of the income tax, "Trade or Business" 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), is a "term" or "word of art" defined by Congress. Pursuant to Congressional rules of statutory construction a "term" may have a limited definition which is different than the common understanding or the dictionary definition of the same word(s). Such term must be clearly and specifically defined by Congress within the Code utilizing it.

> Term: "An expression or word especially one that has a particular meaning in a particular profession." i.e.- term of art. –Ballentine's Law Dictionary.*

> "Words of Art"—These are "words that have a particular meaning in a particular area of study and have either no meaning or a different meaning outside of that field".-Barron's Dictionary.

In statutes levying taxes, the word "includes" is a word of limitation. It limits the definition of the term to include only the specific elements or words following the word "includes". However, granting a Congressional intent to make "includes", a word of enlargement, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(c), it could only be enlarged to introduce other words, which are synonymous to, or in the precise same category or genus of, the other words used in the meaning.

The term 'trade or business' includes the performance of the functions of a 'public office', cannot, therefore, be expanded by implication, to also include the functions of private, independent, non-governmental occupations of common right, or occupations of common right within the government:

> "(1) To comprise, comprehend, or embrace…(2) To enclose within; contain; confine…But granting that the word 'including' is a term of enlargement, it is clear that it only performs that office by introducing the specific elements constituting the enlargement. It thus, and thus only, enlarges the otherwise more limited, preceding general language…The word 'including' is obviously used in the sense of its synonyms, comprising; comprehending; embracing."
> [Treasury Decision 3980, Vol. 29, January-December, 1927, pgs. 64 and 65]

> "Includes is a word of limitation. Where a general term in Statute is followed by the word, 'including' the primary import of the specific words following the quoted words is to indicate restriction rather than enlargement. Powers ex re. Covon v. Charron R.I., 135 A. 2nd 829, 832
> [Definitions-Words and Phrases pages 156-156, Words and Phrases under 'limitations']

> "In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes, it is the established rule not to extend their provisions by implication beyond the clear import of the language used, or to enlarge their operations so as to embrace matters not specifically pointed out. In case of doubt they are construed most strongly against the government and in favor of the citizen."
> [Gould v. Gould, 245 U.S. 151, at 153]

Because residents and Citizens of the 50 Union states are not engaged in a "trade or business" within the United States, pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1(b)(1)(i), for the purposes of the income tax, they are in a class of "non-resident alien individuals", defined as follows:

> 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1

> "…(b) Classes of non-resident aliens-
>
> In general. For purposes of the income tax, nonresident alien individuals are divided into the following classes:
> Nonresident alien individuals who at no time during the taxable year engaged in a trade or business in the United States…"

Therefore, pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-7, state Citizens and "nationals" and residents of the 50 Union states, are not subject to the graduated income tax imposed by 26 U.S.C. Section 1.

> 26 C.F.R. §1.871-7
> Taxation of nonresident alien individuals not engaged in trade or U.S. business.—
> Imposition of tax. (1) "…a nonresident alien individual…is NOT subject to the tax imposed by Section 1" [Subtitle A, Chapter 1]

5.7.6.7 Operative Sections

The earlier sections of Title 26 (26 U.S.C. §61 and following) deal with types of income that may be taxable (such as compensation for services). However, these sections do not specify where the transaction is taking place, or who is receiving the income. Obviously not everyone on earth who receives "compensation for services" is taxable under U.S. law. A separate part of the law, found in Subchapter N, deals with what types of commerce generate taxable income.

Subchapter N is entitled "Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States." As the title suggests, this subchapter explains when income from within or without the United States (the federal zone) is subject to the income tax. But on examining Subchapter N, it is readily apparent that it relates only to international and foreign commerce, but not to citizens who receive all of their income from within the 50 Union states. This can be seen by the titles of the five "Parts" of Subchapter N, which are "Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income" (Part I), "Nonresident aliens and foreign corporations" (Part II), "Income from sources without [outside of] the United States" (Part III), "Domestic international sales corporations" (Part IV), and "International boycott determinations" (Part V).

The statutes of Part I of Subchapter N (beginning with 26 U.S.C. §861) give general rules about "within" and "without," but the regulations thereunder make it quite clear that these rules apply only to the taxable activities described throughout the other "Parts" of Subchapter N.

> "(ii) Relationship of sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b). Sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b) are the four provisions applicable in determining taxable income from specific sources*."*
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(3)(ii)]

This term "specific sources" is used in three other places in the regulations, every one of which specifically refers to taxable activities described in the "operative sections" of the statutes throughout Subchapter N (which are listed in 1.861-8(f)(1) of the regulations). In other words, while the regulations list the taxable activities all in one place (26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1), the statutes describe those taxable activities in numerous sections throughout all of Subchapter N. The "specific sources" listed in the regulations each refer specifically to sections of the statutes (called "operative sections") describing those activities. For example, item "(iv)" on the list in 1.861-8(f)(1) specifically refers to sections 871(b)(1) and 882(a)(1) of the statutes, which state the following:

> "A nonresident alien individual engaged in trade or business within the United States… shall be taxable as provided in section 1…"
> [26 U.S.C. §871(b)(1)]
> "A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States… shall be taxable as provided in section 11…"
> [26 U.S.C. §882(a)(1) (Section 11 imposes the income tax on corporations, while Section 1 imposes it on individuals)]

Here the statutes state that these specific activities (or "sources") may produce taxable income. If an "item" of income (such as compensation for services) derives from the activity described in this "operative section," that income is subject to the income tax. The "shall be taxable" phrase would be entirely unnecessary if "from whatever source derived" had the broad meaning that the usual (and incorrect) interpretation of the law gives it.

There is no such "shall be taxable" phrase, nor any "operative section" describing an activity in which a United States Citizen living and working exclusively within the 50 Union states receives income from within the 50 Union states. The regulations under Section 861 make it clear that the "items" of income must derive from a taxable source or activity described in an "operative section" of the statutes in order to be taxable. Other income does not legally constitute "income from whatever source derived."

The following analogy may help to clarify the matter of "items" of income and "sources" of income. Suppose that there was a law imposing a tax on "Zonkos," and that the law defined "Zonkos" as "all toys from whatever store derived, including the following toys: plastic cars, dolls, yoyos," etc. Then the law stated that another section "determines the stores for purposes of the Zonko tax," and that section listed "Bob's Toys," "Toy City," and "Toy World" as "toy stores."

In this example, there would be two distinct aspects of the term "Zonko": whether an item is a taxable "toy," and whether it comes from a taxable "store." Both criteria would have to be met for it to legally constitute a "Zonko." For example, a baby bottle bought at Toy World would not be a "Zonko" (even though it came from a "store"), if baby bottles are not within the legal definition of "toys." Also, a doll bought from "Chuck's Bargain Basement" also would not be a "Zonko" (even though it is a "toy"), as it did not come from something within the legal meaning of "store." A yoyo from Toy World would be a "Zonko" as it is both a "toy" and comes from a "store."

Similarly, if an "item" of income (such as dividends) does not come from a taxable "source" or activity (such as a foreign corporation doing business within the United States), it does not constitute "gross income." While the law goes to great length to specify which "items" of income may be included in "gross income," the other condition must still be met in order for those items to be taxable: they must derive from a taxable "source" or activity under an "operative section" of Subchapter N (as explained in Section 1.861-8(f)(1) of the regulations). (Note that the definition of "gross income" includes both criteria: "all income from whatever source derived.")

5.7.6.8 Summary of the 861 position

The current statutes and regulations show the correct, limited application of the "income tax" imposed by 26 U.S.C. §1, which is in conflict with what the public generally believes regarding the matter.

TO SUMMARIZE:

1. A direct tax is one levied directly upon citizens. The federal income tax under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is in actuality an indirect excise tax upon federal corporate privileges as ruled by the Supreme Court, but the IRS attempts to illegally enforce it as though it were an direct tax on live people. Direct taxes were best explained in the Supreme Court case of Knowlton v. Moore (178 U.S. 41) in 1900, which stated that:

   > "Direct taxes bear immediately upon persons, upon the possession and enjoyment of rights; indirect taxes are levied upon the happening of an event as an exchange."

2. Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution states that "Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States..."
3. Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution states that "No Capitation or other direct tax shall be laid unless in proportion to the Census or Enumeration herein before directed to be taken."
4. There can be no unapportioned direct tax, or it would violate the above constitutional limitations. This means that direct taxes must be requested NOT from citizens, but requested from the individual states by the Federal Government. Therefore, a Citizen CANNOT be made liable for the payment of federal income taxes.
5. The 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which allegedly authorized the imposition of federal taxes on "income", did not change the Constitution in such a way as to eliminate the constitutional distinction between direct and indirect taxes. The Supreme Court in the case of Stanton v. Baltic Mining, as a matter of fact, said the following:

   > "... [the 16th Amendment] conferred no new power of taxation... [and]... prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect [e.g. excise taxes] taxation to which it inherently belonged...".
   > [United States Supreme Court in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

The 16th Amendment therefore did not authorize the imposition of direct, unapportioned Federal Income Taxes upon citizens of the United States of America, in spite of the lies that you hear from Congressmen and the IRS just about every day on this subject. Instead, it authorized the taxation of income as an indirect excise tax, which is to say that it is a business tax levied on federal corporate or business income, and not directly on individuals.

6. As we thoroughly covered earlier in section 5.6.5, the Supreme Court has ruled in the case of Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189, 207, 40 S.Ct. 189, 9 A.L.R. 1570 (1920) that Congress cannot by legislation define the word "income". They also ruled that for the purposes of the income tax, "income" means corporate profit from foreign commerce of either federal or state corporations:

> "We must reject in this case, as we have rejected in cases arising under the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (Doyle, Collector, v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 38 Sup.Ct. 467, 62 L.Ed.--), the broad contention submitted on behalf of the government that all receipts—everything that comes in-are income within the proper definition of the term 'gross income,' and that the entire proceeds of a conversion of capital assets, in whatever form and under whatever circumstances accomplished, should be treated as gross income. Certainly the term "income' has no broader meaning in the 1913 act than in that of 1909 (see Stratton's Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 416, 417 S., 34 Sup.Ct. 136), and for the present purpose we assume there is not difference in its meaning as used in the two acts."

7. From a legal standpoint, and as interpreted by the federal courts, income to be treated as taxable MUST meet all of the following three criteria
   a. Must be "income", which means it must be "corporate profit".
   b. Must be a "class of gross income" found in 26 U.S.C. §61 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(3).
   c. Must be an "item of income" (identified in 26 U.S.C. §861) that is taxable (e.g. profit, sales tax, etc), AND
   d. Must derive from a taxable source or activity identified in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1). Income that meets ALL FOUR of these criteria is called "gross income". There are many taxable types or items of income but very few taxable sources as far as the federal government is concerned. All of these sources are identified only in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8, and all other types are excluded by implication. A favorite IRS trick is to talk about every type of conceivable income as taxable and say nothing about taxable source.
8. Federal income taxes under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are indirect excise taxes, and the Congressional Research Service report 97-59A entitled "Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax". Indirect excise taxes are on corporations involved in foreign commerce only and apply only to specific taxable activities or sources. It is ludicrous to attempt to lay an indirect excise tax and then not specify which activities or sources are taxable anywhere in the statutes, and to do so is a blatant attempt to unlawfully extend federal jurisdiction to tax beyond the clear intent of the Constitution. The IRS and Congress have attempted over the years since the 16th Amendment was introduced to abuse their power to broaden the definition of "income" and eliminate the use of taxable activities and sources from the Internal Revenue Code so as to try to apply indirect excise taxes in Subtitle A to individuals and thereby transform the indirect excise taxes under Subtitle A into direct taxes. The Constitution, however, does not authorize them to do this and the Supreme Court on repeated occasions has pointed this out.
9. There has been a concerted effort over the years by the federal government, and more importantly by the IRS and the Congress, to disguise or hide the simple facts contained in section 5.6.10 and subsections. We have traced the history of changes to the law that they made to show that there is an intent to confuse and deceive the average American into thinking that all of their income is "gross income", which simply is not true. Chapter 6 of this book also reveals the extent of collusion and conspiracy over the years between the various branches of government to enlarge and extent the perceived, but not actual, jurisdiction of the federal government to levy federal income taxes on private individuals domiciled in the 50 Union states outside of the federal zone. An examination of older versions of the Internal Revenue Code clearly shows to whom the tax applies and what types of sources are taxed, while the laws available today have been deliberately obfuscated and confused to hide the truth. Manipulation of the media by the IRS and the relative legal ignorance of the average American have prevented the word from getting out about the fraud and obfuscation involved with the federal government's attempts to hide and obfuscate the truth and illegally broaden the federal income tax beyond its clear Constitutional limits.

The following sections of the U.S. Code conclusively demonstrate that they are all collectively consistent in their entirely with the above constitutional limitations on the federal government's ability to tax:

1. 26 U.S.C. §1 imposes the income tax on "taxable income."

2. 26 U.S.C. §63 defines "taxable income" generally as "gross income" minus deductions.

3. 26 U.S.C. §61 defines "gross income" generally as income "from whatever source derived.". The Supreme Court has ruled in Wright v. U.S., 302 U.S. 583 (1938) that "from whatever source derived" does not mean that the source is irrelevant:

> "The Court has hitherto consistently held that a literal reading of a provision of the Constitution which defeats a purpose evident when the instrument is read as a whole, is not to be favored... [and one of the examples they give is...]'From whatever source derived,' as it is written in the Sixteenth Amendment, does not mean from whatever source derived. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 , 40 S.Ct. 550, 11 A.L.R. 519. See, also, Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 281 , 282 S., 17 S.Ct. 326; Gompers v. United States, 233 U.S. 604, 610 , 34 S.Ct. 693, Ann.Cas.1915D, 1044; Bain Peanut Co. v. Pinson, 282 U.S. 499, 501 , 51 S.Ct. 228, 229; United States v. Lefkowitz, 285 U.S. 452, 467 , 52 S.Ct. 420, 424, 82 A.L.R. 775."

4. 26 U.S.C. §§ 861 - 865, and related regulations, determine the taxable "sources of income."

5. 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f), which is the implementing regulation for 26 U.S.C. §861, shows that the taxable "sources of income" apply only to those engaged in international or foreign commerce (including commerce within federal possessions) or who hold public office. More precisely, it shows that the only thing taxable is federal corporate profit, which in that section of the regulation is identified as Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISC) and Foreign Sales Corporations (FSC's).

The income tax is therefore a "voluntary" tax and amounts to a "stupidity tax" on those individuals who are residents of the 50 Union states and who have only domestic income but who have allowed themselves to be deceived by the IRS into thinking they are "liable" for tax on all income from all "sources".

5.7.6.9 Why Hasn't The 861 Issue Been Challenged in Court Already?

After reading the essence of the evidence up to this point, skeptics often ask us the question:

> "Why Hasn't The 861 Issue Been Challenged in Court Already? After all, the issue seems pretty straightforward and easy to understand?"

What follows is our answer to that question. We have searched Supreme Court Cases going back to 1900 and Federal Appellate cases going back to 1930 using both the FindLaw index (http://www.findlaw.com) and the Versus Law index (http://www.versuslaw.com). We have found absolutely no references to the 26 U.S.C. §861 issue. The fact is that the 861 loophole may already have been used and successfully litigated in the courts, but that there are no records of cases dealing with the issue in any of the Federal Reporters or online databases we could find. We are then left to ourselves to try to explain and understand how this might have happened. Let us offer three possible and even probable explanations:

1. IRS Doesn't Argue The 861 Issue or Impose Taxes on People Who Use It. The law on this issue is so clear it doesn't need to be litigated so it never gets into court and is settled by the IRS before it gets to court. They may be content in this case to just keep the truth out of the courts so the whole system doesn't collapse when everyone finds out about this undiscovered/unpublished loophole.

2. IRS Obfuscation. The IRS keeps coming up with lame excuses why section IRC section 861 doesn't apply, for instance, by raising doubt about the meaning of "foreign". They also misinterpret the 16th Amendment phrase "from whatever source derived", to mean that the source of income is irrelevant, which we clearly know is false.
3. Federal judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax. We have extensively documented the existence of a federal judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax in chapter 6. This has lead the federal courts hearing cases dealing with the 861 issue to ensure that the findings are "unpublished". Going unpublished means the judge seals the court record for that case and won't allow the court's findings to be put in the Federal Reporter or any online case database so that others may read the findings and use them as precedents that must be respected later by the courts as part of "stare decisis." They will do this if the case would be an embarrassment to either the judge personally (because of a conflict of interest by the judge, for instance) or the government generally. As an example, if a federal district or appellate court judge is ruling against the U.S. Supreme Court and violating precedent, and doesn't want to have to explain why or be questioned by the Supreme Court or his supervisors, then he will seal the case record and make the case unpublished. This conspiratorial tactic, for instance, was quite common among the several Fifth Amendment cases litigated by the famous tax freedom fighter Bill Conklin in the federal district courts (see section 6.12.7).

We think the most likely of the three explanations above is number 3. You will understand why after you read chapter 6 completely, and especially section 6.6, which talks about the judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax. If the federal courts are doing what we believe they are doing, then the cases dealing with 26 U.S.C. §861 aren't being published and are being kept secret by the judges, who after all have a conflict of interest in wanting to perpetuate the flow of revenue that pays their salaries. However, in the process of sealing the court record for cases dealing with section 861, the courts are demonstrating involvement in extortion, racketeering, and First Amendment and censorship and rights violation, for which these judges should have been prosecuted for a "conspiracy against rights" under 18 U.S.C. §241.

Even for unpublished cases, there are still ways to overcome this conspiracy by the courts. If you know the case number and the court for an unpublished case, you can go directly to the court where the case was heard and request the transcripts and the court's judgment. This will bypass the conspiracy and allow us to gather evidence that will implicate judges in the conspiracy so that we can pursue a class action criminal lawsuit against them. All we need are at least 40 citizens who have been injured by the IRS to put together a class action lawsuit. This leads to the following request we'd like to impose on everyone reading this book:

If you litigate the 26 U.S.C. Section 861 issue, we request that you send us your case number and the court and date your case was heard in so that we can post the case judgment and transcripts, and this is especially true if the judge has sealed the record of your case or made it unpublished! We promise to post a record of it on our website and submit it to the website at http://iresist.com/ice/welcome.htm (Investigation of Curious Evidence, e.g. ICE) for use as legal evidence by other tax freedom fighters. Better yet, please send us a copy of the court's findings as well. Call us up to get the address to mail it to and we will scan it in and put it on our website. Let's work together against this conspiracy, folks!

5.7.6.10 Why the 861 argument is not good to use in court

In closing our treatment of the 861 Position, we want to provide valuable insight crafted by one of our more informed readers. His insights are very revealing in showing why it is probably not a good idea to use the 861 Position in court, and why it is better to focus on jurisdictional issues. His comments will become even clearer after you read section 5.3.1 entitled "Taxpayer" v. "Nontaxpayer". His comments follow this paragraph and occupy the remainder of the section.

Long ago, when I knew far less than I do right now, like many folks, I readily grasped the 861 Position that has been so eloquently explained by Larken Rose. And, I feel, Larken is a genuine American Hero for his noble efforts over the years. He has educated countless Americans and for that, he is a great man. However, that said, upon further reflection and after much self-study, I came to the conclusion a long time ago, that the 861 thesis is wholly subordinate to the Jurisdictional Argument. At bottom, it is as simple as this.

The IRC is special law, not positive law, as revealed in the legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204, and it applies to a small number of predefined people located in predefined locales. Since I am an American Citizen, I am not one of those predefined people. And since I am not located inside Washington, DC, or any other federal enclave, I am not located in the IRC's predefined locality. Therefore, since the IRC does not apply to me, it simply makes no sense to use and apply the IRS' IRC, in an effort to attempt to prove that it does not apply to me, excepting those applicable sections that reveal the IRC's limited geographic and territorial jurisdiction. One can readily rely upon U.S. Supreme Court cases and the Organic Laws to prove the same facts. A lot of well-meaning folks in the Tax Honesty Movement are going to a U.S. Government- controlled territorial court, and attempting to defend themselves by citing the municipal code that is the IRC. I think such an approach is a BIG mistake.

The fact is, the IRC is written to ensnare "taxpayers", and, quite appropriately, its provisions are therefore designed to extract income tax from "taxpayers" while also setting forth the payment procedures and IRS practices of collection, etc. But one must always keep in mind how the IRC defines the term, "taxpayer." According to the IRC, a "taxpayer" is one who is subject to or liable for an income tax. So any section of the IRC or tax regulations that uses the term "taxpayer", should set off an ALARM!!! I do not believe that one who believes themselves to be a "nontaxpayer", should be relying upon a regulation that uses the term "taxpayer", within the actual regulation. The impact of this all-encompassing definition of "taxpayer" is sweeping in its effect and it literally "sweeps-up" everything in its path.

Here is one example of what I mean. This reveals the danger of relying solely upon 861 without buttressing it with the more powerful jurisdictional thesis. At 26 C.F.R. §1.863-1(c) it says:

> "The taxpayer's taxable income from sources within or without the United States will be determined under the rules of Secs.1.861-8 through 1.861-14T for determining taxable income from sources within the United States."

DANGER!! DANGER!! WILL ROBINSON!! Notice how the regulation asserts "The taxpayers taxable income. . .blah, blah" So, right up front they are saying if you use this section to determine taxable income, then ergo, you must be a "taxpayer" who HAS taxable income.

Look, an 'alleged' taxpayer who uses 861 to demonstrate that they DO NOT have any taxable income, is arguing against themselves and running in place. Why? Because they do not meet the definition of "taxpayer" as defined at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14). If one is truly a "non-taxpayer", then it makes no sense to use regulations written only for "taxpayers", in order to try and prove that one is NOT a taxpayer!!!

The tax regulations are for the benefit (chuckle) of "taxpayers" and apply only to them. ONLY "taxpayers" can have taxable income. The quoted section above is ONLY applicable to "taxpayers". And taxpayers are those who have taxable income. The section is craftily written and applies circular logic to keep one within the jurisdiction of the IRC and the IRS.

What I am saying is very careful, because the 861 regulations are a trap and a ruse. Especially inside a courtroom. The 861 regulations are specifically designed to ensnare those poor souls who can't see the dangerous word-games that are being used to trap them in a house of mirrors. And rest assured, judges continually take silent judicial notice of the ensnaring nature of the 861 regulations, without ever recognizing evidence that refutes or disproves the 861 regs. 861 Regs apply a series of circular logic stratagems to en-snare folks and keep them arguing within the scope (and the jurisdiction) of the IRC.

5.7.6.11 Common IRS and tax professional objections to the 861/source issue with rebuttal

In this subsection, we play the Devil's advocate and document all of the deceiving, obfuscating, ill-informed criticisms, complaints, and downright lies you are likely to hear from the IRS in responding to the issues raised in this chapter. The IRS will take these approaches because they will do anything to hold on to your money (remember 1 Tim. 6:10 "The love of money is the root of all evil."?), even if you aren't liable for tax. Their deceitful an unethical lawyers have no scruples and will say whatever they have to, including lying to you in order to keep you paying taxes you aren't liable for. Why not lie?: The regulations and the courts say they can't be held legally liable for the advice they give you! But if you give them bad numbers based on your misunderstanding of the proper application of the Internal Revenue Code, they fine and penalize you. Hypocrisy!!

We are including these arguments so you can take the offensive with the IRS by being proactive in anticipating the problems they will try to create and having answers for them. We have to keep the Internal Revenue Service (I.R.S.) on the defensive at all times. Don't ever let yourself be on the defensive or be unprepared with them, because they will try to carve you up by intimidating you with your own ignorance and fear as their best offensive weapon! Don't hand them that card to play with. Knowledge is power, and you can have the lion's share of the power just by reading and studying this book and our website!

5.7.6.11.1 "We are all taxpayers. You can't get out of paying income tax because the law says you are liable."

IRS OBJECTION: "We're all taxpayers. You can't get out of paying income tax because the law says you are liable."

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "Show me the law that makes me liable as a Citizen of the 50 Union states with income from the 50 Union states and don't refer in your answer to the fraudulent IRS Publications, but instead to the Internal Revenue Code and your Regulations themselves. The fact is, there is no law and I vehemently deny any liability for tax. Until such time as you can show me proof with the law itself that I am a 'taxpayer', I don't want you referring to me as such, but instead using the term 'National'. You are only using the term 'taxpayer' to keep me on the defensive and to shift the burden of proof onto me, but you are the person who has the burden of proof at this point until you demonstrate otherwise."

5.7.6.11.2 "Section 861 says that all income is taxable."

IRS OBJECTION: "26 U.S.C. §861 says that income of most people is taxable."

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE:

This is a common erroneous "interpretation" which the IRS and tax professionals have regarding Section 861, which is that it is relevant to everyone, but that it does show the income of most people to be taxable. This is due in large part to the general language used in Section 861, which reads:

> *"Sec. 861. Income from sources within the United States
> (a) Gross income from sources within United States
> The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States: (1) Interest - Interest from the United States... (2) Dividends... (3) Personal services - Compensation for labor..."
> [26 U.S.C. §861]

(Interestingly, most tax professionals are aware that the application of this section is not as broad as it appears to be at first glance.)

As shown above, this section of the statutes applies only in determining taxable income from 'specific sources,' which are all related to international and foreign commerce. The history of the regulations and statutes, as shown above, make this point clear. However, certain sections of the regulations (taken out of context) are used to try to support the claim that the tax is not limited to the "specific sources."

(The entire issue of "residual groupings" mentioned below is settled easily using the older regulations, but for the sake of completeness it will also be dealt with using the current regulations. The following explanation deals with an issue intended to be confusing; it is included for the purpose of being thorough in documenting and refuting anything likely to be used to try to refute the conclusions of this report.)

The regulations define a "statutory grouping" of gross income as income from a specific source, while "residual grouping of gross income" means income from anywhere else.

> "…the term 'statutory grouping of gross income' or 'statutory grouping' means the gross income from a specific source or activity... (See paragraph (f)(1) of this section.) Gross income from other sources or activities is referred to as the 'residual grouping of gross income' or 'residual grouping.'"
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

The argument is that income from somewhere other than the "specific sources" may also be taxable. The idea is that "gross income" must constitute "taxable income" (after deductions are subtracted), since the definition of "taxable income" is "gross income" minus deductions. However, the regulations often use the term "gross income" in a more general way, meaning any income, whether taxable or not. In fact, the regulations specifically state that the "residual grouping" may be excluded from federal taxation.

> "…the residual grouping may include, or consist entirely of, excluded income. See paragraph (d)(2) of this section with respect to the allocation and apportionment of deductions to excluded income."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

A clear example of tax-exempt income being referred to as "gross income" in a "residual grouping" is shown below. As stated in 26 U.S.C. §882(a)(2), foreign corporations are only taxable on "gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States." The following example therefore shows that any regulation which discusses "gross income" (not "taxable income") from the "residual grouping" in no way shows that the residual grouping must be taxable.

> "(iii) Apportionment Since X is a foreign corporation, the statutory grouping is gross income effectively connected with X's trade of business in the United States, namely gross income from sources within the United States, and the residual grouping is gross income not effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States, namely gross income from countries A and B."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(g), Example 21]

The fact that the regulations refer to income as "gross income" does not mean it is taxable. In discussing an item of income, the regulations state the following:

> "Gross income from sources within the United States includes compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States..."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-4]

In the generic sense, compensation for labor within the United States (the federal zone) is "gross income." However, as the current regulations repeatedly explain, it can only be "taxable income" if it comes from a "specific source." The older regulations dealt with this "item" of income in a very similar way, and the context of the surrounding regulations made it perfectly clear in what situations this "item" could be taxable.

> "Sec. 29.119-1. Income from sources within the United States.
> Nonresident alien individuals, foreign corporations, and citizens of the United States or domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251 are taxable only upon income from sources within the United States...*
> The Internal Revenue Code divides the income of such taxpayer into three classes:
> (1) Income which is derived in full from sources within the United States;
> (2) Income which is derived in full from sources without the United States;
> (3) Income which is derived partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States...
> Sec. 29.119-2. Interest...
> Sec. 29.119-3. Dividends...
> Sec. 29.119-4. Compensation for labor or personal services. - Except as provided in section 119(a)(3), gross income from sources within the United States includes compensation for labor or personal services performed within the United States...
> Sec. 29.119-5. Rentals and royalties...
> Sec. 29.119-6. Sale of real property...
> Sec. 29.119-10. Apportionment of deductions.
> From the items specified in sections 29.119-1 to 29.119-6, inclusive, as being derived specifically from sources within the United States there shall, in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, be deducted [allowable deductions]. The remainder shall be included in full as net income from sources within the United States..."

The fact that income is referred to in the regulations as "gross income" certainly doesn't mean it is taxable. In fact, after stating that the "residual grouping of gross income" may or may not be taxable, the regulations refer the reader to "paragraph (d)(2)" regarding "excluded income." As shown above, the only types of income listed as not exempt are:

> "(A) In the case of a foreign taxpayer…
> (B) In computing the combined taxable income of a DISC or FSC…
> (C) For all purposes under subchapter N of the Code… the gross income of a possessions corporation…
> (D) Foreign earned income as defined in section 911 and the regulations thereunder…"
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(d)(2)(iii)]

Deductions must be divided between the "statutory grouping" (income from a specific source) and the "residual grouping" (income from anywhere else). This does not mean that the "residual grouping" is taxable. The regulations show in several places that there must be an "operative section" which applies in order to determine taxable income.

> "A taxpayer to which this section applies is required to allocate deductions to a class of gross income and, then, if necessary to make the determination required by the operative section of the Code, to apportion deductions within the class of gross income between the statutory grouping of gross income (or among the statutory groupings) and the residual grouping of gross income."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(2)]

The regulation which states that the "residual grouping" may be exempt from taxation also shows that there must be an "operative section" applicable.

> "In some instances, where the operative section so requires, the statutory grouping or the residual grouping may include, or consist entirely of, excluded income."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

This is only logical, based on the simple fact that the section "for determining taxable income from sources within the United States" (26 C.F.R. §1.861-8) states over and over again that it is for determining taxable income from "specific sources," not the "residual groupings."

> "The rules contained in this section apply in determining taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources and activities under other sections of the Code, referred to in this section as operative sections…"
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 (a)(1)]

> "The operative sections of the Code which require the determination of taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources or activities and which give rise to statutory groupings to which this section is applicable include the sections described below…"
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 (f)(1)]

> "A taxpayer to which this section applies is required to allocate deductions to a class of gross income and, then, if necessary to make the determination required by the operative section of the Code, to apportion deductions…"
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(2)]

The regulations (and statutes) are not about determining taxable income from anywhere other than the "specific sources." Part of the confusion is from the fact that, in stating that the "residual grouping" may consist of excluded income, the regulations imply that it also may be taxable. This is correct, but deceptive. The possibility of the "residual grouping" being taxable could easily lead to the erroneous conclusion that income from somewhere other than the "specific sources" might be taxable. The assumption is that the "residual grouping" cannot be from one of the listed "specific sources." This is not the case.

If person 'A' gets taxable income from two "specific sources" (taxable activities described in "operative sections"), the regulations state that all the calculations must be done for each "specific source" separately. Paragraph (f)(1) lists the "specific sources" under the "operative sections," and then the next paragraph states the following:

> "(i) Where more than one operative section applies, it may be necessary for the taxpayer to apply this section separately for each applicable operative section."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(2)]

While person 'A' is calculating all the deductions, etc. for the first "specific source," his income from the second "specific source" falls in the category of "residual grouping." Likewise, when he is doing the calculations for the taxable income from the second "specific source," the income from the first is in the "residual grouping." The temporary regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T demonstrate this.

> "Thus, in determining the separate limitations on the foreign tax credit imposed by section 904(d)(1) or by section 907, the income within a separate limitation category constitutes a statutory grouping of income and all other income not within that separate limitation category (whether domestic or within a different separate limitation category) constitutes the residual grouping."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(c)(1)]

(The same thing is said again in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(f)(1)(ii).)

Even an example in the regulations showing that the "residual grouping" may be taxable therefore does not imply that income from somewhere other than the "specific sources" may be taxable. The "operative sections" involving individuals receiving income from within federal possessions also makes it possible for an American to have "taxable income" from within and without the United States (the federal zone).

The "residual grouping" argument relies on making assumptions based on something that complex deduction allocation examples might seem to suggest, but do not state (that income not from the "specific sources" can be taxable), while at the same time ignoring several sections of regulations which contradict this theory. The over-complexity of these regulations seems designed to cause confusion and uncertainty. But even if the current complicated regulations by themselves, combined with some "creative interpretation," allowed for the "residual grouping" argument to have some credibility, the older regulations (as shown above) erase that credibility entirely.

The 1945 regulations made no mention of "operative sections," "specific sources," "statutory groupings" or "residual groupings," and didn't take dozens of pages to create a jumbled, confusing mess. Since there was nothing about "residual groupings" back then to base an argument on, to use the argument now would require the claim that since 1945 there must have been a massive expansion of what income is taxable, from international and foreign commerce to all commerce, and that the Secretary decided to inform the public of this by innuendos hidden in confusing examples about deduction allocation related to the per-country limitation on the foreign tax credit. (And, as shown before, Congress stated that "no substantive change" was made anyway.)

The common "interpretation" of the Internal Revenue Code relies on multiple assumptions, as well as simply ignoring various sections which contradict those assumptions. Some may wish to imagine that some other "sources" of income which the law does not mention must also be taxable. Some may like to assume that everything is taxable unless the law specifically says it is not. And some may say that if there is some uncertainty about what the law requires, then the government by default "wins." All of these are in direct conflict with a basic principle of tax law, which has been explained on numerous occasions by the Supreme Court.

> "In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes it is the established rule not to extend their provisions, by implication, beyond the clear import of the language used, or to enlarge their operations so as to embrace matters not specifically pointed out. In case of doubt they are construed most strongly against the government, and in favor of the citizen."
> [Gould v. Gould, 245 U.S. 151 (1917)]

> "Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
> [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

The extensive evidence of the correct, limited application of the income tax leaves little room for doubt. But even if the IRS, or others who would challenge the conclusions of this report, could obfuscate and confuse matters to the point where "it could go either way," the Supreme Court makes it clear that such a disagreement is to be settled in favor of the Citizen, not the government.

5.7.6.11.3 "IRC Section 861 falls under Subchapter N, Part I, which deals only with FOREIGN Income"

IRS OBJECTION: "26 U.S.C. Section 861 only deals with Foreign income and falls under Subchapter N ('Subchapter N - Tax Based on Income From Sources Within or Without'), Part I of the code, which is entitled 'SOURCE RULES AND OTHER GENERAL RULES RELATING TO FOREIGN INCOME'. You shouldn't be looking in this section to identify taxable sources because it doesn't pertain to most Americans, who don't have foreign income."

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "First of all, 26 U.S.C. §7806 makes your comment irrelevant, because it says that the titles, table of contents, and organization of the code mean nothing and have no force and effect. Since the word "Foreign" is only used in the title, then it is irrelevant to the discussion:

> United States Code
> TITLE 26 - INTERNAL REVENUE CODE
> Subtitle F - Procedure and Administration
> CHAPTER 80 - GENERAL RULES
> Subchapter A - Application of Internal Revenue Laws
> Sec. 7806. Construction of title
> (b) Arrangement and classification
> No inference, implication, or presumption of legislative construction shall be drawn or made by reason of the location or grouping of any particular section or provision or portion of this title, nor shall any table of contents, table of cross references, or similar outline, analysis, or descriptive matter relating to the contents of this title be given any legal effect. The preceding sentence also applies to the sidenotes and ancillary tables contained in the various prints of this Act before its enactment into law.

Second, as we analyze in detail in section 6.8.8 of this document, the title of Part I used to be "Determination of sources of income" and was obfuscated by Congress in 1988 to instead read "Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income". The underlying procedures and source rules were not substantially changed. Only the title was changed to further confuse people about source rules and cover up the truth.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: What other conclusion explains why this change was made other than to confuse and further conceal the truth? We can see none.*

Even entertaining the notion that your argument about "foreign" is relevant, please answer the question of why does IRC section 861 deal with sources both 'within and without' the United States? Doesn't "foreign income" only come from without the United States (the federal zone) by the definition of "foreign" found in the collegiate dictionary? Let's not forget the definition of the term "United States", which really only means the District of Columbia and the "federal zone". Furthermore, why does neither the Internal Revenue Code or 26 C.F.R. define the word "foreign" anywhere unless there was an intent to conceal the true jurisdiction of the U.S. government? Here are a few examples of the correct meaning of this word from commercial law dictionaries:

> Foreign Laws: "The laws of a foreign country or sister state."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

> Foreign States: "Nations outside of the United States…Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state. The term 'foreign nations', …should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

Why is the word 'within' also included in the title to Part I and section 861? As we discussed in section 5.2.14 "The definition of 'foreign income' relative to the Internal Revenue Code", all income earned from outside the District of Columbia and other parts of the "federal zone" is counted as "foreign income" as far as Congress is concerned. If I am a natural person and a "national" but not a "U.S. citizen" domiciled in one of the 50 sovereign states of the United States of America outside of the federal zone, then as far as the U.S. Government is concerned, all of my income comes from a foreign "source" and therefore section 861 absolutely DOES apply to my tax situation and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1 does define state citizens engaged in a public office as a "nonresident alien"!

Also, how do you explain the changes made to section 61 of the tax code in approximately 1982 where references pointing to section 861 were deliberately removed by Congress? These references had previously been part of the code since 1921 and indicated that section 861 of the code was to be used for determining valid sources of income! What new law or court case permitted or requires this 'hiding of evidence' and further obfuscation of the tax code? Instead, we think Congress just changed the title of the subsection to confuse people into not looking in this section and to hide the fact that this applies to everyone! Earlier versions of the law made it much clearer that citizens with income from the 50 Union states weren't liable for federal income tax. Under the original tax code, most "persons" outside of the "federal zone" were nonresident citizens of the U.S. paying taxes on income from a "foreign source". Why has this been progressively hidden in the tax code over the years for no disclosed reason? The IRS is trying to blow smoke and confuse people with the law instead of telling the truth directly to people…that if they are state citizens domiciled in the 50 Union states with income from the 50 Union states, then they don't owe tax. Please show me a positive law federal statute somewhere that contradicts this conclusion about tax liability and is consistent with 1:2:3 (apportionment requirement for direct taxes), 1:9:4 (constraints on direct taxes) and 1:8:1-3 (taxing authority) of the Constitution and the First, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, and Thirteenth Amendments to the Constitution. Direct taxes based on income violate so many provisions of the U.S. Constitution it isn't funny, and the Sixteenth Amendment, even if you count it as a validly ratified law, didn't change that situation or amend these sections to make an exception.

If you aren't going to refer to section 861 for taxable sources within and without the United States (the federal zone), then what section in the code ARE you going to use to specify specific taxable sources? There are at least two Supreme Court cases that state that a tax on income is NOT a tax on its "source", including James v. United States, 366 U.S. 213 and United States v. Burke, 504 U.S. 229. You must tie the income tax somewhere in the code to a specific geographic area and/or taxable event (excise), which are collectively called a "situs", or the IRC would be invalid and would apply to everyone in the world! This would violate the Sixth Amendment and the 'void for vagueness' criteria we define in sections 3.11.11 and 5.10. The Supreme Court has ruled repeatedly that the income tax is an excise/indirect tax and is unconstitutional as a direct tax (Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103; Evans v.

Gore, 253 U.S. 245), and excises always apply to geographic areas and events. I assume the event is the receipt of income, but where is the section that identifies the geographic area if it isn't 861?"

5.7.6.11.4 "The Sixteenth Amendment says 'from whatever source derived'…this means the source doesn't matter!"

IRS OBJECTION: "The Sixteenth Amendment says 'The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived'. This means that the source doesn't matter. Why all the big deal about something that is irrelevant?"

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "The Treasury regulations on taxable source make it very clear that specific sources must be identified as taxable in order for the income to be taxable. See 26 C.F.R. §1.861-1 thru 1.861-14, which identify specific taxable sources. If sources don't matter, why do these regulations even exist? For instance, 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a) says:

> "...The rules contained in this section apply in determining taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources and activities under other sections of the Code referred to in this section as operative sections. See paragraph (f)(1) of this section for a list and description of operative sections."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)]

And what about 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)?:

> For purposes of this section, the term "statutory grouping of gross income" or "statutory grouping" means the gross income from a specific source or activity which must first be determined in order to arrive at "taxable income" from which specific source or activity under an operative section. (See paragraph (f)(1) of this section.)...

This approach by the IRS rests on the misreading of "from whatever source derived" (as used in 26 U.S.C. §61) to mean "no matter where it comes from." This interpretation requires the reader to ignore all of the evidence presented in section 5.7.6.4 ("Sources of Income") and section 5.7.6.5 ("Determining Taxable Income from U.S. Sources") of this document; most notably, the sections of regulations which state that Section 861 and following, and the regulations thereunder, "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax," and the sections which state that "determining taxable income from sources within the United States" is to be done using 26 U.S.C. §861(b) and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8. It is a frivolous position because it is in disagreement with the U.S. Supreme Court also:

> "The Court has hitherto consistently held that a literal reading of a provision of the Constitution which defeats a purpose evident when the instrument is read as a whole, is not to be favored... [and one of the examples they give is...]'From whatever source derived,' as it is written in the Sixteenth Amendment, does not mean from whatever source derived. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 , 40 S.Ct. 550, 11 A.L.R. 519. See, also, Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 281 , 282 S., 17 S.Ct. 326; Gompers v. United States, 233 U.S. 604, 610 , 34 S.Ct. 693, Ann.Cas.1915D, 1044; Bain Peanut Co. v. Pinson, 282 U.S. 499, 501 , 51 S.Ct. 228, 229; United States v. Lefkowitz, 285 U.S. 452, 467 , 52 S.Ct. 420, 424, 82 A.L.R. 775."
> [Wright v. U.S., 302 U.S. 583 (1938)]

How's that for an amazing admission? For support, the court cites another case (Evans v. Gore), and here are some quotes from that case (emphasis added):

> *"[T]o enable Congress to reach all TAXABLE income more conveniently and effectively than would be possible as to much of it if an apportionment among the states were essential, the Sixteenth Amendment was proposed and ratified. In other words, the purpose of the amendment was to eliminate all occasion for such an apportionment because of the source from which the income came,-A CHANGE IN NO WISE AFFECTING THE POWER TO TAX but only the mode of EXERCISING it."*
> [Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

The court mentions that the governor of New York "expressed some apprehension lest [the 16th Amendment] might be construed as EXTENDING THE TAXING POWER TO INCOME NOT TAXABLE BEFORE," but that those who proposed the amendment described its purpose proving that was not the case. Back to Evans v. Gore, the court went on...

> "Thus the genesis and words of the amendment unite in showing that it DOES NOT EXTEND THE TAXING POWER TO NEW OR EXCEPTED SUBJECTS, but merely removes all occasion otherwise existing for an apportionment among the states of taxes laid on income, whether derived from one source or another."
> [Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

We're not sure why they beat this point to death like they did, but we're glad they did.

> "It is not, in view of recent decisions, contended that [the 16th Amendment] rendered anything taxable as income that was NOT so taxable before."
> [Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

This frivolous position by the IRS is therefore the result of backwards logic. Tax professionals start with the incorrect assumption that most people receive taxable income. Therefore, when they discover that (for example) 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 does not show most income to be taxable income, they incorrectly conclude (based on a false premise) that that section should not be used by most people, even though the regulations clearly state otherwise. This is usually stated as "that section doesn't apply to you." The following analogy demonstrates the logical flaw with this half-truth.

As shown above (see "English vs. Legalese", section 5.7.6.3), one section of the statutes of Subtitle E states that the Secretary shall maintain a central registry of "all firearms." But a separate section defines the term "firearm," and the legal meaning is far more restrictive than the meaning of the word in common English. For example, a basic hunting rifle is obviously a "firearm" in common English, but is not considered a "firearm" for purposes of Section 5841. An individual who owns one hunting rifle could, therefore, correctly state that Section 5841 does not impose any obligation on him.

Now imagine someone arguing to him the following: "The definition of 'firearms' doesn't apply to your firearm, so you should just ignore the definition in Section 5845. Just look at Section 5841, where it says 'all firearms.' That includes your rifle." Such an argument would be ludicrous, and yet this is precisely the logic (or lack of logic) used by the tax professionals regarding 26 U.S.C. §861.

Section 61 defines "gross income" generally as "all income from whatever source derived," and Part I of Subchapter N (Section 861 and following) and related regulations "*determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." Many tax professionals will argue that Section 861 "doesn't apply" to most people, and therefore most readers should ignore the sections which "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." This is entirely illogical, but it is the only way for the tax professionals to avoid coming face-to-face with their monumental error. Contrary to the evidence, they continue to claim that most citizens receive taxable income.

The main citation used in an attempt to justify this misinterpretation is found in the regulations related to Section 1 of the statutes (which imposes the income tax).

> "Sec. 1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.
> (a) General rule. (1) Section 1 of the Code imposes an income tax on the income of every individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States and, to the extent provided by section 871(b) or 877(b), on the income of a nonresident alien individual… The tax imposed is upon taxable income (determined by subtracting the allowable deductions from gross income).
> (b) Citizens or residents of the United States liable to tax. In general, all citizens of the United States, wherever resident, and all resident alien individuals are liable to the income taxes imposed by the Code whether the income is received from sources within or without the United States."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.1-1]

This section is a masterpiece of deception. While being literally correct (as the law must be), it is likely to give the wrong impression. Stating that a tax is imposed "on the income of every individual who is a citizen or resident" of the U.S. gives the impression that all income of these individuals is taxable. But anyone even slightly familiar with Internal Revenue Code knows this is not the case. The section goes on to specify that the tax is not on all income, but on "taxable income" (which is "gross income" minus deductions). As shown above, 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 is the section for determining "taxable income" from within the United States (the federal zone). The language could just as easily (and just as correctly) stated that "everyone on earth, no matter where he is and no matter where his income comes from, is taxable upon his taxable income." The meaning of the statement is, of course, totally dependent upon the meaning of "taxable income."

Subsection "(b)" also gives a false impression at first glance, while being literally correct. It doesn't matter where someone lives, provided that he receives income from "sources" within or without the United States (the federal zone). And Part I of Subchapter N and related regulations "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax."

It is a word game, where what may be inferred differs from what is actually stated. If someone does not have "taxable income," and if someone does not receive "income from sources" (as defined by law), then 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 becomes irrelevant. Nothing in the section has any effect on the legal meaning of "taxable income" or "sources of income." Instead, the section uses these terms in a context which makes them sound less restricted.

(As a reminder, the only form ever approved for use with the above regulations under the Paperwork Reduction Act was Form 2555, "Foreign Earned Income.")

The predecessors of the current regulations were worded slightly differently.

> *"19.11-1 Income tax on individuals
> Chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code []... imposes an income tax on individuals, including a normal tax (section 11), a surtax (section 12), and a defense tax []... The tax is upon net income which is determined by subtracting the allowable deductions from the gross income. (See generally 21 to 24, inclusive.)"

[* - Words omitted related only to which years the law was applicable.]

> "19.11-2 Citizens or residents of the United States liable to tax
> In general, citizens of the United States, wherever resident, are liable to the tax, and it makes no difference that they may own no assets within the United States and may receive no income from sources within the United States. Every resident alien individual is liable to the tax, even though his income is wholly from sources outside the United States."

The wording of these regulations (from 1945), while deceptive, does not give quite as persuasive a deception as the current regulations. The only solid conclusion which can be inferred from these older regulations is that income from outside of the United States (the federal zone) can be taxable to United States citizens and residents.

5.7.6.11.5 "The courts have consistently ruled against the 861 issue"

IRS OBJECTION: "The courts have consistently ruled against the 861 issue. This issue won't go anywhere and is frivolous."

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "Oh really? We haven't found a single case since 1930 in any of the federal district or appellate courts or since 1900 in the U.S. Supreme Court that mentions the 861/source issue. Can you please quote me the specific case numbers and names so I can research it for myself to validate your specific assertions?" Furthermore, your own Internal Revenue Manual says in section 4.10.7.2.9.8 that you can't quote cases below the Supreme Court to apply to more than the person who was the subject of the suit, so please give me a Supreme Court cite that proves your contention.

LIKELY IRS RESPONSE TO YOUR RESPONSE: "I don't have time to deal with this and I'm not here to give legal advice. You need to get a lawyer who understands the laws because you certainly don't. You're walking on thin ice and headed for trouble, buddy."

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "IRS Publication 1 says about the rights of 'taxpayers':

> "I. IRS employees will explain and protect your rights as a taxpayer throughout your contact with us."

[QUESTION: What about my right to not be taxed directly per the constitution 1:9:4? What about my Fifth Amendment right not to be compelled to testify against myself? What about my First Amendment right to NOT be compelled or penalized NOT communicating with my government on a tax return? What about my right to understand the law and what is specifically prohibited as required by the Sixth Amendment?]

> "IRS Mission Statement: 'Provide Americas taxpayers top quality service by helping them understand and meet their tax responsibilities and by applying the tax law with integrity and fairness to all.'"

[QUESTION: What about 'citizens' who technically aren't 'taxpayers' but are being deceived into thinking they are and want to know the law that makes them liable? Do they get equal treatment under the law and a proper explanation of their non-liability to pay income taxes and the legal foundation for it? How can I properly apply the tax laws if IRS employees won't interpret it for me or help or show me where I can read and interpret it myself? Why aren't employees at the IRS held liable for the advice they give, especially if following it causes me to end up paying a fine? Why have them helping me at all on your 800 number if they can't be held legally responsible for the advice they give me and refuse to describe my legal obligations without referring to the IRS Publications, which we have said repeatedly are a fraud and do not have the force of law?]

"You are responsible for paying only the correct amount of tax due under the law—no more, no less."

[QUESTION: How can a Citizen know the correct amount of tax due if IRS support people won't refer to the tax law and insist on using IRS Publications, which are clearly in error and which the courts have consistently ruled do not have the force of law?]

Did you notice that the IRS consistently called ALL PEOPLE "taxpayers" above? Does that mean that if you don't pay tax, you have NO rights and that you are fair game for the predators and extortionists at the IRS? We have found personally that you can easily answer this question for yourself by calling their 800 number for help. Call them and assert that you have no income tax liability, correct them when they refer to you as a "taxpayer" and insist instead that they refer to you as an American and that it is their responsibility under the law to demonstrate your liability and meet the burden of proof imposed upon them under the Administrative Procedures Act, 5 U.S.C. §556(d) before you will refer to yourself otherwise. You will find out, as we did, that they will put you on hold forever, get rude and belligerent, refuse to talk to you, and won't show you the law that makes you liable because there is none, and will then refuse to talk about anything but the fraudulent IRS Publications! This ought to be a big red flag that it's all a big fraud! Why do they do this? Because if they listen to you and learn the truth, someone might drag them into court and prosecute them for conspiracy to violate rights and misapplication of the law and breach of fiduciary duty. This is also the reason why they won't give you their full name or direct phone number or email or mail address—they don't want to be held legally liable in any way because they know they don't have a legal leg to stand on.

This last response by the IRS is a scare/intimidation tactic to keep you afraid and ignorant but avoid the law or liability for communicating the law to you correctly and completely in order to protect themselves from culpability for improperly implementing it (this is called "plausible deniability", and they use it as a self-defense mechanism). Instead, the IRS wants to force another expensive attorney to wear you out financially and abuse you in hopes that you will exhaust and wear out quickly and no longer be a bother to them. This same attorney they want you to get will let you die on the vine in front of the judge because he is an "officer of the court" who can only practice law in court with the permission and approval of a federal judge who receives bribes every month in his paycheck that are derived from tax dollars extorted illegally from you.

5.7.6.11.6 "You are misunderstanding and misapplying the law and you're asking for trouble"

IRS OBJECTION: "You are misunderstanding and misapplying the law and you're asking for trouble."

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "Then why aren't you helping me interpret the law correctly? Why is it that you can make me afraid of misapplying the law but won't tell me how to correctly apply it to either define or meet my alleged tax liabilities as your mission statement obligates you to do? Could it be that you want to use my own fear and ignorance to make me compliant and paying the largest amount of tax and penalties instead of empowering me with the knowledge of the law needed to pay the minimum tax and penalties? Prove to me that I am wrong and prove to me that I am liable to pay tax, because I am convinced I'm not liable and would like to give you the benefit of the doubt!"

5.7.6.11.7 "Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co. case makes the source of income irrelevant and taxes all 'sources'"

IRS OBJECTION: "The U.S. Supreme Court has already dealt with the frivolous 861 'source" issue in the case of Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co., 348 U.S. 426, 429 (1955). That ruling makes the source of income irrelevant. See IRS Notice 2001-40. The IRS stated the following in their Notice 2001-40, available from http://ftp.fedworld.gov/pub/irs-drop/n-01-40.pdf. The Notice 2001-40 was issued on 07-Jun-01 00:30 and the hyperlink to this IRS Notice [n-01-40.pdf] can be found at: http://ftp.fedworld.gov/pub/irs-drop/

The proponents of this position misread the Code and the Treasury Regulations. Although the proponents acknowledge that section 1 imposes income tax on "taxable income," that taxable income" consists of "gross > income" minus deductions (section 63) and that "gross income" is income "from whatever source derived" (section 61), they assert that sections 861 through 865 of the Code and the regulations thereunder (in particular, Treasury regulation section 1.861-8) limit taxable "sources" of income to certain foreign-based activities.

> That assertion is refuted by the express and unambiguous terms of the Code. Section 61 includes in gross income "all income from whatever source derived." As the Supreme Court stated in Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co*., 348 U.S. 426, 429 (1955), "Congress applied no limitations as to the source of taxable receipts . . . @. Nothing in sections 861 to 865 of the Code limits the gross income subject to United States taxation to foreign-source income. The rules of sections 861 through 865 have significance in determining whether income is considered from sources within the United States or without the United States, which is relevant, for example, in determining whether a U.S. citizen or resident may claim a credit for foreign taxes paid. See Great-West Life Assurance Co. v. United States, 678 F.2d. 180, 183 (Ct. Cl. 1982) (stating that "[t]he determination of where income is derived or 'sourced' is generally of no moment to either United States citizens or United States corporations, for such persons are subject to tax under I.R.C. § 1 and I.R.C. §. 11, respectively, on their worldwide income" and that "[l]ikewise, the income of a resident alien individual is taxed under I.R.C. § 1 without regard to source"). The source rules do not operate to exclude from U.S. taxation income earned by United States persons from sources within the United States. Williams v. Commissioner, 114 T.C. 136 (2000) (rejecting the claim that income was not subject to tax because it was not from any of the sources listed in Treas. Reg. sec. 1.861-8(a)); Aiello v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1995-40 (1995) 2(rejecting the claim that section 861 lists the only sources of income relevant for purposes of section 61).*

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE:

First of all, did you notice that the IRS committed a deliberate typo in their quote from Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co., whereby you put an @ sign where there should have been a close quote. The IRS, in that Notice, was trying to deceive the reader that their own assertions were actually quoted from the Supreme Court. You want me to believe that the following statement came from the Supreme Court, when in fact it does not because we looked up the case:

> Nothing in sections 861 to 865 of the Code limits the gross income subject to United States taxation to foreign-source income. The rules of sections 861 through 865 have significance in determining whether income is considered from sources within the United States or without the United States, which is relevant, for example, in determining whether a U.S. citizen or resident may claim a credit for foreign taxes paid.

More IRS deception. The close quote should appear where the @ sign was based on reading the case. Secondly, the Glenshaw case was about the following issue quoted directly from that case:

> The common question is whether money received as exemplary damages for fraud or as the punitive two-thirds portion of a treble-damage antitrust recovery must be reported by a taxpayer as gross income under 22 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1939.

The party to that case was not arguing the 861 position, and as a matter of fact, the case dealt with an older version of the code with different section numbers.

Next, we note that the most authoritative cite they have at the end of the article is from T.C. Memos, which may NOT be cited to apply generally to all Americans as per their own Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.9.8:

> "Decisions made at various levels of the court system are considered to be interpretations of tax laws and may be used by either examiners or taxpayers to support a position.
> Certain court cases lend more weight to a position than others. A case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court becomes the law of the land and takes precedence over decisions of lower courts*.* The Internal Revenue Service must follow Supreme Court decisions. For examiners, Supreme Court decisions have the same weight as the Code.
> Decisions made by lower courts, such as Tax Court, District Courts, or Claims Court, are binding on the Service only for the particular taxpayer and the years litigated. Adverse decisions of lower courts do not require the Service to alter its position for other taxpayers."
> [Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.9.8 (05/14/99)]

More IRS deception. So clearly, the only thing we can rely on in everything they cited above is the Supreme Court Glenshaw case. In that case, the court did not mention whether the party involved was a STATUTORY citizen or a STATUTORY "nonresident alien". As we repeatedly suggest throughout this book, it's important to correct government records describing your citizenship status because they create false presumptions that misrepresent your true status as a "non-resident non-person" and a "national under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not "citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §401 to escape the reach of the tax "imposed" in 26 U.S.C. §1. Based on the way they treated this party, we have to assume that he was a "U.S. citizen" who therefore had no Constitutional rights.

Moving on, the Glenshaw court stated:

> The sweeping scope of the controverted statute is readily apparent:
> > "(a) GENERAL DEFINITION. - `Gross income' includes gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service . . . of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, trades, businesses, commerce, or sales, or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in such property; also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, or the transaction of any business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever*. . . ." (Emphasis added.) 4*
> This Court has frequently stated that this language was used by Congress to exert in this field "the full measure of its taxing power." Helvering v. Clifford, 309 U.S. 331, 334 ; Helvering v. Midland Mutual Life Ins. Co., 300 U.S. 216, 223 ; Douglas v. Willcuts, 296 U.S. 1, 9 ; Irwin v. Gavit, 268 U.S. 161, 166 . Respondents contend that punitive damages, characterized as "windfalls" flowing from the culpable conduct of third parties, are not within the scope of the section. But Congress applied no limitations as to the source of taxable receipts, nor restrictive [348 U.S. 426, 430] labels as to their nature. And the Court has given a liberal construction to this broad phraseology in recognition of the intention of Congress to tax all gains except those specifically exempted. Commissioner v. Jacobson, 336 U.S. 28, 49 ; Helvering v. Stockholms Enskilda Bank, 293 U.S. 84, 87 -91. Thus, the fortuitous gain accruing to a lessor by reason of the forfeiture of a lessee's improvements on the rented property was taxed in Helvering v. Bruun, 309 U.S. 461 . Cf. Robertson v. United States, 343 U.S. 711 ; Rutkin v. United States, 343 U.S. 130 ; United States v. Kirby Lumber Co., 284 U.S. 1 . Such decisions demonstrate that we cannot but ascribe content to the catchall provision of 22 (a), "gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever." The importance of that phrase has been too frequently recognized since its first appearance in the Revenue Act of 1913 5 to say now that it adds nothing to the meaning of "gross income."

The key to deciphering what was said here lies in the definition of "source" and in what context it is used. The question is:

Does the word "source" used here by the U.S. Supreme Court mean:

1. The "source" (or taxable activities within specific identified jurisdictions, which is also called the situs for taxation) of income for the government as per 26 U.S.C. §§861 and 862, or…
2. The "source" of income for the subject of the tax, who is the "tax payer"?

BIG DIFFERENCE!

If the Glenshaw case above refers to the tax payer, which we believe it does, then what the court really meant is that if you admit to being a "taxpayer" (meaning a person who mistakenly admits liability for tax) and if you have income, from wherever you get it ("whatever tax payer source derived"), then you have to pay income tax on it, and we would agree with that conclusion! However, that is not the assertion we are making with the 861 argument or the context we are talking about in the context of the word "source"! We are not referring to "sources" of income for the tax payer, but the proper situs of taxation (the lawful and constitutional sources of income) for the excise tax called the income tax assessed by the government, which is completely different, and which the court did not address in the Glenshaw case cited. 26 U.S.C. Sections 861 and 862 do NOT talk about "sources" of income for the tax payer, but "sources" of income (taxation situs) for the government. More IRS and government lies and deception.

Concluding that the Supreme Court in the Glenshaw case was referring to the situs for taxation or sources of income for the government leads to some rather absurd and irrational conclusions. For instance it leads us to conclude that:

1. There is no reason for sections 861 (sources within the United States) and 862 (Sources without the United States) to even exist in the tax code, because the "source" (or situs) of government income doesn't matter and all sources of "income" are liable to taxation. Let's get rid of these two sections then, OK? Why do they appear in the code and under what circumstances are they used, then?

2. That all "sources" of government income from anywhere in the world are taxable, including sources in China (try explaining that to the Chinese!). This would expand the situs for taxation by the U.S. government to everyone in every country anywhere in the world, which is clearly an irrational conclusion.

Therefore, the only rational way to interpret the code is to leave sections 861 and 862 intact and to treat them as applying to all government sources of income (situs for taxation), and to ensure that the table found in section 5.7.6.5 entitled "Determining Taxable Income from U.S. Sources" is applied to every type of income received to determine whether or not the person in receipt of it is liable for tax. That is exactly what 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 does: is it tells Americans how to apply the source rules for government income to every item of gross income he is in receipt of in order to determine whether or not it is taxable and consequently, whether he is a "taxpayer".

5.7.6.11.8 Frivolous Return Penalty Assessed by IRS for those Using the 861 Position[317]

The IRS occasionally blatantly lies to you about your rights, in an attempt to avoid "due process." You ought to be told the truth. The IRS does not want to directly address the 861/"source" issue. They occasionally will try to avoid the issue by threatening to impose a $500 "frivolous return" penalty, supposedly under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6702, on some who use the 861/"source" issue to file claims for refund. The IRS' letter states that the courts, including the Supreme Court, have ruled such a position to be "frivolous." This is an outright lie. (They are using a form letter which has nothing to do with the 861/"issue.") Feel free to ask them for a citation of such a ruling, but don't hold your breath waiting to actually get one.

The letter also states that the penalty must be paid in full, before the matter can be appealed. Again, this is an outright lie. According to the Treasury regulations, appeals consideration applies to questions regarding "[l]iability for additions to the tax, additional amounts, and assessable penalties provided under Chapter 68 of the Code [which includes 26 U.S.C. §6702]" (26 C.F.R. §601.106(a)(1)(ii)(c)). And the Internal Revenue Manual agrees, and shows that Appeals consideration can occur before any payment is made.

> Internal Revenue Manual
> Section 8.11.1.10.1 (02-26-1999)
> Processing IRC 6703 Claims for Refund on IRC 6700, 6701, and 6702 Penalties

> 1.Per IRC 6703, the following procedural rules apply to the penalties under IRC 6700, 6701 and 6702: A. The burden of proof is on the Government...
> 4.IRC 6702 provides a $500 penalty for filing a frivolous return. This penalty is not subject to a reasonable cause/basis provision. However, penalties under IRC 6702 for returns filed after December 31, 1989, may be appealed under the post-assessment penalty appeal program."

> Internal Revenue Manual
> Section 8.11.1.7 (02-26-1999)
> Postassessment Penalty Appeal Procedure
> 1.Except for the penalties listed below [none applicable to 26 U.S.C. §6702], the Post Assessment Penalty Appeal procedure applies to all assessed additions to the tax, additional amounts and penalties (commonly referred to as penalties) imposed by Chapter 68 of the Code [which includes 26 U.S.C. §6702]...
> 3.Assessed penalties may be appealed before or after payment."

As you can also see in the citations above, in a meeting regarding a penalty under 26 U.S.C. §6702, they have the burden of proof (see also 26 U.S.C. §6703). (Since there are no regulations promulgated under 26 U.S.C. §6702, you might also want to ask to see a delegation order allowing them to impose the penalty at all.) It would be interesting (just as one example) to watch them try to prove that it is "frivolous" to use 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 for determining taxable income from sources within the United States, when the Treasury regulations specifically and repeatedly state that you should use 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 "for determining taxable income from sources within the United States" (26 C.F.R. §1.863-1(c)).

Probably the main goal of the IRS is to come up with an excuse to avoid due process altogether, including in-person meetings (which you have the right to record under 26 U.S.C. §7521). They don't want an administrative record showing that they have no substantive rebuttal. However, their manual shows that the return is to be processed regardless of the penalty, so they should not be allowed to get away with ignoring the return, whether they impose the penalty or not. (And this would defeat the whole purpose of their letter, which is to "stonewall" any discussion of the issue.)

> Internal Revenue Manual
> 120.1.10.9 (08-12-1998)
> IRC section 6702
> 1.IRC section 6702 provides for an immediate assessment of a $500 civil penalty against individuals who file frivolous income tax returns or frivolous amended income tax returns... A frivolous return:... Does constitute a valid return when the Service is able to process the return."

For any return, if the Service challenges it, you have a right to an Examination meeting, a meeting with the examiner's supervisor, and if you can't reach an agreement, Appeals consideration (see 26 C.F.R. §§601.105, 601.106).

The IRS has a lot to lose if they address the issue, and not much to lose by making these stupid threats, false accusations, evasions, etc. They are relying on these tactics to scare or intimidate people. Anyone approaching the IRS, expecting them to act like reasonable, honest people, is in for a rude awakening. If they have nothing to lose, they will most likely ignore the law, ignore your rights, and ignore their own published procedures. Basically, the message from the IRS is this:

> "It is frivolous for you to believe that the federal regulations mean what they say. If you ask us to explain what they mean, or ask us to answer any questions, we will accuse you of breaking the law, threaten to punish you, and then we will refuse to discuss the matter ever again. That is how we 'serve' you."

If this isn't exactly what you would call "due process of law," you might want to tell that to your "representative" or the "Taxpayer Advocate" (although you may find that neither of those terms is accurate).

5.7.6.11.9 The income tax is a direct, unapportioned tax on income, not an excise tax, so you still are liable for it

IRS OBJECTION: "The income tax is a direct, unapportioned tax on income, not an excise tax. See United States v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, (10th Cir. 11/27/1990)."

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "First of all, this conclusion is in direct conflict with all the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court related to income taxes. The Supreme Court has consistently ruled that the income tax is an indirect excise tax. See Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895); Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916); Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920), etc. Secondly, let's just fallaciously assume for the sake of argument that the income tax is a direct, unapportioned tax on income. Under such circumstances, it would have to be an ad valorem tax on intangible assets (income or profit received). If it is an ad valorem tax on intangibles, then the income taxed must be beneficially received within the territorial jurisdiction of the 'United States'. The case of Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, 298 U.S. 193 (1936) clearly establishes this requirement:

> "We have held that it is essential to the validity of such a tax, under the due process clause, that the property shall be within the territorial jurisdiction of the taxing state....When we deal with intangible property, such as credits and choses in action generally, we encounter the difficulty that by reason of the absence of physical characteristics they have no situs in the physical sense, but have the situs attributable to them in legal conception. Accordingly we have held that a state may properly apply the rule mobilia sequuntur personam and treat them as localized at the owner's domicile for purposes of taxation. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Minnesota, 280 U.S. 204, 211 , 50 S.Ct. 98, 65 A. L.R. 1000. And having thus determined 'that in general intangibles may be properly taxed at the domicile of their owner,' we have found 'no sufficient reason for saying > that they are not entitled to enjoy an immunity against taxation at more than one place similar to that accorded to tangibles.' Id., 280 U.S. 204 , at page 212, 50 S.Ct. 98, 100, 65 A.L.R. 1000. The principle thus announced in Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Minnesota has had progressive application. Baldwin v. Missouri, 281 U.S. 586 , 50 S.Ct. 436, 72 A.L.R. 1303; Beidler v. South Carolina Tax Commission, 282 U.S. 1 , 51 S.Ct. 54; First National Bank v. Maine, 284 U.S. 312, 328 , 329 S., 52 S.Ct. 174, 177, 77 A.L.R. 1401. But despite the wide application of the principle, an important exception has been recognized."

The territorial jurisdiction of the United States is limited to areas over which the sovereignty (exclusive territorial jurisdiction under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution) of the government of the United States extends, to include the District of Columbia, federal enclaves within the states, and the territorial waters as per 26 C.F.R. §301.7701:

> 26 C.F.R. Sec. 301.7701(b)-1 Resident alien
> (ii) UNITED STATES.
> For purposes of section 7701(b) and the regulations thereunder, the term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes the states and the District of Columbia. It also includes the territorial waters of the United States and the seabed and subsoil of those submarine areas which are adjacent to the territorial waters of the United States and over which the United States has exclusive rights, in accordance with international law, with respect to the exploration and exploitation of natural resources. It does not include the possessions and territories of the United States or the air space over the United States.

IRS Publication 54 for year 2000, entitled Tax Guide for U.S. Citizens and Aliens Abroad (which you can download from our website), further helps to clarify the meaning of the territorial jurisdiction of the United States:

> "A foreign country usually is any territory (including the air space and territorial waters) under the sovereignty of a government other than that of the United States.... The term 'foreign country' does not include Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, or U.S. possessions such as American Samoa."
> [Emphasis added]

Consequently, Americans residing on nonfederal land (outside the federal zone) within the borders of the sovereign states are domiciled in a "foreign country" and outside of the territorial jurisdiction of the United States because they are located on land outside the sovereignty of the United States government. Therefore, they cannot be the proper subject of a federal ad valorem direct property tax.

5.7.6.11.10 "Source" issues only apply to expenses, and not income

This issue came from page 5 of the very revealing deposition of Larken Rose by the IRS which is posted at:

http://www.taxableincome.net/extortion/thugs/transcript.html

This deposition devolved into a debate and Larken really carved them up, and by doing so averted being indicted for 26 U.S.C. §6700 Abusive Tax Shelter criminal charges which were simultaneously levied against three other individuals, including Thurston Bell of Hanover PA, Dave Bossett of FL, and Harold E. Hearn of Atlanta. You can read an article that talks about the indictments at:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/News/11120TXE.PDF

IRS OBJECTION: "The vast majority of the regulations under 861 deal strictly with allocating expenses, deductions and credits, but NOT income. The code sections referenced in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f) are not specifically sources of income, but instead are deductions and allocations."

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "The regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861 and 26 U.S.C. §862 specifically contradict that assertion by saying you must use 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f) to determine taxable income both from sources within the federal United States and from sources without the federal United States. They don't say you only use this regulation to allocate deductions or expenses. The regulations also don't say you only use those sections if you're involved in one of these activities. They say you use those sections, 'for determining taxable income from sources within the United States'. And they say it over and over and over again. You're fishing around in other sections so you can retroactively back into saying 'well you just use it for this and don't look at it otherwise.' Section 861 does deal with allocating expenses, but it is also used for allocating income to specific taxable sources and activities, and the regulations clearly say that. Both expenses and income must be allocated to the same source, either within or without, in order to derive taxable income for that source, and 26 U.S.C. §863 does most of that allocation. Total taxable income equals the taxable income from sources within the federal United States plus taxable income from sources without the federal United States. If you are going to assert that the only thing that 26 U.S.C. §861 does is allocate expenses, then why don t you show me a regulation or statute that says 861 and 862 are only used for allocating expenses, instead of both expenses and income. You won't be able to find one because there isn't one! You're trying to confuse the legal issues because your paycheck relies on people not understanding the law."

5.8 Considerations Involving Government Employment Income

Do you receive a check from City, County, State or Federal Government? Then on that amount the recommendations in this document do apply in most cases but require further explanation. In Article 1, Section 8, Clause 13, of the Constitution of the United States, Congress was delegated the authority "to make Rules for the Government." The truth is that the Internal Revenue Code as well as other U.S. Government Codes are merely special Codes created to regulate the U.S. Government's own employees. IBM has a "Dress Code" that their employees must either adhere to or not work for IBM. In the same manner, the Government has a Code that demands that "public officers", contractors, and instrumentalities either pay what is referred to as an official privilege tax (known as "The Income Tax") or not work for, or contract with, the U.S. Government. Citizens engaged in occupations of common right in the American states of the Union are not required by law to file a 1040 Form or to pay income tax! You have also already learned throughout the preceding sections in this chapter and by examining 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1) that when the government is managing its own employees, it doesn't have to write regulations or publish them in the Federal Register like it does for laws that apply to private citizens. That is why most of the enforcement provisions of the Internal Revenue Code that accomplish liens, levies, assessments, etc do not have implementing regulations.

Following are some definitions of "employee" and "employer" defined at 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) and "employer" at § 3401(d), as follows:

> Employee. For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation.

> a) the term 'employee', includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed of the United States, a State, Territory, Puerto Rico, or any political subdivision thereof, …
> c) Generally, physicians, lawyers, dentists, veterinarians, contractors, public stenographers, auctioneers, and others who follow an independent trade, business, or profession, in which they offer their services to the public, are not employees.

> 26 U.S.C. §3401(d) Employer.
> For purposes of this chapter, the term "employer" means the person for whom an individual performs or performed any service, of whatever nature, as the employee of such person.

Now we throw in the government's definition of "wages" to tie things together. Below is an abbreviated version from 26 U.S.C. §3401(a) and section 5.6.7 earlier:

> "For purposes of this chapter, the term 'wages' means all remuneration (other than fees paid to a public official) for services performed by an employee for his employer…"

This is circular logic designed to deliberately confuse. The term "employee" is defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c) to mean only elected or appointed officials of the U.S. government, but then the above statutes says that all "employees" other than these are the only ones who receives "wages". Technically then, NO ONE receives "wages" as legally defined! But if we look at the ONLY persons who can have their pay levied in 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) in order to pay off a tax debt, we find once again that it is ONLY public officers and federal instrumentalities, which implies that these are the only persons who are really the subject of Subtitle A income taxes!:

> *TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 64 > Subchapter D > PART II > Sec. 6331.
> Sec. 6331. - Levy and distraint
> (a) Authority of Secretary
> If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official, of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.

But why would these people's pay be subject to levy if there is no statute making anyone liable for Subtitle A income taxes? The question confounds us.

Some people might say that the definition of federal "employee" is rather restrictive, as demonstrated in 5 U.S.C. §2105. Take the cite below, for instance, from 26 U.S.C. Chapter 24: "Collection of Income Taxes at the Source" (Federal employment tax withholding):

> Title 5
> 2105. DEFINITIONS
>
> (a) For the purpose of this title, "employee", except as otherwise provided by this section or when specifically modified, means an officer and an individual who is -
> (1) appointed in the civil service by one of the following acting in an official capacity -
> (A) the President;
> (B) a Member or Members of Congress, or the Congress;
> (C) a member of a uniformed service;
> (D) an individual who is an employee under this section;
> (E) the head of a Government controlled corporation; or
> (F) an adjutant general designated by the Secretary concerned under section 709(c) of title 32;
> (2) engaged in the performance of a Federal function under authority of law or an Executive act; and
> (3) subject to the supervision of an individual named by paragraph (1) of this subsection while engaged in the performance of the duties of his position.
> [....skipped a few entries since irrelevant...]
> (d) A Reserve of the armed forces who is not on active duty or who is on active duty for training is deemed not an employee or an individual holding an office of trust or profit or discharging an official function under or in connection with the United States because of his appointment, oath, or status, or any duties or functions performed or pay or allowances received in that capacity.

We have heard people claim that all federal employees meet the definitions above, because they were appointed to federal civil service when they and another government official signed their SF-50 form. They will say that the other government official who signs the SF-50 form was given the authority to sign their form because the power they had was delegated to them through a chain of authority that ultimately derives from the president and/or the U.S. Congress. However, we don't support this view because anyone else who is not elected or appointed by the President, Congress, etc. as above was hired in effect to perform a trade or skill as an occupation of "common right" as we will see shortly. Employees performing an occupation of "common right" do not depend chiefly on the privileges granted to them as an elected or appointed federal employee in order to perform their job. Instead, they are exercising skills they could just as productively employ outside the federal government, probably for greater pay.

The Public Salary Tax Act of 1939, was codified in 4 U.S.C. §111. Below is an excerpt from that law which clearly authorizes taxation of federal employees:

> (a) General Rule. - The United States consents to the taxation of pay or compensation for personal service as an officer or employee of the United States, a territory or possession or political subdivision thereof, the government of the District of Columbia, or an agency or instrumentality of one or more of the foregoing, by a duly constituted taxing authority having jurisdiction, if the taxation does not discriminate against the officer or employee because of the source of the pay or compensation*.*

What they are saying here is that the U.S. will honor whatever state or local taxes are imposed. It is very important in the above cite to remember, however, that last phrase "if the taxation does not discriminate against the officer or employee because of the source of pay or compensation." Why is this important? Because 26 U.S.C. §861 and the underlying regulation found in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 defines the only authorized "sources" of income that may be taxed by the federal government for the purposes of internal revenue, and we believe they are trying to say here that the taxable "sources" of income are unchanged by virtue of being a federal "employee", and that such employees are to be treated no differently than private sector employees for the purposes of the graduated federal income tax.

Each Federal department and agency is responsible for designating a withholding agent, and the General Accounting Office has responsibility for making determinations as to whether or not someone is liable for additional obligations ... see 5 U.S.C. §5512, 26 U.S.C. §7401 & 31 U.S.C. §3702, and attending regulations.

The income tax for federal "employees" does not rely on the definition of "gross income" at I.R.C. § 61 for the purposes of computing the amount of withholding, which is different than the payment or liability for income taxes. Instead, it defines all remuneration received as wages for the purpose of income tax withholding, which is clearly different from the way private employers and employees are treated. However, like private employees, (which incidentally are not "employees" within 26 U.S.C.) the withholding still cannot occur without an IRS Form W-4 being completed and signed by the employee giving the government permission to withhold. Why can they legally withhold on all wages, rather than relying directly on the definition of "gross income" found in I.R.C. section 61? The IRS will tell you that the wages received are a direct result of the "privileges" granted to federal "employees" who we allege are ONLY elected or appointed to office. Note that this does NOT apply to employees who are not elected or appointed directly by the Congress or the President, but instead are practicing a trade profession that is of "common right", which we will explain further later. You will also note that "employees" as defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c) all work in the District of Columbia, which isn't subject to the same tax and withholding rules as the rest of the 50 Union states. This face, incidentally, is why they had to define "employees" the way they did . (Rather twisted, isn't all of this! That's the way lawyers like it because that's where they get their job security from....COMPLEX LAWS!)

The distinction between the Chapter 1 income tax and wages, i.e., two different taxes, or tax sources, is recognized in several court cases, with Commissioner v. Kowalski, 434 U.S. 77 (1977) among them:

> The income tax is imposed on taxable income, 26 U.S.C. §1. Generally, this is gross income minus allowable deductions. 26 U.S.C. §63(a). Section 61(a) defines as gross income "all income from whatever source derived" including, under § 61(a)(1), "[c]ompensation for services." The withholding tax, in some contrast, is confined to wages, § 3402(a), and § 3401(a) defines as "wages," all remuneration (other than fees paid to a public official) for services performed by an employee for his employer, including the cash value of all remuneration paid in any medium other than cash.

The two concepts -- income and wages -- obviously are not necessarily the same. All wages of federal "employees" are reported as income by the United States (the federal zone), but remember that the same source rules (e.g. 26 U.S.C. §861) still apply to federal employees as to private employees as found in the Internal Revenue Code. This means that federal employees can still ask for all the earnings back that they received because it did not derive from a taxable "source".

The Department of the Treasury has been helpful in unraveling the long standing income tax scam. Possibly the greatest treasure posted on the Department of the Treasury Internet network is the Treasury Financial Manual, produced by the Financial Management Service. Volume I, Part 3, Chapter 4000 prescribes the process by which Federal employee taxes are to be collected by the agency, then transferred to IRS:

> Section 4010 - SCOPE AND APPLICABILITY

> This chapter prescribes procedures for (1) withholding and depositing Federal income, social security, and Medicare taxes on wages paid to civilian and military employees; (2) for filing tax returns with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS); and (3) for filing income tax statements with the Social Security Administration (SSA).
> For information beyond the scope of this chapter, refer to IRS Publication 15, Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide, or an IRS office. Circular E describes employer tax responsibilities; explains withholding, depositing, and reporting requirements; and paying taxes. It explains the forms your employees must use and those you must send to the IRS and SSA.
> Withheld Federal taxes will be transferred to the IRS using the FEDTAX application of the Government-On-line Accounting Link System (GOALS). Any Federal agency that has not been established on FEDTAX should contact GOALS Marketing, Financial Management Service (FMS), on FTS 874-8788 or 202-874-8788.
> Withholding of qualified State, county and local taxes, in accordance with 31 C.F.R. § 215, is then prescribed in Volume I, Part 3, Chapter 5000, here in part:
> This chapter provides instructions for withholding State, city, or county income taxes when an agreement has been reached between a State, city, or county and the Secretary of the Treasury. Agreements between the Secretary of the Treasury and States, cities, or counties prescribe how Federal agencies withhold State, city, or county income or employment taxes from the compensation of Federal employees and Armed Forces members. (See 31 C.F.R. 215 at Appendix 1).

All of the above leads to another interesting question, however. If the income tax was an indirect excise tax which can only occur on businesses as a tax on sales relating to foreign commerce, then one might well ask:

> "Why do I get involved at all in paying an income tax or keeping track of liability or payment, if this is supposed to be a tax on my employer and not directly on me? Why do I have to list it in my income tax return at all if it is a tax on my employer and not me? Why isn't the tax invisible to the point where it doesn't affect or reduce my compensation directly at all? Wouldn't it be a 'direct tax' within the meaning of the constitution if it negatively impacted my compensation as a private employer residing in a state of the Union? Likewise, if it is an excise tax on my employer, then why do I the employee need to sign a W-4 to give my permission to withhold or get directly involved at all in authorizing or deduction of the tax from my pay?"

The answer is that the sneaky Congress calls it an indirect excise tax (see Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A on our website) but let's federal employees treat it like a direct tax, so the government doesn't need to increase your compensation to adjust for its impact as the direct tax that it really is. Recall that direct taxes are prohibited by the Constitution, as explained in detail in section 3.10.6 and in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2,Clause 3 of the Constitution. Being a federal employee doesn't change this situation at all, unless the person being paid is an elected or appointed (by the President) public officer, whose job depends primarily on the authority (and the privileges they contract to obtain by becoming a political officer) they get from their elected office to do their job.

Understanding the nature as well as the "source" of the income tax is important. On p. 2580 of the 1943 edition of the Congressional Record-House (March 27), we find the following (which is NOT a law, but is helpful for explanation):

> "The income tax is, therefore, not a tax on income as such. It is an excise tax with respect to certain activities and privileges which is measured by reference to the income which they produce. The income is not the subject of the tax; it is the basis for determining the amount of tax."

The term "income tax" is a general classification heading for excise taxes, all of which fall into the indirect tax category. Even the Federal employee tax is not a tax on the wage, but the wage simply provides a "measure" for the tax. The income tax on government "employees" is a tax on "privileges" attending Federal employment. However, this leads us to question the meaning of "privilege," since we saw from section 3.18.4 in the case of Sims v. Ahrens, 271 S.W. 720 (1925) that:

> "An income tax is neither a property tax nor a tax on occupations of common right, but is an EXCISE tax...The legislature may declare as 'privileged' and tax as such for state revenue, those pursuits not matters of common right, but it has no power to declare as a 'privilege' and tax for revenue purposes, occupations that are of common right."

What does "occupations that are of common right" mean? Our understanding is that it includes any profession you can choose to do or undertake in private industry in any field or trade and which do not depend on the authority granted you as part of a political office. Occupations that are not of common right are things you can only do as an elected or appointed officer or politician working for a government agency by virtue of the rights and privileges and delegated authority granted to you as a consequence of your election or appointment to that political office. That is why the definition of "employee" in 5 U.S.C. §2105 quoted above is so very restrictive: because it has to define "occupations that are not of common right and which depend on the privileges associated with government service alone".

Following is an example of the rambling verbiage of "terms" the Internal Revenue Code drafters created to try to hide the fact that the earnings of private Citizens are not taxable under the law. They could have just as easily summed up the following in one regulation that read, "Only elected or appointed government officials are liable for the graduated income tax imposed in Section 1 of Subtitle A of Title 26".

> "…(2) DETERMINATION OF TAXABLE INCOME. –In determining taxable income…gross income includes ONLY gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a' trade or business,' within the United States."
>
> ---
> 26 U.S.C. §864(b) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.— (b) Trade or business within the United States
> For purposes of this part, part II, and chapter 3, the term "trade or business within the United States" includes the performance of personal services within the United States at any time within the taxable year, but does not include –
> ---
> 26 C.F.R. Sec. 1.469-9 Rules for certain rental real estate activities.
> (b)(4) PERSONAL SERVICES.
>
> Personal services means any work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business. However, personal services do not include any work performed by an individual in the individual's capacity as an investor as described in section 1.469-5T(f)(2)(ii).
> ---
> 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) TRADE OR BUSINESS.—"Includes [only] the performance of functions of a public office."

Following is the definition of Public Office, pursuant to Black's Law Dictionary, Abridged Sixth Edition, means:

> "Essential characteristics of a 'public office' are: (1) authority conferred by law, (2) fixed tenure of office, and (3) power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government; key element of such test is that 'officer is carrying out sovereign function'. Essential elements to establish public position as 'public office' are: Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislation, portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position, duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority, duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and position must have some permanency."

Therefore, to be involved in a "trade or business", as defined for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, an American must hold a public office.

Administration of Internal Revenue Code (I.R.C.) Chapter 24 "employment taxes" , qualified State, county and local taxes, and other Federal personnel obligations (not related to federal income taxes), is under authority of 5 U.S.C. §§5512-5520a, not Subtitle F of the Internal Revenue Code generally. However, these sections only apply to parties who are either subject to State or local income tax or are in arrears to the U.S. Government for overpayment of wages or legal judgments, and DO NOT relate to the collection of income taxes that come under Title 26, the Internal Revenue Code.

To briefly summarize this section:

1. Elected or appointed federal "employees" as defined legally in 5 U.S.C. §2105, are the only ones subject to graduated income tax withholding under the I.R.C. Chapter 24, and the withholding is on all compensation or wages received, regardless of source.
2. All income tax withholding, including that on federal "employees" (meaning elected or appointed officers of the U.S. government) is entirely voluntary and cannot be coerced because of limitations imposed by the Fifth Amendment that require that no person can be deprived of their property without due process of law or just compensation, unless they volunteer to give it away, in which case it is a donation and not a tax.
3. The fact that Subtitle C employment taxes are withheld for federal employees doesn't necessarily make them "liable" to pay income taxes under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. As a matter of fact, Subtitle C employment taxes, as we discussed in section 5.6.8, Subtitle C employment withholding taxes are classified legally as "gifts" to the U.S. government! Federal employees can and should ask for all their employment withholding taxes back at the end of the year just like a private Citizen can, and they can still claim the same 26 U.S.C. §861 "source" issues and other issues in this chapter as their basis just like private citizens and everyone else.
4. The reason the federal withholding tax rules for federal "employees" can be different from private sector employees in the 50 Union states is that all income of these "employees" is incident exclusively on the privileges of the elected political office they hold and are not a matter of "common right" nor are they associated with a commercial trade or profession. (see Sims v. Ahrens 271 S.W. 720 and others for more details).
5. Federal employees have a statutory obligation to pay social security taxes because of the retirement system they fall under. The statutory authority for this requirement comes from 5 U.S.C. §8422. This statute creates a "presumption" that they consent to contribute to the Social Security Program but they can rebut that presumption by providing a written, notarized affidavit to their federal employer. Technically and legally, this should be all the notification needed for federal or other government employers to stop contributing to the Social Security Program. Doing this does not terminate your right to collect benefits based on what you contributed up to that point. As long as you have 10 years or 40 quarters of participation, you qualify for full benefits without contributing further under the SSA program.
6. There are no references anywhere in Title 26 that indicate that the code DOES NOT apply to federal employees.
7. Federal employees can and should ask for all their employment withholding taxes back at the end of the year just like a private Citizen can, and they can still claim the same 26 U.S.C. §861 "source" issues and other issues raised in this chapter as their basis just like private Citizens and everyone else.

5.9 So What Would Have to be Done to the Constitution to Make Direct Income Taxes Legal?

A question that often arises is the question about what it would take to allow Congress to constitutionally impose the tax that the American public believes already exists? Could they not "fix" the law somehow, to make it apply to all Americans?

(One obstacle to this would be accomplishing it without anyone noticing, since an admission of the true purpose of such an endeavor would also be an admission that some in the federal government have already committed several trillion dollars' worth of fraud and extortion. Even if they could impose such a tax in the future, they could not retroactively undo the fraud of the past.)

If the Sixteenth Amendment didn't authorize Congress to directly tax the income of all Americans, what would it take to amend the Constitution to allow it? In short, it could not be done without repealing most of the Constitution. Because such a tax would necessarily constitute a massive regulation of behavior, behavior that is not under federal jurisdiction, the Tenth Amendment would first need to be repealed.

After that, Article I would have to be amended (and in effect, destroyed) by saying that Congress can regulate any behavior it wants within the 50 Union states, as long as it does it through "tax" legislation. To do this would, in the words of the Supreme Court, "break down all constitutional limitation of the powers of Congress and completely wipe out the sovereignty of the states." It would mean the end of the Constitution, the end of the Union, the end of the 50 Union states, and the institution of a centralized police power. It cannot be done.

(Incidentally, for the same reasons, the entire debate over a flat income tax, a national sales tax, or any similar "replacement" for the current tax Code, is entirely pointless, as the limits on Congress' taxing power would limit all of these (and anything similar) to commerce under federal jurisdiction, i.e. international and foreign commerce.)

5.10 Abuse of Legal Ignorance and Presumption: Weapon of tyrants

5.10.1 Application of "innocent until proven guilty" maxim of American Law

A well-known and universal rule of American Jurisprudence throughout the states and federal government that nearly everyone is aware of is the following, elucidated by the Supreme Court:

> The presumption of innocence plays a unique role in criminal proceedings. As Chief Justice Burger explained in his opinion for the Court in Estelle v. Williams, 425 U.S. 501 (1976): [507 U.S. 284]:
>
> > The presumption of innocence, although not articulated in the Constitution, is a basic component of a fair trial under our system of criminal justice. Long ago this Court stated:
> > The principle that there is a presumption of innocence in favor of the accused is the undoubted law, axiomatic and elementary, and its enforcement lies at the foundation of the administration of our criminal law. Coffin v. United States, 156 U.S. 432, 453 (1895).
>
> To implement the presumption, courts must be alert to factors that may undermine the fairness of the factfinding process. In the administration of criminal justice, courts must carefully guard against dilution of the principle that guilt is to be established by probative evidence and beyond a reasonable doubt. In re Winship, 397 U.S. 358, 364 (1970). [425 U.S. 501, 504]
> [Delo v. Lashely, 507 U.S. 272 (1993)]

The implication of this rule to the interpretation of law is that the law must state clearly and unambiguously what conduct is prohibited and what specific conduct is required.

> "The purpose of law cannot be to compel confusion. The reason for this is that the purpose of law is to protect by defining for the person of average intelligence exactly what behavior is required in order to sustain an orderly society free from crime, injury, and duress."
> [Family Guardian Fellowship]

The Supreme Court defined why laws must be written specifically for the audience of ordinary Americans when it stated:

> "whether right or wrong, the premise underlying the constitutional method for determining guilt or innocence in federal courts is that laymen are better than specialists [such as judges and lawyers] to perform this task."
> [United States ex rel. Toth v. Quarles, 350 U.S. 11, 18 (1955)]

The innocent until proven guilty rule is a "rule of presumption". It requires that a jury must presume the Defendant is not guilty until evidence is produced which clearly and unambiguously demonstrates otherwise. Any presumption to the contrary will prejudice the rights of the Defendant and is a violation of due process:

> (1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests: A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In such cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a party's due process and equal protection rights. [Vlandis v. Kline (1973) 412 US 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2235; Cleveland Bed. of Ed. v. LaFleur (1974) 414 US 632, 639-640, 94 S.Ct. 1208, 1215-presumption under Illinois law that unmarried fathers are unfit violates process]
> [Federal Civil Trials and Evidence (2005), Rutter Group, paragraph 8:4993, p. 8K-34]

5.10.2 Role of Law and Presumption in Proving Guilt

Among the types of evidence that may be introduced in a court setting to establish guilt include quoting the enacted law itself. Evidence based upon "law" only becomes admissible when the law cited is "positive law".

> "Positive law. Law actually and specifically enacted or adopted by proper authority for the government of an organized jural society. See also Legislation."*
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1162]

Evidence that is NOT positive law, becomes "prima facie" evidence, which means that it is "presumed" to be evidence unless challenged or rebutted:

> TITLE 1 > CHAPTER 3 > § 204
> § 204. Codes and Supplements as evidence of the laws of United States and District of Columbia; citation of Codes and Supplements
> In all courts, tribunals, and public offices of the United States, at home or abroad, of the District of Columbia, and of each State, Territory, or insular possession of the United States—

> (a) United States Code.— The matter set forth in the edition of the Code of Laws of the United States current at any time shall, together with the then current supplement, if any, establish prima facie the laws of the United States, general and permanent in their nature, in force on the day preceding the commencement of the session following the last session the legislation of which is included: Provided, however, That whenever titles of such Code shall have been enacted into positive law the text thereof shall be legal evidence of the laws therein contained, in all the courts of the United States, the several States, and the Territories and insular possessions of the United States.

The above statute, which is "positive law", establishes what is called a "statutory presumption" that courts are obligated to observe. The statute above creates the notion of "prima facie" evidence. "Prima facie evidence" is defined below:

> "Prima facie evidence. Evidence good and sufficient on its face. Such evidence as, in the judgment of the law, is sufficient to establish a given fact, or the group or chain of facts constituting the party's claim or defense, and which if not rebutted or contradicted, will remain sufficient. Evidence which, if unexplained or uncontradicted, is sufficient to sustain a judgment in favor of the issue which it supports, but which may be contradicted by other evidence. State v. Haremza, 213 Kan. 201, 515 P.2d. 1217, 1222.
> That quantum of evidence that suffices for proof of a particular fact until the fact is contradicted by other evidence; once a trier of fact is faced with conflicting evidence, it must weigh the prima facie evidence with all the other probative evidence presented. Godesky v. Provo City Corp., Utah, 690 P.2d. 541, 547. Evidence which, standing alone and unexplained, would maintain the proposition and warrant the conclusion to support which it is introduced. An inference or presumption of law, affirmative or negative of a fact, in the absence of proof, or until proof can be obtained or produced to overcome the inference. See also Presumptive evidence."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1190]

Black's Law Dictionary defines the term "presumption" as follows:

> "presumption. An inference in favor of a particular fact. A presumption is a rule of law, statutory or judicial, by which finding of a basic fact gives rise to existence of presumed fact, until presumption is rebutted. Van Wart v. Cook, Okl.App., 557 P.2d. 1161, 1163. A legal device which operates in the absence of other proof to require that certain inferences be drawn from the available evidence. Port Terminal & Warehousing Co. v. John S. James Co., D.C.Ga., 92 F.R.D. 100, 106.
>
> A presumption is an assumption of fact that the law requires to be made from another fact or group of facts found or otherwise established in the action. A presumption is not evidence. A presumption is either conclusive or rebuttable. Every rebuttable presumption is either (a) a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence or (b) a presumption affecting the burden of proof. Calif.Evid.Code, §600.
> In all civil actions and proceedings not otherwise provided for by Act of Congress or by the Federal Rules of Evidence, a presumption imposes on the party against whom it is directed the burden of going forward with evidence to rebut or meet the presumption, but does not shift to such party the burden of proof in the sense of the risk of nonpersuasion, which remains throughout the trial upon the party on whom it was originally cast. Federal Evidence Rule 301.
> See also Disputable presumption; inference; Juris et de jure; Presumptive evidence; Prima facie; Raise a presumption."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1185]

A "statutory presumption" is one that occurs in a court of law because it is mandated by a positive law statute. The U.S. Supreme Court has said that "statutory presumptions" which prejudice constitution rights are forbidden:

> "A rebuttable presumption clearly is a rule of evidence which has the effect of shifting the burden of proof, Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Turnipseed, 219 U.S. 35, 43 , 31 S.Ct. 136, 32 L.R.A. (N. S.) 226, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 463; and it is hard to see how a statutory rebuttable presumptions is turned from a rule of evidence into a rule of substantive law as the result of a later statute making it conclusive. In both cases it is a substitute for proof; in the one open to challenge and disproof, and in the other conclusive. However, whether the latter presumption be treated as a rule of evidence or of substantive law, it constitutes an attempt, by legislative fiat, to enact into existence a fact which here does not, and cannot be made to, exist in actuality, and the result is the same, unless we are ready to overrule the Schlesinger Case, as we are not; for that case dealt with a conclusive presumption, and the court held it invalid without regard to the question of its technical characterization. This court has held more than once that a statute creating a presumption which operates to deny a fair opportunity to rebut it violates the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. For example, Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U.S. 219 , 238, et seq., 31 S.Ct. 145; Manley v. Georgia, 279 U.S. 1 , 5-6, 49 S.Ct. 215.
> > 'It is apparent,' this court said in the Bailey Case (219 U.S. 239 , 31 S.Ct. 145, 151) 'that a constitutional prohibition cannot be transgressed indirectly by the creation of a statutory > presumption any more than it can be violated by direct enactment. The power to create presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional restrictions.'

> "If a legislative body is without power to enact as a rule of evidence a statute denying a litigant the right to prove the facts of his case, certainly the power cannot be made to emerge by putting the enactment in the guise of a rule of substantive law."
> [Heiner v. Donnan, 285 U.S. 312 (1932)]

The Internal Revenue Code contains several statutory presumptions. Below is an example:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 76 > Subchapter E > § 7491
> § 7491. Burden of proof
> (a) Burden shifts where taxpayer produces credible evidence
> (1) General rule
>
> If, in any court proceeding, a taxpayer introduces credible evidence with respect to any factual issue relevant to ascertaining the liability of the taxpayer for any tax imposed by subtitle A or B, the Secretary shall have the burden of proof with respect to such issue.
> (2) Limitations
> Paragraph (1) shall apply with respect to an issue only if—
> (A) the taxpayer has complied with the requirements under this title to substantiate any item;
>
> (B) the taxpayer has maintained all records required under this title and has cooperated with reasonable requests by the Secretary for witnesses, information, documents, meetings, and interviews; and
> (C) in the case of a partnership, corporation, or trust, the taxpayer is described in section 7430 (c)(4)(A)(ii).
> Subparagraph (C) shall not apply to any qualified revocable trust (as defined in section 645 (b)(1)) with respect to liability for tax for any taxable year ending after the date of the decedent's death and before the applicable date (as defined in section 645 (b)(2)).
> (3) Coordination
> Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any issue if any other provision of this title provides for a specific burden of proof with respect to such issue.

5.10.3 Statutory Presumptions that Injure Rights are Unconstitutional

A statutory presumption is a presumption which is mandated by a statute. Below is an example of such a presumption:

> 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701(c) INCLUDES AND INCLUDING.
> The terms 'include' and 'including' when used in a definition contained in this title shall not be deemed to exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined."

What Congress is attempting to create in the above is the following false presumption:

> "Any definition which uses the word 'includes' shall be construed to imply not only what is shown in the statute and the code itself, but also what is commonly understood for the term to mean or whatever any government employee deems is necessary to fulfill what he believes is the intent of the code."

We know that the above presumption is unconstitutional and if applied as intended, would violate the Void for Vagueness Doctrine described later in section 5.10.6 and following. It would also violate the rules of statutory construction described earlier in section 3.8 that say:

1. The purpose for defining a word within a statute is so that its ordinary (dictionary) meaning is not implied or assumed by the reader.

2. When a term is defined within a statute, that definition is provided usually to supersede and not enlarge other definitions of the word found elsewhere, such as in other Titles or Codes.

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled many times that statutory presumptions which prejudice or threaten constitutional rights are unconstitutional. Below are a few of its rulings on this subject to make the meaning perfectly clear:

> "Legislation declaring that proof of one fact of group of facts shall constitute prima facie evidence of an ultimate fact in issue is valid if there is a rational connection between what is proved and what is to be inferred. A prima facie presumption casts upon the person against whom it is applied the duty of going forward with his evidence on the particular point to which the presumption relates. A statute creating a presumption that is arbitrary, or that operates to deny a fair opportunity to repel it, violates the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Legislative fiat may not take the place of fact in the judicial determination of issues involving life, liberty, or property. Manley v. Georgia, 279 U.S. 1 , 49 S.Ct. 215, 73 L.Ed. -, and cases cited."
> [Western and Atlantic Railroad v. Henderson, 279 U.S. 639 (1929)]

> "[I]t is unconstitutional for a legislature to remove from the jury the assessment of facts that increase the prescribed range of penalties to which a criminal defendant is exposed. It is equally clear that such facts must be established by proof beyond a reasonable doubt."
> [McMillan v. Pennsylvania, 477 U.S. 79 (1986)]

> It has always been recognized that the guaranty of trial by jury in criminal cases means that the jury is to be the factfinder. This is the only way in which a jury can perform its basic constitutional function of determining the guilt or innocence of a defendant. See, e. g., United States ex rel. Toth v. Quarles, 350 U.S. 11, 15 -19; Reid v. Covert, 354 U.S. 1, 5 -10 (opinion announcing judgment). And of course this constitutionally established power of a jury to determine guilt or innocence of a defendant charged with crime cannot be taken away by Congress, directly or indirectly, in whole or in part. Obviously, a necessary part of this power, vested by the Constitution in juries (or in judges when juries are waived), is the exclusive right to decide whether evidence presented at trial is sufficient to convict. I think it flaunts the constitutional power of courts and juries for Congress to tell them what "shall be deemed sufficient evidence to authorize conviction." And if Congress could not thus directly encroach upon the judge's or jury's exclusive right to declare what evidence is sufficient to prove the facts necessary for conviction, it should not be allowed to do so merely by labeling its encroachment a "presumption." Neither Tot v. United States, 319 U.S. 463 , relied [380 U.S. 63, 78] on by the Court as supporting this presumption, nor any case cited in Tot approved such an encroachment on the power of judges or juries. In fact, so far as I can tell, the problem of whether Congress can so restrict the power of court and jury in a criminal case in a federal court has never been squarely presented to or considered by this Court, perhaps because challenges to presumptions have arisen in many crucially different contexts but nevertheless have generally failed to distinguish between presumptions used in different ways, treating them as if they are either all valid or all invalid, regardless of the rights on which their use may impinge. Because the Court also fails to differentiate among the different circumstances in which presumptions may be utilized and the different consequences which will follow, I feel it necessary to say a few words on that subject before considering specifically the validity of the use of these presumptions in the light of the circumstances and consequences of their use.
> In its simplest form a presumption is an inference permitted or required by law of the existence of one fact, which is unknown or which cannot be proved, from another fact which has been proved. The fact presumed may be based on a very strong probability, a weak supposition or an arbitrary assumption. The burden on the party seeking to prove the fact may be slight, as in a civil suit, or very heavy - proof beyond a reasonable doubt - as in a criminal prosecution. This points up the fact that statutes creating presumptions cannot be treated as fungible, that is, as interchangeable for all uses and all purposes. The validity of each presumption must be determined in the light of the particular consequences that flow from its use. When matters of trifling moment are involved, presumptions may be more freely accepted, but when consequences of vital importance to litigants and to the administration of justice are at stake, a more careful scrutiny is necessary. [380 U.S. 63, 79]
> In judging the constitutionality of legislatively created presumptions this Court has evolved an initial criterion which applies alike to all kinds of presumptions: that before a presumption may be relied on, there must be a rational connection between the facts inferred and the facts which have been proved by competent evidence, that is, the facts proved must be evidence which is relevant, tending to prove (though not necessarily conclusively) the existence of the fact presumed. And courts have undoubtedly shown an inclination to be less strict about the logical strength of presumptive inferences they will permit in civil cases than about those which affect the trial of crimes. The stricter scrutiny in the latter situation follows from the fact that the burden of proof in a civil lawsuit is ordinarily merely a preponderance of the evidence, while in a criminal case where a man's life, liberty, or property is at stake, the prosecution must prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. See Morrison v. California, 291 U.S. 82, 96 -97. The case of Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U.S. 219 , is a good illustration of this principle. There Bailey was accused of violating an Alabama statute which made it a crime to fail to > perform personal services after obtaining money by contracting to perform them, with an intent to defraud the employer. The statute also provided that refusal or failure to perform the services, or to refund money paid for them, without just cause, constituted "prima facie evidence" (i. e., gave rise to a presumption) of the intent to injure or defraud. This Court, after calling attention to prior cases dealing with the requirement of rationality, passed over the test of rationality and held the statute invalid on another ground. Looking beyond the rational-relationship doctrine the Court held that the use of this presumption by Alabama against a man accused of crime would amount to a violation of the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution, which forbids "involuntary [380 U.S. 63, 80] servitude, except as a punishment for crime." In so deciding the Court made it crystal clear that rationality is only the first hurdle which a legislatively created presumption must clear - that a presumption, even if rational, cannot be used to convict a man of crime if the effect of using the presumption is to deprive the accused of a constitutional right.

> [United States v. Gainly, 380 U.S. 63 (1965)]

The reason a statutory presumption that injures rights is unconstitutional was also revealed in the Federalist Papers, which say on the subject:

> "No legislative act [including a statutory presumption] contrary to the Constitution can be valid. To deny this would be to affirm that the deputy (agent) is greater than his principal; that the servant is above the master; that the representatives of the people are superior to the people; that men, acting by virtue of powers may do not only what their powers do not authorize, but what they forbid…[text omitted] It is not otherwise to be supposed that the Constitution could intend to enable the representatives of the people to substitute their will to that of their constituents. It is far more rational to suppose, that the courts were designed to be an intermediate body between the people and the legislature, in order, among other things, to keep the latter within the limits assigned to their authority. The interpretation of the laws is the proper and peculiar province of the courts. A Constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by judges, as fundamental law. If there should happen to be an irreconcilable variance between the two, the Constitution is to be preferred to the statute."
> [Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper # 78]

The implication of the prohibition against statutory presumptions is that:

1. No human being who is domiciled within a state of the Union and protected by the Bill of Rights may be victimized or injured in any way by any kind of statutory presumption.
2. Statutory presumptions may only be applied against legal "persons" who do not have Constitutional rights, which means corporations or those who are domiciled in the federal zone, meaning on land within exclusive federal jurisdiction that is not protected by the First Ten Amendments to the United States Constitution. See Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901).
3. Any court which uses "judge made law" to do any of the following in the case of a natural person protected by the Bill of Rights is involved in a conspiracy against rights:
   3.1. Imposes a statutory presumption.
   3.2. Extends or enlarges any definition in the Internal Revenue Code based on any arbitrary criteria.
   3.3. Invokes an interpretation of a definition within a code which may not be deduced directly from language in the code itself.

The above inferences help establish who the only proper audience for the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is, which is federal corporations, payments from the federal government, and those domiciled within the federal zone but not within states of the Union. The reason is that those domiciled in the federal zone are not protected by the Bill of Rights. The only exception to this rule is that any natural person who is domiciled in a state of the Union but who is exercising agency of a federal corporation or legal "person" which has a domicile within the federal zone also may become the lawful subject of statutory presumptions, but only in the context of the agency he is exercising. For instance, we demonstrate in the following:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/SSTrustIndenture.pdf

. . .that those participating in the Social Security program are deemed to be "agents", "employees", and "fiduciaries" of the federal corporation called the United States, which has a "domicile" in the federal zone (District of Columbia) under 4 U.S.C. §72. Therefore, unless and until they eliminate said agency using the above document, statutory presumptions may be used against them without an unconstitutional result, but only in the context of the agency they are exercising.

5.10.4 Purpose of Due Process: To completely remove "presumption" from legal proceedings

All presumption which prejudices a right guaranteed by the Constitution represents a violation of Constitutional Due Process. The only exception to this rule is if the Defendant is not covered by the Constitution because:

1. Domiciled in areas not covered by the Bill of Rights, such as federal territories, possessions, and the federal areas within the states. These areas are called the "federal zone" in this book.
2. Exercising agency of a corporation that is domiciled in the federal zone.

The above is also confirmed by reading Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) , which says that the law to be applied in a civil case must derive either from the law of the parties' domicile or from the domicile of the corporation they are acting as an agent for.

According to the Bible, "presumption" also happens to be a Biblical sin in violation of God's law as well, which should result in the banishment of a person from his society:

> "'But the person who does anything presumptuously, whether he is native-born or a stranger, that one brings reproach on the LORD, and he shall be cut off from among his people."
> [Numbers 15:30, Bible, NKJV]

> "Keep back Your servant also from presumptuous sins; Let them not have dominion over me. Then I shall be blameless, And I shall be innocent of great transgression."
> [Psalm 19:13, Bible, NKJV]

> "Now the man who acts presumptuously and will not heed the priest who stands to minister there before the LORD your God, or the judge, that man shall die. So you shall put away the evil from Israel. 13 And all the people shall hear and fear, and no longer act presumptuously."
> [Deut. 17:12-13, Bible, NKJV]

We have therefore established that "presumption" is something we should try very hard to avoid, because it is a violation of both man's law AND God's law. As a matter of fact, a whole book has been written about how "presumption" is systematically promoted and exploited by your public servants to destroy the separation of powers and unlawfully enlarge federal jurisdiction:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The chief purpose of Constitutional "due process" is therefore to completely remove bias and the presumption that produces it from every legal proceeding in a court of law. This is done by:

1. Preventing the application of any "statutory presumptions" that might prejudice the rights of the Defendant.
2. Insisting that every conclusion is based on physical and non-presumptive (not "prima facie") evidence.
3. To apply the same rules of evidence equally against both parties.
4. Choosing jurists who are free from bias or prejudice during the voir dire (jury selection) process.
5. Choosing judges who are free from bias or prejudice during the voir dire process.
6. Counsel on both sides ensuring that all presumptions made by the opposing party are challenged in a timely manner at all phases of the litigation.

You can tell when presumptions are being prejudicially used in a legal proceeding in federal court, for instance, when:

1. The judge or either party uses any of the following phrases:
   1.1. "Everyone knows. . ."
   1.2. "You knew or should have known…"
   1.3. "A reasonable [presumptuous] person would have concluded otherwise…"
2. The judge does not exclude the I.R.C. from evidence in the case involving a person who:
   2.1. Is not domiciled in the federal zone.
   2.2. Has no employment, contracts, or agency with the federal government.
   2.3. Who has provided evidence of the same above.

3. The judge allows the Prosecutor to throw accusations at the Defendant in front of the jury without insisting on evidence to back it up.
4. The judge admits into evidence or cites a statutory presumption that prejudices your rights.

> "It is apparent,' this court said in the Bailey Case (219 U.S. 239 , 31 S.Ct. 145, 151) 'that a constitutional prohibition cannot be transgressed indirectly by the creation of a statutory presumption any more than it can be violated by direct enactment. The power to create presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional restrictions."
> [Heiner v. Donnan, 285 U.S. 312 (1932); Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U.S. 219 , 238, et seq., 31 S.Ct. 145; Manley v. Georgia, 279 U.S. 1 , 5-6, 49 S.Ct. 215.]

5. A judge challenges your choice of domicile and/or citizenship. In such a case, the court is illegally involving itself in what actually are strictly political matters and what is called "political questions". One's choice of domicile is a political matter that may not be coerced or presumed to be anything other than what the subject himself has clearly and unambiguously stated, both orally and on government forms. See our free memorandum of law below:

Political Jurisdiction, Form #05.004 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Unscrupulous government prosecutors will frequently make use of false presumption as their chief means of winning a tax case as follows:

1. They will choose a jury that is misinformed or under-informed about the law and legal process. This makes them into sheep who will follow anyone.
2. They will use the ignorance and prejudices and the presumptions of the jury as a weapon to manipulate them into becoming an angry "lynch mob" with a vendetta against the Defendant. This was the same thing that they did to Jesus. See the Section 5.4.3.5 entitled "Modern Tax Trials are religious 'inquisitions' and not valid legal processes" available at: http://famguardian.org/Publications/GreatIRSHoax/GreatIRSHoax.htm.
3. They will make frequent use of "words of art" to deceive the jury into making false presumptions that will prejudice the rights of the defendant.

> "The power to create presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional restrictions,"
> [New York Times v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254 (1964)]

Most of these Some of these "words of art" are identified in the sections 3.9.1 through 3.9.1.27 of this book.

4. They will:
   4.1. Avoid defining the words they are using.
   4.2. Prevent evidence of the meaning of the words they are using from entering the court record or the deliberations. Federal judges will help them with this process by insisting that "law" may not be discussed in the courtroom.

A good judge will ensure that the above prejudice does not happen, because it is primary duty to defend and protect the Constitutional rights of the parties. He must especially do so where the matter involves taxation and where there is no jury or where anyone in the jury is either a "taxpayer" or a recipient of government benefits. He will do so in order to avoid violation of 18 U.S.C. §597, which forbids bribing of voters, since jurists are a type of voter. However, in practice we have observed that there are not have many good judges who will be this honorable in the context of a tax trial because their pay and retirement, they think, depends on a vigorous illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code in violation of 28 U.S.C. §455.

> TITLE 28 > PART I > CHAPTER 21 > § 455
> § 455. Disqualification of justice, judge, or magistrate judge
> (a) Any justice, judge, or magistrate judge of the United States shall disqualify himself in any proceeding in which his impartiality might reasonably be questioned.
> (b) He shall also disqualify himself in the following circumstances:
> [. . .]
> (4) He knows that he, individually or as a fiduciary, or his spouse or minor child residing in his household, has a financial interest in the subject matter in controversy or in a party to the proceeding, or any other interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding;

Most of the injustice that occurs in federal courtrooms across the country relating to income taxation occurs primarily because the above statute is violated. This statute wasn't always violated. It was only in the 1930's that federal judges became "taxpayers". Before that, they were completely independent, which is why most people were not "taxpayers" before that. For details on this corruption of our judiciary, see sections 6.5.15, 6.5.18, 6.8.2 through 6.9.12:

http://famguardian.org/Publications/GreatIRSHoax/GreatIRSHoax.htm

The U.S. Supreme Court has declared that judges must be alert to prevent such unconstitutional encroachments upon the sacred Constitutional Rights of those domiciled in the states of the Union, when it gave the following warning, which has gone largely unheeded by federal circuit and district courts since then:

> "It may be that it…is the obnoxious thing in its mildest and least repulsive form; but illegitimate and unconstitutional practices get their first footing in that way; namely, by silent approaches and slight deviations from legal modes of procedure. This can only be obviated by adhering to the rule that constitutional provisions for the security of person and property should be liberally construed. A close and literal construction deprives them of half their efficacy, and leads to gradual depreciation of the right, as if it consisted more in sound than in substance. It is the duty of the courts to be watchful for the constitutional rights of the citizens, and against any stealthy encroachments thereon. Their motto should be obsta prinicpalis," [Mr. Justice Brewer, dissenting, quoting Mr. Justice Bradley in Boyd v. United States, 116 U.S. 616, 29 L.Ed. 746, 6 Sup.Ct.Rep. 524]
> [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906)]

If you would like to read more authorities on the subject of "presumption", see:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/presumption.htm

Another very important point needs to be made about the subject of "presumption", which is that "presumption", when it is left to operate unchecked in a federal court proceeding:

1. Has all the attributes of religious "faith". Religious faith is simply a belief in anything that can't be demonstrated with physical evidence absent presumption.
2. Turns the courtroom into a federal "church", and the judge into a "priest".
3. Produces a "political religion" when exercised in the courtroom.
4. Corrupts the court and makes it essentially into a political, and not a legal tribunal.
5. Violates the separation of powers doctrine, which was put in place to protect our rights from such encroachments.

If you would like to investigate the fascinating matter further of how the abuse of presumption in federal courtrooms has the effect of creating a state-sponsored religion in violation of the First Amendment Establishment Clause, please consult sections 5.4 through 5.4.6.6 earlier.

5.10.5 Application of "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius" rule

> "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

The above important rule establishes that what is not enumerated in law can safely be ignored. The Supreme court has said about the above rule:

1. That it is a rule of statutory construction and interpretation, and not a substantive law. See U.S. v. Barnes, 222 U.S. 513 (1912).
2. That the rule can never override clear and contrary evidences of Congressional intent. See Neuberger v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 311 U.S. 83 (1940).
3. A few exceptions to the Exclusio Rule were made in the following cases:
   3.1. Springer v. Government of the Philippine Islands, 277 U.S. 189 (1928)
   3.2. U.S. v. Barnes, 222 U.S. 513 (1912)

3.3. Neuberger v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 311 U.S. 83 (1940)

5.10.6 Scams with the Word "includes"

One very frequently used trick the IRS likes to pull on uninformed Americans is to abuse the word "includes" to confuse people and illegally expand their jurisdiction. They will attempt to do this using essentially statutory presumptions, which we showed earlier were unconstitutional. Their false argument is based on the definition of "includes" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(c):

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
> (c) Includes and including
> The terms "includes" and "including" when used in a definition contained in this title shall not be deemed to exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined.

They will point to this definition, and then say that any word whose definition uses this word essentially isn't bounded or defined by that definition and can be arbitrarily expanded to include other things not listed. They will then try to apply this false concept to the several places that "includes" is used in the Internal Revenue Code, most importantly in the definitions of the following words:

- "State" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110
- "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9)
- "employee" found in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) and 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c) Employee
- "person" found in 26 C.F.R. §301.6671-1 (which governs who is liable for penalties under Internal Revenue Code)

If you are using the Non-Resident Non-Person Position, they will point to the definition of the term "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and say that it can mean anyplace in the country, because the definition uses the word "includes" and therefore can be "expansive" and apply anywhere. Ridiculous nonsense! You must first realize that this flagrant abuse of our language and of the meaning of the word "includes" is part of an obfuscation approach designed by Congress and the IRS to illegally expand the jurisdiction of the federal government to assess I.R.C., Subtitle A income taxes beyond their clear constitutional limits and beyond federal property or territories and into the 50 sovereign states. It violates common sense, and every other use of the word "includes" in the English language we ever learned throughout our lifetime. It also violates the government's own definition of the word "includes" published in the Federal Register, :

> Treasury Decision 3980, Vol. 29, January-December, 1927, pgs. 64 and 65 defines the words includes and including as:
> "(1) To comprise, comprehend, or embrace…(2) To enclose within; contain; confine…But granting that the word 'including' is a term of enlargement, it is clear that it only performs that office by introducing the specific elements constituting the enlargement. It thus, and thus only, enlarges the otherwise more limited, preceding general language…The word 'including' is obviously used in the sense of its synonyms, comprising; comprehending; embracing."

The IRS definition of the word includes also violates several court rulings. Below is just one example:

> "Includes is a word of limitation. Where a general term in Statute is followed by the word, 'including' the primary import of the specific words following the quoted words is to indicate restriction rather than enlargement.
> Powers ex re. Covon v. Charron R.I., 135 A. 2nd 829, 832"*
> [Definitions-Words and Phrases pages 156-156, Words and Phrases under 'limitations'.]

As you may know, Black's Law Dictionary is the Bible of legal definitions. Let's see what it says about the definition of "includes" from the Sixth Edition on p. 763:

> "Include. (Lat. Inclaudere, to shut in. keep within.) To confine within, hold as an inclosure. Take in, attain, shut up, contain, inclose, comprise, comprehend, embrace, involve. Term may, according to context, express an enlargement and have the meaning of and or in addition to, or merely specify a particular thing already included within general words theretofore used. "Including" within statute is interpreted as a word of enlargement or of illustrative application as well as a word of limitation. Premier Products Co. v. Cameron, 240 Or. 123, 400 P.2d. 227, 228."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 763]

In other words, according to Black's, when the word "include" is used, it expands to take in all of the items stipulated or listed, but is then limited to them.

Abuses of the word includes by the Congress and the IRS is a clear assault on our liberty, as it undermines our very language and our means of comprehending precisely and exclusively not only what the law requires of us, but what it doesn't require. Here is what Confucius said about this kind of conspiracy:

> "When words lose their meaning, people will lose their liberty."
> [Confucius, 500 B.C.]

Such an approach also amounts to a clear violation of due process under the Fourth and Sixth Amendment , in that it causes the law to not specifically define what is or is not required of the citizen:

> "A statute which either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men and women of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, violates the first essential of due process of law."
> *[*Connally v. General Construction Co., 269 U.S. 385 (1926)]

The above finding gives rise to a doctrine known as the "void for vagueness doctrine", that was advocated by the U.S. supreme Court. This doctrine is deeply rooted in our right to due process (under the Fifth Amendment) and our right to know the nature and cause of any criminal accusation (under the Sixth Amendment). The latter right goes far beyond the contents of any criminal indictment. The right to know the nature and cause of any accusation starts with the statute which a defendant is accused of violating. A statute must be sufficiently specific and unambiguous in all its terms, in order to define and give adequate notice of the kind of conduct which it forbids.

> The essential purpose of the "void for vagueness doctrine" with respect to interpretation of a criminal statute, is to warn individuals of the criminal consequences of their conduct. ... Criminal statutes which fail to give due notice that an act has been made criminal before it is done are unconstitutional deprivations of due process of law.*
> *[*U.S. v. De Cadena, 105 F.Supp. 202, 204 (1952), emphasis added]

If it fails to indicate with reasonable certainty just what conduct the legislature prohibits, a statute is necessarily void for uncertainty, or "void for vagueness" as the doctrine is called. In the De Cadena case, the U.S. District Court listed a number of excellent authorities for the origin of this doctrine (see Lanzetta v. New Jersey, 306 U.S. 451) and for the development of the doctrine (see Screws v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, Williams v. United States, 341 U.S. 97, and Jordan v. De George, 341 U.S. 223). Any prosecution which is based upon a vague statute or a vague (or expansive) definition must fail, together with the statute itself. A vague criminal statute is unconstitutional for violating the 5th and 6th Amendments.

IMPORTANT: We should remember that without the Bill of Rights (including the 4th, 5th, and 6th Amendments), our federal government can define "includes" any way they want because absent a Bill of Rights, the Void for Vagueness Doctrine is irrelevant and inapplicable! As we clarified earlier, the Bill of Rights do not apply inside the federal zone as per Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) and so the expansive use of "includes" is lawful there! That is why we must never claim to be "U.S. persons" or "U.S. citizens" who reside inside the federal zone: because then the Internal Revenue Code really can mean whatever the judge says it means, and this is especially true in an Article 1 court! See section 4.5.5.9 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 for further details on the distinction between an Article 1 and Article III court. Note that the U.S. Tax Court is an Article I legislative court that can only address matters affecting citizens and residents of the federal zone. You're playing with fire and a hazard to yourself if you litigate in this court and claim to be a "U.S. citizen"! They will ALWAYS presume incorrectly and in their own self-interest that you mean a STATUTORY citizen and not a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen.

The abuse of the word "includes" or its expansive use also violates the rules of statutory construction, which are founded on the Fourth Amendment right of due process of law:

> "Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
> [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

> This fact only underscores our duty to refrain from reading a phrase into the statute when Congress has left it out. " '[W]here Congress includes particular language in one section of a statute but omits it in another ..., it is generally presumed that Congress acts intentionally and purposely in the disparate inclusion or exclusion*.' "*
> Russello v. United States, 464 U.S. 16, 23, 78 L.Ed.2d. 17, 104 S.Ct. 296 (1983) (citation omitted).
> [Keene Corp. v. United States, 508 U.S. 200, 124 L.Ed.2d. 118, 113 S.Ct. 1993. (emphasis added)]

Here are two particularly pertinent rules of statutory construction that confirm the restrictive use of the word "includes" advocated throughout this book:

> "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

> "Ejusdem generis. Of the same kind, class, or nature. In the construction of laws, wills, and other instruments, the "ejusdem generis rule" is, that where general words follow an enumeration of persons or things, by words of a particular and specific meaning, such general words are not to be construed in their widest extent, but are to be held as applying only to persons or things of the same general kind or class as those specifically mentioned. U.S. v. LaBrecque, D.C. N.J., 419 F.Supp. 430, 432. The rule, however, does not necessarily require that the general provision be limited in its scope to the identical things specifically named. Nor does it apply when the context manifests a contrary intention.
> Under "ejusdem generis" cannon of statutory construction, where general words follow the enumeration of particular classes of things, the general words will be construed as applying only to things of the same general class as those enumerated. Campbell v. Board of Dental Examiners, 53 Cal.App.3d. 283, 125 Cal.Rptr. 694, 696."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 517]

So when the word "includes" is used, then anything not specified is presumed excluded by the first rule of statutory construction above "Expressio Unius est exclusio alterius". The second rule of statutory construction above says that when the word "includes" introduces a list of items, then the list must be presumed to be of the same kind or class. For instance, the definition of "United States" found in Title 8 of the U.S. Code says:

> 8 U.S.C. Sec. 1101(a)(36): State [Aliens and Nationality]
> The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.

The above list of items introduced with the word "includes" in Title 8 of the U.S. Code are federal States or territories, and so this is the "general class" that they all fall into. This definition of "State" is the basis for determining whether a person is born in the "United States" for the purposes of citizenship, as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) and 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f).

If the act doesn't specifically identify what is forbidden or "included" and we have to rely not on the law, but some judge or lawyer or politician or a guess to describe what is "included", then our due process has been violated and our government has thereby instantly been transformed from a government of laws into a government of men. And in this case, it only took the abuse of one word in the English language to do so!

> The concept of "due process of law" as it is embodied in Fifth Amendment demands that a law shall not be unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious and that the means selected shall have a reasonable and substantial relation to the object being sought.
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 500, under the definition of "due process of law"]

If the word "includes" can be lawlessly abused to mean other things not specifically identified or at least classified in the statute, then the whole of the Internal Revenue Code essentially defines NOTHING, because it all hinges on jurisdiction, and 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9), which establishes jurisdiction uses the word "includes". How can the code define ANYTHING that uses the word "includes", based on the definition of "definition" found below?:

> definition: A description of a thing by its properties; an explanation of the meaning of a word or term.* The process of stating the exact meaning of a word by means of other words. Such a description of the thing > defined, including all essential elements and excluding all nonessential, as to distinguish it from all other things and classes."

> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 423]

Is the word "United States" defined exactly, if "includes" can mean that you can add whatever you arbitrarily want to be "included" in the definition?

> United States
> The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of Columbia.

This clear and flagrant disregard for due process of law strikes at the heart of our liberty and freedom and we ought to boycott the income tax based on this clever ruse by the shysters in Congress and the IRS who invented it. If the word "includes" is used in its expansive sense, we have, in effect, subjected ourselves to the arbitrary whims of however the currently elected politician or judge wants to describe what is "included". That leads to massive chaos, injustice, and unconstitutional behavior by our courts and our elected representatives, which is exactly what we have today. To put it bluntly, such deceptive actions are treasonable. The abuse also promotes unnecessary litigation over the meaning of the tax code, to the benefit of lawyers, lawmakers, and the American Bar Association, which is a clear conflict of interest. See section 3.20.1 for details on how the legal profession has exploited this uncertainty to their advantage in maximizing litigation. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court says about the confusion created by the expansive abuse of the word "includes":

> "In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes, it is THE ESTABLISHED RULE NOT TO EXTEND their provisions, by implication, BEYOND THE CLEAR IMPORT OF THE LANGUAGE USED, OR TO ENLARGE their operations SO AS TO EMBRACE MATTERS NOT SPECIFICALLY POINTED OUT".
> [Gould v. Gould, 245 U.S.151 (1917)]

If this ridiculous and abusive interpretation of the word "includes" by the IRS is allowed to stand by the courts and this assault on our liberty by Congress is allowed to continue, then below is the essence of what the government has done to us, represented as a satirical press release by the U.S. supreme Court:

> NEW RULES FOR LAW
> SMUCKWAP NEWSSERVICE, Washington: The Supreme Court ruled today that judges can do whatever the hell they want. In a landmark case, Black-Robed Lawyers vs. Everyone Else, the justices handed down their inestimable judgment that since lawyers in general and judges in particular are such fine examples of humanity, not to mention smart enough to get through law school, judges can do whatever they please.
>
> "The Rule of Law has ended," proclaimed Supreme Court Justice Arrogant B. Astard, "and the Rule of Judges begins!"
> Turning their shiny black backs on the rest of America, the justices decided to toss out two hundred years of Constitutional law and indeed, to rid themselves completely of having to heed the Constitution.
> "The law is what we say it is," said Justice Whiney I. Diot. "It has been this way for some time now, but with Black-Robed Lawyers vs. Everyone Else, we are coming out of our judicial closet. No more arguments will be allowed from anyone, and we don't want to hear any more of your complaining about your rights. In fact, any mention of so-called rights will guarantee you 100 years, hard labor."
> Justice K. Rupt Assin concurred in his opinion that "judicial oligarchy has now fully come into its place in American history and will be fully enforced by an iron rule of law, and remember, law is whatever we say it is."
> The Center for People Who Want to Leave This Country Because It Is Beginning to Look Too Much Like Nazi Germany analyzed the justices' decision.
> "Judges now legally can put anyone in prison for any reason they want, for as long as they want," states the analysis. "Judges can also put jurors in prison for 'obstructing justice' and for anything else, including not handing the judge whatever money they may have on them at the time. Jurors who don't behave exactly as the judge desired have been persecuted in the past, but "now they can receive prison terms much longer than their own lifespan added to the lifespan(s) of the defendant(s) in any trial.

> The report also mentioned the justices' decision that anyone who says anything disagreeable in their courtroom can be immediately arrested and jailed, their property confiscated, and their spouses and children taken as "wards" of the court under the justices own personal pleasure ... or... supervision.
> The concept of separation of powers was addressed in the Center's report on the decision.
> "There is no separation of powers," it reads, "when not only all the justices are lawyers, so are all Congressmen and the President, his wife, his cabinet, the entire Department of Justice, most lobbyists and almost everyone else in Washington, D.C."
> *When questioned about what effect the decision would have on all Americans, the spokesman for the Center said, "I can't be certain. I suspect that emigration rather than immigration will become a major concern. Those Americans who are lawyers will be fine, for the most part. No one will ever again show up for jury duty. But if we thought we had an overcrowded prison problem before, we're in for a major shock!"*

If you would like a more detailed treatment of why the word "includes" is used as a word of limitation within the Internal Revenue Code, we have prepared a pamphlet on the subject specifically for this purpose with an exhaustive analysis of several of the subjects covered in the last few sections:

Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5.10.7 Guilty Until Proven Innocent: False Presumptions of Liability Based on Treacherous Definitions[318]

We described earlier in section 5.3.1 the definition of the term "taxpayer" and the monumentally important distinction between the word "taxpayer" and other words like "nontaxpayer" and "Citizen". Recall from that section that a "taxpayer" is someone who is "liable for" or "subject to" an imputed Internal Revenue tax and that the IRS calls everyone "taxpayers", even though in most cases they are committing fraud in doing so. Many Americans have been systematically misinformed about the proper application of the Internal Revenue Code by their government and a corrupted legal and tax preparation profession to such an extent that they falsely believe or "presume" they are "taxpayers". This brainwashing usually occurs because of a naïve reading of the Internal Revenue Service's deceptive at best and downright fraudulent at worst publications, which consistently use the term "taxpayer" to describe everyone. To further bias this presumption in the government's favor, our deceitful government even created another name for your Social Security Number, by calling it a "Taxpayer Identification Number" and requiring you to use it on every return under 26 U.S.C. §6109, but only if you are required to file, and there is no such requirement under Subtitle A because there is no liability statute. We also know that the courts do not have the power to turn a "nontaxpayer" into a "taxpayer" because only you, as the sovereign, can do that to yourself voluntarily:

> "And by statutory definition the term 'taxpayer' includes any person, trust or estate subject to a tax imposed by the revenue act… Since the statutory definition of 'taxpayer' is exclusive, the federal courts do not have the power to create nonstatutory taxpayers for the purpose of applying the provisions of the Revenue Act."
> [C.I.R. v. Trustees of L. Inv. Ass'n., 100 F.2d. 18 (1939)]

When an IRS bureaucrat is then asked about whether most Americans are "liable" to pay the tax, they will stack the deck in their favor with their answer by saying such things as:

> "A taxpayer has never won on that in court."

and they literally won't be telling a lie on that because a "taxpayer" is someone who is "liable" or has made himself or herself "liable" by volunteering. We have a scene from an evening news clip in the "How to Keep 100% of Your Earnings Video" online on our website (http://famguardian.org/Media/movie.htm) where an IRS representative does exactly that on the evening news in response to a question about liability. What no IRS employee will tell you is that NO ONE in the context of the Subtitle A personal income tax is "liable" or is a "taxpayer" unless they volunteer because their boss would probably fire them for telling the truth! The disastrously false presumption that you are a "taxpayer" gets you into all kinds of due process traps and Constitutional rights violations with the IRS that are very difficult to get out of without a much clearer understanding of the law and the facts than most people have:

[318] Adapted from a paper by the Institute for Policy Innovation, Policy Report #165 entitled A Monument of Deficient Wisdom: The Constitutional Conflict in Federal Income Tax Law Enforcement.

> "The significant problems we face cannot be solved at the same level of thinking we were at when we created them."
> [Albert Einstein]

This section examines one such due process violation arising out of this mistaken presumption that we are all "taxpayers" by examining the issue of burden of proof. If we falsely presume we are "taxpayers", then statutory and case law clearly establishes that the burden of proof falls squarely on us as the alleged "taxpayer" to prove our lack of liability. This is exactly the bargaining position our covetous and deceitful government wants us in so they can get the upper hand most of the time, and we'll explain just how deep a hole you will fall into when the government succeeds in tricking you with this subtle but very effective word trap. Because of this word trap, when we fall for it, we basically end up with no constitutional protections, no due process rights, and big legal bills trying to prove the government wrong. Just by the words they used to describe us, they prejudiced our rights and the only thing that allowed them to get away with it was our own ignorance of the law and imprecise language.

Before we launch further into some rather disturbing revelations about the burden of proof requirements applying to "taxpayers", we'd like to remind you again that it is a violation of due process of law for the government as a moving party to call you a "taxpayer" absent your voluntary consent and cooperation without first meeting the burden of proving that you indeed are a "taxpayer" with evidence. Remember what Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, says under the definition of "due process of law" on page 500:

> Due process of law. Law in its regular course of administration through courts of justice. Due process of law in each particular case means such an exercise of the powers of the government as the settled maxims of law permit and sanction, and under such safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims prescribe for the class of cases to which the one in question belongs. A course of legal proceedings according to those rules and principles which have been established in our systems of jurisprudence for the enforcement and protection of private rights. To give such proceedings any validity, there must be a tribunal competent by its constitution—that is, by the law of the creation—to pass upon the subject-matter of the suit; and, if that involves merely a determination of the personal liability of the defendant, he must be brought within its jurisdiction by service of process within the state, or his voluntary appearance. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714, 24 L.Ed. 565. Due process of law implies the right of the person affected thereby to be present before the tribunal which pronounces judgment upon the question of life, liberty, or property, in its most comprehensive sense; to be heard, by testimony or otherwise, and to have the right of controverting, by proof, every material fact which bears on the question of right in the matter involved. If any question of fact or liability be conclusively be presumed [rather than proven] against him, this is not due process of law.
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 500]

So if there are any assumptions or presumptions about you that are unproven, including your identity as a "taxpayer", your due process rights have been violated, and any judge with integrity wouldn't allow that in his courtroom. However, if the government uses the word "taxpayer" to describe you and you don't object, then you are a "taxpayer" by presumption under the Law of Presumptions, which we discuss more fully in sections 3.4.4 and 3.4.6 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008. Watch out! Incidentally, we show you in these two sections how to use the same devious tactic in reverse against the IRS.

You therefore need to keep reminding yourself that the legal discussion in this section only pertain to "taxpayers" and not to all Americans, and that the government must produce a statute making you liable for a tax and show taxable income, which in all cases under Subtitle A means corporate profit (see section 5.6.5 earlier), before you become a "taxpayer". This is the only way you can successfully challenge their jurisdiction and play the cards right that they will try to deal you. Since there is no statute under Subtitle A making private natural persons "liable" for the income tax imposed in 26 U.S.C. §1, this is a burden of proof that they simply can't meet in most cases, unless a tyrannical and corrupt judge steers the jury and the case away from talking about this subject, thus violating your First Amendment right of free speech to communicate with your government in the way that you see fit and in defense of your liberties.

The original article upon which this section was derived mistakenly used the terms "citizen" and "taxpayer" interchangeably, so we had to edit it to clarify the subtle distinctions in order to avoid being deceived and to make the truth plain. More than anything, the battle to empty your pocket is a war of words but it is still a war and amounts to treason against the Constitution, and we must be vigilant to note guerilla warfare tactics such as the "taxpayer" trap appearing in this section.

The idea of placing the burden of proof upon the accuser derives from English common law. The common law was deeply entrenched in the colonies during the time of the founding and continues as the basis of American law. The common law itself derives from the Great Charter of Liberties, Magna Charta. Magna Charta was the declaration of the liberties of English freemen signed by King John in 1215 AD. It was extracted from the King at the point of a sword as the price for retaining his throne. Magna Charta was reconfirmed numerous times by English monarchs over the ensuing centuries to the point where its principles became engrained in the fabric of English—and by extension, American—jurisprudence.

Chapter 39 of the Great Charter sets forth many of the fundamental rights of citizens in the judicial process. It established the concepts of both due process of law and the burden of proof as we know them today. Chapter 39 (chapter 29 in the 1225 version) reads:

> No freeman shall be seized, or imprisoned, or dispossessed, or outlawed, or in any way destroyed; nor will we condemn him, nor will we commit him to prison, excepting by the legal judgment of his peers, or by the laws of the land.

By this declaration, citizens were not to be considered guilty at any level in the judicial process until after a trial. In the Notes on the Great Charters, English jurists declared that the protections afforded by Magna Charta chapter 39/29 are so important that they alone "would alone have procured for it the title of the Great Charter."[62] In practice, this principle created the axiom of law holding that the accuser, whether in the criminal or civil context, was solely responsible to prove the verity of his claims against the accused before any punishment could apply.

Income tax codes and regulations heap upon the shoulders of "taxpayers" innumerable requirements to carry out affirmative duties under the pain of imprisonment, civil penalties, additional tax and interest assessments. Moreover, the code allows the IRS to make determinations with respect to a taxpayer's filing status, annual income, deductible expenses, dependent exemptions, etc. In all but a few exceptions, the IRS never has to prove that its actions or determinations are correct. The Supreme Court, in the 1933 case of Welch v. Helvering, 290 U.S. 111 (1933) declared that the IRS is entitled to the "presumption of correctness" with regard to its determinations. As such, the "taxpayer" "has the burden of proving" such actions to be wrong. In a very real way, the consequence of this is that the "taxpayer" is essentially guilty until proven innocent, a reversal of the fundamental rule of law regarding the burden of proof. The Supreme Court, in the case of Bull v. United States, 295 U.S. 247 (1935) used this explanation to describe how the litigation process is fundamentally altered in tax cases:

> Thus, the usual procedure for the recovery of debts is reversed in the field of taxation. Payment precedes defense, and the burden of proof, normally on the claimant, is shifted to the taxpayer.
> The [tax] assessment supersedes the pleading, proof, and judgment necessary in an action at law, and has the force of such a judgment. The ordinary defendant stands in judgment only after a hearing. The taxpayer often is afforded his hearing after judgment and after payment, and his only redress for unjust administrative action is the right to claim restitution.[319]

The shift in the burden of proof does not apply to the various criminal provisions of the tax code. To place the burden of proof on the accused in a criminal matter is a clear deprivation of due process and flatly unconstitutional. However, the vast majority of the penalty provisions of the tax code are civil in nature and it naturally follows that the overwhelming number of penalty assessments are likewise civil in nature. As a result, the courts seem content to dissolve the historic protection in most civil cases. But despite the fact that the imposition of civil penalties does not carry the risk of loss of liberty, such imposition, as well as civil collection in general, most certainly does imply the loss of property, a condition Magna Charta referred to as being "dispossessed." As the evidence presented above clearly shows, the Founders put the importance of property and the protection thereof on par with that of personal liberty. The due process clauses of both the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments speak clearly to the protection of life, liberty and property.

What could justify a departure from the settled principles of due process such that the burden of proof is shifted from the government to the citizen? The answer is found in a statement by the Bull court that has become a common thread woven into the fabric of tax litigation for more than six decades. That statement is:

> "But taxes are the lifeblood of government, and their prompt and certain availability an imperious need."[320]

Thus, in the mind of the Supreme Court, the government's "imperious need" for money justifies the abandonment of one of the most important elements of American liberty. The concept of "need" was reiterated in the case of Carson v. United States, where the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals more pointedly declared that such departure is justified based upon "the government's strong need to accomplish swift collection of revenues and in the need to encourage taxpayer recordkeeping."

[319] U.S. v. Bull, 295 U.S. 247, 26 (1935), emphasis added.

This reasoning presents a recurring theme: government's need for money is, by itself, sufficient to override settled constitutional protections. This notion is antithetical to liberty and to the notion of a government with limited, narrowly prescribed powers. If the courts are able to set aside specific constitutional protections on the mere assertion by the government of a "compelling need," all the rights declared sacrosanct in the Constitution are but empty vessels.

This shift in the burden of proof is responsible for innumerable abuses by the IRS. Many of these were brought to light during the 1997 Senate Finance Committee hearings into IRS abuse. Specifically, the practice of placing the burden on "taxpayers" has the effect of allowing the IRS to issue penalty assessments at will, without regard to the specific facts of a case and in violation of its own stated policy on penalty assessments. A good share of the more than thirty million penalties issued every year are issued through automatic computer assessments. In this way, the IRS does not even make an effort to determine whether the facts of a case justify imposition of the penalty. The "taxpayer" is left to assert defenses if he is able to navigate the procedural quagmire.

This is equally true of the millions of computer notices issued by the IRS annually. Many such notices claim to correct errors allegedly made by "taxpayers" in their tax returns. And while the law provides a means for a "taxpayer" to challenge these notices, the burden is on the "taxpayer" to correctly respond to the notice in a timely fashion, craft a response sufficient to apprise the IRS of the objection and prosecute the objection through the system while carrying the burden of proving not only that the IRS' determination is incorrect, but what the correct determination should be.

The unfortunate reality is that the vast majority of citizens embrangled with the IRS do not understand their rights or legal remedies under the Internal Revenue Code. As such, people fail to realize that they are in fact "prosecutors" when it comes to correcting errant IRS action. That is to say, the citizen must instigate appeal actions, both administrative and judicial, in order to challenge a tax audit determination. The citizen must instigate proper challenges to collection actions in order to prevent the loss of property in the collection process. The citizen must instigate administrative or judicial challenges to the IRS' investigative powers in the hope of maintaining any right of privacy. In the context of all such challenges (with rare and narrow exceptions), the citizen must carry the burden of proving IRS error, with respect to both the law and facts of the case.

The extensive focus on the burden of proof issue led Congress to enact code section 7491 as part of the Internal Revenue Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998. This provision received much attention because it purports to shift the burden of proof to the IRS, thereby curing the problems set forth above. On careful inspection, however, it can be said that that law cannot possibly attain that goal. Section 7491(a)(1) states as follows:

> If, in any court proceeding, a taxpayer introduces credible evidence with respect to any factual issue relevant to ascertaining the liability of the taxpayer for any tax imposed by subtitle A or B, the Secretary shall have the burden of proof with respect to such issue.

The statute indeed purports to shift the burden to the IRS but only if the citizen first "introduces credible evidence" concerning the issue. In other words, the citizen bears the burden of proof necessary to shift the burden of proof. What constitutes "credible evidence" is undefined by statute and promises to be the subject of ongoing litigation. Thus, the "taxpayer" retains the duty to present initial evidence to show the IRS is wrong with regard to a "factual issue."

Even if he is successful in this first task, the burden shifts only in "any court proceeding." The fact is, 97 percent of all IRS actions are carried out, not in a judicial context, but rather, in the administrative context. For example, virtually all penalty assessments and computer tax assessments are administrative in nature. The initial determination of tax liability by the IRS is administrative in nature. Likewise, the vast majority of IRS' collection actions are administrative in nature. And while some courts have limited jurisdiction to review collection actions, the taxpayer must instigate the review. Moreover, as the statute declares, the taxpayer bears the initial burden to introduce "credible evidence" with regard to the "factual issues."

In the larger sense, as examined in more detail later in this report, federal laws expressly prohibit the courts from taking jurisdiction over the IRS in collection cases. This is because of the Anti-Injunction Act, 26 U.S.C. §7421. It expressly denies jurisdiction to the federal courts to enjoin or restrain the ascertainment, computation, assessment or collection of any internal revenue tax.

Moreover, subsection (a)(2)(A) of code section 7491 places two serious limitations on the supposed shift. The first is that the "taxpayer" must have "complied with the requirements under this title to substantiate any item." This language vitiates all the foregoing language to the extent that such could have been read to shift the burden to the IRS. In countless places in the tax code, the law places the burden on the "taxpayer" to "substantiate" a given claim. The substantiation requirement is in practical effect, a burden of proof. Without providing evidence to support one's claim under a particular code section, he has failed to "substantiate" his entitlement to the relief or benefit provided by that section.

Consider further the language of subsection (a)(2)(B). It provides that the burden shifts only if "the taxpayer has maintained all records required under this title and has cooperated with the reasonable requests of the Secretary for witnesses, information, documents and interviews." The terms "reasonable requests" and "cooperated" are undefined. The practical effect of this is for the IRS to assert a laundry list of demands for documents, evidence, exhibits, witnesses, etc., and for the IRS to allege "lack of cooperation" in order to prevent the burden from shifting.68

This is standard procedure for the IRS and is precisely what happened in the U.S. Tax Court case of Higbee v. Commissioner, the first case in which the Tax Court addressed the new burden of proof statute. Higbee asserted that the burden shifted to the IRS under the new law. IRS argued that because Higbee "failed to meet the requirements of code section 7491(a)(1) and (2)," the taxpayer and not the IRS should retain the burden of proof. As to each of the three issues presented by Higbee, the court ruled against Higbee, claiming:

> Again, we reiterate that petitioners have failed to provide this Court with credible evidence for us to allow petitioners' claims with respect to the disallowed deductions. We therefore reject all of petitioners' contentions as to these issues.[321]

In the final analysis, the burden of proof was in no way shifted to the IRS. Two other Restructuring Act amendments are claimed to positively impact the burden of proof for citizens. The first is code section 6751. The second is section 7491(c). Subsection 6751(a) states that with respect to an assessment:

> The Secretary shall include with each notice of penalty under this title information with respect to the name of the penalty, the section of this title under which the penalty is imposed, and a computation of the penalty.

Code section 7491(c) provides that the "burden of production" is upon the IRS with respect to any penalty assessment that is the subject of a court proceeding.

Neither the language of code section 6751 nor section 7491(c) operates to shift the burden of proof to the IRS. Section 6751 is merely a notification provision. It says nothing whatsoever regarding a burden of proof.

The impact of section 7491(c) is clearly addressed by the Higbee Court. Analyzing the statute and the legislative history, Higbee concludes:

> Congress' use of the phrase "burden of production" and not the more general phrase "burden of proof" as used in section 7491(a) [discussed in detail above] indicates to us that Congress did not desire that the burden of proof be placed upon the Commissioner with regard to penalties.[322]

In the overall scheme of the tax code, these laws do little to place the burden of proof upon the shoulders of the IRS. In sum, both the IRS and "taxpayers" rest in essentially the same position now as they did before these provisions were enacted.

If the reader of this section didn't know the subtle meaning of the term "taxpayer" and that there is no liability statute under Subtitle A, then this section, without the warnings we placed here, could easily discourage anyone into thinking that the Constitution is being violated because of the "burden of proof" games described. To the extent that the laws are applied as described only within the federal zone, that would be an erroneous conclusion because that area, for the most part, isn't covered by the Bill of Rights as we describe repeatedly. However, to the extent that the rules in this section for burden of proof are applied outside of the federal zone and inside the 50 Union states, it would be valid to conclude that the constitution is indeed being violated. We must always remember that Subtitle A income taxes, however, can only be made mandatory to persons domiciled in the federal zone or working in the government, wherever located. For everyone else, it's not a tax, but a donation!

5.10.8 Purpose of Vague Laws is to Chain you to IRS Control[323]

Vague laws are deliberately passed by Congress to aid governmental agencies to control natural persons through administrative process. Forcing the making and delivery of the "U.S. Individual Income Tax Returns" based on false belief occurs because of such laws. It is the duty of the judge to prevent the use of vague laws as a vehicle to deprive persons of their rights or their property. It is also the function of the court to see that separation of powers exists so justice is served.

The system to serve justice in this country is adversarial. This means that lawyers in the private sector must attack vagueness in the law. Justice Department lawyers are also duty bound not to misuse any law, vague ones notwithstanding. If they do, judges must admonish and not permit any lawyer to proceed if he or she does not vigorously take exception to the vague law.

It will be argued that the accused must shoulder the responsibility if he hires an ineffective lawyer (one who refuses to be an advocate) because he exercised his free choice in selecting that attorney. In other words, one has the right to prejudice himself by his selection of an attorney. But, the duty of a judge is to see that justice prevails and overrides such a prejudice. Currently, however, free choice in legal counsel is not readily available to the average American because attorneys are not trained to take exception to vague laws.

Justice is not a person, but a condition. It is the duty of the judge to recognize and stop the use of the courtroom before injustice occurs. Injustice does not occur when the burden to prove innocence has been forced upon the accused by the vagueness of a law which prevents the accused form implementing any possible defense.

There is intent to commit injustice in the courtroom when a U.S. Justice Department lawyer uses vague laws to control the person accused in what is deemed a prosecution. Injustice also manifests itself when the lawyer for the accused cooperates with the Justice Department by not defending against a prosecution under a vague law. If the U.S. judge permits such conduct to occur, the rights of the accused are not protected by the court and justice is not served. Only the Justice Department and the lawyer in the private sector are served. What results is malicious prosecution—an action in a courtroom that is not a fair trial but a trial by ordeal.

Finding a lawyer who will defend a client and not merely represent him is very difficult. The client must literally know the law himself and dictate to the lawyer what he wants done. The matter of time becomes a factor since one does get a speedy trial. The matter of cost becomes a factor since the old saying "money talks" seems to apply in the courtroom. There is also a matter of understanding what to look for in a lawyer.

The Sixth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution guarantees certain rights to the accused. It says:

> "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall…be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; … and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

One is not informed of the nature and cause of a criminal accusation, or of the requirements on a civil basis, when he is accused or confronted in either a criminal or civil situation under laws that are vague. Proper notice is not available. Further, in any situation where the assistance of counsel for his defense is required, the U.S. Constitution guarantees that one shall have counsel who is concerned with defending your life, liberty, and property, not one who is partial to vague laws which lead to malicious prosecution in order to enhance the counsel's livelihood. When such attorneys do not attempt to destroy vague laws, they violate the Sixth Amendment rights of the accused and make a record of their ineffectiveness. The end result is to unduly convict a person. This violates the Sixth, Eighth and Thirteenth Amendments of the U.S. Constitution.

The burden to provide an adversarial process is upon the lawyer in the private sector, and the judge should demand that it exist in the U.S. courtroom.[324] In the process of serving justice, a U.S. judge must be ever diligent with regard to vague laws so as not to impair the rights of the accused. This is the duty of the court, not the duty of the accused. When vague laws are used, the accused is forced to defend against an unfair system and not against a violation of the law.

A U.S. judge actually cooperates in seeing that injustice is perpetuated in his or her courtroom when vague laws are permitted to be used for the purpose of enforcing the intentions of a government agency. In this process, the person and his rights are controlled to his prejudice. Such conduct impairs the integrity of the court and raises the question of whether or not the [324] The need for attorneys to be adversaries is brought out by Justice O'Connor in her opinion in Strickland v. Washington, 104 S.Ct. 2052 (1984).

Federal Government employees involved are in contempt of the court as well as being involved in concealment of violations of due process of law.

The vague laws of the I.R. Code are intended to control property of the general public that is not authorized under law. Competent attorneys would attempt to destroy these vague laws.

The story of the alleged conviction of Frank Kowalik described in his book IRS Humbug: Weapons of Enslavement, Frank Kowalik, ISBN 0-9626552-0-1, 1991 reveals how lawyers cooperated to send him to prison, and how vague law made it possible. In place of an adversarial process, it was a malicious prosecution with intent to force him to cooperate with the lawyers and the IRS, and return him to a condition of peonage and slavery.

Vague laws along with lawyers cooperating with one another make the use of the U.S. courtroom for undue convictions possible. Any person targeted by the IRS or other Federal Government agency can be unduly punished for doing what he or she has the right to do under the law, simply because vague laws make possible a violation of his rights and liberties and are used to create a false appearance of government jurisdiction where none actually exists.

5.10.9 Why the "Void for Vagueness Doctrine" Should be Invoked By The Courts to Render the Internal Revenue Code Unconstitutional in Total

> "Fundamental fairness requires that a person cannot be sent to jail for a crime he could not with reasonable certainty know he was committing; reasonable certainty in that respect is all the more essential when vagueness might induce individuals to forgo their rights of speech, press, and association for fear of violating an unclear law."
> [Scull v. Commonwealth of Virginia, 359 U.S. 344, 79 S.Ct. 838, 3 L.Ed.2d. 865 (1959)]

As we stated clearly earlier in section 3.20.1 entitled "Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws", it is quite evident that there is a lot of disagreement and a complete lack of consistency (or "stare decisis", or adherence to precedent) about how to interpret and apply the Internal Revenue Code at every level of the federal judiciary, including the Federal District and Appellate Courts as well as the U.S. Supreme Court, not to mention the state courts. This ought to be more than ample evidence that the IRC lacks clarity.

We would argue that the Internal Revenue Code is deliberately vague, because if the code told the complete truth clearly, then citizens of the 50 Union states with income from the 50 Union states would not pay direct income taxes and could successfully use as their justification Article 1, Section 9, clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution., which is still in force and was not changed by the Sixteenth Amendment.

The most effective way to discover where the truth is being hidden by the greedy lawyer-conspirators in Congress is to look in the Internal Revenue Code for either undefined terms or for terms, confusing definitions, or particular parts of the code over which the most litigation has occurred. Most of the controversy and illegal taxation would end if Congress would accurately define the following terms. Note that we have included the proper definition for each of these terms:

"employee": This term means an elected or appointed officer of the federal United States government in receipt of excise taxable privileges.

"source": This term defines the geographical or territorial boundaries that this Title shall apply to.

"State" and "States": Within this Title, the term State refers to a federal possession or territory, to include Guam, Puerto Rico, American Samoa, etc. State DOES NOT include the 50 states of the Union, but does apply to federal possessions and facilities within those states. Note that the District of Columbia is not a "State", but instead is described in Title 4 as the seat of government.

"United States": The term "United States" is defined as any federal territory or land over which the federal government has exclusive control and jurisdiction, including District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and federal reservations within the 50 states of the Union. It does NOT include the 50 States of the Union. The term "federal zone" shall also be synonymous with the term "United States" as used in this title.

"foreign income": Income from outside of the "United States" or the "federal zone". Income from within one of the 50 Union states is counted as foreign income.

Do you think there might be a conflict of interest by the lawyers in Congress who write the laws to not define these terms accurately because:

1. They would destroy income taxes on individuals and make the country financially insolvent.
2. They would undermine their livelihood after they left Congress, because they are only in office temporarily. Remember that lawyers make most of their money litigating, or fighting in court. If the tax code was clear, litigation over taxes would end, and they would be without jobs because there would be no more people victimized by an unjust or obfuscated tax system. The law would be so clear that we wouldn't need to hire lawyers to act as "high priests" to interpret the confusing laws for us.

For these and many other reasons, conflict of interest on the part of the U.S. Congress and the legal profession in general (American Bar Association, or ABA) to keep the tax system the way it is will guarantee that the system will never improve until the citizens relentlessly apply heat to their representatives to fix things and speak with one very clear voice on the issue. That is why we wrote this book: to make the issues sufficiently clear that we can all speak with one loud and unanimous voice to the IRS and Congress, and all simultaneously use the same processes in dealing with both of them.

The vagueness of the IRC, in turn, represents a violation of our due process protections guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment and described in section 3.11.8.4 entitled "6th Amendment: Rights of Accused in Criminal Prosecutions". We will demonstrate how this is the case in this section.

There is a concept called the "void for vagueness" doctrine that was advocated by the U.S. Supreme Court. This doctrine is deeply rooted in our right to due process (under the Fifth Amendment) and our right to know the nature and cause of any criminal accusation (under the Sixth Amendment). The latter right goes far beyond the contents of any criminal indictment. The right to know the nature and cause of any accusation starts with the statute which a defendant is accused of violating. A statute must be sufficiently specific and unambiguous in all its terms, in order to define and give adequate notice of the kind of conduct which it forbids.

> The essential purpose of the "void for vagueness doctrine" with respect to interpretation of a criminal statute, is to warn individuals of the criminal consequences of their conduct*. ... Criminal statutes which fail to give due notice that an act has been made criminal before it is done are unconstitutional deprivations of due process of law.*
> [U.S. v. De Cadena, 105 F.Supp. 202, 204 (1952), emphasis added]

If it fails to indicate with reasonable certainty just what conduct the legislature prohibits, a statute is necessarily void for uncertainty, or "void for vagueness" as the doctrine is called. In the De Cadena case, the U.S. District Court listed a number of excellent authorities for the origin of this doctrine (see Lanzetta v. New Jersey, 306 U.S. 451) and for the development of the doctrine (see Screws v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, Williams v. United States, 341 U.S. 97, and Jordan v. De George, 341 U.S. 223). Any prosecution which is based upon a vague statute must fail, together with the statute itself. A vague criminal statute is unconstitutional for violating the 5th and 6th Amendments. The U.S. Supreme Court has emphatically agreed:

> "That the terms of a penal statute creating a new offense must be sufficiently explicit to inform those who are subject to it what conduct on their part will render them liable to its penalties is a well-recognized requirement, consonant alike with ordinary notions of fair play and the settled rules of law; and a statute which either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application violates the first essential of due process of law*."*
> [Connally et al. v. General Construction Co., 269 U.S. 385, 391 (1926), emphasis added]

The debate that is currently raging over the correct scope and proper application of the IRC is obvious, empirical proof that men of common intelligence are differing with each other. Section 3.20.1 on "Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws" is proof of the extent of the conflicts in interpreting the Internal Revenue Code by the federal appellate courts. For example, some people advocate definitions of "includes" and "including" which are expansive, not restrictive. The matter could be easily decided if the IRC would instead exhibit sound principles of statutory construction, state clearly and directly that "includes" and "including" are meant to be used in the expansive sense, and itemize those specific persons, places, and/or things that are "otherwise within the meaning of the terms defined". If the terms "includes" and "including" must be used in the restrictive sense, the IRC should explain, clearly and directly, that expressions like "includes only" and "including only" must be used, to eliminate vagueness completely. Instead, they currently define the term "includes" and "including" using the expansive sense and then contradict their own definition in IRC section 61 by adding the phrase "(but not limited to)".

Alternatively, the IRC could exhibit sound principles of statutory construction by explaining clearly and directly that "includes" and "including" are always meant to be used in the restrictive sense.

Better yet, abandon the word "include" entirely, together with all of its grammatical variations, and use instead the word "means" (which does not suffer from a long history of semantic confusion). It would also help a lot if the 50 Union states were consistently capitalized and the federal states were not. The reverse of this convention can be observed in the regulations for Title 31 (see 31 C.F.R. Sections 51.2 and 52.2). Section 2.9 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 entitled "What would it take for the IRS and the U.S. Congress to 'come clean'" talks about how to rewrite the tax code in Title 26 of the U.S.C. in s.

These, again, are excellent grounds for deciding that the IRC is vague and therefore null and void. Of course, if the real intent is to unconstitutionally expand federal jurisdiction in order to subjugate the 50 Union states under the dominion of federal government (defined along something like ZIP code boundaries a la the Buck Act, codified in Title 4), and to replace the sovereign Republics with a monolithic totalitarian socialist dictatorship, carved up into arbitrary administrative "districts", that is another problem altogether. Believe it or not, the case law which has interpreted the Buck Act admits to the existence of a "State within a state"! So, which State within a state are you in? Or should we be asking this question: "In the State within which state are you?" (Remember: a preposition is a word you should never end a sentence with!)

The absurd results which obtain from expanding the term "State" to mean the 50 Union states, however, are problems which will not go away, no matter how much we clarify the definitions of "includes" and "including" in the IRC. There are 49 other U.S. Codes which have the exact same problem. Moreover, the mountain of material evidence impugning the ratification of the so-called 16th Amendment should leave no doubt in anybody's mind that Congress must still apportion all direct taxes levied inside the sovereign borders of the 50 Union states. The apportionment restrictions have never been repealed.

Likewise, Congress is not empowered to delegate unilateral authority to the President to subdivide or to join any of the 50 Union states. There are many other constitutional violations which result from expanding the term "State" to mean the 50 States of the Union. In this context, the mandates and prohibitions found in the Bill of Rights are immediately obvious, particularly as they apply to Union state Citizens (as distinct from United States citizens a/k/a federal citizens). Clarifying the definitions of "includes" and "including" in the IRC is one thing; clarifying the exact extent of sovereign jurisdiction is quite another. Congress is just not sovereign within the borders of the 50 Union states.

Sorry, all you Senators and Representatives. When you took office, you did not take an oath to uphold and defend the Ten Commandments. You did not take an oath to uphold and defend the Uniform Commercial Code. You did not take an oath to uphold and defend the Communist Manifesto, Karl Marx. You did take an oath to uphold and defend the Constitution for the United States of America.

It should be obvious, at this point, that capable authors do agree that the 50 Union states do not belong in the standard definition of "State" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10) of the IRC because they are in a class that is different from the class known as federal states. Within the borders of the 50 Union states, the "geographical" extent of exclusive federal jurisdiction is strictly confined to the federal enclaves; this extent does not encompass the 50 Union states themselves. See 40 U.S.C. §3112, which clearly shows that the jurisdiction of the federal courts only extend onto federal property.

This ruling was significant, because it divides the United States of America into what we call the "federal zone", which includes the District of Columbia, U.S. Possessions, and Territories on the one hand, and the 50 Union states on the other hand. This issue is very important and explains the definitions of "State" and "United States" found in sections 3.12.1.19 and 3.12.1.23 respectively.

We cannot blame the average American for failing to appreciate this subtlety. However, we can blame all of the federal courts for failing to resolve these controversies to the benefit of the Citizen, as the U.S. Supreme Court has clearly said they are obligated to do in the following case:

> "Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
> [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

The confusion that results from the vagueness we observe is inherent in the Code and evidently intentional, which raises some very serious questions concerning the real intent of that Code in the first place. Could money have anything to do with it? That question answers itself. An even more interesting question was raised by one of our readers, who wrote:

> Family Guardian,
> Greetings... The more that I mull this issue over, the more that I believe that the weak point of the tax laws are that they do not meet nor surpass the "Void for Vagueness" criteria. If it is up to the individual to determine their liability then, to ascertain that they must, at the very least, read and understand all of title 26. If they do not then they cannot sign certifying that they are in compliance and that they are legally liable. If this is actually the burden placed upon the American public then I believe that this should be the focus or at least one of the main focuses of the issues and questions raised with the government and the Congress.

> Larry W.

In the meantime, the IRC should have been thrown out by the courts long ago because it violates the Sixth Amendment by not being sufficiently specific as to clearly define who specifically is liable for paying federal income tax. But if the courts did this, then judges would have to shut off what they think is the source of their paycheck, and you know that kind of honesty and integrity is nowhere to be found in our corrupt government, much less anywhere in the legal profession.

5.11 Other Clues and Hints At the Correct Application of the IRC

There are numerous other bits of information that hint at the correct application of the law, a few of which are included here as supporting evidence.

5.11.1 On the Record

As the Supreme Court and the Secretary of the Treasury have repeatedly stated, the federal income tax is (and has always been) an indirect excise tax. Excises, generally speaking, are taxes imposed on certain activities or privileges. In light of this, there are some interesting comments in the Congressional Record from March 27, 1943, p. 2580. A statement is included by a "Mr. F. Morse Hubbard, formerly of the legislative drafting research fund of Columbia University, and a former legislative draftsman in the Treasury Department" (clearly someone whose job would require a comprehensive understanding of the proper application of the law). His comments include the following:

> "The income tax is, therefore, not a tax on income as such. It is an excise tax with respect to certain activities and privileges which is measured by reference to the income which they produce. The income is not the subject of the tax*: it is the basis for determining the amount of the tax."*

The income tax is imposed on "income from whatever source derived" (minus deductions). The mere receipt of income, by itself, is not (and could not be) the subject of this excise tax. It is the "source" which is the subject of the tax, and the amount of income received from that "source" is what is used to determine the amount of tax due. All "sources" are taxable activities and as we explained earlier in section 5.6.11 earlier, there are only two taxable activities under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A: 1. Foreign commerce; 2. Public office in the United States Government. The above citations coincide well with the fact that the section of regulations for determining taxable income (26 C.F.R. §1.861-8) states that it applies only to income "from specific sources and activities." And the statutes and regulations under the part which "determine[s] the sources of income for purposes of the income tax" all apply only to these same "specific sources and activities," which are all related to international or foreign commerce.

5.11.2 Section 306

Section 306 of the statutes deals with individuals receiving income from selling certain stocks. After dealing with the income itself, the section discusses the "source" of income.

> "Sec. 306. Dispositions of certain stock
> (a) General rule
> If a shareholder sells or otherwise disposes of section 306 stock…
> (1) Dispositions other than redemptions -
> If such disposition is not a redemption…

> (A) The amount realized shall be treated as ordinary income*…*
> (f) Source of gain - The amount treated under subsection (a)(1)(A) as ordinary income shall, for purposes of part I of subchapter N (sec. 861 and following, relating to determination of sources of income), be treated as derived from the same source as would have been the source if money had been received from the corporation as a dividend at the time of the distribution of such stock. If under the preceding sentence such amount is determined to be derived from sources within the United States*, such amount shall be considered to be fixed or determinable annual or periodical* gains, profits, and income within the meaning of section 871(a) or section 881(a), as the case may be."
> [26 U.S.C. §306(f)]

The section states that if the income comes from "sources within the United States," then it constitutes "gains, profits, and income" under Section 871(a) or 881(a). Sections 871 and 881 deal exclusively with nonresident aliens and foreign corporations, respectively (both are found in Part II of Subchapter N, "Nonresident aliens and foreign corporations"). The wording of Section 306 implies that if the income in question comes from "sources within the United States," then it must apply to one of these sections. If a statutory "U.S. citizen" domiciled in the United States (the federal zone) receives the type of income dealt with in Section 306, and believes it constitutes "income from sources within the United States," halfway through the last sentence the reader is left in limbo. The sentence structure is "if A, then B." Using the usual overly-broad interpretation of the Code, if a citizen receives income from the type of stock mentioned from "sources within the United States," then that income "shall be considered to be" taxable for nonresident aliens or foreign corporations. A contradiction exists, unless one realizes that the term "sources of income" has a restricted meaning, which in this case would apply only to foreigners.

5.11.3 Strange Links

In various sections of the statutes, Section 911 is referenced where it does not seem to fit in (if one accepts the common, overly-broad interpretation of the Code). One example exists in Section 1 itself (the section imposing the income tax on individuals). Subsection (g) of Section 1 deals with certain income of children being treated as income of that child's parents, and shows that the term "earned income" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(2).

> "(g) Certain unearned income of minor children taxed as if parent's income…
> (4) Net unearned income
> For purposes of this subsection--
> (A) In general
> The term "net unearned income" means the excess of--
> (i) the portion of the adjusted gross income for the taxable year which is not attributable to earned income *(as defined in section 911(d)(2))…"*
> [26 U.S.C. §1(g)]

This section (26 U.S.C. §1(g)) is referred to later in Section 59(j), and Section 911(d)(2) is again mentioned as the section which defines "earned income." Other sections, such as 26 U.S.C. § 66(d) and 26 U.S.C. § 469(e), also refer to Section 911(d)(2) for the definition of "earned income." There is nothing peculiar about the definition in 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(2) itself, which states:

> "(d) Definitions and special rules
> For purposes of this section--
> (2) Earned income
> (A) In general
> *The term "earned income" means wages, salaries, or professional fees, and other amounts received as compensation for personal services actually rendered, but does not include…"*
> [26 U.S.C. §911(d)]

What is interesting is the location of the definition:

> Subchapter N -- Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States
> Part III -- Income from sources without the United States
> Subpart B -- Earned income of citizens or residents of United States
> Sec. 911*. Citizens or residents of the United States* living abroad

While it is true that the location of such a definition does not legally change the meaning of the definition, it is still somewhat telling that the definition is found in Subchapter N, rather than in Subchapters A and B (which impose the tax, and define "gross income" and "taxable income"). It is also telling that the definition itself (even though the definition is also "borrowed" by other sections) says that the definition is "for purposes of this section," meaning Section 911, which deals exclusively with the "foreign earned income" of United States citizens.

Another strange connection occurs in the section regarding "community income," which comes shortly after Section 63 defining "taxable income."

> "Sec. 66. Treatment of community income
> (a) Treatment of community income where spouses live apart
> If- (1) 2 individuals are married to each other…;
> (2) such individuals-- (A) live apart… (B) do not file a joint return…;
> (3) one or both of such individuals have earned income for the calendar year which is community income; and
> (4) no portion of such earned income is transferred (directly or indirectly) between such individuals before the close of the calendar year, > then, for purposes of this title, any community income of such individuals for the calendar year shall be treated in accordance with the rules provided by section 879(a)."
> [26 U.S.C. §66]

Note that this is giving the rules applicable to all of Title 26 regarding "community income." But the section it refers to for such rules reads:

> *"Sec. 879. Tax treatment of certain community income in the case of nonresident alien individuals
> (a) General rule - In the case of a married couple 1 or both of whom are nonresident alien individuals and who have community income for the taxable year, such community income shall be treated as follows:…"
> [26 U.S.C. §879(a)]

The text here specifically states that it applies only where one or both are nonresident aliens. To use the same rules for two citizens of the United States, Section 66 would have to say something similar to "shall be treated in accordance with the rules provided by 879(a) regarding nonresident aliens, notwithstanding the fact that the individuals may be citizens or residents of the United States." But it says no such thing, implying that "community income" applies only if at least one partner is a nonresident alien.

5.11.4 Following Instructions

Form 1040 is divided into several categories, such as personal information, "Filing Status," "Exemptions," "Income," etc. In the instruction booklet for that form, there is a section that gives line-by-line instructions. The general category of "Income" begins:

> You must report unearned income, such as interest, dividends, and pensions, from sources outside the United States unless exempt by law or a tax treaty. You must also report earned income, such as wages and tips, from sources outside the United States.
> If you worked abroad, you may be able to exclude part or all of your earned income. For details, see Pub. 54, Tax Guide for U.S. Citizens and Resident Aliens Abroad, and Form 2555, Foreign Earned Income, or Form 2555-EZ, Foreign Earned Income Exclusion.
> *Community Property States... **
> Rounding Off to Whole Dollars..."
> [1996 Instruction Booklet for Form 1040]

(* - This concerns "community income," which is dealt with above. This would apply only to a United States citizen married to a nonresident alien.)

That is all it has to say about the general subject of income. The booklet then tells where the listed "items" (interest, dividends, wages, etc.) should be entered on Form 1040. While there is a statement specifically saying that "you must report" these items if from sources outside the United States (the federal zone), there is no statement that these items must be reported if they come from within the United States (the federal zone).

This admission in the booklet is very easy for most readers to simply disregard as irrelevant to them. If there was the need to say that foreign-source income must be reported, why was there no need to say that any other income must be reported? Why did the statement not say that foreign source income "as well as domestic income" must be reported? One is left free to make the incorrect assumption that all income must be reported, when this is not the case.

A similar situation exists with IRS Publication 525, "Taxable and Nontaxable Income." The first thing this publication says concerning taxes, which appears on the cover, is:

> "Important Reminder
> Foreign Source Income
> If you are a U.S. citizen, you must report income from sources outside the United States (foreign income) on your tax return unless it is exempt by U.S. law."

Then, in the introduction (which follows the above "reminder"), the publication states that the publication "discusses many kinds of income and explains whether they are taxable or nontaxable." Other than the "foreign source income" reminder, the publication deals only with "items" of income, not "sources." Again, one is left free to assume that income from within the United States (the federal zone) is taxable to U.S. citizens, but it is not stated.

5.11.5 Treasury Decision 2313

The Supreme Court's decision in the Brushaber case in 1916 (240 U.S. 1) is often cited by the IRS as demonstrating that the income tax is Constitutional (which it is, because of its very limited legal application). What the IRS fails to mention, and what is not apparent from looking at the court's ruling in the case, is that the case concerned income from within the United States (the federal zone) accruing to a "nonresident alien", which is subject to the income tax. Treasury Decision 2313 makes this apparent.

> "Under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railway Co., decided January 24, 1916, it is hereby held that income accruing to nonresident aliens in the form of interest from the bonds and dividends on the stock of domestic corporations is subject to the income tax imposed by the act of October 3, 1913."
> [Treasury Decision 2313]

Note how in this case an "item" of income (interest) is subject to the income tax when paid to nonresident aliens, because that is one of the legal "sources" of taxable income. The decision also states a proper use of Form 1040.

> "The responsible heads, agents, or representatives of nonresident aliens, who are in charge of the property owned or business carried on within the United States, shall make a full and complete return of the income therefrom on Form 1040, revised, and shall pay any and all tax, normal and additional, assessed upon the income received by them in behalf of their nonresident alien principals."
> [Treasury Decision 2313]

While this in itself does not prove that Form 1040 should not be used in any other situation, something telling appears later in the decision. Speaking of the responsibility of fiduciaries of domestic entities, it states:

> "[W]hen there are two or more beneficiaries, one or all of whom are nonresident aliens, the fiduciary shall render a return on Form 1041, revised, and a personal return on Form 1040, revised, for each nonresident alien beneficiary."

This both implies that a Form 1041 is not required if there are no nonresident alien beneficiaries (only citizens and residents), as well as implying that a Form 1040 is not to be issued for the citizen and resident beneficiaries.

5.11.6 Other Clues

As mentioned above, the only form ever approved for use with section 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 of the regulations (under the Paperwork Reduction Act) was Form 2555, "Foreign Earned Income." In addition, the only form approved by the Office of Management and Budget for 26 C.F.R. §1.861-2 and -3 (which deal with interest and dividends from within the United States) is Form 1040NR, "U.S. Nonresident Alien Income Tax Return." Similarly, the only form approved under 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 itself is Form 1120-F, "*U.S. Income Tax Return of a Foreign Corporation."

Below each section of regulations in the C.F.R. there is a citation of the legal authority under which the regulations are made. The statutory authority for 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 is listed as 26 U.S.C. §7805 (which is the general rule-making authority for the Secretary, as shown in the first citation of this report), as well as 26 U.S.C. §882(c), which reads:

> "Tax on income of foreign corporations connected with United States business…
> (c) Allowance of deductions and credits
> (1) Allocation of deductions

> (A) General rule... the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions for this purpose shall be determined as provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary*."*
> [26 U.S.C. §882(c)]

This matches the fact that only the income tax return for a foreign corporation has been approved for use with this section of regulations by the OMB. The newer, temporary regulations in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T cite no statutory authority, but instead cite Treasury Decision 8228, which states that the authors of the regulation both work in the "Office of the Associated Chief Counsel (International)." The scope of the regulations is identified in the first paragraph of Treasury Decision 8228:

> "Summary: This document provides temporary Income Tax Regulations relating to the allocation and apportionment of interest expense and certain other expenses for purposes of the foreign tax credit rules and certain other international tax provisions*."*
> [Treasury Decision 8228]

So the authorities cited as the legal basis for the regulations for "determining taxable income from sources within the United States" (temporary and final) show that the regulations are about international commerce.

Another legal resource which demonstrates the true applicability of the "income tax" is the annotated index of the United States Code. While there are different versions which vary somewhat in exact wording, under "Income tax, citizens," only things such as citizens "living abroad" or "about to depart from U.S." are listed.

Both the indexes and the contents of "Internal Revenue Bulletins" (which contain rulings and decisions by the IRS regarding interpretation of the law) reinforce the conclusions of this report. For example, the 1957-1960 cumulative bulletin has nine listings under "Citizens," every one of which deals with citizens being outside of the United States (the federal zone). This same bulletin, under "Income - Source," has 35 listings, all of which deal with specific issues related to international commerce, with one exception; and that exception again reinforces the significance of Part I of Subchapter N, and the related regulations:

> *"Within and without United States; determination. - Rules are prescribed for* determination of gross income and taxable income derived from sources within and without the United States... §§ 1.861-1 through 1.864*. (Secs.* 861-864*; '54 Code) T.D. 6258, C. B. 1957-2, 368."*

The bulletins show similar patterns year after year, from 1913 (when the basis of the current federal income tax was written) to the present.

Another resource which indicates the true nature of the "income tax" is the Internal Revenue Manual, which is the instruction manual for all divisions of the Internal Revenue Service. The Criminal Investigation Division of the IRS is the division which deals with criminal violations of the federal "income tax" laws, including tax evasion and failure to file a return. Section 1132.55 of the Internal Revenue Manual (entitled "Criminal Investigation Division") begins as follows:

> "The Criminal Investigation Division enforces the criminal statutes applicable to income*, estate, gift, employment, and excise tax laws… involving* United States citizens residing in foreign countries and nonresident aliens subject to Federal income tax filing requirements*…"*
> [Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 1132.55 (1991 Ed.)]

Similarly, the federal regulations found in 26 C.F.R. §601.101(a) describe in general the functions of the Internal Revenue Service. The only specific mention in these regulations of who or what is subject to taxes administered by the Internal Revenue Service reads as follows:

> "The Director, Foreign Operations District, administers the internal revenue laws applicable to taxpayers residing or doing business abroad*,* foreign taxpayers deriving income from sources within the United States, and taxpayers who are required to withhold tax on certain payments to nonresident aliens and foreign corporations*…"*
> [26 C.F.R. §601.101(a)]

In keeping with the deceptive structure used throughout the statutes and regulations, the reader is left to assume that some other matters are also under IRS jurisdiction, but nothing else is specifically mentioned.

5.11.7 5 U.S.C., Section 8422: Deductions of OASDI for Federal Employees

Personnel who are employed by the Federal Government and who fall under the Federal Employee Retirement System fall under 5 U.S.C. Section 8422. This law sets forth the requirement to withhold OASDI for such employees. Here is the text of the law (which you can view for yourself at http://uscode.house.gov/title_05.htm). Please note the section which has a box around it, which was highlighted for emphasis:

(a)(2) The percentage to be deducted and withheld from basic pay for any pay period shall be equal to -
(A) the applicable percentage under paragraph (3), minus
(B) the percentage then in effect under section 3101(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to rate of tax for old-age, survivors, and disability insurance).
(3) The applicable percentage under this paragraph for civilian service shall be as follows:

Employee	7	January 1, 1987, to December 31, 1998.
	7.25	January 1, 1999, to December 31, 1999.
	7.4	January 1, 2000, to December 31, 2000.
	7.5	January 1, 2001, to December 31, 2002.

(b) Each employee or Member is deemed to consent and agree to the deductions under subsection (a). Notwithstanding any law or regulation affecting the pay of an employee or Member, payment less such deductions is a full and complete discharge and acquittance of all claims and demands for regular services during the period covered by the payment, except the right to any benefits under this subchapter, or under subchapter IV or V of this chapter, based on the service of the employee or Member.

Now isn't that interesting? The tyrants in Washington, D.C. who you elected to office just decided to in effect make contributions to Social Security "a precondition of employment" for federal "employees". They in effect have told federal employees:

> We know that if you were out in private industry, you wouldn't need to pay Social Security, so if you want to come to work for us, then you'll have to agree to allow us to take it out of your paycheck. And by the way, when we do, don't count on being able to take us to court for reducing your take home pay and depriving you of your property without due process, because by coming to work for us, you become indentured servants who agree implicitly that they are not being taken advantage of unfairly.

I'll bet the vast majority of federal employees don't even know that they are involuntarily consenting in this way to subsidize a bankrupt system such as Social Security by hiring on with the Federal Government. If contributing to social security were mandatory, do you think they would need a statute like this? Absolutely NOT!

All is not lost, however, because the "employee" they are talking about is that defined in 5 U.S.C. §2105, and does not include ordinary workers, but only public officers.

5.12 How Can I Know When I've Discovered the Truth About Income Taxes?

> "Income tax has made more liars out of the American people than golf."
> [Will Rogers]

One of the important questions people ask us about the contents of this book goes something like this:

> QUESTION: Since there is a big government and legal profession cover-up and I therefore can't get the government or the IRS to even discuss with me or admit the truths that I've discovered about income taxes by virtue of reading this book, then how can I know that my conclusions are correct? The same argument applies to finding a legal coach, because most lawyers enjoy keeping their clients as ignorant as possible since that is how they can extort the most legal fees.*

Good question! This is one of the first questions we asked ourselves when we started writing this book because we wanted to make sure everything in it was correct and obtain evidence supporting every aspect of our position right from the government's own mouth. In addition to answering the above question, we also wanted to answer the following even more important questions in the writing of this book, and we believe we have succeeded in answering all the questions posed in this section in this book. The reason for these additional questions is that if we can't answer them, then we don't have the basis for a sound "reliance defense" that we can use in court, should we ever be indicted for a tax crime and want to show the jury that there is no way we could have a "willful" intent to evade a known legal duty:

1. How can we establish a sound basis for understanding our tax liabilities if all the sources available from the government are not trustworthy? What exactly IS a trustworthy source? None of the following are trustworthy sources for a good-faith belief for a person who doesn't reside in the federal zone and isn't a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, so what exactly are the trustworthy sources of good faith belief?:
   - 1.1. The IRS and the federal courts say you can't rely on any of its forms and publications as a basis for belief about liability. See section 3.19 earlier for details on this scam.
   - 1.2. The Internal Revenue Code is not positive law, according to the legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204, so you can't rely on it. It is "prima facie evidence" of law, but that simply means it is "presumptive evidence". Anything involving presumption is a violation of due process and it is a sin for Christians to presume anything. Therefore, the I.R.C. is not a sound basis for belief. See section 5.4.2.4 and following earlier for details on this scam.
   - 1.3. All of the legal and accounting professionals who handle tax issues are government-licensed and therefore have a conflict of interest, so you can't trust them. See section 1.11.5 earlier for details on this scam.
   - 1.4. Federal judges who either receive benefits from the income tax, or who pay income taxes and are subject to IRS extortion cannot be objective in ruling on income tax issues. Our original constitutional model called for them to be paid from taxes on imports by people over which they have no jurisdiction to ensure no conflict of interest.

Since the advent of unconstitutional federal taxation within the states of the Union by the IRS starting in 1942, the system has been totally corrupt. Therefore, all federal judges who participate in Subtitle A income taxation are biased and have a conflict of interest in violation of 18 U.S.C. §208. See 28 U.S.C. §960 and the following link for details on this scam:
http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/WhyCourtsCantAddressQuestions.htm

1.5. Juries who try the issue in a federal court are not authorized by law to do so in most cases, because they don't live on federal property and are not statutory "citizens of the United States" (under 8 U.S.C. §1401) as required by 28 U.S.C. §1865. Therefore their findings are a violation of due process and not admissible as evidence of liability.

1.6. The rulings of federal district and circuit courts are irrelevant to people who are "nationals" and "non-resident non-persons" and who do not have a domicile or presence on federal property or within exclusive federal jurisdiction. Only the Supreme Court can rule on Constitutional issues anyway, and there aren't any Supreme Court rulings that contradict the content of this book. Why then should American nationals who are not connected to federal jurisdiction be expected to rely on irrelevant sources of law such as district and circuit courts?

2. How can we explain the irrational and inconsistent behavior of the federal judiciary towards the income tax issue? The constitutionality of the income tax has been continually debated in the federal district and circuit courts since the passage of the Sixteenth Amendment in 1913. These courts have had over 90 years to reach a sound and consistent policy and approach and yet there is still wide variations between the circuit courts on the constitutionality and authority of the federal income tax? The Fourteenth Amendment guarantees us equal protection of the laws, and yet the protection is NOT equal between circuit courts. Why is this? See section 3.20.1 earlier for detailed coverage of this area of "cognitive dissonance" in relation to income taxation.
3. Who are the specific key individuals chiefly responsible throughout history for erecting and maintaining this fraud and usury by our government called income tax? We answer that question in detail in the next chapter and put everything into historical context so you can see exactly how the "scheme" was created and who was responsible for it.
4. How has the legislative intent of the founding fathers been violated in erecting the fraudulent system of taxation we have now? What elements of the legislative intent have been violated? We answer that question in the next chapter, in section 6.1.
5. What efforts has the federal judiciary and the legal profession taken to conceal or hide the truth about these issues? What is the detailed history on this subject? We answer this question in the next chapter. We believe that the most reliable source of truth is to observe the things that people hide or avoid, and this tendency is confirmed by John 3:18-21 in the Bible.

To get to the answer to your question and the above additional equally important questions, you must take into consideration the following factors:

1. The IRS doesn't want you to know the truth. They won't respond to or acknowledge any of your good arguments. Usually, they will instead pick the weakest argument that won't stand up in court and assess you with a $500 frivolous return penalty for it using a meaningless form letter that doesn't teach you anything about the truth.
2. The legal profession doesn't want you to know the truth. That ought to be very clear from reading this chapter and section 6.13 of this book. The legal profession also has a monopoly of influence over all three branches of the federal government, because most of the people at the top are or have been lawyers, so they have a vested interest to preserve and enhance their power by keeping the general populace ignorant.
3. The courts don't want you to know the truth about income taxes. If they let the truth out, it would destroy the income tax system and eliminate the main source of pay for most federal judges, which amounts to a conflict of interest. Most federal judges probably also think you would destabilize our country economically if they entertained your valid arguments and the truth about income taxes. We know this isn't necessarily the case by reading section 1.10.9, but that is what they think. You can use the data in that section to convince them otherwise. Section 6.12 also clearly documents a judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax and how it is being implemented. Nevertheless, there are therefore strong incentives for judges to nix any and all arguments and to do everything they can to keep you from getting your evidence admitted and in keeping the jury, if there is one, from hearing the truth.
4. Your Congressman doesn't want you to know the truth. If he let the public hear the truth, he would probably:
   4.1. Reduce his benefits and fat retirement because of funding shortfalls in the government.
   4.2. Destroy his chances of being elected President.
   4.3. See a reduction of his power and influence by virtue of controlling half of your income to be spend on his favorite pet project.

If you look through the list above, the one that stands out and which provides the clearest evidence of conspiracy and actually allows you to research the cover-up and expose it is item 3 above: the federal courts. The courts are required to keep everything on the record, so when there is a cover-up, it's easier to spot and document. The key elements of the arguments we raise in this book have to do with the following issues:

1. No liability statutes in section 5.4.15.
2. The 861 source position in section 5.6.10.
3. The Non-Resident Non-Person Position in section 5.6.13, which hinges mainly on the definition of "State" and "United States".
4. Deceiving definitions found in section 3.12.1.

What we are trying to expose is a large-scale federal court cover-up of approaches that are successful in litigating against the income tax in court, so what we are looking for is the absence of discussion about the above subjects in the court records, and the avoidance of publishment of cases that deal with them. When we say "court" here, we don't mean "U.S. Tax Court", because U.S. Tax Court is a Kangaroo court that isn't even a court, which is why we recommend staying away from it! Instead, we mean Article III federal courts at the District and Circuit level, as well as the Supreme Courts. We are also looking for information from persons who have litigated any of these issues where judges have deliberately chosen to not publish their case and have sealed the court record (a violation of the First Amendment, we might add!). For such cases, we then want to go to the particular court where it was tried and request the findings of the court directly, because they would not be published in any electronic case databases we could search.

The above tactics describe exactly what we have done and the most convincing evidence we have of the truthfulness of the conclusions in this book is the conspicuous absence in any of the federal case databases of cases dealing with any of the four issues above. We searched over 200 years of case databases for the Supreme Court, Circuit courts, and District courts and found nothing that talks about any of these issues. Certainly, none of the issues we raise in this book are novel or new, and as a person who isn't a lawyer and who wrote this book, we would expect that there would have been at least one lawyer out there smarter than us who had used our arguments, but we found no record of any. The reason is because federal judges won't allow anything about those issues, which are guaranteed to be successful, to end up in any court record, for obvious reasons related to their continued employment and pay and in what appears to be a clear conflict of interest in violation of 28 U.S.C. 455. Section 6.12.7 (an ominous number!) talks about a positive act by a specific federal judge of covering up several cases litigated by William Conklin on issues of the Fifth Amendment relative to the income tax. The case of Lloyd Long found in section 9.2.6 is another example where a person was successful in defeating the income tax in court and which therefore went unpublished by the court. That is why we posted the court's findings for this case on our website at:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/CaseStudies/LloydLong/long1.htm

The case of Loren C. Troescher is another example of someone who was successful against the income tax in federal court and whose judgment went unpublished. We have the judgment posted at:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/CaseStudies/LTroescher/LorenTroescher.htm

We are sure there are other concrete examples of federal court cover-ups like Lloyd Long, William Conklin, and Loren C. Troescher. We therefore welcome your anecdotes, and especially those with specific information about cases you litigated that were unpublished. We would like to get the transcripts from a few such cases to post on our website, so please send us information about your cases, including hearing date(s), case numbers, and the court they were litigated in.

One more thing you will discover as you use the knowledge you have learned in this book against the IRS and your state taxing authorities is that as your skills improve and your arguments become clearer and better, the amount of time required for them to respond to your correspondence and income tax filings will go up dramatically. Our first tax refund filing was rejected in less than a couple months when we were still learning and had some flawed ideas. After we fixed all of the misconceptions in our logic, expanded this book considerably, and re-filed during a down season when few people were filing, we have been waiting over six months for a response from the California Franchise Tax Board. Sticking to the main arguments listed above and avoiding spurious arguments or weaker arguments clearly makes it very difficult for the IRS and state taxing authorities to respond to refund requests and zero income tax return filings (no income). Why? Remember that whenever you file a tax refund request or a zero tax return, the IRS and the state taxing authorities like to respond by citing the corrupt federal courts as their justification or precedent, which by the way are irrelevant if you don't reside in the federal zone. They will seldom respond by quoting taxing statutes or regulations to justify their position, because then you can hold them accountable for incorrectly applying the law and they can no longer claim "plausible deniability" as a defense. If you use successful arguments in your tax return filing that the courts have tried to cover up and won't publish, then you leave the IRS and your state taxing authorities with nothing to cite except the law in their response, and the law clearly shows that no one is liable! They are speechless and have no way to respond! For such a case, they will assign your return to some junior lawyer or clerk, who then gets stuck with "high maintenance" returns that no one wants to deal with, and these people are even less equipped to respond, so it takes forever.

The failure of the IRS or your state taxing authorities to respond to you is what we call a "Fifth Amendment" response. The Fifth Amendment, by the way, does not apply collectively to organizations like the IRS and only applies to natural persons (people). Therefore, they can't legally use it while representing the IRS, so they instead will just refuse to respond so they can keep you in fear and guessing. Likewise, if you call them on the carpet about assessing penalties against you and they recognize their error and eliminate the penalties or the invalid assessment, then they aren't likely to call you or send a letter letting you know they did this because they would then have to admit they were wrong and who they were, and that would subject them to personal liability. Therefore, if they drop penalties or assessments because you prove them wrong, don't expect any confirmation. If you want to find out who dropped the penalty or assessment and why they did it, you will most often have to call them back and demand information about who did it and why they did it. Or you will have to do a Freedom of Information Act request to get the documents showing what they did, and in some cases, they will redact the identity of the specific agent by blacking out the employee number so he isn't culpable. These people are criminals and weasels and they know it! It is very rare that you will get anything in writing about their mistakes, because then you could use it as evidence to sue them! They will therefore wait for you to call back and ask, and you ought to get it on tape for use as evidence in court. Under such circumstances, get the name and number of the incompetent employee and sue him for malfeasance using the information he provides about himself.

The principles revealed in this section are the Achilles Heel of the government's fraudulent and corrupt tax system and the secret to DESTROYING it. If you stick to good, sound arguments, stay on point, insist on your due process rights, and submit correspondence and returns that are MASSIVE, flawless, and so difficult and time consuming to deal with that they can't automate it and must hand it to an expensive IRS attorney to deal with, then the whole corrupt system will come crashing and burning down just like the statue of Lenin and the Berlin Wall did when communism fell in the Soviet Union! Make no mistake about it: communism and socialism are the SAME evil monsters we are fighting in this country in the case of the income tax, but our fight is a little bit different and mostly on an economic, political, and legal scale rather than by military means. Here is what the U.S. supreme Court said about the communism we are fighting, and these words are very profound:

> "… the maxim that the King can do no wrong has no place in our system of government; yet it is also true, in respect to the State itself, that whatever wrong is attempted in its name is imputable to its government and not to the State, for, as it can speak and act only by law, whatever it does say and do must be lawful. That which therefore is unlawful because made so by the supreme law, the Constitution of the United States, is not the word or deed of the State, but is the mere wrong and trespass of those individual persons who falsely spread and act in its name."
> *"This distinction is essential to the idea of constitutional government. To deny it or blot it out obliterates the line of demarcation that separates constitutional government from absolutism, free self- government based on the sovereignty of the people from that despotism, whether of the one or the many, which enables the agent of the state to declare and decree that he is the state; to say 'L'Etat, c'est moi.' Of what avail are written constitutions, whose bills of right, for the security of individual liberty, have been written too often with the blood of martyrs shed upon the battle-field and the scaffold, if their limitations and restraints upon power may be overpassed with impunity by the very agencies created and appointed to guard, defend, and enforce them; and that, too, with the sacred authority of law, not only compelling obedience, but entitled to respect? And how else can these principles of individual liberty and right be maintained, if, when violated, the judicial tribunals are forbidden to visit penalties upon individual offenders, who are the instruments of wrong, whenever they interpose the shield of the state? The doctrine is not to be tolerated. The whole frame and scheme of the political institutions of this country, state and federal, protest against it. Their continued existence is not compatible with it. It is the doctrine of absolutism, pure, simple, and naked, and of communism which is its twin, the double progeny of the same evil birth."

5.13 How the Government exploits our weaknesses to ILLEGALLY manufacture fraudulent "taxpayers"

The federal government uses a very methodical and sophisticated process to convert sovereign American Nationals into "taxpayers" who are subject to their laws and to illegal IRS extortion. Before you could understand all the nuances of this approach, you had to read nearly this entire chapter, which is why we waited until the end of this chapter to explain it. The process exploits the many human weaknesses and sins we talked about earlier in section 2.8 in order to expand the operation of the income tax to every person in society, including: Deception, presumption, fear, and ignorance.

> "Objections to its [the income tax] renewal are long, loud, and general throughout the country. Those who pay are the exception, those who do not pay are millions; the whole moral force of the law is a dead letter. The honest man makes a true return; the dishonest hides and covers all he can to avoid this obnoxious tax. It has no moral force. This tax is unequal, perjury-provoking and crime encouraging, because it is a war with the right of a person to keep private and regulate his business affairs and financial matters. Deception, fraud, and falsehood mark its progress everywhere in the process of collection. It creates curiosity, jealousy, and prejudice among the people. It makes the tax-gatherer a spy…The people demand that it shall not be renewed, but left to die a natural death and pass away into the future as pass away all the evils growing out of the Civil War."
> [Congressional Globe, 41st Congress, 2d Session, 3993 (1870)

In order to retain and protect your sovereignty as a "nontaxpayer" and a "non-resident non-person" or "state national" , you must understand exactly how their "matrix" functions so they won't be able to connect you up to it and so that you can disconnect yourself from it completely if you are already connected. Hence, this section. We have taken the time to break the "Government Matrix" into a detailed sequence of process steps that are employed against the average American so you can see how you progress from a free person to a government serf with no rights or privacy. At each step, we show you:

1. The event that denigrates or undermines your sovereign status as a "nontaxpayer" and a "non-resident non-person"
2. How your legal status, or at least your "presumed" status, changes at the conclusion of each significant event.
3. How the government uses the event to perform the abuse.
4. The legal authorities and references elsewhere in this book where you can learn more about the technique described in the step.
5. A few things you can do to fight their tactics at each stage.

These process steps are summarized below for your benefit. The table shows all the steps for a typical American who is born in a state of the Union, from the time he his born until the time that he reaches full adulthood.

1 Table 5-79: How the federal government manufactures "taxpayers" from Americans born in states of the Union

#	Event	Your status	What the federal government does	Legal reference(s) and evidence	Tactics to counter the government's fraud and coercion
1	Born in any American Hospital	1. "citizen of the United States" under Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment 2. "nontaxpayer" 3. Not a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 4. No SSN if your parents refused to give you a number under the Enumeration at Birth Program of the SSA.	Social Security Administration "Enumeration at Birth Program" causes hospital to give your child an SSN before his feet even touch the ground. They will pre-assign the number and then tell you that you can't refuse it.	See section 2.8.7.1: Social Security Enumeration at Birth Program	Don't name your baby until AFTER you leave the hospital. Make your own birth certificate using witnesses who were present at the birth. That way the government doesn't know what name to assign to the SSN they will try to force on you.
2	Pre-natal healthcare		If mother gets under Medical or any other state or federal aid, she must provide SSN and must show her tax returns as evidence of income and the fact that she is "paying her fair share" to the welfare worker.	Unofficial agency policy. Their forms will state that you can be denied the benefit if you refuse to disclose.	Get a business name from the county that uses your all caps name. Then apply for several numbers using the business name and an IRS Form W-7 or W-9. After they accept your application, cancel the business and the number.
3	Mother filing income tax forms	1. A presumed statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Your mother's or father's tax return says so. 2. Mother gets an SSN so she can claim you as a dependent.	IRS says on 1040 form that if you want a deduction for your child, you must claim them as "U.S. citizens" and list their Socialist Security Number. That means 8 U.S.C. §1401 citizens and NOT 14th Amendment citizens! In fact, there is no law requiring an SSN in order to claim a child as a dependent. It's IRS policy but there is no law.	See the IRS form 1040 at: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IncomeTaxRtn/Federal/IRSForm1040Instr.pdf.	Don't file the 1040 form. It's the WRONG form. If you file anything, it should be the 1040NR, and even then, most people born in states of the Union don't have any taxable income.
4	Your child needs to attend classes at grammar school	1. Must get an SSN. 2. Linked to global federal databases because of SSN.	The school will demand a Social Security Number form the child or they won't allow them to register for classes.	Unofficial school policy. They won't be able to show you a law that says you have to provide an SSN, but they will effectively discriminate against your child if he doesn't provide one because they will say that their computer system is not equipped to keep track of him without a number. Baloney!	1. Refuse to provide a number and demand that they show you the law that requires your child to have a number in the first place.; 2. Tell them to make up a number and bogus name that no other student has, and then correct the printouts after they are printed. No big deal. 3. If worst comes to worst, sue the school for discrimination against your child because he fails to obtain or use the mark of the beast.

5	Your child reaches his teens and might be working on the side soon	1. Child brainwashed to falsely believe that income taxes are required by law. 2. Officially put on notice that they will be government "serfs" when they reach 18 by government goons.	Public/government school invites the IRS and the American Bar Association in to terrorize teenage students in the public school classroom by warning them that "the law" says they have to pay "taxes" when they get a job. They refuse to answer any questions about the law itself or teach the students about the Constitutional limitations on the taxing power of the government. Likewise, the history teacher never taught the students about the Constitution limits on the government, and since the teacher and the school endorsed the visitors, the class full of teenagers believes them. Anyone else from the outside who insists on being present when the IRS and ABA are there to balance the story is told they aren't welcome, because the government that runs the school wants to "own" and control the sheep. The guests will base their visit on the deceptive IRS publications but will say nothing about the actual law.	See section 1.11.3, where we show an actual announcement by the IRS Tax Practitioner Newsletter showing their school mentorship program.	Remind your child that if a teacher or school attempts this, then you want to know about it. Call your school and find out if they have such a program. Then demand equal time and tell the students the "rest of the story" BEFORE the IRS agent and lawyer show up. They will be booed out. Show them the evidence. Use the materials in the SEDM Freedom University as your curricula: http://sedm.org/FreedomU/FreedomU.htm
5	Your child reaches his/her teens and wants a summer job.	1. Fills out a W-4 and submits to private employer. Ends up in IRS databases with his/her name connected to SSN.	His summer employer, who has been terrorized by the state and federal authorities to obey presumed "law" that in fact doesn't even exist, will be risk averse. He will do everything to transfer all the risks associated with noncompliance to the child by forcing him/her to provide an SSN and fill out an IRS Form W-4 so that he can begin withholding. If he fails to comply, he will be terminated and/or not hired for his summer job. Since kids are a dime a dozen and employers have little patience with them, the kid caves in.	1. 26 U.S.C. §6109 2. 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(d)(3) 3. IRS Form W-4 4. Section 5.4.13: You Don't have to provide a Social Security Number on your Tax Return 5. Section 5.4.14: Your Private Employer Isn't Authorized by Law to Act as a Federal "withholding agent"	Coach the kid on the trick the government will try to pull. Also get the kid off to a good start by marching down to talk with his first employer yourself and make sure he hears and understands every word. Use our booklet "Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers" available at: http://famguardian.org/Publications/FedStateWHOptions/FedStateWHOptions.pdf
6	The child receives his first W-2 from his private employer	1. IRS assumes they elected or volunteered to become federal serfs and treats SSN as a TIN, even though TINs can only be issued to "aliens" under 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(d)(3). 2. Child is now a "taxpayer" because he provided an SSN that IRS will illegally treat as a "TIN" in their system.	The IRS now has the kid's name in their computer connected with a number. 26 USC 6109 says the only type of number that is mandatory is a TIN, and an SSN is not a TIN. The IRS will try to match the SSN with an existing TIN in their system. When they find no match, they "assume" that the child volunteered to allow the IRS to treat the SSN on the W-2 form as a TIN. They won't tell the child that they made this presumption, but they have to make the presumption in order to collect anything from him or justify keeping the withheld funds. Otherwise, they are in receipt of monies wrongfully paid and must return them.	W-2 Form reports "wages". The only people who earn "wages" under 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3 are "public officers" of the federal government engaged in a "trade or business" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) who have volunteered to participate in the tax system. Participation is not mandatory.	The child can send to the IRS a form 4852 which zeros out all reported wages and therefore nullifies the false W-2. Make sure to include an attached letter indicating that the SSN/TIN reported by your employer was provided under duress, is wrong, and that the person responsible for the fact that it is wrong is the person instituting the duress, which is the payroll clerk at the private employer.

7	Your child needs to travel with you overseas and needs a passport	1. Child's/person's name is now connected with an SSN in the Department of State databases, and this information is shared with the IRS. 2. If child/person already owes taxes or any kind of child support, the federal government will not issue him a passport or let him leave the country until he/she "pays up".	The child fills out a DS-11 Passport form to get a passport. The form asks for a Social Security Number and warns that failure to disclose one can result in a $500 penalty by the IRS. This is a bogus warning, as we point out, because it has no implementing regulations, violates the Constitution because it is a Bill of Attainder. The form also creates a false presumption that the child is a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, because the only option it gives is that of statutory "U.S. citizen" for both you or your parents. If you fill out the form the way the government wants, you get an SSN and declare yourself under federal jurisdiction by being a statutory "U.S. citizen". Wrong idea!	1. Department of State DS-11 Passport Application Form. 2. 8 U.S.C. §1401 3. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B)	Have the child fill out the DS-11 form using the instructions we provide at: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Instructions/3.13ChangeUSCitizenshipStatus.htm This will cause you to be a "national of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) and will keep him out of federal jurisdiction by making him a "nonresident alien" under the Internal Revenue Code. It will also protect his privacy, because it shows how to get a passport without a Slave Surveillance Number.
8	The child decides to get a driver's license	1. State government now has connected them to the state revenue agencies databases. 2. Driver license information shared with state revenue agency so they know where to go after people who don't pay their state income taxes.	The state demands that he or she provide a Slave Surveillance Number in order to get the license.	1. Driver's license application for your state. 2. 42 U.S.C. §408 makes it a federal offense to demand a number if you don't want to provide one, or to discriminate if you won't provide one. Don't use this unless the discrimination occurs on federal property.	Don't provide the one that is for the child. Instead, go to the County Business office and file a "Doing Business As" name in the name of your child in all capital letters. Then apply for a Slave Surveillance Number for the business entity. Then use that number to get the license. After they issue the license, cancel the business and the number and tell the state that it is cancelled. Ask for an updated license that has the number removed. If they refuse, then prosecute them for falsifying numbers and for discrimination.
9	When your son or daughter reaches 18, he or she will try to register to vote	Voter registration form creates a false presumption that submitter is a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 who is subject to federal jurisdiction.	Most state voter registration forms have as a prerequisite that you are a statutory "U.S. CITIZEN" without defining the term. If you indicate yes and sign the form without clarifying what you mean, then the courts will assume that you are a statutory 8 U.S.C. §1401 citizen subject to federal law.	8 U.S.C. §1401	Instead of filling out the form the way the state wants you to, modify it according to our instructions in step 3.13 of our Income Tax Freedom Forms and Instructions at: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Instructions/3.13ChangeUSCitizenshipStatus.htm This will ensure that you remain a "national but not citizen of the United States" under federal law and do not fall under federal jurisdiction. Some states will even try to interfere with your free speech on their forms by preventing you from attaching anything to the voter application form, defining any of the words on the form, or clarifying the citizenship you are describing on the form, in a clear attempt to try to restrain you from leaving the "federal slave plantation", as we call it. When this happens you have a tort and you can sue the Registrar of Voters for violation of your First Amendment rights.

10	Child files his first federal tax return	1. Child is now officially and formally in the Beast's computer. His name is connected to a "Taxpayer Identification Number" 2. Child is officially and formally a "taxpayer" and will be relentlessly harassed and terrorized indefinitely if he refuses to comply with the tax code, which isn't even a law. Corrupted federal courts will facilitate this process.	Because the child had a poor public school education, because the government never taught him about how it tries to deceive him and how it tries to deceive him, then he is ill-equipped to circumvent the guile of the silver-tongued government lawyers who set up the bogus tax scheme. He was never taught that the Internal Revenue Code was repealed in 1939, that there is no liability statute creating a legal duty, and that only federal employees who elect to participate in the tax system are the ones who can be forced to pay. Consequently, he picks up a commercial tax guide written by Ernst and Young, which has repeatedly been persecuted by the IRS for not putting what the government wants the public to hear about the tax code in their commercial publications. Therefore, the only thing available to this poor sucker is government propaganda, and so he files his taxes like his parents have been all these years. He prepares the 1040 form, which makes him officially an "alien" who has a domicile in the federal zone.	1. Section 5.3 and following entitled "Know your Proper Filing Status". 2. 1040 form 3. This book, chapter 5 4. Says "taxpayers" are aliens: 26 C.F.R. §1.1(a)(2)(ii)	Don't file a form 1040! People born in states of the Union are "nationals" but not STATUTORY citizens (8 U.S.C. §1401)" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and "non-resident non-persons". They become "nonresident aliens" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) only if they serve in a public office and should file the 1040NR form if they file anything. The 1040 form makes you into an "alien" as far as the IRS is concerned.
11	The child decides to get married.	1. Marriage application connects person to a Slave Surveillance Number and is used for income tax enforcement. 2. If either spouse refuses to pay income taxes, then state and IRS can both go after EITHER spouse, because their property becomes community property. 3. Wife (usually) puts pressure on husband to participate in income tax system so that she can have security and peace of mind.	The marriage license application has a space for social security number. The license also authorizes the state government to take control over your children, all your earnings, and you if your spouse is unreasonable and refuses to agree with you how the relationship should go. They don't even need a reason to leave the relationship. This kind of godless relationship will eventually end up in divorce court, and then you will have to divulge all your income and asset information in a public record that anyone can read, in which an SSN is connected with your name as well. This kind of public disclosure of your private financial affairs makes you into a further IRS target. The next guy you piss off can march down and look at your record, find an error in your tax information, and snitch on you to the IRS. Bye bye privacy, dignity, and autonomy. You don't own your life anymore: the family law judge, the lawyers, and the IRS do.	1. Marriage license applications in most states. 2. "Income and Expense Declaration" used by the California Judicial Counsel in all family law proceedings.	Don't get a marriage license! Have a private marriage contract and do it in a state that doesn't have common law marriages like California. That way, the court can never treat you as legally married and the only thing they can enforce is the PRIVATE agreement between you. All litigation based on the private agreement should also require the court records to be sealed so that your private information doesn't end up in enemy hands. Hopefully, you'll pick a God-fearing husband or wife who doesn't believe in divorce.

5.14 Federal Income Taxes Within Territories and Possessions of the United States

This section summarizes liability for federal taxes within possessions and territories of the United States. The territories and possessions of the United States are enumerated in Title 48 of the U.S. Code. Throughout this book, we have said that these territories and possessions, the District of Columbia, and enclaves within states of the Union collectively comprise the entire "United States" that is the proper subject of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. Each of these areas, however, has its own unique constraints that are prescribed by the Internal Revenue Code.

We will now enumerate the major territories and possessions and summarize the constraints applicable to each. We'll also provide the applicable statutes and regulations that describe the requirements for each. The table below contains a list of the territories and possessions of the United States and the liability for payroll and income taxes within those areas:

Table 5-80: Federal Income Taxes Within Territories and Possessions of the United States

#	Name of place	Legal Status	Governing codes and regulation(s)	Tax liability
1	Virgin Islands	Territory	26 U.S.C. §932 48 U.S.C. §1397	Tax treaty in effect between U.S. and Virgin Islands. Federal gross income includes all income from sources within V.I. for nonresidents. Taxes between V.I. and Federal are split based on percentage of income "effectively connected to a trade or business" (public office) derived from each source.
2	Puerto Rico	Territory	26 U.S.C. §933(1) 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(8)(C)-1(a)	Earnings in Puerto Rico by residents are not "gross income". No payroll tax withholding for "citizens of the United States"
3	Guam	Territory	26 U.S.C. §931(a)	Earnings in possessions are not "gross income".
4	American Samoa	Possession	26 U.S.C. §931(a) 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(8)(B)-1(a)	Earnings in possessions are not "gross income". No payroll tax withholding for "citizens of the United States"
5	Swains Island	Possession	26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(8)(B)-1(a)	No payroll tax withholding for "citizens of the United States"
6	Northern Mariana Islands	Possession	26 U.S.C. §931(a)	Earnings in possessions are not "gross income". No payroll tax withholding for "citizens of the United States"

The interesting thing about the statutes and regulations listed above is the use of the term "citizen of the United States". That "citizen of the United States" is an 8 U.S.C. §1401 citizen born in a territory of the United States. If he/she was not born in a territory or was born in a possession, then he/she is a "national of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452. Several federal publications we have read, which are mentioned in section 4.11.7.5 identify the only "nationals of the United States" under federal law as those persons born in American Samoa and Swains Island. The other type of "national of the United States", the one born in a state of the Union, is not specifically mentioned but also included in that category by implication.

To summarize the above table, the only territory or possession that is subject to income tax under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is the Virgin Islands. 48 U.S.C. §1397 says that all revenues collected from income taxes within the Virgin Islands shall be given to the government of the Virgin Islands instead of the United States government. All the other territories and possessions don't have to participate in the tax system or get involved with payroll withholding. Earlier versions of IRS internal manuals relating to IMF decoding reveal that the people domiciled in the Virgin Islands are the only parties who for which a Transaction Code 150 is appropriate within the Individual Master File (IMF). The Individual Master File, recall, is the electronic record that the IRS uses to maintain the tax account of "individuals". Individuals, in turn, consist of only "aliens" and "nonresident aliens" under 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).

5.15 Congress has made you a Political "tax prisoner" and a "feudal tax serf" in your own country!

The U.S. Congress wants to obfuscate and abuse the law and your rights to make you a political tax prisoner and a "feudal tax serf" in your own country.

> "Shall the throne of iniquity [the U.S. Congress and the federal judiciary], which devises evil by [obfuscating the] law [to expand their jurisdiction and consolidate all economic power in their hands by taking it away from the states], have fellowship with You? They gather together against the life of the righteous, and condemn innocent blood [of "nontaxpayers" and persons outside their jurisdiction, which is an act of extortion and racketeering]. But the Lord has been my defense, and my God the rock of my refuge. He has brought on them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness; the Lord our God [and those who obey Him and His word] shall cut them off [from power and from receiving illegal bribes cleverly disguised by an obfuscated "code" as legitimate "taxes"]."
> [Psalm 94:20-23, Bible, NKJV.]

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Who else BUT Congress and the judiciary can devise "evil by law"?

They want the slaves to stay in "tax prison" and live on the federal plantation so they can harvest the loot from them. You're a host organism for the federal parasite and you better learn to like it, boy. You're part of the matrix! 26 U.S.C. §877, entitled "Expatriation to avoid tax" compels people domiciled inside the federal zone to continue paying extortion money for up to ten years after they expatriate their "national" status if they did so in order to avoid "taxes". Here is an excerpt from that statute, which by the way isn't a "law":

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART II > Subpart A > Sec. 877.
> Sec. 877. - Expatriation to avoid tax
> (a) Treatment of expatriates
> (1) In general
>
> Every nonresident alien individual who, within the 10-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year, lost United States citizenship, unless such loss did not have for one of its principal purposes the avoidance of taxes under this subtitle or subtitle B, shall be taxable for such taxable year in the manner provided in subsection (b) if the tax imposed pursuant to such subsection (after any reduction in such tax under the last sentence of such subsection) exceeds the tax which, without regard to this section, is imposed pursuant to section 871.
> (2) Certain individuals treated as having tax avoidance purpose
> For purposes of paragraph (1), an individual shall be treated as having a principal purpose to avoid such taxes if -

(A) the average annual net income tax (as defined in section 38(c)(1)) of such individual for the period of 5 taxable years ending before the date of the loss of United States citizenship is greater than $100,000, or

(B) the net worth of the individual as of such date is $500,000 or more.

In the case of the loss of United States citizenship in any calendar year after 1996, such $100,000 and $500,000 amounts shall be increased by an amount equal to such dollar amount multiplied by the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for such calendar year by substituting "1994" for "1992" in subparagraph (B) thereof. Any increase under the preceding sentence shall be rounded to the nearest multiple of $1,000.

Note one very important aspect of the above!: That a person who is a "nonresident alien" and who is expatriating their "nationality", is the proper subject of this law. This confirms the main hypothesis of this book, which is that you can indeed be a "nonresident alien" and a "national" and still not be a statutory "U.S. citizen" (8 U.S.C. §1401), because a "nonresident alien" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7791(b)(1)(B) as a person who is neither a "[statutory] citizen nor a [statutory] resident of the United States[federal zone]".

Based on the above, if you have property inside the federal zone and attempt to abandon your "national" status by expatriating and do it for the specific and main purpose of avoiding federal "taxes", then you are punished by having to pay taxes for the next ten years on any earnings you declare on a tax return! Don't let this law scare you though, because if you are an "alien" or a "nonresident" with respect to the federal zone, then you don't come under the jurisdiction of this law because Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is internal to the federal zone only. The IRS may try to misuse this law, however, to jeopardize or attach property that you have inside the federal zone if you refuse to pay extortion they will mistakenly say you owe under this provision. In other words, the IRS may try to use this as a source for "in rem" jurisdiction over your real property within the federal United States.

The U.S. Congress said long ago that the ability to expatriate is a right fundamental in protecting our liberties and must not be hindered or interfered with by government, and yet that same Congress is now contradicting itself by punishing those who expatriate because they want to pick their pockets before they leave the federal slave plantation!:

"Almost a century ago, Congress declared that "the right of expatriation [including expatriation from the District of Columbia or "U.S. Inc", the corporation] is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and decreed that "any declaration, instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officers of this government which denies, restricts, impairs, or questions the right of expatriation, is hereby declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of this government." 15 Stat. 223-224 (1868), R.S. § 1999, 8 U.S.C. § 800 (1940).[325] Although designed to apply especially to the rights of immigrants to shed their foreign nationalities, that Act of Congress "is also broad enough to cover, and does cover, the corresponding natural and inherent right of American citizens to expatriate themselves." Savorgnan v. United States, 1950, 338 U.S. 491, 498 note 11, 70 S.Ct. 292, 296, 94 L.Ed. 287.[326] The Supreme Court has held that the Citizenship Act of 1907 and the Nationality Act of 1940 "are to be read in the light of the declaration of policy favoring freedom of expatriation which stands unrepealed." Id., 338 U.S. at pages 498-499, 70 S.Ct. at page 296.That same light, I think, illuminates 22 U.S.C.A. §211a and 8 U.S.C.A. §1185."
[Walter Briehl v. John Foster Dulles, 248 F.2d. 561, 583 (1957)]

On the other hand, when states of the Union have attempted to do almost exactly the same thing in their statutes by trying tax and thereby punish those who try to physically leave the state or travel outside it and thereby escape its jurisdiction, the U.S. Supreme Court hypocritically struck down the law that did this. Here is an example:

"It was so decided in 1867 by Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35, 39. In that case this Court struck down a Nevada tax 'upon every person leaving the State' by common carrier. Mr. Justice Miller writing for the Court held that the right to move freely throughout the nation was a right of national citizenship. That the right was implied did not make it any the less 'guaranteed' by the Constitution. Id., 6 Wall. page 47. To be sure, he emphasized that the Nevada statute would obstruct the right of a citizen to travel to the seat of his national government or its offices throughout the country. And see United States v. Wheeler, 254 U.S. 281, 299 , 41 S.Ct. 133, 136. But there is not a shred of evidence in the record of the Crandall case that the persons there involved were en route on any such mission any more than it appears in this case that Duncan entered California to interview some federal agency. The point which Mr. Justice Miller made was merely in illustration of the damage and havoc which would ensue if the States had the power to prevent the free movement of citizens from one State to another. [314 U.S. 160, 179] This is emphasized by his quotation from Chief Justice Taney's dissenting opinion in the Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, 492: 'We are all citizens of the United States, and as members of the same community must have the right to pass and repass through every part of it without interruption, as freely as in our own States.' Hence the dictum in United States v. Wheeler, supra, 254 U.S. page 299, 41 S.Ct. page 136, which attempts to limit the Crandall case to a holding that the statute in question directly burdened 'the performance by the United States of its governmental functions' and limited the 'rights of the citizens growing out of such functions,' does not bear analysis.

[325] See Carrington, Political Questions: The Judicial Check on the Executive, 42 Va.L.Rev. 175 (1956).

[…]

"The conclusion that the right of free movement is a right of national citizenship stands on firm historical ground. If a state tax on that movement, as in the Crandall case, is invalid, a fortiori a state statute which obstructs or in substance prevents that movement must fall. That result necessarily follows unless perchance a State can curtail the right of free movement of those who are poor or destitute. But to allow such an exception to be engrafted on the rights of national citizenship would be to contravene every conception of national unity. It would also introduce a caste system utterly incompatible with the spirit of our system of government. It would permit those who were stigmatized by a State as indigents, paupers, or vagabonds to be relegated to an inferior class of citizenship. It would prevent a citizen because he was poor from seeking new horizons in other States. It might thus withhold from large segments of our people that mobility which is basic to any guarantee of freedom of opportunity. The result would be a substantial dilution of the rights of national citizenship, a serious impairment of the principles of equality. Since the state statute here challenged involves such consequences, it runs afoul of the privileges and immunities clause of the Fourteenth Amendment."
[Edwards v. People of the State of California, 314 U.S. 160 (1941)]

In effect, the state of Nevada in Crandall was trying to punish people for leaving the state by taxing them, so they would stay in the state. "Expatriation" has the equivalent effect of removing one's "res in public trust" from the jurisdiction and purview of the federal corporation called the "United States" government. In effect, people who expatriate are "divorcing" themselves from the corporate state and become political dissidents and "stateless persons" who refuse to subsidize what they may often view as unethical, immoral, and evil activities of that state. The federal government has no more right to obstruct, punish, or interfere with your ability to choose your citizenship or to leave the "federal corporation" (slave plantation) than the states have a right to tax citizens who choose to physically leave them. On that basis, the above punishment for those expatriating their nationality and allegiance is an unconstitutional deprivation of due process of law, not to mention unspeakably hypocritical on the part of the federal government. This kind of hypocrisy also amounts to an unconstitutional Bill of Attainder, which is a penalty imposed absent a court judgment, if the tax is imposed or collected without a court judgment in each specific instance of attempted collection.

5.16 The government's REAL approach to tax law

"The more corrupt the state, the more numerous the laws."
[Tacitus, Roman historian 55-117 A.D.]

"Sometimes the law defends plunder and participates in it. Thus the beneficiaries are spared the shame and danger that their acts would otherwise involve... But how is this legal plunder to be identified? Quite simply. See if the law takes from some persons what belongs to them and gives it to the other persons to whom it doesn't belong. See if the law benefits one citizen at the expense of another by doing what the citizen himself cannot do without committing a crime. Then abolish that law without delay ... No legal plunder; this is the principle of justice, peace, order, stability, harmony and logic"
[The Law, Frederic Bastiat]

"It's a game. We [tax lawyers] teach the rich how to play it so they can stay rich-- and the IRS keeps changing the rules so we can keep getting rich teaching them."
[John Grisham]

"The prestige of government has undoubtedly been lowered considerably by the prohibition law. For nothing is more destructive of respect for the government and the law of the land than passing laws which cannot be enforced. It is an open secret that the dangerous increase of crime in this country is closely connected with this."
[Albert Einstein, "My First Impression of the U.S.A.", 1921]

One of the most fascinating and informative books we've read about the subject of government and politics in general is Atlas Shrugged by Ayn Rand. This book changed my life when I read it for the first time at age 19. Here is how Ayn Rand describes government's approach to writing laws. We provide it here as intriguing food for thought and a nice dog biscuit (thanks!) for all of you with the diligence to read this far. It fits in very nicely with the previous section about the "void for vagueness" doctrine. The excerpt from Atlas Shrugged which follows describes a situation where the government [represented by Dr. Ferris] has cornered an honest and good man [Rearden] with bad laws into trying to make him believe that he has committed a crime so they can get what they want to STEAL from him, which is a valuable invention of his, the Rearden Metal:

> Dr. Ferris smiled. . . . . "We've waited a long time to get something on you. You honest men are such a problem and such a headache. But we knew you'd slip sooner or later - and this is just what we wanted."
> "You seem to be pleased about it."
> "Don't I have good reason to be?"
> "But, after all, I did break one of your laws."
> "Well, what do you think they're for?"
> Dr. Ferris did not notice the sudden look on Rearden's face, the look of a man hit by the first vision of that which he had sought to see. Dr. Ferris was past the stage of seeing; he was intent upon delivering the last blows to an animal caught in a trap.
>
> "Did you really think that we want those laws to be observed?" said Dr. Ferris. "We want them broken. You'd better get it straight that it's not a bunch of boy scouts you're up against - then you'll know that this is not the age for beautiful gestures. We're after power and we mean it. You fellows were pikers, but we know the real trick, and you'd better get wise to it. There's no way to rule innocent men. The only power any government has is the power to crack down on criminals. Well, when there aren't enough criminals, one makes them. One declares so many things to be a crime that it becomes impossible for men to live without breaking laws. Who wants a nation of law-abiding citizens? What's there in that for anyone? But just pass the kind of laws that can neither be observed nor enforced nor objectively interpreted - and you create a nation of law-breakers - and then you cash in on guilt. Now, that's the system, Mr. Rearden, that's the game, and once you understand it, you'll be much easier to deal with."

"The only thing new in the world is the history you do not know" [Author unknown]

"A nation can survive its fools, and even the ambitious. But it cannot survive treason from within [our own government]. An enemy at the gates is less formidable, for he is known and carries his banners openly. But the traitor moves amongst those within the gate freely, his sly whispers rustling through all the alleys, heard in the very halls of government[and Congress] itself. For the traitor appears not a traitor; he speaks in accents familiar to his victims, and he wears their face and their garments, and he appeals to the baseness that lies deep in the hearts of all men. He rots the soul of a nation, he works secretly and unknown in the night to undermine the pillars of a city, he infects the body politic so that it can no longer resist. A murderer is less to be feared"
[Marcus Tullius Cicero 42 BC]

"Americans have the government officials they deserve. Our society openly castigates the Almighty, thus making tolerable judicial pronouncements like that of today (6-26-02, Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals declared the national pledge unconstitutional because it used the phrase "one nation under God") which banished God from our national pledge. The darkness of night follows the light of day, and similarly when any nation shakes its angry fist at the maker of the universe, it can expect the withdrawal of divine protection. Conditions are now riper for a strike by our national tormenters. Those who disdain our sacred pledge are no better than our enemies."
[Larry Becraft, Attorney]

"A nation which does not remember what it was yesterday, does not know what it is today, nor what it is trying to do. We are trying to do a futile thing if we do not know where we came from or what we have been about."
[Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States]

"I believe there are more instances of the abridgement of the freedom of the people by gradual and silent encroachments of those in power than by violent and sudden usurpations."
[James Madison (1751-1863), President of the United States]

"In politics, nothing happens by accident. If it happens, it was planned that way."
[Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States]

"The strongest reason for the people to retain the right to keep and bear arms is, as a last resort, to protect themselves against tyranny in government."
*[*Thomas Jefferson (1743-1826), Founding father and President of the United States]

"There is no pillow so soft as a clear conscience."
[French Proverb]

After having diligently read Chapter 5 of this book, which documents extensively using current case law, statutes, and regulations why most Americans, and especially those who do not consent, are not liable to either file returns or pay income taxes under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, you most likely are thinking something like the following:

"The conclusions you reached and thoroughly documented in Chapter 5 of this book are totally incredible! I am simply stunned and rendered speechless by them and still have trouble believing them because they sound too good to be true. Surely our federal government wouldn't lie to us on that large a scale and get away with it, would they? Wouldn't the courts have blown the whistle on this a long time ago? Why doesn't my lawyer know this and if he does, why won't he tell me? I would feel much more thoroughly convinced of your arguments if you could analyze the issues and assertions you are making from a historical perspective to show how our nation evolved to the allegedly lawless state it currently finds itself in with regard to federal income taxes. If what you are saying is true, and so far I have no reason to doubt that it isn't, then there is a historical explanation for all of this that is completely consistent with your conclusions. Being the perpetual skeptic that I am [GOOD!..KEEP IT UP!], I therefore demand to see historical evidence that is consistent with your conclusions to make the picture completely clear for me and remove all remaining doubt."

Answering the above concerns is therefore the main focus of this chapter. We will show how corrupt lawyers and politicians over the years have conspired to deceive you into volunteering for a tax that didn't apply to you and which they had no jurisdiction to make you liable for paying. We will show how they cleverly weaved and perfected the deceptive spider web that snares you into their system and makes you into an unwilling slave of a federal government that has turned from the chief protector of your rights to the worst possible violator of your rights. Other additional but very valid reasons for documenting the history of this alleged conspiracy to defraud Americans of their income include the following:

1. There are two main statutory crimes involving federal income taxes that could possibly affect those who choose not to "volunteer" to pay federal income taxes:
   1.1. Tax Evasion, 26 U.S.C. §7201
   1.2. Willful Failure to File, 26 U.S.C. §7203

2. Both of the above statutory crimes are most often proved or demonstrated conclusively in court by the government by showing the jury that there was a willful attempt to conceal "taxable" income by the defendant. This requires the government to prove that:
   2.1. The defendant is completely familiar with the Internal Revenue Code and the implementing regulations found in 26 C.F.R..
   2.2. The defendant had income that was "taxable", which means that Internal Revenue Code (somewhere in the code) made you liable (you had a legal duty) for paying the tax.
   2.3. Because the defendant was liable to pay a tax, then he was also liable to file a return under the tax imposed in 26 U.S.C. §1.
   2.4. The defendant knew that that the law made him liable to pay the tax but he still refused to pay it and tried to circumvent it or the collection of it (Tax Evasion, 26 U.S.C. §7201)
   2.5. He violated a legal duty he knew he had by refusing to file the return showing his liability (26 U.S.C. §7203).
3. The motive for the act of concealment is extremely important in establishing the basis for the charge of "willfulness". If the motive for the concealment did not involve hiding taxable income or violating a known legal duty, but simply a desire to protect one's constitutional rights, one's property, obey the law, and guarantee that the government also obeys the law, then the act of concealment cannot be "willful".
4. There are more motives or reasons to conceal "income" from the government than simply just to evade taxes. One major additional reason might be because the government is quite frankly corrupt and lawless and simply can't be trusted to obey the laws on federal income taxes, which clearly show that there is no liability to either file a return or pay a tax. The act of concealing income under such circumstances is simply an exercise of liberty and pursuit of justice in conformance with laws designed to protect oneself from unlawful government abuse which essentially amounts to organized extortion and fraud.
5. The contents of this chapter will therefore trace the history of our country to convincingly and clearly show the basis for the conclusion and good faith belief that:
   5.1. We have a criminal and abusive federal government that tramples our Constitutional rights and which is downright dishonest in its dealings with most Americans with regard to federal income taxes. The main motive for that dishonesty is a love and lust for money and power, which the Bible says in 1 Tim. 6:10 is "the root of all evil".
   5.2. The criminal nature of our federal government and its widespread violation of our Constitutional rights and tax statutes found in the Internal Revenue Code and regulations undermines its credibility and violates the public trust and fiduciary relationship that it clearly has with Americans as document in Section 2.1 of this book.
   5.3. This tyrannical violation of law and public trust causes Americans to distrust their government, creates civil unrest, undermines our prosperity, and makes most people want to run and hide from the government to protect their privacy and liberty rather than risk being harmed by it. For instance, it makes people want to conceal private information from the federal government because of a fear that the information they provide will be misused to illegally single them out or prosecute them wrongfully using fabricated evidence and misquoted or falsified or misleading statements about their lawful tax responsibilities. This type of treatment is called blackmail and extortion when anyone other than the government does it, but the government seldom prosecutes or enforces such criminal laws when its own officers undertake such abuses.
   5.4. Running and hiding from our government because of our mistrust and its lawless behavior is a legitimate and honorable motivation for concealing income, and that this motivation has nothing to do with defying a known legal duty or with the notion of "willfulness". To the contrary, it is the only cost-effective way, in the absence of a government that obeys its own taxing statutes and the presence of a corrupt legal profession, to ensure that the outcome in our case is more consistent with the requirements of the law in the presence of a criminal government.

> "When the wicked arise, men hide themselves;
> But when they perish, the righteous increase."
> [Prov. 28:28, Bible, NKJV]

> "A prudent man foresees evil and hides himself [and his assets from plunder and harm],
> But the simple pass on and are punished."
> [Prov. 22:3, Bible, NKJV]

> "A prudent man foresees evil and hides himself; The simple pass on and are punished."
> [Prov. 27:12, Bible, NKJV]

> "The simple believes every word,
> But the prudent man considers well his steps.
> A wise man fears and departs from evil,*
> But a fool rages and is self-confident."
> [Prov. 14:15, Bible, NKJV]

5.5. Because there is no such thing as taxable income under Subtitle A for Americans who refuse to volunteer for the tax, it constitutes a fraud for our government to claim or imply otherwise, whether it be in the IRS Publications, the Internal Revenue Code, or 26 Code of Federal Regulations. In spite of this fact, we will show how the government has committed a constructive fraud by obfuscating the tax code over the years to further violate the public trust and illegally and fraudulently broaden public perception of their otherwise very limited jurisdiction to tax incomes only within the federal United States.

5.6. Fear created in the reader by a knowledge and complete understanding of this chapter will hopefully provide a sufficient basis to forever avoid the charge of "willfulness" in the act of concealment because we can show a valid and honorable and lawful motive for concealment related to other than criminal intent or defiance of a known legal duty.

Before we begin our first section within the chapter, we'd like to give you the big picture, or 20,000 foot view, of why you should believe that history confirms what we said in Chapter 5. All you have to do is consider the scenario below to realize that there is something seriously wrong going on here with our federal government.

1. The Supreme Court in 1895, in the case of Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895), declared that the first income tax imposed on Americans as unconstitutional.
2. The Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America,, fraudulently ratified in 1913, is what most federal politicians and tax lawyers erroneously say overcame the Pollock decision in 1895 and authorized the imposition of direct income taxes on sovereign Americans.
3. The Supreme Court declared in 1916, after the passage of the Sixteenth Amendment , the following in a case that has never been overruled:

> "..by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment conferred no new power of taxation but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged and being placed in the category of direct taxation subject to apportionment by a consideration of the sources from which the income was derived, that is by testing the tax not by what it was -- a tax on income, but by a mistaken theory deduced from the origin or source of the income taxed. "
> [Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

4. No changes to the Constitution that would affect income taxation have been made that would authorize the ruling in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust, 158 U.S. 601 (1895) to be invalidated or superseded.
5. In spite of all of the above, to this day, the federal government, and especially our dishonest Congressmen and the IRS, still continues to commit fraud and deceive the public by insisting that:
   5.1. The Sixteenth Amendment authorized Subtitle A income taxes on natural persons.
   5.2. The Sixteenth Amendment was properly ratified and therefore valid.
   5.3. Income taxes are legal and lawful for natural persons.
   5.4. Income taxes do not violate our constitutional rights.
   5.5. All Americans are "taxpayers" (persons liable for the payment of income taxes under Subtitle A), even though there is not statute or regulation creating such a liability.
   5.6. All Americans are statutory "U.S. citizens" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, which means they are domiciled federal territory subject to the sovereignty of the U.S. government. This is a fraud, because they are in most cases "nationals" but not statutory "citizens" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) who are effectively "nonresident aliens" as far as the Internal Revenue Code is concerned. "U.S. citizens" are defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 to mean

> "... a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa."

   5.7. That being a statutory "U.S. citizen" is what makes a person liable for income taxes, and that it is a patriotic duty to "pay our fair share."
   5.8. That the "individual" described at the top of the income tax form means statutory "U.S. citizen", when in fact it really means "U.S. resident alien" or "nonresident alien" as per 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).
   5.9. That the IRS publications are to be trusted to establish a good faith belief about our legal liabilities, even though the courts and even the IRS claim that they can't be relied upon for such purposes and that only the law is useful in establishing good faith belief.

Do you smell something REALLY FISHY going on here? We hope we have at least made you curious enough to finish reading this chapter and see for yourself that what we are saying is truthful and completely consistent with the law and with our country's history.

George Washington, in his Farewell Address to our country, said that religion and morality are indispensable aspects of our government. We believe this chapter painfully and forcefully confirms what happens when they cease to be priorities of our government and our courts:

> Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness—these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and to cherish them. A volume could not trace all their connections with private and public felicity. Let it simply be asked, "where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in courts of justice?" And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.
> It is substantially true that virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government. The rule indeed extends with more or less force to every species of free government. Who that is a sincere friend to it can look with indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?
>
> Promote, then, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened.

George Washington also confirmed the above assertions in the following quotes:

> "Propitious smiles of heaven can never be expected on a nation that disregards the eternal rules of order and right which heaven itself has ordained." - George Washington (1732-1799)
> "One's god dictates the kind of law one implements and also controls the application and development of that law over time. Given enough time, all non-Christian systems of law self-destruct in a fit of tyranny."

The history of our country is ripe with examples of noble statesmen like George Washington, who were wise statesmen of faith and character. Contemporary liberal media, liberal politicians, and a liberal education system have conspired to hide the deeds and beliefs of these noble men from the view of our young ones, and corrupted them to believe that there is no God, no absolute source of truth, and no right and wrong and everything is relative. The new god of the 21st century has become science and evolutionism, which together have robbed our children of religion and faith and mocked the Bible and God and our marvelous national birthright.

In the process of promoting their selfish agenda in our educational system, licentious and corrupt individuals in the legal, education, and media professions have made us into a carnal, licentious, and idolatrous society where the government robs us of our income using the ignorance it created in us as a weapon and thereby forces us to therefore depend on and trust it instead of God or our own initiative. In effect, they have outlawed personal responsibility by forcing us to participate in a Social Security Ponzi Scheme and income tax system. This violates the first commandment of the Bible.

> "You shall have no other gods [including government] before Me."
> [Exodus 20:3, Bible, NKJV]

Now we have a whole generation of conceited and idolatrous people (the "ME generation") who have known nothing but this selfish lie and deception and who do not know any other reality or even the way things used to be in our country because our public school history books have been censored to remove our spiritual heritage. See the following website created by David Barton for more information on this liberal censorship scam:

To make things even worse, public distaste for lawyers has caused few men of character to be attracted to public service or political office, thus leaving our government and our courts in the hands of selfish rogue lawyers and arrogant thieves. As our leaders, these losers set the standard for our society and are dragging it down with them:

> "Our government is the potent, the omnipresent teacher. For good or of for ill, it teaches the whole people by its example. Crime is contagious. If the government becomes a lawbreaker, it breeds contempt for the law; it invites every man to become a law unto himself; it invites anarchy. To declare that in the administration of the criminal law the end justifies the means...would bring terrible retribution. Against that pernicious doctrine this Court should resolutely set its face."
> [Justice Brandeis, Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438, 485 (1928)]

Is it therefore any surprise to see the extent of corruption in our government with these types of selfish and lawless individuals writing our laws and enforcing them? We think not.

The one thought we want you to finish this chapter with is the following, right from the Bible in Jeremiah 17:9-11:

In the meantime while we are waiting for Divine Justice and doing justice ourselves at every turn as Micah 6:8 requires, the Bible warns us what to expect and how we should behave in Micah 7:2-10:

> The faithful man has perished from the earth,

6.1 Main purpose of law is to LIMIT government power to ensure freedom and sovereignty of the people[313]

The main purpose of law is to limit government power in order to protect and preserve, freedom, choice, and the sovereignty of the people.

"When we consider the nature and theory of our institutions of government, the principles upon which they are supposed to rest, and review the history of their development, we are constrained to conclude that they do not mean to leave room for the play and action of purely personal and arbitrary power. Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts. And the law is the definition and limitation of power. "
[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

An important implication of the use of law to limit government power is the following inferences unavoidably arising from it:

1. The purpose of law is to define and thereby limit government power.
2. All law acts as a delegation of authority order upon those serving in the government.
3. You cannot limit government power without definitions that are limiting.
4. A definition that does not limit the thing or class of thing defined is no definition at all from a legal perspective and causes anything that depends on that definition to be political rather than legal in nature. By political, we mean a function exercised ONLY by the LEGISLATIVE or EXECUTIVE branch.
5. Where the definitions in the law are clear, judges have no discretion to expand the meaning of words. Therefore the main method of expanding government power and creating what the supreme court calls "arbitrary power" is to use terms in the law that are vague, undefined, "general expressions", or which don't define the context implied.
6. We define "general expressions" as those which:
   - 6.1. The speaker is either not accountable or REFUSES to be accountable for the accuracy or truthfulness or definition of the word or expression.
   - 6.2. Fail to recognize that there are multiple contexts in which the word could be used.
     - 6.2.1. CONSTITUTIONAL (States of the Union).
     - 6.2.2. STATUTORY (federal territory).

[313] Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014, Section 4; http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm.

6.3. Are susceptible to two or more CONTEXTS or interpretations, one of which the government representative interpreting the context stands to benefit from handsomely. Thus, "equivocation" is undertaken, in which they TELL you they mean the CONSTITUTIONAL interpretation but after receiving your form or pleading, interpret it to mean the STATUTORY context.

> equivocation
> EQUIVOCA'TION, n. Ambiguity of speech; the use of words or expressions that are susceptible of a double signification. Hypocrites are often guilty of equivocation, and by this means lose the confidence of their fellow men. Equivocation is incompatible with the Christian character and profession.

> Equivocation ("to call by the same name") is an informal logical fallacy. It is the misleading use of a term with more than one meaning or sense (by glossing over which meaning is intended at a particular time). It generally occurs with polysemic words (words with multiple meanings).
>
> Albeit in common parlance it is used in a variety of contexts, when discussed as a fallacy, equivocation only occurs when the arguer makes a word or phrase employed in two (or more) different senses in an argument appear to have the same meaning throughout.
> It is therefore distinct from (semantic) ambiguity, which means that the context doesn't make the meaning of the word or phrase clear, and amphiboly (or syntactical ambiguity), which refers to ambiguous sentence structure due to punctuation or syntax.
> [Wikipedia: Equivocation, Downloaded 9/15/2015; SOURCE: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Equivocation]

6.4. PRESUME that all contexts are equivalent, meaning that CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY are equivalent.
6.5. Fail to identify the specific context implied.
6.6. Fail to provide an actionable definition for the term that is useful as evidence in court.
6.7. Government representatives actively interfere with or even penalize efforts by the applicant to define the context of the terms so that they can protect their right to make injurious presumptions about their meaning.

7. Any attempt to assert any authority by anyone in government to add anything they want to the definition of a thing in the law unavoidably creates a government of UNLIMITED power.
8. Anyone who can add anything to the definition of a word in the law that does not expressly appear SOMEWHERE in the law is exercising a LEGISLATIVE and POLITICAL function of the LEGISLATIVE branch and is NOT acting as a judge or a jurist.
9. The only people in government who can act in a LEGISLATIVE capacity are the LEGISLATIVE branch under our system of three branches of government: LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, and JUDICIAL.
10. Any attempt to combine or consolidate any of the powers of each of the three branches into the other branch results in tyranny.

> *"When the legislative and executive powers are united in the same person, or in the same body of magistrates, there can be no liberty; because apprehensions may arise, lest the same monarch or senate should enact tyrannical laws, to execute them in a tyrannical manner.
> Again, there is no liberty, if the judiciary power be not separated from the legislative and executive. Were it joined with the legislative, the life and liberty of the subject would be exposed to arbitrary control; for the judge would be then the legislator. Were it joined to the executive power, the judge might behave with violence and oppression [sound familiar?].

6.2 How our system of government became corrupted: Downes v. Bidwell[314]

The dissenting opinion of Justice Harlan in the monumentally important U.S. Supreme Court case of Downes v. Bidwell described how the word game mechanisms at the end of the previous section would be abused to corrupt our system of government with a stern warning to future generations:

> In view of the adjudications of this court, I cannot assent to the proposition, whether it be announced in express words or by implication, that the National Government is a government of or by the States in union, and that the prohibitions and limitations of the Constitution are addressed only to the States. That is but another form of saying that like the government created by the Articles of Confederation, the present government is a mere league of States, held together by compact between themselves; whereas, as this court has often declared, it is a government created by the People of the United States, with enumerated powers, and supreme over States and individuals, with respect to certain objects, throughout the entire territory over which its jurisdiction extends. If the National Government is, in any sense, a compact, it is a compact between the People of the United States among themselves as constituting in the aggregate the political community by whom the National Government was established. The Constitution speaks not simply to the States in their organized capacities, but to all peoples, whether of States or territories, who are subject to the authority of the United States. Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304, 327.
> In the opinion to which I am referring it is also said that the "practical interpretation put by Congress upon the Constitution has been long continued and uniform to the effect that the Constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase or conquest only when and so far as Congress shall so direct;" that while all power of government may be abused, the same may be said of the power of the Government "under the Constitution as well as outside of it;" that "if it once be conceded that we are at liberty to acquire foreign territory, a presumption arises that 379*379 our power with respect to such territories is the same power which other nations have been accustomed to exercise with respect to territories acquired by them;" that "the liberality of Congress in legislating the Constitution into all our contiguous territories has undoubtedly fostered the impression that it went there by its own force, but there is nothing in the Constitution itself, and little in the interpretation put upon it, to confirm that impression;" that as the States could only delegate to Congress such powers as they themselves possessed, and as they had no power to acquire new territory, and therefore none to delegate in that connection, the logical inference is that "if Congress had power to acquire new territory, which is conceded, that power was not hampered by the constitutional provisions;" that if "we assume that the territorial clause of the Constitution was not intended to be restricted to such territory as the United States then possessed, there is nothing in the Constitution to indicate that the power of Congress in dealing with them was intended to be restricted by any of the other provisions;" and that "the executive and legislative departments of the Government have for more than a century interpreted this silence as precluding the idea that the Constitution attached to these territories as soon as acquired."
> These are words of weighty import. They involve consequences of the most momentous character. I take leave to say that if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will be the result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism.
> Although from the foundation of the Government this court has held steadily to the view that the Government of the United States was one of enumerated powers, and that no one of its branches, nor all of its branches combined, could constitutionally exercise powers not granted, or which were not necessarily implied from those expressly granted, Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304, 326, 331, we are now informed that Congress possesses powers outside of the Constitution, and may deal with new territory, 380*380 acquired by treaty or conquest, in the same manner as other nations have been accustomed to act with respect to territories acquired by them. In my opinion, Congress has no existence and can exercise no authority outside of the Constitution. Still less is it true that Congress can deal with new territories just as other nations have done or may do with their new territories. This nation is under the control of a written constitution, the supreme law of the land and the only source of the powers which our Government, or any branch or officer of it, may exert at any time or at any place. Monarchical and despotic governments, unrestrained by written constitutions, may do with newly acquired territories what this Government may not do consistently with our fundamental law. To say otherwise is to concede that Congress may, by action taken outside of the Constitution, engraft upon our republican institutions a colonial system such as exists under monarchical governments. Surely such a result was never contemplated by the fathers of the Constitution. If that instrument had contained a word suggesting the possibility of a result of that character it would never have been adopted by the People of the United States. The idea that this country may acquire territories anywhere upon the earth, by conquest or treaty, and hold them as mere colonies or provinces — the people inhabiting them to enjoy only such rights as Congress chooses to accord to them — is wholly inconsistent with the spirit and genius as well as with the words of the Constitution.

The idea prevails with some — indeed, it found expression in arguments at the bar — that we have in this country substantially or practically two national governments; one, to be maintained under the Constitution, with all its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside and independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers as other nations of the earth are accustomed to exercise. It is one thing to give such a latitudinarian construction to the Constitution as will bring the exercise of power by Congress, upon a particular occasion or upon a particular subject, within its provisions. It is quite a different thing to say that Congress may, if it so elects, proceed outside of the Constitution. The glory of our American system *381*381* of government is that it was created by a written constitution which protects the people against the exercise of arbitrary, unlimited power, and the limits of which instrument may not be passed by the government it created, or by any branch of it, or even by the people who ordained it, except by amendment or change of its provisions. "To what purpose," Chief Justice Marshall said in Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 176,"are powers limited, and to what purpose is that limitation committed to writing, if these limits may, at any time, be passed by those intended to be restrained? The distinction between a government with limited and unlimited powers is abolished if those limits do not confine the persons on whom they are imposed, and if acts prohibited and acts allowed are of equal obligation."

The wise men who framed the Constitution, and the patriotic people who adopted it, were unwilling to depend for their safety upon what, in the opinion referred to, is described as "certain principles of natural justice inherent in Anglo-Saxon character which need no expression in constitutions or statutes to give them effect or to secure dependencies against legislation manifestly hostile to their real interests." They proceeded upon the theory — the wisdom of which experience has vindicated — that the only safe guaranty against governmental oppression was to withhold or restrict the power to oppress. They well remembered that Anglo-Saxons across the ocean had attempted, in defiance of law and justice, to trample upon the rights of Anglo-Saxons on this continent and had sought, by military force, to establish a government that could at will destroy the privileges that inhere in liberty. They believed that the establishment here of a government that could administer public affairs according to its will unrestrained by any fundamental law and without regard to the inherent rights of freemen, would be ruinous to the liberties of the people by exposing them to the oppressions of arbitrary power. Hence, the Constitution enumerates the powers which Congress and the other Departments may exercise — leaving unimpaired, to the States or the People, the powers not delegated to the National Government nor prohibited to the States. That instrument so expressly declares in *382*382* the Tenth Article of Amendment. It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside of the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution.

Again, it is said that Congress has assumed, in its past history, that the Constitution goes into territories acquired by purchase or conquest only when and as it shall so direct, and we are informed of the liberality of Congress in legislating the Constitution into all our contiguous territories. This is a view of the Constitution that may well cause surprise, if not alarm. Congress, as I have observed, has no existence except by virtue of the Constitution. It is the creature of the Constitution. It has no powers which that instrument has not granted, expressly or by necessary implication. I confess that I cannot grasp the thought that Congress which lives and moves and has its being in the Constitution and is consequently the mere creature of that instrument, can, at its pleasure, legislate or exclude its creator from territories which were acquired only by authority of the Constitution.

By the express words of the Constitution, every Senator and Representative is bound, by oath or affirmation, to regard it as the supreme law of the land. When the Constitutional Convention was in session there was much discussion as to the phraseology of the clause defining the supremacy of the Constitution, laws and treaties of the United States. At one stage of the proceedings the Convention adopted the following clause: "This Constitution, and the laws of the United States made in pursuance thereof, and all the treaties made under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the several States and of their citizens and inhabitants, and the judges of the several States shall be bound thereby in their decisions, anything in the constitutions or laws of the several States to the contrary notwithstanding." This clause was amended, on motion of Mr. Madison, by inserting after the words "all treaties made" the words "or which shall be made." If the clause, so amended, had been inserted in the Constitution as finally adopted, perhaps *383*383* there would have been some justification for saying that the Constitution, laws and treaties of the United States constituted the supreme law only in the States, and that outside of the States the will of Congress was supreme. But the framers of the Constitution saw the danger of such a provision, and put into that instrument in place of the above clause the following: "This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding." Meigs's Growth of the Constitution, 284, 287. That the Convention struck out the words "the supreme law of the several States" and inserted "the supreme law of the land," is a fact of no little significance. The "land" referred to manifestly embraced all the peoples and all the territory, whether within or without the States, over which the United States could exercise jurisdiction or authority.

Further, it is admitted that some of the provisions of the Constitution do apply to Porto Rico and may be invoked as limiting or restricting the authority of Congress, or for the protection of the people of that island. And it is said *that there is a clear distinction between such prohibitions "as go to the very root of the power of Congress to act at all, irrespective of time or place, and such as are operative only `throughout the United States' or among the several States." In the enforcement of this suggestion it is said in one of the opinions just delivered: "Thus, when the Constitution declares that `no bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed,' and that `no title of nobility shall be granted by the United States,' it goes to the competency of Congress to pass a bill of that description." I cannot accept this reasoning as consistent with the Constitution or with sound rules of interpretation. The express prohibition upon the passage by Congress of bills of attainder, or of ex post facto laws, or the granting of titles of nobility, goes no more directly to the root of the power of Congress than does the express prohibition against the imposition by Congress of any 384*384 duty, impost or excise that is not uniform throughout the United States.* The opposite theory, I take leave to say, is quite as extraordinary as that which assumes that Congress may exercise powers outside of the Constitution, and may, in its discretion, legislate that instrument into or out of a domestic territory of the United States.

In the opinion to which I have referred it is suggested that conditions may arise when the annexation of distant possessions may be desirable. "If," says that opinion, "those possessions are inhabited by alien races, differing from us in religion, customs, laws, methods of taxation and modes of thought, the administration of government and justice, according to Anglo-Saxon principles, may for a time be impossible; and the question at once arises whether large concessions ought not to be made for a time, that ultimately our own theories may be carried out, and the blessings of a free government under the Constitution extended to them. We decline to hold that there is anything in the Constitution to forbid such action." In my judgment, the Constitution does not sustain any such theory of our governmental system. Whether a particular race will or will not assimilate with our people, and whether they can or cannot with safety to our institutions be brought within the operation of the Constitution, is a matter to be thought of when it is proposed to acquire their territory by treaty. A mistake in the acquisition of territory, although such acquisition seemed at the time to be necessary, cannot be made the ground for violating the Constitution or refusing to give full effect to its provisions. The Constitution is not to be obeyed or disobeyed as the circumstances of a particular crisis in our history may suggest the one or the other course to be pursued. The People have decreed that it shall be the supreme law of the land at all times. When the acquisition of territory becomes complete, by cession, the Constitution necessarily becomes the supreme law of such new territory, and no power exists in any Department of the Government to make "concessions" that are inconsistent with its provisions. The authority to make such concessions implies the existence in Congress of power to declare that constitutional provisions may be ignored under special or *385*385* embarrassing circumstances. No such dispensing power exists in any branch of our Government. The Constitution is supreme over every foot of territory, wherever situated, under the jurisdiction of the United States, and its full operation cannot be stayed by any branch of the Government in order to meet what some may suppose to be extraordinary emergencies. If the Constitution is in force in any territory, it is in force there for every purpose embraced by the objects for which the Government was ordained. Its authority cannot be displaced by concessions, even if it be true, as asserted in argument in some of these cases, that if the tariff act took effect in the Philippines of its own force, the inhabitants of Mandanao, who live on imported rice, would starve, because the import duty is many fold more than the ordinary cost of the grain to them. The meaning of the Constitution cannot depend upon accidental circumstances arising out of the products of other countries or of this country. We cannot violate the Constitution in order to serve particular interests in our own or in foreign lands. Even this court, with its tremendous power, must heed the mandate of the Constitution. No one in official station, to whatever department of the Government he belongs, can disobey its commands without violating the obligation of the oath he has taken. By whomsoever and wherever power is exercised in the name and under the authority of the United States, or of any branch of its Government, the validity or invalidity of that which is done must be determined by the Constitution.

In DeLima v. Bidwell, just decided, we have held that upon the ratification of the treaty with Spain, Porto Rico ceased to be a foreign country and became a domestic territory of the United States. We have said in that case that from 1803 to the present time there was not a shred of authority, except a dictum in one case, "for holding that a district ceded to and in possession of the United States remains for any purpose a foreign territory;" that territory so acquired cannot be "domestic for one purpose and foreign for another;" and that any judgment to the contrary would be "pure judicial legislation," for which there was no warrant in the Constitution or in the powers conferred upon this court. Although, as we have just decided, 386*386 Porto Rico ceased, after the ratification of the treaty with Spain, to be a foreign country within the meaning of the tariff act, and became a domestic country — "a territory of the United States" — it is said that if Congress so wills it may be controlled and governed outside of the Constitution and by the exertion of the powers which other nations have been accustomed to exercise with respect to territories acquired by them; in other words, we may solve the question of the power of Congress under the Constitution, by referring to the powers that may be exercised by other nations. I cannot assent to this view. I reject altogether the theory that Congress, in its discretion, can exclude the Constitution from a domestic territory of the United States, acquired, and which could only have been acquired, in virtue of the Constitution. I cannot agree that it is a domestic territory of the United States for the purpose of preventing the application of the tariff act imposing duties upon imports from foreign countries, but not a part of the United States for the purpose of enforcing the constitutional requirement that all duties, imposts and excises imposed by Congress "shall be uniform throughout the United States." How Porto Rico can be a domestic territory of the United States, as distinctly held in DeLima v. Bidwell, and yet, as is now held, not embraced by the words "throughout the United States," is more than I can understand.

We heard much in argument about the "expanding future of our country." It was said that the United States is to become what is called a "world power;" and that if this Government intends to keep abreast of the times and be equal to the great destiny that awaits the American people, it must be allowed to exert all the power that other > nations are accustomed to exercise. My answer is, that the fathers never intended that the authority and influence of this nation should be exerted otherwise than in accordance with the Constitution. If our Government needs more power than is conferred upon it by the Constitution, that instrument provides the mode in which it may be amended and additional power thereby obtained. The People of the United States who ordained the Constitution never supposed that a change could be made in our system of government *387*387* by mere judicial interpretation. They never contemplated any such juggling with the words of the Constitution as would authorize the courts to hold that the words "throughout the United States," in the taxing clause of the Constitution, do not embrace a domestic "territory of the United States" having a civil government established by the authority of the United States. This is a distinction which I am unable to make, and which I do not think ought to be made when we are endeavoring to ascertain the meaning of a great instrument of government.

Could it possibly be doubted that if Congress has been handed by the U.S. Supreme Court ANY CIRCUMSTANCE in which it can exercise its discretion in a way that COMPLETELY disregards the entire constitution, that they would not succumb to the temptation to enact it, expand it, and make it apply through trickery to everyone, as they have done with the income tax and federal franchises in general? NOT!

> "In every government on earth is some trace of human weakness, some germ of corruption and degeneracy, which cunning will discover, and wickedness insensibly open, cultivate and improve."
> [Thomas Jefferson: Notes on Virginia Q.XIV, 1782. ME 2:207]

THIS in fact, is what Justice Harlan was talking about in the following excerpt in the above:

> "These are words of weighty import. They involve consequences of the most momentous character. I take leave to say that if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will be the result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism."
> "This nation is under the control of a written constitution, the supreme law of the land and the only source of the powers which our Government, or any branch or officer of it, may exert at any time or at any place. Monarchical and despotic governments, unrestrained by written constitutions, may do with newly acquired territories what this Government may not do consistently with our fundamental law. To say otherwise is to concede that Congress may, by action taken outside of the Constitution, engraft upon our republican institutions a colonial system such as exists under monarchical governments. Surely such a result was never contemplated by the fathers of the Constitution. If that instrument had contained a word suggesting the possibility of a result of that character it would never have been adopted by the People of the United States. The idea that this country may acquire territories anywhere upon the earth, by conquest or treaty, and hold them as mere colonies or provinces — the people inhabiting them to enjoy only such rights as Congress chooses to accord to them — is wholly inconsistent with the spirit and genius as well as with the words of the Constitution."
> "The idea prevails with some — indeed, it found expression in arguments at the bar — that we have in this country substantially or practically two national governments; one, to be maintained under the Constitution, with all its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside and independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers as other nations of the earth are accustomed to exercise." It is one thing to give such a latitudinarian construction to the Constitution as will bring the exercise of power by Congress, upon a particular occasion or upon a particular subject, within its provisions. It is quite a different thing to say that Congress may, if it so elects, proceed outside of the Constitution. The glory of our American system *381*381* of government is that it was created by a written constitution which protects the people against the exercise of arbitrary, unlimited power, and the limits of which instrument may not be passed by the government it created, or by any branch of it, or even by the people who ordained it, except by amendment or change of its provisions. "To what purpose," Chief Justice Marshall said in Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 176,"are powers limited, and to what purpose is that limitation committed to writing, if these limits may, at any time, be passed by those intended to be restrained? The distinction between a government with limited and unlimited powers is abolished if those limits do not confine the persons on whom they are imposed, and if acts prohibited and acts allowed are of equal obligation."
> [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), Justice Harlan, Dissenting]

Justice Harlan is saying that we now have a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde government. They did in fact do what he predicted: Graft a monarchical colonial system for federal territory onto an egalitarian free republican system. Starting with the Downes case, the U.S. Supreme Court declared and recognized essentially that:

1. NO PART of the Constitution limits what the national government can do in a territory, including the prohibition against Titles of Nobility and even ex post facto laws.
2. As long as Congress is legislating for territories, it can do whatever it wants, including an income tax, just like every other nation of the earth. In fact, this is the source of all the authority for enacting the income tax to begin with.
3. If Congress wants to invade the states commercially and tax them, all it has to do is:
   3.1. Write such legislation ONLY for the territories and implement it as a franchise. Since all franchises are based on contract, then they can be enforced extraterritorially, including in a state. This is the basis for the Social Security Act of 1935, in fact.

> Debt and contract [franchise agreement, in this case] are of no particular place.
> Locus contractus regit actum.
> The place of the contract [franchise agreement, in this case] governs the act.

> "It is generally conceded that a franchise is the subject of a contract between the grantor and the grantee, and that it does in fact constitute a contract when the requisite element of a consideration is present.[315] Conversely, a franchise granted without consideration is not a contract binding upon the state, franchisee, or pseudo-franchisee.[316] "

   3.2. Entice people in states of the Union with a bribe to sign up for the territorial franchise, and make it IMPOSSIBLE to quit the system. This uses capitalism to implement socialism.
   3.3. Through legal deception and fraud, make the franchise legislation LOOK like:
   3.3.1. It applies to CONSTITUTIONAL states rather than only STATUTORY "States" and territories.
   3.3.2. It ISN'T a franchise or excise.
   These things are done through "equivocation", in which TERRITORIAL STATUTORY "States" under 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and CONSTITUTIONAL States of the Union are made ot appear and act the same. This was also done in the Sixteenth Amendment, which granted no new powers to Congress, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916). See:

Why You Aren't Eligible for Social Security, Form #06.001 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

   3.4. Establish a EXTRACONSTITUTIONAL revenue collection apparatus that is NOT part of the constitutional government. Namely the I.R.S. is not now and never has been part of the U.S. Government. Instead, it is a straw man for the Federal Reserve. The Federal Reserve, in fact, is not more governmental than Federal Express. See:

Origins and Authority of the Internal Revenue Service, Form #05.005 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

   3.5. Use propaganda and abusive regulation of the banking system and employers to turn banks and private companies in states of the Union into federal employment recruiters, in which you can't open an account or pursue

"employment" without becoming a privileged and enfranchised public officer representing an PUBLIC/GOVERNMENT office domiciled on federal territory and subject to the territorial law. See:

Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers, Form #09.001 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3.6. Bribe CONSTITUTIONAL states with "commercial incentives" or subsidies if they in essence agree by compact or agreement to act as federal territories and allow the income tax to be enforced within their borders. This is done through DEBT and the Federal Reserve as well as the Agreements on Coordination of Tax Administration (A.C.T.A.) between the national government and the states. Now obviously, they can only do that within ENCLAVES within their external borders using the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939, but they will PRETEND for the sake of filthy lucre that it applies EVERYWHERE in the state by:

3.6.1. Not defining the term "State" within their revenue codes.

3.6.2. Calling those who insist on these limits "frivolous" in court.

3.7. Engage in an ongoing propaganda campaign to discredit and persecute all those who expose and try to remedy the above. This is done by making the government UNACCOUNTABLE for the truth or accuracy of ANYTHING it says or does administratively. We have been a target of that campaign. See:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3.8. Legislatively create a conflict of interest in the judges administering the territorial franchise so that they will be forced to apply it to the states of the Union.

3.9. Get the U.S. Supreme Court, through pressure on individual justices, to allow the financial conflict of interest to stand and expand.

3.10. Use the U.S. Supreme Court as a method to embargo challenges to the above illegalities by denying appeals. This was done using the Certiorari Act of 1925 proposed by former President and Chief Justice William Howard Taft. This was the same President who proposed the Sixteenth Amendment and FRAUDULENTLY got it passed by lame duck Secretary of State Philander Knox.[317]

That last step: creating a conflict of interest in judges was accomplished starting in 1918, right after Downes v. Bidwell and just after the Sixteenth Amendment and Federal Reserve Act were passed in 1913. In particular, here is how it was accomplished:

1. Making judges into "taxpayers" started in 1918. This allowed them to become the target of political persecution by the Bureau of Internal Revenue if they properly enforce and protect the civil status of parties.
   1.1. This began first with the Revenue Act of 1918, 40 Stat. 1065, Section 213(a) and was declared unconstitutional.
   1.2. The second attempt to make judges taxpayers occurred the Revenue Act of 1932, 47 Stat. 169 and this time it stuck.
   1.3. This conflict of interest is also documented in Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920) , Miles v. Graham, 268 U.S. 501 (1925), O'Malley v. Woodrough, 309 U.S. 277 (1939), and U.S. v. Hatter, 532 U.S. 557, 121 S.Ct. 1782, (2001).
2. Judges have been allowed, illegally, to serve as BOTH franchise judges under Article IV of the Constitution and CONSTITUTIONAL judges under Article III. When given a choice of the two, they will always pick the Article IV franchise judge status, because it financially rewards them and unduly elevates their own importance and jurisdiction.
3. The IRS is allowed to financially reward judges and prosecutors for convicting those who do not consent to the identity theft. See 26 U.S.C. §7623, I.R.M. 25.2.2.

The above process is EXACTLY what they have done. From the 10,000 foot or MACRO view, it essentially amounts to identity theft. That identity theft is exhaustively described in the following:

Government Identity Theft, Form #05.046 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The rest of this document essentially describes how that identity theft is accomplished by the abuse of conflict of interest, the rules of statutory interpretation, and equivocation from a general perspective. That language abuse is also particularized in the above document to specific other legal contexts, such as:

[317] See: The Law that Never Was, William Benson. It documents the fraudulent ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment. See also Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 6.6.1; http://famguardian.org/Publications/GreatIRSHoax/GreatIRSHoax.htm.

1. Domicile identity theft.
2. Citizenship identity theft.
3. Franchise identity theft.

Ultimately, however, all of the identity theft they employ is accomplished by misrepresenting their authority and enforcing laws outside their territory. It really boils down to:

1. Replacing PRIVATE rights with PUBLIC privileges.
2. Turning "citizens" and "residents" into the equivalent of government public officers or employees.
3. Turning all civil law essentially into the employment agreement of virtually everyone who claims to be a STATUTORY "citizen" or "resident".
4. A commercial invasion of the states of the Union in violation of Article 4, Section 4.
5. The abuse of franchises and privileges within the states of the Union to create a caste system that emulates the British Monarchy we tried to escape by fighting a revolution.
6. Using the civil statutory law as a mechanism to limit and control PEOPLE rather than the GOVERNMENT.
7. Creating a government of UNLIMITED powers. There are no limits on what an EMPLOYER can order his EMPLOYEES or OFFICERS to do, and THAT is what you are if you claim to be a STATUTORY "citizen" under any act of Congress.
8. Using "selective enforcement" to discredit and destroy all those who attempt to QUIT their job as a government officer or employee called a STATUTORY "citizen" or "resident". THIS is how the fraudulent identity theft scheme and government mafia protects and expands itself.

6.3 How Scoundrels Corrupted Our Republican Form of Government

> "All systems of government suppose they are to be administered by men of common sense and common honesty. In our country, as all ultimately depends on the voice of the people, they have it in their power, and it is to be presumed they generally will choose men of this description: but if they will not, the case, to be sure, is without remedy. If they choose fools, they will have foolish laws. If they choose knaves, they will have knavish ones. But this can never be the case until they are generally fools or knaves themselves, which, thank God, is not likely ever to become the character of the American people." [Justice Iredell] (Fries's Case (CC) F Cas No 5126, supra.)
> [Ludecke v. Watkins, 335 U.S. 160, 92 L.Ed. 1881, 1890, 68 S.Ct. 1429 (1948)]

> "The chief enemies of republican freedom are mental sloth, conformity, bigotry, superstition, credulity, monopoly in the market of ideas, and utter, benighted ignorance."
> [Adderley v. State of Florida, 385 U.S. 39, 49 (1967)]

6.3.1 Original Design of our Republic

We very thoroughly covered the foundations of our republican form of government earlier in chapter 4. We showed you in section 4.1 the hierarchy of sovereignty and where you fit personally in that hierarchy. We showed you in section 4.4.1 that Article 4, Section 4 of the U.S. Constitution guarantees to all Americans a "republican form of government". Then in section 5.1.1 we showed you the order that our state and federal governments were created and the distinct sovereignties that comprise all the elements of our republican (not democratic) political system. Now we are going to tie the whole picture together and show you graphically the tools and techniques that specific covetous government servants have used over the years to corrupt and debase that system for their own personal financial and political benefit.

> "The king establishes the land by justice; but he who receives bribes overthrows it."
> [Prov. 29:4, Bible, NKJV]

After you have learned these techniques by which corruption was introduced, we will spend the rest of the chapter showing exactly how these techniques have been specifically applied over the years to corrupt and debase and destroy our political system and undermine our personal liberties, rights, and freedoms. This will train your perception to be on the lookout for any future attempts by our covetous politicians to further corrupt our system so that you can act swiftly at a political level to oppose and prevent it.

First of all, the foundation of our republican form of government is all the following as a group:

1. Sovereign power held by the People through their direct participation in the affairs of government as jurists and voters.

> "The sovereignty of a state does not reside in the persons who fill the different departments of its government, but in the People, from whom the government emanated; and they may change it at their discretion. Sovereignty, then in this country, abides with the constituency, and not with the agent; and this remark is true, both in reference to the federal and state government."
> [Spooner v. McConnell, 22 F. 939, 943]

> "There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States .... In this country sovereignty resides in the people, and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld."
> [Julliard v. Greenman: 110 U.S. 421, (1884)]

2. All powers exercised by government are directly delegated to those serving in government by the people, both collectivly and individually.

> "The question is not what power the federal government ought to have, but what powers, in fact, have been given by the people... The federal union is a government of delegated powers. It has only such as are expressly conferred upon it, and such as are reasonably to be implied from those granted. In this respect, we differ radically from nations where all legislative power, without restriction or limitation, is vested in a parliament or other legislative body subject to no restriction except the discretion of its members." (Congress)
> [U.S. v. William M. Butler, 297 U.S. 1 (1936)]

> "The Government of the United States is one of delegated powers alone. Its authority is defined and limited by the Constitution. All powers not granted to it by that instrument are reserved to the States or the people."
> [United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)]

> "It is again to antagonize Chief Justice Marshall, when he said: 'The government of the Union, then (whatever may be the influence of this fact on the case), is emphatically and truly a government of the people. In form and in substance it emanates from them. Its powers are granted by them, and are to be exercised directly on them and for their benefit. This government is acknowledged by all to be one of enumerated powers.' 4 Wheat. 404, 4 L.Ed. 601."
> [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

The implication is that the people AS INDIVIDUALS are EQUAL to the government in the eyes of the law because you can't delegate what you don't have:

> "Derativa potestas non potest esse major primitiva.
> The power which is derived cannot be greater than that from which it is derived."

> Nemo dat qui non habet. No one can give who does not possess. Jenk. Cent. 250.

> Nemo plus juris ad alienum transfere potest, quam ispe habent. One cannot transfer to another a right which he has not. Dig. 50, 17, 54; 10 Pet. 161, 175.

> Nemo potest facere per alium quod per se non potest. No one can do that by another which he cannot do by himself.

> Qui per alium facit per seipsum facere videtur. He who does anything through another, is considered as doing it himself. Co. Litt. 258.

> Quicpuid acquiritur servo, acquiritur domino. Whatever is acquired by the servant, is acquired for the master. 15 Bin. Ab. 327.

> Quod per me non possum, nec per alium. What I cannot do in person, I cannot do by proxy. 4 Co. 24.

> What a man cannot transfer, he cannot bind by articles.
> [Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;
> SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm]

3. Separation of powers between three branches of government. That separation is described in:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023 https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. Distinct separation of property rights between PUBLIC and PRIVATE. By "public" we mean GOVERNMENT property. That separation is described in:

Separation Between Public and Private Course, Form #12.025 https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Without ALL of the above, every government becomes corrupt and turns into a de facto government as described in:

De Facto Government Scam, Form #05.043 https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The concept separation of powers is called the "Separation of Powers Doctrine":

> "Separation of powers. The governments of the states and the United States are divided into three departments or branches: the legislative, which is empowered to make laws, the executive which is required to carry out the laws, and the judicial which is charged with interpreting the laws and adjudicating disputes under the laws. Under this constitutional doctrine of "separation of powers," one branch is not permitted to encroach on the domain or exercise the powers of another branch. See U.S. Constitution, Articles I-III. See also Power (Constitutional Powers)."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1365]

Here is how no less than the U.S. Supreme Court described the purpose of this separation of powers:

> "We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S. Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 458 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid.
> [U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995)]

The founding fathers believed that men were inherently corrupt. They believed that absolute power corrupts absolutely so they avoided concentrating too much power into any single individual.

> "When all government, domestic and foreign, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another and will become as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated."
> [Thomas Jefferson to Charles Hammond, 1821. ME 15:332]

> "Our government is now taking so steady a course as to show by what road it will pass to destruction; to wit: by consolidation first and then corruption, its necessary consequence. The engine of consolidation will be the Federal judiciary; the two other branches the corrupting and corrupted instruments."
> [Thomas Jefferson to Nathaniel Macon, 1821. ME 15:341]

> "The [federal] judiciary branch is the instrument which, working like gravity, without intermission, is to press us at last into one consolidated mass."
> [Thomas Jefferson to Archibald Thweat, 1821. ME 15:307]

> "There is no danger I apprehend so much as the consolidation of our government by the noiseless and therefore unalarming instrumentality of the Supreme Court."
> [Thomas Jefferson to William Johnson, 1823. ME 15:421]

> "I wish... to see maintained that wholesome distribution of powers established by the Constitution for the limitation of both [the State and General governments], and never to see all offices transferred to Washington where, further withdrawn from the eyes of the people, they may more secretly be bought and sold as at market."
> [Thomas Jefferson to William Johnson, 1823. ME 15:450]

> "What an augmentation of the field for jobbing, speculating, plundering, office-building and office-hunting would be produced by an assumption of all the State powers into the hands of the General Government!"
> [Thomas Jefferson to Gideon Granger, 1800. ME 10:168]

> "I see,... and with the deepest affliction, the rapid strides with which the federal branch of our government is advancing towards the usurpation of all the rights reserved to the States, and the consolidation in itself of all powers, foreign and domestic; and that, too, by constructions which, if legitimate, leave no limits to their power... It is but too evident that the three ruling branches of [the Federal government] are in combination to strip their colleagues, the State authorities, of the powers reserved by them, and to exercise themselves all functions foreign and domestic."
> [Thomas Jefferson to William Branch Giles, 1825. ME 16:146]

> "We already see the [judiciary] power, installed for life, responsible to no authority (for impeachment is not even a scare-crow), advancing with a noiseless and steady pace to the great object of consolidation. The foundations are already deeply laid by their decisions for the annihilation of constitutional State rights and the removal of every check, every counterpoise to the engulfing power of which themselves are to make a sovereign part."
> [Thomas Jefferson to William T. Barry, 1822. ME 15:388]

For further quotes supporting the above, see:

Thomas Jefferson on Politics and Government http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Politics/ThomasJefferson/jeff1060.htm

They instead wanted an egalitarian and utopian society. They loathed the idea of a king because they had seen how corrupt the monarchies of Europe had become by reading the history books. They loathed it so much that they specifically prohibited titles of nobility in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8:

> U.S. Constitution; Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8
> No Title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States: And no Person holding any Office of Profit or Trust under them, shall, without the Consent of the Congress, accept of any present, Emolument, Office, or Title, of any kind whatever, from any King, Prince or foreign State.

So the founders instead distributed and dispersed political power into several independent branches of government that have sovereign power over a finite sphere and prohibited the branches from assuming each other's duties. This, they believed, would prevent collusion against their rights and liberties. They therefore divided the government into the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial branches and made them independent of each other, and assigned very specific duties to each. In effect, these three branches became "foreign" to each other and in constant competition with each other for power and control.

The founders further dispersed political power by dividing power between the several states and the federal government and gave most of the power to the states. They gave each state their own seats in Congress, in the Senate. They made the states just like "foreign countries" and independent nations so that there would be the greatest separation of powers possible between the federal government and the states:

> "The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties, except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They continue to be nations, *with all their rights, and under all their national obligations, and with all the rights of nations in every particular; except in the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the Constitution. The rights of each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute."
> [Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 38 U.S. (13 Pet.) 519, 10 L.Ed. 274 (1839)]

Then the founders created multiple states so that the states would be in competition with each other for citizens and for commerce. When one state got too oppressive or taxed people too much, the people could then move to an economically more attractive state and climate. This kept the states from oppressing their citizens and it gave the people a means to keep their state and their government in check. Then they put the federal government in charge of regulating commerce among and between the states, and the intention of this was to maximize, not obstruct, commerce between the states so that we would act as a unified economic union and like a country. Even so, they didn't want our country to be a "nation" under the law of nations, because they didn't want a national government with unlimited powers. They wanted a "federation", so they called our central government the "federal government" instead of a "national government". To give us a "national government" would be a recipe for tyranny:

> "By that law the several States and Governments spread over our globe, are considered as forming a society, not a NATION.
> It has only been by a very few comprehensive minds, such as those of Elizabeth and the Fourth Henry, that this last great idea has been even contemplated. 3rdly. and chiefly, I shall examine the important question before us, by the Constitution of the United States, and the legitimate result of that valuable instrument. "
> [Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)]

The ingenious founders also made the people the sovereigns in charge of both the state and federal governments by giving them a Bill of Rights and mandating frequent elections. Frequent elections:

1. Ensured that rulers would not be in office long enough to learn enough to get sneaky with the people or abuse their power.
2. Kept the rulers accountable to the people and provided a prompt feedback mechanism to make sure politicians and rulers were incentivized to listen to the people.
3. Created a stable political system that would automatically converge onto the will of the majority so that the country would be at peace instead of at war within itself.

The founders even gave the people their own house in Congress called the House of Representatives, so that the power between the states, in the Senate, and the People, in the House, would be well-balanced. They also made sure that these sovereign electors and citizens were well armed with a good education, so they could keep their government in check and capably defend their freedom, property, and liberty by themselves. When things got rough and governments became corrupt, these rugged and self-sufficient citizens were also guaranteed the right to defend their property using arms that the U.S. Constitution said in the Second Amendment that they had a right to keep and use. This ensured that citizens wouldn't need to depend on the government for a handout or socialist benefits and wouldn't have to worry about having a government that would plunder their property or their liberty.

Finally, the founding fathers created the institution of trial by jury, so that if government got totally corrupt and passed unjust laws that violated God's laws, the people could put themselves back in control through jury nullification. This also effectively dealt with the problem of corrupt judges, because both the jury and the grand jury could override the judge as well when they detected a conflict of interest by judging both the facts and the law. Here is how Thomas Jefferson described the duty of the jury in such a circumstance:

> "It is left... to the juries, if they think the permanent judges are under any bias whatever in any cause, to take on themselves to judge the law as well as the fact. They never exercise this power but when they suspect partiality in the judges; and by the exercise of this power they have been the firmest bulwarks of English liberty."
> [Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283]

Then the founders separated church and state and put the state and the church in competition with each other to protect and nurture the people. We talked about this church/state separation and dual sovereignty earlier in section 4.3.6.

The design that our founding fathers had for our political system was elegant, unique, unprecedented, ingenious, perfectly balanced, and inherently just. It was founded on the concept of Natural Order and Natural Law, which as we explained in section 4.1 are based on the sequence that things were created. This concept made sense, even to people who didn't believe in God, so it had wide support among a very diverse country of immigrants from all over the world and of many different religious faiths. Natural Law and Natural Order unified our country because it was just and fair and righteous. That is the basis for the phrase on our currency, which says:

> "E Pluribus Unum"

…which means: "From many, one." Our system of Natural Law and Natural Order also happened to be based on God's sovereign design for self-government, as we explained throughout chapter 4. The founders also recognized that liberty without God and morality are impossible:

> "We have no government armed with the power capable of contending with human passions unbridled by morality and religion. Avarice [greed], ambition, revenge, or gallantry [debauchery], would break the strongest cords of our Constitution as a whale goes through a net. Our Constitution was made only for a moral and religious people. It is wholly inadequate to the government of any other."
> [John Adams, 2nd President.]

So the founders included the requirement for BOTH God and Liberty on all of our currency. They put the phrase "In God We Trust" and the phrase "Liberty" side by side, and they were probably thinking of the following scripture when they did that!:

> "Now the Lord is the Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."
> [2 Cor. 3:17, Bible, NKJV]

By creating such distinct separation of powers among all the forces of government, the founders ensured that the only way anything would get done within government was exclusively by informed consent and not by force or terror. The Declaration of Independence identifies the source of ALL "just" government power as "consent". Anything not consensual is therefore unjust and tyrannical. An informed and sovereign People will only do things voluntarily and consensually when it is in their absolute best interests. This would ensure that government would never engage in anything that wasn't in the best interests of everyone as a whole, because people, at least theoretically, would never consent to anything that would either hurt them or injure their Constitutional rights. The Supreme Court described this kind of government by consent as "government by compact":

> "In Europe, the executive is synonymous with the sovereign power of a state…where it is too commonly acquired by force or fraud, or both…In America, however the case is widely different. Our government is founded upon compact [consent expressed in a written contract called a Constitution or in positive law]. Sovereignty was, and is, in the people."
> [The Betsy, 3 (U.S.) Dall 6]

Here is the legal definition of "compact" to prove our point that the Constitution and all federal law written in furtherance of it are indeed a "compact":

> "Compact, n. An agreement or contract between persons, nations, or states. Commonly applied to working agreements between and among states concerning matters of mutual concern. A contract between parties, which creates obligations and rights capable of being enforced and contemplated as such between the parties, in their distinct and independent characters. A mutual consent of parties concerned respecting some property or right that is the object of the stipulation, or something that is to be done or forborne. See also Compact clause; Confederacy; Interstate compact; Treaty."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 281]

Enacting a mutual agreement into positive law then, becomes the vehicle for expressing the fact that the People collectively agreed and consented to the law and to accept any adverse impact that law might have on their liberty. Public servants then, are just the apparatus that the sovereign People use for governing themselves through the operation of positive law. As the definition above shows, the apparatus and machinery of government is simply the "rudder" that steers the ship, but the "Captain" of the ship is the People both individually and collectively. In a true Republican Form of Government, the REAL government is the people individually and collectively, and not their "public servants". That is the true meaning of the phrase "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people" used by Abraham Lincoln in the Gettysburg Address.

Our de jure Constitutional Republic started out as a perfectly balanced and just system indeed. But somewhere along the way, it was deliberately corrupted by evil men for personal gain. Just like Cain (in the Bible) destroyed the tranquility and peace of an idyllic world and divided the family of Adam by first introducing murder into the world, greedy politicians who wanted to line their pockets corrupted our wonderful system and brought evil into our government. How did it happen? They did it with a combination of force, fraud, and the corrupting influence of money. This process can be shown graphically and described in scientific terms over a period of years to show precisely how it was done. We will now attempt to do this so that the process is crystal clear in your mind. What we are trying to show are the following elements in our diagram:

1. The distinct sovereignties between governments:
   1.1. States
   1.2. The federal government
2. The sovereignties within governments:
   2.1. Executive branch
   2.2. Legislative branch
   2.3. Judicial branch
3. The hierarchy of sovereignty between all the sovereignties based on their sequence of creation.
4. The corrupting influence of force, fraud, and money, including the branch that initiated it, the date it was initiated, and the object it was initiated against.

To meet the above objectives, we will start off with the diagram found in section 5.1.1 and expand it with some of the added elements found in the Natural Order diagram found earlier in section 4.1. To the bottom of the diagram, we add the Ten Commandments, which establishes the "Separation of Church v. State". The first four commandments in Exodus 20:2-11 establish the church and the last six commandments found in Exodus 20:12-17 define how we should relate to other people, who Jesus later called our "neighbor" in Matt. 22:39. The main and only purpose of government is to love and protect and serve its inhabitants and citizens, who collectively are "neighbors". What results is a schematic diagram of the initial political system that the founders gave us absent all corruption. This is called the "De jure U.S. Government". It is the only lawful government we have and its organization is defined by our Constitution. It's organization is also defined by the Bible, which we also call "Natural Law" throughout this document.

Each box in the above diagram represents a sovereignty or sovereign entity that helps distribute power throughout our system of government to prevent corruption or tyranny. The arrows with dark ends indicate an act of creation by the sovereign above. That act of creation carries with it an implied delegation of authority to do specific tasks and establishes a fiduciary relationship between the Creator, and his subordinate creation. The above system as shown functions properly and fully and provides the best defense for our liberties only when there is complete separation between each sovereignty, which is to say that all actions performed and all choices made by any one sovereign:

1. Are completely free of fraud, force, conflict of interest, or duress.
2. Are accomplished completely voluntarily, which is to say that they are done for the mutual benefit of all parties involved rather than any one single party exercising undue influence.
3. Involve fully informed consent made with a full awareness by all parties to the agreement of all rights which are being surrendered to procure any imputed benefits.
4. Are done mainly or exclusively for the benefit of the Sovereign above the agent who is the actor.
5. Are done for righteous reasons and noble intent, meaning that they are accomplished for the benefit of someone else rather than one's own personal or financial benefit. This requirement is the foundation of what a fiduciary relationship means and also the only way that conflicts of interest and the corruption they can cause can be eliminated.

6.3.2 Main Technique of Corruption: Introduce Franchises to replace UNALIENABLE PRIVATE Rights with REVOCABLE PUBLIC Statutory PRIVILEGES

> "The rich ruleth over the poor, and the borrower [is] servant to the lender."
> [Prov. 22:7, Bible, NKJV]

The secret to how scoundrels corrupt our republic based on inalienable rights and replace it with a democracy based on revocable statutory privileges is to offer to loan you government property with conditions or legal strings attached. That process is called a "franchise". The Bible and the U.S. Supreme Court both describe EXACTLY, from a legal perspective, WHEN AND HOW you personally facilitate this inversion of the de jure hierarchy in the previous section to make public servants into masters and make you the sovereign into a government employee or officer. It is done with loans of government property that have legal strings attached. This loan is what we call "government franchises" (Form #05.030) on our website. The word "privilege" in fact is synonymous with loans of absolutely owned GOVERNMENT property and the legal strings attached to the loan.

> "The rich rules over the poor,
> And the borrower is servant to the lender."
> [Prov. 22:7, Bible, NKJV]

> "The State in such cases exercises no greater right than an individual may exercise over the use of his own property when leased or loaned to others. The conditions upon which the privilege shall be enjoyed being stated or implied in the legislation authorizing its grant, no right is, of course, impaired by their enforcement. The recipient of the privilege, in effect, stipulates to comply with the conditions. It matters not how limited the privilege conferred, its acceptance implies an assent to the regulation of its use and the compensation for it."
> [Munn v. Illinois, 94 U.S. 113 (1876)]

> Curses of Disobedience [to God's Laws]

> "The alien [Washington, D.C. is legislatively "alien" in relation to states of the Union] who is among you shall rise higher and higher above you, and you shall come down lower and lower [malicious destruction of EQUAL PROTECTION and EQUAL TREATMENT by abusing FRANCHISES]. He shall lend to you [Federal Reserve counterfeiting franchise], but you shall not lend to him; he shall be the head, and you shall be the tail.

> "Moreover all these curses shall come upon you and pursue and overtake you, until you are destroyed, because you did not obey the voice of the Lord your God, to keep His commandments and His statutes which He commanded you*. And they shall be upon you for a sign and a wonder, and on your descendants forever.*

> "Because you did not serve [ONLY] the Lord your God with joy and gladness of heart, for the abundance of everything, therefore you shall serve your [covetous thieving lawyer] enemies, whom the Lord will send against you, in hunger, in thirst, in nakedness, and in need of everything; and He will put a yoke of iron [franchise codes] on your neck until He has destroyed you. The Lord will bring a nation against you from afar [the District of CRIMINALS], from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flies [the American Eagle], a nation whose language [LEGALESE] you will not understand, a nation of fierce [coercive and fascist] countenance, which does not respect the elderly [assassinates them by denying them healthcare through bureaucratic delays on an Obamacare waiting list] nor show favor to the young [destroying their ability to learn in the public FOOL system]. And they > shall eat the increase of your livestock and the produce of your land [with "trade or business" franchise taxes], until you [and all your property] are destroyed [or STOLEN/CONFISCATED]; they shall not leave you grain or new wine or oil, or the increase of your cattle or the offspring of your flocks, until they have destroyed you. [Deut. 28:43-51, Bible, NKJV]

The problem with all such loans is that the covetous de facto (Form #05.043) government offering them can theoretically attach ANY condition they want to the loan. If the property is something that is life threatening to do without, then they can destroy ALL of your constitutional rights and leave you with no judicial or legal remedy whatsoever for the loss of your fundamental or natural PRIVATE rights and otherwise PRIVATE property! This, in fact, is EXACTLY what Pharaoh did to the Israelites during the famine in Egypt, described in Genesis 47.

> "But when Congress creates a statutory right [a "privilege" or "public right" in this case, such as a "trade or business"], it clearly has the discretion, in defining that right, to create presumptions, or assign burdens of proof, or prescribe remedies; it may also provide that persons seeking to vindicate that right must do so before particularized tribunals created to perform the specialized adjudicative tasks related to that right. FN35 Such provisions do, in a sense, affect the exercise of judicial power, but they are also incidental to Congress' power to define the right that it has created. No comparable justification exists, however, when the right being adjudicated is not of congressional creation. In such a situation, substantial inroads into functions that have traditionally been performed by the Judiciary cannot be characterized merely as incidental extensions of Congress' power to define rights that it has created. Rather, such inroads suggest unwarranted encroachments upon the judicial power of the United States, which our Constitution reserves for Art. III courts."

Whether you know it or not, by accepting such physical or intangible property you are, in effect, manifesting your implied consent (assent) under the Uniform Commercial Code (U.C.C.) to enter into a contract with the government that offered it in the process. Lawyers commonly call this type of interaction a "quid pro quo". That contract represents a constructive waiver of the sovereignty and sovereign immunity that comes from God Himself. Because the government is asking you to GIVE PRIVATE/CONSTITUTIONAL rights in relation to them as consideration that would otherwise be INALIENABLE (Form #12.038), they are acting in a private, non-governmental capacity as a de facto government (Form #05.043) with no real official, judicial, or sovereign immunity. That franchise contract (Form #12.012) will, almost inevitably, end up being an adhesion contract that will be extremely one-sided and will not only NOT "benefit" you (the "Buyer") in the aggregate, but will work an extreme injury, inequality, and injustice (Form #05.050) that God actually forbids:

> Lending to the Poor

And then he shall depart from you—he and his children with him—and shall return to his own family. He shall return to the possession of his fathers.* For they are My servants [Form #13.007] , whom I brought out of the land of Egypt; they shall not be sold as slaves. You shall not rule over him with rigor, but you shall fear your God."

Adhesion Contract

Related to Adhesion Contract: unilateral contract, exculpatory clause, personal contract, Unconscionable contract

Adhesion Contract

A type of contract, a legally binding agreement between two parties to do a certain thing, in which one side has all the bargaining power and uses it to write the contract primarily to his or her advantage.

An example of an adhesion contract is a standardized contract form that offers goods or services to consumers on essentially a "take it or leave it" basis without giving consumers realistic opportunities to negotiate terms that would benefit their interests. When this occurs, the consumer cannot obtain the desired product or service unless he or she acquiesces to the form contract.

There is nothing unenforceable or even wrong about adhesion contracts. In fact, most businesses would never conclude their volume of transactions if it were necessary to negotiate all the terms of every Consumer Credit contract. Insurance contracts and residential leases are other kinds of adhesion contracts. This does not mean, however, that all adhesion contracts are valid. Many adhesion contracts are Unconscionable*; they are so unfair to the weaker party that a court will refuse to enforce them. An example would be severe penalty provisions for failure to pay loan installments promptly that are physically hidden by small print located in the middle of an obscure paragraph of a lengthy loan agreement. In such a case a court can find that there is no meeting of the minds of the parties to the contract and that the weaker party has not accepted the terms of the contract.*

adhesion contract (contract of adhesion)

n. a contract (often a signed form) so imbalanced in favor of one party over the other that there is a strong implication it was not freely bargained. Example: a rich landlord dealing with a poor tenant who has no choice and must accept all terms of a lease, no matter how restrictive or burdensome, since the tenant cannot afford to move. An adhesion contract can give the little guy the opportunity to claim in court that the contract with the big shot is invalid. This doctrine should be used and applied more often, but the same big guy-little guy inequity may apply in the ability to afford a trial or find and pay a resourceful lawyer. (See: contract*)*

The temptation of the offer of the government franchise as an adhesion contract is exhaustively described, personified, and even dramatized in the following:

James Madison, whose notes were used to draft the Bill of Rights, predicted this perversion of the de jure Constitutional design, when he very insightfully said the following:

> "With respect to the words general welfare, I have always regarded them as qualified by the detail of powers connected with them. To take them in a literal and unlimited sense would be a metamorphosis of the Constitution into a character which there is a host of proofs was not contemplated by its creator."

> "If Congress can employ money indefinitely to the general welfare, and are the sole and supreme judges of the general welfare, they may take the care of religion into their own hands; they may appoint teachers in every State, county and parish and pay them out of their public treasury; they may take into their own hands the education of children, establishing in like manner schools throughout the Union; they may assume the provision of the poor; they may undertake the regulation of all roads other than post-roads; in short, every thing, from the highest object of state legislation down to the most minute object of police, would be thrown under the power of Congress…. Were the power of Congress to be established in the latitude contended for, it would subvert the very foundations, and transmute the very nature of the limited Government established by the people of America."

> "If Congress can do whatever in their discretion can be done by money, and will promote the general welfare, the government is no longer a limited one possessing enumerated powers, but an indefinite one subject to particular exceptions."
> [James Madison. House of Representatives, February 7, 1792, On the Cod Fishery Bill, granting Bounties]

The term "general welfare" is synonymous with "benefit" in franchise language. "general welfare" as used above is, in fact, the basis for the entire modern welfare state that will eventually lead to a massive financial collapse and crisis worldwide.[318]. Anyone who therefore supports such a system is ultimately an anarchist intent on destroying our present dysfunctional government and thereby committing the crime of Treason:[319]

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016 https://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/SocialismCivilReligion.pdf

The Bible also describes how to REVERSE this inversion, how to restore our constitutional rights, and how to put public servants back in their role as servants rather than masters. Note that accepting custody or "benefit" or loans of government property in effect behaves as an act of contracting, because it accomplishes the same effect, which is to create implied "obligations" in a legal sense:

[319] In the landmark case of Steward Machine Co. v. Davis, 310 U.S. 548 (1937) legalizing social security, the U.S. Supreme Court had the following to say about the treason of inverting the relationship of the states to the federal government:

> "If the time shall ever arrive when, for an object appealing, however strongly, to our sympathies, the dignity of the States shall bow to the dictation of Congress by conforming their legislation thereto, when the power and majesty and honor of those who created shall become subordinate to the thing of their creation, I but feebly utter my apprehensions when I express my firm conviction that we shall see `the beginning of the end.'"

Following the above commandments requires not signing up for and quitting any and all government benefits and services you may have consensually signed up for or retained eligibility for. All such applications and/or eligibility is called "special law" in the legal field.

> "special law. One relating to particular persons or things; one made for individual cases or for particular places or districts; one operating upon a selected class, rather than upon the public generally. A private law. A law is "special" when it is different from others of the same general kind or designed for a particular purpose, or limited in range or confined to a prescribed field of action or operation. A "special law" relates to either particular persons, places, or things or to persons, places, or things which, though not particularized, are separated by any method of selection from the whole class to which the law might, but not such legislation, be applied. Utah Farm Bureau Ins. Co. v. Utah Ins. Guaranty Ass'n, Utah, 564 P.2d. 751, 754. A special law applies only to an individual or a number of individuals out of a single class similarly situated and affected, or to a special locality. Board of County Com'rs of Lemhi County v. Swensen, Idaho, 80 Idaho 198, 327 P.2d. 361, 362. See also Private bill; Private law. Compare General law; Public law."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, pp. 1397-1398]

We also prove that all such "special law" is not "law" in a classical sense, but rather an act of contracting, because it does not apply equally to all. It is what the U.S. Supreme Court referred to as "class legislation" in Pollock v. Farmers Loan and Trust in which they declared the first income tax unconstitutional:

> *"*The income tax law under consideration is marked by discriminating features which affect the whole law. It discriminates between those who receive an income of four thousand dollars and those who do not. It thus vitiates, in my judgment, by this arbitrary discrimination, the whole legislation. Hamilton says in one of his papers, (the Continentalist,) "the genius of liberty reprobates everything arbitrary or discretionary in taxation. It exacts that every man, by a definite and general rule, should know what proportion of his property the State demands; whatever liberty we may boast of in theory, it cannot exist in fact while [arbitrary] assessments continue." 1 Hamilton's Works, ed. 1885, 270. The legislation, in the discrimination it makes, is class legislation. Whenever a distinction is made in the burdens a law imposes or in the benefits it confers on any citizens by reason of their birth, or wealth, or religion, it is class legislation, and leads inevitably to oppression and abuses, and to general unrest and disturbance in society [e.g. wars, political conflict, violence, anarchy]. It was hoped and believed that the great amendments to the Constitution which followed the late civil war had rendered such legislation impossible for all future time. But the objectionable legislation reappears in the act under consideration. It is the same in essential character as that of the English income statute of 1691, which taxed Protestants at a certain rate, Catholics, as a class, at double the rate of Protestants, and Jews at another and separate rate. Under wise and constitutional legislation every citizen should contribute his proportion, however small the sum, to the support of the government, and it is no kindness to urge any of our citizens to escape from > that obligation. If he contributes the smallest mite of his earnings to that purpose he will have a greater regard for the government and more self-respect 597*597 for himself feeling that though he is poor in fact, he is not a pauper of his government. And it is to be hoped that, whatever woes and embarrassments may betide our people, they may never lose their manliness and self-respect. Those qualities preserved, they will ultimately triumph over all reverses of fortune."

> [Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (Supreme Court 1895)]

To realistically apply the above biblical prohibitions against contracting with any government so as to eliminate the reversal of roles and destroy the dulocracy, see:

Path to Freedom, Form #09.015 https://sedm.org/Forms/09-Procs/PathToFreedom.pdf

Section 5 of the above document in particular deals with how to eliminate the dulocracy. Section 5.6 also discusses the above mechanisms.

The idea of a present day dulocracy is entirely consistent with the theme of our website, which is the abuse of government franchises and privileges to destroy PRIVATE rights, STEAL private property, promote unhappiness, and inject malice and vitriol into the political process, as documented in:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030 FORMS PAGE: https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm DIRECT LINK: https://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Franchises.pdf

The U.S. Supreme Court and the Bible both predicted these negative and unintended consequences of the abuse of government franchises, when they said:

> "Here I close my opinion. I could not say less in view of questions of such gravity that they go down to the very foundations of the government*. If the provisions of the Constitution can be set aside by an act of Congress, where is the course of usurpation to end?*
> The present assault upon capital [THEFT! and WEALTH TRANSFER by unconstitutional CONVERSION of PRIVATE property to PUBLIC property] is but the beginning. It will be but the stepping stone to others larger and more sweeping*, until our political contest will become war of the poor against the rich; a war of growing intensity and bitterness."*
> [Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429*, 158 U.S. 601 (1895), hearing the case against the first income tax passed by Congress that included people in states of the Union. They declared that first income tax UNCONSTITUTIONAL, by the way]*

> "Where do wars and fights come from among you? Do they not come from your desires for pleasure [unearned money or "benefits", privileges, or franchises, from the government] that war in your members [and your democratic governments]? You lust [after other people's money] and do not have. You murder [the unborn to increase your standard of living] and covet [the unearned] and cannot obtain [except by empowering your government to STEAL for you!]. You fight and war [against the rich and the nontaxpayers to subsidize your idleness]. Yet you do not have because you do not ask [the Lord, but instead ask the deceitful government]. You ask and do not receive, because you ask amiss, that you may spend it on your pleasures. Adulterers and adulteresses! Do you not know that friendship [statutory "citizenship"] with the world [or the governments of the world] is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend [STATUTORY "citizen", "resident", "inhabitant", "person" franchisee] of the world [or the governments of the world] makes himself an enemy of God."
> *[James 4:4, Bible, NKJV]*

The "foundations of the government" spoken of above are PRIVATE property, separation between public and private, and equality of treatment and opportunity, which collectively are called "legal justice", as we point out on our opening page:

> Our ministry accomplishes the above goals by emphasizing:
> 12. The pursuit of legal "justice" (Form #05.050), which means absolutely owned private property (Form #10.002), and equality of TREATMENT and OPPORTUNITY (Form #05.033) under REAL LAW (Form #05.048). The following would be INJUSTICE, not JUSTICE:

> 12.1 Outlawing or refusing to recognize or enforce absolutely owned private property (Form #12.025).
> 12.2 Imposing equality of OUTCOME by law, such as by abusing taxing powers to redistribute wealth. See Form #11.302.
> 12.3 Any attempt by government to use judicial process or administrative enforcement to enforce any civil obligation derived from any source OTHER than express written consent or to an injury against the equal rights of others demonstrated with court admissible evidence. See Form #09.073 and Form #12.040.
> 12.4 Offering, implementing, or enforcing any civil franchise (Form #05.030). This enforces superior powers on the part of the government as a form of inequality and results in religious idolatry. This includes making justice into a civil public privilege (Form #05.050, Section 13) or turning CONSTITUTIONAL PRIVATE citizens into STATUTORY PUBLIC citizens engaged in a public office and a franchise (Form #05.006).
> Not only would the above be INJUSTICE, it would outlaw HAPPINESS, because the right to absolutely own private property is equated with "the pursuit of happiness" in the Declaration of Independence, according to the U.S. Supreme Court. See Form #05.050 for the definition of "justice". Click here to view a video on why all franchises produce selfishness, unhappiness, inequality, and ingratitude.

Too many public servants have assumed absolute authority over the people they are supposed to serve. This REVERSAL of roles and making the SERVANTS into the MASTERS was never the intent of the Founding Fathers who established the American governments as republics where the rights of the people are to be paramount and the sovereignty of the governments are limited by the rights of the people. Sovereignty in America is not based on the same premise as sovereignty in Europe. Sovereignty in Europe was based on the notion of the Divine Right of Kings where the king's sovereignty was absolute and the people were his subjects. Sovereignty in America is based on the notion that citizens are endowed by the Creator with unalienable rights and then lend their permission to the governments to carry out certain, limited responsibilities on their behalf. In a republican form of government, the government is never allowed to overstep its authority or trample on the rights of the citizen no matter how egalitarian the political arguments may be.

Jesus Himself also emphasized that public SERVANTS should never become RULERS or have superior authority to the people they are supposed to SERVE when He said the following.

> "You know that the rulers of the Gentiles [unbelievers] lord it over them [govern from ABOVE as pagan idols] , and those who are great exercise authority over them [supernatural powers that are the object of idol worship]. Yet it shall not be so among you; but whoever desires to become great among you, let him be your servant [serve the sovereign people from BELOW rather than rule from above]. And whoever desires to be first among you, let him be your slave—just as the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, and to give His life a ransom for many."
> [Matt. 20:25-28, Bible, NKJV]

Notice the word "ransom for many" in the above. This is an admission that Jesus acknowledges that cunning public servant lawyers have KIDNAPPED our legal identity from the protection of God's law and that legal identity has been transported to a legislatively foreign jurisdiction, the District of Criminals. We exhaustively prove this with evidence in the following memorandum of law:

Government Identity Theft, Form #05.046 https://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/GovernmentIdentityTheft.pdf

Jesus also states in Matt. 20:25-28 that it is the DUTY and obligation of every Christian to fight this corruption of our political system. The Holy Bible is our Delegation of Authority to do precisely this, in fact, and to restore God to His proper role as the ruler of ALL nations and ALL politicians and the only rightful Lawgiver of all human law. That delegation of authority is described in:

Delegation of Authority Order from God to Christians, Form #13.007 https://sedm.org/Forms/13-SelfFamilyChurchGovnce/DelOfAuthority.pdf

6.3.3 Graphical Depiction of the Corruption

With the above in mind, we will now add all of the corrupting influences accomplished to our system of government over the years. These are shown with dashed lines representing the application of unlawful or immoral force or fraud. The hollow end of each line indicates the sovereign against which the force or fraud is applied. The number above or next to the dotted line indicates the item in the table that follows the diagram which explains each incidence of force or fraud.

Below is a table explaining each incidence of force or fraud that corrupted the originally perfect system:

1 Table 6-1: Specific instances of force, fraud, and conflict of interest that corrupted our political system

(on diagram above)	Year(s)	Acting Sovereignty/ agent	Law(s) violated	Explanation
1	1868	State legislatures State judges Federal legislature Federal judges	18 U.S.C. §241 (conspiracy against rights) Thirteenth Amendment (slavery and peonage) 42 U.S.C. §1994 (peonage) 18 U.S.C. §1581 (peonage/slavery) 18 U.S.C. §2381 (treason)	After the civil war, the 14th Amendment was passed in 1868. That amendment along with "words of art" were used as a means to deceive constitutional citizens to falsely believe that they were also privileged statutory "U.S. citizens" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, and thus to unconstitutionally extent federal jurisdiction and enforce federal franchises within states of the Union. The citizenship status described in that amendment was only supposed to apply to emancipated slaves but the federal government in concert with the states confused the law and the interpretation of the law enough that everyone thought they were statutory federal citizens rather than the "non-resident non-persons" immune from federal jurisdiction, which is foreign with respect to states of the Union. This put Americans in the states in a privileged federal status and put them under the jurisdiction of the federal government. At the point that Americans voluntarily and unknowingly accept privileged federal citizenship, they lose their sovereignty and go to the bottom of the sovereignty hierarchy. State courts and state legislatures cooperated in this conspiracy against rights by requiring electors and jurists to be presumed statutory "U.S. citizens" in order to serve. At the same time, they didn't define the term "U.S. citizen" in their election laws or voter registration, creating a "presumption" in favor of people believing that they are statutory "citizens of the United States", even though technically they are not.
2	1913	Corporations/ businesses/and special interests	18 U.S.C. §201 (bribery of public officials) Const. Art. 1, Sect. 2, Clause 3 (direct taxes) Const. Art. 1, Sect. 9, Clause 4 (direct taxes) 18 U.S.C. §219 (government employees acting as agents of foreign principals-Federal Reserve)	Around the turn of the century, the gilded age created a lot of very wealthy people and big corporations. The corrupting influence of the money they had lead them to dominate the U.S. senate and the Republican party., which was the majority party at the time The people became restless because they were paying most of the taxes indirectly via tariffs on imported goods while the big corporations were paying very little. This lead to a vote by Congress to send the new Sixteenth Amendment to the states for ratification. Corporations heavily influenced this legislation so that it would favor taxing individuals instead of corporations, which lead the Republicans in the Senate to word the Amendment ambiguously so that it could or would be misconstrued to apply to natural persons instead of the corporations it was really intended to apply to by the American people. This created much subsequent litigation and confusion on the part of the Average American about exactly what the taxing powers of Congress are, and gave Congressman a lot of wiggle room to misrepresent the purpose of the Sixteenth Amendment to their constituents. Today, Congressmen use the ambiguity of the Amendment to regularly lie to their Constituents by saying that the "Sixteenth Amendment" authorizes Congress to tax the income of every American. This is an absolute lie and is completely inconsistent with the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court. Courts below the Supreme Court have also used the same ambiguity mechanism to expand the operation of the income tax beyond its clearly limited application to the federal zone. During the same year as the Sixteenth Amendment was ratified, in 1913, the Congress also passed the Federal Reserve Act immediately after the Sixteenth Amendment. By doing this, they surrendered their control over the money system to a consortium of private banks. The Sixteenth Amendment was passed first in February of 1913 because it was the lender-security for the Non-Federal Reserve that would be needed to create a "credit line" and collateral. The Federal Reserve Act was passed in December of that same year. At that point, the Congress had an unlimited private credit line from commercial banks and a means to print as much money as they wanted in order to fund socialist expansion of the government. But remember that the bible says: "The rich ruleth over the poor, and the borrower [is] servant to the lender." [Prov. 22:7]

(on diagram above)	Year(s)	Acting Sovereignty/ agent	Law(s) violated	Explanation
3	1911-1939	Federal legislature	28 U.S.C. §144 (conflict of interest of federal judges) 28 U.S.C. §455 (conflict of interest of federal judges)	In 1911, the U.S. Congress passed the Judicial Code of 1911 and thereby made all District and Circuit courts into entirely administrative courts which had jurisdiction over only the federal zone. All the federal courts except the U.S. Supreme Court changed character from being Article III courts to Article IV territorial courts only. All the district courts were renamed from "District Court of the United States" to "United States District Court". The Supreme Court said in Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922) that the "United States District Court" is an Article IV territorial court, not an Article III constitutional court. Consequently, all the federal courts excepting the Supreme Court became administrative courts that were part of the Executive rather than the Judicial Branch of the government and all the judges became Executive Branch employees. See our article "Authorities on Jurisdiction of Federal Courts" for further details. The Revenue Act of 1932 than tried to apply income taxes against federal judges. The purpose was to put them under complete control of the Executive Branch through terrorism and extortion by the IRS. This was litigated by the Supreme Court in 1932 in the case of O'Malley v. Woodrough, 309 U.S. 277 (1939) just before the war started. The court ruled that the Executive Branch couldn't unilaterally modify the terms of their employment contracts, so they rewrote the tax code to go around it subsequent to that by only taxing NEW federal judges and leaving the existing ones alone so as not to violate the Constitutional prohibition against reducing judges salaries. Since that time, federal judges have been beholden to the greed and malice of the Legislative branch because they are under IRS control. This occurred at a time when we had a very popular socialist President who threatened the Supreme Court if they didn't go along with his plan to replace capitalism with socialism, starting with Social Security. President Roosevelt tried to retire all the U.S. Supreme Court justices and then double the size of the court and pack the court with all of his own socialist cronies in a famous coup called "The Roosevelt Supreme Court Packing Plan".
4	1939-Present	Federal executive branch	28 U.S.C. §144 (conflict of interest of federal judges) 28 U.S.C. §455 (conflict of interest of federal judges) Separation of powers Doctrine	Right after the Supreme Court case of O'Malley v. Woodrough in 1939, the U.S. Congress wasted no time in passing a new Revenue Act that skirted the findings of the Supreme Court's that declared income taxes levied against them to be unconstitutional. In effect, they made the payment of income taxes by federal judges an implied part of their employment agreement as "appointed officers" of the United States government in receipt of federal privileges. Once the judges were under control of the IRS, they could be terrorized and plundered if they did not cooperate with the enforcement of federal income taxes. This also endowed all federal judges with an implied conflict of interest in violation of 28 U.S.C. §455 and 28 U.S.C. §144
5	1939-Present	Federal legislative branch	Const. Art. 1, Sect. 2, Clause 3 Const. Art. 1, Sect. 9, Clause 4 18 U.S.C. §1589(3) (forced labor)	The Revenue Act of 1939 passed by the U.S. Congress instituted a very oppressive income tax to fund the upcoming World War II effort. It was called the "Victory Tax" and it was a voluntary withholding effort, but after the war and after people on a large scale got used to sending their money to Washington, D.C. every month through payroll withholding, the politicians cleverly decided not to tell them the truth that it was voluntary. The politicians then began rewriting the tax code to further confuse and deceive people and hide the truth about the voluntary nature of the income tax. This included the Internal Revenue Codes of 1954 and 1986, which were major updates of the IRC that further hid the truth from the legal profession and added so much complexity to the tax code that no one even understands them anymore.

6	1950-Present	Federal executive branch	18 U.S.C. §597 (expenditures to influence voting) 18 U.S.C. §872 (extortion) 18 U.S.C. §880 (receiving the proceeds of extortion) 18 U.S.C. §1957 (Engaging in monetary transactions in property derived from specified unlawful activity)	Federal government uses income tax revenues after World War II to begin socialist subsidies, starting with Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society" plan. Instead of paying off the war debt and ending the income tax like we did after the Civil war in 1872, the government adopted socialism and borrowed itself into a deep hole, following the illustrious example of Franklin Roosevelt's "New Deal" program. This socialist expansion was facilitated by the enactment of the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, which gave the government unlimited borrowing power. The income tax, however, had to continue because it was the "lender security" for the PRIVATE Federal Reserve banking trust that was creating all this debt and fake money. The income tax had the effect of making all Americans into surety for government debts they never authorized. The Civil Rights movement of the 1960's accelerated the growth of the socialist cancer to cause voters to abuse their power to elect politicians who would subsidize and expand the welfare-state concept. "Democracy has never been and never can be so desirable as aristocracy or monarchy, but while it lasts, is more bloody than either. Remember, democracy never lasts long. It soon wastes, exhausts, and murders itself. There never was a democracy that never did commit suicide." John Adams, 1815.
7	1939-Present	Trial jury	18 U.S.C. §2111 (robbery)	Trial juries filled with people receiving government socialist handouts (money STOLEN from hard-working Americans) vote against tax protesters to illegally enforce the Internal Revenue Code, and especially in the case of the wealthy. Trial by jury becomes MOB RULE and a means to mug and rob the producers of society. The jurists are also under duress by the judge, who does not allow evidence to be admitted that would be prejudicial to government (or his retirement check) and who makes cases unpublished where the government lost on income tax issues. Because these same jurists were also educated in public schools, they are easily lead like sheep to do the government's dirty work of plundering their fellow citizens by upholding a tax that is actually voluntary. The result is slavery of wage earners and the rich to the IRS. The war of the "have-nots" and the "haves" using the taxing authority of the government continues on and expands.
8	1960-Present	Federal government	18 U.S.C. §873 (blackmail) 18 U.S.C. §208 (acts affecting a personal financial interest 18 U.S.C. §872 (extortion)	The federal government begins using income tax revenues and socialist welfare programs to manipulate the states. For instance: 1. They made it mandatory for states to require people getting drivers licenses to provide a Socialist Security Number or their welfare subsidies would be cut off. 2. They encourage states to require voters and jurists to be "U.S. citizens" in order to serve these functions so that they would also be put under federal jurisdiction. 3. They mandate that all persons receiving welfare benefits or unemployment benefits that include federal subsidies to have Socialist Security Numbers.
9	1980's-Present	Federal executive branch	18 U.S.C. §208 (conflict of interest) 18 U.S.C. §872 (extortion) 18 U.S.C. §876 (mailing threatening communications)	IRS abuses its power to manipulate and silence churches that speak out about government abuses or are politically active. This has the effect of making the churches politically irrelevant forces in our society so that the government would have no competition for the affections and the allegiance of the people.
10	1960-Present	Federal judicial branch	God's laws (bible)	Federal judiciary eliminates God and prayer in the schools. This leaves kids in a spiritual vacuum. Drugs, sex, teenage pregnancy run rampant. Families begin breaking apart. God is blasphemed. Single parents raise an increasing number of kids and these children don't have the balance they need in the family to have proper sex roles. Gender identity crisis and psychology problems result, causing homosexuality to run rampant. This further accelerates the breakdown of the family because these dysfunctional kids have dysfunctional families of their own. Because God is not in the schools, eventually the people begin to reject God as well. This expands the power of government because when the people aren't governed by God, they are ruled by tyrants and become peasants and serfs eventually. That is how the Israelites ended up in bondage to the Egyptians: because they would not serve God or trust him for their security. They wanted a big powerful Egyptian government to take care of them and be comfortable and safe, which was idolatry toward government.

(on diagram above)	Year(s)	Acting Sovereignty/ agent	Law(s) violated	Explanation
11	2000-Present	State executive branch	18 U.S.C. §208 (acts affecting a personal financial interest)	The state executive branches abuse their power to set very high licensing requirements for home schools and private schools, backed by teachers unions and contributions of these unions to their political campaigns. Licensing requirements become so high that only public schools have the capital to comply, virtually eliminating private and home schooling. Teachers and inferior environment in public schools further contributes to bad education and liberal socialist values, further eroding sovereignty of the people and making them easy prey for sly politicians who want to enslave them with more unjust laws and expand their fiefdom. Government continues to grow in power and rights and liberties simultaneously erode further.

After our corrupt politicians are finished socially re-engineering our system of government using the tax code and a corrupted federal judiciary, below is what happens to our original republican government system. This is what we refer to as the "De facto U.S. Government". It has replaced our "De jure U.S. Government" not through operation of law, but through fraud, force, and corruption. One or our readers calls this new architecture for social organization "The New Civil Religion of Socialism", where the collective will of the majority or whatever the judge says is sovereign, not God, and is the object of worship and servitude in courtrooms all over the country, who are run by devil-worshipping modern-day monarchs called "judges". These tyrants wear black-robes and chant in Latin and perform exorcism on hand-cuffed subjects to remove imaginary "demons" from the people that are defined by majority vote among a population of criminals (by God's law), homosexuals, drug abusers, adulterers, and atheists. The vilification of these demons are legislated into existence with "judge-made law", which is engineered to maximize litigation and profits to the legal industry. The legal industry, in turn, has been made into a part of the government because it is licensed and regulated by government. This profession "worships" the judge as an idol and is comprised of golf and law school buddies and fellow members of the American Bar Association (ABA), who hobnob with the judge and do whatever he says or risk having their attorney license pulled. In this totalitarian socialist democracy/oligarchy shown below, the people have no inalienable or God-given individual rights, but only statutory "privileges" and franchises granted by the will of the majority that are excise taxable. After all, when God and Truth are demoted to being a selfish creation of man and a politically correct vain fantasy, then the concept of "divine right" vanishes entirely from our political system.

In the above diagram, all people in receipt of federal funds stolen through illegally collected or involuntarily paid federal income taxes effectively become federal "employees" or "public officers". They identified themselves as such when they filed their W-4 payroll withholding form, which is a contract that says on the top "Employee Withholding Allowance Certificate". The Internal Revenue Code identifies "employee" to mean someone who works for the federal government in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c). These federal "employees" are moral and spiritual "whores" and "harlots". They are just like Judas or

Essau…they exchanged the Truth for a lie and liberty for slavery and they did it mainly for money and personal security. They are:

1. So concerned about avoiding being terrorized by their government or the IRS for "making waves".
2. So immobilized by their own fear and ignorance that they don't dare do anything.
3. So addicted to sin and other unhealthy distractions that they don't have the time to do justice.
4. So poor that they can't afford an expensive lawyer to be able to right the many wrongs imposed on them by a corrupted government. Justice is a luxury that only the rich can afford in our society.
5. So legally ignorant, thanks to our public "fool", I mean "school" system that they aren't able to right their wrongs on their own in court without a lawyer.
6. So afraid of corrupt judges and lawyers who are bought and paid for with money that they stole from hardworking Americans in illegally enforcing what is actually a voluntary Subtitle A income against those who in fact and indeed can only be described per the law as "nontaxpayers".
7. So unable to take care of their own needs because:
   7.1. Most of their money has been plundered by a government unable and unwilling to control its spending.
   7.2. They have allowed themselves to depend too much on government and allowed too much of their own hard-earned money to be stolen from them.
   7.3. They spent everything they had and went deep in debt to buy things they didn't need.
8. So covetous of that government welfare or socialist security or unemployment check or paycheck that comes in the mail every month.

…that they wouldn't dare upset the apple cart or try to right the many wrongs that maintain the status quo by doing justice as a voter or jurist. As long as they get their socialist handout and they live comfortably on the "loot" their "Parens Patriae", or "Big Brother" sends them, they don't care that massive injustice is occurring in courtrooms and at the IRS every day and that they are sanctioning, aiding, and abetting that injustice as voters and jurists with a financial conflict of interest in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §§201 and 208. In effect, they are bribed to look the other way while their own government loots and oppresses their neighbor and then uses that loot to buy votes and influence.

> "Thou shalt not steal."
> [Exodus 20:15]

> For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: "You shall love your neighbor as yourself."
> [Gal 5:14, Bible, NKJV]

Would you rob your neighbor? No you say? Well then, would you look the other way while someone else robs him in your name? Government is YOUR AGENT. If government robs your neighbor, God will hold you, not the agent who did it for you, personally responsible, because government is your agent. God put you in charge of your government and you are the steward. Frederic Bastiat described the nature of this horrible corruption of the system in the following book on our website:

The Law, Frederic Bastiat http://famguardian.org/Publications/TheLaw/TheLaw.htm

If you want to know what the above type of government is like spiritually, economically, and politically, read the first-hand accounts in the book of Judges found in the Bible. Corruption, sin, servitude, violence, and wars characterize this notable and most ignominious period and "social experiment" as documented in the Bible. Now do you understand why God's law mandates that we serve ONLY Him and not be slaves of man or government? When we don't, the above totalitarian socialist democracy/tyranny is the result, where politicians and judges in government become the only sovereign and the people are there to bow down to and "worship" and serve an evil and corrupt government as slaves.

6.3.4 God's Remedy for the Corruption

Below is the way God himself describes the corrupted dilemma we find ourselves in because we have abandoned the path laid by our founding fathers, as described in Isaiah 1:1-26:

> Alas, sinful nation,
> A people laden with iniquity
> A brood of evildoers
> Children who are corrupters!

They have forsaken the Lord

They have provoked to anger
The Holy One of Israel,
They have turned away backward.
Why should you be stricken again?
You will revolt more and more.
The whole head is sick [they are out of their minds!: insane or STUPID or both],
And the whole heart faints....

Wash yourselves, make yourselves clean;
Put away the evil of your doings from before My eyes.
Cease to do evil,
Learn to do good;
Seek justice,
Rebuke the oppressor [the IRS and the Federal Reserve and a corrupted judicial system];
Defend the fatherless,
Plead for the widow [and the "nontaxpayer"]....

How the faithful city has become a harlot!
It [the Constitutional Republic] was full of justice;
Righteousness lodged in it,
But now murderers [and abortionists, and socialists, and democrats, and liars and corrupted judges].
Your silver has become dross,
Your wine mixed with water.
Your princes [President, Congressmen, Judges] are rebellious,
Everyone loves bribes,
And follows after rewards.
They do not defend the fatherless, nor does the cause of the widow [or the "nontaxpayer"] come before them.

Therefore the Lord says,
The Lord of hosts, the Mighty One of Israel,
"Ah, I will rid Myself of My adversaries,
And take vengeance on My enemies.
I will turn My hand against you,
And thoroughly purge away your dross,
And take away your alloy.
I will restore your judges [eliminate the BAD judges] as at the first,
And your counselors [eliminate the BAD lawyers] as at the beginning.
Afterward you shall be called the city of righteousness, the faithful city."
[Isaiah 1:1-26, Bible, NKJV]

So according to the Bible, the real problem is corrupted lawyers and judges and people who are after money and rewards, and God says the way to fix the corruption and graft is to eliminate the bad judges and lawyers. Whose job is that? It is the even more corrupted Congress! (see 28 U.S.C. §134(a) and 28 U.S.C. §44(b))

"O My people! Those who lead you cause you to err,
And destroy the way of your paths."
[Isaiah 3:12, Bible, NKJV]

"The king establishes the land by justice; but he who receives bribes overthrows it."
[Prov. 29:4, Bible, NKJV]

Can thieves and corrupted judges and lawyers and jurors, who are all bribed with unlawfully collected money they lust after in the pursuit of socialist benefits, reform themselves if left to their own devices?

"When you [the jury] saw a thief [the corrupted judges and lawyers paid with extorted and stolen tax money], you consented with him, And have been a partaker with adulterers."
[Psalm 50:18, Bible, NKJV]

"The people will be oppressed,
Every one by another and every one by his [socialist] neighbor [sitting on a jury who was indoctrinated and brainwashed in a government school to trust government];
The child will be insolent toward the elder,
And the base toward the honorable."
[Isaiah 3:5, Bible, NKJV]

> "It must be conceded that there are rights [and property] in every free government beyond the control of the State [or any judge or jury]. A government which recognized no such rights, which held the lives, liberty and property of its citizens, subject at all times to the disposition and unlimited control of even the most democratic depository of power, is after all a despotism. It is true that it is a despotism of the many--of the majority, if you choose to call it so--but it is not the less a despotism."
> [Loan Ass'n v. Topeka, 87 U.S. (20 Wall.) 655, 665 (1874)]

The answer is an emphatic no. It is up to We The People as the sovereigns in charge of our lawless government to right this massive injustice because a corrupted legislature and judiciary and the passive socialist voters in charge of our government today simply cannot remedy their own addiction to the money that was stolen from their neighbor by the criminals they elected into office. These elected representatives were supposed to be elected to serve and protect the people, but they have become the worst abusers of the people because they only got into politics and government for selfish reasons. Notice we didn't say they got into "public service", because we would be lying to call it that. It would be more accurate to call what they do "self-service" instead of "public service". One of our readers has a name for these kinds of people. He calls them SLAT: Scum, Liars, and Thieves. If you add up all the drug money, all the stolen property, all the white collar crime together, it would all pale in comparison to the "extortion under the color of law" that our own de facto government and the totally corrupted people who work for it are instituting against its own people. If we solve no crime problem other than that one problem, then the government will have done the most important thing it can do to solve our crime problem and probably significantly reduce the prison population at the same time. There are lots of people in jail who were put there wrongfully for income tax crimes that aren't technically even crimes. These people were maliciously prosecuted by a corrupted Satan worshipping DOJ with the complicity of a corrupted judiciary and they MUST be freed because they have become slaves and political prisoners of a corrupted state for the sake of statutes that operate as the equivalent of a "civil religion" and which are not and cannot be law in their case. That's right: the corrupted state has erected a counterfeit church and religion that is a cheap imitation of God's design complete with churches, prayers, priests, deacons, tithes, and even its own "Bible" (franchise) and they have done so in violation of the First Amendment. The nature of that civil religion is exhaustively described below:

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016 DIRECT LINK: http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/SocialismCivilReligion.pdf (OFFSITE LINK) FORMS PAGE: http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm (OFFSITE)

Why does God describe the source of the corruption as bad lawyers and judges instead of the people accepting the franchises as "Buyers", you might ask? The answer is that:

1. The Constitution and the Declaration of Independence recognize natural rights as INALIENABLE. See

Unalienable Rights Course, Form #12.038 https://sedm.org/LibertyU/UnalienableRights.pdf

2. An INALIENABLE right is one that YOU AREN'T ALLOWED BY LAW to consent (Form #05.003) to give away.
3. If you can't even lawfully consent (Form #05.003) to give away the right, then you can never lose it or contract it away by participating in a government franchise (Form #05.030) or accepting a loan of government property.
4. The fact that judges and lawyers ALLOW inalienable rights (Form #12.038) to be given away in a place where they aren't allowed to be given away is a sign that they love money and enhancing their own power more than they love freedom or the Constitution.
5. Because they love money and power more than they love freedom and obeying the constitution, they are committing treason punishable by death in violation of 18 U.S.C. §2381 and serving Satan himself.

Below is how we explain this conundrum in our Disclaimer:

> Every attempt by anyone in government to alienate rights that the Declaration of Independence says are UNALIENABLE shall also be treated as "PRIVATE BUSINESS ACTIVITY" that cannot be protected by sovereign, official, or judicial immunity. So called "government" cannot make a profitable business or franchise out of alienating inalienable rights without ceasing to be a classical/de jure government and instead becoming in effect an economic terrorist and de facto government in violation of Article 4, Section 4.
> > "No servant [or government or biological person] can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government]."

6.3.5 De Jure v. De Facto Government

We will now close this section with a tabular summary that compares our original "de jure" government to the "de facto" government that we presently suffer under. This corrupted "de facto" government only continues to exist because of our passive and tolerant approach towards the illegal activities of our government servants. We can fix this if we really want to, folks. Let's do it!

Table 6-2: Comparison of our "De jure" v. "De facto" government

#	Type of separation of powers	De jure government	De facto government
1	Separation of Church and State	Government has no power to control or regulate the political activities of churches	IRS 501(c) designation allows government to remove tax exemption from churches if they get politically involved
2	Separation of Money and State	Only lawful money is gold and the value of the dollar is tied to gold. Government can't manufacture more gold so they can't abuse their power to coin money to enrich themselves.	Fiat currency is Federal Reserve Notes (FRNs). Government can print any amount of these it wants and thereby enrich itself and steal from the those who hold dollars by lowering the value of the dollars in circulation (inflation)
3	Separation of Marriage and State	People getting married did not have marriage licenses from the state. Instead, the ceremony was exclusively ecclesiastical and it was recorded only in the family Bible and church records.	Pastor acts as an agent of both God and the state. He performs the ceremony and is also licensed by the state to sign the state marriage license. Churches force members getting married to obtain state marriage license by saying they won't marry them without a state-issued marriage license.
4	Separation of School and State	Schools were rural and remote and most were private or religious. There were very few public schools and a large percentage of the population was home-schooled.	Most student go to public schools. They are dumbed-down by the state to be good serfs/sheep by being told they are "taxpayers" and being shown in high school how to fill out a tax return without even being shown how to balance a check book. They are taught that government is the sovereign and not the people, and that people should obey the government.
5	Separation of State and Federal government	States control the Senate and all legislation and taxation internal to a state. Federal government controls only foreign commerce in the form of imposts, excises, and duties under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution.	Federal government receives lion's share of income taxes over both internal and external trade. It redistributes the proceeds from these taxes to the socialist states, who are coerced to modify their laws in compliance with federal dictates in order to get their fair share of this stolen "loot".
6	Separation between branches of government: Executive, Legislative, Judicial	Three branches of government are entirely independent and not controlled by other branches.	Judges are "employees" of the executive branch and have a conflict of interest because they are beholden to IRS extortion. Executive controls the illegal tax collection activities of the IRS and dictates to other branches it's tax policy through illegal IRS extortion. Using the IRS, Executive becomes the "Gestapo" that controls everything and everyone. Congress and the courts refuse to reform this extortion because they benefit most financially by it.
7	Separation of Commerce and State	Federal government regulates only foreign commerce of corporations. States regulate all internal commerce. Private individuals have complete privacy and are not regulated because they don't have Socialist Security Numbers and are not monitored by the IRS Gestapo. Banks are independent and do not have to participate in a national banking system so they don't coerce their depositors to bet government-issued numbers nor do they snoop/spy on their depositors as an agent of the IRS Gestapo. Private employers are not regulated or monitored by federal Gestapo and their contracts with their employees are private and sacred.	All credit issued by a central, private Federal Reserve consortium. Federal Reserve rules coerce private banks to illegally enforce federal laws in states of the Union that only apply in the federal zone. Namely, they force depositors to have Socialist Security Numbers and they report all currency transactions over $3,000 to the Dept of the Treasury (CTR's). "Spying" on financial affairs citizens by government makes citizens afraid of IRS and government and coerces them to illegally pay income taxes by government. Employers are coerced to enslave their employees to IRS through wage reporting and withholding, often against the will of employees.

#	Type of separation of powers	De jure government	De facto government
8	Separation of Media and State	Press was free to report as they saw fit under the First Amendment. Most newspapers were small-town newspapers and were private and independent.	Television, radio, the internet, and corporations have taken over the media and concentrated control of it to the hands of a very few huge and "privileged" corporations that are in bed with the federal and state governments. Media is no longer independent, and broadcasters don't dare cross the government for fear of either losing their FCC license, being subjected to an IRS audit, or having their government sponsorship revoked.
9	Separation of Family and State	Families were completely separate from the state. Private individuals were not subject to direct taxation or regulation by either state or federal government. No Socialist Security Numbers and no government surveillance of private commerce by individuals. Women stayed home and out of the workforce. Men dominated the political and commercial landscape and also defended their family from encroachments by government. Children were home-schooled and worked on the farm. They inherited the republican values of their parents. Morality was taught by the churches and there was an emphasis on personal responsibility, modesty, manners, respect, and humility.	Using income taxes, mom was removed from the home to enter the workforce so she could replace the income stolen from dad by the IRS through illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code. Conflict over money breaks families down and divorce rate reaches epidemic proportions. Children are neglected by their parents because parents both have to work full-time and duke it out with each other in divorce court. Majority of children raised in single parent homes. Television and a liberal media dominates and distorts the thoughts and minds of the children. Public schools filled with homosexuals and liberals, many of whom have no children of their own, teach our children to be selfish, rebellious, sexually promiscuous, homosexual drug-abusers. Pornography invades the home through the internet, cable-TV, and video rentals, creating a negative fixation on sex. Television interferes with family communication so that children are alienated from their parents so that they do not inherit good morals or respect for authority from their parents.. Crime rate and prison population reaches unprecedented levels. Citizens therefore lose their ability to govern themselves and the legal field and government come in and take over their lives.
10	Separation of Charity and State	Churches and families were responsible for charity. When a person was old or became unemployed, members of the church or family would take them. Personal responsibility and morality within churches and families would encourage them to improve their lives.	Monolithic, huge, and terribly inefficient government bureaucracies replace families and churches as major source of charity. These bureaucracies have no idea what personal responsibility is and are not allowed to talk about morality because they are not allowed to talk about God. Generations of people grow up under this welfare umbrella without ever having to take responsibility for themselves, and these people abuse their voting power to perpetuate it. Supremacy of families and churches is eliminated and government becomes the new "god" for everyone to worship. See Jeremiah 2:26-28.
11	Separation of Public and Private Property	All property is presumed to be absolutely owned, private, and not subject to state or public or government control. This is the foundation of the Fifth Amendment protection for private property. See Separation Between Public and Private, Form #12.025.	Corrupt and covetous public servants implement socialism, where all property is presumed to be absolutely owned by the government, and everyone is a BORROWER of said property with conditions. Those conditions are called "franchises", and government can regulate and control ANYONE and ANYTHING it wants. See Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030.

6.4 How De Jure Governments are Transformed into Corrupt De Facto Governments[320]

> "Governments never do anything by accident; if government does something you can bet it was carefully planned."
> [Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States]

Franchises and/or their abuse are the main method by which:

1. De jure governments are transformed into corrupted de facto governments.
2. The requirement for consent of the governed is systematically eliminated.
3. The equal protection that is the foundation of the Constitution is replaced with inequality, privilege, hypocrisy, and partiality in which the government is a parens patriae and possesses an unconstitutional "title of nobility" in relation to those it is supposed to be serving and protecting.
4. The separation of powers between the states and federal government are eliminated.
5. The separation between what is "public" and what is "private" is destroyed. Everything becomes PUBLIC and is owned by the "collective". There is no private property and what you think is ABSOLUTE ownership of PRIVATE property is really just equitable title and QUALIFIED ownership of PUBLIC property.
6. Constitutional rights attaching to the land you stand on are replaced with statutory privileges created through your right to contract and your "status" under a franchise agreement.

> "You shall make no covenant [contract or franchise] with them [foreigners, pagans], nor with their [pagan government] gods [laws or judges]. They shall not dwell in your land [and you shall not dwell in theirs by becoming a "resident" or domiciliary in the process of contracting with them], lest they make you sin against Me [God]. For if you serve their [government] gods [under contract or agreement or franchise], it will surely be a snare to you."
> [Exodus 23:32-33, Bible, NKJV]

7. Your legal identity is "laundered", and kidnapped or transported to a foreign jurisdiction, the District of Criminals, and which is not protected by the Constitution. This is usually done by compulsion or duress, as in the case of compelled licensing.

> "For the upright will dwell in the land,
> And the blameless will remain in it;
> But the wicked will be cut off from the earth,
> And the unfaithful will be uprooted from it."
> [Prov. 2:21-22, Bible, NKJV]

8. The protections of the Constitution for your rights are eliminated.
9. Rights are transformed into privileges.
10. Republics based on individual rights are transformed into socialist democracies based on collective rights and individual privileges.
11. The status of "citizen, resident, or inhabitant" is devolved into nothing but an "employee" or "officer" of a corporation.
12. Constitutional courts are transformed into franchise courts.
13. Conflicts of interest are introduced into the legal and court systems that perpetuate a further expansion of the de facto system.
14. Socialism is introduced into a republican form of government.
15. The sovereignty of people in the states of the Union are destroyed.

The gravely injurious effects of participating in government franchises include the following.

1. Those who participate become domiciliaries of the federal zone, "U.S. persons", and "resident aliens" in respect to the federal government.
2. Those who participate become "trustees" of the "public trust" and "public officers" of the federal government and suffer great legal disability as a consequence:

[320] Adapted from: Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030, Section 14; http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm.

> "As expressed otherwise, the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer. 321 Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain from a discharge of their trusts*. 322* That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political entity on whose behalf he or she serves. 323 and owes a fiduciary duty to the public. 324 It has been said that the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual. 325 Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy.326"
> [63C American Jurisprudence 2d, Public Officers and Employees, §247 (1999)]

3. Those who participate are stripped of ALL of their constitutional rights and waive their Constitutional right not to be subjected to penalties and other "bills of attainder" administered by the Executive Branch without court trials. They then must function the degrading treatment of filling the role of a federal "public employee" subject to the supervision of their servants in the government.

> *"*The restrictions that the Constitution places upon the government in its capacity as lawmaker, i.e., as the regulator of private conduct, are not the same as the restrictions that it places upon the government in its capacity as employer. We have recognized this in many contexts, with respect to many different constitutional guarantees. Private citizens perhaps cannot be prevented from wearing long hair, but policemen can. Kelley v. Johnson, 425 U.S. 238, 247 (1976). Private citizens cannot have their property searched without probable cause, but in many circumstances government employees can. O'Connor v. Ortega, 480 U.S. 709, 723 (1987) (plurality opinion); id., at 732 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment). Private citizens cannot be punished for refusing to provide the government information that may incriminate them, but government employees can be dismissed when the incriminating information that they refuse to provide relates to the performance of their job. Gardner v. Broderick, [497 U.S. 62, 95] 392 U.S. 273, 277 -278 (1968). With regard to freedom of speech in particular: Private citizens cannot be punished for speech of merely private concern, but government employees can be fired for that reason. Connick v. Myers, 461 U.S. 138, 147 (1983). Private citizens cannot be punished for partisan political activity, but federal and state employees can be dismissed and otherwise punished for that reason. Public Workers v. Mitchell, 330 U.S. 75, 101 (1947); Civil Service Comm'n v. Letter Carriers, 413 U.S. 548, 556 (1973); Broadrick v. Oklahoma, 413 U.S. 601, 616 -617 (1973)."
> [Rutan v. Republican Party of Illinois, 497 U.S. 62 (1990)]

4. Those who participate may lawfully be deprived of equal protection of the law, which is the foundation of the U.S. Constitution. This deprivation of equal protection can lawfully become a provision of the franchise agreement.
5. Those who participate can lawfully be deprived of remedy for abuses in federal courts.

> "These general rules are well settled: (1) That the United States, when it creates rights in individuals against itself [a "public right", which is a euphemism for a "franchise" to help the court disguise the nature of the transaction], is under no obligation to provide a remedy through the courts. *United States ex rel. > Although Crowell and Raddatz do not explicitly distinguish between rights created by Congress and other rights, such a distinction underlies in part Crowell's and Raddatz' recognition of a critical difference between rights created by federal statute and rights recognized by the Constitution. Moreover, such a distinction seems to us to be necessary in light of the delicate accommodations required by the principle of separation of powers reflected in Art. III. The constitutional system of checks and balances is designed to guard against "encroachment or aggrandizement" by Congress at the expense of the other branches of government. Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S., at 122, 96 S.Ct., at 683. But when Congress creates a statutory right [a "privilege" in this case, such as a "trade or business"], it clearly has the discretion, in defining that right, to create presumptions, or assign burdens of proof, or prescribe remedies; it may also provide that persons seeking to vindicate that right must do so before particularized tribunals created to perform the specialized adjudicative tasks related to that right.FN35 Such provisions do, in a sense, affect the exercise of judicial power, but they are also incidental to Congress' power to define the right that it has created. No comparable justification exists, however, when the right being adjudicated is not of congressional creation. In such a situation, substantial inroads into functions that have traditionally been performed by the Judiciary cannot be characterized merely as incidental extensions of Congress' power to define rights that it has created. Rather, such inroads suggest unwarranted encroachments upon the judicial power of the United States, which our Constitution reserves for Art. III courts.
> [Northern Pipeline Const. Co. v. Marathon Pipe Line Co., 458 U.S. at 83-84, 102 S.Ct. 2858 (1983)]

Since the founding of our country, franchises have systematically been employed in every area of government to transform a government based on equal protection into a for-profit private corporation based on privilege, partiality, and favoritism. The effects of this form of corruption are exhaustively described in the following memorandum of law on our website:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

What are the mechanisms by which this corruption has been implemented by the Executive Branch? This section will detail the main mechanisms to sensitize you to how to fix the problem and will relate how it was implemented by exploiting the separation of powers doctrine.

The foundation of the separation of powers is the notion that the powers delegated to one branch of government by the Constitution cannot be re-delegated to another branch.

> ". . .a power definitely assigned by the Constitution to one department can neither be surrendered nor delegated by that department, nor vested by statute in another department or agency. Compare Springer v. Philippine Islands, 277 U.S. 189, 201, 202, 48 S.Ct. 480, 72 L.Ed. 845."
> [Williams v. U.S., 289 U.S. 553, 53 S.Ct. 751 (1933)]

Keenly aware of the above limitation, lawmakers over the years have used it to their advantage in creating a tax system that is exempt from any kind of judicial interference and which completely destroys all separation of powers. Below is a summary of the mechanism, in the exact sequence it was executed at the federal level:

1. Create a franchise based upon a "public office" in the Executive Branch. This:
   1.1. Allows statutes passed by Congress to be directly enforced against those who participate.
   1.2. Eliminates the need for publication in the Federal Register of enforcement implementing regulations for the statutes. See 5 U.S.C. §553(a) and 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1).
   1.3. Causes those engaged in the franchise to act in a representative capacity as "public officers" of the United States government pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), which is defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A) as a federal corporation.
   1.4. Causes all those engaged in the franchise to become "officers of a corporation", which is the "United States", pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343.
2. Give the franchise a deceptive "word of art" name that will deceive everyone into believing that they are engaged in it.

2.1. The franchise is called a "trade or business" and is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office". How many people know this and do they teach this in the public (government) schools or the IRS publications? NOT!

2.2. Earnings connected with the franchise are called "effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States". The term "United States" deceptively means the GOVERNMENT, and not the geographical United States.

3. In the franchise agreement, define the effective domicile or choice of law of all those who participate as being on federal territory within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. 26 U.S.C. §7408(d) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) place the effective domicile of all "franchisees" called "taxpayers" within the District of Columbia. If the feds really had jurisdiction within states of the Union, do you think they would need this devious device to "kidnap your legal identity" or "res" and move it to a foreign jurisdiction where you don't physically live?

4. Place a excise tax upon the franchise proportional to the income earned from the franchise. In the case of the Internal Revenue Code, all such income is described as income which is "effectively connected with a trade or business within the United States".

> "Excises are taxes laid upon the manufacture, sale or consumption of commodities within the country, upon licenses to pursue certain occupations and upon corporate privileges...the requirement to pay such taxes involves the exercise of [220 U.S. 107, 152] privileges, and the element of absolute and unavoidable demand is lacking...
> ...It is therefore well settled by the decisions of this court that when the sovereign authority has exercised the right to tax a legitimate subject of taxation as an exercise of a franchise or privilege, it is no objection that the measure of taxation is found in the income produced in part from property which of itself considered is nontaxable...
>
> Conceding the power of Congress to tax the business activities of private corporations.. the tax must be measured by some standard..."
> [Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)]

5. Mandate that those engaged in the franchise must have usually false evidence submitted by ignorant third parties that connects them to the franchise. IRS information returns, including IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, and 1099, are the mechanism. 26 U.S.C. §6041 says that these information returns may ONLY be filed in connection with a "trade or business", which is a code word for the name of the franchise.

6. Write statutes prohibiting interference by the courts with the collection of "taxes" (kickbacks) associated with the franchise based on the idea that courts in the Judicial Branch may not interfere with the internal affairs of another branch such as the Executive Branch. Hence, the "INTERNAL Revenue Service". This will protect the franchise from interference by other branches of the government and ensure that it relentlessly expands.

6.1. The Anti-Injunction Act, 26 U.S.C. §7421 is an example of an act that enjoins judicial interference with tax collection or assessment.

6.2. The Declaratory Judgments Act, 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) prohibits federal courts from pronouncing the rights or status of persons in regard to federal "taxes". This has the effect of gagging the courts from telling the truth about the nature of the federal income tax.

6.3. The word "internal" means INTERNAL to the Executive Branch and the United States government, not INTERNAL to the geographical United States of America.

7. Create administrative "franchise" courts in the Executive Branch which administer the program pursuant to Articles I and IV of the United States Constitution.

7.1. The U.S. Supreme Court calls such courts "The Fourth Branch of Government", as indicated in:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030, Section 18 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7.2. U.S. Tax Court. 26 U.S.C. §7441 identifies the U.S. Tax Court as an Article I court.

7.3. U.S. District Courts. There is no statute establishing any United States District Court as an Article III court. Consequently, even if the judges are Article III judges, they are not filling an Article III office and instead are filling an Article IV office. Consequently, they are Article IV judges. All of these courts were turned into franchise courts in the Judicial Code of 1911 by being renamed from the "District Court of the United States" to the "United States District Court".

For details on the above scam, see:

What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

8. Create other attractive federal franchises that piggyback in their agreements a requirement to participate in the franchise. For instance:

8.1. The original Social Security Act of 1935 contains a provision that those who sign up for this program, also simultaneously become subject to the Internal Revenue Code.

> Section 8 of the Social Security Act
> INCOME TAX ON EMPLOYEES
> SECTION 801. In addition to other taxes, there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon the income of every individual a tax equal to the following percentages of the wages (as defined in section 811) received by him after December 31, 1936, with respect to employment (as defined in section 811) after such date:
> (1) With respect to employment during the calendar years 1937, 1938, and 1939, the rate shall be 1 per centum.
> (2) With respect to employment during the calendar years 1940, 1941, and 1942, the rate shall 1 1/2 per centum.
> (3) With respect to employment during the calendar years 1943, 1944, and 1945, the rate shall be 2 per centum.
> (4) With respect to employment during the calendar years 1946, 1947, and 1948, the rate shall be 2 1/2 per centum.
> (5) With respect to employment after December 31, 1948, the rate shall be 3 per centum.

8.2. Most state vehicle codes have "residence" in the state as a prerequisite to signing up for a driver's license and they also mandate supplying a Social Security Number to get a license. Hence, by signing up for a driver's license, you are signing up for the following THREE franchises:

8.2.1. The Vehicle code franchise.

8.2.2. The domicile "civil protection franchise" tied to those who are "residents". This is what makes the applicant a "taxpayer" in the state's income tax codes. See:

> Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

8.2.3. The Social Security Franchise. See:

> Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002
> http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

9. Offer an opportunity for private citizens not domiciled within the jurisdiction of Congress to "volunteer" by license or private agreement to participate in the franchise and thereby become "public officers" within the Legislative Branch. The IRS Form W-4 and Social Security SS-5 form are an example of such a contract.

9.1. Call these volunteers "taxpayers".

9.2. Call EVERYONE "taxpayers" so everyone believes that the franchise is MANDATORY.

9.3. Do not even acknowledge the existence of those who do not participate in the franchise. These people are called "nontaxpayers" and they are not mentioned in any IRS publication, even though the following recognize their existence:

9.3.1. The U.S. Supreme Court in South Carolina v. Regan, 465 U.S. 367 (1984).

9.3.2. 26 U.S.C. §7426, which refers to them as "persons other than taxpayers".

9.4. Make the process of signing the agreement invisible by calling it a "Withholding Allowance Certificate" instead of what it really is, which is a "license" to become a "taxpayer" and call all of your earnings "wages" and "gross income".

> Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)–3.
> ---
>
> Title 26: Internal Revenue
> PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE
> Subpart E—Collection of Income Tax at Source
> §31.3402(p)-1 Voluntary withholding agreements.
> An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of §31.3401(a)–3, made after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are > includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. See §31.3405(c)–1, Q&A–3 concerning agreements to have more than 20-percent Federal income tax withheld from eligible rollover distributions within the meaning of section 402.

10. Create a commissioner to service the franchise who:
    10.1. Becomes the "fall guy", who then establishes a "bureau" without the authority of any law and which is a private corporation that is not part of the U.S. government.

> 53 Stat. 489
> Revenue Act of 1939, 53 Stat. 489
> Chapter 43: Internal Revenue Agents
> Section 4000 Appointment
> The Commissioner may, whenever in his judgment the necessities of the service so require, employ competent agents*, who shall be known and designated as internal revenue agents, and, except as provided for in this title,* no general or special agent or inspector of the Treasury Department in connection with internal revenue, by whatever designation he may be known, shall be appointed, commissioned, or employed*.*

    10.2. Creates and manages a PRIVATE company that is not part of the government. The IRS, in fact, is NOT part of the U.S. government and has no legal authority to exist, and therefore can service only those INTERNAL to the government. All agencies that interact DIRECTLY with the PRIVATE public must be authorized by Congress. Hence, "INTERNAL Revenue Service". See:

Origins and Authority of the Internal Revenue Service, Form #05.005 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The above means that everyone who works for the Internal Revenue Service is private contractor not appointed, commissioned, or employed by anyone in the government. They operation on commission and their pay derives from the amount of plunder they steal. See also:

Department of Justice Admits under Penalty of Perjury that the IRS is Not an Agency of the Federal Government, Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Evidence/USGovDeniesIRS/USGovDeniesIRS.htm

11. Create an environment that encourages omission in enforcing justice, irresponsibility, lies, and dishonesty within the bureau that administers the franchise.
    11.1. Indemnify these private contractors from liability by giving them "pseudonames" so that they can disguise their identify and be indemnified from liability for their criminal acts. The IRS Restructuring and Reform Act, Pub.Law 105-206, Title III, Section 3706, 112 Stat. 778 and Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 1.2.4 both authorize these pseudonames.
    11.2. Place a disclaimer on the website of this private THIEF contractor indemnifying them from liability for the truthfulness or accuracy of any of their statements or publications. See Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.8.

> "IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position."
> [Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.8 (05-14-1999)]

    11.3. Allow employees of the agency to operate without either identifying their full legal birthname but rather a pseudonym. IRS employees DO NOT use their real name so they can act essentially as anonymous, masked, international terrorists (the states are nations under the law of nations) sanctioned by law. See:

Notice of Pseudonym Use and Unreliable Tax Records, Form #04.206 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

    11.4. Omit the most important key facts and information from publications of the franchise administrator that would expose the proper application of the "tax" and the proper audience. See the following, which is over 2000 pages of information that are conveniently "omitted" from the IRS website about the proper application of the franchise and its nature as a "franchise":

Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

    11.5. Establish precedent in federal courts that you can't trust anything that anyone in the government tells you, and especially those who administer the franchise. See:
    http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm

12. Use the lies and deceptions created in the previous step to promote several false perceptions in the public at large that will expand the market for the franchise. These include:
    12.1. That the franchise is NOT a franchise, but a mandatory requirement that applies to ALL. In fact it can and does apply ONLY to statutory "taxpayers" and you have to VOLUNTEER to become a statutory "taxpayer" before it can have the "force of law" in your case.
    12.2. That participation is mandatory for ALL, instead of only for franchisees called "taxpayers".
    12.3. That the IRS is an "agency" of the United States government that has authority to interact directly with the public at large. In fact, it is a "bureau" that can ONLY lawfully service the needs of other federal agencies within the Executive Branch and which may NOT interface directly with the public at large.
    12.4. That the statutes implementing the franchise are "public law" that applies to everyone, instead of "private law" that only applies to those who individually consent to participate in the franchise.
13. Create a system to service those who prepare tax returns for others whereby those who accept being "licensed" and regulated get special favors. This system created by the IRS essentially punishes those who do not participate by deliberately giving them horrible service and making them suffer inconvenience and waiting long in line if they don't accept the "privilege" of being certified. Once they are certified, if they begin telling people the truth about what the law says and encourage following the law by refusing to volunteer, their credentials are pulled. This sort of censorship is accomplished through:
    13.1. IRS Enrolled Agent Program.
    13.2. Certified Public Accountant (CPA) licensing.
    13.3. Treasury Circular 230.
14. Engage in a pattern of "selective enforcement" and propaganda to broaden and expand the scam. For instance:
    14.1. Refuse to answer simple questions about the proper application of the franchise and the taxes associated with it. See:

If the IRS Were Selling Used Cars, Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/FalseRhetoric/IRSSellingCars.htm

    14.2. Prosecute those who submit false TAX returns, but not those who submit false INFORMATION returns. This causes the audience of "taxpayers" to expand because false reports are connecting innocent third parties to franchises that they are not in fact engaged in.
    14.3. Use confusion over the rules of statutory construction and the word "includes" to fool people into believing that those who are "included" in the franchise are not spelled out in the law in their entirety. This leaves undue discretion in the hands of IRS employees to compel ignorant "nontaxpayers" to become franchisees. See the following:

Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

    14.4. Refuse to define the words used on government forms, use terms that are not defined in the code such as "U.S. citizen", and try to confuse "words of art" found in the law with common terms in order to use the presumptuous behavior of the average American to expand the misperception that everyone has a legal DUTY to become a "franchisee" and a "taxpayer".
    14.5. Refuse to accept corrected information returns that might protect innocent "nontaxpayers" so that they are inducted involuntarily into the franchise as well.

The above process is WICKED in the most extreme way. It describes EXACTLY how our public servants have made themselves into our masters and systematically replaced every one of our rights with "privileges" and franchises. The Constitutional prohibition against this sort of corruption are described as follows by the courts:

> "It would be a palpable incongruity to strike down an act of state legislation which, by words of express divestment, seeks to strip the citizen of rights guaranteed by the federal Constitution, but to uphold an act by which the same result is accomplished under the guise of a surrender of a right in exchange for a valuable privilege which the state threatens otherwise to withhold. It is not necessary to challenge the proposition that, as a general rule, the state, having power to deny a privilege altogether, may grant it upon such conditions as it sees fit to impose. But the power of the state in that respect is not unlimited, and one of the limitations is that it may not impose conditions which require the relinquishment of Constitutional rights. If the state may compel the surrender of one constitutional right as a condition of its favor, it may, in like manner, compel a surrender of all. It is inconceivable that guaranties embedded in the Constitution of the United States may thus be manipulated out of existence."
> [Frost v. Railroad Commission, 271 U.S. 583, 46 S.Ct. 605 (1926)]

> "A right common in every citizen such as the right to own property or to engage in business of a character not requiring regulation CANNOT, however, be taxed as a special franchise by first prohibiting its exercise and then permitting its enjoyment upon the payment of a certain sum of money."

[Stevens v. State, 2 Ark. 291, 35 Am.Dec. 72; Spring Val. Water Works v. Barber, 99 Cal. 36, 33 Pac. 735, 21 L.R.A. 416. Note 57 L.R.A. 416]

"The individual, unlike the corporation, cannot be taxed for the mere privilege of existing. The corporation is an artificial entity which owes its existence and charter power to the State, but the individual's right to live and own property are natural rights for the enjoyment of which an excise cannot be imposed."
[Redfield v. Fisher, 292 Oregon 814, 817]

"Legislature…cannot name something to be a taxable privilege unless it is first a privilege." [Taxation West Key 43]…"The Right to receive income or earnings is a right belonging to every person and realization and receipt of income is therefore not a 'privilege', that can be taxed."
[Jack Cole Co. v. MacFarland, 337 S.W.2d. 453, Tenn.

Through the above process of corruption, the separation of powers is completely destroyed and nearly every American has essentially been "assimilated" into the Executive Branch of the government, leaving the Constitutional Republic bequeathed to us by our founding fathers vacant and abandoned. Nearly every service that we expect from government has been systematically converted over the years into a franchise using the techniques described above. The political and legal changes resulting from the above have been tabulated to show the "BEFORE" and the "AFTER" so their extremely harmful effects become crystal clear in your mind. This process of corruption, by the way, is not unique to the United States, but is found in every major industrialized country on Earth.

#	Characteristic	DE JURE CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT	DE FACTO GOVERNMENT BASED ENTIRELY ON FRANCHISES
1	Purpose of government	Protection	Provide "social services" and "social insurance" to government "employees" and officers
2	Nature of government	Public trust Charitable trust	For-profit private corporation (see 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A))
3	Citizens	The Sovereigns "nationals" but not "citizens" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 1452	1. "Employees" or "officers" of the government 2. "Trustees" of the "public trust" 3. "customers" of the corporation 4. Statutory "U.S. citizens" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401
4	Effective domicile of citizens	Sovereign state of the Union	Federal territory and the District of Columbia
5	Ownership of real property is	Legal	Equitable. The government owns the land, and you rent it from them using property taxes.
6	Type of property ownership	Absolute and allodial	Qualified (shared with government). Owned by the public office and managed by the person volunteering into the office.
7	Meaning of word "rights"	Constitutional rights	Statutory privileges under a civil franchise. Constitutional rights don't exist and are irrelevant.
8	Purpose of tax system	Fund "protection"	1. Socialism. 2. Political favors. 3. Wealth redistribution 4. Consolidation of power and control (corporate fascism) 5. Bribe PRIVATE people to join the franchise and become public officers collecting "benefits"
9	Equal protection	Mandatory	Optional
10	Nature of courts	Constitutional Article III courts in the Judicial Branch	Administrative or "franchise" courts within the Executive Branch
11	Branches within the government	Executive Legislative Judicial	Executive Legislative (Judiciary merged with Executive. See Judicial Code of 1911)
12	Purpose of legal profession	Protect individual rights	1. Protect collective (government) rights. 2. Protect and expand the government monopoly. 3. Discourage reforms by making litigation so expensive that it is beyond the reach of the average citizen. 4. Persecute dissent.
13	Lawyers are	Unlicensed	Privileged and licensed and therefore subject to control and censorship by the government.

#	Characteristic	DE JURE CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT	DE FACTO GOVERNMENT BASED ENTIRELY ON FRANCHISES
14	Votes in elections cast by	"Electors"	"Franchisees" called "registered voters" who are surety for bond measures on the ballot. That means they are subject to a "poll tax".
15	Driving is	A common right	A licensed "privilege"
16	Marriage is	A common right	A licensed "privilege"
17	Purpose of the military	Protect the sovereign citizens No draft within states of the Union is lawful. See Federalist Paper #15	1. Expand the corporate monopoly internationally 2. Protect public servants from the angry populace who want to end the tyranny.
18	Money is	1. Based on gold and silver. 2. Issued pursuant to Article 1, Section 8. Clause 5.	1. A corporate bond or obligation borrowed from the Federal Reserve at interest. 2. Issued pursuant to Article 1, Section 8. Clause 2.
19	Purpose of sex	Procreation	Recreation
20	Responsibility	The individual sovereign is responsible for all his actions and choices.	The collective "social insurance company" is responsible. Personal responsibility is outlawed.
21	Meaning of "State", "this State"	"Body politic" and NOT "body corporate"	"Body corporate" and NOT "body politic". There is no body politic and everyone is presumed to be part of the body corporate as a public officer.
22	Meaning of "in this State" or "in the State" in statutes	PHYSICALLY PRESENT within the geographic limits of the territory composing the state.	LEGALLY and NOT PHYSICALLY present within the corporation as a "person" and therefore "public officer" of the corporation.
23	Real party in interest in criminal actions filed by the state	Specific human being injured who is within the body politic	Private CORPORATION called "State of". Most actions are "penal" or "quasi criminal" rather than "criminal" in a classical sense. Such penal actions can only be associated with franchisees under a civil franchise.

6.5 General Evolution

If the average American is not legally liable to pay taxes on his earned income, then how did we evolve to the point where we have to pay income taxes in violation of our constitutional rights? We've scoured every tax book and government publication we could find totaling thousands of pages to compile a chronological sequence for how the fraud was perpetrated over the last century. Because this process involves essentially criminal activity, there has been a concerted effort by the government to cover it up, which we will describe in detail later. The most glaring evidence of that cover-up is found in the testimony of Shelley Davis, the IRS' only historian, who testified in front of Congress during the IRS Restructuring hearings in 1998 and whose testimony we captured for you to read later in section 6.9.9.1. She also wrote a book documenting the secret culture within the IRS entitled Unbridled Power which we highly recommend. Criminals, you will recall, don't want any historical information maintained about their misdeeds, and the IRS is one of the few organizations associated with the federal government that has no historical records, no current historian, and a concerted effort to provide as little information about their activities in their FOIA responses as possible. In most cases, you actually have to litigate against the IRS in federal court to get the information you want because they are so tight-lipped in their cover-up of their wrongdoing.

The most fruitful single source for information about the history of the Internal Revenue Service is found in a publication written by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in 1948 entitled The Work and Jurisdiction of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, 1948, which we have published electronically and made freely available on our website at the below address:

http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/IRS/WorkAndJurisOfTheBIR1948s.pdf

You will DEFINITELY want to download this large book (10.8 Mbytes) and read the history of the IRS right out of the horse's mouth. Below is a brief chronology of w the fraud was perpetrated over the years, as compiled from the many government publications at our disposal:

1. 1776: Declaration of Independence Signed.
2. 1818: U.S. v. Bevans, 16 U.S. 336 (1818)

   The U.S. supreme Court ruled that there are two separate and distinct jurisdictions within the United States of America:

   > "The exclusive jurisdiction which the United States have in forts and dock-yards ceded to them, is derived from the express assent of the states by whom the cessions are made. It could be derived in no other manner; because without it, the authority of the state would be supreme and exclusive therein," 3 Wheat., at 350, 351. [U.S. v. Bevans, 16 U.S. 336 (1818)]

   This case is very significant, because it has never been overruled and when we read laws in the U.S. Codes, it is very important for us to establish which of these two jurisdictions apply. If it is the latter jurisdiction, the 50 union states, then the law applies to us. If it is the former jurisdiction, also called the "federal zone", then the law doesn't apply to the vast majority of citizens domiciled in the 50 union states. The Internal Revenue Code, incidentally , ONLY applies to the "federal zone"…not to you!

3. 1861-1865: Civil War
4. January 1, 1863: Emancipation Proclamation signed by President Lincoln
5. 1862: The Nation's First Income Tax
   - 5.1 President Lincoln introduced the first income tax to pay for the Civil War. Congress eliminated the tax in 1872.
   - 5.2 The Tax Act of 1862 was passed and signed by President Lincoln July 1 1862. The rates were 3% on income above $600 and 5% on income above $10,000. The rent or rental value of your home could be deducted from income in determining the tax liability. The Commissioner of Revenue stated "The people of this country have accepted it with cheerfulness, to meet a temporary exigency, and it has excited no serious complaint in its administration." This acceptance was primarily due to the need for revenue to finance the Civil War.
   - 5.3 Although the people cheerfully accepted the tax, compliance was not high. Figures released after the Civil War indicated that 276,661 people actually filed tax returns in 1870 (the year of the highest returns filed) when the country's population was approximately 38 million.
   - 5.4 With the end of the Civil War the public's accepted cheerfulness waned. The Tax Act of 1864 was modified after the war. The rates were changed to a flat 5 percent with the exemption amount raised to $1,000. Several attempts to make the tax permanent were tried but by 1869 "no businessman could pass the day without suffering from those burdens" From 1870 to 1872 the rate was a flat 2.5 percent and the exemption amount was raised to $2,000.
6. 1868: States Ratify the 14th Amendment
   - 6.1 Citizenship was extended to Blacks. This was done in order to protect blacks, because southern states would give them no citizenship or rights under state law.
   - 6.2 Legislatures of the Southern States under gun point were forced to ratify the 14th Amendment.
   - 6.3 Just before the passage of the 14th Amendment, Congress passed a revision to the Statutes at Large which gave people a way out of being constitutional "citizens of the United States", 15 Stat. 223-224 (1868), R.S. § 1999, which stated that:

> "the right of expatriation is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and decreed that "any declaration, instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officers of this government which denies, restricts, impairs, or questions the right of expatriation, is hereby declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of this government."

7. 1871: U.S. Inc. Federal Corporation Established

District of Columbia Organic Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419-429 created a "municipal corporation" to govern the District of Columbia. Considering the fact that the municipal corporation itself was incorporated in 1801, an "Organic Act" (first Act) using the term "municipal corporation" in 1871 can only mean a private corporation owned by the municipality. Hereinafter we will call that private corporation, "Corp. U.S." By consistent usage, Corp. U.S. trademarked the name, "United States Government" referring to themselves. The District of Columbia Organic Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419-429 places Congress in control (like a corporate board) and gives the purpose of the act to form a governing body over the municipality; this allowed Congress to direct the business needs of the government under the existent martial law and provided them with corporate abilities they would not otherwise have. This was done under the constitutional authority for Congress to pass any law within the ten mile square of the District of Columbia..

8. 1872: Nation's First Income Tax was Repealed

The Internal Revenue Act of 1862 was repealed, ending the nation's first income tax. The civil war was over and paid for and there was no longer any reason for the tax.

9. 1872: Office of the Assessor of Internal Revenue Eliminated

Functions of Assessor delegated to the Collector of Internal Revenue. See: 17 Statutes at Large, p. 401, 42nd Congress, Session III Chapter XIII (December 24, 1872).

10. 1875: U.S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875). Supreme Court Confirms that there are Two Types of Citizens: federal and state

> "We have in our political system a Government of the United States and a government of each of the several States. Each of these governments is distinct from the others, and each has citizens of its own
> ...
> "Both before and after the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, it has not been necessary for a person to be a citizen of the United States in order to be a citizen of his state."
> [Citing U.S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)]

11. 1894: Caha v. United States, 152 U.S. 211 (1894)

The U.S. supreme Court ruled that Congress can only make laws that apply to areas over which it has exclusive jurisdiction, which is the "federal zone", including the District of Columbia and other federal territories. It cannot make laws affecting activity within the states unless the Constitution explicitly grants that authority:

> "The law of Congress in respect to those matters do not extend into the territorial limits of the states, but have force only in the District of Columbia, and other places that are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the national government."
> *[*Caha v. United States, 152 U.S. 211 (1894)]

12. 1895: Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895)

12.1 U.S. Supreme court ruled that direct taxes on the income of individuals are unconstitutional and are forbidden.

12.2 Here was the court's ruling:

> "Nothing can be clearer than that what the constitution intended to guard against was the exercise by the general government of the power of directly taxing persons and property within any state through a majority made up from the other states. It is true that the effect of requiring direct taxes to be apportioned among the states in proportion to their population is necessarily that the amount of taxes on the individual [157 U.S. 429, 583] taxpayer in a state having the taxable subject-matter to a larger extent in proportion to its population than another state has, would be less than in such other state; but this inequality must be held to have been contemplated, and was manifestly designed to operate to restrain the exercise of the power of direct taxation to extraordinary emergencies, and to prevent an attack upon accumulated property by mere force of numbers.
> ...

> It is the duty of the court in this case simply to determine whether the income tax now before it does or does not belong to the class of direct taxes, and if it does, to decide the constitutional question which follows . . .
> First. That the law in question, in imposing a tax on the income or rents of real estate, imposes a tax upon the real estate itself; and in imposing a tax on the interest or other income of bonds or other personal property, held for the purposes of income or ordinarily yielding income, imposes a tax upon the personal estate itself; that such tax is a direct tax, and void because imposed without regard to the rule of apportionment; and that by reason thereof the whole law is invalidated.
> Second. That the law is invalid, because imposing indirect taxes in violation of the constitutional requirement of uniformity, and therein also in violation of the implied limitation upon taxation that all tax laws must apply equally, impartially, and uniformly to all similarly situated. Under the second head, it is contended that the rule of uniformity is violated, in that the law taxes the income of certain corporations, companies, and associations, no matter how created or organized, at a higher rate than the incomes of individuals or partnerships derived from precisely similar property or business; in that it exempts from the operation of the act and from the burden of taxation numerous corporations, companies, and associations having similar property and carrying on similar business to those expressly taxed; in that it denies to individuals deriving their income from shares in certain corporations, companies, and associations the benefit of the exemption of $ 4,000 granted to other persons interested in similar property and business; in the exemption of $4,000; in the exemption of building and loan associations, savings banks, mutual life, fire, marine, and accident insurance companies, existing solely for the pecuniary profit of their members,-these and other exemptions being alleged to be purely arbitrary and capricious, justified by no public purpose, and of such magnitude as to invalidate the entire enactment; and in other particulars. "
> [Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895)]

13. 1900: Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41 (1900)

The U.S. supreme Court defined the difference between direct taxes [income taxes on persons] and excise taxes:

> "Direct taxes bear immediately upon persons, upon the possession and enjoyment of rights; indirect taxes are levied upon the happening of an event as an exchange."
> [Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41 (1900)]

14. 1901: Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901): Corruption of our Tax System

14.1 The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that people domiciled in federal territories such as Puerto Rico, Guam, the District of Columbia, and the Virgin Islands, are NOT protected by the U.S. Constitution. Therefore, these people could be subjected to direct taxes on income because they were classified as citizens of the U.S.

14.2 Below is an excerpt from that ruling:

> "CONSTITUTIONAL RESTRICTIONS AND LIMITATIONS [Bill of Rights] WERE NOT APPLICABLE to the areas of lands, enclaves, territories, and possessions over which Congress had EXCLUSIVE LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION"
> [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

14.3 This lead subsequently to the imposition of direct taxes on the income of individuals who were U.S. Citizens following the fraudulent ratification of the 16th Amendment in 1913.

14.4 This ruling was also behind why income tax returns after this case ask you: "Are you a U.S. Citizen?". Once you answer yes, you give up your constitutional rights! See sections 4.6 and 4.8 for further details on this.

15. 1909: Congress proposed the 16th Amendment and sent to states for ratification

15.1 The Senate approved it by an astounding vote of 77 to zero and the House followed suit with a roll call of 318 to 14.

15.2 The measure then went to the states for ratification.

16. 1909: Corporate Excise Tax of 1909 was passed, 36 Stat 112.

16.1 This was the country's first income tax, where "income" was defined as corporate profit.

16.2 All subsequent income tax laws and the Internal Revenue Code itself were based on this.

16.3 The Supreme Court ruled in Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926) that:

> "Income has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (36 Stat. 112) in the 16th Amendment, and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed."
> [Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926)]

17. 1911: Judicial Code of 1911:

This act abolished the existing circuit courts and replaced them with Circuit Courts of Appeals. The District Courts of the United States became "United States District Courts". This left no Article III courts to hear cases involving constitutional rights. All district and circuit courts became, at that point, Article II courts which may only have jurisdiction within territories of the United States Government. These courts are part of the executive branch, not the judicial branch, of the U.S. government. The judges in these Art. II courts are civil service employees of the Office of Personnel Management, which is part of the Executive Branch. The judges are not judicial officers as required under Art. III of the Constitution, but federal employees.

18. Feb. 12, 1913: 42nd state "allegedly" voted for approval of 16th Amendment, and the following words became a part of the United States Constitution:

> "The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration."

Of course, we all know that the claim that the 16th amendment was ratified by the then secretary of state Philander Knox this was indeed one of the biggest "frauds" in history that has not to this day ever been questioned or investigated by a Congress that wants YOUR money. It ought to be quite obvious why the Supreme court won't touch this and the Congress has refused to investigate this fraud from the beginning. You can read about this fraud in a book called "Law That Never Was" by ordering the book from the following website:

http://www.thelawthatneverwas.com/

19. Oct. 3, 1913: Tariff Act

The Tariff Act of October 3, 1913, IIE, 38 Stat. 170 was passed, and it contained, perhaps somewhat surprisingly, a fairly expansive withholding provision. It was later repealed and replaced with the 1954 Code, 26 U.S.C. §6041 et seq.

20. 1913: Congress creates the Federal Reserve System with the Federal Reserve Act of 1913

20.1 Congress creates the FRS; permits the emission of FRNs, redeemable in "lawful money"; and declares FRNs to be "obligations of the United States", but not "legal tender". In practice, the Federal Reserve Banks and the United States Treasury redeem FRNs for gold coin on demand. FRNs are a fiduciary currency.

20.2 Note that the Federal Reserve and the income tax were enacted at the same time because they cannot function without each other. If we are going to put our money supply in the hands of private bankers, then we need a way to sop up excess printed dollars with an income tax, or the economy will go out of control and inflation will spiral. Since both the income tax and the Federal Reserve are evil, we must eliminate both of them at the same time as well.

21. 1913-1917: Media heralded coming of the 16th Amendment

21.1 Announced after its alleged ratification that it was the basis for the new income tax which only the wealthy would pay. The camel now had its nose under the tent and all Congress had to do was raise the tax rates over time and let the camel all the way in.

21.2 Who controlled the printed media in 1913? John D. Rockefeller and his bankers, through stock ownership.

21.3 Most of the papers parroted what they were instructed to tell the people.

21.4 To this day, a nationwide chorus of politicians, TV economists and Law school professors alike all repeat that the 16th Amendment authorized the imposition of an income tax on U.S. citizens. They are all mistaken.

22. 1916: Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)

22.1 The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the 16th Amendment conferred "no new powers of taxation"!

22.2 Here are some excerpts. The 16th Amendment…:

> "...prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..."
> [Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

22.3 This was a big blow to the IRS. Shortly after that case Treasury Decision 2313 was issued as a form of "damage control".

23. March 21, 1916: Treasury Decision 2313

23.1 Thwarted by the Brushaber and Stanton decisions, the Department of Treasury issued Treasury Decision Number 2313. Here are a few excerpted quotes from T.D. 2313 in reference to the Brushaber decision:

> "...it is hereby held that income accruing to nonresident aliens in the form of interest...and dividends...is subject to the income tax imposed by the act of October 3, 1913. The responsible heads, agents, or representatives of nonresident aliens...shall make a full and complete return of the income therefrom on ...Form 1040..."

23.2 So there you have it. The Treasury Department has stated that you are to file Form 1040 on behalf of your "nonresident alien principal." So don't forget to do that next April 15th! Of course, since you'll be signing Form 1040 under penalties of perjury and stating that every material fact is 100% correct to the best of your knowledge, and since the commission of perjury is a felony that attaches criminal fines and penalties, be sure you really are filing Form 1040 on behalf of your "nonresident alien principal"!

23.3 By reading Internal Revenue Code section 871(a), we see that it imposes a tax of 30% on the amount received by non-resident aliens from sources within the United States. Code section 871(b) states that the nonresident alien shall be taxable under code section 1, thus authorizing the use of the charts in section 1 to compute and reduce his tax, so he can get a tax refund from the 30% which is withheld under the provisions of section 1441.

23.4 Also, under section 874(a), the nonresident alien is entitled to the benefit of deductions and credits filing or having his agent file, a 1040, as stated in TD 2313.

23.5 Of course, this whole fiasco has nothing whatsoever to do with most Americans, who aren't liable for federal income taxes at all unless they make themselves liable by "volunteering"!

24. 1920: Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920); Supreme Court Declares Direct Taxes on Federal Judges to Not be Authorized by the 16th Amendment and Unconstitutional

24.1 In this case, the Supreme Court addressed the issue of whether a tax on salary was authorized:

> "After further consideration, we adhere to that view and accordingly hold that the Sixteenth Amendment does not authorize or support the tax in question. " [A direct tax on salary income of a federal judge]
> [Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

24.2 This case has a very thorough treatment of the 16th Amendment taxing issues, and discusses nearly all of the issues critical to the income tax, and by the way, fully supports the entire position advocated in this document with regards to the 26 U.S.C. §861 issues and taxable source issues.

25. 1922: Supreme Court Rules Against Socialism in the Case of Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co., 259 U.S. 20 (1922)

25.1 This case was about the validity of Child Labor Tax law imposed by Congress. The Drexel Furniture Company filed suit because it didn't want to be forced to pay the Child Labor Tax to the IRS. The Supreme Court ruled that the Child Labor Tax Law was unconstitutional because it amounted to social engineering and exceeded the powers conferred by the Constitution on the federal government. In effect, they called it socialism and an abuse of the taxing and legal authority of Congress conferred by the Constitution and amounted to legislating socialism by legislatively plundering the employer profits for the benefit of the employees. The findings in this case are similar to the case of Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935). The arguments used here apply equally well to the federal income tax, as we pointed out in the preface to this document.

> "Out of a proper respect for the acts of a co-ordinate branch of the government, this court has gone far to sustain taxing acts as such, even though there has been ground for suspecting, from the weight of the tax, it was intended to destroy its subject. But in the act before [259 U.S. 20, 38] us the presumption of validity cannot prevail, because the proof of the contrary is found on the very face of its provisions. Grant the validity of this law, and all that Congress would need to do, hereafter, in seeking to take over to its control any one of the great number of subjects of public interest, jurisdiction of which the states have never parted with, and which are reserved to them by the Tenth Amendment, would be to enact a detailed measure of complete regulation of the subject and enforce it by a so-called tax upon departures from it. To give such magic to the word 'tax' would be to break down all constitutional limitation of the powers of Congress and completely wipe out the sovereignty of the states. "
> [Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co., 259 U.S. 20 (1922)]

25.2 Keep in mind the historical context of this ruling. The Federal Reserve had just been created by Congress AND the 16th Amendment had just been claimed fraudulently to have been ratified by Philander Knox, also in 1913. The tax code of 1921 had just been passed by 1922, which was a major rewrite of the code designed to conceal the unconstitutionality of income taxes on individuals. Now Congress was trying to expand its power even further by abusing its legislative authority to force employers to increase benefits to their workers!

26. 1925: Certiorari Act of 1925 Passed

26.1 Former President William Howard Taft, then acting as Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, helped author a bill called the Certiorari Act of 1925. Recall that William Taft had been the President who introduced the Sixteenth Amendment to the U.S. Congress in 1909 (see section 3.11.11.1 for further details on this). This Act authorized the U.S. Supreme Court to have discretion to deny the hearing of appeals from lower federal appeal courts. By refusing to hear an appeal, the Supreme Court in effect had the right to deny Constitutional rights of the appellants from the circuit courts if such rights had been violated by the lower courts or the then Bureau of Internal Revenue (now called the IRS). Justices of the Supreme Court take an oath to support and defend the Constitution against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and by denying appeals, they could in effect violate their oath and condone extortion by the BIR. This kind of scandal is called a sin of omission and its commonplace in the Supreme Court now.

26.2 When you think about it, the Certiorari Act of 1925 violates the separation of powers doctrine because the Judiciary and the Congress are supposed to be separate and sovereign powers within the federal government. How can one branch of government, the Congress in this case, authorize another supposedly independent branch of federal government, the Supreme Court in this Case, to violate the Constitutional rights of Americans by denying their appeals? They can't, because if the appeal involves constitutional issues, then they would not be upholding the constitution as their oath of office requires them to do!

26.3 As we explain subsequently in section 6.7.1, this bill was an important new tool that our corrupt government could use to uphold the federal income tax, because it allows the federal district and circuit courts to uphold and expand federal income taxes while allowing the U.S. Supreme Court to deny appeals from such cases, even if the findings of the lower court disagreed with numerous precedents set on previous Supreme Court cases that invalidate direct federal income taxes. It creates a schizophrenic, split personality federal government which, out of one side of its mouth, the Supreme Court, says income taxes are indirect excise taxes that are not authorized on natural persons as direct taxes, but then out of the other side of its mouth in the federal district and circuit courts, says direct income taxes are authorized by the Sixteenth Amendment. This represents not only hypocrisy of the highest order but also a violation of our fundamental right to due process under the Fourth, Fifth, and Seventh Amendments! How can you know what the Internal Revenue Code requires of you if the Supreme Court and the federal circuit courts can't even consistently agree and the Supreme Court refuses to hear appeals that contradict its own precedents?

27. 1933: FDR Amends the Trading With The Enemy Act of 1917 to Confiscate all Gold and Declare Emergency

27.1 Trading With The Enemy Act invoked to criminalize holding of gold. Penalty was $10,000 and imprisonment for 10 years. Act only applied on federal territories and possessions but not inside nonfederal areas of the 50 union states. However, FDR make it "appear" that it applied to EVERYONE.

27.2 Congress repudiates redemption of FRNs in gold for United States citizens, and declares that FRNs shall be "legal tender". The government continues to redeem FRNs in gold for foreigners; and United States citizens can redeem FRNs for "lawful money" (such as United States Treasury Notes and silver certificates), which is redeemable in silver coins. Therefore, FRNs remain a fiduciary currency, redeemable directly in gold internationally and indirectly in silver domestically.

28. 1935: FDR Proposes and Congress Passes the Social Security Act of 1935

28.1 FDR gave a pep talk to congress on January 17, 1935 trying to sell Social Security.

28.2 Congress passed FDR's Social Security Act of 1935 on August 14, 1935.

28.3 Once passed, socialism is officially "institutionalized" within our republican government. This marks the beginning of the end of "rugged individualism" in America. The tumor is planted and begins to grow. Eventually, this cancer will destroy the country.

28.4 Voluntary Social Security tax deductions begin.

29. 1935: Supreme Court Rules Against Socialism AGAIN in the Case of Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935)

29.1 After the Great Wall Street Crash in 1929, daily newspaper photographs of mile-long soup and bread lines persuaded a frightened public to eagerly embrace the introduction of the European style socialism in the form of Social Security, written and contrived in smoke-filled rooms by the same politician-puppets of the bankers who had engineered both the crash and the depression.

29.2 A public eager to exchange liberty for benefits would vote for those politicians who would promise to provide them with the greatest "fair share" of the public trough. Congress made its first attempt at socialist wealth redistribution when it passed legislation in 1934 to provide for the retirement of railroad workers. Here's what the Supreme Court had to say when they shot this act down as unconstitutional in their decision in Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Company decided May 6, 1935:

> "The catalog of means and actions which might be imposed upon an employer in any business, tending to the comfort and satisfaction of his employees, seems endless.
> Provisions for free medical attendance and nursing, for clothing, for food, for housing, for the education of children, and a hundred other matters might with equal propriety be proposed as tending to relieve the employee of mental strain and worry.
> Can it fairly be said that the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce extends to the prescription of any or all of these things?
>
> Is it not apparent that they are really and essentially related solely to social welfare of the worker, and therefore remote from any regulation of commerce as such? We think the answer is plain. These matters obviously lie outside the orbit of Congressional power."
> [Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935)]

29.3 There you have it--the high court informing Congress that it has no constitutional authority whatsoever to legislate for the social welfare of the worker. The result was that when Social Security was instituted, it had to be treated as strictly voluntary.

30. 1937: President Franklin D. Roosevelt "Stacks" the Supreme Court to Ramrod His Socialist Programs Down Our Throats!!!

Thwarted by resistance to his socialist programs, including Social Security, in 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt announced he was going to "stack" the Supreme Court (see http://www.hpol.org/fdr/chat/). This was called "the court packing plan". The Supreme court originally had 6 justices, and he doubled its size by adding several of his own "cronies" who would uphold and defend his socialist programs, including Social Security and the Victory Tax. He also proposed to replace all the justices over 70, which included 5 of the 6 justices then in office.

31. 1939: Congress Obfuscates the Tax Code by Removing References to Nonresident Aliens from the Definition of "Gross Income"

31.1 In particular, they removed the phrase "in the case of a nonresident alien individual or of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262" from the 1921 code, which was the predecessor to 26 U.S.C. §861 we have today. There was not fundamental change in the constitution or the law. They made these changes to further conceal the truth.

31.2 See section 6.3.7 "Cover-Up of 1939: Removed References to Nonresident Aliens from the Definition of 'Gross Income'" for details of how Congress obfuscated the tax code in this case.

32. Victory Tax Act of 1942, imposed by the Revenue Act of 1942, 172, 56 Stat. 884. Part of the 1939 Tax Code.

32.1 This act was a voluntary employer payroll deduction of income taxes required in order to fight World War II. It represented the start of employer withholding, but note that it was entirely voluntary.

32.2 As a part of the Victory Tax Act, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt created the Voluntary W-4 Withholding System, making income tax withholding mandatory for all citizens of the Union. This was a two year tax, and as expected, both the Victory Tax and the Voluntary W-4 Withholding were repealed by Congress in 1944. Unfortunately, they forgot to tell America.

32.3 Under the disguise of the 1913 Internal Income tax, the machinery of the Victory tax remained in operation. Voluntary compliance with the Federal internal income tax jumped from an anemic 5 percent to a robust 60 percent in a matter of a couple years via the repealed Victory tax system of tax collection. By using two illegitimate tax systems, Congress created the beast we have today, taxing us under rates and conditions exceeding those which prompted the Boston Tea Party and the Declaration of Independence.

32.4 The Victory Tax was replaced by the Current Tax Payment Act of 1943, 57 Stat. 126, and was repealed by the Individual Income Tax Act of 1944, 6 (a), 58 Stat. 234.

33. 1943: President Franklin Delano Roosevelt's Executive Order 9397 made Social Security Numbers a standard tracking mechanism across all federal agencies. Bye-bye privacy and Fourth Amendment!

33.1 Read Presidential Executive Order 9397 at:

http://resource.lawlinks.com/Content/Legal_Research/Executive_Orders/1940-1960/executive_order_9397.htm

34. 1947: U.S. v. Silk, 331 U.S. 704 (1947) Declares Social Security Taxes are Legitimate Excise Taxes On Businesses

34.1 FDR's stacking of the Supreme Court finally pays off!

34.2 The cancer of socialism begins to spread further with encouragement by the state.

34.3 Thomas Jefferson's warnings and predictions are realized:

> "In every government on earth is some trace of human weakness, some germ of corruption and degeneracy, which cunning will discover, and wickedness insensibly open, cultivate and improve."
> [Thomas Jefferson: Notes on Virginia Q.XIV, 1782. ME 2:207]

35. 1952: IRS Reorganization and elimination of the Office of Collector of Internal Revenue

35.1 Office of Collector of Internal Revenue abolished. See Reorganization Plans No. 26 of 1950 and No. 1 of 1952, and Notes under 26 U.S.C. §7804, "Amendments" at:

https://www.law.cornell.edu/uscode/text/26/7804?qt-us_code_temp_noupdates=1#qt-us_code_temp_noupdates

35.2 As part of this reorganization, the government manufactured a scandal concerning the collectors. The real reason, however, was to make the code voluntary.

35.3 This office of the Collector of Internal Revenue made possible to protest a tax. Without a Collector of Internal Revenue, it is impossible to protest a tax because it has to be voluntary without a collector. If you don't make a demand in the law, then no one has to do anything. This reorganization made the process of tax collection into an administrative process, which allowed all U.S. District courts into administrative courts in regards to federal taxes. The only people who should go to these courts at this point are "taxpayers", which are people who volunteered to pay the tax.

35.4 Section 29 of the 1894 Revenue Act was the last federal law that imposed a legal duty to pay upon citizens and residents of the United States. The duty to pay the tax was subsequently eliminated by Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895) and does not appear in any Revenue Law after that date.

36. 1954: Congress Rewrites the Tax Code Again to Hide Constitutional Limitations on The Right To Tax

36.1 Deleted any phrases referring to income that is, under the Constitution or fundamental law, not taxable by the government. This was done by changing the definition of gross income from "unless exempt from tax by law" to "unless excluded by law". There were no changes to the law or the Constitution that would necessitate deleting the reference to the Constitution; it was done for no other credible reason than to obscure the Constitutionally-limited application of the income tax, but without making the regulation technically incorrect - only deceiving and misleading.

36.2 They obfuscated locating taxable sources by adding double-negatives "list of sources that are NOT considered tax exempt". Why not just state what IS taxable, which is foreign income?

36.3 Removed from the regulations the phrase "in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States" from the regulations in section 1.861-8. This made it appear that the applicability of the income tax was expanded. As Congress stated, the application of the law did not change in 1954, but some key phrases in the regulations were removed so as to make the truth less obvious.

36.4 The admission of the limited application vanished from the regulations defining "gross income," but remained in the regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861, and (to maintain literal accuracy) the regulations began to say that 861 and following and related regulations "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." This change removed any chance of the regulations under Section 61 raising suspicions.

36.5 See section 6.8.12 "Cover-Up of 1954: Hiding Constitutional Limitations on the Right To Tax" for details of how Congress obfuscated the tax code in this case.

37. 1968: Congress Repudiates Redemption of All Forms of "lawful money" in silver

37.1 This turned FRNs into a fiat currency domestically for the first time.

38. 1971: President Nixon Repudiates Redemption of FRNs in Gold

38.1 This turned FRNs into a fiat currency internationally for the first time.

39. 1978: Congress Rewrites the Tax Code Again to Confuse the IRS Regulations on "Sources"

39.1 In 1978, the wording of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 was changed significantly, and the title was changed from "Computation of Taxable Income from Sources Within the United States" to "Computation of taxable income from sources within the United States and from other sources and activities." Some have suggested that the current title implies that one should not be using this section unless he has income both from within the United States and from "other sources and activities." The older title, as well as the text of the current regulations, shows that this is not the case.

39.2 See section 6.8.11 "Cover-Up of 1978: Confused IRS Regulations on 'Sources'" for details of how Congress obfuscated the tax code in this case.

40. 1979: The Zaritsky Report

40.1 Congressional Research Service report #79-131, written in 1979 by Howard Zaritsky and titled Some Constitutional Questions Regarding the Income Tax Laws agreed in stating:

> "...therefore it is clear that the income tax is an 'indirect' tax...subject to the rule of uniformity, rather than the rule of apportionment."

40.2 So the so-called "income tax amendment" that everybody and their uncle believe authorized the income tax and that many patriotic Americans object to since there is overwhelming evidence that it was never properly ratified by the States...changed absolutely nothing!

40.3 The 16th Amendment was constitutional window dressing and might as well have never been written. Why? In the original draft of the 16th Amendment, Senate Joint Resolution 39, as per page 3138 of the June 11, 1909 Congressional Record, included the word "direct." Fearing that the Supreme Court would again strike it down, Senator Nelson Aldrich, Chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, and as you will recall, the host of the Jekyll Island conference, presented Senate Joint Resolution No. 40, entered on page 3900 of the Congressional Record of June 28, 1909, in which the word "direct" is omitted.

40.4 By deliberately omitting the word "direct" and then ending with the phrase, "...without apportionment among the several States", the language of the 16th was cleverly crafted to create the illusion that some new type of presumably direct, yet unapportioned tax was being imposed on "income."

40.5 But here's the problem. Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3, and Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 requiring the apportionment of direct taxes, and Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 requiring that indirect taxes be uniform had never been repealed and, at the time the 16th was drafted, they were still standing law. As the Supreme Court ruled in the famous Marbury v. Madison case in 1803, the Constitution cannot conflict with itself! An unapportioned income tax, as the 16th called for, would by very definition, have to be an indirect tax, because direct taxes still had to be apportioned.

40.6 The Supreme Court was alert to this ruse and chided Congress by deciding in Stanton that the inclusion of the phrase "without apportionment" could only mean that Congress intended to clarify that the income tax is indeed an indirect tax. The 16th Amendment to the United States Constitution did not repeal or alter Congress' power, or obligation, to impose the emergency direct tax should a deficit arise.

40.7 The power of Congress to impose a direct tax still exists, and direct taxes are still required to be apportioned among the states.

> The fact that the 16th Amendment did not change one word or phrase in the Constitution has, for years, been one of the U.S. government's best kept secrets!

Many college professors in our country's most prestigious institutions still teach that the income tax is neither a direct nor an indirect tax, but is a hybrid tax that falls somewhere between the two. Such a gross lack of understanding by those charged with teaching the Law to future lawyers is, in my opinion, unpardonable. It also explains many of the unexplained controversies and inconsistencies in the application of the Internal Revenue Code in the various circuit and district courts in section 3.20.1.

41. 1982: Congress Rewrites 26 U.S.C. to Remove Footnotes from IRC Section 61 Pointing to Section 861

41.1 The Code contains many footnotes and references to allow readers to search back and trace the origins and evolution of laws and regulations, since this often clarifies intent. IRC 61(a) on gross income used to have a footnote informing readers that it came from Section 22(a) of the 1939 Code and that the law hadn't been changed. The footnote said, "Source: Sec. 22(a), 1939 Code, substantially unchanged." That footnote was in the 1954 version of the Internal Revenue Code at least up to the 1982 edition, but then it vanished, making it difficult for tax professionals to understand how the wording has been deceptively altered, leading to misapplication of the law. Constitutional limitations discussed above were thus hidden.

41.2 Deletion of the footnote has also made it much more difficult to notice and understand the close connection between IRC 61 and IRC 861 (or 26 C.F.R. § 1.61 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861), especially as 26 C.F.R. §1.861 is now thousands of pages distant from C.F.R. 1.61, and in the earlier versions, the section was not numbered 861, but 119.

41.3 See section 6.8.10 "Cover-Up of 1982: Footnotes Removed from IRC Section 61 Pointing to Section 861" for details of how Congress obfuscated the tax code.

42. 1986: U.S. v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438 (1986), Federal District Court Refused to Hear Arguments on the Fraudulent Passage of the 16th Amendment, which Allegedly Authorized Income Taxes

This case was a major scandal for the Federal appellate court. The defendant Stahl presented credible evidence that the 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was fraudulently claimed to have been ratified by the Secretary of State, Philander Knox, in 1913. The court refused to deal with the issue and ignored all the evidence presented. Instead, they said it wasn't their business to deal with the issue. Congress said the same thing. This leads to the conclusion that there is a federal judicial (as well as a Congressional) conspiracy to protect the income tax!

> "[Defendant] Stahl's claim that ratification of the 16th Amendment was fraudulently certified constitutes a political question because we could not undertake independent resolution of this issue without expressing lack of respect due coordinate branches of government...."

43. 1988: Congress Obfuscates the 26 U.S.C./IRC Further to Change the title of Part I, Subchapter N to Make it Refer Only to Foreign Income

43.1 Prior to 1988, the title of Part I of Subchapter N (which begins with Section 861) was "Determination of sources of income" (which is still the heading of the related regulations). In 1988, this title was changed to "Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income."

43.2 It should be mentioned that while the titles of parts may give an indication of what the part is about, the title has no effect on the actual legal application.

> "...nor shall any table of contents*, table of cross references, or similar outline, analysis, or* descriptive matter relating to the contents of this title be given any legal effect*."*
> [26 U.S.C. §7806(b)]

43.3 So when the title was changed (but the text of the law was not), the application of the law did not change. What changed was the appearance of the table of contents.

43.4 When the title of Part I was changed, and the new title stated that the part was about "foreign income," it no longer appeared to be an obvious place for most people to look when determining their taxable income. This would certainly have the effect of drawing attention away from Section 861.

43.5 See section 6.8.8 "Cover-Up of 1988: Changed Title of Part I, Subchapter N to Make it Refer Only to Foreign Income" for details of how Congress obfuscated the tax code in this case.

44. 1993: IRS Removes References in IRS Publication 515 to Citizens Not Being Liable for Income Tax and Confused New Language.

44.1 Here's what was . Inside Publication 515, there appears a statement the IRS hopes you never see. Under the main heading "Withholding Exemptions and Reductions" and within the paragraph titled "Evidence of Residence", the IRS states in speaking to the payer of income:

> "If an individual gives you a written statement stating that he or she is a citizen or resident of the United States, and you do not know otherwise, you do not have to withhold tax."

44.2 The 1994 version of Publication 515 varied somewhat. Instead of ending with "...you do not have to withhold tax", it continues:

> "...you do not have to withhold tax under the rules discussed in this publication. Instead, get Publication 15, Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide."

44.3 This change was in response to tax protester groups, who at the time were citing this publication as proof that they weren't liable to pay taxes as citizens of the 50 union states with income from domestic sources!

44.4 See section 6.9.18 "Cover-Up of 1993: IRS Removed References in IRS Publication 515 to Citizens Not Being Liable for Tax and Confused New Language" for details of how IRS obfuscated their publications in this case.

45. 1995: IRS Modifies Regulations to Remove Pointers to Form 2555 for IRC Section 1 Liability for Federal Income Tax Under the Paperwork Reduction Act

45.1 The Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980 requires that every form used by the federal government to collect information from the public first be approved by the Office of Management and Budget ("OMB"). The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §602.101 contain a table listing the OMB-approved forms for each section of regulations. The regulations 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 are entitled "Income tax on individuals," and correspond to 26 U.S.C. §1 (which imposes the "income tax"). Up until 1995, the first line in this table identified Form 2555, "Foreign Earned Income," as the only approved form under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.

45.2 In 1995, after many "tax resistance" groups had become aware of this, the listing for "1.1-1" was removed from the list, in order to avoid "confusion," according to the Department of the Treasury. The process of applying for, and receiving OMB approval for a form makes the possibility of an error extremely remote. The Department of the Treasury requested that Form 2555 be approved for 1.1-1, and the Office of Management and Budget approved it. When the entry drew too much attention, it was removed. At present no forms are approved for use with 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.

45.3 See section 6.9.17 "Cover-Up of 1995: Modified Regulations to Remove Pointers to Form 2555 for IRC Section 1 Liability for Federal Income Tax" for details of how IRS obfuscated the regulations in this case.

46. 1998: IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998

46.1 Because of widespread abuse of due process rights of Americans, the U.S. Congress passed the *IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 (*http://www.irs.gov/irs/display/0,,i1%3D46%26genericId%3D23294,00.html). It was designed to remedy many of the abuses of the IRS, including:

46.1.1 A shifting of the burden of proof from the Citizen to the IRS for certain circumstances. This eliminated the widespread perception by citizens that with regard to tax matters, citizens were "guilty until proven innocent".

46.1.2 Illegal liens, levies, and seizures of the property of citizens.

46.1.3 The labeling of Citizens as "illegal tax protesters".

46.1.4 Creation of the Taxpayer Advocate office to resolve complaints of citizens.

46.1.5 Prohibition of the IRS contacting third parties of the citizen without prior notice.

46.1.6 Refunds of overpayments prior to final determination.

46.1.7 Allowance for accountant-client privilege.

46.1.8 Prohibition of threat of audit to coerce TRAC agreements.

46.1.9 Severe penalties ranging between $100,000 and $1,000,000 for wrongful collection of taxes by revenue agents.

46.1.10 Citizens allowed to quash 3rd party summons by IRS.

46.2 During the hearings prior to the enactment of this legislation, there was unbelievable publicized testimony of many different individuals who had been abused illegally by the IRS. The witnesses were so afraid of the IRS that they had to have their voices and identities concealed to avoid retribution. This was a clear indication that the IRS had way too much power.

46.3 You will note by examining the statistics in section 2.12 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 that IRS abusive behavior toward citizens was significantly curbed following the passage of this act. This act did exactly what it was supposed to do, which points to the fact that if we want real reforms of the tax system and the IRS, then ultimately it is up to us as citizens to vote and to be politically involved enough to make sure that our elected representatives know what we expect from them and from our tax system.

6.6 The Laws of Tyranny

This section contains a description of what is called The Laws of Tyranny. These laws describe the major techniques by which governments are systematically corrupted. As you read through the rest of this chapter, try to deduce for yourself how these laws apply to the specific instance of corruption described in each section. Nearly every section within this chapter can be associated with one of these laws.

The Laws of Tyranny

1. Any power that can be abused will be abused.
   1.1. The main mechanism for abusing law is through obfuscation of the law to turn it into a mechanism for terrorizing the ignorant and uninformed.
   1.2. Any law the electorate sees as being open to being perverted from its original intent will be perverted in a manner that exceeds the manner of perversion seen at the time.

1.3. Any law that is so difficult to pass it requires the citizens be assured it will not be a stepping stone to worse laws, will in fact be a stepping stone to worse laws.
1.4. Any law that requires the citizens be assured the law does not mean what the citizens fear, means exactly what the citizens fear.
1.5. Any law passed in a good cause will be interpreted to apply to causes against the wishes of the people.
1.6. Any law enacted to help any one group will be applied to harm people not in that group.
1.7. Everything the government says will never happen, will happen.
1.8. What the government says it could not foresee, the government has planned for.
1.9. When there is a budget shortfall to cover non-essential government services, the citizens will be given the choice between higher taxes or the loss of essential government services.
1.10. Should the citizens mount a successful effort to stop a piece of legislation, the same legislation will be passed under a different name or as a rider to a more popular measure.

2. All deprivations of freedom and choice will be increased rather than reversed. Abuse and tyranny will always expand to fill the limits of resistance to them.
3. If people don't resist the abuses of others, they will have no one to resist the abuses of themselves, and tyranny will prevail.

Frederick Douglas, an early American Civil Rights advocate, summed up these laws with the following statement:

> Find out just what the people will submit to and you have found out the exact amount of injustice and wrong which will be imposed upon them; and these will continue until they are resisted with either words or blows, or with both. The limits of tyrants are prescribed by the endurance of those whom they oppress. [Frederick Douglass, civil rights activist, Aug. 4, 1857]

6.7 Presidential Scandals Related to Income Taxes and Socialism

> "The illegal we do immediately. The unconstitutional takes a bit longer."
> *[*Henry Kissinger]

> "Politicians are the same all over. They promise to build a bridge where there is no river."
> *[*Nikita Khrushchev]

> "The current income tax code is the chief source of political corruption in the nation's capitol. Tax reform is not for the timid."
> [Rep. Richard K. Armey, R-Texas]

6.7.1 1925: William H. Taft's Certiorari Act of 1925

As we have stated repeatedly throughout this book, there is a judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax (see sections 6.12 and 1.7). The basic problem is that the federal district and circuit courts are acting as a protection racket for the IRS while the U.S. Supreme Court has been looking the other way by denying appeals to correct such abuses. How did we arrive at the point where the Supreme Court even had the discretion to deny such appeals? That is a scandal all by itself, as you will find out.

President Howard Taft is the single person most responsible for the federal income tax that we have today. He was a brilliant man and the only person who had all the qualifications necessary to engineer an overthrow of our de jure government and the replacement of it with the de facto criminal government we have today. For instance, he is the only person who ever did all of the following:

1. Served as the President of the United States
2. Served as the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court
3. Served as a Collector of Internal Revenue in Michigan
4. Was able to get the Sixteenth Amendment into the hands of the states for ratification in 1909.
5. Was still in office when the Sixteenth Amendment was declared ratified and the Federal Reserve Act was passed.

Let's examine item 2 above in more detail. President Taft was the ONLY President who ever served as a Collector of Internal Revenue. Even as President of the United States and later as a Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, he apparently continued in that role. Here is what Wikipedia says on this subject:

Legal career

After admission to the Ohio bar, Taft was appointed Assistant Prosecutor of Hamilton County, Ohio,[327][12] based in Cincinnati. In 1882, he was appointed local Collector of Internal Revenue.[328][13] Taft married his longtime sweetheart, Helen Herron, in Cincinnati in 1886.[329][12] In 1887, he was appointed a judge of the Ohio Superior Court.[330][12] In 1890, President Benjamin Harrison appointed him Solicitor General of the United States[331].[12] As of January 2010, at age 32, he is the youngest-ever Solicitor General.[332][14] Taft then began serving on the newly created United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in 1891.[333][12] Taft was confirmed by the Senate on March 17, 1892, and received his commission that same day.[334][15] In about 1893, Taft decided in favor of one or more patents for processing aluminium belonging to the Pittsburg Reduction Company, today known as Alcoa, who settled with the other party in 1903 and became for a short while the only aluminum producer in the U.S.[335][16] Another of Taft's opinions was Addyston Pipe and Steel Company v. United States (1898). Along with his judgeship, between 1896 and 1900 Taft also served as the first dean and a professor of constitutional law at the University of Cincinnati.[336][17]

Nearly all the financial corruption that exists in our country's money and tax systems was introduced during his tour of office as President and this corruption was later perfected and expanded during his nine year tenure as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court starting in 1921. If you would like to learn more about this man, we recommend The Complete Book of U.S. Presidents, by William A Degregorio, ISBN 0-517-18353-6.

In section 3.11.11.1 we revealed the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment by showing you the Presidential Speech that introduced the Sixteenth Amendment for the first time, given by William H. Taft before Congress in 1909. That speech showed clearly that then President Taft understood that federal income taxes were excise taxes that could not be instituted against other than federal corporations. He introduced the Sixteenth Amendment to Congress in 1909 as a way to circumvent this restriction and broaden the application of federal income taxes to authorize a supposed direct income tax on private persons. Subsequent to the introduction of the Sixteenth Amendment for state ratification in 1909, Secretary of State Philander Knox committed fraud in 1913 by claiming that the Sixteenth Amendment had been properly ratified by ¾ of the states. Knox was Taft's hand-picked Secretary of State.

During his presidency, Taft made six appointments to the Supreme Court -- more than any other one-term President. Many think that when Taft named Edward White Chief Justice rather than the other obvious choice, Charles Evans Hughes, there was a political agenda to pave a way for his own later appointment as Chief Justice. Taft appointed White because White was twelve years older than Hughes. Naming White gave Taft a better shot at being Chief Justice one day himself -- in spite of Thomas Jefferson's famous complaint that "few [Justices] die and none resign.". You can read more about Taft's history from the speech given by Chief Justice Rehnquist on April 13, 2002, and which is posted on the Supreme Court website at:

We know by reading excerpts from Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103 (1916) in section 3.17.11, that the Supreme Court, subsequent to the ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment in 1913, disagreed with President Taft about the effect of the Sixteenth Amendment by saying that it conferred "no new power of taxation" upon Congress. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court said in 1916, three years after the ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment:

> "..by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment conferred no new power of taxation but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged and being placed in the category of direct taxation subject to apportionment by a consideration of the sources from which the income was derived, that is by testing the tax not by what it was -- a tax on income, but by a mistaken theory deduced from the origin or source of the income taxed. "

President Taft, who would later leave office in 1913 to be appointed by President Harding to become Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in 1921, must have known this was going to happen when he introduced the Sixteenth Amendment in 1909. So how did he skirt this declaration by the Supreme Court that nullified the 16th Amendment to allow the fraud of federal income taxes to perpetuate anyway? The answer is quite interesting.

As Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, President Taft sponsored a bill called the Certiorari Act of 1925. In the year that Taft was appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in 1921, the docket of the Supreme Court was reportedly 5 years behind, according to Chief Justice Rehnquist, so when Taft became Chief Justice, he complained to Congress and the President that the Supreme Court was hopelessly backed up in hearing appeals from lower courts and that the court needed the discretion to be able to deny appeals from lower courts. What sort of appeals might those be? How about federal income tax trials to begin with! Here is the way Chief Justice Rehnquist described this situation:

> "When he was appointed Chief Justice in 1921, the Court had fallen nearly five years behind in its docket. He resolved this caseload congestion in the Court by convincing Congress to pass the Judiciary Act of 1925 -- also known as the Certiorari Act -- which gave the Court discretion as to which cases to hear. Some members of Congress were doubtful -- why shouldn't every litigant have a right to get a decision on his case from the Supreme Court? Taft responded that in each case, there had already been one trial and one appeal. "Two courts are enough for justice," he said. To obtain still a third hearing in the Supreme Court, there should be some question involved more important than just who wins this lawsuit."

He must have figured that if the appeals courts below the Supreme Court would uphold the income tax and if the Supreme Court could deny appeals, then in spite of the Supreme Court precedents established earlier which nullified the Sixteenth Amendment, we could have a schizophrenic and split personality federal judicial system that on the one hand, would declare at the Supreme Court level that direct income taxes were unconstitutional, but at courts below the Supreme Court would declare them constitutional. As long as the Supreme Court under the Certiorari Act of 1925 could deny appeals, it wouldn't have to correct the abuses of the lower courts and the split personalities could continue. This sin of omission by the Supreme court which was authorized and even encouraged by Taft's unconstitutional Certiorari Act would then serve to perpetuate the income tax fraud. This would open the doors for the U.S. Congress to perpetuate the myth of income tax liability by lying to their constituents and telling them that they "must pay federal income taxes because the Sixteenth Amendment authorizes it". This, in a nutshell, is exactly the legacy and the heritage that we live with to this day, and we have President Taft in large part, to thank for it. The obscenely dishonest people in Congress who know the truth and yet continue to perpetuate this fraud are simply maintaining the system that Taft setup through his skullduggery.

Former President Taft served only four years as Chief Justice after the passage of the Certiorari Act of 1925, resigning from office in February 1930 because of illness and dying a month later. He must have figured he had accomplished the job he set out to do. E.B. White, his predecessor Chief Justice, served almost 10 years and Justice Fuller before him served 21 years.

To summarize the big picture, Chief Justice Taft must have known that the federal income tax fraud could not continue if the Supreme Court lacked the discretion to deny appeals, or Writs of Certiorari as they are called, from lower courts. If the Bureau of Internal Revenue, or BIR (now called the IRS) kept trying at the time to extort money from people and the Supreme Court consistently was saying that the Sixteenth Amendment didn't authorize them to do this, then people could eventually appeal all the way up to the Supreme Court and stop the unlawful assessment and collection, which would destroy federal revenues and keep the BIR in check. Allow the Supreme Court to deny appeals, however, and the situation would be very different. With his Certiorari Act passed by Congress in 1925 in place, President William Howard Taft had all the pieces in place needed to perpetuate and enlarge the federal income tax fraud:

1. A Supreme Court stacked with six of his own hand-picked justices during his term as President from 1909-1913.
2. The Sixteenth Amendment that Taft himself had introduced in 1909.
3. A fraudulent ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment by Philander Knox in 1913. Philander Knox was his own hand-picked Secretary of State.
4. The Federal Reserve Act of 1913, scandalously passed by just four members of Congress during a Christmas recess immediately after the Sixteenth Amendment was ratified and during Taft's administration.
5. The Certiorari Act of 1925 that authorized the Supreme Court to deny justice to people who had been defrauded of federal income taxes they didn't owe by the then Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR).
6. Control of the Supreme Court for five years following the passage of the Certiorari Act, so he could get in place several circuit court rulings favorable to the income tax that the Supreme Court would deny writs to. Taft served as Chief Justice from 1921 to 1929 until his death in 1930.
7. At the end of Taft's term as Chief Justice, our country plunged into the Great Depression, which most knowledgeable people say was caused by a deliberate and systematic contraction of the money supply by the Federal Reserve in order to engineer the socialist reforms that FDR would later propose in the form of Socialist Security. Our purely capitalist economic system had to be made to look like it was failing by the banksters before most rugged individualist Americans would willingly accept anything as radical as Socialist Security or a government handout.

The fundamental defect in the Certiorari Act was the fact that the Supreme Court could:

1. Deny appeals without explaining why (and evade accountability for its decision). If the people are the sovereigns and the government is their servant, what gives the servant the right to tell the sovereign what to do with its appeal?
2. Deny appeals even though decisions of lower courts clearly conflicted with its precedents. This amounts to condoning government wrongs.
3. Deny appeals of parties whose constitutional rights were claimed to be injured. The ability to deny justice to parties whose constitutional rights had been violated clearly violates the oath that the justices take to "support and defend the Constitution against all enemies, foreign and domestic".

If the above three defects in the unconstitutional Certiorari Act of 1925 were remedied, we wouldn't have the split personality Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde court system we have today and the fraud of the income tax, because they would be impossible to maintain with an accountable Supreme Court that was obligated to:

1. Correct rulings below it that violated or contradicted its precedents.
2. Correct rulings which violated constitutional rights without exception.
3. Explain why it would not hear the case or defend the constitutional rights of the injured party (be accountable).

The necessity of doing all the above has been described by the U.S. Supreme Court as "The Rule of Necessity" as follows:

> Rule of Necessity
> *The Rule of Necessity had its genesis at least five and a half centuries ago. Its earliest recorded invocation was in 1430, when it was held that the Chancellor of Oxford could act as judge of a case in which he was a party when there was no provision for appointment of another judge. Y. B. Hil. 214*214 8 Hen. VI, f. 19, pl. 6.*[337] Early cases in this country confirmed the vitality of the Rule[338].
> The Rule of Necessity has been consistently applied in this country in both state and federal courts. In State ex rel. Mitchell v. Sage Stores Co., 157 Kan. 622, 143 P.2d. 652 (1943) the Supreme Court of Kansas observed:
>
> "[I]t is well established that actual disqualification of a member of a court of last resort will not excuse such member from performing his official duty if failure to do so would result in a denial of a litigant's constitutional right to have a question, properly presented to such court, adjudicated." Id., at 629, 143 P. 2d, at 656.
> Similarly, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania held:

[337] Rolle's Abridgment summarized this holding as follows:

"If an action is sued in the bench against all the Judges there, then by necessity they shall be their own Judges." 2 H. Rolle, An Abridgment of Many Cases and Resolutions at Common Law 93 (1668) (translation).

[338] For example, in Mooers v. White, 6 Johns. Ch. 360 (N. Y. 1822) Chancellor Kent continued to sit despite his brother-in-law's being a party; New York law made no provision for a substitute chancellor. See In re Leefe, 2 Barb. Ch. 39 (N. Y. 1846). See also cases cited in Annot., 39 A. L. R. 1476 (1925).

> "The true rule unquestionably is that wherever it becomes necessary for a judge to sit even where he has an interest —where no provision is made for calling another in, or where no one else can take his place—it is his duty to hear and decide, however disagreeable it may be." Philadelphia v. Fox, 64 Pa. 169, 185 (1870).

Other state[339] and federal[340] courts also have recognized the Rule.

> *215*215 The concept of the absolute duty of judges to hear and decide cases within their jurisdiction revealed in Pollack, supra, and* Philadelphia v. Fox, supra, is reflected in decisions of this Court. Our earlier cases dealing with the Compensation Clause did not directly involve the compensation of Justices or name them as parties, and no express reference to the Rule is found. See, e. g., O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939); O'Donoghue v. United States, 289 U.S. 516 (1933); Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920). In Evans, however, an action brought by an individual judge in his own behalf, the Court by clear implication dealt with the Rule:
> "Because of the individual relation of the members of this court to the question . . . , we cannot but regret that its solution falls to us . . . . But jurisdiction of the present case cannot be declined or renounced. The plaintiff was entitled by law to invoke our decision on the question as respects his own compensation, in which no other judge can have any direct personal interest; and there was no other appellate tribunal to which under the law he could go." Id., at 247-248.[341]
> *216*216 It would appear, therefore, that this Court so took for granted the continuing validity of the Rule of Necessity that no express reference to it or extended discussion of it was needed.*[342]
> [United States v. Will Et Al, 449 U.S. 200 (1980)]

Now do you see how the pieces of the puzzle were cleverly and invisibly weaved together by conspiracies involving all three branches of the federal government over several years to create the totally unjust and extortionary slavery tax system we have now? Now do you understand why Thomas Jefferson said:

> "Single acts of tyranny may be ascribed to the accidental opinion of a day. But a series of oppressions, pursued unalterably through every change of ministers, too plainly proves a deliberate systematic plan of reducing us to slavery".
> [Thomas Jefferson]

Do you also now understand why Franklin Delano Roosevelt said?:

> "In politics, nothing happens by accident. If it happens, it was planned that way."
> [Franklin D. Roosevelt]

6.7.2 1933: FDR's Great American Gold Robbery

6.7.2.1 Money Background

Genuine money must have the following three qualities:

1. It must be a storehouse of intrinsic value.

[340] E. g., Atkins v. United States, 214 Ct.Cl. 186, 556 F.2d. 1028 (1977) cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1009 (1978); Pilla v. American Bar Assn., 542 F.2d. 56 (CA8 1976); Brinkley v. Hassig, 83 F.2d. 351 (CA10 1936); United States v. Corrigan, 401 F.Supp. 795 (Wyo. 1975).

[341] O'Malley cast doubt on the substantive holding of Evans, see n. 31, infra, but the fact that the Court reached the issue indicates that it did not question this aspect of the Evans opinion.

[342] In another, not unrelated context, Chief Justice Marshall's exposition in Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264 (1821) could well have been the explanation of the Rule of Necessity; he wrote that a court "must take jurisdiction if it should. The judiciary cannot, as the legislature may, avoid a measure because it approaches the confines of the constitution. We cannot pass it by, because it is doubtful. With whatever doubts, with whatever difficulties, a case may be attended, we must decide it, if it be brought before us. We have no more right to decline the exercise of jurisdiction which is given, than to usurp that which is not given. The one or the other would be treason to the constitution. Questions may occur which we would gladly avoid; but we cannot avoid them." Id., at 404 (emphasis added).

2. It must be a universal, portable medium of exchange.
3. It must have a common unit of account.
4. It must be immune to attempts by the government to lower its value by printing more and thereby use inflationary forces to "tax" all money in circulation. This ensures what we called earlier in section 2.8.9.2 "separation of money and state".

Black's Law Dictionary, 5th Edition, defines "money" as:

> "In its usual and ordinary explanation it means coins and paper currency used as circulating medium of exchange, and does not embrace notes, bonds, evidences of debt or other personal or real estate."

Gold and silver coins and the previous gold and silver certificates were a storehouse of "intrinsic" value. They actually increased in value with inflation. Therefore, they were a hedge against inflation.

LAWFUL MONEY is defined in Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd Ed., as:

> "Money which is legal tender in payment of debts; e.g. gold and silver coined at the mint."

The responsibility of coining gold and silver money was ceded to Congress in our Constitution; Article I, Section 8, Clause 5:

> "The Congress shall have the power…To coin money and regulate the value thereof…"

Because the Constitution is the Supreme Law of the Land, nothing but gold or silver coin is "lawful" money for the 50 union states. Because of heaviness of gold and silver coins, "Gold and Silver Certificates" were created by the Department of Treasury of the united States. These certificates were representative of actual gold and silver coins which were owned by the People holding the Certificates and maintained in the vaults of the banks and Fort Knox. These Gold and Silver Certificates were convertible to gold and silver coin, "PAYABLE ON DEMAND." It is important to understand that this gold and silver, represented by the Certificates, belonged to the People or Certificate Holders and NOT the banks or the government.

At one time, reference to the laws that made money "lawful" were printed directly on the face of our currency. The laws printed on the bills were enacted on March 14, 1900 and December 24, 1919.

66th Congress Sess. II Chapter 15, (December 24, 1919)-Public Law No. 103

CHAP. 15-An Act to make gold certificates of the United States payable to bearer on demand legal tender.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that gold certificates of the United States payable to bearer on demand shall be and are hereby made legal tender in payment of all debts and dues, public and private.

§2 That all acts or parts of Acts which are inconsistent with this Act are hereby repealed."

Approved, December 24, 1919

The above law has NEVER been and CANNOT be repealed, as it is applicable to the 50 sovereign states, without amending the Constitution. Note that the Act, says "gold certificates payable to the bearer on demand "shall be and are." This means not only when the Act was passed, but also into the future!

§2 of the Act, repealing Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with the above Public Law 103, would, therefore, not only be applicable to past Acts which were inconsistent with its intent but also future inconsistent Acts. It also says to be legal tender; the certificates MUST be payable to bearer on demand. Our current 'Federal Reserve Notes' do not meet either of these lawful requirements for legal tender for the Citizens of the several states.

Perhaps Federal Reserve Notes are "legal tender" for the Territorial (federal zone) United States, under the EXCLUSIVE jurisdiction and not under Constitutional restrictions and protections. However, both the Constitution and the Law lead only to one inescapable conclusion, which is that:

Federal Reserve Notes certainly are NOT Constitutional tender or lawful money for the Citizens of the 50 sovereign states in these united states of America!

Because the Constitution prohibited the states from coining gold and silver (which would logically extend to the gold and silver certificates which were representative of the ownership of these coins) and because We the People specifically delegated monetary powers to Congress, it was not within the Congressional authority to transfer the issuing of gold and silver certificates and ultimately federal reserve notes to the private Federal Reserve.

Remember:

"Congress may not abdicate ['to give up.. renounce or relinquish…authorities, duties…powers, or responsibility] to transfer to others its legitimate [delegated] functions"
[Schechter Poultry v. U.S., 29 U.S., 495 U.S. 837, 842 (1935)]

Gold Reserve Act of March 14, 1900. "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that the dollar consisting of twenty-five and eight tenths grains of gold, nine-tenths fine as established by section thirty-five hundred and eleven [§3511] of the Revised Statutes of the United States, shall be the standard unit of value, and all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, shall be the standard unit of value, and all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, shall be the standard unit of value, and all forms of money issued or coined by the United States shall be maintained at the parity of value with this standard, and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to maintain such parity.

Sec. 2. That United States notes, and Treasury notes issued under the Act of July 14, 1890, when presented to the Treasury for redemption, shall be redeemed in gold coin of the standard fixed in the first section of this Act…"

So where is our gold?…you ask. Where's our gold certificates?

Gold certificates were originally the idea of goldsmiths who would hold the gold of Citizens and issue much less bulky certificates as evidence of gold on deposit. The Certificate Holders could redeem their Certificates for their gold at any time. Greedy goldsmiths soon began to realize that the majority of the gold in their vaults just sat there because the Certificate Holders were using their certificates as a medium of exchange instead of the gold. Realizing this, the goldsmiths made up extra gold certificates and starting making loans, at interest, using OTHER Citizen's gold as backing. These loans were then repaid to the goldsmith in GOLD COIN! As long as all the gold owners didn't show up at once, the goldsmiths got away with their scheme. When the lawful owners of the gold got wise and demanded their gold back, the goldsmiths who couldn't produce it were hung from the nearest tree!

6.7.2.2 Outlawing of Gold Coin

Starting in 1933, FDR outlawed gold coin with the following sequence of executive orders:

1. Executive Order 6073: Regulations Concerning the Operation of Banks, March 10, 1933. Required banks trading in gold to be licensed by the Secretary of the Treasury.
   https://en.wikisource.org/wiki/Executive_Order_6073
2. Executive Order 6102: Forbidding the Hoarding of Gold Coin, Gold Bullion and Gold Certificates, April 5, 1933. Forbade withdrawals of gold from banks and made it a crime for STATUTORY U.S. citizens to hold gold.
   https://en.wikisource.org/wiki/Executive_Order_6102
3. Executive Order 6111: On Transactions in Foreign Exchange, April 20, 1933. Trading in gold for foreign exchange was prohibited.
   https://en.wikisource.org/wiki/Executive_Order_6111
4. Executive Order 6260: Relating to the Hoarding, Export, and Earmarking of Gold Coin, Bullion, or Currency and to Transactions in Foreign Exchange, August 28, 1933. Required an account of the old held that must be sent to the Collector of Internal Revenue.
   https://en.wikisource.org/wiki/Executive_Order_6260

In 1933, U.S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt issued Executive Order 6102, which outlawed the private ownership of gold coins, gold bullion, and gold certificates by American citizens, forcing them to sell these to the Federal Reserve. As a result, the value of the gold held by the Federal Reserve increased from $4 billion to $12 billion between 1933 and 1937.[343] This left the federal government with a large gold reserve and no place to store it. In 1936, the U.S. Treasury Department began construction of the United States Bullion Depository at Fort Knox, Kentucky, on land transferred from the military. The Gold Vault was completed in December 1936 for US $560,000. The site is located on what is now Bullion Boulevard at the intersection of Gold Vault Road. The building was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1988, in recognition of its significance in the economic history of the United States and its status as a well-known landmark.[344] It is constructed of granite mined at the North Carolina Granite Corporation Quarry Complex.[345]

The first gold shipments were made from January to July 1937. The majority of the United States' gold reserves were gradually shipped to the site, including old bullion and newly made bars made from melted gold coins. Some intact coins were stored. The transfer used 500 rail cars and was sent by registered mail, protected by the U.S. Postal Inspection Service, and the U.S. Treasury Department agents. In 1974, a Washington attorney named Peter David Beter circulated a theory that the gold in the Depository had been secretly removed by elites, and that the vaults were empty. A group of reporters was allowed inside in order to refute the theory, which had gained traction thanks to coverage in tabloid newspapers and on the radio. Other than this 1974 event, no member of the public has been allowed inside.[346]

During World War II, the depository held the original U.S. Declaration of Independence and U.S. Constitution. It held the reserves of European countries and key documents from Western history. For example, it held the Crown of St. Stephen, part of the Hungarian crown jewels, given to American soldiers to prevent them from falling into Soviet hands. The repository held one of four copies (exemplifications) of the Magna Carta, which had been sent for display at the 1939 New York World's Fair, and when war broke out, was kept in the US for the duration.

During World War II and into the Cold War, until the invention of different types of synthetic painkillers, a supply of processed morphine and opium was kept in the Depository as a hedge against the US being isolated from the sources of raw opium.[347]

6.7.2.3 The Trading With the Enemy Act: Day the President Declared War on His Own People and Confiscated all the Gold!

Many of the legal cites used in this section are taken from the tremendous research efforts of Dr. Eugene Schroder, who has authored a book called, Constitution: Fact or Fiction, published by Buffalo Creek Press, PO Box 2424 Cleburne, Texas 76033. Supporting documents and a video are also available from Dr. Schroder, c/o PO Box 89, Campo Colorado (81029). Dr. Schroder's research exposes Government corruption of insidious magnitude.

Senate Report 93-549 (1973) states:

"Since March 9, 1933, the United States has been in a state of national emergency. A majority of the people of the United States have lived their lives under emergency rule. For 40 years freedoms and government procedures, guaranteed by the constitution have, in varying degrees, been abridged by laws brought forth by states of national emergency…"

"These hundreds of statutes delegate to the President extraordinary powers, ordinarily exercised by Congress, which affect the lives of American Citizens in a host of all-encompassing manners. This vast range of powers, taken together, confer enough authority to rule this country without reference to normal constitutional process."

"Under the powers delegated by these statutes the President may: seize property, organize and control the means of production; seize commodities [i.e. the People's gold, silver, and currency] assign military forces abroad; institute martial law; seize and control all transportation and communication; regulate the operation of private enterprise, restrict travel; and, in a plethora of ways, control the lives of all American citizens."

Franklin D. Roosevelt was a shrewd banker, himself. In the 1920's, he made a considerable amount of money by floating millions of dollars in worthless German bonds. The artificially engineered Great Depression and a desperate country, paved the way for acceptance of the new unconstitutional socialistically oriented governmental policies of FDR. Families, desperate to survive, lost touch with the Constitution.

This section will provide powerful and irrefutable evidence that on March 9, 1933, the United States declared war on its own citizen subjects through Franklin D. Roosevelt, by amending the war powers, "Trading With The Enemy Act" of December 6, 1917, to include, as an enemy of the United States:

> "any person within the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof"!!! [This was the Territorial United States or the federal zone, but the People were not told this.]

The above trick is exactly the same trick our government is STILL playing on us with the whole of Subtitle A income taxes…fooling us into believing that the jurisdiction of the Subtitle A income tax extends into the borders of the sovereign 50 union states when it actually does NOT, according to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)9-(a)10!

The purpose of this unconscionable and treasonous Act was to justify the theft and seizure of the People's gold by the Government and to cancel the contractual obligation of the bankers to redeem the People's Gold Certificates! This Act, if applicable to the Citizens of these united States, would have been a direct violation of Public Law 103 of Dec. 24, 1919, previously quoted, which stated, that only

> "gold certificates of the United States payable to bearer on demand shall be and are legal tender in payment of all debts and dues, public and private."

The amended Act also blatantly violated the Constitutional prohibition against making anything other than gold and silver legal tender for the payment of debts in the several states!

The Trading With The Enemy Act, called upon the extraordinary dictatorial war powers. These powers were only to be used in life-threatening circumstances and ONLY against the declared enemy of the United States. Obviously, the intent of the law was NEVER to seize the assets of American Citizens in the time of peace or war! These powers have been grossly abused to turn America from a free constitutional Republic into an enslaved statutory presidential dictatorship! We warned you this kind of scam would be used to rob you of your liberty in section 2.8.12 entitled "Surrendering Freedoms in the Name of 'Government Induced Crises'.

In other countries, emergency powers can suspend the Constitution. Adolf Hitler used the Emergency Powers to suspend the German Constitution and institute an unfathomable dictatorial reign of terror! The German Emergency Power Law was merely titled Article 48 and stated:

> "If the public safety and order in the German Reich are seriously disturbed or endangered, the President of the Reich may…suspend in whole or in part the fundamental rights established [including] inviolability of person, inviolability of domicile, freedom of opinion and expression, freedom of assembly and association, secrecy in communication and inviolability of property."

Even with the broad war powers, in America, where the Constitution is the supreme law of the land and ANY law contrary to it NULL and VOID, it is not within the power of the President, the Congress or the Judiciary to create a law or an emergency which suspends the Constitution and unalienable rights of the Sovereign People! Not even war can alienate the rights of the People in relationship to the government!

> THE AMERICAN CONSTITUTION IS NON-SUSPENDIBLE!
> "No emergency justifies the violation of any of the provisions of the United States Constitution.[348] An emergency, however, while it cannot create power, increase granted power, or remove or diminish the restrictions

[348] As to the effect of emergencies on the operation of state constitutions, see § 59.

> imposed upon the power granted or reserved, may allow the exercise of power already in existence, but not exercised except during an emergency. [349]
> The circumstances in which the executive branch may exercise extraordinary powers under the Constitution are very narrow.[350] The danger must be immediate and impending, or the necessity urgent for the public service, such as will not admit of delay, and where the action of the civil authority would be too late in providing the means which the occasion calls for. [351] For example, there is no basis in the Constitution for the seizure of steel mills during a wartime labor dispute, despite the President's claim that the war effort would be crippled if the mills were shut down. [352]"
> [16 American Jurisprudence 2d, Constitutional Law, §52 (1999)]

Contrary to what the People were fraudulently mislead into believing, the Trading With the Enemy Act could not be, and therefore was not, applicable to the Citizens of the several states. In fact, in a section of the Trading With the Enemy Act, that was never amended, or repealed, the Citizens of these United States were specifically and logically exempted from being defined as the enemy. Therefore, the regulations and punishments of the Trading With the Enemy Act were not and could not later become applicable to the Citizens of the United States.

> SIXTY FIFTH CONGRESS Sess. 1 Chapter 106, Page 411, October 6, 1917
> CHAP. 106—An Act To Define, regulate, and punish trading with the enemy, and for other purposes.
> Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act shall be known as the "Trading With the Enemy Act."
> ...SEC. 2. That the word "enemy" as used herein shall be deemed to mean, for the purposes of trading and of this Act—
> "...(c) Such other individuals or body or class of individuals, as may be natives, citizens, or subjects of any nation with which the United States is at war, other than citizens of the United States…"

Again, it was the "persons" born in Territories over which the United States is exclusively sovereign and NOT the Citizens of the Sovereign states, who were the purported "Enemy" targets of the Trading With The Enemy Act. Even though the Citizens were specifically excluded from the Emergency War Powers Act, in the most heinous act of Government and Banker Fraud ever perpetrated, American Citizens were coerced by fear and defrauded into turning over all of their gold to the banks. They were threatened [coerced by fear] through the national media, with a $10,000 fine and 10 years in prison, if they refused to comply.

It is important to remember that the gold in the banks was the property of the Citizens, holding the gold certificates. The gold did NOT belong to the Government or the Banks. The Federal Reserve is a PRIVATE CORPORATION and gold certificates represented a legitimate contractual obligation to convert the certificates to an equivalent amount of gold, payable on demand of the bearer, whenever that demand might be! The Federal Reserve was required by law to maintain a 40% gold reserve and enough other liquid assets to meet the demands of all citizens who wanted to convert their certificates into gold.

Under normal circumstances, only a small percentage of Citizens would exchange their certificates for their gold. However, because of the depression, and well-founded rumors circulating that the private Federal Reserve was taking large amounts of gold belonging to the Citizens out of the country, people lined up at the bank to redeem their gold certificates for gold. This was the lawful prerogative of the People. The Citizens were merely demanding what was lawfully theirs. They had lawfully earned the gold certificates and gold which they represented and it was not within the power of the Government or the Bankers to take the sovereign American's property and substance, emergency or no emergency!

When FDR took office, he declared a national emergency. In Proclamation 2039, using the very words the Federal Reserve had written for him, He stated:

> "Whereas there have been heavy and unwarranted withdrawals of gold and currency from our banking institutions for the purposes of hoarding…"

"Hoarding???" Doesn't that mean "saving?" It was the People's gold and not the bankers and, of course, it was their absolute prerogative to spend it or save it. Most were spending it on SURVIVAL during a time of depression, which incidentally some informed economists blame as the cause a money supply that was deliberately contracted by the Federal Reserve! The President was certainly not delegated the power to ORDER the People not to "save" their own gold! When the smoke screen was removed, the real emergency was that the private federal reserve had breached its contract with American Citizens. They were repudiating their contractual obligation to redeem the People's gold Certificates and were removing the People's gold from the country. The Bankers were like the goldsmiths who had their corrupt scheme exposed. The emergency was that the People were ready to hang the bankers from the nearest tree! Demanding the return of the People's gold to the bankrupt private bankers was like having Americans return their cars if General Motors went bankrupt!

6.7.2.4 FDR Defends the Federal Damn Reserve

As representatives of the Citizens, the President's first duty was to the People who were the victims of banking fraud. Emergency legislation should have been passed, demanding an immediate and complete audit of the federal reserve (which has NEVER been audited). The 40% gold reserve should have been turned over to the People holding the gold Certificates and all of the bankers remaining assets should have been liquidated and converted to gold. This gold should have been returned to the holders of the gold certificates. If the audit found evidence of self-dealing and embezzlement of the People's gold, those involved should have been criminally prosecuted and their assets should have been seized. If an emergency currency needed to be issued, it should have been debt free currency, issued by the Treasury of these United States and People should have been compensated for their loss of gold. This is how a good President would have protected the People. Instead, FDR was in the pocket of the Bankers!

Let's go back to March 6-9, 1933 and find out what FDR did do. Instead of formulating a plan demanding that the Federal Reserve honor their contractual obligations to the People he instead consulted the Federal Reserve as to how they believed the crisis should be solved! Remember the REAL emergency was that the bankers did not want to honor their contractual obligation to convert the People's gold certificates to gold. The cats were consulted about what their punishment should be for eating mice. Of course, the cats ruled that they should be fed more mice! What did the private federal reserve conclude that their punishment should be for embezzling the People's gold and dishonoring their fiduciary responsibilities and legitimate contractual obligations? The cats at the FED decided that they should be fed more mice and the President was instructed to pass a law demanding that the People return ALL of their gold to the bankers or be subjected to a stiff fine and jail time. Roosevelt's Proclamations were taken word for word from the Resolution adopted by Federal Reserve.

> Resolution Adopted by the Federal Reserve Board of New York.
> "Whereas, in the opinion of the Board of Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the continued and increasing withdrawal of currency and gold from the banks of the country has now created a national emergency…"

Remember, the controllers of the Federal Reserve were extremely well educated in law. History has shown them to be the brains behind all major Wars throughout the world. They create a conflict and then fund all sides. War is big business for banks. The fed understood how Congress can legislate for its Territorial subject "persons" through Art. I, Sec, 8, Clause 17, without regards to the Constitution (see also Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)). These same scoundrels probably created the loophole! They also knew the difference between CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens and they were well aware of the War Powers. SOME DARE CALL IT TREASON!

Constitution for the United States, Article III, Section 3, Clause 1

"Treason against the United States shall consist only of levying war against them, or adhering to their enemies…"

The supreme Court decision of Stoehr v. Wallace, 255 U.S. 239 (1921) declared:

"The Trading With the Enemy Act, originally and as amended is strictly a war measure, and finds its sanction in the provision empowering Congress 'to declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal and make rules concerning captures on land and water." Const. Art. I, Sec. 8, Cl. 11

How did FDR and the Federal Reserve get away with this treasonous robbery of the American People's substance? Probably for the same reason Congress is currently passing a multitude of un-American bills and Acts. Congress just does not read them! In the words of Congressman McFadden:

> Congressman McFadden: "Mr. Speaker, I regret that the membership of the House has had no opportunity to consider or even read this bill. The first opportunity I had to know what this legislation is, was when it was read form the clerk's desk. It is an important banking bill. It is a dictatorship over finance in the United States, it is complete control over the banking system in the United States…It is difficult under the circumstances to discuss this bill. The first section of the bill, as I grasped it is the War Powers that were given back in 1917."

In spite of warnings of McFadden, the amended Trading With the Enemy Act was immediately passed by a trusting, uneducated and ignorant Congress.

What were the banking institutions as defined by the President?

> TITLE II
> Sec. 202. As used in this title, the term "bank" means (1) any national bank*. [Because this is federal legislation this would mean a U.S. national ie. U.S. Territorial bank, not a sovereign state bank.] (2) any bank or trust company* located in the District of Columbia and operating under the supervision of the Comptroller of the Currency…"

What is the collateral for federal reserve notes? To add insult to injury, it became the People's own property!

6.7.3 1935: FDR's Socialist (Social) Security Act of 1935[353]

6.7.3.1 FDR's Pep-Talk to Congress, January 17, 1935

Below is a speech given January 17, 1935 by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt to Congress on the issue of advocating a proposed new program he called "Social Security". This speech resulted in the eventual passage of the Social Security Act of 1935 on August 14, 1935:

> In addressing you on June 8, 1934, I summarized the main objectives of our American program. Among these was, and is, the security of the men, women, and children of the Nation against certain hazards and vicissitudes of life. This purpose is an essential part of our task. In my annual message to you I promised to submit a definite program of action. This I do in the form of a report to me by a Committee on Economic Security, appointed by me for the purpose of surveying the field and of recommending the basis of legislation.
> I am gratified with the work of this Committee and of those who have helped it: The Technical Board on Economic Security drawn from various departments of the Government, the Advisory Council on Economic Security, consisting of informed and public - spirited private citizens and a number of other advisory groups, including a committee on actuarial consultants, a medical advisory board, a dental advisory committee, a hospital advisory committee, a public - health advisory committee, a child - welfare committee and an advisory committee on employment relief. All of those who participated in this notable task of planning this major legislative proposal are ready and willing, at any time, to consult with and assist in any way the appropriate Congressional committees and members, with respect to detailed aspects.
> It is my best judgment that this legislation should be brought forward with a minimum of delay. Federal action is necessary to, and conditioned upon, the action of States. Forty - four legislatures are meeting or will meet soon. In order that the necessary State action may be taken promptly it is important that the Federal Government proceed speedily.
> The detailed report of the Committee sets forth a series of proposals that will appeal to the sound sense of the American people. It has not attempted the impossible, nor has it failed to exercise sound caution and consideration of all of the factors concerned: the national credit, the rights and responsibilities of States, the capacity of industry to assume financial responsibilities and the fundamental necessity of proceeding in a manner that will merit the enthusiastic support of citizens of all sorts.

[353] Portions from article entitled "The Leviathan's Crown Jewel: The Beginning of Social Security" by Gregory Bresiger. Found at http://www.lewrockwell.com/bresiger/bresiger6.html.

It is overwhelmingly important to avoid any danger of permanently discrediting the sound and necessary policy of Federal legislation for economic security by attempting to apply it on too ambitious a scale before actual experience has provided guidance for the permanently safe direction of such efforts. The place of such a fundamental in our future civilization is too precious to be jeopardized now by extravagant action. It is a sound idea - a sound ideal. Most of the other advanced countries of the world have already adopted it and their experience affords the knowledge that social insurance can be made a sound and workable project.

Three principles should be observed in legislation on this subject. First, the system adopted, except for the money necessary to initiate it, should be self-sustaining in the sense that funds for the payment of insurance benefits should not come from the proceeds of general taxation. Second, excepting in old-age insurance, actual management should be left to the States subject to standards established by the Federal Government. Third, sound financial management of the funds and the reserves, and protection of the credit structure of the Nation should be assured by retaining Federal control over all funds through trustees in the Treasury of the United States.

At this time, I recommend the following types of legislation looking to economic security:

1. Unemployment compensation.

2. Old-age benefits, including compulsory and voluntary annuities.

3. Federal aid to dependent children through grants to States for the support of existing mothers' pension systems and for services for the protection and care of homeless, neglected, dependent, and crippled children.

4. Additional Federal aid to State and local public-health agencies and the strengthening of the Federal Public Health Service. I am not at this time recommending the adoption of so-called "health insurance," although groups representing the medical profession are cooperating with the Federal Government in the further study of the subject and definite progress is being made.

With respect to unemployment compensation, I have concluded that the most practical proposal is the levy of a uniform Federal payroll tax, 90 percent of which should be allowed as an offset to employers contributing under a compulsory State unemployment compensation act. The purpose of this is to afford a requirement of a reasonably uniform character for all States cooperating with the Federal Government and to promote and encourage the passage of unemployment compensation laws in the States. The 10 percent not thus offset should be used to cover the costs of Federal and State administration of this broad system. Thus, States will largely administer unemployment compensation, assisted and guided by the Federal Government. An unemployment compensation system should be constructed in such a way as to afford every practicable aid and incentive toward the larger purpose of employment stabilization. This can be helped by the intelligent planning of both public and private employment. It also can be helped by correlating the system with public employment so that a person who has exhausted his benefits may be eligible for some form of public work as is recommended in this report. Moreover, in order to encourage the stabilization of private employment, Federal legislation should not foreclose the States from establishing means for inducing industries to afford an even greater stabilization of employment.

In the important field of security for our old people, it seems necessary to adopt three principles: First, noncontributory old-age pensions for those who are now too old to build up their own insurance. It is, of course, clear that for perhaps 30 years to come funds will have to be provided by the States and the Federal Government to meet these pensions. Second, compulsory contributory annuities which in time will establish a self-supporting system for those now young and for future generations. Third, voluntary contributory annuities by which individual initiative can increase the annual amounts received in old age. It is proposed that the Federal Government assume one-half of the cost of the old-age pension plan, which ought ultimately to be supplanted by self-supporting annuity plans.

The amount necessary at this time for the initiation of unemployment compensation, old-age security, children's aid, and the promotion of public health, as outlined in the report of the Committee on Economic Security, is approximately $100,000,000.

The establishment of sound means toward a greater future economic security of the American people is dictated by a prudent consideration of the hazards involved in our national life. No one can guarantee this country against the dangers of future depressions but we can reduce these dangers. We can eliminate many of the factors that cause economic depressions, and we can provide the means of mitigating their results. This plan for economic security is at once a measure of prevention and a method of alleviation.

We pay now for the dreadful consequence of economic insecurity - and dearly. This plan presents a more equitable and infinitely less expensive means of meeting these costs. We cannot afford to neglect the plain duty before us. I strongly recommend action to attain the objectives sought in this report.

A revolution was made when Social Security was enacted in 1935 and it radically changed our country. After remarkably little public and Congressional debate, Franklin Delano Roosevelt signed the Social Security Act into law on August 14, 1935. FDR knew that the welfare state wouldn't end with Social Security. Many of his disappointed allies had wanted much more. But FDR assured them this was just the beginning.[354]

FDR said, on signing the bill into law, that Social Security "represents a cornerstone in a structure which is being built but is by no means complete."[355] The federal government through programs such as Social Security would create its own business cycle, it would "flatten out the peaks and valleys of deflation and inflation,"[356] Roosevelt promised. Social Security was representative of national planning schemes – some of which had been tried during World War I – and which became popular again with intellectuals. Many of them believed that the government could wage war on poverty; that, by using the techniques of wartime planning so popular with progressives during World War I, the government could generate and control the business cycle.[357]

Social Security was a Keynesian device to ensure that buying power would remain strong in times of high unemployment. By Keynesian, I mean a kind of thinking that pre-dated Keynes by centuries, which held that injecting inflation into a weak economy would work miracles. Keynes, in the 1920s, 30s and 40s, was merely one member of this inflationist school. But his thought was influential in America in the 1930s. One of the founding fathers of Social Security has said that the contribution of Keynes was not appreciated.[358] Keynes' philosophy helped justify a massive welfare state.

The original Social Security package, for instance, was a lot more than so-called old age insurance. The program initially contained 10 programs and included 11 titles. Besides, pensions, the federal government was initiating vocational rehabilitation, unemployment insurance, aid to dependent children and public health programs, among others. Myriad additional programs would follow over the years because of the initial triumph of Social Security. It would help bring about a signal change in American culture and government: The federal government would take on many new powers and radically change our economy.[359]

But, most important of all, Social Security changed our culture in ways the authors of the original Social Security Act may or may not have realized: It would, among other things, also discourage savings, expand the state's reach into the family, redistribute income in ways no one imagined (quite often from the working poor and the lower middle-class to the upper middle-class because the latter group tended to have more political clout as exercised through organizations such as the AARP) and create a huge unprecedented peacetime bureaucracy, a bureaucracy that frequently pushed for more expansion under the guise of serving the people.[360]

The program also had a much more profound effect on American life: It invented the concept of a passive retirement in which individuals would stop working, stop making more than a few dollars a year, or what a Social Security advocate called "pin

---

[354] Although the Social Security system initially covered a relatively small part of the working force, FDR assured his allies it was just the beginning: "I see no reason why everybody in the United States should not be covered," FDR privately told Francis Perkins. "Cradle to the grave – from the cradle to the grave they ought to be in a social insurance system." See Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.'s The Coming of the New Deal, p. 308, (Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston, 1959).

[356] The Public Papers and Addresses of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Samuel Rosenman, editor, IV, page 324-325.

[357] Some socialists said FDR was going in the direction of planning and economic nationalism. Said Stuart Chase: "National Planning and economic nationalism must go together or not all. President Roosevelt has accepted the general philosophy of planning." He added that the nation could confidently move toward autarchy. Also see George Soule's comments in Walter Lippmann's The Good Society, p 91, (Grosset & Dunlap, New York, 1936). "It is nonsense to say that there is any physical impossibility of doing for peace purposes the sort of thing we did for war purposes."

[358] Madam Secretary: Frances Perkins, by George Martin, p346, (Houghton Mifflin, Boston, 1976).

[359] Looking part at the achievements of FDR, Doris Kearns Goodwin writes: "No longer would government be viewed as merely a bystander and an occasional referee, intervening only in times of crisis. Instead, the government would assume responsibility for continued growth and fairness in the distribution of wealth." No Ordinary Time; Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt: The Home Front in World War II, p 625, (Simon & Shuster, New York, 1994).

[360] The best example is one of the founding fathers of Social Security, Wilbur Cohen. With the Republicans back in power in 1953, the supposedly non-partisan Cohen quietly "wrote speeches and supplied information" for the Democrats. Says a friendly biographer: "It was not the first time that the non-partisan Social Security administration shaded into partisan politics." See Mr. Social Security: The Life of Wilbur Cohen, by Edward Berkowitz, p41, (University Press of Kansas, Laurence, 1995).

money[361]. To make more than pin money would mean Social Security penalties, an idea added to the original bill by the labor unions.

Social Security advocates implicitly convinced tens of millions of Americans that their golden years meant "taking it easy," withdrawing from the most challenging parts of their lives. That would free up millions of jobs, an important consideration in the midst of the Great Depression, an economic calamity in which FDR's policies failed even after six years of huge spending.[362] By 1940, an FDR historian would implicitly concede that the New Deal had failed to restore a strong economy. "The America over which Roosevelt presided in 1940 was in its eleventh year of depression. No decline in American history had been so deep, so lasting, so far reaching."[363] Clearly, America's recovery from the Great Depression did not begin until the buildup for World War II and the war itself. That's when FDR discovered his affinity for a military Keynesianism.[364]

Many changes triggered by Social Security. The changes triggered debates over basic social and economic issues such as personal responsibility vs. the general welfare, and who defines the nature of retirement, the individual or the government, as well as who should control the retirement assets of millions of people.

> "Why, then was America so far behind? The first reason was out of the cherished ideal of rugged individualism."[365]

6.7.3.2 FDR and the Birth of Social Security: Destroying Rugged Individuality

Social Security has become the crown jewel of a welfare state, which is why its defenders are today so ardent in fighting any move to privatize any part of it. The welfare state will always be safe as long as Social Security survives. Social Security has continued to expand in good times and bad, under Democrats and Republicans, even though a few of the latter actually claimed that they would bring Social Security under control. Those who thought they would tame this huge program lost time and again. These politicians who once criticized Social Security, usually ended up praising it[366] or kept their criticisms to themselves.[367] And this was FDR's goal in designing the program: Insuring that no succeeding group of politicians could ever undo his work.[368]

Today those who would privatize or even reform Social Security[369] face a formidable task, a task as difficult as dismantling the military-industrial complex or selling off Amtrak. That's because decrepit government bureaucracies – as opposed to [361] Barbara Armstrong, executive director of the Committee on Economic Security (CES), which wrote the Social Security plan said that retirement would mean "that you've stopped working for pay." See The History of Retirement: The Meaning and Functioning of an American Institution, 1885-1978, by William Graebner, p185, (Yale University Press, New Haven, Conn., 1980)

[362] By 1938, in the midst of a brutal recession, it was clear to many of FDR's advisers that the New Deal was failing. One of his political advisers, vice president John Nance Garner said that "I don't think the Boss has any definite programs to meet the business. I don't think much of the spending program. You can't keep spending forever. Some day you have to meet the bills." See Jim Farley's Story. The Roosevelt Years. P138, (McGraw Hill, New York, 1948). Roosevelt also complained when Secretary of Commerce Dan Roper told him that the economy was slipping into recession. "Dan, you've got to stop issuing these Hooverish statements all the time." Ibid, p101.

[363] The historian is Doris Kearns Goodwin. And clearly the implication of her writing was that FDR had failed just as Hoover had to reverse the depression. See No Ordinary Time, p. 42, (Simon & Shuster, New York, 1994)

[364] Roosevelt was "deliberately planning to use a great armament program as a means of spending money to create employment," the journalist John T. Flynn wrote in 1939. See Prophets on the Right, by Ronald Radosh, p207, (Simon & Shuster, New York, 1975). Also, Thomas Greer, in his What Roosevelt Thought; The Social and Political Ideas of Franklin Roosevelt quotes him in 1937 as saying Americans don't want to solve unemployment problems by huge armament program, yet Greer concedes that FDR resorted to a such an arms buildup. [366] For instance Ronald Reagan, who had been a great critic of Social Security, would say, toward the end of his presidential years, that "Social Security has proven to be one of the most successful and popular [federal] programs." See Social Security After 50: Sucesses and Failures. Edward Berkowitz, editor, (Greenwood Press, New York, 1987).

[367] Any presidential candidate who proposed to tamper with Social Security was "a candidate for a frontal lobotomy," said Jack Kemp during the 1988 campaign. From Social Insecurity, by Dorcas Hardy, p16, (Villard Books, New York, 1991).

[368] "With those taxes in there, no damn politician can ever scrap my social security program," FDR said. See Schlesinger, p 309.

[369] The problem of privatizers is what are they to do with the huge unfunded liabilities of this system. It would cost billions, maybe trillions of dollars just for the transition costs to a private system. Meantime, according to economist Milton Friedman and observers such as Marshall Carter and William Shipman, the unfunded liabilities of the system are about $7 trillion. For more see my "Insecure Promise" in the November 1999 issue of Financial Planning magazine. Also, a former Social Security official likes to brag that the program is so entrenched that it would be also impossible to destroy.

rotten private bureaucracies – have the power to tax and to preserve their existence. And the first rule of any bureaucracy is survival at any cost. The second rule is always try to expand.

The welfare state took much longer to take hold in the United States than in Europe, where socialism had a better name and a longer tradition.

By the early 1930s, Germany had a Social Security program for nearly a half century. Britain had a government pension scheme since before the World War I, when the Liberal/Labour government of Herbert Henry Asquith in 1911[370] laid the foundations of a welfare state that would be later carried out by the Labor and Conservative parties over the next two generations. Germany under Bismarck had passed a Social Security plan as part of an alliance with Social Democrats. Bismarck was ready for socialism[371]. Dozens of European countries had put Social Security schemes by the outbreak of World War I.

But in America, there was a tradition of "rugged individualism" that resisted most forms of collectivism. Even labor leaders like Samuel Gompers,[372] who had called for many other government initiatives, opposed a mandatory social insurance program, a concept that stressed an insurance that was not for profit, but was run for the benefit of society. But Gompers was wary of that idea. To him, it smacked of German socialism. "Compulsory social insurance," he complained, "is in essence undemocratic."[373] Foreshadowing the objections of those who would later complain that the government would mismanage the assets of a program, Gompers wanted workers to depend on themselves, private institutions, their unions – anything but the government.

The opposition to social insurance was owing to an American individualist tradition whose adherents held that individuals, families and community groups should take care of people in old age, not the government. And, most importantly, it was a voluntaryist tradition that resisted compulsory government programs.[374]

FDR, who was credited as the first major American politician to support a social security system, nevertheless had campaigned in 1932 in favor of limited government. He bitterly criticized Herbert Hoover's huge deficits. On the campaign trial he promised to roll back, not expand, the size of the federal government. "For three long years I have been going up and down this country preaching that government – federal government, state and local – costs too much. I shall not stop that preaching."[375]

FDR gave not the slightest indication that was he committed to a massive expansion of the power of the federal government. Later, as we will see, FDR would say that circumstances had changed. His supporters would argue that the Great Depression, and the more radical social insurance proposals of men like Huey Long, Upton Sinclair and Frances Townsend,[376] had led him to back this "moderate" program called Social Security.

Yet even before he took office, FDR was quietly committed to a social insurance program[377] as part of a program of counter-cyclical measures he believed would cure the problems of the business cycle. These initiatives were failures if one is to measure by unemployment numbers and traditional economic indices[378]. They did not restore prosperity, FDR was told by advisers six years into the New Deal.[379]

Social Security was a key part of his revolutionary corporativist economic policies. It was a revolution that shifted the responsibility for income maintenance from the private to the public sector, from the family to the state and from voluntary organizations to public bureaucracies. And it was a revolution carried out by elite groups of welfare workers, Social Democrats and other who believed European socialism could be imported to the United States on a step-by-step basis.[380] They believed in a "new liberalism." Classical liberalism would die in the United States in the 1930s through programs such as Social Security just as it had died in Britain some four decades before. A new liberalism celebrated the expanded powers of the federal government. The old American individualist tradition was distrustful of distant central governments and the bureaucracies they spawned.

"Americans assumed that their country was unique in assigning to private voluntary institutions a wide range of responsibilities which in other nations were relegated to governments or elite groups," writes one historian of Social Security.[381]

Almost everyone, FDR critics as well as admirers, agree that Social Security was a watershed event in our history. FDR said of the legislation that, if it was the only bill passed in the 1935-36 congressional session, Congress would have accomplished a lot.[382] Why was it so important to those such as FDR who scorned the individualist tradition? Social Security was the centerpiece of a revolution that one historian has said meant that "big government, modern government" was here to stay.[383]

When Social Security survived – and, in its earlier years, it was a dicey question if it would or not, requiring the most effective political skills that FDR and his allies could summon – Americans implicitly accepted the most essential part of a new social policy. Washington, not individuals, would now have huge powers over the individual citizen's retirement planning, unemployment insurance and welfare payments. When FDR signed the Social Security Act, the United States, for the first time in her history, would have "a significant, permanent social welfare bureaucracy."[384]

FDR assured his social democratic allies that the Social Security was just the beginning of an expanded role for the federal government. But it wasn't until toward the end of his life, in the Economic Bill of Rights speech that so "thrilled" his social democratic supporters[385], that he was ready to publicly walk away from the campaign promises of 1932 and the American individualist tradition.

Some four years after its creation, the structure of this landmark program was expanding. Some 12,000 employees would be working in the Social Security administration, which would become bigger and bigger . Once in place, there were calls for sister bureaucracies. American Socialists were disappointed that more people were not included in the 1935 act (such as servants and farm workers); that disability insurance wasn't initially covered, that health insurance had not been included. But many of those leftist critics, who had at the time claimed that it was too little, later would concede that Social Security's

[378] After some five years of the New Deal, another recession began in 1937. Two historians have written that "The resulting downturn began in August 1937 and continued through the winter and spring of 1938. It was nothing short of catastrophic." See FDR, Russell D. Buhite and David W. Levy, editors, p111 (Penguin Books, New York, 1992)

[379] FDR conceded there were problems in talks with Farley but blamed a conspiracy against him: "I know that the present situation is the result of a concerted effort by big business and concentrated wealth to drive the market down and just to create a situation unfavorable to me." See Jim Farley's Story, p101.

[380] "The vast expansion of public assistance functions and expenditures beginning in the 1930s was superimposed upon a long tradition of disdain totally incongruous with the political and economic power assumed by the public welfare sector." See The Professional Altruist: The Emergence of Social Work as a Career, 1880-1930, p54, (New York, Atheneum, 1969)

[382] FDR understood that Social Security's passage represented radical change: "If the Senate and the House of Representatives in this long and arduous session had nothing more than pass this Bill, the session would have been regarded as historic for all time." See The New Deal: A Documentary History. William E. Leuchtenburg, p 80, (Harper and Row, New York, 1968) establishment, no matter how modest, opened the door for the government to do many other things.[386] All the measures left out of the original bill would be included within 30 years.

That is why even many of those socialists who scorned FDR, who said that he was a bumbling savior of capitalism, could still summon up some grudging praise for FDR. Socialism would be quietly achieved over generations as part of a mixed economy that seemed, on the surface, to be a traditional laissez-faire American economy.

Social Security, whether it was called social insurance or government pensions, was the first vital step on the road to the welfare state. How it finally happened in the United States, after decades of frustrating unsuccessful efforts by social democrats and professional bureaucrats, is a fascinating story. FDR went around Congress, which was too unpredictable and whose review process might not have given him what he wanted. FDR found his own experts that he knew would give him what he wanted, then would unveil a Social Security proposal that he expected to be adopted whole. Congress, generally intimidated by the experts, went along with few objections.

This process, this masterful strategy of building a welfare state in a country with a historic commitment to individualism, will be discussed in the next report.

6.7.4 1937: FDR's Stacking of the Supreme Court

President Franklin D. Roosevelt, during his long 12-year tenure in office in the 1930's, tried to ram his socialist programs down our throat. To name a few of these programs he tried to institute:

1. Social Security (1935).
2. Outlawing of the holding of gold by private individuals and forcing citizens to use paper currency.
3. Direct income taxes on individuals. These taxes were struck down by the following Supreme Court rulings:
   - 3.1. 1920: Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920) (struck down direct income taxes on federal judges).
   - 3.2. 1922: Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co., 259 U.S. 20 (1922). The Supreme Court ruled that a federal income tax on child labor was unconstitutional.
   - 3.3. 1924: Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924) (ruled that direct taxes on individuals cannot be sustained based on income).
   - 3.4. 1938: Hassett v. Welch, 303 U.S. 303 (1938). The Supreme Court ruled that all doubts about the construction of tax statutes, codes, and laws should be resolved in favor of taxpayers, not the government.
4. Social security numbers.
5. Railroad retirement (struck down in 1935 in the Supreme Court Case of Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935)).

Because of these rulings against his socialist programs, FDR was feeling thwarted by the Supreme Court. Therefore, on March 9, 1937, he announced his intention via radio to the entire country that he was going to "stack" the Supreme Court (see http://www.hpol.org/fdr/chat/). This was called "the court packing plan". The Supreme court originally had 6 justices, and he doubled its size by adding several of his own "cronies" who would uphold and defend his socialist programs, including Social Security and the Victory Tax. He also proposed to replace all the justices over 70, which included 5 of the 6 justices then in office. Here are some of FDR's own words, given during a radio address on March 9, 1937:

> "But since the rise of the modern movement for social and economic progress through legislation, the Court has more and more often and more and more boldly asserted a power to veto laws passed by the Congress and by state legislatures in complete disregard of this original limitation which I have just read.
> The Court in addition to the proper use of its judicial functions has improperly set itself up as a third house of the Congress - a super-legislature, as one of the justices has called it - reading into the Constitution words and implications which are not there, and which were never intended to be there.
> We have, therefore, reached the point as a nation where we must take action to save the Constitution from the Court and the Court from itself. We must find a way to take an appeal from the Supreme Court to the Constitution > itself. We want a Supreme Court which will do justice under the Constitution and not over it. In our courts we want a government of laws and not of men.

[386] One Democrat who noticed the transformation was FDR's fellow Democrat Al Smith. By the mid 1930s he was complaining that the "Brain Trusters caught the Socialists swimming and ran away with their clothes." See Al Smith, Hero of the Cities, by Matthew and Hannah Josephson, p459, (Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston, 1969). That's a good comparison given that the American Socialist Party of 1928 had called for a mandatory government pension system.

>
> What is my proposal? It is simply this: whenever a judge or justice of any federal court has reached the age of seventy and does not avail himself of the opportunity to retire on a pension, a new member shall be appointed by the president then in office, with the approval, as required by the Constitution, of the Senate of the United States.
>
> That plan has two chief purposes. By bringing into the judicial system a steady and continuing stream of new and younger blood, I hope, first, to make the administration of all federal justice, from the bottom to the top, speedier and, therefore, less costly; secondly, to bring to the decision of social and economic problems younger men who have had personal experience and contact with modern facts and circumstances under which average men have to live and work. This plan will save our national Constitution from hardening of the judicial arteries.
> […]
> Those opposing this plan have sought to arouse prejudice and fear by crying that I am seeking to "pack" the Supreme Court and that a baneful precedent will be established.
> What do they mean by the words "packing the Supreme Court?" Let me answer this question with a bluntness that will end all honest misunderstanding of my purposes.
>
> If by that phrase "packing the Court" it is charged that I wish to place on the bench spineless puppets who would disregard the law and would decide specific cases as I wished them to be decided, I make this answer: that no president fit for his office would appoint, and no Senate of honorable men fit for their office would confirm, that kind of appointees to the Supreme Court.
> But if by that phrase the charge is made that I would appoint and the Senate would confirm justices worthy to sit beside present members of the Court, who understand modern conditions, that I will appoint justices who will not undertake to override the judgment of the Congress on legislative policy, that I will appoint justices who will act as justices and not as legislators - if the appointment of such justices can be called "packing the Courts," then I say that I and with me the vast majority of the American people favor doing just that thing - now.
> Is it a dangerous precedent for the Congress to change the number of the justices? The Congress has always had, and will have, that power. The number of justices has been changed several times before, in the administrations of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson - both of them signers of the Declaration of Independence - in the administrations of Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, and Ulysses S. Grant.
> Like all lawyers, like all Americans, I regret the necessity of this controversy. But the welfare of the United States, and indeed of the Constitution itself, is what we all must think about first. Our difficulty with the Court today rises not from the Court as an institution but from human beings within it. But we cannot yield our constitutional destiny to the personal judgment of a few men who, being fearful of the future, would deny us the necessary means of dealing with the present.

Could it be any clearer, after reading this and looking at the history of the Supreme Court rulings at that time following his "packing plan" that he was trying to stack the deck and ramrod his socialist programs down our throats?

Below is what the U.S. Senate Report 711 said about the packing plan, which they had a very dim view of:

6.7.5 1943: FDR's Executive Order 9397: Bye-Bye Privacy and Fourth Amendment!

Below is a presidential Executive Order issued by our socialist President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, in which the infamous Social Security Number became the standard number for monitoring all transactions of every citizen. This was the day we lost our privacy and gutted the Fourth Amendment. This infamous day marked the start of socialism in America and it was accomplished in a time of national crisis (World War II) and in the name of the public "good".

EXECUTIVE ORDER 9397

WHEREAS certain Federal agencies from time to time require in the administration of their activities a system of numerical identification of accounts of individual persons; and

WHEREAS some seventy million persons have heretofore been assigned account numbers pursuant to the Social Security Act; and

WHEREAS a large percentage of Federal employees have already been assigned account numbers pursuant to the Social Security Act; and

WHEREAS it is desirable in the interest of economy and orderly administration that the Federal Government move towards the use of a single unduplicated numerical identification system of accounts and avoid the unnecessary establishment of additional systems:

NOW THEREFORE, by virtue of the authority vested in me as President of the United States, it is hereby ordered as follows:

1. Hereafter any Federal department establishment, or agency shall, whenever the head thereof finds it advisable to establish a new system of permanent account numbers pertaining to individual persons, utilize exclusively the Social Security Act account numbers assigned pursuant to Title 26, section 402.502 of the 1940 Supplement to the Code of Federal Regulations and pursuant to paragraph 2 of this order.

2. The Social Security Board shall provide for the assignment of an account number to each person who is required by any Federal agency to have such a number but who has not previously been assigned such number by the Board. The Board may accomplish this purpose by

(a) assigning such numbers to individual persons,

(b) assigning blocks of numbers to Federal agencies for reassignment to individual persons, or

(c) making such other arrangements for the assignment of numbers as it may deem appropriate.

3. The Social Security Board shall furnish, upon request of any Federal agency utilizing the numerical identification system of accounts provided for in this order, the account number pertaining to any person with whom such agency has an account or the name and other identifying data pertaining to any account number of any such person.

4. The Social Security Board and each Federal agency shall maintain the confidential character of information relating to individual persons obtained pursuant to the provisions of this order.

5. There shall be transferred to the Social Security Board, from time to time, such amounts as the Director of the Bureau of the Budget shall determine to be required for reimbursement by any Federal agency for the services rendered by the Board pursuant to the provisions of this order.

6. This order shall be published in the Federal Register.

6.8 Congressional Cover-Ups, Scandals, and Tax Code Obfuscation

"I, _____, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God."
[Congressional Oath of Office]

"Suppose you were an idiot, and suppose you were in Congress, But I repeat myself."
[Mark Twain]

"If 'pro' is the opposite of 'con', a wise man once said, then 'progress' must be the antonym of 'Congress'."

Late one night in the capitol city a mugger wearing a ski mask jumped into the path of a well-dressed man and stuck a gun in his ribs. "Give me your money!" he demanded.

Indignant, the affluent man replied, "You can't do this - I'm a U.S. Congressman!"

"In that case," replied the robber, "give me MY money!"

This section shall show conclusively the history of increasing obfuscation, confusion, and deception of our income tax laws from 1921 to the present. We will show that Congress has, with each successive revision of the U.S. Code and the Code of Federal Regulations, deliberately tried to make the law more confusing and deceptive by:

1. Removing focus of the law on "sources" or "taxable activities", by removing pointers to legitimate "sources" whenever discussing income in the Internal Revenue Code. This can lead to the mistaken assumption by the Citizen that all sources of income are taxable instead of just specific sources. But we know that Congress doesn't have the authority to tax people in China, so wherever there is an income, there must be an associated source.
2. Remove references to the fact that "foreign corporations" and only withholding agents for "nonresident aliens" are liable for income taxes and replace "foreigners" with "taxpayers". Thus, if American citizens (most of whom are NOT "U.S. citizens") can erroneously be convinced that they are "taxpayers", then they will think that the section applies to them.
3. Add more indirection by using new terms whose definition is not referred to where they are used. These terms include:
   3.1. "items of income"
   3.2. "statutory groupings"
   3.3. "operative sections"
4. Adding double negatives (in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T, for instance) instead of just referring to the positive of what can and cannot be taxed.
5. Changing the definitions of certain words to make them appear universal and yet in actuality they aren't. For instance, below are some confusing words in the tax code and their REAL definitions:
   5.1. "Employer": The Federal government as an employer of federal workers. There are repeated references to how employers are liable for taxes they don't withhold but little is said about the fact that the only people by the code who are liable for the deductions are Federal government agencies!
   5.2. "Taxpayer": A nonresident alien domiciled in the U.S. or a citizen living overseas.
   5.3. "The States": The District of Columbia and all federal States but not one of the Union states or several states.
   5.4. "trade or business in the United States": functions involving the holding of public office with the United States government (e.g. congressional office or presidential appointment).

We will argue that such an obfuscating evolution of the tax code as directed by lawyers (does anyone like lawyers?) in Congress would point to the fact that there is a conspiracy by the lawyers in Congress to defraud the citizens (notice we didn't say "taxpayers") illegally of their come by abusing the law and the tax code. This also points to the fact that we need better configuration management of the laws so that there is traceability for each modification of the law to a specific individual in Congress so that person can be prosecuted (and defamed and fired from office) appropriately when they either demonstrate a conflict of interest or try to obfuscate the code. We believe that a petition (under the First Amendment) and conviction of the government for the following crimes is inevitable based on current law and that it is only a matter of time before this issue ends up in front of the Supreme Court. Below are just a few of the crimes you will likely see the IRS and members of Congress convicted of based on the evidence presented here:

1. "Conspiracy against rights" (18 U.S.C. §241).
2. "Federally protected rights being violated" (18 U.S.C. §245).
3. "Illegally taking more money than is required by law" (26 U.S.C. §7214).
4. "Illegal extortion of taxes" (18 U.S.C. §872).
5. "Receiving the proceeds of extortion" (18 U.S.C. §880).

6. "Mailing threatening communications" (18 U.S.C. §876).
7. "Blackmail" (18 U.S.C. §873).
8. "Retaliating against a witness, victim, or an informant" (18 U.S.C. §1513).
9. "False writings" (18 U.S.C. §1018).
10. "Taking of property that is not based on law" (26 C.F.R. §601.106(f)(1)
11. "Retaliating against or harassing taxpayer" (Section 1203, IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998.
12. "Unauthorized collection actions" (26 U.S.C. §7433).
13. "Fraud" (18 U.S.C. §1018).
14. "Fraud and swindling" (18 U.S.C. §1341).
15. "Sale or receipt of stolen goods" (18 U.S.C. §2315).
16. Running of a "continuing financial crimes enterprise" (18 U.S.C. §225).
17. "Engaging in monetary transactions in property derived from specified unlawful activity" (18 U.S.C. §1957).

6.8.1 No taxation without representation!

No taxation without representation!

This was one of the rallying cries before the American revolution. We have all heard it in high school and read it in the history books, and perhaps felt some sense of pride in it. But do we REALLY know what it means and if we still have it? The answer is, unfortunately, probably not. Because the Constitution SPECIFICALLY STATES that if anyone imposes a tax and tries to collect it, it must be Congress!!

This is what REPRESENTATION with TAXATION means. If you don't like a tax, you can vote against the people who passed it and who enforce it . When was the last time you voted for an agent of the Internal Revenue Service? Instead, our corrupt Congress as created a new executive agency, given it no delegated authority in the Internal Revenue Code, allowed it to write its own regulations to enforce the tax (a conflict of interest, I might add) and then hypocritically and habitually complained that it has overstepped its bounds, as if they had no responsibility for its existence! Here is the way Irwin Schiff insightfully describes this situation:

> The government has done a masterful job at subterfuge. The same Congress that created the IRS is the one that complains about it. They complain about it like it is some evil and independent agency of the federal government with a life of its own and as though they have no control over it because it is outside the legislative branch, but it was created through the legislation of Congress in 26 U.S.C. §7805! Congress complaining about the abuses of the IRS is like people saying about me:
> > "You know Irwin Schiff is a really nice guy, but Oh…..HIS FIST. It really hurts and it's such an evil thing when it goes around hitting people all the time!"
> Don't let your Congressman suck you into his pity party! Tell him to get off his ass and fix the lawless behavior of the IRS!

Congress and the Courts have, by allowing the current situation with the IRS to exist, failed to live up to their oath of office to support and defend the Constitution, and thereby abdicated their powers to another branch of government. Congress has abdicated their responsibility to collect taxes by delegating it to another branch of the government: The Department of the Treasury and the IRS are in the EXECUTIVE BRANCH! The Constitution does not allow the Congress to delegate or abdicate their duty to collect taxes! Punish the bastards by penalizing them for 2/3 of their salary until they fix this problem! Or better yet, cancel their retirement until they fix it. If we had a national referendum process, this would have happened hundreds of years ago!

> "The accumulation of all powers, legislative, executive and judiciary, in the same hands ... may justly be pronounced the very definition of tyranny." - James Madison (1751-1863)

6.8.2 The Corruption of Our Tax System by the Courts and the Congress: Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)

Recall that the Supreme Court in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) fracturing the United States into the equivalent of two countries: One with constitutional protections in the 50 union states, and the other one in the federal zone with no constitutional protections. We describe these two countries as:

"One nation [the 50 union states] under God. The other nation [the federal zone] under fraud."

In discussing the supreme Court case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), Judge Harlan, in the most eloquently expressed dissenting opinion, supported equal Constitutional protections for all territories and possessions of the United States, in the same manner that the 50 union states are protected. Following are excerpts from that opinion, along with Harlan's accurate predictions of the consequences of that decision:

> "I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism..
>
> "The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to..
> It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution."
> [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), Justice Harlan, Dissenting]

Judge Harlan's extremely prudent advice was ignored and his prediction of a "radical and mischievous change in our system" because of this ruling was right on target! This dual United States ruling is the root of the evil of the Internal Revenue Service, the Federal Reserve System, with its subsequent robbery of our gold and silver, and the many other unjust federal agencies that have abused American Right, confiscated their property, and strangled them with red-tape. A government established to protect the happiness of American people has become the root of their misery and the worst abusers of the Rights it was established to protect! Because of this ruling, Congress has been able to circumvent the Constitution for the united States of America, as follows:

1. The United States Government legally creates legislation, which may be unconstitutional for the 50 union states, under the authority and guise of legislating for the citizens and residents of the territories and possessions "belonging to" the United States, over which the United States has exclusive authority.
2. Such federal legislation is made applicable only to the citizens born and residing in Territories, possessions, instrumentalities and enclaves under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. These "individuals" are called "U.S. citizens" or "citizens of the United states, subject to its jurisdiction" in such legislation. The average American, of course, believes he or she is such a citizen (because it was never disclosed to them that our Congress legislates for two different types of citizens). Because that American has respect for the law, he or she voluntarily consents to obey this legislation that is contrary to the Constitution.

6.8.3 The Anti-Injunction Act statute, 26 U.S.C. §7421

This statute states:

> Sec. 7421. Prohibition of suits to restrain assessment or collection
> (a) Tax
> Except as provided in sections 6015(e), 6212(a) and (c), 6213(a), 6225(b), 6246(b), 6331(i), 6672(b), 6694(c), and 7426(a) and (b)(1), 7429(b), and 7436, no suit for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection of any tax shall be maintained in any court by any person, whether or not such person is the person against whom such tax was assessed.
> (b) Liability of transferee or fiduciary
> No suit shall be maintained in any court for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection (pursuant to the provisions of chapter 71) of -

> (1) the amount of the liability, at law or in equity, of a transferee of property of a taxpayer in respect of any internal revenue tax, or
> (2) the amount of the liability of a fiduciary under section 3713(b) of title 31, United States Code [1] in respect of any such tax.

The problem with this statute is that it is also commonly used as an excuse by our federal courts to NOT stop illegal assessment and collection of taxes for the government, which means that the IRS can act lawlessly and violate due process of Americans without a court order and cannot be restrained from illegally assessing and collecting the tax. The only recourse in any court above U.S. Tax Court is to pay the illegally assessed or collected tax and then sue the federal government. By that time, the plundered Citizen usually has so little property and cash left that he can't afford to defend his rights and an expensive lawyer will try to victimize and extort unreasonable fees from him to get him out of the predicament that this unconstitutional law put him in to begin with.

If you would like to know what the federal courts think about the Anti-Injunction Act, read the following cases:

- Willits v. Richardson, 497 F.2d. 240, 5th Circuit, (1974)
- Laing v. U.S., 423 U.S. 161 (1976): Upheld the Anti-Injunction Act.
- Enochs v. Williams Packing, 370 U.S. 1 (1961): Upheld the Anti-Injunction Act.

The state of California has enacted two laws that are similar to the Federal Anti-Injunction Act as follows:

- California Constitution: Section 32.

> No legal or equitable process shall issue in any proceeding in any court against this State or any officer thereof to prevent or enjoin the collection of any tax. After payment of a tax claimed to be illegal, an action may be maintained to recover the tax paid, with interest, in such a manner as may be provided by the Legislature. [New section adopted November 5, 1974].

- California Revenue and Taxation Code, Section 19081: Legal or equitable processes to enjoin assessment or collection of tax prohibited; Exception in residence cases.

> No injunction or writ of mandate or other legal or equitable process shall issue in any suit, action, or proceeding in any court against this State or against any officer of this State to prevent or enjoin the assessment or collection of any tax under this part; provided, however, that any individual after protesting a notice or notices of deficiency assessment issues because of his alleged residence in this State and after appealing from the action of the Franchise Tax Board to the State Board of Equalization becomes final commence an action, on the grounds set forth in his protest, in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, in the County of Los Angeles or in the City and County of San Francisco against the Franchise Tax Board to determine the fact of his residence in this State during the year or years set forth in the notice or notices of deficiency assessment. No tax under this part based solely upon the residence of such an individual shall be collected from such individual until 60 days after the action of the State Board of Equalization becomes final and, if he commences an action pursuant to this section, during the pendency of such action, other than by way of or under the jeopardy assessment provisions of this part.

The thing to notice about the California version of the Anti-Injunction Act is the use of the term "this State" repeatedly throughout both the California Constitution and R&TC §19081. The important thing to remember is the meaning of the term "this State", which means federal enclaves within California. Recall that we said in section 5.2.6 that "State" is really just the federal enclaves within California as per California Revenue and Taxation Code Section 17018:

> 17018. "State" includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.
> [which don't include the 50 sovereign states but do include federal areas within those states]

Also recall that California Revenue and Taxation Code, Section 6017 further defines the term "this State" explicitly to mean:

> 6017. "In this State" or "in the State" means within the exterior [outside] limits of the [Sovereign] state of California and includes [only] all territory within these limits owned by or ceded to the United States

So what they are saying here is that California's version of the Anti-Injunction act only applies in federal enclaves that are within California.

With respect to the comments in this section, the provisions of the Anti-Injunction Act may be easily circumvented if you know what you are doing. We describe how to do this in section 1.4.1 of the following:

6.8.4 Why the Lawyers in Congress Just Love the Tax Code

> "All the Congress, all the accountants and tax lawyers, all the judges, and a convention of wizards all cannot tell for sure what the income tax law says." -- Walter B. Wriston

Merriam Webster's New International Dictionary (unabridged, 2d ed.), defines the term "sentence" as follows:

> "sentence: 5. A series of connected words extending from one period or full stop to another. See sense 8, below."

> "8. Gram. According to the degrees of complication in their structure, sentences are described as simple, complex, compound, and compound-complex."

A full, completed sentence ends with a period. The entire text of section 3121(b) of the federal Internal Revenue Code (IRC) contains only two completed sentences that end with a period. Printed below is the full text of section 3121(b)of the IRC. Inspection of the 1994, CCH Incorporated edition (volume 2) of the IRC reveals that the entire text of section 3121(b) required five pages to print in size 10 font. (This does not include the five additional pages that reference the "amendments" to section 3121(b).) A computer count of the entire text of section 3121(b) totaled some 19,098 characters, comprising some 3,834 words. The first completed sentence alone contained 18,880 characters or 3,788 words. According to Merriam Webster's ranking of the various degrees of complication that a sentence may take, those 3,788 words must surely classify that first sentence in section 3121(b) as a compound-complex sentence.

Below is printed the entire text of section 3121(b) comprised of 3,834 words which, properly and grammatically speaking, comprise only two completed sentences. Who said you can't have fun with the tax code!

> "(b) Employment For purposes of this chapter, the term "employment" means any service, of whatever nature, performed (A) by an employee for the person employing him, irrespective of the citizenship or residence of either, (i) within the United States, or (ii) on or in connection with an American vessel or American aircraft under a contract of service which is entered into within the United States or during the performance of which and while the employee is employed on the vessel or aircraft it touches at a port in the United States, if the employee is employed on and in connection with such vessel or aircraft when outside the United States, or (B) outside the United States by a citizen or resident of the United States as an employee for an American employer (as defined in subsection (h)), or (C) if it is service, regardless of where or by whom performed, which is designated as employment or recognized as equivalent to employment under an agreement entered into under section 233 of the Social Security Act; except that such term shall not include - (1) service performed by foreign agricultural workers lawfully admitted to the United States from the Bahamas, Jamaica, and the other British West Indies, or from any other foreign country or possession thereof, on a temporary basis to perform agricultural labor; (2) domestic service performed in a local college club, or local chapter of a college fraternity or sorority, by a student who is enrolled and is regularly attending classes at a school, college, or university; (3)(A) service performed by a child under the age of 18 in the employ of his father or mother; (B) service not in the course of the employer's trade or business, or domestic service in a private home of the employer, performed by an individual under the age of 21 in the employ of his father or mother, or performed by an individual in the employ of his spouse or son or daughter; except that the provisions of this subparagraph shall not be applicable to such domestic service performed by an individual in the employ of his son or daughter if - (i) the employer is a surviving spouse or a divorced individual and has not remarried, or has a spouse living in the home who has a mental or physical condition which results in such spouse's being incapable of caring for a son, daughter, stepson, or stepdaughter (referred to in clause (ii)) for at least 4 continuous weeks in the calendar quarter in which the service is rendered, and (ii) a son, daughter, stepson, or stepdaughter of such employer is living in the home, and (iii) the son, daughter, stepson, or stepdaughter (referred to in clause (ii)) has not attained age 18 or has a mental or physical condition which requires the personal care and supervision of an adult for at least 4 continuous weeks in the calendar quarter in which the service is rendered; (4) service performed by an individual on or in connection with a vessel not an American vessel, or on or in connection with an aircraft not an American aircraft, if (A) the individual is employed on and in connection with such vessel or aircraft, when outside the United States and (B)(i) such individual is not a citizen of the United States or (ii) the employer is not an American employer; (5) service performed in the employ of the United States or any instrumentality of the United States, if such service - (A) would be excluded from the term "employment" for purposes of this title if the provisions of paragraphs (5) and (6) of this subsection as in effect in January 1983 had remained in effect, and (B) is performed by an individual who - (i) has been continuously performing service described in subparagraph (A) since December 31, 1983, and for purposes of this clause - (I) if an individual performing service described in subparagraph (A) returns to the performance of such service after being separated therefrom for a period of less than 366 consecutive days, regardless of whether the period began before, on, or after December 31, 1983, then such service shall be considered continuous, (II) if an individual performing service described in subparagraph (A) returns to the performance of such service after being detailed or transferred to an international organization as described under section 3343 of subchapter III of chapter 33 of title 5, United States Code, or under section 3581 of chapter 35 of such title, then the service performed for that organization shall be considered service described in subparagraph (A), (III) if an individual performing service described in subparagraph (A) is reemployed or reinstated after being separated from such service for the purpose of accepting employment with the American Institute in Taiwan as provided under section 3310 of chapter 48 of title 22, United States Code, then the service performed for that Institute shall be considered service described in subparagraph (A), (IV) if an individual performing service described in subparagraph (A) returns to the performance of such service after performing service as a member of a uniformed service (including, for purposes of this clause, service in the National Guard and temporary service in the Coast Guard Reserve) and after exercising restoration or reemployment rights as provided under chapter 43 of title 38, United States Code, then the service so performed as a member of a uniformed service shall be considered service described in subparagraph (A), and (V) if an individual performing service described in subparagraph (A) returns to the performance of such service after employment (by a tribal organization) to which section 105(e)(2) of the Indian Self-Determination Act applies, then the service performed for that tribal organization shall be considered service described in subparagraph (A); or (ii) is receiving an annuity from the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, or benefits (for service as an employee) under another retirement system established by a law of the United States for employees of the Federal Government (other than for members of the uniformed service); except that this paragraph shall not apply with respect to any such service performed on or after any date on which such individual performs - (C) service performed as the President or Vice President of the United States, (D) service performed - (i) in a position placed in the Executive Schedule under sections 5312 through 5317 of title 5, United States Code, (ii) as a noncareer appointee in the Senior Executive Service or a noncareer member of the Senior Foreign Service, or (iii) in a position to which the individual is appointed by the President (or his designee) or the Vice President under section 105(a)(1), 106(a)(1), or 107 (a)(1) or (b)(1) of title 3, United States Code, if the maximum rate of basic pay for such position is at or above the rate for level V of the Executive Schedule, (E) service performed as the Chief Justice of the United States, an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, a judge of a United States court of appeals, a judge of a United States district court (including the district court of a territory), a judge of the United States Court of Federal Claims, a judge of the United States Court of International Trade, a judge of the United States Tax Court, a United States magistrate, or a referee in bankruptcy or United States bankruptcy judge, (F) service performed as a Member, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner of or to the Congress, (G) any other service in the legislative branch of the Federal Government if such service - (i) is performed by an individual who was not subject to subchapter III of chapter 83 of title 5, United States Code, or to another retirement system established by a law of the United States for employees of the Federal Government (other than for members of the uniformed services), on December 31, 1983, or (ii) is performed by an individual who has, at any time after December 31, 1983, received a lump-sum payment under section 8342(a) of title 5, United States Code, or under the corresponding provision of the law establishing the other retirement system described in clause (i), or (iii) is performed by an individual after such individual has otherwise ceased to be subject to subchapter III of chapter 83 of title 5, United States Code (without having an application pending for coverage under such subchapter), while performing service in the legislative branch (determined without regard to the provisions of subparagraph (B) relating to continuity of employment), for any period of time after December 31, 1983, and for purposes of this subparagraph (G) an individual is subject to such subchapter III or to any such other retirement system at any time only if (a) such individual's pay is subject to deductions, contributions, or similar payments (concurrent with the service being performed at that time) under section 8334(a) of such title 5 or the corresponding provision of the law establishing such other system, or (in a case to which section 8332(k)(1) of such title applies) such individual is making payments of amounts equivalent to such deductions, contributions, or similar payments while on leave without pay, or (b) such individual is receiving an annuity from the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, or is receiving benefits (for service as an employee) under another retirement system established by a law of the United States for employees of the Federal Government (other than for members of the uniformed services), or (H) service performed by an individual - (i) on or after the effective date of an election by such individual, under section 301 of the Federal Employees' Retirement System Act of 1986, section 307 of the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement Act (50 U.S.C. 2157), or the Federal Employees' Retirement System Open Enrollment Act of 1997 to become subject to the Federal Employees' Retirement System provided in chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, or (ii) on or after the effective date of an election by such individual, under regulations issued under section 860 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980, to become subject to the Foreign Service Pension System provided in subchapter II of chapter 8 of title I of such Act; (6) service performed in the employ of the United States or any instrumentality of the United States if such service is performed - (A) in a penal institution of the United States by an inmate thereof; (B) by any individual as an employee included under section 5351(2) of title 5, United States Code (relating to certain interns, student nurses, and other student employees of hospitals of the Federal Government), other than as a medical or dental intern or a medical or dental resident in training; or (C) by any individual as an employee serving on a temporary basis in case of fire, storm, earthquake, flood, or other similar emergency; (7) service performed in the employ of a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or any instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing which is wholly owned thereby, except that this paragraph shall not apply in the case of - (A) service which, under subsection (j), constitutes covered transportation service, (B) service in the employ of the Government of Guam or the Government of American Samoa or any political subdivision thereof, or of any instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing which is wholly owned thereby, performed by an officer or employee thereof (including a member of the legislature of any such Government or political subdivision), and, for purposes of this title with respect to the taxes imposed by this chapter - (i) any person whose service as such an officer or employee is not covered by a retirement system established by a law of the United States shall not, with respect to such service, be regarded as an employee of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof, and (ii) the remuneration for service described in clause (i) (including fees paid to a public official) shall be deemed to have been paid by the Government of Guam or the Government of American Samoa or by a political subdivision thereof or an instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing which is wholly owned thereby, whichever is appropriate, (C) service performed in the employ of the District of Columbia or any instrumentality which is wholly owned thereby, if such service is not covered by a retirement system established by a law of the United States (other than the Federal Employees Retirement System provided in chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code); except that the provisions of this subparagraph shall not be applicable to service performed - (i) in a hospital or penal institution by a patient or inmate thereof; (ii) by any individual as an employee included under section 5351(2) of title 5, United States Code (relating to certain interns, student nurses, and other student employees of hospitals of the District of Columbia Government), other than as a medical or dental intern or as a medical or dental resident in training; (iii) by any individual as an employee serving on a temporary basis in case of fire, storm, snow, earthquake, flood or other similar emergency; or (iv) by a member of a board, committee, or council of the District of Columbia, paid on a per diem, meeting, or other fee basis, (D) service performed in the employ of the Government of Guam (or any instrumentality which is wholly owned by such Government) by an employee properly classified as a temporary or intermittent employee, if such service is not covered by a retirement system established by a law of Guam; except that (i) the provisions of this subparagraph shall not be applicable to services performed by an elected official or a member of the legislature or in a hospital or penal institution by a patient or inmate thereof, and (ii) for purposes of this subparagraph, clauses (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (B) shall apply, (E) service included under an agreement entered into pursuant to section 218 of the Social Security Act, or (F) service in the employ of a State (other than the District of Columbia, Guam, or American Samoa), of any political subdivision thereof, or of any instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing which is wholly owned thereby, by an individual who is not a member of a retirement system of such State, political subdivision, or instrumentality, except that the provisions of this subparagraph shall not be applicable to service performed - (i) by an individual who is employed to relieve such individual from unemployment; (ii) in a hospital, home, or other institution by a patient or inmate thereof; (iii) by any individual as an employee serving on a temporary basis in case of fire, storm, snow, earthquake, flood, or other similar emergency; (iv) by an election official or election worker if the remuneration paid in a calendar year for such service is less than $1,000 with respect to service performed during any calendar year commencing on or after January 1, 1995, ending on or before December 31, 1999, and the adjusted amount determined under section 218(c)(8)(B) of the Social Security Act for any calendar year commencing on or after January 1, 2000, with respect to service performed during such calendar year; or (v) by an employee in a position compensated solely on a fee basis which is treated pursuant to section 1402(c)(2)(E) as a trade or business for purposes of inclusion of such fees in net earnings from self-employment; for purposes of this subparagraph, except as provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the term "retirement system" has the meaning given such term by section 218(b)(4) of the Social Security Act; (8)(A) service performed by a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry or by a member of a religious order in the exercise of duties required by such order, except that this subparagraph shall not apply to service performed by a member of such an order in the exercise of such duties, if an election of coverage under subsection (r) is in effect with respect to such order, or with respect to the autonomous subdivision thereof to which such member belongs; (B) service performed in the employ of a church or qualified church-controlled organization if such church or organization has in effect an election under subsection (w), other than service in an unrelated trade or business (within the meaning of section 513(a)); (9) service performed by an individual as an employee or employee representative as defined in section 3231; (10) service performed in the employ of - (A) a school, college, or university, or (B) an organization described in section 509(a)(3) if the organization is organized, and at all times thereafter is operated, exclusively for the benefit of, to perform the functions of, or to carry out the purposes of a school, college, or university and is operated, supervised, or controlled by or in connection with such school, college, or university, unless it is a school, college, or university of a State or a political subdivision thereof and the services performed in its employ by a student referred to in section 218(c)(5) of the Social Security Act are covered under the agreement between the Commissioner of Social Security and such State entered into pursuant to section 218 of such Act; if such service is performed by a student who is enrolled and regularly attending classes at such school, college, or university; (11) service performed in the employ of a foreign government (including service as a consular or other officer or employee or a nondiplomatic representative); (12) service performed in the employ of an instrumentality wholly owned by a foreign government - (A) if the service is of a character similar to that performed in foreign countries by employees of the United States Government or of an instrumentality thereof; and (B) if the Secretary of State shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury that the foreign government, with respect to whose instrumentality and employees thereof exemption is claimed, grants an equivalent exemption with respect to similar service performed in the foreign country by employees of the United States Government and of instrumentalities thereof; (13) service performed as a student nurse in the employ of a hospital or a nurses' training school by an individual who is enrolled and is regularly attending classes in a nurses' training school chartered or approved pursuant to State law; (14)(A) service performed by an individual under the age of 18 in the delivery or distribution of newspapers or shopping news, not including delivery or distribution to any point for subsequent delivery or distribution; (B) service performed by an individual in, and at the time of, the sale of newspapers or magazines to ultimate consumers, under an arrangement under which the newspapers or magazines are to be sold by him at a fixed price, his compensation being based on the retention of the excess of such price over the amount at which the newspapers or magazines are charged to him, whether or not he is guaranteed a minimum amount of compensation for such service, or is entitled to be credited with the unsold newspapers or magazines turned back; (15) service performed in the employ of an international organization, except service which constitutes "employment" under subsection (y); (16) service performed by an individual under an arrangement with the owner or tenant of land pursuant to which - (A) such individual undertakes to produce agricultural or horticultural commodities (including livestock, bees, poultry, and fur-bearing animals and wildlife) on such land, (B) the agricultural or horticultural commodities produced by such individual, or the proceeds therefrom, are to be divided between such individual and such owner or tenant, and (C) the amount of such individual's share depends on the amount of the agricultural or horticultural commodities produced; (17) service in the employ of any organization which is performed (A) in any year during any part of which such organization is registered, or there is in effect a final order of the Subversive Activities Control Board requiring such organization to register, under the Internal Security Act of 1950, as amended, as a Communist-action organization, a Communist-front organization, or a Communist-infiltrated organization, and (B) after June 30, 1956; (18) service performed in Guam by a resident of the Republic of the Philippines while in Guam on a temporary basis as a nonimmigrant alien admitted to Guam pursuant to section 101(a)(15)(H)(ii) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(15)(H)(ii)); (19) Service which is performed by a nonresident alien individual for the period he is temporarily present in the United States as a nonimmigrant under subparagraph (F), (J), (M), or (Q) of section 101(a)(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as amended, and which is performed to carry out the purpose specified in subparagraph (F), (J), (M), or (Q), as the case may be; (20) service (other than service described in paragraph (3)(A)) performed by an individual on a boat engaged in catching fish or other forms of aquatic animal life under an arrangement with the owner or operator of such boat pursuant to which - (A) such individual does not receive any cash remuneration other than as provided in subparagraph (B) and other than cash remuneration - (i) which does not exceed $100 per trip; (ii) which is contingent on a minimum catch; and (iii) which is paid solely for additional duties (such as mate, engineer, or cook) for which additional cash remuneration is traditional in the industry, (B) such individual receives a share of the boat's (or the boats' in the case of a fishing operation involving more than one boat) catch of fish or other forms of aquatic animal life or a share of the proceeds from the sale of such catch, and (C) the amount of such individual's share depends on the amount of the boat's (or the boats' in the case of a fishing operation involving more than one boat) catch of fish or other forms of aquatic animal life, but only if the operating crew of such boat (or each boat from which the individual receives a share in the case of a fishing operation involving more than one boat) is normally made up of fewer than 10 individuals; or (21) domestic service in a private home of the employer which - (A) is performed in any year by an individual under the age of 18 during any portion of such year; and (B) is not the principal occupation of such employee. For purposes of paragraph (20), the operating crew of a boat shall be treated as normally made up of fewer than 10 individuals if the average size of the operating crew on trips made during the preceding 4 calendar quarters consisted of fewer than 10 individuals."

The ridiculous, complex text of section 3121(b) leaves small wonder why Philadelphian, Orwellian type lawyers are able to spend their lifetimes arguing the federal tax code at the expense of "We the people."

It's no wonder they call it "code"….because like the lawyers in Congress and like the safes in most banks, you need to be a thief to crack it and thereby extract the truth! Doesn't this kind of ruse amount to a violation of the Sixth Amendment right to due process of law?

Isn't it one of the first and foremost principles of due process that the law must be written simply and clearly enough that the defendant can read and understand it himself/herself without the aid of a lawyer and thereby know what behavior is prohibited by the law? However, who but some judge or lawyer with four or more years of college and three years of law school and several years practicing law can understand the above? We believe the lawyers in Congress have deliberately used legalese to hide the truth and thereby create a new (upper) class of society and an order of "priests and priestcraft" (in this case witchcraft!) that is the only one within our society qualified or allowed by law to read and interpret the laws. This is how they stole our birthright, our freedoms, and have systematically violated our fundamental due process rights! This is how they have nullified the value of serving as a juror…by ensuring that people like you and I serving on jury duty can't read and understand the law for ourselves and have to rely on the judge, who is a government employee and has the government's best interests in mind whenever he rules on cases or advises jurors. Jesus warned about this kind of insidious "lawyer abuse" and evil at the beginning of chapter 3, where we quoted from Luke 11:52 in the Bible. We also talk about this in section 6.12, where we discuss the judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax.

It's time for Citizens everywhere to remove this kind of pernicious evil trash and the unscrupulous lawyers who peddle it from our society once and for all, starting with throwing out every one of the bastards in Congress every election until they start paying attention to this issue. We should communicate this intent to them consistently and repeatedly and prevalently until they simplify the laws to give us our right to due process back.

1. I suggest that every person reading this document forward a web pointer to it (by snail mail) to his or her two senators and representative in the Congress and ask if they understand this tax statute, viz., 3121(b).
2. Ask them to explain to you what it means - if they know what it means.
3. If they admit that they don't know what it means, ask them to please rewrite it and all other laws that they don't know the meaning of until they themselves - the legislators - know the meanings of the laws they vote on.

6.8.5 Congressional Propaganda and Lies

> "When Congress talks about simplification, taxpayers may well be reminded of Emerson's comments regarding an acquaintance, 'the louder he talked of his honor, the faster we counted our spoons'."
> [Michael J. Graetz]

Congressmen frequently get correspondence from constituents about the illegality of the income tax. In response to these requests, they commissioned the Congressional Research Service to prepare a report entitled "Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax", CRS Report number 97-59A. The report is 29 pages and you can buy a copy of it for yourself from http://pennyhill.com for $29.95. Another way you can get this report is to write you Congressman with a question or an issue about income taxes. Oftentimes, they will write a short, one-page letter and attach the report. This document was recently updated on May 7, 2001. It is filled with lies, obfuscation, and deception. We got a copy of it, scanned it in and converted it to text, and then proceeded to write a rebuttal as part of the document itself. The rebutted version is a whopping 75 pages, more than twice the size of the original report. You can read this document yourself at:

Rebutted Version of Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A: Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/CRS/CRS-97-59A-rebuts.pdf

We encourage you to download the complete version and look at it. We have posted it on the Taxes area of our website at:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/taxes.htm

under the Main heading of "False Government Propaganda With Rebuttal", and the subheading "Congressional Research Report 97-59A: Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax." Reading the rebutted version of this report is very enlightening in explaining how Congressmen like to deceive their constituents. It is also useful in preparing for a confrontation with the IRS, for instance, during a summons or deposition. We strongly encourage you to download and read this report, and to send it to your Congressman to ask him to rebut any part of it. You probably won't get an answer. It's just too hot to touch! 6.8.6 Whistleblower Retaliation, Indifference, and Censorship

6.8.6.1 We The People Truth In Taxation Hearing, February 27-28, 2002

On February 27 and 28, 2002, the We the People Foundation for Constitutional Education held a Truth In Taxation Hearing. The hearing was a result of a hunger strike staged back in July 2001 by its founder, Bob Schulz, who indicated that he would starve himself to death on the steps of the U.S. Capitol unless Congress would have the Department of Justice and the IRS appear in a public hearing to answer questions they were legally obligated to answer under the petition clause of the First Amendment. Congressman Roscoe Bartlett of Maryland came to the aid of Bob Schulz a couple weeks into the fast and by July 20, had negotiated an agreement in writing with the DOJ and IRS to appear to answer the questions proposed by Bob Schulz. The hearing would be scheduled for September 27, 2001.

Bob Schulz then went immediately off his fast and assembled a group of tax researchers to put together the questions he was going to ask. They met initially in Las Vegas in August 2001 to coordinate and organize their research into questions that could be asked. At least 40 of the top researchers from around the country appeared at that meeting. The group began assembling their evidence and questions and had a complete package. However, because of the terrorist attack on September 11, 2001, the hearings were postponed until February 27-28 at the request of Bob Schulz. Subsequent to the postponement, Congressman Bartlett was contacted in November 2001 by the DOJ and IRS and told that the DOJ and IRS would not be participating in the hearing rescheduled for 27-28 Feb. 2002. Congressman Bartlett did not relay this fact to Bob Schulz until late January 2002. Apparently, he was waiting for Bob to commit some kind of faux pas that would justify the government pulling out without losing face.

Bob Schulz then launched his campaign called "Operation Wait and File Until The Trial" on January 12, 2002, where he encouraged Americans to wait to file their tax returns until after the Truth in Taxation Hearing on 27-28 Feb. This, he believed, would put pressure on the government to appear at the hearings. He posted a flyer on his website about it and sent that article to his mailing list. The article included the flyer to be published in newspapers and a letter to be direct mailed to about 300,000 individuals. Then he mailed or faxed the flier to:

- Members of the American Judges Association
- Judges of The Federal Circuit
- Mayors of Largest U.S. Cities
- Federal Tax Court Judges
- Supreme Court Justices
- Radio Station General Managers
- Radio Talk Show Hosts
- 550 Partners of the Big Five Accounting Firms
- Executive Cabinet Members and Cabinet Legal Advisors
- Members of the Association of Copy Editors

Subsequently on January 17, 2002, Congressman Roscoe Bartlett notified Bob that the government had pulled out of the hearings. Congressman Roscoe Bartlett's assistant Lisa Wright stated that the Congressman was "canceling the forum," and that he was "dismayed" by the "rhetoric" of the "Wait to File" ad and that he would not be party to any movement that tells people not to pay their federal income taxes. This, of course, was not what Bob Schulz was advocating. He never told people not to PAY income taxes, only to delay filing their returns until after the hearing, which they were perfectly and legally entitled to do. Bob tried to reason with her, but it was late and she was in no mood to listen.

Bob then decided to go ahead with the hearing anyway. He invited several expert witnesses to appear as a substitute for the government's witnesses. Subsequently, on February 10, 2002, he put a full page add in the New York Times regarding a Constitutional Crisis. Here is an excerpt from the add off his website at http://www.givemeliberty.org:

_____(BEGINNING OF ADD)_____

IRS & Department of Justice: Why Won't You Answer Our Questions?

On July 20, 2001, IRS Commissioner Charles Rossotti and U.S. Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant formally agreed to have IRS and DOJ participate in a recorded, public hearing on Capitol Hill to officially answer questions under oath in response to a Petition For Redress Of Grievances from the American People. Our Citizen's Petition directly challenges:

- The jurisdiction and legal authority for the IRS
- The unlawful enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code against American citizens
- The pervasive abuse of the People's constitutional rights in the daily operations of the IRS

After agreeing in writing to publicly answer questions related to the unconstitutional origin of the IRS, and the devastating harm caused by the income tax system to the working men and women of our country, The Department of Justice and IRS on January 17, 2002, without explanation, canceled the hearing.

WE NOW HAVE A CONSTITUTIONAL CRISIS

What must a free People do when their government repeatedly refuses to honor its legal and moral obligation to respond to a proper Petition for Redress of Grievance as guaranteed by the 1st Amendment to the United States Constitution?

We ask the People: Is Alan Dershowitz Correct?

- We have NO unalienable rights?
- The Constitution is merely a piece of paper?
- Government should not be restrained because it can do good things for people? 9/27/00 debate at Franklin & Marshall

Can We The People simply accept that our Constitution has become a dead letter?

Must we resort to the same desperate measures that our Founders did to defend their unalienable rights to life, liberty and justice?

Do We Have a Constitution or Not?

For decades, the government has steadfastly refused to honor the petitions of a growing number of honorable, well-educated, professional legal researchers whose work has raised significant and legitimate questions about the Constitutional and statutory authority of the income tax system. These issues are of the utmost importance to the American People and to our Republic.

Our respectful petitions to our servant government have fallen on deaf ears, have been arbitrarily and unjustly thrown out of the courts, and have been used as grounds for criminal prosecution, asset seizure and other unlawful abuse by the IRS and DOJ.

Three years ago, We The People Foundation began a series of formal, public initiatives to convince the U.S. government to answer our questions regarding the jurisdiction and legal authority of the IRS and the personal income tax system. As the chronology of events outlined below demonstrates, we have worked diligently to show the American People the truth about the unconstitutional origin, abusive history and criminal conduct of the IRS, and the un-American nature of the personal income tax system.

Chronology of Evasion & Censorship

DATE	ACTIVITY	RESULT
July, 1999	Government is formally invited to a Foundation tax symposium in DC at National Press Club to publicly rebut and confront the tax and legal researchers.	• No response from U.S. • C-SPAN broadcasts the event live. Refuses all further WTP coverage.
Nov., 1999	Government invited to a Foundation tax symposium in DC at National Press Club.	• No response from U.S.
Apr., 2000	Government invited to a Foundation tax symposium in DC at National Press Club	• No response from U.S.
April, 2000	Formal Petition for Redress of Grievance delivered to President, House Speaker and Senate Majority leader. Petition is signed by thousands and is delivered to all 3 Branches by citizens from all 50 states.	In meetings in the White House and in the Capitol with senior aides to Clinton, Hastert and Lott, all three promise experts will attend the June 2000 conference at the NPC to discuss and debate the tax issues.
June, 2000	Government invited to Foundation tax symposium in DC at National Press Club	• U.S. breaks its promise. NO government officials attend. • Jason Furman, White House advises us "The legality of the income tax system is not a high priority for President Clinton. We will not attend."
July, 2000 through March, 2001	Foundation publishes the first of four full page ads in USA Today and the Washington Times to publicize the legal issues and questions and to publicly challenge the U.S. to answer the questions in a public forum.	• No response from U.S. • April 2001: USA Today refuses to accept any more advertising from the Foundation.
April, 2001	• U.S. Senate Finance Committee holds hastily called hearing on the full page ads, telling a room full of reporters that those who question the income tax laws have to be dealt with swiftly and harshly because they are "schemers, scammers and cons".	• Sen. Grassley refuses to allow the Foundation to testify at hearing on Foundation's ads because the Foundation's message ". . . would detract from the message the Committee was trying to convey." Grassley refuses to enter Foundation's written statement into the record of the hearing.
July, 2001	Bob Schulz begins hunger strike until his death or until government agrees to respond to the Petition for Redress of Grievances as required by the Constitution (1st Amendment)	• On July 20, 2001, after 20 days with no food, after White House intervention and help from Rep. Bartlett (MD), DOJ and IRS Formally agree to answer the questions in a recorded public hearing on Capitol Hill, chaired by Bartlett. • Schulz ends his fast.
Sept, 2001	Due to 9/11, the September truth-in-taxation hearing is rescheduled for February, 2002 on Capitol Hill. Meeting is formally announced by Rep. Roscoe Bartlett (MD), who agrees to sponsor the hearing.	• Nov. 2001, IRS & DOJ quietly inform Rep. Bartlett they will not participate. • On January, 17, 2002 Rep. Bartlett cancels the hearing.

The Hearing Will Proceed

The Truth-in-Taxation Hearing will proceed as scheduled on February 27 and 28 at the Washington Marriott in DC.

The Foundation has delivered to the IRS and DOJ, and also published, an initial set of 299 questions with a demand that government officials attend the public hearing and answer the questions. We The American People want to know whether we still have a Constitution that protects our unalienable rights to privacy, due process of law, equal justice and liberty for all.

_____(END OF ADD)_____

Bob Schulz then held the hearings and webcasted the event to 2,100 Americans throughout the country. There were about 100 people in the live audience as well. Although the mainstream media was informed of the event, only one representative, David Kay Johnston, appeared from the New York Times, and even he ducked out after the morning of the first day because he couldn't find anything to slander We The People with! There were two solid days of hearings, and representatives from around the country from various groups appeared in the audience, including J.A.I.L. For Judges, the Fully Informed Jury Association, the Libertarian party, and several other activists groups. The tax researcher group he had assembled had put together 540 questions to ask the government. 440 of these questions were asked at the hearings, which included about 130 questions assembled by the author relating to the Fourth Amendment and the First Amendment. All of the questions and the evidence used at the hearings and those that were not asked are posted on our website at:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Deposition.htm

Each question included the evidence to back it up, and as each question was asked, the evidence was displayed on two large projection panels on either side of the meeting room. The evidence and complete text of the questions were also made available via the live webcast to the large audience so they could browse and examine it for themselves in digital form. It was a watershed and unprecedented event. Bob Schulz and the author, Family Guardian Fellowship, took turns asking the questions of a panel of various experts. These questions and the answers provided by experts stunned the audience and provided irrefutable proof of government fraud, extortion, and conspiracy to deprive sovereign Americans of their rights. Among the experts testifying included (some names not listed):

- Paul Rooney, a tax attorney with over 30 years' experience and who served as a U.S. Tax Court clerk for several years before going into private practice.
- Bill Benson, the person who investigated the Sixteenth Amendment and gathered overwhelming evidence supporting the conclusion that it was fraudulently ratified by a lame duck Secretary of State, Philander Knox. (http://www.thelawthatneverwas.com/)
- Joe Banister, X IRS agent from the IRS' Criminal Investigation Division (CID), who served there 5 years before resigning after finding out the truth (http://www.freedomabovefortune.com/).
- John Turner, former IRS Collection agent with 8 years experience.
- Sherry Jackson, former IRS Examiner with three years experience.
- Irwin Schiff, America's most famous de-taxing expert. (http://www.paynoincometax.com/)
- Larry Becraft, famous patriot Constitutional Attorney. (http://fly.hiwaay.net/~becraft/)
- Noel Spade, San Diego tax attorney.
- Vicky Osborne, a forensic CPA who had uncovered evidence of massive fraud in the administration of taxpayer IMF files

Subsequent to the event in March 2002, the IRS delivered a threatening CP-518 notice (Willful Failure to File) to the person who had handled the webcasting of the event, who shall remain nameless to protect his identity. This person was responsible for making the videotapes and CD's containing the evidence available for sale to the public. Apparently, they were trying to get some legal leverage on that person so they could blackmail him to suppress the release of the questions and evidence. Can you believe the kind of games the government played to suppress the truth from being heard?!

6.8.6.2 We The People Efforts: April 5, 2001 Senate Finance Committee Hearing

During the month of March 2001, We The People Foundation (http://www.givemeliberty.org/), a tax freedom and liberty advocacy, placed full page anti-income-tax adds in the USA Today Newspaper on March 2, and March 23, of 2001. The March 2, 2001 add featured a pointer to this book on our website. It talked about five employers who had stopped withholding federal income taxes from the pay of their employees. The March 23, 2001 add featured information about how income taxes violated the constitution. Subsequent to these adds, 60 Minutes (CBS) decided to do a story on the anti-income tax movement on April 3, 2001, and featured a 20 minute segment on the activities of the employers featured in the March 2, 2001 add. The story was rather skewed, because they put a lot of credible people on the show from the opposing side, but wouldn't let spokespeople from We The People talk. They opened the story with a picture of a We The People meeting and even showed a picture of the We The People add, but didn't allow anyone from We The People to talk.

Shortly after the 60 Minutes story, our website started going crazy. In the following two days, we had about 500 downloads of this book. Then the U.S. Senate Finance Committee announced that it was going to have a hearing on April 5, 2001 at 10am. The subject of the hearing was "Tax Scams". We The People was one of the organizations they were going to talk about, and yet they denied a request by that organization to speak at the session! Bob Schulz, the leader of We The People, had the following to say about this situation:

> A New York Times reporter, David Cay Johnston, telephoned us after 5 p.m. on Friday, March 30, 2001, to inform us of the fact that the Senate Finance Committee has scheduled a formal hearing for 10 a.m. on Thursday, April 5, 2001. Mr. Johnston said the subject of the hearing would be the full-page ads we have published in USA TODAY and that the Committee intended to have the ads on display during the hearing. Johnston said that our side of the story needs to be told, that we should try to get on the witness list and that all the major media outlets would attend any press conference we were to hold in the hallway outside the hearing room, if we were not allowed to testify before the Committee.
> Early Monday morning, April 2, 2001, we telephoned the Senate Finance Committee to request that we be added to the witness list. We were told that the witness list was closed before the Committee scheduled and publicly announced the hearing, but that we could fax a letter to the Committee Chairman to request that we be added to the list.
> On Monday morning we faxed our letter to Senator Grassley, requesting to be added to the witness list.
>
> Late Monday afternoon we received by fax a letter from Senator Grassley which reads: "Dear Mr. Schulz: Thank you for your letter requesting to be added to the witness list for the Senate Finance Committee Hearing on April 5, 2001. We will be unable to add you to our witness list. However, should your organization chose to submit a written statement regarding our hearing, 'Taxpayer Beware: Schemes, Scams and Fraud,' we will consider including it in the hearing record. Sincerely, Charles E. Grassley, Chairman Senate Finance Committee."
> It seems incongruous that the Senate would hold a hearing featuring our full-page ads and not invite us to testify. They apparently have a message that they want to convey, which is inapposite to our message. They apparently want to divert attention away from questions of whether the IRS is collecting taxes without legal authority by trying to portray those who raise such questions as scammers. In fact, those in the tax honesty movement see the IRS as the scammers! The question is not who is putting their money in an offshore trust, or who is not filing their tax return or which employers have stopped withholding from the paychecks of their employees. The primary question is: "What legal authority requires most Americans to file an income tax return and pay the income tax? There ought to be a moratorium on the IRS' enforcement activities, and all those people who are sitting in prison for not paying the income tax should be released, pending the determination of this fundamental question.
> Our government leaders apparently want to label anyone and everyone, including this Foundation, who are questioning the legal authority of the IRS to collect the individual income tax as schemers, scammers and frauds, while they continue to conduct their tax enforcement activities as usual, without addressing the compelling allegations of fraud and the illegal operations of the income tax system and without justifying their behavior.
> We have decided that we will hold a press conference in the hallway outside the Senate hearing room at 9:30 a.m. on Thursday. We will have press kits available which will include copies of letters inviting Commissioner Rossotti and the leaders of the executive and legislative branches of the government to identify their most knowledgeable people and have them participate with the experts in the tax honesty movement in the four symposiums and conferences we sponsored at the National Press Club to debate and discuss the issues. We will highlight the major allegations regarding the fraudulent ratification of the 16th Amendment, the demonstrable lack of evidence of any law that requires most citizens to file or pay the income tax, and the problems relating to routine violations by the IRS of the People's rights under the 4th, 5th, 6th and 13th Amendments in their day-to-day administrative procedures. We will point out that the government chose to evade the public forums and chose not to even acknowledge receipt of the invitations! We will also include a copy of the video tape of the April 13, 2000 meetings in the White House and in the Capitol with President Clinton's economic advisor Jason Furman, Speaker Hastert's policy advisor, Dr. William Koetzle and the Senate Majority Leader's policy director, Keith Hennessey. The tape shows these gentlemen meeting with Joe Banister and Bob Schulz and accepting a REMONSTRANCE for Clinton, Hastert and Lott. The tapes also show these men promising to have their experts review the research reports authored by Bill Benson, Joe Banister and William Conklin and to participate in our fourth attempt to get the two sides to meet on June 29, 2000, in a public forum, to debate the allegations of the fraudulent and illegal operations of the income tax system -- promises which were broken on June 2, 2000, when Jason Furman told Schulz; "The legality of the income tax is not a high priority matter for the White House and we will not be participating in any conference on the subject." The press kits will also include a copy of each ad we decided to publish in the wake of the government's reversal of its decision to review and then meet to discuss the research reports by Benson, Banister and Conklin.
> Our message will be a simple one: We want the government to answer the serious questions that have been raised by numerous tax researchers who say that the IRS is collecting the individual income tax without legal authority and that the IRS operates illegally when it tries to force citizens to pay taxes they do not owe. Instead of the Senate and House encouraging the IRS to increase enforcement of laws that apparently do not exist, wouldn't it be easier and better for them to have their experts meet with the tax researchers in a public forum, show them where they are wrong, embarrass them, and put it all to rest? Why is the government so averse to doing so? Are they worried that they can't show the researchers to be in error? When does evasion become admission?

The government's dual actions of evading the public discussion of the issues while strengthening its steel-fisted, heavy-handed enforcement campaign of fear and terror only serves to strengthen the resolve and determination of a People who see themselves as free and sovereign, and who see all of government limited by a written constitution.

6.8.6.3 Cover-Up of Jan. 20, 2002: Congress/DOJ/IRS/ Renege on a Written Agreement to Hold a Truth in Taxation Hearing with We The People Under First Amendment

The We the People foundation (http://www.givemeliberty.org/), which was founded to fight government corruption, has been protesting the federal income tax for years. During July 2001, the leader of that organization, Bob Schulz, went on a 21 day hunger strike, telling the press and the government that he would die of starvation if the government would not grant him a hearing under the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution to Petition the U.S. Government for Redress of Grievances related to the illegal enforcement of the federal income tax. On July 20, 2001, Congressman Rosco Bartlett negotiated a signed written agreement between the Department of Justice, the IRS, and Mr. Schulz to hold the requested hearing to address his concerns and questions. Prior to signing the written agreement, the DOJ and IRS insisted that the hearings be private (do you smell a cover-up here?), but Mr. Schulz said that this was a public matter of great concern to millions of Americans and that it must be open and the press must also be able to attend. The press was also invited. The hearing were to be in late Sept. 2001, but the terrorist attacks disrupted the meeting and it was postponed until Feb. 27, 2002 by Mr. Schulz.

Subsequent to the new hearing being scheduled, on January 20, 2002, Mr. Schulz launched a media campaign called "Wait and File Until the Trial", informing Americans that they should wait to file their tax returns until the Truth in Taxation hearing was over, because the income tax was on trial. He mailed out hundreds of thousands of fliers and emails to federal judges, congressmen, the IRS, and citizens. Immediately after the fliers went out, our website went crazy and we had five times the normal daily volume we usually have. Immediately after the start of the "Wait and File Until the Trial" campaign, Roscoe Bartlett cancelled the hearings, saying that he could not sponsor or support them because they were "encouraging Americans to not pay their income taxes", which was clearly not the case, as explained in Mr. Schulz' letter shown below. Later investigation by We the People revealed that in Nov. 2001, the IRS and DOJ both told Congressman Bartlett that they would not attend the hearings ever. Congressman Bartlett withheld this information, hoping that Bob Schulz would unilaterally cancel the hearings himself or commit a political faux pas that would eliminate the need to have them. When the Wait and File campaign started in earnest, Congressman Bartlett apparently thought he had enough excuse to terminate the meeting, but as Mr. Schulz' letter clearly explains, he was not justified in doing so and the comments about the Wait and File campaign were really just more deceptive and fraudulent government propaganda to discredit Mr. Schulz and further expand the government cover-up of the illegal operations of the IRS. Read the letter yourself below for enlightening information. Keep in mind that all Mr. Schulz has ever expected was for the government to honor his Constitutional, First Amendment right to a Petition for Redress of Grievance with the federal government.

Hon. Roscoe G. Bartlett
Member of Congress
2412 Rayburn Building
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Congressman Bartlett:

On behalf of myself and the We The People Foundation for Constitutional Education, I want to thank you for all that you have done to support the People's Petition for Redress of our grievances related to the fraudulent origin of the IRS and unlawful operations of the income tax system. I thank you for your wisdom, your courage and your independence. Your steadfast and heroic efforts in defense of the American People's guaranteed constitutional right to have our government answer this historic petition are deeply appreciated by all of us who placed our trust in your integrity and leadership.

I know that you have tried your best in our behalf, and for that I am most thankful. I continue to hold you in high esteem. No matter what the future may hold, I will always remember your courageous defense of our Constitution.

Neither of us has shared with the general public the details of your actions and what happened behind the scenes in the days leading up to July 20, 2001. This was the day Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant and IRS Commissioner Rossotti, as a result of your personal intervention and persuasion, contracted with the American people to have experts from their departments appear in a recorded, congressional-style, public meeting to answer the people's questions regarding the federal income tax system.

We also have not shared with the public the details of what has been happening behind the scenes since July 20, 2001. Under the present circumstances, it is appropriate that these details be made available to the American people. Following is a chronology of the facts related to our Petition for Redress of Grievances.

- On June 11, 2001, I personally delivered a letter to President Bush at the White House. Copies of the letter were also hand-delivered to Speaker of the House Hastert and Senate Majority Leader Daschle at the Capitol. The letter recited the numerous requests made by We The People Foundation For Constitutional Education to the Executive and Legislative Branches since May 1999 to answer our Petition For Redress of Grievances related to the income tax system. The letter also provided a factual account of the government's evasive and unresponsive behavior, which ultimately led to my decision to embark on a hunger strike until either I died or the federal government agreed to meet in a public forum to answer the people's questions regarding the fraudulent origin of the IRS and the unlawful operations of the income tax system.

- On July 1, 2001, I delivered a follow-up letter to President Bush, with copies to Speaker Hastert and Senator Daschle.

- On July 18, 2001, Lawrence B. Lindsey, Assistant to the President for Economic Policy and head of the National Economic Council, sent a letter to me which read, "The President has asked me to thank you for your letters of June 11 and July 1 regarding the income tax system. I understand your concerns and the arguments you make. Your letter of June 11 outlines extensively the concerns of the We The People Foundation for Constitutional Education, Inc. with regard to the efficacy of the current income tax system. While I believe the best way to address your concerns is through the court system, I have taken the liberty of sharing your letters with the Internal Revenue Service for their review. A more substantive response will be forthcoming from this office once the IRS has had the opportunity to assess your grievances. I would be remiss if I did not suggest that you end your fast. Whether or not federal tax experts attend a meeting your organization has scheduled for September 18 will be determined based upon their substantive assessment of your arguments. While your personal commitment to the cause of tax reform is dramatic, I hope that you will not endanger yourself physically in this cause. Please be assured that your letters will receive careful attention at the IRS.

Note: In reviewing my file and the events of last summer, I must now assume that when Commissioner Rossotti spoke with you by telephone on July 19th, and agreed to have his experts meet with our experts in a recorded public forum to answer our questions, he was responding to Mr. Lindsey's directive.

- On July 9, 2001, I delivered an updated version of the People's Petition for Redress of Grievances to one of President Bush's aides at the White House. I also met with you and three members of your staff, where we first discussed the issues related to the fraudulent origin and unlawful operations of the IRS, and you made the decision to help the American People in their quest for a response to this historic Petition.

- On July 17, 2001, you held a press conference on the House Triangle to announce the fact that you had placed top priority on getting the appropriate people in the government to agree to respond to our Petition. Rep. Ron Paul also strongly supported the fundamental right to be answered.

- It is now known that between July 9th and July 18th, 2001, management level personnel at DOJ and IRS were steadfast in their refusal to have their experts meet with representatives of the American People in a recorded public forum. For instance, Floyd Williams, the IRS Director of the Office of Congressional Affairs, stated the IRS would only agree to a private, unrecorded meeting between myself and the IRS Chief Counsel. Karen Wilson (Mr. Williams' counterpart at DOJ) suggested we submit our questions to DOJ and IRS in writing and wait for a response. She said she was otherwise in support of IRS' proposal for a private, unrecorded meeting. You replied that the proposal for a private, unrecorded meeting was totally unacceptable and that the questions had to be answered in a public forum. You emphasized the importance of allowing the public to see and hear the people asking the questions and those answering them. You strongly and effectively argued that to submit the questions in writing to DOJ and IRS would allow for delay, obfuscation and confusion, and would bring to ruin what you considered to be a proper, Constitutional Petition For a Redress of Grievances.

- From July 18th through July 20th you negotiated on the People's behalf, by telephone, with IRS Commissioner Rossotti and with DOJ's Assistant Attorney General Daniel Bryant. They expressed concerns about the security of a public meeting and wanted to know who would be "on the gavel" to control the meeting and keep it professional and orderly. After speaking with me about their concerns, you contacted Dan Bryant and Charles Rossotti and offered to hold the meeting on Capitol Hill and to personally gavel the meeting if Henry Hyde was not available.

- On or about July 19th, in a telephone conversation between you and Commissioner Rossotti, Rossotti agreed to have his experts participate in a recorded, public, congressional-style hearing on Capitol Hill, with appropriate controls. You telephoned me and asked to see me in your office. When I arrived, you told me of Commissioner Rossotti's agreement.

- On July 20th, Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant also agreed, but told you he needed a formal request from you. He asked that you put your request for the meeting in writing. You telephoned me and asked to see me in your office. When I arrived, you prepared a hand-written letter to Dan Bryant. You then telephoned Mr. Bryant to tell him you had the formal request in hand and asked how soon he could meet with us. Bryant said he would see us right away in his office at the Department of Justice building. We met with Dan Bryant that afternoon. We fully discussed our written Petition for Redress of Grievances (he had previously received a copy of the Petition that was hand-delivered to the White House on April 13, 2000 and again on July 9, 2001). We also reviewed the terms and conditions of your offer to preside over the proposed congressional-style hearing on Capitol Hill. He penned a note at the bottom of your written request, agreeing to "do everything within my power to ensure that the Dept. of Justice will provide appropriate representatives to participate in a congressional briefing hosted by Congressman Bartlett in connection with the above referenced matter." Roland Croteau and Burr Deitz (a Director of the WTP Foundation) were also in attendance.

- Later that day, Friday, July 20, 2001, my office issued a press release and posted it on our web site, announcing the details of the agreement. Apparently, the news quickly found its way around the Internet.

- Between Friday, July 20th and Monday, July 23rd, as I would later learn from you, Dan Bryant apparently received a phone call or two from "higher ups," protesting his July 20th commitment to have DOJ answer our questions in a public forum.

- On July 23, 2001, I received an e-mail from your aide, Lisa Wright, which read: {"Congressman Bartlett asked me to contact you to inform you must take URGENT action in order to preserve the agreement as a result of your 7/20 meeting with Dan Bryant at USDOJ.1) Immediately pull down from the website the previous presentation of the meeting that begins with the subject – "The fast is over". 2) Replace it with a corrected version ASAP and distribute this to your list. Reference to Bryant must be limited explicitly to quoting only his handwritten comments. "I will do everything within my power. . ."Reference to Hyde -- that he will be invited -- NOT EXPECTED. Reference to a date -- to be determined, hopefully in mid to late September. 3) You must call Dan Bryant ASAP and apologize for the inaccuracies in the e-mail. This is his personal number -- 202-514-2141."}

  NOTE: On or about July 25th, I placed a call to Dan Bryant. He did not return the call.
- On July 30th, I issued a revised press release and posted it on our web site.
- On July 30th Lisa Wright of your office sent an e-mail to Dan Bryant at DOJ and Floyd Williams at IRS. It read: "Mr. Bryant and Mr. Williams: Attached is a 7/30/01 news release from We the People Foundation for Constitutional Education which follows up a meeting Congressman Bartlett had on July 20 at DOJ w/ Asst. Atty. Gen. Dan Bryant and Bob Schulz concerning Mr. Schulz's Petition for Redress concerning the tax code and IRS enforcement of the tax code. Congressman Bartlett personally affirmed that this release is an accurate reflection of the July 20 meeting. Congressman Bartlett discussed the request for a public forum at which appropriate IRS representatives would participate in an earlier meeting with Floyd Williams of IRS and Karen Wilson of DOJ and subsequently in a phone conversation with IRS Commissioner Rossotti. Congressman Bartlett hopes that DOJ and IRS officials will contact Mr. Schulz directly concerning coordinating and ironing out the details for the public forum on Capitol Hill. Please feel free to contact Congressman Bartlett if you have any questions and so that we may procure the necessary space for the meeting."
- On July 30th Lisa Wright forwarded to me a message from IRS' Floyd Williams. It read: "Treasury/IRS has not agreed (either verbally or in writing) to participate in a public forum with Bob Schulz."
- On August 13, 2001, Tax Notes published an article under the heading, "Backroom Deals, Fleeting Promises Put Income Tax Hearing in Jeopardy," by Warren Rojas. In the article, IRS spokesman Frank Keith is quoted as saying, "As of right now, no final agreements have been made."
- On August 29, 2001, your office issued the following statement; "Congressman Bartlett is continuing to actively pursue and secure participation by representatives of both the Department of Justice and the Internal Revenue Service at the September 25-26 forum organized by We the People," said Lisa Wright, a spokesman for Congressman Roscoe Bartlett. "He expects Dan Bryant, Assistant Attorney General for the Office of Legislative Affairs at the Department of Justice, and IRS Chairman Charles Rossotti to fulfill their personal commitments to him."(my emphasis).

- In early September, I met in your office with you and three of your aides, including Sallie Taylor and Lisa Wright. You said DOJ and IRS were trying to "wiggle off the hook" and that Sallie and Lisa had an "alternative proposal." Sallie and Lisa proceeded to describe their alternative proposal, which, instead of having the agree-upon public forum, would have me submit the Peoples' questions to you in writing. You would then post the questions on your web site and send them to DOJ and IRS for an answer. The answers would also be posted on your web site. I told Sallie and Lisa that their proposal was unacceptable to me and that you had already argued with DOJ and IRS (successfully) the futility of such an approach. Upon hearing my response you turned to an aide and asked him to call Dick Armey, the House Majority Leader, to request an immediate meeting with him. We were told to proceed to Mr. Armey's office. You, I, Sallie Taylor, and another of your aides (I don't remember his name) met with Dick Armey and one of his aides, who took extensive notes during the meeting. You told Mr. Armey that DOJ and IRS were trying to wiggle off the hook and break their commitment to answer the People's questions in a public forum. Mr. Armey said it was important to have the hearing proceed as planned and that DOJ and IRS had to be "locked down." Armey said the way to do that would be to show DOJ and IRS that they were running the risk of offending many more Congressman than you if they broke their commitment. Mr. Armey then suggested that you prepare a letter to Attorney General Ashcroft and to Treasury Secretary O'Neil, which would thank them for their commitment to have the appropriate personnel from their departments participate in the income tax hearing and which would be signed by numerous members of the House of Representatives. Mr. Armey and you discussed a list of House members that both of you believed would sign the letter.

- On September 12, 2001, I communicated my request to you that the tax hearing be postponed due to the events of September 11th. I posted that message on our web site.
- On October 12, 2001, you delivered a letter and video message to me in which you announced that the event had been rescheduled for February 27 and 28, 2002. Your letter stated "A letter of support and confirmation signed by myself and other members of Congress has been drafted, circulated, and will be sent to officials at the Department of Justice, Treasury and the IRS, informing them of the dates and times and requiring their attendance. I will personally chair the event and have invited other members of Congress to attend and sit on the panel…You have my word as an elected member of the United States Congress that I will do all within my power that this event go forward, the IRS and DOJ attend as they have promised to do, and are compelled to do by the Constitution."(My emphasis).
- On January 7, 2002, Tax Notes published an article under the heading, "Schulz Hopes to Bury Tax Code at February Hearing," by Warren Rojas. In the article, Mr. Rojas wrote, "While the IRS has yet to officially confirm or deny its participation in the hearing, a Bartlett press aide acknowledged receiving a letter from Justice around Thanksgiving stating plainly that the DOJ would not attend any Schulz-related events." (my emphasis). Note: I was never told about the "Thanksgiving letter." This was the first time any of the three government officials who were parties to the July 20th contract with the American People had put in writing that they were reneging on their agreement.
- On or about January 8, 2002, I telephoned Lisa Wright to tell her that I had read the Tax Notes article and was very concerned about the Thanksgiving letter from DOJ which informed you that DOJ would not attend the income tax hearing. I called to inform Ms. Wright that it was my intention to bring the February hearing to the attention of tens of millions of Americans, and ask them to wait to file their tax returns until they heard all of the questions and answers at the February hearing. I felt it was now time, as Mr. Armey had previously suggested, to do all I could to "lock the DOJ and IRS down" and demand that they keep their commitment to the American People. It was time to demand that they respond to our questions regarding the fraudulent origin of the IRS and the unlawful operation of the personal income tax system. I informed Ms. Wright that many thousands of Americans were already aware of the February hearing and were waiting for the answers to the questions before deciding how to file their tax returns. I explained that if DOJ and IRS were going to renege on their commitments, they were going to have to answer to a very large number of Americans. My call was passed through to Lisa's voice message system where I left a message. I asked her to call me.
- On January 11, 2002, Lisa returned my call. We discussed "Operation Wait to File Until the Trial." After we completed the call Lisa called back to say that if your name was mentioned in the "Wait to File" flyer/ad, she would like to approve the wording. I told her your name, together with those of Dan Bryant and IRS Commissioner Rossotti were mentioned in the first paragraph, which I then read to her. She said my use of the phrase "public hearing" was wrong, that the word "hearing" had a technical meaning on the Hill and that I should use the phrase "public forum." She also said that you did not have the power to force DOJ and IRS to attend the meeting. I replied that I understood that you had no more power at that time than you did on July 20, 2001, when you merely requested that Commissioner Rossotti and Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant have appropriate personnel from their departments participate in the "public, recorded congressional-style briefing- hearing" on Capitol Hill to answer questions "concerning the legal jurisdiction and authority of the IRS." At the July 20 meeting both Mr. Rossotti and Mr. Bryant agreed to your request and formally entered into a contract with the American people to have their "appropriate representatives participate in a congressional briefing hosted by Congressman Bartlett."
- On January 12, 2002, in response to Lisa's one concern, I changed the phrase "public hearing" in the first paragraph of the Wait to File flyer/ad to "congressional-style hearing". We then launched "Operation Wait to File Until the Trial" by posting an article on our web site and by sending that article to our mailing list. The article included the flyer to be published in newspapers and a letter to be direct mailed to about 300,000 individuals.
- On Monday, January 14th I was in Milwaukee working with one of our attorneys on the questions for the hearing. I received word that Lisa had called my office and asked me to return the call. I tried several times on Monday and Tuesday to reach her by phone. I left voice messages on her machine, informing her that I would be returning to my office that afternoon at approximately 3 p.m. While en route from Milwaukee to Albany on Tuesday, January 15th I tried unsuccessfully to reach you by phone. I did manage to speak to Sallie Taylor. I told her to let Lisa and you know that I would be back in my office at 3 p.m. should either of you need to speak to me. I would not hear from anyone in your office until 8:20 p.m. Thursday evening, January 17th.

- On Monday, January 14th, Kim Herb, Legislative Assistant to Congressman John Linder sent an e-mail to "District Directors" which read,

  "Recently, it has been stated that there will be a Congressional hearing on the IRS. I wanted to dispel this rumor. There will be NO hearing. I repeat, there will be no Congressional hearing on the IRS in February. In response to a hunger strike by Mr. Robert Schulz, Congressman Roscoe Bartlett agreed to facilitate a meeting on IRS and tax topics. Accordingly, Mr. Bartlett arranged for "We the People" to have a public forum on the IRS, at which time "We the People" will debate such questions as the legality of the Sixteenth Amendment and the ratification process. However, no officials from the IRS or Justice Department will attend. Again, for emphasis, NO officials from either the IRS or Justice Department will be in attendance. The administration believes that these questions have been sufficiently addressed, and there is a fair amount of judicial precedence on this issue to confirm that assertion. Congressman Bartlett will likely give an opening statement, however, I understand that his comments will be limited to acknowledging that the "We the People" organization has a right to free speech and to voice their opinion. I recognize and support the Bush Administration's position. We have no interest in pursuing the ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment as a viable and legitimate argument in the fundamental tax reform movement. As such, I do not anticipate that Congressman Linder, as the official sponsor of the FairTax, will have any role in the February public forum organized by "We the People."

- At 3 p.m. Thursday, January 17th, as part of Operation Wait to File Until the Trial, I delivered several thousand letters and flyers to the personal fax machines of the following individuals:

  - Members of the American Judges Association
  - Judges of The Federal Circuit
  - Mayors of Largest U.S. Cities
  - Federal Tax Court Judges
  - Supreme Court Justices
  - Radio Station General Managers
  - Radio Talk Show Hosts
  - 550 Partners of the Big Five Accounting Firms
  - Executive Cabinet Members and Cabinet Legal Advisors
  - Members of the Association of Copy Editors

- At 8:20 p.m. on Thursday, January 17th I received a call from Lisa Wright. She stated that she had just forwarded via FedEx your letter informing me that you were "canceling the forum," and that you were "dismayed" by the "rhetoric" of the "Wait to File" ad and that you would not be party to any movement that tells people not to pay their federal income taxes. I tried to reason with her, but it was late and she was in no mood to listen.

I hope that you can understand how very disappointed I am with your actions. From the beginning of our discussions, I expected you to encounter great difficulty in holding both Mr. Rossotti and Mr. Bryant to their word regarding the February hearing. At this point, it is clear that neither DOJ nor IRS ever intended to keep their commitment to you or the American People. Their refusal to answer these substantive questions regarding the fraudulent origin of the IRS and unlawful operation of the income tax system demonstrates the federal government's pervasive and arrogant disregard for the constitutional rights of the American People. It is now clear, that on July 20, 2001, their objective was to stop the hunger strike and temporarily mollify the outrage of thousands of Americans who were demanding that our government agree to publicly answer the People's Petition For Redress of Grievances.

However, I shared your faith in our Constitution and your belief that at the top of our government were trustworthy men and women of moral integrity. Like you, I believed that no matter the practical difficulty, there were enough people of honor at the highest levels of our government, that the People's Constitutional Petition For Redress of Grievances would be heard. I did not believe that those who we have trusted to lead our country would turn their backs on the American People, disregard our Constitution and Bill of Rights, and hold in such low esteem the personal liberty so many of our countrymen have sacrificed and died to defend over the past 225 years. I believed that our highest government officials would honor their oaths of office to defend the United States Constitution, and its guarantee of every American's right to petition our government for a redress of grievances.

Congressman Bartlett, I wish you had told me sooner about the Thanksgiving letter from DOJ, and your apparent decision (if Kim Herb is to be believed) to merely give an opening statement at the February hearing, "limited to acknowledging that the 'We the People' organization has a right to free speech and to voice their opinion." I wish that you had told me then that our Petition was not going to be publicly and officially answered by the government.

You say in your letter to me dated January 17 that the newspaper ad is "misleading" and "has made it impossible for the forum to take place because the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and the Department of Justice (DOJ) will not participate."

This is most offensive to me. There was no need to misrepresent the facts. As the paragraphs above demonstrate, the ad had nothing to do with the reluctance of DOJ and IRS to participate in the February income tax hearing. We now know that their decision not to participate was put in writing to you last Thanksgiving, nearly two months before the "Wait to File" campaign idea occurred to us. In fact, the Wait to File campaign is a direct result of learning from the January 7th edition of Tax Notes that you had received DOJ's Thanksgiving letter of withdrawal.

In your press release you say, "I will not be a party to advocating the non-payment of federal income taxes." This statement is also highly offensive, for it is nothing more than an unjustifiable, aggressive attack on my reputation and character. Your statement is also a misrepresentation of the facts and reflects a deliberate attempt to paint me and the Foundation as irresponsible law-breakers. In fact, the ad does not advocate the non-payment of federal income taxes. It suggests people do what the law allows them to do-- wait until February 27th to file their tax returns.

Neither I nor the Foundation have ever advocated, supported or encouraged anyone not to pay a tax they lawfully owe or not to file any tax return documents they are required by law to file. Ever. As we both know, the purpose of these important hearings is to have the government show us the law so that all Americans may be guided by specific requirements for filing.

In your letter and press release you say that you "remain[s] committed to ensuring the right of Bob Schulz and other citizens to exercise their constitutional rights under the First Amendment to get answers about federal tax policy from the government," and you propose, as an alternative to the public forum, that you deliver our questions to DOJ and IRS and that you post our questions and the answers on your web site. In fact, as you yourself argued so effectively last July, this would be tantamount to our agreeing not to have our questions answered. To use your own words, this approach "would allow for delay, obfuscation, confusion and to otherwise bring to ruin" what we have so patiently, intelligently, professionally and rationally developed into a proper petition for a remedy of the people's grievances.

I now fear for the future of our Constitutional Republic. A constitutional crisis has now developed. Whether we have a written Constitution that protects our unalienable rights as Americans is now a question. Whether the Constitution is any more than a piece of paper is now a question. Whether we have a federal government limited by a Constitution and Bill of Rights is now a question.

Here is what I have decided must now be done in response to the decision by DOJ and IRS not to participate in the public, recorded truth-in-taxation hearing on February 27-28, and also your decision last Thursday to withdraw your commitment to support this public forum.

First: Last week I spoke to your aide, Sallie Taylor, to request a meeting with you as soon as possible. She said your calendar would not allow such a meeting before Wednesday, January 23rd, and that she would have to speak with you to see if that is what you wanted to do. My purpose is to respectfully request that you reconsider your decision to cancel the February meeting.

Second: We plan to proceed with a recorded, public forum on February 27 and 28 in Washington DC. Because of the importance of this issue to the American People, we hope that you will decide to help us hold this event as planned in the secure location of the Science and Technology Committee Hearing Room. However, in the alternative, we have booked the Marriott Hotel for the two days.

Third: I am attaching to this letter our initial set of questions relating to the fraudulent origin of the IRS and the unlawful operation of the income tax system. These are the preliminary questions that we intend to present to the IRS and DOJ at the February meeting. We are releasing these questions several weeks earlier than planned. We have a number of additional questions currently being prepared that will be released upon completion. By copy of this letter to Attorney General Ashcroft, Treasury Secretary O'Neil and Mr. Lawrence B. Lindsey, we are demanding that experts from DOJ and IRS be present on February 27 and 28 to answer the questions in a public forum. As you previously stated, the written exchange of questions and answers with DOJ and IRS would be utterly futile.

Fourth: We are posting the questions on our web site along with an invitation for all learned persons to answer these questions and participate in the February 27 and 28 hearing. We will request that interested parties contact us by e-mail using a prepared form.

Fifth: We will extend an invitation to the February 27 and 28 event to every organization, large or small, that is concerned about the protection, preservation and enhancement of human liberty in America, and that is interested in limiting the size, scope and costs of the federal government to the enumerated powers of the Constitution.

It is now imperative to summon all patriots in this cause for liberty and justice. It is time to ask all right thinking Americans to stand united and put a collective foot down against this arrogant disregard for our liberties, rights and freedoms, whether it be an erosion of our right to petition the government for a redress of grievances, our right to privacy, our right to property, our right to firearms, our right to fully-informed juries, our right to honest representation and voting, our right to a truly independent judiciary, our freedom from the influence of the "same hands" in all three branches, our right to honest checks and balances, our right to the fruits of our labor, our right not to have the government waste the fruits of our labor under the pretense of caring for us, our right to laws that do not favor public over private education, our right to home school our children, our right to have the war powers clauses adhered to, our right to have all treaties approved by the Senate, et al.

If the DOJ and the IRS do attend the event and provide honest, forthright answers to the people's questions relating to the authority of the IRS to force employers to withhold the income tax from the paychecks of their employees and to force most Americans to file a tax return and to pay the tax, we believe the probable outcome will be a more limited federal government, a cleansing of our political system and a restoration of power to the states and the people.

Sixth: We are calling on all patriotic Americans to help reveal the truth regarding the true limits to the federal taxing powers by standing up for our Country and its founding principles. In light of the decision by DOJ and IRS to ignore the People's fundamental, Constitutional right to petition our government for a redress of these grievances, we are respectfully requesting all Americans to:

1) Demand that the IRS and DOJ attend the February hearing and publicly answer the questions, as they committed to do last July.
2) Wait to file their tax returns at least until February 27th.If IRS and DOJ fail to appear at the citizens' hearing to answer the People's questions, we will then respectfully request every American citizen and business to defer filing of their tax returns and suspend employee withholding. The American People should not be obligated to pay a tax that the federal government will not, and cannot, publicly defend on lawful or moral grounds.
3) Stand together on the mall in Washington DC on Sunday, ~~March 31~~ April 14, 2002, and peacefully protest the unlawful income tax by filing their blank 1040 forms in metal waste drums.

Congressman Bartlett, do we still have a written Constitution in America? Do we still have a Bill of Rights? Do those documents still memorialize in writing what we believe most deeply in our hearts as Americans? Or have they become mere abstract concepts that have no real bearing on our moral conduct as country? What good is our Constitution and Bill of Rights if we do not treasure them and protect them?

It has been said that the limits of tyrants are prescribed by the tolerance of those whom they oppress.

I, for one, will not accept the decision by the DOJ and the IRS (our servant government) not to answer the People's questions in a recorded public forum---a decision that continues a longstanding history of unlawful, abusive and unaccountable conduct by our government. The refusal of DOJ and IRS to answer these questions in a public forum can only be interpreted as a glaring admission of guilt.

Congressman Bartlett, you gave your word to the American People. I respectfully ask that you keep your word to protect and defend our Constitution at this critical moment in America's history.

Wholeheartedly,

1 _____

6.8.7 Cover-Up of 2002: 40 U.S.C. §255 obfuscated

For over three years, this book made frequent reference to the original 40 U.S.C §255 to point out that there is no federal jurisdiction inside states of the Union. This section of the codes had remained intact and unchanged for over 62 years. Eventually, the Congress caught onto the fact that this section of code plainly showed the limits on their jurisdiction so in August 2002, they tried to hide the truth by splitting the section into two sections found in 40 U.S.C. §3111 and §3112 and by complicating the language in these two sections.

When the statute was broken up and restated, the notes section had the relevant quotes from the Supreme Court removed so that the implications of no federal jurisdiction within states of the Union would be less obvious and harder to find.

6.8.8 Cover-Up of 1988: Changed Title of Part I, Subchapter N to Make it Refer Only to Foreign Income

Prior to 1988, the title of Part I of Subchapter N (which begins with Section 861) was "Determination of sources of income" (which is still the heading of the related regulations). In 1988, this title was changed to "Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income." It should be mentioned that while titles of parts may give an indication of what the part is about, the title has no effect on the actual legal application.

> "...nor shall any table of contents, table of cross references, or similar outline, analysis, or descriptive matter relating to the contents of this title be given any legal effect."
> [26 U.S.C. §7806(b)]

So when the title was changed (but the text of the law was not), the application of the law did not change. What changed was the appearance of the table of contents. Prior to the change, in light of the fact that the income tax applies to "income from whatever source derived*," the table of contents made the relevance of 26 U.S.C. §861 obvious:

> Subtitle A, "Income taxes"
> Chapter 1, "Normal taxes and surtaxes"
> Subchapter N, "Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States"
> Part I, "Determination of sources of income"
> Section 861, "Income from sources within the United States"
> (a) "Gross income from sources within the United States"
> (b) "Taxable income from sources within the United States"

When the title of Part I was changed, and the new title stated that the part was about "foreign income*," it no longer appeared to be an obvious place for most people to look when determining their taxable income. This would certainly have the effect of drawing attention away from Section 861. Many tax professionals concede that Section 861 and the related regulations show income to be taxable only when it comes from certain activities related to international and foreign commerce. The new title gives the appearance that the part has no relevance to most people, and should not even be examined.

But this change resulted in a curious situation: a part whose title says it is about "foreign income*" is identified as the part which (along with the related regulations) "determine[s] the sources of income for purposes of the income tax."

6.8.9 Cover-Up of 1986: Obfuscation of IRC Section 931

Since 26 U.S.C. §61 does not indicate the fact that "gross income" is restricted to specific property the I.R. Code had to detail this fact elsewhere. This is accomplished in section 931.

Prior to 1986, section 931 of the 1954 I.R. Code provided the exact terms as to what income is deemed to be "gross income" in the I.R. Code in this manner:

> Sec. 931. INCOME FROM SOURCES WITHIN POSSESSIONS OF THE UNITED STATES [provided in part]
> (a) General rule.
> In the case of individual citizens of the United States, gross income means only gross income from sources within the United States if the conditions of both paragraph (1) and paragraph (2) are satisfied:
> > (1) 3-year period. If 80 percent or more of the gross income of such citizen...was derived from sources within a possession of the United States*; and*

> (2) Trade or business. If 50 percent or more of his gross income was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States either on his own account or as an employee or agent of another.
> ...
>
> (h) Employees of the United States
> For purposes of this section, amounts paid for services performed by a citizen of the United States as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof shall be deemed to be derived from sources within the United States.

Chapters 4 and 5 laid the foundation for understanding that "within" and "without" in conjunction with the "United States" means within or without the United States Government. This section 931 confirms this by saying that "gross income" MEANS ONLY gross income from sources within a possession of the United States and from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States. The 50 States of the United States of America are not possessions of the United States. But, Federal areas within the 50 States are deemed to be possessions (definition in chapter 14). The U.S. Congress can only pass laws for United States possessions and laws with regard to income only when the U.S. Government is the source of the income within its possession. This is the reason for having to state that the pay of employees of the United States is deemed to be derived from sources within the United States.

The old section 931 is provided to demonstrate the difference between it and the current section 931. In the 1954 I.R. Code, the source was emphasized, whereas in the 1986 I.R. Code the place is emphasized and the source of one's income is concealed. By adding vagueness, the intent could only be to mislead. This is part of the IRS humbug.

The 1986 I.R. Code section 931 reads in part:

> Sec. 931. INCOME FROM SOURCES WITHIN GUAM, AMERICAN SAMOA, OR THE NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS
> (a) GENERAL RULE.--In the case of an individual who is a bona fide resident of a specified possession during the entire taxable year, gross income shall not include---
> (1) income derived from sources within any specified possession, and
> (2) income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business by such individual within any specified possession.
> (c) SPECIFIC POSSESSIONS.--For purposes of this section, the term "specific possession" means Guam, American Samoa, and the Northern Mariana Islands.
> (d) SPECIAL RULES.--For purposes of this section--
> (1) EMPLOYEE OF THE UNITED STATES.--Amounts paid for services performed as an employee of the United States (or any agency thereof) shall be treated as not described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a).

Inverse construction similar to that used in section 6012 is used here. Unlike the old section 931 (which made a definite statement restricting the meaning of gross income) section 931 in the 1986 I.R. Code excludes certain income from "gross income" and then, pursuant to section 931(d), excludes amounts paid to Federal Government employees from the exclusion. This accomplished the same result as section 931(h) of the 1954 I.R. Code where amounts paid to anyone for performance of personal services as an employee of the United States was deemed to be "gross income" without regard to any formulas put forth in section 931(a) of the 1954 I.R. Code for "individuals" employed by the U.S. Government by virtue of a trade or business effectively connected within the United States. Again showing that the term "within the United States" means within the U.S. Government and that income from sources other than the U.S. Treasury is foreign to the jurisdiction of the IRS.[387]

With section 931(a) and (d) of the 1986 I.R. Code, Congress is saying that "gross income" does not include income received by an individual (Federal Government employee) who is a bona fide resident of a specified possession when that income was derived from sources within the specified possession or if the income was effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business by such individual (Federal Government employee) within any specified possession unless the U.S. Government was the source of the income. Since there is equal treatment under the laws of the United States of America, this cannot be limited to persons who are bona fide residents of these specified possessions. The fact that "gross income" does not include what anyone receives from a source other than the U.S. Government applies to anyone. But, by emphasizing specified possessions, there is enough vagueness injected to cloud the fact the source of the income, not the place, is the controlling factor. The fact that the term "gross income" in the I.R. Code includes only income derived from the U.S. Government as compensation "for services performed as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof" is demonstrated here (also see section 3401(a) in chapter 6). You cannot enter into an employment agreement with a place, the employer must be the source. Again confirming it is legal kickback pursuant to employment agreements which control whether income is "gross income" subject to the I.R. Code laws.

6.8.10 Cover-Up of 1982: Footnotes Removed from IRC Section 61 Pointing to Section 861

The Code contains many footnotes and references to allow readers to search back and trace the origins and evolution of laws and regulations, since this often clarifies intent. IRC 61(a) on gross income used to have a footnote informing readers that it came from Section 22(a) of the 1939 Code and that the law hadn't been changed. The footnote said, "Source: Sec. 22(a), 1939 Code, substantially unchanged." That footnote was in the 1954 version of the Internal Revenue Code at least up to the 1982 edition, but then it vanished, making it difficult for tax professionals to understand how the wording has been deceptively altered, leading to misapplication of the law. Constitutional limitations discussed above were thus hidden.

Deletion of the footnote has also made it much more difficult to notice and understand the close connection between IRC 61 and IRC 861 (or C.F.R. 1.61 and C.F.R. 1.861), especially as 26 C.F.R. §1.861 is now thousands of pages distant from 26 C.F.R. § 1.61, and in the earlier versions, the section was not numbered 861, but 119. In pre-1954 versions, the "gross income" regulations under Section 22(a) mentioned the taxable sources as income of nonresident aliens and foreign corporations doing business in the U.S. and its possessions and profits of citizens, residents, and domestic corporations derived from foreign commerce. The same sources were described in the regulations under IRC 119 "Income from sources within the United States."

The 1921 version was even more clear (and the law hasn't materially changed since then). It said explicitly "that in the case of a nonresident alien individual or of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262, the following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States." (IRC 262 applied if at least 80% of a citizen's gross income was from a U.S. possession.)

In 1954, while the law still hadn't materially changed, the regulations were changed so that the "foreign" sources were omitted from the "gross income" description in C.F.R. 1.61(a), but remained in the regulations as C.F.R. 1.861 (renumbered from the regulations previously under IRC 119). Wording was put in those regulations stating that they "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax," and they stated that it was the foreign sources noted below that were the sources. These sources today are the ones listed in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1).

6.8.11 Cover-Up of 1978: Confused IRS Regulations on "Sources"

In 1978, the wording of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 was changed significantly, and the title was changed from "Computation of Taxable Income from Sources Within the United States" to "Computation of taxable income from sources within the United States and from other sources and activities." Some have suggested that the current title implies that one should not be using this section unless he has income both from within the United States and from "other sources and activities." The older title, as well as the text of the current regulations, shows that this is not the case.

Another change regarding 26 C.F.R. §1.861 that can only be seen as an intent to deceive occurred in 1978. 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8, which contains the key list of sources, went from less than one page before 1978 to more than forty pages. There was no underlying change in the law or even in the substance of the regulation, but the regulation became a maze of new phrases, such as "statutory groupings," or "operative sections," or "specific sources" that require much more effort to sort out, but lead to the same conclusion as before. There can no other explanation for such a masterpiece of regulatory obfuscation but the intent to confuse, obscure, deceive and defraud. Those who claim that IRC 861 is not relevant to citizens should explain why officials would go to such great lengths to obfuscate what would otherwise be a relatively little-used part of the Code. If it didn't apply to most citizens, such a masterful job of creating confusion would be a waste of lawyerly talent.

It's well worth the government's while to have the cleverest lawyers and officials try to keep playing with the wording of the income tax Code and regulations to further disguise the true meaning of the law without actually changing it, in order to make it appear that most citizens are required to file and pay even if they aren't. The payoff to the government is enormous - several hundred billion dollars a year.

6.8.12 Cover-Up of 1954: Hiding of Constitutional Limitations in IRC On Congress' Right To Tax

Here is a brief summary of what we will discuss in this section below, as far as what congress changed in the law:

1. Deleted any phrases referring to income that is, under the Constitution or fundamental law, not taxable by the government. This was done by changing the definition of gross income from "unless exempt from tax by law" to "unless excluded by law". There were no changes to the law or the Constitution that would necessitate deleting the reference to the Constitution; it was done for no other credible reason than to obscure the Constitutionally-limited application of the income tax, but without making the regulation technically incorrect - only deceiving and misleading.
2. Obfuscated locating taxable sources by adding double-negatives "list of sources that are NOT considered tax exempt". Why not just state what IS taxable, which is foreign income?
3. Removed from the regulations the phrase "in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States" from the regulations in section 1.861-8. This made it appear that the applicability of the income tax was expanded. ." As Congress stated, the application of the law did not change in 1954, but some key phrases in the regulations were removed so as to make the truth less obvious.
4. The admission of the limited application vanished from the regulations defining "gross income," but remained in the regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861, and (to maintain literal accuracy) the regulations began to say that 861 and following and related regulations "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." This change removed any chance of the regulations under Section 61 raising suspicions.

In 1954, the Code underwent a major rearranging and renumbering (and to some extent, rewording). This change-over did not substantially change the law itself, but simply rearranged it. While there have been several amendments, the current Code retains the same general structure, numbering and content of the 1954 Code. At the time of the 1954 "transformation" of the Code, several changes helped to conceal the truth about the limited application of the federal income tax.

As shown above, the regulations in 1945 specifically stated (twice) that some income not exempt by statute was nonetheless exempt from federal taxation because of the Constitution. The 1945 regulations under the definition of "gross income" began as follows:

> "Sec. 29.22(a)-1. What included in gross income.
> Gross income includes in general [items of income listed] derived from any source whatever, unless exempt from tax by law." [1945 regulations]

Those regulations then went on to explain that this refers to income exempt by statute or "fundamental law," meaning the Constitution. The current corresponding regulations begin in a similar manner:

> "Sec. 1.61-1 Gross income. (a) General definition. Gross income means all income from whatever source derived, unless excluded by law."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.61-1]

However, no mention of the Constitution remains. The phrase "*unless excluded by law" is now read as being synonymous with "unless excluded by statute." The Constitutional limitations still apply (there have been no subsequent constitutional amendments relative to the taxing power), but the present regulations under 26 U.S.C. §61 do not explicitly say that this is part of the "law" which exempts certain income. Instead, they use the general wording that leaves the reader free to assume that only income specifically exempted by statute is exempt from taxation.

But this was only one part of a major shift in the structure of the Great Deception that occurred in 1954. Prior to 1954, the regulations stated that "gross income" included everything not exempt, and then made clear that some types of income were not taxable by the federal government because of the Constitution. The regulations regarding "What included in gross income" then went on to say the following:

> "Profits of citizens, residents, or domestic corporations derived from sales in foreign commerce must be included in their gross income; but special provisions are made for nonresident aliens and foreign corporations... and, > in certain cases... for citizens and domestic corporations deriving income from sources within possessions of the United States."

This list of taxable activities is absent from the current regulations under 26 U.S.C. §61. However, something very similar is found in the current regulations under Section 861. The regulations under Section 861 twice define the term "class of gross income," saying that a "class of gross income" "may consist of one or more items*... of gross income enumerated in* section 61." The regulations then refer the reader to "paragraph (d)(2) of this section which provides that a class of gross income may include excluded income." In other words, the "items" of income listed in Section 61 are not necessarily taxable, but may be "exempt" or "excluded" from the federal income tax. Paragraph (d)(2) states only "[Reserved]" (meaning there is no current regulation) but refers the reader to paragraph (d)(2) of the temporary regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T. This section describes what is meant by exempt income.

> "(ii) Exempt income and exempt asset defined--(A) In general. For purposes of this section, the term exempt income means any income that is, in whole or in part, exempt, excluded, or eliminated for federal income tax purposes*."*
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(d)(2)(ii)]

The section then goes on to specify what is not exempt. The following should be read carefully, since it starts with a double negative. If a certain kind of income is not exempt, it means it is subject to the federal income tax. Therefore, after being told that "items" of income (which make up "classes of gross income") may not be taxable, a list is given of the types of income which are subject to the federal income tax:

> "(iii) Income that is not considered tax exempt*. The following items are* not considered to be exempt*, eliminated, or excluded income and, thus, may have expenses, losses, or other deductions allocated and apportioned to them:*
> (A) In the case of a foreign taxpayer...
> (B) In computing the combined taxable income of a DISC or FSC*...*
> (C) For all purposes under subchapter N of the Code... the gross income of a possessions corporation...
> (D) Foreign earned income as defined in section 911 and the regulations thereunder..."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(d)(2)(iii)]

This is the entire list of non-exempt (taxable) income. The idea that other types of income are also taxable (not exempt), despite not being listed, is contradicted by the regulations stating that paragraph (d)(2) "provides that a class of gross income [consisting of the "items" of income listed in 26 U.S.C. §61] may include excluded income." Unless those types of income not listed are exempt, paragraph (d)(2) does not show that the "items" of income listed in Section 61 may be exempt. (A basic principle of law is that such a list is assumed to be exclusive and complete, unless a phrase such as "including, but not limited to..." is used.)

While it is arranged and worded differently, this list of non-exempt income is essentially the same as the regulations under the old statute defining "gross income." It lists foreign earned income of citizens, income from within possessions, and income of foreigners. But while the 1945 regulations listed these "non-exempt" activities under the regulations defining "gross income," they are currently buried in dozens of pages of less prominent regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861. So while the 1945 statute and regulation defining "gross income" by themselves indicated the limited application of the law, the trail to find the truth in the current law is more involved (though the end conclusion is the same).

The basic shift in the Great Deception (in 1954) can be summed up as this: While the older version showed the limitations of the law in "step one" (the definition of "gross income"), the current statute and regulation defining "gross income" use the word "source" without further explanation, and additional steps must be followed to discover that the meaning of that term ("source") is determined by 26 U.S.C. §861 and following, and related regulations.

Prior to 1954, the regulations did not say that Section 119 (predecessor to the current 861) and its regulations "determined the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." Instead, the regulations under 22(a) (defining "gross income") list the exact same activities as Section 119 when discussing income from within the United States. In effect, both the regulations defining "gross income," and Section 119 and related regulations "determined the sources of income for purposes of the income tax."

(The regulations defining "gross income" mention "nonresident aliens and foreign corporations by sections 211 to 237, inclusive, and, in certain cases, by section 251 for citizens and domestic corporations deriving income from sources within possessions of the United States." At the same time the regulations under 119 mention "nonresident alien individuals, foreign corporations, and citizens of the United States or domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251.")

In 1954, the admission of the limited application vanished from the regulations defining "gross income," but remained in the regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861, and (to maintain literal accuracy) the regulations began to say that 861 and following and related regulations "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." This change removed any chance of the regulations under Section 61 raising suspicions.

(The way federal law works, there is no requirement that a section which uses a term point to where the definition or explanation of that term can be found. As ludicrous as it seems, it would be perfectly legal for Section 1 of some law to impose a tax "on the transfer of each automobile," and then have Section 14523(g)(4)(iii) say that "for the purposes of Section 1, the term 'automobile' means a blue Corvette owned by a foreigner." That is in essence how the Great Deception has been structured since 1954.)

While this makes the truth more difficult (but certainly not impossible) to demonstrate with the current statutes and regulations alone, in retrospect it strongly confirms the limited nature of the tax, by showing that while the structure of deception has changed, the conclusion remains the same.

But the regulations defining "gross income" were not the only place where the truth became less clear during the 1954 "transformation." When the statutes were being rearranged and renumbered, Section 119 of the 1939 Code became all of Part I of Subchapter N. The Senate report on the 1954 Code states the following:

> "SUBCHAPTER N - TAX BASED ON INCOME FROM SOURCES WITHIN OR WITHOUT THE UNITED STATES
> PART I - Determination of Sources of Income
> § 861. Income from sources within the United States
> § 862. Income from sources without the United States
> § 863. Items not specified in section 861 or 862
> § 864. Definitions

These sections, which are identical with sections 861-864 of the House bill, correspond to section 119 of the 1939 Code. No substantive change is made, except that section 861(a)(3) would extend the existing 90-day $3,000 rule in the case of a nonresident alien employee of a foreign employer to a nonresident alien employee of a foreign branch of a domestic employer."

Congress here states that the application of the law did not change (except for the specific detail mentioned). As would be expected, the statutes are nearly identical.

> Sec. 119. [1939 Code] Income from sources within the United States
> (a) Gross Income from Sources in United States.
> The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:...
> Sec. 861 [current Code]. Income from sources within the United States
> (a) Gross income from sources within United States
> The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:...

Section 119 of the old statutes and Section 861 of the current statutes use general terms that could easily be misread as applying to any income from within the United States. But while the statutes did not change, the honesty of the regulations corresponding to these sections changed dramatically. The older regulations admitted the truth so plainly and so often that no step-by-step explanation is needed. The following is the equivalent of the current 26 C.F.R. §1.861-1, in its entirety.

> "Sec. 29.119-1. Income from sources within the United States.
> Nonresident alien individuals, foreign corporations, and citizens of the United States or domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251 [this applies only to those who receive a large percentage of their income from within federal possessions] are taxable only upon income from sources within the United States. Citizens of the United States and domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251 are, however, taxable upon income received within the United States, whether derived from sources within or without the United States. (See sections 212(a), 231(c), and 251.)
> The Internal Revenue Code divides the income of such taxpayers into three classes:
> (1) Income which is derived in full from sources within the United States;

> (2) Income which is derived in full from sources without the United States;
> (3) Income which is derived partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States.
> The taxable income from sources within the United States includes that derived in full from sources within the United States and that portion of the income which is derived partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States which is allocated or apportioned to sources within the United States."

Note that the second paragraph in the old regulations under Section 119 states that the Code (specifically Section 119) is for determining taxable income of "such taxpayers," meaning those deriving income from specific taxable activities or sources. The general language of the statutes is applicable only to those involved in certain types of international and foreign commerce.

The subsequent sections of the older regulations (like the current regulations) then deal with specific "items" of income. The sections of regulations following that (which correspond to the current 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8) then deal with determining taxable income from sources within the United States. Again, the regulations clearly show the limited application of the law.

> "Sec. 29.119-9. Deductions in general.
> The deductions provided for in chapter 1 shall be allowed to nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, and to citizens of the United States and domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251, only if and to the extent provided in sections 213, 215, 232, 233, and 251.
> Sec. 29.119-10. Apportionment of deductions.
> From the items specified in sections 29.119-1 to 29.119-6, inclusive, as being derived specifically from sources within the United States there shall, in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, be deducted [allowable deductions]. The remainder shall be included in full as net income from sources within the United States..."

Regarding income from within the United States, the older regulations defining "gross income" describe the exact same taxable activities as the regulations of that time related to "income from sources within the United States" (namely, nonresident aliens and foreign corporations getting income from within the United States, and citizens and domestic corporations who receive much of their income from within federal possessions). "No substantive change" was made when Section 119 became Sections 861 and following, which implies that Section 119 and its regulations "determine[d] the sources of income for purposes of the income tax" (as the current regulations state). The older regulations did not need to say this, since the regulations defining "gross income" also specifically listed what activities could generate taxable income. So in 1945, the regulations defining "gross income" and the regulations under the old Section 119 "determine[d] the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." Today only the regulations under Section 861 list the taxable activities.

(There is a chart in section 3.15.5 of this document showing the outline and excerpts from Part I of Subchapter N and related regulations, and another chart showing the outline and excerpts from the corresponding statutes and regulations from before 1954.)

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Do the older regulations under the predecessor of 26 U.S.C. §861 show income of U.S. citizens living and working within the 50 union states as taxable?

Can it be considered an accident that the current regulations are so overly-complex and confusing, while the older regulations blurted out the truth in plain English in the very first sentence? The fact that the statutes apply only to income from certain "specific sources" (relating to international and foreign commerce) is still stated in the current regulations, but rather than being in first sentence, it is buried deep in the jumbled mess:

> "(ii) Relationship of sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b). Sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b) are the four provisions applicable in determining taxable income from specific sources."
> [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(3)(ii)]

In fact, even here it does not specify to which "specific sources" it is referring; the meaning of that term has to be discovered by searching elsewhere in the regulations. (Three other sections of the regulations say that "specific sources" means the taxable activities described in the "operative sections" throughout Subchapter N.) The regulations prior to 1954 were short, plain, and very clear about who they applied to. (While many tax professionals are now aware of the correct application of Section 861 and its regulations, it certainly is not evident at first glance.)

When the regulations changed in 1954, they did not change directly into what the regulations are today. The current maze of "statutory groupings," "specific sources," "operative sections," etc. did not come about until 1978. Of particular note is how the regulations in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 appeared just after the change in 1954, and how the corresponding regulations appeared prior to 1954. The wording was only very slightly changed, but gives one of the most obvious examples of intent to deceive.

BEFORE 1954	AFTER 1954
29.119-10 Apportionment of deductions. From the items specified in sections 29.119-1 to 29.119-6, inclusive, as being derived specifically from sources within the United States there shall, in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, be deducted the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of any other expenses, losses, or deductions which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder shall be included in full as net income from sources within the United States. The ratable part is based upon the ratio of gross income from sources within the United States to the total gross income. Example. A nonresident alien individual engaged in trade or business within the United States whose taxable year is the calendar year derived gross income from all sources for 1942 of $180,000, including there-in: Interest on bonds of a domestic corporation $9,000 Dividends on stock of a domestic corporation 4,000 Royalty for the use of patents within the United States 12,000 Gain from sale of real property [in U.S.] 11,000 --------- Total 36,000 [remainder of example omitted]	1.861-8 Computation of Taxable Income from Sources Within the United States (a) General. From the items of gross income specified in §§ 1.861-2 to 1.861-7, inclusive, as being income from sources within the United States there shall be deducted the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of any other expenses, losses, or deductions which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder, if any, shall be included in full as taxable income from sources within the United States. The ratable part is based upon the ratio of gross income from sources within the United States to the total gross income Example. A taxpayer engaged in trade or business receives for the taxable year gross income from all sources in the amount of $180,000, one-fifth of which ($36,000) is from sources within the United States, computed as follows: Interest on bonds of a domestic corporation $9,000 Dividends on stock of a domestic corporation 4,000 Royalty for the use within the United States of patents 12,000 Gain from sale of real property [in U.S.] 11,000 -------- Total 36,000 [remainder of example omitted]

The wording is nearly identical, except for two changes. The phrase stating that the whole section applies only to nonresident aliens and foreign corporations simply vanished! In addition, while the specifics of the example in the regulation remained identical, the phrase "a nonresident alien individual" was replaced with "a taxpayer." As Congress stated, the application of the law did not change in 1954, but some key phrases in the regulations were removed so as to make the truth less obvious. A similar disappearance of a phrase occurred at the same time in the section of regulations dealing with the "item" of interest. The wording remained identical except for the disappearing phrase.

BEFORE 1954	AFTER 1954
29.119-2. Interest. There shall be included in the gross income from sources within the United States, of nonresident alien individuals, foreign corporations, and citizens of the United States, or domestic corporations which are entitled to the benefits of section 251, all interest received or accrued, as the case may be, from the United States, any Territory, any political subdivision of a Territory, or the District of Columbia, and interest on bonds, notes, or other interest-bearing obligations of residents of the United States, whether corporate or otherwise, except...	1.861-2 Interest. (a) General. There shall be included in the gross income from sources within the United States all interest received or accrued, as the case may be, from the United States, any Territory, any political subdivision of a Territory, or the District of Columbia, and interest on bonds, notes, or other interest-bearing obligations of residents of the United States, whether corporate or otherwise, except...

(Interest is the only "item" of income for which the regulations specifically mentioned who was receiving it. But the regulations cited above state that in the case of all of the "items" of income, the deductions and determination of taxable income can be done only by those engaged in the specific taxable activities.)

6.8.13 1952: Office of Collector of Internal Revenue Eliminated

The Office of the Collector of Internal Revenue abolished. See Reorganization Plans No. 26 of 1950 and No. 1 of 1952, and Notes under 26 U.S.C. §7804, "Amendments" at:

https://www.law.cornell.edu/uscode/text/26/7804?qt-us_code_temp_noupdates=1#qt-us_code_temp_noupdates

As part of this reorganization, the government manufactured a scandal concerning the collectors. The real reason, however, was to make the code voluntary.

This office of the Collector of Internal Revenue made it possible to protest a tax. Without a Collector of Internal Revenue, it is impossible to protest a tax because it has to be voluntary without a collector. Recall that earlier in section 5.4.6.6, we pointed out that a free people can only be free if they consent to their taxation. There are two ways to consent:

1. Indirectly consent by electing a Collector of Internal Revenue or have him appointed by a person who was elected.
2. Directly consent by sending a donation form called a "tax return", which gives the authority to the government to take your money by virtue of the liability that you assessed against yourself.

If you don't make a liability to pay a tax in the law, then no one has an obligation to do anything. This reorganization of the IRS made the process of tax collection into an administrative process which could only touch "volunteers" called "taxpayers". This made the U.S. District courts into administrative courts in regards to federal taxes. Administrative courts are "non-judicial" and are only there to hear cases where all parties appear by consent and confer jurisdiction on the court to resolve the matter by virtue of them appearing. The only people who should go to these courts are "taxpayers", which are people who volunteered to pay the tax. If you are a "nontaxpayer" or choose not to participate in income taxation, then you shouldn't appear in these courts and if you don't appear or are forced to appear involuntarily because you were extradited, simply refuse to plead and refuse to accept a public defender. That ends the jurisdiction of the court and they will eventually have to let you go because of the requirement for habeas corpus.

Recall that the original office of the Collector was in the House of Representatives, which is part of the Legislative Branch. The office of the Collector was created at 1 Stat. 65 of the Statutes at Large, before the Treasury Department even existed, so he was in the Legislative branch. From the founding of this country, tax Collectors were private parties who were bonded and who had to put their house up for surety with a federal lien while they were Collectors. If they collected unlawfully, then they could lose their house and would have to forfeit their bond in order to compensate those they hurt. The Collector was moved from the Legislative Branch to the Executive Branch in 1862, when the income tax was restructured during the Civil War and without explanation or fanfare. This was a violation of the legislative intent of the Constitution, which requires that taxation and representation must coexist with the same person, which could only be your Representative in the House of Representatives: Taxation WITH representation. Once the taxation and representation functions were separated to two separate branches of the government, then all of the corruption began because the separation of powers doctrine had been violated.

Section 29 of the Revenue Act of 1894 was the last federal law that imposed a legal duty to pay upon citizens and residents of the United States. The duty to pay the tax was subsequently eliminated by Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895) and does not appear in any Revenue Law after that date.

6.8.14 Cover-Up of 1939: Removed References to Nonresident Aliens from the Definition of "Gross Income"

As shown above, some very telling phrases simply vanished from the regulations in 1954. But it was not only the regulations that lost some honesty along the way. The statutes found in the Revenue Act of 1921 show why the regulations said what they said up until 1954. But just as happened with the regulations, a telling phrase that existed in 1921 is no longer found in the statutes. The current Section 861 and its predecessors have remained basically the same for more than 70 years. The text begins "The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:" The section then lists "items" of income (interest, dividends, compensation for labor, rents and royalties, etc.). In 1921 the section was very similar, but it began "That in the case of a nonresident alien individual or of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262*, the following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States*:..."

(While Section 217 itself mentions only individuals, Section 232 of the Act states that "[i]n the case of a foreign corporation or of a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 the computation shall also be made in the manner provided in section 217." As the current regulations and historical regulations state, the section is applicable to nonresident aliens, foreign corporations, and citizen or domestic corporations which receive much of their income from within federal possessions.)

Although it is obvious to whom this section applied in 1921, some may question whether this is at all relevant to current law. Treasury Decision 8687, in discussing what the regulations under the current 26 U.S.C. §863 should say (regarding sales of natural resources), specifically refer to Section 217 of the 1921 Code in trying to determine the "legislative intent" of Congress.

> "The legislative history to section 863's predecessor, section 217(e) of the Revenue Act of 1921, also reflects an intention that..."
> [Treasury Decision 8687]

This Treasury Decision, passed in late 1996, confirms that Section 217 of the Revenue Act of 1921 is the predecessor of the current Part I of Subchapter N, and shows that the IRS still refers to the 1921 Code to determine the proper application of the current Code. The Internal Revenue Manual shows that the courts, as well as the IRS, considers legislative history when determining the correct application of the law.

> "The courts give great importance to the literal language of the Code but the language does not solve every tax controversy. Courts also consider the history of a particular code section..."
> [Internal Revenue Manual, (4.2)7.2.1.1]

When the phrase disappeared from the statutes after 1921, the application of the law did not change. What changed was how easily the truth could be found.

6.8.15 1932: Revenue Act of 1932 imposes first excise income tax on federal judges and public officers

Congress knew from past court actions that Federal judges already in office would not permit impairment of their existing contracts. By changes in the wording in the Revenue Act of 1932, c. 209, to read:

> Sec. 22...In the case of Presidents of the United States and judges of courts of the United States taking office after June 6, 1932, the compensation received as such shall be included in gross income; and all Acts fixing the compensation of such Presidents and judges are hereby amended accordingly.

Congress managed to get the cooperation of Federal judges taking office after June 6, 1932. Cooperation is evidenced by acceptance of the job.

Note that this change in wording accomplished two things. First, by specifying that it applied to judges taking office after June 6, 1932 it did not affect existing employment contracts. Hence existing judges could not say it diminished their compensation. Secondly, the working of "all Acts are hereby amended accordingly" means that new judges are informed up front that their employment contract includes a kickback in the compensation. Just like other Federal Government employees, their compensation for labor was the amount arranged for under law by Congress less the kickback, which varies depending on the deduction benefits available to each judge.[388] Judges could have challenged the lawfulness based on unequal pay for like work, but then that argument would hold true for all other Federal Government employees as well.

The effect of this Act upon the compensation of judges who enter into a new employment agreement is brought out by the court cases after 1932. For example, in O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939), Judge Woodrough brought action when his compensation as an Appeals Court judge was assessed. He had been a U.S. District Court judge prior to accepting his new position with the Appellate Court in 1933. The Supreme Court Justices decided that judges of courts of the United States taking office after June 6, 1932, had agreed to allow their salary to be deemed "gross income" and subject to a legal kickback. In other words, they agreed that, as a condition of employment, the salary of judges as set by Congress--as with all other Federal Government employees--includes their remuneration for personal service (income) and a kickback (gain) to the U.S. Government.[389] In essence, the Supreme Court said to Judge Woodrough--tough cookies, when you accepted a higher position, you agreed to a new employment contract and accepted the employment condition of kickback that all judges taking office after June 6, 1932 accepted.

[388] The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals clarified this issue in Baker et al. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 149 F.2d. 342 (1945) with the statement: "The necessary effect of the Woodrough case seems to us to be that a judge who takes office under an established Congressional policy of taxing his salary becomes entitled only to the salary prescribed by statute less income taxes, and that in consequence his salary is not diminished by the tax.."

[389] The kickback is some part of the gain portion of "gross income" or "wages." The amount depends upon the deduction benefits claimed by the Federal Government employee upon a "U.S. Individual Income Tax Return."

As for periodic changes, it is no known if U.S. judges actually do agree and permit Congressional unilateral changes in their employment contracts through the varying rates and deduction benefits. It they do, it certainly is contrary to their tradition. To prove whether or not U.S. judges use current rates and deduction benefits or that which was in existence when they first took office would require review of their "U.S. Individual Income Tax Returns," which is a violation of their personal rights to privacy. So, it is something the public will never know, but the question is there.

6.8.16 1923: Classification Act, 42 Stat. 1488[390]

This act was passed on March 4, 1923 as H.R. 8928. Chapter 265 created several custom terms and definitions to be used throughout the government from that point on, including in subsequent Revenue Acts as well as the Internal Revenue Code, first codified in the U.S. Code in the Internal Revenue Code of 1939. Among the important terms defined and subsequently used in the I.R.C. include:

1. "department": "the term 'department' means an executive department of the United States Government, a governmental establishment in the executive branch of the United States Government which is not a part of an executive department, the municipal government of the District of Columbia, the Botanic garden, Library of Congress, Library Building and Grounds, Government Printing Office (GPO), and the Smithsonian Institution."
2. "position": "means a specific civilian office or employment, whether occupied or vacant, in a department other than the following: Offices or employments in the Postal Service; teachers, librarians, school attendance officers, and employees of the community center department under the Board of Education of the District of Columbia; officers and members of the Metropolitan police, the fire department of the District of Columbia, and the United States park police; and the commissioned personnel of the Coast Guard, the public Health Service, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey."
3. "employee": "means any person temporarily or permanently in a position."
4. "service": "means the broadest division of related offices and employments."
5. "compensation": "means any salary, wage, fee, allowance, or other emolument paid to an employee for service in a position."

Nearly all of the above definitions would be very carefully used to deceive the American public in subsequent acts of Congress, because they would be misconstrued by the general public to have their common definition, rather than the very specific legal definition above. This act much better concealed the nature of the I.R.C., Subtitle A income tax as an excise tax upon the privileges incident to public office (e.g. "trade or business", see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26)) by disguising hidden meanings within the terms "compensation" and "services" and "employee", all of which, by the above act, can ONLY be incident to service in the United States government as a public officer, whether elected or appointed.

The effect of this act carried over into the IRC's of 1954 and 1986 insofar as they merely restate relevant elements incorporated in the 1939 version. It is particularly important in the modern I.R.C. Section 61 , "Gross Income Defined", wherein "compensation for services" is listed as a specific "item of income" and its misleadingly ambiguous distinction from "income derived", seen in the 1921 Revenue Act, is restored. The restoration was accompanied by a notation to the effect that the reconstruction of the 1928 language (which the 1939 code section duplicated) represented no substantial change in its meaning. Below is the content of 26 U.S.C. §61, "Gross Income Defined" so you can now apply the above definitions properly. We have boldfaced and underlined the words from the above definitions contained in the Classification Act and added bracketed material so you can clearly see the meanings:

> TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter B > PART I > § 61
> § 61. Gross income defined
> (a) General definition Except as otherwise provided in this subtitle, gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) the following items:
> (1) Compensation for services [as a public official], including fees, commissions, fringe benefits, and similar items;
> (2) Gross income derived from [a trade or] business;
> (3) Gains derived from dealings in property [within the District of Columbia, see 26 U.S.C. 871];
> (4) Interest;
> (5) Rents;
> (6) Royalties;
> (7) Dividends;
> (8) Alimony and separate maintenance payments;
> (9) Annuities;

[390] Adapted from Cracking the Code, Pete Hendrickson, ISBN 0-9743936-0-6, pp. 52-53.

(10) Income from life insurance and endowment contracts;
(11) Pensions;
(12) Income from discharge of indebtedness;
(13) Distributive share of partnership gross income;
(14) Income in respect of a decedent; and
(15) Income from an interest in an estate or trust [in the District of Columbia].

6.8.17 1918: "Gross income" first defined in the Revenue Act of 1918[391]

The Revenue Act of 1918, c. 18, 40 Stat. 1057, enacted by Congress on February 24, 1919, specifically placed the compensation for personal services of Federal judges and the U.S. President under the definition of "gross income" in an attempt to bring them into the existing kickback program. That statute reads:

Sec. 213. That for the purposes of this title...the term "gross income"-

(a) Includes gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service (including the case of the President of the United States, the judges of the Supreme and inferior courts of the United States, and all other officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, the compensation received as such), of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, trades, businesses, commerce, or sales, or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in such property; also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, or the transaction of any business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever....[emphasis added]

You will note that Congress is making reference to gross income where the U.S. Government is the source of that income. Again making it clear that ONLY the compensation for personal services for the labor of Federal Government employees is includible in "gross income." The compensation of a person working in the private sector or for a state or local government, which includes state judges, is not included. Therefore, the subject matter "gross income" in the I.R. Code only applies to Federal Government employees. Income not derived from the U.S. Government is not subject to the I.R. Code Laws. The sections of the current I.R. Code that provide this notice will be discussed in detail later.

The U.S. Government, like any other employer, can establish the terms of its own employment agreement. Legally the U.S Government cannot unilaterally impose new conditions or terms to existing employment agreements with Federal Government employees, which is confirmed by the stand the judges have taken and expressed in court opinions. Also, Congress cannot legally establish the terms of an employment agreement in the private sector or make the U.S. Government a party to such agreements.

6.8.18 1911: Judicial Code of 1911

This act abolished the existing circuit courts and replaced them with Circuit Courts of Appeals. The District Courts of the United States became "United States District Courts". This left no Article III courts to hear cases involving constitutional rights. All district and circuit courts became, at that point, Article II courts which may only have jurisdiction within territories of the United States Government. These courts are part of the executive branch, not the judicial branch, of the U.S. government. The judges in these Art. II courts are civil service employees of the Office of Personnel Management, which is part of the Executive Branch. The judges are not judicial officers as required under Art. III of the Constitution, but federal employees.

36 Stat. 1087, 1167.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

SEC. 289. The circuit courts of the United States, upon the taking effect of this Act, shall be, and hereby are, abolished; and thereupon, on said date, the clerks of said courts shall deliver to the clerks of the district courts of the United States for their respective districts all the journals, dockets, books, files, records, and other books and papers of or belonging to or in any manner connected with said circuit courts; and shall also on said date deliver to the clerks of said district courts all moneys, from whatever source received, then remaining in their hands or under their control as clerks of said circuit courts, or received by them by virtue of their said offices. The journals, dockets, books, files, records, and other books and papers so delivered to the clerks of the several district courts shall be and remain a part of the official records of said district courts, and copies thereof, when certified under the hand and seal of the clerk of the district court, shall be received as evidence equally with the originals thereof; and the clerks of the several district courts shall have the same authority to exercise all the powers and to perform all the duties with respect thereto as the clerks of the several circuit courts had prior to the taking effect of this Act.

SEC. 290. All suits and proceedings pending in said circuit courts on the date of the taking effect of this Act, whether originally brought therein or certified thereto from the district courts, shall thereupon and thereafter be proceeded with and disposed of in the district courts in the same manner and with the same effect as if originally begun therein, the record thereof being entered in the records of the circuit courts so transferred as above provided.

SEC. 291. Wherever, in any law not embraced within this Act, any reference is made to, or any power or duty is conferred or imposed upon, the circuit courts, such reference shall, upon the taking effect of this Act, be deemed and held to refer to, and to confer such power and impose such duty upon, the district courts.

SEC. 292. Wherever, in any law not contained within this Act, a reference is made to any law revised or embraced herein, such reference, upon the taking effect hereof, shall be construed to refer to the section of this Act into which has been carried or revised the provision of law to which reference is so made.

SEC. 293. The provisions of sections one to five, both inclusive, of the Revised Statutes, shall apply to and govern the construction of the provisions of this Act. The words "this title," wherever they occur herein, shall be construed to mean this Act.

SEC. 294. The provisions of this Act, so far as they are substantially the same as existing statutes, shall be construed as continuations thereof, and not as new enactments, and there shall be no implication of a change of intent by reason of a change of words in such statute, unless such change of intent shall be clearly manifest.

SEC. 295. The arrangement and classification of the several sections of this Act have been made for the purpose of a more convenient and orderly arrangement of the same, and therefore no inference or presumption of a legislative construction is to be drawn by reason of the chapter under which any particular section is placed.

SEC. 296. This Act may be designated and cited as "The Judicial Code."

6.8.19 1909: Corporate Excise Tax of 1909

Country's first income tax. The U.S. Supreme Court would later rule in Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920) that the word "income" may not be defined by Congress, and that it can only be defined by the Constitution. It also ruled in the case of Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926) that:

> "Income has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (36 Stat. 112) in the 16th Amendment, and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed."
> *[*Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926)]

All income tax acts under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are based on the above, and are classified by the Supreme Court in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916) as indirect taxes, which means they can only be excise taxes on privileges and may only fall on businesses and not directly on citizens:

> "... [the 16th Amendment] conferred no new power of taxation... [and]... prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..."
> *[Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]*

6.8.20 1872: Office of the Assessor of Internal Revenue Eliminated

Functions of Assessor delegated to the Collector of Internal Revenue. See: 17 Statutes at Large 401, 42nd Congress, Session III Chapter XIII (December 24, 1872).

6.8.21 1862: First Tax on "Officers" of the U.S. Government[392]

The impairment of the Federal Government employee employment contracts began with the kickback program that Congress promulgated as law in the year 1862. Once the Federal Government kickback program was well established by forced acceptance, employees and employers in the private sector were forced to believe that the terms of the Federal Government employment agreements applied to them. Here is how it all happened.

Up until year 1862, Federal Government employees worked under the same kind of employment agreement as anyone who agrees to exchange their time and talent for the personal property of an employer. Then, in 1862, the Thirty-seventh Congress passed Ch. 119, 12 Stat. 472. Section 86 of that Public Law reads as follows:

> SALARIES AND PAY OF OFFICERS AND PERSONS IN THE SERVICE OF THE UNITED STATES, AND PASSPORTS
> Sec. 86. And be it further enacted, That on and after the first day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, there shall be levied, collected, and paid on all salaries of officers, or payments to persons in the civil, military, naval, or other employment or service of the United States, including senators and representatives and delegates in Congress, when exceeding the rate of six hundred dollars per annum, a duty of three per centum on the excess above the said six hundred dollars; and it shall be the duty of all paymasters and all disbursing officers, under the government of the United States, or in the employ thereof, when making any payments to officers and persons as aforesaid, or upon settling and adjusting the accounts of such officers and persons, to deduct and withhold the aforesaid duty of three percentum, and shall, at the same time, make a certificate stating the name of the officer or person from whom such deduction was made, and the amount thereof, which shall be transmitted to the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and entered as part of the internal duties; and the pay-roll, receipts, or account of officers or persons paying such duty, as aforesaid, shall be made to exhibit the fact of such payment. ...[Balance of section 86 applied to passports]

First, you will note that it only applied to persons who received compensation for their services as an employee of the United States. Secondly, although Congress placed this into a Tax Act, and implies it is an indirect tax by the use of the word "duty," it cannot be a tax. A tax on labor would necessarily fall into the class of a direct tax that needs apportionment to be constitutional.

Note also that the only persons required to make an accounting of the kickback in section 86 were the officers who made the deductions and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, not the Federal Government employee. As you continue to read, you will see that this is also true today.

The effect of section 86 identifies what it really is--a kickback of part of the property agreed under contract to be paid for labor of Federal Government employees [see chapter 1, footnote 3]. With this Act, the amount of compensation agreed to be paid was diminished by one party to the agreement (Congress) without the consent of the other (the Federal Government employee). A unilateral change in the employment contract of all persons then employed by the Federal Government was not legal just because Congress promulgated it as a law, and the conduct of U.S. judges proved this. The result of arranging for the withholding of 3 percent of the compensation due Federal Government employees under existing contracts was deprivation of liberty and property without due process of law, which is violative of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The facts presented above were expressed by the Supreme Court in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895), where they said:

> Subsequently, in 1869, and during the administration of President Grant, when Mr. Boutwell was Secretary of the Treasury and Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts, was Attorney General, there were in several of the statutes of the United States, for the assessment and collection of internal revenue, provisions for taxing the salaries of all civil officers of the United States, which included, in their literal application, the salaries of the President and of the judges of the United States. The question arose whether the law which imposes such a tax upon them was constitutional. The opinion of the Attorney General thereon was requested by the Secretary of the Treasury. The Attorney General, in reply, gave an elaborate opinion advising the Secretary of the Treasury that no income tax could be lawfully assessed and collected upon the salaries of those officers who were in office at the time the statute imposing the tax was passed, holding on this subject the views expressed by Chief Justice Taney. His opinion is published in volume XIII of the Opinions of the Attorneys General, at page 161. I am informed that it has been followed ever since without question by the department supervising or directing the collection of the public revenue. [emphasis added]

[392] Adapted from IRS Humbug: Weapons of Enslavement, Frank Kowalik, ISBN 0-9626552-0-1, 1991, pp. 18-21.

This "kickback" program illegally forced a 3 percent debt obligation upon Federal Government employees working under an existing employment agreement in 1862. However, the "kickback program" established by section 86 was legal when applied to the salary of persons who took employment with the Federal Government after that Act was passed because they were on notice that a 3 percent kickback was part of their employment agreement. Thus illegal and legal kickbacks existed then and, though they have changed in form, they exist today.

"Kickback" is defined in Webster's Dictionary as "a return of a part of a sum received often because of confidential agreement or coercion." Was not a "kickback" coerced from Federal Government employees when Congress promulgated a change in their employment agreement as if it were a tax when, in essence, it was, and is, a kickback program?

By presenting the "kickback" program in the form of "law," Congress (the legislative branch of government) provided the implied authority of law needed to get Federal Government employees in the executive branch of government (the IRS) to act illegally in depriving other Federal Government employees of property rightfully due them under existing contracts.

U.S. Supreme Court Judges understood this, and were legally and morally obligated to correct any illegal action of Congress or the IRS for all Federal government employees. The primary function of the Supreme Court is to provide opinions of public importance. Instead they chose, by misdirection and silence, to cooperate with Congress in the implementation of this kickback which forced a debt obligation upon all Federal Government employees except U.S. judges and the U.S. President. This was accomplished when Federal judges allowed the contracts of fellow Federal Government employees to be illegally impaired while seeing to it that their employment contracts remained intact. Does not such conduct demonstrate that the U.S. judges were partial to assuring that the illegal kickback scheme was implemented? Does not such indifference and cooperation violate their duty? Does their conduct not raise the question of concealment?[393]

6.9 Treasury/ IRS Cover-Ups, Obfuscation, and Scandals

"The king establishes the land by justice,
But he who receives bribes overthrows it."
[Prov. 28:29, Bible, NKJV]

"He who is greedy for gain troubles his own house,
But he who hates bribes will live."
[Prov. 15:27, Bible, NKJV]

"There is never a wrong time to do the right thing."
[Family Guardian Fellowship]

As we established in section 5.4.20, the Treasury Secretary, for whom the IRS Commissioner works, has NO lawful delegated authority to collect income taxes in the 50 union states. Below are some examples of illegal and unethical acts of extortion committed in the name of the Treasury Secretary in the absence of any legal authority to impose or enforce such income taxes.

[393] The U.S. Supreme Court said in Boyd v. U.S., 116 U.S. 616 (1885) "...it is the duty of the courts to be watchful for the constitutional rights of the citizens, and against stealthy encroachment thereon."

6.9.1 Elements of the IRS Cover-Up/Conspiracy to Watch For

Here are a few things to watch out for as you see history being made by legislators and the IRS in the future relative to the income tax issue. These are the kinds of things that should clearly evidence to you that the IRS is part of a massive conspiracy to defraud U.S. citizens of their income by fooling them into thinking that income taxes are mandatory for citizens domiciled in the 50 union states with domestic income:

1. IRS will refuse to answer questions about the following:

1.1 "What specific statute in either the U.S. Code (Internal Revenue Code), or the Code of Federal Regulations, makes me as a U.S. Citizen domiciled in the 50 union states and receiving nothing but income from within the 50 union states liable for paying taxes on that income?"

1.2 "Please define what you mean by voluntary compliance?".

1.3 IRS will not respond to invitations by tax freedom groups to discuss the legality of the income tax. This happened recently at a very public meeting where congress, the president, and the IRS were invited to attend. ALL declined! This was documented on the following website of a group called "We the People": http://www.givemeliberty.org/

1.4 The IRS will refuse to define the term "United States" because then they would have to admit that the Internal Revenue Code doesn't apply in the 50 contiguous states to your average citizen who is by default NOT a federal/U.S. citizen or government employee.

2. IRS will try to manipulate the litigation of cases involving the issues raised in this document, including the 861/source issue by:

2.1 Keeping these cases in the U.S. Tax Court, where there is only one judge and no jury. It is easier to bribe or influence one judge rather than a whole jury.

2.2 Keeping these cases out of Federal Circuit courts where there might be juries, to avoid the risk of losing. They will do this by either fining individuals who raise the issue (violating the First Amendment right to free speech), or by encouraging the court to dismiss the case (motion to dismiss).

2.3 Keeping these cases out of the Supreme Court, because litigating them could shut down income taxes permanently and deprive the government of revenues. They will do this by either fining individuals who raise the issue (violating the First Amendment right to free speech), or by encouraging the court to dismiss the case, or by litigating so fiercely that the average Citizen can't afford the legal fees required to get their case to the Supreme Court level.

2.4 Abusing due process of litigants to the maximum extent possible by depriving them early on in their fight of financial resources needed to litigate the case to the Supreme Court. They will do this by seizing or levying the wages of tax freedom fighters as quickly as possible, rather than waiting till the end of litigation.

2.5 Doing complete tax background checks of any persons who act as jurors in these tax trials, to ensure that they choose only jurors who are ignorant of the Internal Revenue Code, have faithfully paid their "voluntary taxes", and who have contempt for people who don't. They need social security numbers to do this, so if you are acting as a juror in one of these trials, we strongly suggest that you NOT provide your social security number to anyone, because it is strictly voluntary. See section 2.9.19.1 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 entitled "Stacking the Deck During Jury Selection".

3. Discovery Abuses. Discovery is the process during tax litigation in which information is requested by a party to a legal action from the other side. Here are some of the ways you can expect the IRS to execute discovery abuse to cover up the conspiratorial nature of hiding the truth about the fact that income taxes are voluntary:

3.1 Covering up truths about the voluntary nature of tax cases by requesting "protective orders" to oppress plaintiff citizens as part of the discover process who are serving requests for admissions and interrogatories on the IRS.

3.2 Requesting that evidence related to the voluntary nature of income taxes be sealed and kept secret and only available to the court but not other individuals or citizens. This will prevent the truth from getting out about the voluntary nature of income taxes.

4. IRS will try to get tax freedom organizations and individuals in trouble by:

4.1 Subsidizing "Tax Freedom" organizations to act as their operatives in attracting individuals and then giving them bad advice to get them into trouble. Remember that the IRS collects interest and penalties on back taxes if it can catch people "cheating" on taxes. Of course, we all now know that most citizens don't owe income taxes, but that never stopped the IRS from demagoguery, grand-standing, and avoiding legal issues in the presentation of their case in front of juries. CAVEAT EMPTOR!

4.2 Paying their operative cronies to publish bogus books that tell tax freedom fighters the wrong methods to get out of income taxes as an inexpensive and ineffective way to have more people to make into examples to scare the rest of us into "voluntary compliance".

5. IRS will try to confuse tax freedom groups who are focusing on the issues raised in this document. For example, http://www.egroups.com/ has a group called "legality-of-income-tax" that is enlightening for people who are looking for tools and information to end their income tax. IRS agents regularly join into these groups anonymously and try to criticize and obfuscate the participants to keep themselves out of trouble.

6. IRS will subsidize newspapers to slander individuals who legally stop paying income taxes. For instance, read the article in section 9.3.1 by the New York Times. It was completely biased and didn't talk about the law at all. Even if the IRS didn't pay for this add, the secretive bankers at the Federal Reserve have more than enough reason to subsidize this in order to keep their interest payments on the national debt coming in.

7. They will not maintain a historian position or will fire or retaliate against any historians who become whistleblowers to expose past cover-ups.

8. They will post confusing, misleading, and incomplete information on their website at http://www.irs.gov/ about the voluntary nature of income taxes for citizens living and working in the 50 union states. For instance, look up the term "voluntary compliance" if you want some lawyer weasel words to obfuscate yourself with. Below is their definition of "voluntary compliance" from http://www.irs.gov/prod/taxi/taxterms.html - V:

> "Your mom might order you to clean up your room. Well, the IRS doesn't have time to tell every single taxpayer to file taxes correctly and on time . . . there are millions of taxpayers in this country after all. This system relies on citizens to report their income, calculate tax liability and file tax returns on time. Everyone's gotta grow up sometime. Check out It's Payday! "

9. There have been cover-ups over the years as the Internal Revenue Codes have been craftily modified to maximize their "confusion factor" and legalese content so that only legislators can understand them. As these laws have been "obfuscated" over the years, the IRS has systematically tried to cover its tracks by concealing the older laws, which are written much more clearly to state that income taxes are voluntary. Consequently, you can be sure that the IRS:

9.1 Would not want to keep any records of the old laws that citizens could use to show that they indeed don't owe income tax.
9.2 Would not want to make the older laws computer searchable.
9.3 Would not want to designate anyone to be a historian for the organization who could compile these old laws and publications. As a matter of fact, the IRS fired the only historian they had! Did she uncover the truth when she was compiling the archives to post on the website and tried to get the word out? Was she regarded as a "whistleblower"?

If you have heard of any of the above types of tactics by the IRS, please let us know so we can get the word out immediately and post the information on our website!

6.9.2 26 C.F.R. 1.0-1: Publication of Internal Revenue Code WITHOUT Index

The Dept. of the Treasury is responsible for writing most implementing regulations relating to federal income taxes. The first thing you notice about the Internal Revenue Code (I.R.C.) in the very first section is the information contained in its implementing regulation in 26 C.F.R. §1.0-1. This implementing regulation describes how the Internal Revenue Code is to be published by the government for consumption by the general public.

> Sec. 1.0-1 Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and regulations.
> This Act shall be published as volume 68A of the United States Statutes at Large, with a comprehensive table of contents and an appendix; but without an index or marginal references. The date of enactment, bill number, public law number, and chapter number, shall be printed as a headnote.*

The Internal Revenue Code itself is 9,500 pages, and publishment of anything that large without an index would deliberately create a situation for the public and the legal profession where it would be very difficult to find anything relevant to any subject of inquiry. This means that you can't order the code from the U.S. government printing office that has an index. How many commercial book vendors do you think would publish ANY book that large without an index? Their book wouldn't sell very many copies! If you want an index, then you have to order the publication from a private third party.

We would argue that devious act deliberately obfuscates the tax code and makes it much more difficult for most Americans to either read or understand the law. The lawyers in Congress want it that way because that is how they perpetuate the legal "priesthood" that maintains their power. They want to make it so people need special research tools and published sources for the code available only to legal professionals in order to locate information relevant to their inquiry. That way, ordinary citizens will be encouraged to read third party publications like the IRS' fraudulent publications in order to understand the tax code, and as we point out in section 3.19, these publications contain deliberate fraud. We expose this legal priesthood later in section 6.12 where we talk about the judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax and section 6.13, where we talk about legal profession scandals to protect the income tax.

The above regulation, by the way, violates an Act of Congress, which states in the Statutes at Large, 42nd Congress, Volume 17, Ch. 315, p. 258, Section 45. Unless the below act was repealed, the Secretary of the Treasury exceeded his authority to specify that the Internal Revenue Code should be published without an index:

> "That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to revise and prepare for publication the internal-revenue laws in force after the passage of this act, with amendments incorporated in their proper places, conveniently arranged for reference, and with a proper index..."
> [Statutes at Large, 42nd Congress, Volume 17, Ch. 315, p. 258, Section 45]

If you want a version of the code that includes an index, you can order a very nice one with an index and colored tabs for use in an audit or due process hearing from Irwin Schiff's website at:

http://www.paynoincometax.com/:

The cost is $38. Irwin sells the I.R.C. published by:

Research Institute of America (RIA)

800-950-1216
http://www.riahome.com

If you buy the latest edition of the above commercial version of the Internal Revenue Code and you examine the extensive index under "liability for tax", which is almost one page long by itself, you will see LOTS of entries. The January 2001 version of the code has this portion on page 201. Guess what? If you look up "income taxes" or "citizen" or "American", you will not find a single entry. Now do you understand why the Treasury directed that the I.R.C. not be published with an index? This is a very powerful argument to use in court, and the court and the Treasury sometimes will respond to this argument by making such excuses as:

> "Well, this commercial publisher is not a trusted source of information so your evidence isn't credible. Only government sources are credible."

And of course, there IS no government source that would ever publish such information because it is simply too incriminating! Wow!

6.9.3 Official/Qualified Immunity and Anonymity

> *"Counsel for the claimant, ...makes a very ingenious argument... That the maxim of English constitutional law, that the king can do no wrong, is one which the courts must apply to the government of the United States, and that therefore there can be no tort committed by the government….

> It is not easy to see how the first proposition can not have any place in our system of government.

> We have no king to whom it can be applied. The President, in the exercise of the executive functions, bears a nearer resemblance to the limited monarch of the English government than any other branch of our government, and is the only individual to whom it could possibly have any relation. It cannot apply to him, because the Constitution admits that he may do wrong, and has provided a means for his trial for wrongdoing,... by the proceeding of impeachment.

> It is to be observed that the English maxim does not declare that the government, or those who administer it, can do no wrong; for it is a part of the principle itself that wrong may be done by the government power, for which the ministry, for the time being, is held responsible; and the ministers personally, like our President, may be impeached; or, if the wrong amounts to a crime, they may be indicted and tried at law for the offense.

> We do not understand that either in reference to the government of the United States, or to the several States, or of any of their officers, the English maxim has an existence in this country."*
> [Langford v. U.S., 101 U.S. 341, 3423 (1879).]

Why do IRS agents get away with so many violations of due process with immunity? The answer is that they are protected from prosecution by our federal courts under the contemporary doctrine of "sovereign immunity". As you can tell by the quote above from the U.S. Supreme Court back in 1879, support for sovereign immunity was not always endorsed by the courts. As these courts have become corrupted over the years in the process of expanding and upholding the income very tax that pays their salaries, the corrupt black-robed lawyers in these courts have had to contradict historical precedent by protecting especially those who enforce and administer the income tax from personal liability for criminal wrongdoing and lawlessness. Below is an explanation of how agents of the government are insulated and protected from legal liability for wrongdoing:

1. According to one IRS revenue agent we spoke with IRS agents are told by their management that they are not allowed to reveal their first name, only their employee number. Without the full name and identifying information about the employee, it is more difficult to figure out who to serve with legal papers if you want to prosecute individual agents.

2. The IRS service bureaus for specific regions are usually located outside of the jurisdiction of the state they serve. For instance, Ogden Utah services large parts of California. Why isn't the service bureau for California inside of California? We would argue it is because that makes it much more difficult to personally serve agents who have broken the law or to prosecute them under the laws of your state, because they don't live in your state. Citizens who want to sue IRS agents or criminally prosecute them have to go outside of their state to serve the agent, which is much more difficult to coordinate, costly, and expensive.

3. The U.S. supreme Court has upheld the notion that persons acting as agents for the U.S. government have at least a limited immunity from prosecution because of illegal, unethical, or questionable acts they commit while on duty. This is called official immunity. As we talked about in section 5.12 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.006 entitled "How the Federal Judiciary Stole the Right to Petition: Judicial Arrogance and Bias Against the Right to Petition", the federal judiciary has also for all intents and purposes destroyed our right to petition the government for redress of grievances and wrongs committed either by agents working for the government or by the government itself. One also cannot sue the U.S. government without their consent, and this is called judicial immunity or sovereign immunity. Why would they give their consent if you sued them for wrongful taking of federal income taxes? All of these factors conspire to make it very difficult if not impossible for the average sovereign American of the several states to protect his/her constitutional rights.

Below is a quote from the U.S. supreme Court on the subject of the types of official immunity in the case of Nevada v. Hicks, No. 99-1994 (U.S. 06/25/2001):

> "The doctrines of official immunity, see, e.g., Westfall v. Erwin, 484 U.S. 292, 296-300 (1988), and qualified immunity, see, e.g., Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 813-819 (1982), are designed to protect state and federal officials from civil liability for conduct that was within the scope of their duties or conduct that did not violate clearly established law. These doctrines short circuit civil litigation for officials who meet these standards so that these officials are not subjected to the costs of trial or the burdens of discovery. 457 U. S., at 817-818. For example, the Federal Employees Liability Reform and Tort Compensation Act of 1988, commonly known as the Westfall Act, allows the United States to substitute itself for a federal employee as defendant upon certifying that the employee was acting within the scope of his duties. 28 U.S. C. §2679(d). Nevada law contains analogous provisions. See Nev. Rev. Stat. §§41.032, 41.0335-41.0339 (1996 and Supp. 1999). The employee who successfully claims official immunity therefore invokes the immunity of the sovereign. When a state or federal official asserts qualified immunity, he claims that his actions were reasonable in light of clearly established law. Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635 (1987). In those cases, we allow that official to take an immediate interlocutory appeal from an adverse ruling to ensure that the civil proceedings do not continue if immunity should be granted. Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511, 524-530 (1985)."
> [Nevada v. Hicks, No. 99-1994] (U.S. 06/25/2001)

Below is a quote from the U.S. supreme Court on the subject of official immunity in the case of " Westfall Et Al. v. Erwin Et Ux.,484 U.S. 292 (1988):

> "In Barr v. Matteo, 360 U.S. 564 (1959), and Howard v. Lyons, 360 U.S. 593 (1959), this Court held that the scope of absolute official immunity afforded federal employees is a matter of federal law, "to be formulated by the courts in the absence of legislative action by Congress." Id., at 597. The purpose of such official immunity is not to protect an erring official, but to insulate the decisionmaking process from the harassment of prospective litigation. The provision of immunity rests on the view that the threat of liability will make federal officials unduly timid in carrying out their official duties, and that effective government will be promoted if officials are freed of the costs of vexatious and often frivolous damages suits. See Barr v. Matteo, supra, at 571; Doe v. McMillan, 412 U.S. 306, 319 (1973). This Court always has recognized, however, that official immunity comes at a great cost. An injured party with an otherwise meritorious tort claim is denied compensation simply because he had the misfortune to be injured by a federal official. Moreover, absolute immunity contravenes the basic tenet that individuals be held accountable for their wrongful conduct. We therefore have held that absolute immunity for federal officials is justified only when "the contributions of immunity to effective government in particular contexts outweigh the perhaps recurring harm to individual citizens." Doe v. McMillan, supra, at 320.

And finally, below is a description of qualified immunity from the u.S. supreme Court in the case of Harlow Et Al. v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800 (1982):

> "Government officials whose special functions or constitutional status requires complete protection from suits for damages -- including certain officials of the Executive Branch, such as prosecutors and similar officials, see Butz v. Economou, 438 U.S. 478, and the President, Nixon v. Fitzgerald, ante, p. 731 -- are entitled to the defense of absolute immunity. However, executive officials in general are usually entitled to only qualified or good-faith immunity. The recognition of a qualified immunity defense for high executives reflects an attempt to balance competing values: not only the importance of a damages remedy to protect the rights of citizens, but also the need to protect officials who are required to exercise discretion and the related public interest in encouraging the vigorous exercise of official authority. Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232. Federal officials seeking absolute immunity from personal liability for unconstitutional conduct must bear the burden of showing that public policy requires an exemption of that scope. Pp. 806-808."

6.9.4 Church Censorship, Manipulation, and Castration by the IRS

Churches are moral and social organizations. A big component of morality is social responsibility. However, the IRS has twisted the arms of churches by being empowered to pull their 501(c) tax exemption if they engage in socially responsible activities, such as eliminating bad laws, changing the laws, or advocating or opposing specific candidates for political office. This effectively neutralizes any negative impact churches might have on the IRS, for instance, by advocating elimination of income taxes, like Jesus did (see section 1.10.1 entitled "Jesus Christ, The Son of God, was a Tax Protester!). It also eliminates the possibility that churches will either sponsor or endorse godly men of principle for public office. Is it any wonder then why our politicians are so corrupt? This is a travesty and a disgrace. What good does it do to have free speech if you can't exercise it in the most important realm, which is the political and legislative realm? We would argue that under such circumstances, churches really don't have free speech.

IRS Publication 557, Tax Exempt Status for Your Organization, discusses the conditions under which churches can be tax-exempt. The Internal Revenue Manual (IRM) section 7.25.3, entitled "Religious, Charitable, Educational, Etc. Organizations" discusses how to qualify as an exempt church organization. The website below is where you can read this section:

http://www.irs.gov/irm/part7/ch10s03.html

The below excerpt from the IRM establishes a federal tax exemption for religious organizations:

> [7.25.3] 3.6 (02-23-1999)
> Religion or Advancement of Religion
> IRC 501(c)(3) provides for the exemption of organizations organized and operated exclusively for "religious" purposes. Because activities often serve more than one purpose, an organization that is "advancing religion" within the meaning of Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(2) may also qualify under IRC 501(c)(3) as charitable or educational organization.

Below is an excerpt from the IRM that determines the conditions under which a church will LOSE its tax exemption:

> Internal Revenue Manual
> [7.25.3] 3.3.4 (02-23-1999)
> Express Powers that Cause Failure of Organizational Test
> 1. An organization does not meet the organizational test if its articles expressly empower it:
>
> A. To devote more than an insubstantial part of its activities to influence legislation by propaganda or otherwise (Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1(b)(3)(i));
>
> B. Directly or indirectly to participate in, or intervene in (including the publishing or distributing of statements), any political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office (Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1 (b)(3)(ii));
>
> C. To have objectives and to engage in activities which characterize it as an "action" organization (Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1 (b)(3)(iii));
> D. To carry on any other activities (unless they are insubstantial) which are not in furtherance of one or more exempt purposes (Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1(b)(1)(i)(a)).

In the IRS Regulations, 26 C.F.R. §1.501(c)(3)(ii), churches are prohibited from being action organizations:

> (3) Action organizations. (i) An organization is not operated exclusively for one or more exempt purposes if it is an action organization as defined in subdivisions (ii), (iii), or (iv) of this subparagraph.
>
> (ii) An organization is an action organization if a substantial part of its activities is attempting to influence legislation by propaganda or otherwise. For this purpose, an organization will be regarded as attempting to influence legislation if the organization:
>
> (a) Contacts, or urges the public to contact, members of a legislative body for the purpose of proposing, supporting, or opposing legislation; or
> (b) Advocates the adoption or rejection of legislation.

The implications of the above amount to silencing the churches in the political and legislative realm. This in effect completely neutralizes them and violates their First Amendment Right of Free speech. The federal courts, according to the IRS in their IRM, said this was not the case, which has made a travesty of justice, as indicated in the below excerpt from the IRM:

> [7.25.3] 3.6.2 (02-23-1999)
> Compliance with Statutory Requirements
> 1. *Any religious organization, including a church, must satisfy the statutory requirements to be exempt under IRC 501(c)(3). As explained by the court in Christian Echos National Ministry. Inc. v. United States , 470 F.2d. 849 (10th Cir. 1972), cert . den ., 414 U.S. 864 (1973), in which the court upheld denial of tax exemption to a religious organization engaged in substantial legislative activity, "[i]n light of the fact that tax exemption is a matter of grace rather than right, we hold that the limitations contained in Section 501(c)(3) withholding exemption from nonprofit corporations [that engage in substantial lobbying] do not deprive Christian Echoes of its constitutionally guaranteed right of free speech. The taxpayer may engage in all such activities without restraint, subject, however, to withholding of the exemption, or, in the alternative, the taxpayer may refrain from such activities and obtain the privilege of exemption."
> 2. Exemption from state or local taxation is neither conclusive nor relevant to the determination whether an organization is operated exclusively for religious purposes under federal tax law. Universal Life Church v. U.S. , 721 U.S.T.C. 9467 (E.D. Cal. 1972).

Did you notice the above statement: "[i]n light of the fact that tax exemption is a matter of grace rather than right, we hold that the limitations contained in Section 501(c)(3) withholding exemption from nonprofit corporations [that engage in substantial lobbying] do not deprive Christian Echoes of its constitutionally guaranteed right of free speech.". This is a devious tactic to make First Amendment religious rights into government privileges. They are a privilege if they can be taken away arbitrarily by a government bureaucrat. We discuss this in section 4.3.12 "Government-instituted slavery using 'privileges'." We will repeat what we have said before in section 4.2.2 about rights in the Supreme Court case of Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965):

> "It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583. "Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied,' Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence,' Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345."
> *[*Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

The above situation also applies to the federal government. We assert that removing a tax exemption as a penalty for exercising exercise a First Amendment right is unconstitutional because transforms freedom of religion from being a right into a government-granted privilege. The supreme Court has in effect legislated making a First Amendment right into a government privilege that can be taken away with their ruling, which courts are not supposed to be doing. Removal of tax exemptions because of political views or activities amounts to political persecution and censorship of the freedom of religious rights and speech of people attending churches and the churches themselves. Is it any wonder why churches have become silent on government abuses and violations of laws and the reforming of our laws? This kind of tyranny must end!

If you have done your homework and read Chapter 5, you know enough to explain how the Supreme Court and the IRS can get away with this kind of tyranny. We concluded in that chapter that Subtitle A income taxes are voluntary for natural persons. The only people who are "taxpayers" liable for tax are those who volunteer. Since they volunteered, then technically, the IRS isn't interfering with the exercise of First Amendment rights because the consequence of volunteering to become "taxpayers" is that they have no rights. It's their own fault for not knowing this, and do you think the Supreme Court would share this subtle fact with anyone? In effect what the Supreme Court said in Christian Echos National Ministry. Inc. v. United States , 470 F.2d. 849 (10th Cir. 1972), cert . den ., 414 U.S. 864 (1973) is similar to the following:

> "You volunteered to marry your spouse, so don't come whining to us that she is infringing on your First Amendment free speech rights by telling you she wants a divorce because you told her she is fat!"

Funny! Because of the above type of censorship being imposed by the IRS and the Supreme Court against churches and other charitable organizations, if reform is going to come of our income tax system, then it will need to come either from outside the churches and based on volunteer efforts, or it we will need to educate the churches about this book so that they understand that they don't have to pay taxes and therefore need not worry about losing their tax exemption. Those churches who can't be convinced of their nonliability to pay income taxes but who still wish to politically protest income taxes will need to take a different approach as shown below:

Church officers should pursue political activity as individuals during their own off-duty time and when they are not acting as an officer or agent of the church.

1. Church facilities or computers should not be used to do solicitation or political lobbying. Instead, members of the church should donate their own time and computers for the purpose instead.
2. If officers or agents of the church get up on the pulpit during a meeting, the pastor should say that he has no position on what the party is saying and does not necessarily advocate what he/she is saying, but wanted to offer that person an opportunity to speak about an issue he isn't familiar with.
3. Churches can offer to their congregations a section in their handouts for public announcements and then disclaim any association or affiliation with the people making the announcements. These announcements can list times to coordinate political activities or educational or fund-raising events to take political action.

6.9.5 Illegal Treasury Regulation 26 C.F.R. §301.6331-1

Treasury regulation 26 C.F.R. §301.6331 implements 26 U.S.C. §6331. Recall that the scope of a regulation may not exceed that of the statute it implements. Recall that 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) states:

> (a) Authority of Secretary
> If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official, of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.

The purpose for this regulation is clear. It allows federal government employers to request that the agency employing a federal employee may withhold their wages for nonpayment of income taxes without the need for a court order. This also explains why under 26 U.S.C. §6331(e) allows for continuous levies upon federal wages without a court order even though this would otherwise violate the Fifth Amendment due process rights of the person levied upon. The process described in 26 U.S.C. §6331 is usually implemented using the IRS Form 668-A "Notice of Levy". However, the Notice of Levy may not be used against private employers or those who are not federal employers and instead requires a legal action and a corresponding court order before the levy may be instituted. The IRS very commonly and illegally misuses the "Notice of Levy form" against private employers, in part because the implementing regulation illegally expands the scope of the statute in 26 C.F.R. §301.6331-1 as follows:

> "Levy may be made by serving a notice of levy on any person in possession of, or obligated with respect to, property or rights to property subject to levy, including receivables, bank accounts, evidences of debt, securities, and salaries, wages, commissions, or other compensation."

The regulation should say that it only applies to federal employers, since the persons to be levied upon under 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) are only federal employees. Private employers who are not part of the federal government can safely disregard both the IRS Form 668A and 668B forms and only surrender property of their employees when they receive a valid court order. This is confirmed by the Legal Reference Guide for Revenue Officers, [MT 58[10][0]-14, Internal Revenue Service, which states in pertinent part:

> 332 (10-29-79)
> Constitutional Limitations
> (1) During the course of administratively collecting a tax, an occasion may arise where service of a levy or notice of levy is not adequate to seize property of the taxpayer. However, it cannot be emphasized too strongly that constitutional guarantees and individual rights must not be violated. Property should not be forceably removed from the person of a taxpayer. Such conduct may expose a revenue officer to an action in trespass, assault and battery, conversion, etc. Larson v. Domestic and foreign Commerce Corp., 337 U.S. 682 (1949), rehearing denied, 337 U.S. 682 (1949). Maule Industries v. Tomlinson, 224 F.2d. 897, (5th Cir. 1949). If there is reason to suspect a failure to honor a notice of levy or an interference with levy, the matter should be referred for proper legal action against the offending party. Remedies available to the Government, as contained in the Code and other statutes, are more than adequate to cope with the problem.

The IRS also conveniently removes 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) from the back of the IRS Form 668-A(c)DO to hide the fact from private employers that they have no authority to demand property. It is only the ignorance of third party private employers and financial institutions that allows the IRS to seize assets through force using the "Notice of Levy" that they otherwise could not have gotten.

6.9.6 IRS Trickery on the 1040 Form to Get Us Inside the Federal Zone

For the purposes of the federal income tax we can lawfully be treated by the national government as though we were a "resident" (which is an alien) of the federal zone by actually being domiciled in the federal zone or by electing to be treated as though we do as a "person" married to a "U.S. citizen" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h). When we file a 1040 income tax form without attaching an IRS Form 2555, for instance, we are fraudulently telling the federal government that we are an alien domiciled in the federal zone, insofar as the Internal Revenue Code is concerned, because we are claiming to be a "resident" of the U.S., which is to say from 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) that we live in the District of Columbia or some other federal territory or part of the "federal zone" and that we are an "alien" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). Why would we want to elect to be treated as an alien domiciled in the District of Columbia (federal zone) when there is absolutely no advantage to doing so on our tax forms? The only reason is because we have been tricked by our own government because of our own ignorance of the law into using the legally incorrect words and definitions they put in the IRS publications and on the 1040 form itself, which prominently says "U.S. Individual income tax return", which means we live in the U.S. (the District of Columbia). This fraud is encouraged and allowed to propagate because the IRS in its publications and especially in the 1040 booklet, never clarifies the three definitions of United States (see Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945), where we learned the three definitions of "United States") or which of the three we are using when we prepare the tax return.

Technically, as people domiciled outside the federal zone and inside the 50 union states, we live in the U.S.A. but NOT in the [federal] U.S. for the purposes of the income tax, so we are already committing a fraud when we file the 1040 form and sign it under penalty of perjury. Do you think our own dishonest government would ever point that out when it advantages them financially in such a significant way? Pitman Buck, Jr. has written an entire book about this subject called The Colossal Fraud of "Involuntary Perjury".

An interesting way to view this fraud is that it is an enticement into (financial) slavery, which violates 18 U.S.C. §1583, entitled "Enticement into slavery". 18 U.S.C. §1581 also prohibits arresting or apprehending anyone into slavery, which is exactly what the federal marshal does when they arrest someone who is convicted of a federal tax crime for cases in which they technically are not in actuality liable for any tax, but for which the court refuses to apply the law correctly. Such cases might occur, for instance, when the judge knows the accused is not liable for tax and knows the correct application of the Internal Revenue Code but because the accused did not address it or express his understanding of the law correctly, the judge sides with the government so that the tax system would not be undermined and so that his judgeship would not be terminated by the irate President or Congress who appointed him for "bad behavior".

6.9.7 IRS Form 1040: Irrational Conspiracy to Violate Rights

Many of the same arguments that as we present below in section 6.9.8 about the violations of our Constitutional rights with the IRS Form W-4 apply to the IRS Form 1040 as well. We won't repeat those arguments here, except to say that being compelled in any way to either submit or to sign a 1040 form violates our First Amendment right to NOT communicate with our government, our Fourth Amendment right to the privacy of our personal papers and effects (of which we could classify our tax returns and financial records as falling into the category of personal papers and effects), and our Fifth Amendment right to due process in the taking of our property and to not incriminate ourselves. All we have to prove in order to justify the conclusion that there are violations of rights is to demonstrate that there is any kind of penalty, compulsion, or punishment by the government for exercising these rights. Below are some of the possible statutory penalties imposed for exercising our right not to file a tax return, and these penalties are imposed as a result of statutes developed by the U.S. Congress and prosecuted by the Department of Justice.

Table 6-4: Unconstitutional IRS/Treasury Regulations Relating to form 1040

Statute	Condition when 5th Amendment is violated	Notes

26 U.S.C. §6702	Frivolous Income Tax Return	If the First and Fifth Amendments say you can't be compelled submit a return or testify against yourself in the return, then why can they criminally prosecute you for filling out a frivolous return, including one with no signature, a modified jurat statement above the signature, or incomplete or inaccurate information?
26 U.S.C. §7203	Willful failure to file return, supply information, or pay tax	If the First and Fifth Amendments say you can't be compelled to submit a return or to testify against yourself in the return, then why can the DOJ criminally prosecute you for not filing one and throw you in jail?
26 U.S.C. §7206	Fraud and false statements	If the First and Fifth Amendments say you can't be compelled submit a return or testify against yourself in the return, then why can they criminally prosecute you for what you do choose to say on the form without compulsion, as long as you don't represent that it is true or accurate by signing it?

The fact that the U.S. Congress wrote these statutes and the fact that they were debated, discussed, and voted on before they were passed makes theses statutes a "conspiracy against rights" under 18 U.S.C. Sec. 241, punishable by a fine or imprisonment not more than ten years, or both!

Consider the purpose of § 6702 of the Internal Revenue Code as stated by the appellate court in Gary Holder v. Secretary of the Treasury, 791 F.2d. 68, 72 (7th Cir. 1986), when an individual is penalized $500 under § 6702 for failing or refusing — based upon his belief that he is not liable for income taxes — to sign the Form 1040 jurat. The jurat reads:

> "Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this return and accompanying schedules and statements, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, they are true, correct, and complete."

Here is what the court in Holder said was the purpose of imposing a penalty under § 6702:

> "The purpose of §§ 6673 and 6702, like the purpose of Rules 11 and 38 and of § 1927, is to induce litigants to conform their behavior to the governing rules regardless of their subjective beliefs."

But hold on there, your honors! One of the governing rules is §7206 of the Internal Revenue Code, a rule whose purpose is to affect or regulate behavior by prohibiting perjury. Section 7206 reads:

> "Any person who- ... Willfully makes and subscribes any return, statement, or other document, which contains or is verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury, and which he does not believe to be true and correct as to every material matter ... shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $100,000 ($500,000 in the case of a corporation) or imprisoned not more than 3 years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution." See also 18 U.S.C. § 1621 for definition of perjury.

Belief is defined in Black's Law Dictionary (Sixth Edition, p. 155) as:

> "A conviction of the truth of a proposition, existing subjectively in the mind, and induced by argument, persuasion, or proof addressed to the judgment."
> *[*Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 155]

The Holder court's explanation of the purpose of § 6702 is ridiculous when applied to regulate the behavior of individuals with regard to their decision to sign or not to sign the jurat of Form 1040. The Holder explanation about the purpose of § 6702 is not applicable to the purpose of the governing rule § 7206 because the obvious purpose of § 7206 is to induce people to base their behavior upon their subjective belief. Thus, the purpose of § 7206 is the exact opposite of § 6702 as stated in Holder.

It must be obvious to all but the most obtuse of minds that an interpretation of law or the application of an interpretation of law that induces people to complete and sign the government's prescribed Form 1040 and its prescribed jurat regardless of their beliefs is absolutely irrational and preposterous! The stated purpose of § 6702 is to induce people to disregard their beliefs whereas § 7206 makes the act (behavior) of signing the Form 1040 jurat dependent upon the potential affiant's knowledge and belief. Under the First Amendment rights to freedom of belief and the expression thereof, no individual who believes he is not liable for income taxes is obligated to intentionally change his belief — if that were possible — so that, with his new belief that he is liable for income taxes, he could honestly fill in the blanks of the prescribed IRS Form 1040 and conscientiously sign its prescribed jurat. Plainly, the imposition of a $500 penalty under color of § 6702 in order to induce people to sign the Form 1040 regardless of their beliefs conflicts with the tax code rule that defines and punishes perjury, i.e., § 7206. Any attempt or coercion under color of law to induce individuals to take an oath or sign a jurat that is contrary to their knowledge and/or belief is nothing less than official oppression and intellectual tyranny. Welcome to George Orwell's 1984!

The Supreme Court in Cheek v. United States, 498 U.S. 192, 111 S.Ct. 604 (1991), ruled that where one's belief is a relevant question to a situation or case, the question must be judged by a jury using the subjective standard. It is abundantly clear that a person's belief about whether he owes the federal government any income taxes is relevant to his conscientious ability to make and sign, under penalties of perjury, a Form 1040 tax return. By penalizing people under color of § 6702 when they fail or refuse to sign the Form 1040 jurat because of their belief (for example, the belief that they are not liable for income taxes), the IRS is presumptively making judgments about individuals' beliefs using the Cheek-discredited objective standard and without benefit of a jury. The signing of the government's prescribed Form 1040 jurat or a decision not to sign it is dependent upon one's knowledge and belief about the Internal Revenue Code. Section 7206 makes it so.

Clearly, an individual cannot make an honest and intelligent decision to sign or not to sign a document without recourse to his or her state of mind. The issue of penalizing individuals under 26 U.S.C. §6702 for failing or refusing to sign the Form 1040 jurat (based on their belief that they are not liable for income taxes) can never be properly settled as long as the IRS and courts, using twisted logic, rule that individuals must declare their knowledge and belief on the government's prescribed Form 1040 jurat while also ruling that under § 6702 — the statute under color of which individuals are penalized for not signing the jurat — their state of mind and good faith belief are irrelevant.

Belief is at once both subjective and a legal fact to be judged by a jury when it is relevant to behavior and in dispute. But the IRS, being the arbitrary, despotic, Gestapo-like agency that it is, and with the indulgence of the lower courts, insists on judging the subjective and factual question of one's belief using the objective standard and has yet to listen to reason. The obvious lesson taught by the IRS and the lower courts in this matter is, to say the least, extraordinary and quite remarkable: in order for individuals to escape the $500 penalty imposed under color of § 6702 for their failure or refusal to sign the jurat based upon their study and conscientious belief that they are not liable for income taxes, they should complete the government's prescribed Form 1040 and sign its prescribed jurat regardless of their beliefs and despite the perjury statutes!

6.9.8 IRS Form W-4 Scandals

This section discusses the fraud and the illegal or unconstitutional regulations and practices that the IRS and the Treasury have developed and used in the administration of the W-4 income tax forms, which are called the "Withholding Allowance Certificate". The purpose of these forms is for the Citizen to give permission to their employer to institute "voluntary" withholding of federal income taxes from their paychecks.

We'd like to remind you that throughout this book, we have used the 26 U.S.C. §861/source issues and other issues to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the federal income tax system is truly voluntary for most of us and that citizens domiciled in the 50 union states with domestic rather than foreign income are not liable to pay these taxes. Because of this, the IRS and the Treasury basically has to commit fraud on the W-4 application to trick or deceive citizens into believing that they can be held criminally liable for the payment of income taxes. How do they do it? We'll explain here, and we'll show that they had to violate the law and the constitution to do it.

6.9.8.1 Fraud on the W-4 Form

The first fraud of the Treasury/IRS is in the naming of the IRS Form W-4 itself. Instead of "Withholding Allowance Certificate" the form really should be called a "Voluntary Monthly Donation Certificate" form, to remind people that the paying of federal income taxes is voluntary and cannot be coerced or compelled. This is in keeping with the Supreme Court Ruling in Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145 (1960):

"Our tax system is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not upon distraint".

For those of you who don't know, "distraint" means force or coercion. Such a name for the form would also reinforce that the for is NOT for the withholding of TAX, because taxes are something that citizens are assessed or made liable for, and most of us aren't liable for paying ANYTHING in federal income taxes. The few that are have foreign income or are nonresident aliens, and for those people, their permission isn't required, so you don't NEED an allowance form!

The second lie on the form is the definition of "employee", which they conveniently don't tell you on the IRS Form W-4, which we covered in section 3.12.1.4 and which also appears in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c):

"the term "employee" includes [is limited to] an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation."

Do you think anyone would complete this form if they were familiar with the proper legal definition of the term "employee"? Instead, the IRS publications expand the definition of employee well beyond this definition (see table 3-10 in section 3.5.12) without any constitutional authority whatsoever to do so! Why aren't they being prosecuted for exceeding the constitutional bounds of their authority? Remember that the IRS regulations that expand the definition of "employee" (see 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(d)-1) can be no more expansive than the U.S. Codes they are based on because these definitions must implement the codes!

If you look at the IRS Form W-4 itself, there are a number of questionable and misleading things on the form. Below is the first one we'd like to discuss that appears at the top of the form. You can view this form at:

http://www.irs.gov/forms_pubs/forms.html

"Routine uses of this form include giving it to the Department of Justice for civil and criminal litigation [AGAINST YOU!!!], to cities and states, and the District of Columbia for use in administering their tax laws".

This statement is there for a reason! They are putting you on notice, rather blandly and innocuously, that you are waiving your 5th Amendment rights to not be compelled to incriminate yourself, which can only be done voluntarily and without coercion! Of course, as a "resident" of the federal zone, you don't have fifth amendment rights, which is why they can make the warning so bland. This warning means that if you are a nonresident of the federal zone, you DON'T have to fill out this form and can't be compelled to do so! Remember that the main purpose of the Department of Justice is to PROSECUTE CRIMES, and the 5th Amendment says you can't be compelled to incriminate yourself. Don't let your employer incriminate you either by filling in any part of the form in for you! There's no law that says your employer has to do anything with the form or fill it out if you won't fill it out! The IRS, however, lies to you or doesn't tell you the whole truth because they don't tell you on the form that you don't have to fill out this form and can't be penalized in any way because of your failure to fill it out or submit it. Instead, they tell you on their website at:

http://www.irs.gov/faqs/display/0,,i1%3D54%26genericId%3D16275,00.html

That:

"You should inform your employees of the importance of submitting an accurate Form W-4. An employee may be subject to a $500 penalty if he or she submits, with no reasonable basis, a Form W-4 that results in less tax being withheld than is required. There is no penalty if your employee doesn't claim enough withholding allowances and has too much withheld."

It is obvious that the IRS is trying here to coerce your employer into coercing you to surrender your 5th Amendment rights on your behalf, which is a violation of several laws. Remember that the exercise of rights can't be fined or penalized, or they aren't rights (see section 4.2.2, "Fundamental Rights: Granted by God and Cannot be Regulated by the Government")! Remember the court ruling we quoted in that section for Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965):

"It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583. "Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied,' Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence,' Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345."

*[*Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

And yet, the IRS also coerces you again on the back of the IRS Form W-4 by saying:

> "Failure to provide a properly completed form will result in your being treated as a single person who claims no withholding allowances; providing fraudulent information may also subject you to penalties."

The "penalty" here for exercising your Fifth Amendment right is being compelled to give away your property against your will and without your consent, which is in effect THEFT! Then because they stole your property, they compel you later to fill out a ton of forms to "qualify" to get tax money back that you were never liable for to begin with, during which time you have to surrender your Fifth Amendment right AGAIN by signing a 1040 form AGAIN under penalty of perjury, and in effect becoming a compelled witness against yourself! The violation of the right the first time lead to a compelled SECOND violation of the same right! And then what about the violation of your 4th Amendment right to privacy because completing the 1040 form coerces you to reveal intimate details not only about your own financial life, but that of your loved ones as well when you complete the form, and the law says the IRS can use your tax form to criminally prosecute your spouse! This kind of tyranny has to stop! It could destroy your marriage and it is compelled!

Here are only a few of the laws and rights violated by the IRS during this process:

1. Your First Amendment Right NOT to speak to your government or to be compelled to speak (or write) to your government. The right of free speech includes the right NOT to speak if you don't want to!
2. Violation of your Fourth Amendment right to privacy (which you can petition the government to correct under the First Amendment to the Constitution, called the Petition clause).
3. Violating you Fifth Amendment rights (which you can petition the government to correct under the First Amendment to the Constitution, called the Petition clause).
4. 18 USC §242 provides that "whoever, under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, or custom, willfully subjects any person in any State, Territory, Commonwealth, Possession, or District to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured or protected by the Constitution or laws of the United States ... shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both."
5. 18 USC §245 "Violation of rights" provides that "Whoever, whether or not acting under color of law, intimidates or interferes with any person from participating in or enjoying any benefit, service, privilege, program, facility, or activity provided or administered by the United States; [or] applying for or enjoying employment, or any perquisite thereof, by any agency of the United States; shall be fined under this title, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both."
6. 42 USC §1983 provides that "every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress."

6.9.8.2 Unconstitutional IRS/Treasury Regulations Relating to the W-4

To keep this corrupt tax system we have alive and well, in addition to committing fraud on the IRS Form W-4 documented above, the IRS/Treasury also have had to pass regulations that are clearly unconstitutional to administer the program. As we have emphasized before in section 3.15, the CFR's are the official regulations of the Treasury and the Commissioner of the IRS that implement Title 26 of the U.S. Codes. The bounds of authority of the IRS are explicitly and clearly defined in the U.S. Codes, and the implementing regulations in the CFR's may not exceed the strictly limited definitions and authority granted explicitly in these codes.

The right that is violated by the IRS/Treasury implementing regulations in 26 C.F.R. is once again the Fifth Amendment, which says in part:

> No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

Now we will put the IRS implementing regulations to the test. Below are a few regulations that will really get you steaming and which quite clearly penalize the exercise of one's Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate oneself and one's right to not be deprived of property without one's consent or a due process (court hearing). Remember, that in ALL of the IRS/Treasury regulations cited below:

1. The IRS is NOT required to obtain your consent or even consult or notify you before taking your property.
2. The IRS has no obligation to demonstrate a liability to pay federal income tax before it STOLE YOUR MONEY!!
3. The IRS is NOT a part of the federal judiciary, and that no jury trial is being held by the IRS before it orders/tells your employer to extort your property/money and give it to them without a trial.

You can read these regulations for yourself at:

Table 6-5: Unconstitutional IRS/Treasury Regulations Relating to Form W-4

Regulation	Condition when 5th Amendment is violated
31.3402(f)(2)-1(a)	a) On commencement of employment. On or before the date on which an individual commences employment with an employer, the individual shall furnish the employer with a signed withholding exemption certificate relating to his marital status and the number of withholding exemptions which he claims, which number shall in no event exceed the number to which he is entitled, or, if the statements described in Sec. 31.3402(n)-1 are true with respect to an individual, he may furnish his employer with a signed withholding exemption certificate which contains such statements.
31.3402(f)(2)-1(a)	"The employer is required to request a withholding exemption certificate from each employee, but if the employee fails to furnish such certificate, such employee shall be considered as a single person claiming no withholding exemptions."
31.3402(f)(2)-1(e)	If an employer receives an invalid withholding exemption certificate, he shall consider it a nullity for purposes of computing withholding; he shall inform the employee who submitted the certificate that it is invalid, and shall request another withholding exemption certificate from the employee. If the employee who submitted the invalid certificate fails to comply with the employer's request, the employer shall withhold from the employee as from a single person claiming no exemptions (see Sec. 31.3402 (f)(2)-1(a))
31.3402(f)(2)-1(g)(v)	(v) The employer shall promptly furnish the employee who filed the defective certificate, if still in his employ, with a copy of the written notice of the Internal Revenue Service with respect to the certificate and may request another withholding exemption certificate from the employee. The employer shall withhold amounts from the employee on the basis of the maximum number specified in the written notice received from the Service. (vi) If and when the employee does file any new certificate (after an earlier certificate of the employee was considered to be defective), the employer shall withhold on the basis of that new certificate (whenever filed) as currently effective only if the new certificate does not make a claim of exempt status or of a number of withholding exemptions which claim is inconsistent with the advice earlier furnished by the Internal Revenue Service in its written notice to the employer. If any new certificate does make a claim which is inconsistent with the advice contained in the Service's written notice to the employer, then the employer shall disregard the new certificate, shall not submit that new certificate to the Service, and shall continue to withhold amounts from the employee on the basis of the maximum number specified in the written notice received from the Service.
31.3402(f)(2)-1(g)(vii)	(vii) If the employee makes a claim on any new certificate that is inconsistent with the advice in the Service's written notice to the employer, the employee may specify on such new certificate, or by a written statement attached to that certificate, any circumstances of the employee which have changed since the date of the Service's earlier written notice, or any other circumstances or reasons, as justification or support for the claims made by the employee on the new certificate. The employee may then submit that new certificate and written statement either to (A) the Internal Revenue Service office specified in the notice earlier furnished to the employer under this paragraph (g)(5), or to (B) the employer, who must then submit a copy of that new certificate and the employee's written statement (if any) to the Internal Revenue Service office specified in the notice earlier furnished to the employer. The employer shall continue to disregard that new certificate and shall continue to withhold amounts from the employee on the basis of the maximum number specified in the written notice received from the Service unless and until the Internal Revenue Service by written notice (under paragraph (g)(5)(iii) of this section) advises the employer to withhold on the basis of that new certificate and revokes its earlier written notice.

We didn't mention above, the hundreds of different types of penalties the IRS assesses against individuals who don't pay their taxes, which in most cases they don't owe anyway based on the 861/source argument. If you factor in these penalties, there are even greater reasons to believe that a massive "conspiracy to deprive of rights" (in this case 5th Amendment Rights) exists, in violation of 18 U.S.C. 241.

With this kind of background, can you see not why our prudent founding fathers prohibited direct taxes on citizens? There are so many constitutional conflicts that result when we violate the prohibition on direct taxes without apportionment specified in Article I, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution!

6.9.8.3 Line 3a of W-4 modifies and obfuscates 26 U.S.C. §3402 (n)

26 U.S.C. §3402(n) is the section that determines the conditions under which persons may declare on their W-4 that they are exempt and have no tax liability. It states:

> (n) Employees incurring no income tax liability—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, an employee shall not be required to deduct and withhold any tax under this chapter upon a payment of wages to an employee if there is in effect with respect to such payment a withholding exemption certificate (in such form and containing such other information as the Secretary may prescribe) furnished to the employer by the employee certifying that the employee—
> > (1) incurred no liability for income tax imposed under subtitle A for his preceding taxable year, and
> > (2) anticipates that he will incur no liability for income tax imposed under subtitle A for his current taxable year.
> The Secretary shall by regulations provide for the coordination of the provisions of this subsection with the provision of subsection (f)

However, on the W-4, it states on line 3:

> 3 I claim exemption from withholding because (see instructions and check boxes below that apply):
>
> a. ___Last year I did not owe any Federal Income tax and had a right to a full refund of ALL income tax withheld, AND
> b. ___This year I do not expect to owe any Federal income tax and expect to have a right to a full refund of ALL income tax withheld. If both a and b apply, enter "EXEMPT" here.

You should notice that a different word is used on line 3a of the W-4 than is used in the code. Why did the IRS deviate from the wording in the statute when there is clearly no need for it? The law says nothing about tax refunds, and it speaks ONLY of tax "liability", not "owing" the tax. There can be no doubt that the W-4 was worded to conflict with the code in order to frustrate its proper application. If the IRS used the word "liable" instead of "owe" on the IRS Form W-4, they would draw attention to that word and people would start looking for it in the tax code and find that it isn't used anywhere in the context of any of the Subtitles A through C income taxes! They would virtually guarantee losing a court case over the use of this word if someone sued them, so they replace the word with "owe" to confuse things and so the word can't be interpreted literally in the code itself. In any case, natural persons who understand that there is not statute within Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C.) subtitles A through C making anyone liable for the payment of these voluntary donations (taxes), then they can safely write "EXEMPT" in the box and check boxes 3a and 3b. And since the tax was collected illegally on the basis of fraud and intimidation, all employees certainly have the "right" to a full refund—regardless of whether the federal mafia recognizes that right.

6.9.9 Whistleblower Retaliation

6.9.9.1 1998: IRS Historian Quits-Then Gets Audited[394]

[394] Losing Your Illusions, Gordon Phillips, p. 20.

Former official historian for the Internal Revenue Service, Shelley Davis, quit her post in protest over how the agency is systematically destroying its historical documents, presumably to break the trail of any possible investigation into the numerous ways that the internal revenue laws are being violated.

The IRS has also stated in 1999 (?) that it is abolishing the position of historian. The IRS has announced it wanted to audit Ms. Davis' tax returns, who was a former IRS historian. Yes, the IRS will turn on anyone, including one of its own.

In the 1998 senate hearings that resulted in the approval of the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act (RRA) during which IRS abuses were exposed, the IRS agents who were blowing the whistle on the agency repeated over and over that they felt they were doing a service by testifying against the agency, but that their biggest concern was now becoming targets of retaliation by the IRS or Department of Justice.

Sure, and if they close their eyes and wish real hard, Tinkerbell will appear. As you may have surmised, if you've been paying attention, I personally do not have the "highest confidence in the integrity" of the Internal Revenue Service. Yet, in spite of Ms. Richardson's (the former IRS commissioner who quit over compliance issues) heartwarming sentiment and Publication 1's reassuring rhetoric about the "voluntary" nature of the income tax, just like the creature in the movie "Alien" that won't stop until it has located and devoured your property--assuming you own property titled in your own name, of course--and has totally destroyed you, both financially and personally. Remember, like the Alien, the government is hungry. It must eat to survive and it will destroy you to feed itself if it has to, in blatant violation of your constitutionally protected rights as an American. See:

> Mr. Chairman and Members of the Senate Finance Committee, I am pleased to be able to share a few of my thoughts and experiences with you today as you explore specific issues of IRS abuse of those the tax agency likes to call its "customers" -- American taxpayers.
> For 16 years I worked as an historian for the federal government. Nine of those years were with the Department of Defense and the final seven were spent as the first and unfortunately, the last, official historian for the Internal Revenue Service. At the end of 1995, I resigned from my federal career in protest over the unwillingness of the IRS, or the Treasury Department Inspector General, to investigate my complaint of illegal document destruction by the IRS. I learned that the same federal investigator to whom I originally reported my concerns regarding this, had turned around and opened an investigation of me on unfounded and false charges of "wrongful release of confidential information." Later, I learned that this is a common tactic used against IRS employees who dare to speak up against management. I knew then that I had no alternative but to resign and try to raise awareness of the intransigence, arrogance, and abusive patterns of behavior that I found all too common inside the headquarters of the IRS. I decided to write a book which was published earlier this year entitled, "Unbridled Power."
> My testimony today will touch briefly on three areas:
> 1.) The cultural climate of the IRS;
> 2.) List keeping at the IRS;
> 3.) The IRS definition of "tax protester."
> My introduction to the culture of the IRS came during my earliest days with the tax agency, in the fall of 1988. Although I had been hired as the first historian for the IRS, I found little interest or support for my efforts. I found even less history. By history I mean both an awareness of the heritage of the IRS as well as the raw material (the documentation) from which narrative history is distilled. Neither the documents nor the heritage were to be found.

Initially, I found this curious. Later, I found it alarming. At the IRS National Headquarters, there seemed little connection between the work of employees and actual tax collection--what I presumed to be the mission of the IRS. Rather than possessing any basic curiosity about the past, the IRS employees I encountered exhibited a wariness, a suspicion--assuming that anyone looking for records must have some definite agenda. An agenda presumed to be negative.

This reluctance to think about the past translated into routine day-to-day operations, meaning that all documents were tossed, shredded, whatever, when a program was completed--or shut down, as in the case of many IRS computer projects. No records. No paper trail. No history.

As time went on, I realized that this not only made my job as historian virtually impossible, but that it guaranteed that the IRS could never be held accountable for its actions. With a sense of historical development, I came up with my own interpretation of this phenomenon. One could easily pass off the reluctance of the IRS to acknowledge its past as a reaction to a constant barrage of criticism. But the IRS is certainly not the only federal agency subjected to criticism from the press, Congress, or the public.

Instead of reflecting on positive actions in response to criticism, the IRS proclaims that any criticism of the agency is "IRS bashing" and "will only lead to more tax protesters." Rather than respond with solid information, historical examples, and analysis, the IRS jumps around skittishly, telling Congress that this reorganization, or that new position, or another new task force will remedy the current problem. The IRS has learned that its most effective response to inquiring questions from Congress, from the press, or from the American people is to hide behind the privacy laws. These are the laws meant to protect taxpayers. But by endlessly citing restrictions on its authority to comment on taxpayer cases, the IRS deflects criticism for any and all actions. In essence, the response of the IRS to question about anything and everything is, "Trust us. We're doing the right thing. We just can't tell you what that is because we're protecting American taxpayers."

A corollary to this defensive shield is the penchant of the IRS to destroy its paper trail. There were virtually no records of IRS actions throughout the twentieth century in any of the repositories where one would normally find federal records: the IRS itself, the National Archives (including the permanent archives in Washington, D.C., the 10 records centers around the country, or the Presidential libraries.)

In my early years with the IRS, a good question to ask was, "Where are the records?" What I learned was shocking. The records had been destroyed. Gone. Shredded. Tossed. They no longer exist due to a lack of attention to, or concern for, the law which requires all federal agencies to preserve records of what they do. It is as though the IRS assumed that laws which apply to the FBI, to the CIA, to every other part of the federal establishment can be ignored.

No other agency of our government could get away with this. I questioned the reason why it had taken so long for anyone to realize that the records were not just missing, but destroyed. I believe the answer is based on fear. As taxpayers, why would we ever question the one agency that can truly bite back? Our fear of suffering a personal attack from the IRS generally keeps most of us in check. Our fear of being audited has allowed the IRS to theoretically eliminate any potential smoking guns by trashing its own records. This ensures that it can never be held accountable for its actions. How can you prove any wrongdoing when the evidence is already destroyed?

The IRS has learned that the privacy protections are its best weapon in its war against its "customers." There is an "us against them" mentality which is far too common among IRS employees. I witnessed and experienced this attitude firsthand for over seven years working at the IRS headquarters. When I questioned the lack of record keeping by the IRS, it was made clear to me that I was a "lone ranger," a "loose cannon," and "not a team player." Is it any wonder they investigated me?

I'll conclude this section with a stark example from my personal experience. After my protest resignation at the end of 1995, admittedly I was not on the "most favored" list of IRS. But when I went to the IRS National Office on Monday, April 15, 1996, to meet a friend who had invited me for lunch to celebrate my birthday, I did not expect to be threatened with arrest. But that is what happened.

While waiting for my friend to meet me at the entrance of the building, I was pulled aside by an IRS internal security agent who told me to leave immediately because I was officially "banned" from the building.

I thought this was odd as I was standing in the front entrance, a public space. When I asked for an explanation, I was told that I was "banned" because I "did not turn in my official identification badge when I resigned four months earlier."

This was untrue.

When the agent detaining me prepared to call for Federal Protective Service agents to carry out her threat to arrest me, I knew I had to make a quick decision: let them carry through with this absurd threat, or turn and leave. I left. To this day, I wish I had stayed and made them carry through with their threat. The IRS brought false charges against me, used government resources to pursue a false investigation of me, and continued to harass me even after I had resigned. With the IRS, as I am sure you will hear from others today, retaliation is prompt, swift and catastrophic.

My years with the IRS were spent exclusively in the National Office, the headquarters of the tax agency. Throughout my tenure at the IRS, I often heard stories that different types of codes were used to identify taxpayers and returns.

I have specific knowledge of one type of list maintained inside the IRS. It is a product of a secretive, cloistered unit of the IRS which existed from 1969 through 1973, known by the name "Special Services Staff," or SSS.

The SSS list had approximately 11,000 individuals and organizations designated as possible audit targets by the IRS. Who were these people and organizations? Some were names you will recognize: Shirley MacLaine, Joan Baez, John Lindsay, the Black Panthers, and the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee(SNCC).

But most of those who made it onto the list were not household names but were individuals the SSS determined were of questionable character as determined by the SSS.

Ten employees of the SSS dutifully clipped newspaper articles each day. The FBI willingly sent over its own files on political dissidents and protesters, and subscriptions were taken to radical publications which were perused for names and other leads. All in all, the SSS targeted individuals with no known tax problems for audit simply because of their political activities.

The commissioner who abolished the SSS, Donald Alexander, actually testified before Congress in 1975 that he believed the SSS records should be taken "out on the mall and burned."

Yet, despite the fact that the SSS files remain intact at the IRS (at least through my resignation at the end of 1995), the IRS steadfastly refuses to release the files to researchers or even to the National Archives for safekeeping. Why? Because they contain "taxpayer information." Who is protecting whom, one has to wonder? What has all this got to do with the present? Today I believe there exist thousands of names of American taxpayers whose Master Files are coded as TC-148, which brands them as "Illegal Tax Protesters." Whether this is a list, or compilation of files which bear that designation, is semantics. Just how many Americans bear this designation?

At the very least, we need to know if we are on that list, We reserve that right. The IRS says we can't know and don't have a right to know while simultaneously claiming Congress wants it this way.

The only thing being protected in this scenario is the IRS. Just what is a tax protester? Your definition, like mine, is probably different from the IRS definition. I learned that while inside the IRS.

A tax protester, in my definition, is not someone who may oppose our system of taxation, but pays his taxes nonetheless. A tax protester is not someone who says that our tax system is broken and must be dismantled, but still files a Form 1040. A tax protester is not someone who merely criticizes the IRS. A tax protester is not someone who challenges an IRS assessment. But in the mind of the IRS, all of the above ideas fit the unofficial IRS profile of a tax protester. In the cloistered environment of the IRS, criticism of the IRS, or the income tax, equals tax protester. Anyone who has the misfortune of bearing that title is most likely going to witness first hand just what "taxpayer abuse" really means.

Don't get me wrong. I am not in any way condoning the actions of those who, by one manner or another, attempt to cheat or not live up to their financial responsibilities as a U.S. citizen. But I do recognize the use of the label of "Illegal Tax Protestor" as another powerful weapon of the most powerful agency in America. It is time for Congress to compel the IRS to be more forthcoming about its audit procedures, even though the IRS would like us to believe that our system of taxation will collapse if the American people know how their tax collector goes about his or her business.

The IRS gains too much benefit from the privacy laws to come clean on its own. The culture of the IRS, built over decades of learning to hide behind the privacy laws, will not change on its own. Without intervention from Congress, it will not happen. Last year, a top career IRS executive testified before Congress that, "There is the general view that the more mysterious tax enforcement is, the more likely taxpayers will voluntarily comply." Mystery breeds distrust and contempt. It also breeds fear, which compels many taxpayers to comply with the tax laws because they are afraid of the consequences, but it does not breed voluntary compliance or trust.

The arrogance of the IRS is outrageous and harmful. We lose more than we gain by allowing the IRS to operate in this manner. Congress must demand accountability from the IRS. Congress must shine the spotlight on the IRS and never switch the power off.

Thank you.

6.9.9.2 1993: IRS Raided the Save-A-Patriot Fellowship[395]

Unlike many so-called "tax groups" which are nothing more than boiler room operations, often moving from State to State to avoid detection, the Save-A-Patriot Fellowship has been at the same physical location at 12 Carroll Street, Westminster, Maryland, and at the same telephone number (410) 857-4441, since opening their doors in 1984.

Fellowship Fiduciary, John Kotmair, has employed individuals for thirteen years without applying for an employer identification number, and therefore has not withheld taxes of any kind from those within the employ of the Fellowship in all of this time.

The IRS raided the Fellowship in 1993, and one of the allegations was that he had no employer identification number and was not withholding taxes. After requesting the requirement to do so in court, the IRS dropped the allegation.

Eventually they were ordered to return the property taken, which they did, and the federal court ruled on December 18, 1996, against the IRS's allegation that the Fellowship could not exist without being regulated by the government. Judge Garbis of the United States district Court for the District of Maryland ruled on December 18, 1996 that the Fellowship is in fact:

"...an unincorporated association and, as such, is legally capable of owning property", needing no permission to exist and independent of government regulation. This ruling amounts to being given the "Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval" by a federal court.

So why does the IRS "allow" the Fellowship to stay in business? Why haven't we been shut down? It wasn't for lack of trying.

On December 10, 1993, the Internal Revenue Service conducted a raid on our national offices at 12 Carroll Street, Westminster, Maryland. The Fellowship had suspected for some time that there were many misperceptions within the IRS as to the purpose and goals of the Fellowship, and that under the circumstances it would be appropriate to explain their position in order to ensure that it was not misrepresented either in the public forum or certain branches of the IRS. To accomplish this, the Fellowship wrote to the Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Michael Dolan, on July 19, 1993, expressing their concern. In that letter they extended an invitation to the Commissioner or any of his designates to visit the Fellowship's national headquarters and observe firsthand their activities.

The same invitation was extended to all of the federal judges and magistrates in this district, and public notice of the invitation was printed in the Carroll County Times, a local Maryland newspaper, on three consecutive Mondays. The Fellowship was glad to see local Federal Magistrate Paul M. Rosenberg respond to our invitation and comment that we were doing "an admirable job."

So on October 27, 1993, the Fellowship wrote to the new Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Margaret Milner Richardson, and repeated their invitation. This time, because of their growth and national prominence, they even suggested a permanent IRS liaison for the office, but instead of any spirit of cooperation, the IRS response was to notify them that the matter was turned over to the Criminal Investigation Division in Baltimore. Magistrate Rosenberg, who was fully aware of the Fellowship's intent, knew of the invitation. Therefore, he also knew that the Fellowship was not "concealing" anything.

Nevertheless, on December 8,1993, Magistrate Rosenberg signed a search warrant stating:

"...property is now concealed on the premises.. and if the ...property be found there to seize same."

After making every effort to communicate their purpose and extending the above invitation, the Fellowship was accused of "concealing" something, of what they are not sure. The fact is, it is believed that the IRS had ulterior motives.

Since the Fellowship documents the systematic denial of due process in the various assessment and collection procedures and the fraudulent practice of various IRS agents, it is entirely possible that the seizure of such documents was intended to thwart the association's investigations into such affairs, in other words, to cover up corruption at the highest levels.

[395] Portions from Losing Your Illusions, Gordon Phillips, pp. 138-141.

The public should call for an investigation by the Justice Department into the circumstances surrounding the warrant and subsequent raid, rather than to tacitly assume that the individuals responsible for this "raid" are above reproach.

The events leading up to the raid would further seem to support this hypothesis. They began on December 1, 1993, when John B. Kotmair, Jr. the fiduciary of The Save-A-Patriot Fellowship, was subpoenaed to appear at a grand jury investigation in Sioux Falls, South Dakota. The affidavit supporting the subpoena contained false statements made by an IRS Special Agent, so Mr. Kotmair naturally notified the Court to inform them of the defect.

Nevertheless, the Federal District Court of South Dakota insisted that he appear in Sioux Falls on December 9, 1993, to testify. During his testimony, John provided the Grand Jury with copies of the documentation showing the perjurious statements of the IRS Special Agent.

The U.S. Attorney conspired with the perjurious Special Agent in an obvious attempt to obtain the indictment against Mr. Kotmair.

Also during the proceedings, the U.S. Attorney asked Mr. Kotmair:

> "..isn't it true that anyone who disagrees with an IRS assessment can pay the tax and then sue for a refund in court?"

The implication was that Mr. Kotmair was "selling" the public a false information in the form of a "non-existent legal remedy."

Mr. Kotmair responded by explaining to the jury that suing for a refund was only one option. He said:

> "If the IRS claimed you owed a million dollars, could you afford to pay the tax then sue for a refund?"
> "What about $25,000?
> "Could you afford to pay $25,000 and then sue for a refund?"

He then gave them a brief history lesson and explained that during the War Between the States, Congress passed the Anti-Injunction Act that prevented the courts from enjoining (stopping) the collection of a tax. He told them that because of this Anti-Injunction Act, a bureaucrat could literally pluck a figure out of thin air, (like a million dollars), claim you owe it, and there would be no judicial remedy because the courts no longer had jurisdiction over such matters.

Then he explained why the U.S. Attorney was wrong and cited "the other option under the IR Code", section 6404, the section that the IRS does not like to talk about! He explained that people with errant assessments have an administrative remedy that the IRS was ignoring and/or denying in violation of due process requirements, and then he explained that he assisted people in pursuing this administrative remedy and in requesting abatements if and when they believed an assessment had been made in error.

There was no need to go through the expensive and often prohibitive process of appealing to a tax court. He added that he had helped thousands of people and that at the present time he was helping a 72 year-old man in Alaska who had never even paid him a dime!

The grand jury evidently agreed with the information about the Save-A-Patriot Fellowship! Mr. Kotmair was able to take a late flight home and arrived just in time for the scheduled raid at the Fellowship shortly after 9AM the next day, December 10, 1993.

The whole affair reeks of shame, and the alleged liability of Mr. Kotmair appears to be nothing more than a ploy designed to make the IRS's actions palatable to an increasingly suspicious public. They no doubt hoped to make a public spectacle out of the indictment and subsequent raid.

As to what actually happened--one of the Fellowship's caseworkers had already arrived at the office and was busily working at his computer. Hearing a noise from behind, he turned around only to find four 9-millimeter semi-automatic handguns pointed at his head. In a calm, quizzical voice he asked, "What seems to be the problem?"

As luck would have it, this particular staff member was a former treasury agent himself, and by the purest of coincidences, he was wearing his personalized "treasury" jacket.

The swat team was intimately familiar with the apparel and immediately asked him where he had obtained it. The staff member replied, "I used to be one of you boys until I learned the truth!"

He was promptly ordered out of the building with his hands on his head. Federal agents then began to sort through the Fellowship's property and loaded it onto trucks. To show just how ridiculous the raid was, the computers stored only information pertaining to correspondence that had already been sent to the IRS as the Fellowship maintains no membership lists on the premises.

Considering that the IRS already had copies of these documents, and considering the costs involved with performing the raid, not a mention how much the subsequent litigation is going to cost the IRS in terms of money and embarrassment, we just cannot fathom why some IRS special agent would be dumb enough to cause the IRS all of the problems that this raid is going to cause for them.

It may be that the raid was to be the "icing on the cake" to the indictment that never came down, and that someone forgot to inform the Baltimore IRS to call off the raid. But regardless, it should be pointed out that the warrant only authorized the seizure of property belonging to Mr. Kotmair, and not to the Fellowship. But Mr. Kotmair is only the fiduciary for the association. He does not own the property.

Therefore, since the warrant specified only property belonging to John Kotmair, the Save-A-Patriot property that was taken, was taken illegally, regardless of whether the warrant was justified or not.

Unfortunately, the travesty of justice doesn't stop there. At the same time as the raid on the office, agents forcibly entered Mr. Kotmair's home with weapons drawn. His wife, Nancy, was in her nightgown and turned to get her bathrobe to open the door after she heard the knocks, but agents immediately smashed the front door in with a sledge hammer before she could get her bathrobe on. His son was asleep and awoke to find a shotgun close to his head.

Mrs. Kotmair was not even allowed to change clothes to put on something warmer. Instead, she was confined to a chair near the broken front door with cold winter air coming in on her. After about an hour she was allowed to put on her bathrobe. When she needed to use the bathroom a female agent would go with her and refused to leave for "her own protection" they told her. She observed agents quarreling over what property they would take but was not allowed to be involved in their determination of what was applicable property to be seized pursuant to the warrant.

Witnesses reported that the rude, arrogant, confrontation attitude of the fifty gun-waving IRS agents turned to confusion when they were not met with angry or hostile "opponents". They were apparently given false information of what to expect, quite possibly, to provoke an "incident" which could be used to justify the raid in the mind of the public.

A few of Mr. Kotmair's perfectly legal handguns were laid out on the ground and photographed as though to suggest that he was some sort of drug king pin. Considering that John spent nearly a decade in the 1950's as a police officer in Baltimore, Maryland, it would not be unusual for him to have a legal gun collection.

This was all part of the public spectacle to justify this travesty of justice, resulting from a faulty warrant and subsequent raid that should have been called off, all because the IRS doesn't want John Kotmair helping innocent people whom the IRS wants to destroy.

Both "raids" were certainly unnecessary expense that, by the time the matter is litigated, will cost the people of this country millions of dollars. But the saddest part of this story is how innocent people are subjected to the threat of harm or even death at the hands of uniformed bureaucrats whose mercenary employees justify their actions by saying, without any personal conscience, "...we're just following orders."

The failure of the IRS to publicly defend their actions establishes the presumption that their activities are either unlawful or that the agency incorrectly believes itself to be above the Law and under no obligation to the public.

The people certainly have the right to the truth and the government has the duty to respond to all inquiries regarding the truth, as required in IRS Publication 1.

During the raid, the IRS broke federal laws by opening and reading sealed correspondence between the Fellowship and our members, and took numerous computers, copy machines, fax machines, laser printers, file cabinets, etc. The IRS failed completely in their effort to discredit the Fellowship and demoralize the staff.

A national alert for help went out and within days, money, new computers and other office equipment streamed into headquarters. Ten days after the raid, the Fellowship was back in full operation, and membership swelled as a result of solidarity on the part of patriotic Americans nationwide.

About nine months later, the IRS returned unannounced in a rental truck, dressed in plain clothes, and returned all of the Fellowship's property with the exception of $60,000 stolen from a safe. Needless to say, the Fellowship has filed numerous lawsuits against the IRS which are ongoing. That was in 1993.

Since that time enrollment has soared with members pouring in from across the country. One of our member, nationally known talk radio personality Zoh Hieroniumus, hosts her own ten-thousand watt radio talk show on Baltimore AM radio station WCBM every weekday morning from 9AM to Noon.

Zoh covered the raid live on the air. Among numerous other guests, she has on many occasions interviews Fellowship founder John Kotmair and other staffers on the air, beaming 10,000 watts of truth about the proper limited application of the income and employment sections of the Internal Revenue Code directly into the beltway inside Washington, D.C.

We have knowledge that the IRS and other State and federal government officials are tuning in to Zoh. And for good reason! She is ruthless at uncovering the truth about any issue she covers, and is an unusually gifted speaker. The Fellowship has researched and developed legal defenses to protect the liberty and property of its members from those within the government who would ignore the law, violate due process, and rob honest Americans.

I hate to use so strong a word as rob when speaking of the actions of a government I was raised to love and respect, but the extortion of property from U.S. citizens through decades of deception and misinformation in clear violation of the written Law can only be called what it really is--robbery.

Apparently the Supreme Court aggress. In the 1874 case, Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874), they said:

> "To lay with one hand the power of government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it on favored individuals.. is none the less robbery because it is.. called taxation."

The "bottom line" is that the Save-A-Patriot Fellowship successfully withstood an IRS raid and then prevailed against the IRS in Federal District Court's Judgment to t the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, Case No. 97-1303, and on March 13th, 1997, filed with that Court a Motion for Dismissal of Appeal--with prejudice.

Since the day the Fellowship opened its doors on February 24, 1984, John B. Kotmair, Jr., Founder and Fiduciary, has never withheld a dime in income or employment taxes from any of the approximately two dozen staffers who work at the Fellowship's Maryland headquarters.

The IRS knows full well that there is no law that requires the withholding of such taxes from a U.S. citizen working and living within the 50 union states. Furthermore, the IRS has never in nearly fourteen years made any attempt to levy on the pay of any of the above staffers. If you want to be free, you have to live free.

Liberty works! End of Story!!

6.9.10 IRS has NO Delegated Authority to Impose Penalties or Levies or Seizures for Nonpayment of Subtitle A Personal Income Taxes!

6.9.10.1 What Particular Type of Tax is Part 301 of Treasury Regulations?

Part 301 of the Regulations (26 C.F.R.) warrants a detailed explanation, because it is these Regulations that the IRS fraudulently misapplies to Citizens of the 50 [nonfederal] states as their purported authority to charge interest and penalties and seize property and levy compensation. All 301 Policies and Procedures cannot be and are not applicable to ALL subject matters of taxes.

Note: A "cross reference" and the word "see," in statutory construction, are used as a means of clarification only and have no legal applicability.

IMPORTANT!: A Part 301 Regulation, by itself, has no legal force to promulgate or implement Part 1, "Income Tax" provisions. A Part 301 Regulation is merely a cross reference added, in the interest of completeness, not as the lawful "authority."

The 1939 and 1954 Title 26 Internal Revenue Codes for Income Taxes, which were never repealed and are the basis and nucleus of our current system of taxation , did not contain a Part 301! From 1939 until 1961, there was NO Part 301 "Procedure and Administration" outlining procedures for interest, penalties, property seizures, and levies! The preface to the 54 Regulations (February 16, 1954) states:

"This book [1954 Internal Revenue Code] contains rules and regulations constituting Parts 1 to 79 of Title 26…"

Following is a sample excerpt from the Table of Contents for the 1954 Regulations [26 C.F.R.]:

Table of Contents

Title 26:
Chapter I –Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury
(Parts 1-79)…….3

[Note the conspicuous absence of Part 301!]

So where did Part 301 come from? Where was Part 301 in the 1954 Regs? The first time Part 301 mysteriously appeared was in a specially published 1961 edition of C.F.R. Title 26. The Preface to these Regulations solved the mystery of the origin of Part 301, stating:

"Title 27 (Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms), formerly included..Part 300 to the end…"

What Particular Types of Taxes were these "Procedures and Administrations" applicable to? Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms! Part 301 was NOT written for Title 26 Voluntary Income Taxes! These Part 300+ provisions carry severe penalties for noncompliance, because Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Tax is a "regulated" revenue taxable industry imposing a Mandatory Tax upon which criminal sanctions and property seizures could be imposed!

The "Publisher's Note," which was added to the first page of the 1954 microfiche of the CFR, after its publication, makes a reference to this suspicious alteration, stating:

"No Federal Register citation covering this change was discoverable."

Again, the IRS cannot lawfully impose civil and criminal penalties on a voluntary tax because noncompliance is one of the options! That is why there is nowhere in the Regulations that a Part 1 Voluntary Tax cross references to a 301 Regulation applicable to penalties, interest, levies, seizure, or summons!

Any attempted enforcement by the IRS of a Code relating to voluntary tax, without a Part 1 Implementing Regulation, is a denial of due process for the American Citizen in violation of 26 C.F.R. §601.106!

6.9.10.2 Parallel Table of Authorities 26 C.F.R. to 26 U.S.C

The following is taken from the Parallel Table of Authorities in the back of the Title 26 Code of Federal Regulations [CFR]. It is a list of the ONLY Part 301 Regulations that derive their Authority for implementation from Title 26 USCS or 26 IRC [Income Taxes]. Note the conspicuous absence of any penalty, interest, levy or seizure for the Title 26 Voluntary Income Tax. Again, it is inconceivable that the Congress would legislate penalties for the individual income tax, since the supreme Court and the IRS have both substantiated that such a Tax is voluntary and NOT based upon distraint. It would be absurd to impose penalties for non-compliance, when such an option is what made the tax voluntary to begin with!

6.9.11 Service of Illegal Summons

It is quite common for the IRS to send out illegal summons in order to go on "fishing expeditions" in trying to uncover mud to sling at a law-abiding Citizen. 26 U.S.C. §7603 governs the issuance of summons. The vast majority of IRS summons are illegal and do not comply with the requirements of this section because:

- The summons did not identify the code section establishing a tax liability. It MUST do so to be enforceable. Since there is no section in the I.R.C. that established a tax liability for Subtitles A through C, if the summons relates to these taxes, it cannot be validly issued. You might want to ask the agent the following:

  "In referring to an unspecified and alleged 'tax liability', does this refer to the tobacco tax liability contained in Section 5703 (yes or no)?"

  Ask the same question about sections 5005, 4374, and 4401(c) of the I.R.C. and then if the answer is no, ask:

  "Then what section of the Internal Revenue Code establishes the liability for which this summons is being issued?"
- The agent did not personally serve the person being summoned
- The agent did not specify the precise books and records being requested.

- The agent who issued them does not have a "Delegation Order" which allows him to issue the summons form.
- The wrong form or not form at all was used.
- The summons was not signed by the agent, or in most cases anyone.

If you receive a summons from an IRS that contains any of the above defects, then you have been illegally served and need not appear at the summons, but should notify the IRS of the defect in their notice promptly (usually within 10 days). For more information about summons, see:

6.9.12 IRS Publication 1: Taxpayer rights…Oh really?

IRS Publication 1, entitled Your Rights as a Taxpayer, is supposed to tell you what your rights are, but why doesn't the IRS title it "Your rights as an American regarding taxes?" Have you ever thought of that? Is the implication here that you have to pay money to the government to have rights? Under such circumstances, doesn't the government really just become a big mafia protection racket, where we pay money to keep them off our back and keep IRS computers from sending us automated anonymous and harassing letters? This is what we meant earlier in section 4.3.12 entitled "Government-instituted slavery using privileges", where we said that the government has illegally tried to turn rights into taxable privileges, and here that very reality is staring you right in the face if you are paying attention!

Think hard about this: If you are a "taxpayer", then by definition, you are liable for tax and we already know that you don't have any rights under those circumstances! We pointed this out earlier in section 3.12.1.21. The only reason you have any liberties at all as a "taxpayer" is because the government didn't take ALL of your income so you had enough left over after being raped to go out and have some fun. Let's face it: The whole bill of rights goes straight down the toilet when you are liable for any income taxes. The attitude of most passive "taxpayers", the people we call "sheeple", is:

"Go ahead and take [steal] whatever money you want, but please don't hit me!"

If the IRS replaced "Taxpayer" with "American" in their Publication 1, however, they would have to explain what law makes the average American liable for income tax and why you owe it to begin with. This question is a question the IRS knows they can't answer because there aren't any statutes in all of Subtitles A and C that make natural persons liable for income taxes. We even have a letter form a Congressman on Congressional letterhead stating this! Click here to view it (http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/Congressional/IncomeTaxLiability.pdf). So instead the IRS deceptively names their publication using the word "Taxpayer" to keep attention off the real issues, which are jurisdiction and liability! Therefore, the audience this publication is written for are those people who already mistakenly believe they are liable. However, the only way you as a natural person can have rights is to not pay income taxes and not be liable for income taxes. The name of this publication is therefore an oxymoron if we ever saw one. It's like saying any of the following similarly self-contradictory oxymorons:

- Military intelligence
- Government organization
- Honest politician

Next time you call the IRS, ask them if they have a publication that tells people who don't believe they are liable what their rights are. You will probably be discarded like a hot potato by the agent once he finds out what you are up to!

Ironically, the State of California pulls the same trick with the word "taxpayer". Their Publication 70 "Your Rights as a Taxpayer" uses the same kind of sneaky word play to deceive and evade the truth.

6.9.13 Cover-Up of March 2004: IRS Removed List of Return Types Authorized for SFR from Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 5.1.11.6.8

The We The People Truth in Taxation Hearing held 27-28 February 2002 in Washington, D.C. had an area of inquiry, section 13, entitled: 26 U.S.C. §6020(b) Substitute for Returns. You can view that area of inquiry at:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section%2013.htm

That area focused on IRS efforts at performing illegal Substitute for Returns against people who technically are not "taxpayers". Prior to that hearing, a group of 40 researchers, including former IRS agents, assembled evidence to be used at the hearing. Among that evidence compiled for the hearing was an excerpt from section 5.1.11.6.8 of the IRS Internal Revenue Manual, which is the manual that describes proper procedures for doing assessments within the IRS. You can view that evidence at:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Evidence/Q13.009c.pdf

Below is what that section said, as demonstrated during the hearing:

> 5.1.11.6.8 (05-27-1999)
> IRC 6020(b) Authority
> 1. The following returns may be prepared, signed and assessed under the authority of IRC 6020(b):
> A. Form 940, Employer's Annual Federal Unemployment Tax Return
> B. Form 941, Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return
> C. Form 943, Employer's Annual Tax Return for Agricultural Employees
> D. Form 720, Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return
> E. Form 2290, Heavy Vehicle Use Tax Return
> F. Form CT–1, Employer's Annual Railroad Retirement Tax Return
> G. Form 1065, U.S. Return of Partnership Income.
> 2. Pursuant to IRM 1.2.2.97, Delegations of Authority, Order Number 182 (rev. 7), dated 5/5/1997, revenue officers GS-09 and above, and Collection Support Function managers GS-09 and above, have the authority to prepare and execute returns under IRC 6020(b).

We showed earlier in section 5.4.15 that the IRS has no legal authority to assess natural persons with a tax liability under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. The above section of the Internal Revenue Manual clearly proves that conclusion. Notice that the form 1040 is NOT listed as one of the forms that the IRS can do a Substitute for Return (SFR) on.

Following the hearings, the IRS apparently read these materials and starting in March 2004, they removed the above content from section 5.1.11.6.8 of their Internal Revenue Manual. This evidence was so damning that the IRS apparently decided to remove it from their website after we made a big public spectacle about it. Now that section is empty! Apparently, they don't want to be held accountable for obeying 26 U.S.C. §6020(b) and want to encourage their employees to improperly administer that very important part of the Internal Revenue Code that allows the illegal flow of money to continue.

6.9.14 Cover-Up of Jan. 2002: IRS Removed the Internal Revenue Manual (IRM) from their Website Search Engine

Apparently frustrated by our website and dedicated patriots everywhere who have been reading the law and the IRS publications to defend their legal and Constitutional rights to not pay direct taxes, the IRS completed redesigning their website (http://www.irs.gov) to remove key portions from their search engine, thereby making it more difficult for patriots to find help on important subjects and understand their responsibilities using the IRS website.

The most valuable portion of their website, the Internal Revenue Manual (IRM), was moved from the Tax Professional's Corner to the FOIA area of their website and conspicuously removed from their search engine. The FOIA area of most government websites is reserved for things the government doesn't want to disclose to people but has to anyway under the Freedom Of Information Act (FOIA). The IRM is several thousand pages long and removing it from the website search engine makes it extremely difficult and inconvenient for patriots and freedom advocates to locate relevant information and properly comply with the Internal Revenue Code. We would be willing to bet that their internal intranet accessible only to IRS employees has the document added to their search engine for more convenient use by its own employees. We'd recommend doing an FOIA request to find this out to gather evidence to document this hypocritical scam. Please send us a copy of your FOIA response from the IRS if you do so.

The IRS also deleted the area below telling where to file FOIA requests, as though they no longer want any!:

http://www.irs.gov/prod/preview/foia/offices.html

IRS: Is THIS what you call improving customer service and satisfaction and better meeting your mission statement, which says(?):

> "Provide America's taxpayers top quality service by helping them understand and meet their tax responsibilities and by applying the tax law with integrity and fairness to all."

We'd say this strategic move conflicts with your mission statement and makes it more, not less difficult for people to understand and meet their legal tax responsibilities! Instead, it simply makes them more dependent on your fraudulent IRS publications and less able to understand the law.

Nice try, IRS, but we were ready for you when you pulled this stunt! Don't fret, patriots! If you want an indexed, searchable version of the IRM as of Sept. 2001, you can go to our site below:

http://famguardian.org/Publications/IRM-020311/0,,i1=5&genericId=21023,00.html

The search box is at the end of the table of contents. However, the search function only works on our home site and not on our mirror sites.

6.9.15 Cover-Up of 2002: W-8 Certificate of Foreign Status Form Removed from the IRS Website December 2000 and replaced with W-8BEN

The IRS website, up until December of 2000, contained a copy of the form W-8 available for download. The form was simple to use and could exempt you from both employment withholding and tax withholding of banks on accounts. After that date, the form was removed, presumably because so many people were using the simple nonresident alien approach advocated in this book and by other authors. Remember that nonresident aliens have no requirement to pay any income tax or file returns if they have no income from inside the federal United States, which includes the District of Columbia, the federal territories, and federal enclaves within states of the Union. Without a tax liability, nonresident aliens domiciled in the 50 Union states don't have to file a tax return or provide any information about themselves to the IRS! How then does the IRS track these people and find out about them so they can use their computers to harass them and extort money out of them? They deceive them into thinking that they are required to file returns and pay tax, and that they are required to get a Taxpayer ID Number or T.I.N. (as a substitute for a Social Security Number).

After December 2000, the IRS replaced the W-8 form with the W-8BEN form, and they did so, it would appear, to once again to create a false presumption in the minds of most Americans, using the form itself, that even nonresident aliens are "liable" to pay income tax and to file a return, which wasn't previously the case with the W-8 form. They did this at a time when there were no changes in the laws that would add this new requirement and when a lot of people were using the W-8 forms. Apparently, the IRS wanted to try, without legal authority we might add, to close the nonresident alien loophole being used by so many patriots to exit the income tax system by modifying the IRS Forms. Once again, they did their dirty work using sneaky definitions just like they did with the Internal Revenue Code. The instructions for the form define "beneficial owner" as follows:

> "Beneficial owner. For payments other than those for which a reduced rate of withholding is claimed under an income tax treaty, the beneficial owner of income is generally the person who is required under U.S. tax principles to include the income in gross income on a tax return…"

The W-8BEN form clearly implies that even the nonresident alien in this case:

1. "Is required" to file a tax return;
2. "Is required" to show even foreign income on the tax return

We know from Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020, Section 6.4 (entitled "Tax Liability and Responsibilities of Nonresident Aliens") that these assertions aren't true and that nonresident aliens with no U.S./federal zone source income clearly aren't liable for income tax, nor do they have "gross income", and they also aren't required to file a tax return. This fact is abundantly confirmed by examining 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C)(i). The insidious and misleading changes in the W-8BEN form, however, creates a false presumption that advantages the IRS! We must continually remember from our discussion in section 3.19 (entitled "IRS Publications and Internal Revenue Manual (IRM)), however, that the IRS publications are NOT to be relied upon to sustain a position and you are wasting your time to rely on them.

Not only are the instructions for the W-8 insidious and damaging to the freedoms of nonresident alien Sovereign Natural Born Citizens, but the W-8BEN form itself is also misleading and creates a false presumption. The title is "Certificate of Foreign Status of Beneficial Owner for United States Tax Withholding". This creates the impression that the withholding is occurring in the "United States"/federal zone, which clearly isn't the case in the 50 union states! Also be careful when filling in block 6, because it says "U.S. taxpayer identification number". If you put ANYTHING in this box, then you are claiming you are a taxpayer, which you are not as a nonresident alien domiciled in the 50 union states.

6.9.16 Cover-Up of 1999: IRS CID Agent Joe Banister Terminated by IRS For Discovering The Truth About Voluntary Nature of Income Taxes!

The story below was taken from the personal testimony of Joe Banister given to me at the Freedom Rally held April 7, 2001 in Irvine hosted by the Freedom Law School (http://www.livefreenow.com). Joe also maintains his own website at:

http://freedomabovefortune.com/

Joe Banister has a BS degree in accounting and spent three years at KPMG Peat Marwick on their professional staff as a senior tax specialist and staff auditor. He went to work for the IRS in 1993 and was a licensed Certified Public Accountant. He enforced tax codes for the IRS, and quickly achieved high status and many awards within the government during his five year career with the IRS. Joe was an agent of the IRS Criminal Investigative Division in San Jose, CA for five years. In December 1996, he heard a talk show radio program with Geoff Metcalf in San Jose, and overheard Devvy Kidd being interviewed. She was claiming that the federal income tax was voluntary. Since Joe made his domiciled investigating criminal violations of the taxing statutes, he listened intently to the radio program. His life has never been the same since then!

Subsequently, Joe wrote Devvy and asked for some materials. He received a package in January 1997 from Devvy containing two books approximately 50 pages in length. The books were entitled Why a Bankrupt America and Blind Loyalty. The books were filled with very shocking claims about the United Nations, the federal income tax system, and the federal banking and monetary systems, among other topics. He read the books thoroughly and found a more detailed explanation of the allegations she made on the radio. There were three allegations that he found the most profound and unbelievable:

1. Allegation 1: Due to Limitations Imposed By The U.S. Constitution, Filing of Federal Income Tax Returns and Payment of Federal Income Tax Is Voluntary, Not Mandatory.
2. Allegation 2: The 16th Amendment To The U.S. Constitution, The Amendment Which Precipitated The Federal Income Tax, Was Never Legally Ratified.
3. Allegation 3: The U.S. Government Finances Its Operations Form the Unconstitutional Creation of Fiat Money, not with Revenue From Income Taxes.

Kidd's allegations were so shocking to Mr. Banister and contrary to everything he had been taught that he spent many months simply thinking and meditating about what he had read. In the latter part of 1997, he read the book, The Creature From Jekyll Island, authored by G. Edward Griffin. Griffin's book shared some of the same subject matter as Kidd's books, which prompted Joe to pick Devvy's books up a second time. During this second review, he noticed an unusual aspect about Kidd's books that he had paid little attention to the first time through. Kidd had a practice of including telephone numbers of the people responsible for the evidence she provided. It was at this point that Joe realized he could simply telephone these men and make direct inquiries about the evidence supporting their allegations. In December 1997, Joe decided to contact them personally in order to determine the truth.

During the ensuing two years, Joe did his own research on his private time to try to verify the truth of the three allegations. Eventually, he convinced himself that Devvy's claims were entirely true, and after two years of research, he submitted a preliminary report of his findings to his supervisor at the IRS. That supervisor forwarded the report up the chain. Joe asked his I.R.S. supervisor to help him refute the claims so he could have a clear conscience about continuing to work at the IRS. Instead of helping correct Joe in the error in his findings or set the record straight, his supervisor asked him to either desist or tender his resignation. Joe Banister decided to leave the IRS and quit on the anniversary of the signing of the 16th Amendment, February 25, 1999. He eventually joined the tax freedom movement! He also joined the We The People Foundation (http://www.givermeliberty.org) soon after his resignation and supported the efforts of employers to stop withholding. Part of his story was featured on a 60 Minutes II episode aired on CBS on April 2, 2001 in connection with a story entitled "Tax Revolt". He was described as helping employers to legally stop income tax withholding of their employees. Joe defended the legal position of the employer during the 60 Minutes interview. He was very convincing. He has also been exposed to this book and I have personally met with him and obtained an autographed copy of his book about the illegality of the federal income tax. He is also a frequent speaker with the Freedom Law School and appears at their annual Freedom Rallies, usually held in April of each year in Irvine, CA (contact Peymon Mottahedeh, the President, at http://www.livefreenow.com/).

We encourage you to read more about Joe Banister's story on his website shown above. You can also get a copy of his report off his website, entitled Investigating the Federal Income Tax: A Preliminary Report. The cost is $20.

6.9.17 Cover-Up of 1995: Modified Regulations to Remove Pointers to Form 2555 for IRC Section 1 Liability for Federal Income Tax

The Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980 requires that every form used by the federal government to collect information from the public first be approved by the Office of Management and Budget ("OMB"). The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §602.101 contain a table listing the OMB-approved forms for each section of regulations. The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 are entitled "Income tax on individuals," and correspond to 26 U.S.C. §1 (which imposes the "income tax"). Up until 1995, the first line in this table identified Form 2555, "Foreign Earned Income," as the only approved form under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1. In 1995, after many "tax resistance" groups had become aware of this, the listing for "1.1-1" was removed from the list, in order to avoid "confusion," according to the Department of the Treasury. The process of applying for, and receiving OMB approval for a form makes the possibility of an error extremely remote. The Department of the Treasury requested that Form 2555 be approved for 1.1-1, and the Office of Management and Budget approved it. When the entry drew too much attention, it was removed. At present no forms are approved for use with 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.

6.9.18 Cover-Up of 1993--HOT!!: IRS Removed References in IRS Publication 515 to Citizens Not Being Liable for Tax and Confused New Language

A key piece of the puzzle that unraveled the IRS' Great Deception was formerly found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441 and in IRS Publication 515. Recall that we have been saying all along that foreign earned income is the only thing to be counted as "gross income" for the purposes of 26 U.S.C. §861?

Call 1-800-TAX-FORM and request a copy of IRS Publication 515, titled "Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Entities". Now, you might look this up and ask yourself, "what on Earth does that have to do with me?"

Here's what. Inside Publication 515, there appears a statement the IRS hopes you never see. Under the main heading "Withholding Exemptions and Reductions" and within the paragraph titled "Evidence of Residence", the IRS states in speaking to the payer of income:

> "If an individual gives you a written statement stating that he or she is a citizen or resident of the United States, and you do not know otherwise, you do not have to withhold tax."

The 1994 version of Publication 515 varied somewhat. Instead of ending with "...you do not have to withhold tax", it continues:

> "...you do not have to withhold tax under the rules discussed in this publication. Instead, get Publication 15, Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide."

Of course our friends at the IRS fail to clarify that Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide has to do with employment taxes under subtitle C, and has nothing whatsoever to do with the withholding of income tax under subtitle A, the subject of Publication 515. Isn't that interesting?

Considering the deluge of recent requests from Patriotic Americans for a copy of Publication 515, do you suppose that this creative suggestion to go get Circular E instead and read about employment taxes could have been added to misdirect or confuse anyone?

Remember, the "S" in IRS stands for "Service"!

And what is the statement of citizenship? It's simply an affidavit, notarized and signed under penalties of perjury stating that "I, John Doe, am a Citizen of the United States." It's that simple. So, the bottom line is that, according to the IRS, if you agree a "Citizen or resident of the United States", the payer of your income does not have to withhold tax. Imagine that!

Now ask yourself this question: If a United States citizen every really were liable for tax withholding, why would the IRS ever have printed this statement anywhere? Why would it even exist in writing?

It exists because the Law behind the Statement of Citizenship is 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-5 "Claiming to be a person not subject to withholding", paragraph (a) of which states:

> "For purposes of Chapter 3 of the Code, an individual's written statement that he or she is a citizen or resident of the United States may be relied upon by the payer of the income as proof that such individual is a citizen or resident of the United States."

And where is Chapter 3 of the Code? In Subtitle A, income tax. 1.1441-5, paragraph (c) states:

> "The duplicate copy of each statement and form filed pursuant to this section shall be forwarded with a letter of transmittal to Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia PA 19255. The original statement shall be retained by the withholding agent."

And why must the Statement of Citizenship be sent to Philadelphia, and not the local IRS office or regional service center? Because Philadelphia is the IRS' international service center--the foreign service center, which makes perfect sense since the income tax is a tax on foreign activity only!

The IRS Philadelphia office has never been known to reject a Statement of Citizenship from a withholding agent. It also does not acknowledge receipt of the Statement of Citizenship, which confuses some people. The reason for this is simple. If the statement were inaccurate or off-point, there would be a rebuttal from Philadelphia. Silence, in this case, is acceptance.

Because of a deluge of requests and attention focused on IRS Publication 515 and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-5 by patriotic Americans who didn't want to have to pay or file income taxes legally in 1998, 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-5 was rewritten in 1993!!! The cover-up expands! Instead, all we are left with is a confusing pointer back to Circular E, the Employer's Tax Guide, and no mention of how to handle nonresident aliens!! Apparently, the truth got just a little too close for comfort so the Great Deceiver bureaucrat lawyers in Congress and at the IRS had to bury it a little deeper in legalese to confuse the scent for us tax freedom hound dogs!! BARK, BARK!!! Sick-em!

6.9.19 Obfuscation of 2004: IRS Publication 519 added deceptive reference to "United States" to deceive and confuse readers

IRS Publication 519, Starting in year 2004, introduced the following language to infer that the term "United States" as used in the Internal Revenue Code, includes the 50 states of the Union for the purposes of jurisdiction to tax under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A: > Substantial Presence Test

> Example. You were physically present in the United States on 120 days in each of the years 2003, 2004, and 2006. To determine if you meet the substantial presence test for 2005, count the full 120 days of presence in 2006, 40 days in 2004 (1/3 of 130), and 20 days in 2003 (1/6 of 120). Because the total for the 30 year period is 180 days, you are not considered a resident under the substantial presence test for 2005.
> "The term United States includes the following areas.
> - "All 50 states and the District of Columbia."
> - "The territorial waters of the United States"
> [...]
> "The term does not include U.S. possessions and territories or U.S. airspace."
> [IRS Publication 519 (2005), p. 4
> SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSPub519-2005.pdf]

We have several points to make about the above reference:

1. The above cite was added to the publication in about 2004 in an apparent response to the content of this book, as a way to deceive the readers and stop the spread of the Non-Resident Non-Person Position.
2. The definition comes from an IRS Publication, which the IRS Internal Revenue Manual admits is UNTRUSTWORTHY and not guaranteed to be accurate:

> "IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position." [Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.8 (05-14-1999)]

> Federal Courts and the IRS' Own IRM Say the IRS is NOT RESPONSIBLE for Its Actions or its Words or for Following Its Own Written Procedures, Family Guardian Fellowship
> http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm

3. The text above is an EXAMPLE which does not infer or imply or specify the context in which it may suitably be used. There are actually THREE and not ONE context in which the term "United States" could be referring to or implied and only one of them is used in the above example, which is the third one listed below:
   - 3.1. The meaning of the term "United States" within the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A.
   - 3.2. The meaning of the term "United States" within ordinary speech, which most people associate with the COUNTRY to include states of the Union.
   - 3.3. The meaning of "United States" in the context of jurisdiction over aliens (not "citizens" or "nationals") temporarily present in the country "United States", which in this context includes all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

In the context of item 3.3 above, the U.S. Supreme Court has repeatedly affirmed the plenary power of Congress over aliens in this country, wherever they are located to include areas within the exclusive jurisdiction of states of the Union:

> In accord with ancient principles of the international law of nation-states, the Court in The Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U.S. 581, 609 (1889), and in Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893), held broadly, as the Government describes it, Brief for Appellants 20, that the power to exclude aliens is "inherent in sovereignty, necessary for maintaining normal international relations and defending the country against foreign encroachments and dangers - a power to be exercised exclusively by the political branches of government . . . ." Since that time, the Court's general reaffirmations of this principle have [408 U.S. 753, 766] been legion. 6 The Court without exception has sustained Congress' "plenary power to make rules for the admission of aliens and to exclude those who possess those characteristics which Congress has forbidden." Boutilier v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, 387 U.S. 118, 123 (1967). "[O]ver no conceivable subject is the legislative power of Congress more complete than it is over" the admission of aliens. Oceanic Navigation Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U.S. 320, 339 (1909).
> [Kleindienst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753 (1972)]

> *While under our constitution and form of government the great mass of local matters is controlled by local authorities, t*he United States, in their relation to foreign countries and their subjects or citizens, are one nation, invested with powers which belong to independent nations, the exercise of which can be invoked for the maintenance of its absolute independence and security throughout its entire territory. *The powers to declare war, make treaties, suppress insurrection, repel invasion, regulate foreign commerce, secure republican governments to the states, and admit subjects of other nations to citizenship, are all sovereign powers, restricted in their exercise only by the constitution itself and considerations of public policy and justice which control, more or less, the conduct of all civilized nations. As said by this court in the case of Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 413, speaking by the same great chief justice: 'That the United States form, for many, and for most important purposes, a single nation, has not yet been denied. In war, we are one people. In making peace, we are one people. In all commercial regulations, we are one and the same people. In many other respects, the American people are one; and the government which is alone capable of controlling and managing their interests in all these respects is the government of the Union. It is their government, and in that character they have no other. America has chosen to [130 U.S. 581, 605] be in many respects, and to many purposes, a nation; and for all these purposes her government is complete; to all these objects, it is competent.* The people have declared that in the exercise of all powers given for these objects it is supreme. It can, then, in effecting these objects, legitimately control all individuals or governments within the American territory."
> *"The power of exclusion of foreigners being an incident of sovereignty belonging to the government of the United States as a part of those sovereign powers delegated by the constitution, the right to its exercise at any time when, in the judgment of the government, the interests of the country require it, cannot be granted away or restrained on behalf of any one.* The powers of government are delegated in trust to the United States, and are incapable of transfer to any other parties. They cannot be abandoned or surrendered. Nor can their exercise be hampered, when needed for the public good, by any considerations of private interest. The exercise of these public trusts is not the subject of barter or contract."

[Chae Chan Ping v. U.S., 130 U.S. 581 (1889)]

Therefore, in regard to control over aliens present anywhere within the American confederation, the general government legislates over all the territory of the American Union, including those of the states. Consequently, for the purposes of determining "permanent residence" of aliens ONLY, the term "United States" as used in item 3 above must be interpreted to include the 50 states of the Union as the IRS indicates above. HOWEVER:

1. The Presence Test indicated does not refer to "citizens" or "nationals". The Presence Test is found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(3) and references ONLY "aliens" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) and not "nonresident aliens" defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) or "citizens" defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c). Therefore, an alien domiciled in a state of the Union could be a "resident" within the meaning of the presence test while neither a "citizen" nor a "national" would be considered a "resident" under the SAME test when located in the SAME place. Under the I.R.C., one cannot be a "resident" (which is an alien with a domicile) and either a "citizen" or a "national" at the same time. This is confirmed by the Law of Nations, which the Founding Fathers used to write the Constitution:

> "Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the country. Being bound to the society by reason of their dwelling in it, they are subject to its law so long as they remain there, and being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizens. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizens of a less privileged character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children."
> [Law of Nations, Vattel, p. 87
> SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Resident-LawOfNations.pdf]

2. Remember that the only context in which "residence" is defined or described anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code is in the context of "aliens", and not in the context of either "citizens" or "nationals". See 26 C.F.R. §1.871-2 and section 4 of the article below:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

   Therefore, a person who is a "national" but not a "citizen" and a "nonresident alien" can NOT have a "residence" as defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code.
3. For the purposes of determining tax liability and not residency of all persons, we must defer to the definition of "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), which is limited to the District of Columbia and nowhere expanded in the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A to include any other place.

Based on the foregoing, we must conclude that the IRS' statement above is a deception and a ruse intended to compel false presumption under the influence of CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUD that will maximize the illegal flow of PLUNDER to the federal government. It is provided as an example and cannot mean the legal definition of "United States" used in the Internal Revenue Code. If they wish to imply that ALL THREE of the contexts in which the term "United States" could be used are the same, then they should say so and provide statutory and regulatory authority for saying so. Until then, we must defer to the definition of "United States" found within 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10). This is a consequence of the following doctrine of the Supreme Court:

> "Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
> [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 297 (1904)]

6.9.20 Cover-Up of 2012: IRS removed exemption for withholding and reporting for "U.S. persons" on the W-9 form even though it is still in the regulations

2011 was the last year that the Form W-9 clearly showed the exemption for U.S. persons from withholding and reporting. That exemption from withholding and reporting is found in the regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(d)(1) and TD8734 (62 F.R. 53391, SEDM Exhibit #09.038). Below is a snapshot of the form for that year:

Specific Instructions on page 2.

Name (as shown on your income tax return)

Business name/disregarded entity name, if different from above

Check appropriate box for federal tax classification:
☐ Individual/sole proprietor ☐ C Corporation ☐ S Corporation ☐ Partnership ☐ Trust/estate

☐ Limited liability company. Enter the tax classification (C=C corporation, S=S corporation, P=partnership) ▶

☐ Exempt payee

☐ Other (see instructions) ▶

Address (number, street, and apt. or suite no.) | Requester's name and address (optional)

The current version of the IRS Form W-9 eliminates the "Exempt payee" from the above, even though such status is and exemption still referenced in the regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.1441(d).

1 Name (as shown on your income tax return). Name is required on this line; do not leave this line blank.

2 Business name/disregarded entity name, if different from above

3 Check appropriate box for federal tax classification; check only one of the following seven boxes:
☐ Individual/sole proprietor or single-member LLC ☐ C Corporation ☐ S Corporation ☐ Partnership ☐ Trust/estate
☐ Limited liability company. Enter the tax classification (C=C corporation, S=S corporation, P=partnership) ▶
Note. For a single-member LLC that is disregarded, do not check LLC; check the appropriate box in the line above for the tax classification of the single-member owner.
☐ Other (see instructions) ▶

4 Exemptions (codes apply only to certain entities, not individuals; see instructions on page 3):
Exempt payee code (if any)
Exemption from FATCA reporting code (if any)
(Applies to accounts maintained outside the U.S.)

Notice the block to the right says "(applies to accounts maintained outside the U.S.)". 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(d) currently provides an exemption for accounts WITHIN the U.S., and used to appear in that block, but was removed. By "U.S.", we obviously mean that defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d), which means federal territory subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress and not within the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union.

If you want to be exempt on the current form, you have to check the "Other" block and write the following:

> "Exempt payee. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(d). No withholding or reporting. See: https://sedm.org/Forms/04-Tax/0-CorrErrInfoRtns/CorrErrInfoRtns.pdf"

This scam is obviously designed to cause people who are NOT subject to the income tax when within the "United States" (federal zone) to pay anyway.

6.10 Department of State (DOS) Scandals Related to Income Taxes

We say earlier in section 2.8.13 that the federal courts commonly but erroneously "presume" that all people are "U.S. citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 in order to illegally expand federal jurisdiction. Here is an example:

> "Unless the defendant can prove he is not a citizen of the United States, the IRS has the right to inquire and determine a tax liability."
> [U.S. v. Slater, 545 Fed.Supp. 179,182 (1982).]

Therefore, it is very important to establish proof that you are not a statutory "national and citizen of the United States at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Consequently, the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 in section 4.5.3.13 suggests that readers obtain what is called a "Certificate of non-citizen National Status" as certified proof that they are not "U.S. citizens", and we recommend using this as proof in any judicial proceeding. We also recommend getting certified proof of your "non-citizen national status" into your IRS administrative record long before you involve yourself in any judicial proceeding, so that the judge may not keep it out of evidence or out of view of the jury to prejudice your case.

Well, the government is catching on to this and obstructing justice by the following devious means. A number of our readers have contacted us to report that they have attempted to obtain a "Certificate of non-citizen National Status" under the authority of 8 U.S.C. §1452 as suggested in sections 4.5.3.13 and 5.6.12 in the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 and that the Secretary of State of the United States positively refuses his duty under this statute to issue the requested certificate. The person we talked to indicated that now the Secretary of the State has posted a notice on their website indicating that they have changed their policy and are no longer issuing such certificates, although they did not explain why. Here is the notice:

http://travel.state.gov/noncit_cert.html

There's obviously a cover-up going on here folks. The slaves have figured out how to remove their legal chains and leave the federal plantation, so our crooked government is blocking their exit by depriving them of the evidence needed to prove that they are not "U.S. citizens" under the Internal Revenue Code. There is still a way to force the Secretary of State to do his duty under 8 U.S.C. §1452 by providing the requested certificate, but it takes a separate lawsuit in a federal court to do so, and that lawsuit is called a "writ of mandamus". A writ of mandamus is simply a request that the court compel a public servant to perform his duty under the law. Not only that, but the conspiracy against rights surrounding the citizenship issue gets MUCH worse.

If you read the above link to the Department of State website, you will find out that the Department of State recommends that for those people who want a "Certificate of non-Citizen National Status" under 8 U.S.C. §1452, they should get a U.S. Passport instead. There is a big problem with that, because the passport simply says "citizen/national" rather than identifying which of the two types of citizens that you are. That doesn't provide the requisite proof that you are a "national" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). It's certified, but it doesn't distinguish in the way you need at a tax trial.

To find a way around this political roadblock to emancipation, we applied for a U.S. Passport as they recommended. However, before we did, we amended the DS-11 application form electronically so as to indicate that both of our parents and our spouse are "nationals" rather than "U.S. citizens" in blocks 14, 15, and 16. This removes the incorrect presumption on the form. We also filled out the form without a Slave Surveillance Number and turned it in. The clerk didn't even pause, but processed the application and gave us a passport a few hours later. When we came to pick up the passport, we asked the clerk if we could have a copy of the approved DS-11 application form and we asked to have it certified. We wanted it certified so that we could use it as evidence admissible in court of our true status as a "non-resident on-persons" and "nationals" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). Guess what? Here is what the clerk told us, which is more foot dragging and really surprised us:

> "It is our policy NOT to provide copies of the application form. If you want a certified copy, then the only way you can get it is through a Privacy Act request."

To make things worse, we asked WHY they have this requirement and from what legal authority it derives, and we got evasive comments back. Therefore, we have written a Privacy Act request that you can reuse which demands a copy of the approved DS-11 Passport Application form from the Department of State, along with several other key documents. You can find that document either in section 3.6.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005. That form is also available online below:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/DOSFOIA-Non-CertDS11.htm

One of our readers who attempted to procure the Certificate of "non-citizen National Status" by mail using the form provided in section 5.6.12 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 also received the following letter back from the Department of State in response to his correspondence:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/Citizenship/dos-AmCitizenResponse.pdf

Based on the crooked behavior of the Department of State in this instance, the government obviously doesn't want to cooperate with people in obtaining proof of their true citizenship status. They know that if the word gets out that this works, and everyone does it, we will have a country of "nontaxpayers" and "nonresident aliens" as we clearly show in section 5.6.13 and following! He.. he…he! Scumbags!

6.11 Department of Justice (DOJ) Scandals Related to Income Taxes

"Evil men do not understand justice,
But those who seek the Lord understand all."
[Prov. 28:5, Bible, NKJV]

"He who justifies the wicked, and he who condemns the just,
Both of them alike are an abomination to the Lord."
[Prov. 17:15, Bible, NKJV]

As we established in section 5.4.21, the Department of Justice has NO delegated authority to prosecute IRC Subtitle A Income Tax Crimes. Below are some examples of some of the illegal and unethical things they have done in the absence of that authority.

6.11.1 Prosecution of Dr. Phil Roberts: "Political Tax Prisoner"

In the opening of this book, section 1.9 entitled "Political 'Tax' Prisoners" talked about an unfortunate victim of legal abuse by the Department of Justice (DOJ) named Dr. Phil Roberts. Phil is a respected member of the community, a physician, and an intelligent and principled man. We have summarized his case (Federal District Court in Fort Smith, Arkansas, case # 00-20018-001) in that section using information provided by his attorney and relatives. We also have the entire transcript (over 700 pages!) of his criminal tax trial posted on our website for you to read (http://famguardian.org, look in Tax Freedom and then under the heading "Case Studies"). The transcript and the Trial Notes are instructive educational aids for you to learn how many different constitutional rights of Dr. Roberts were arrogantly and illegally violated by the Department of Justice conspiring with the judge of that court. It is obvious that many laws were violated, and below are just a few of the violations:

1. Department of Justice:
   1.1. Taking of property not based on law (26 C.F.R. §601.106(f)(1).
   1.2. Retaliating against a witness, victim, or informant (18 U.S.C. §1513)
   1.3. Blackmail (18 U.S.C. §873).
   1.4. Extortion (18 U.S.C. §872)
2. Judge:
   2.1. Federally protected rights being violated (18 U.S.C. §245)
   2.2. Conspiracy against rights (18 U.S.C. §241).
   2.3. Conflict of interest (28 U.S.C. §455).

In the year 2000, Dr. Phil Roberts was prosecuted and eventually imprisoned for willful failure to file under 26 U.S.C. §7203, after he took the IRS to court on three different occasions because they kept harassing him about filing his tax return but refused to produce any evidence or a legal basis why they thought he had any tax liability whatsoever. Among the incredible treachery foisted upon him by the judge, we are told, was the following, reported directly to us by his attorney, Oscar Stilley and appearing in the trial transcript itself:

1. Tried to deny Dr. Roberts the right to counsel of his choice because the judge didn't like his attorney.
2. Would not allow his attorney to cross-examine prospective jurists during voir dire (his attorney told us this on the phone).
3. Slipped three pre-selected jurists into the courtroom at the last minute.
4. Rigged the drawing box for selecting jurists.
5. Judge kept the instructions he gave to the jury OFF THE RECORD (so he couldn't be prosecuted for jury tampering). See items 69 and 247.
6. At his arraignment, the court allowed Dr. Roberts to be forced by the DOJ in front of the jury, to sign his tax return (like making Jesus carry his cross before they nailed him to it). All along, they knew he had refused to sign his return, but not to submit it, because he wanted to be made aware what specific law made him liable to pay income tax! How can you prosecute someone for wanting an answer to that question and being stonewalled all the way up to trial by the IRS, who refused to answer the question?
7. Judge would not allow any laws to be discussed in front of the jury. (item 35).

8. Would not allow Dr. Roberts to demand or expect the DOJ to produce the law he violated.
9. Told his attorney that his license would be revoked if he tried to discuss the law because the ability to practice law was a "privilege" granted by the court (see item 232).
10. Refused to allow Dr. Roberts to discuss the legal basis for his reasonable cause belief that he had no income tax liability. Ignored repeated requests from his counsel throughout the trial to discuss the Internal revenue Code (a violation of his Sixth Amendment rights).
11. Overruled most of the defense's objections and almost none of the Department of Justice's.
12. Insisted that the defense tell him the questions he wanted to ask of witnesses in a sidebar BEFORE he actually asked them.
13. Ignored Dr. Robert's Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate himself by filing a tax return.

And the punishment for exercising his First Amendment right to not talk to his government, his Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate himself by not filing a tax return was a prison sentence of about 1 year and a half. Remember that we said that what makes something a right is that the exercise of the right cannot be penalized, regulated, or punished in any way when one freely chooses to exercise the right. Do we really have any rights with such a prejudicial and conspiratorial court system and a Department of Justice that instead of defending criminals, makes us ALL into criminals for exercising our constitutional rights? Below are some of the ridiculous statements made by the judge during the trial, all of which you can read yourself on our website in the actual trial transcript. The following Trial Notes were prepared by Dr. Roberts' brother, Robert Roberts, to summarize the over 700 pages of transcript on the case. This transcript is very effective at showing that there is indeed a judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax, and that the judge was conspiring with the DOJ to make an example out of Dr. Roberts. They wanted to get him into jail so they could use the fear factor to continue intimidating other citizens to continue "volunteering" to pay taxes for which they weren't liable. The numbers in the left margin come from the Trial Notes, and are there so we can refer to specific comments afterward:

35 Court informs the potential jurors that he will tell them the law and that they must follow his instructions whether they agree or not. P59, 21-25 & P60, 1

49. Judge implies to potential jurors that everyone must pay the correct amount of Federal Income Tax. P78, 5-10

69. Jury instructions given but not entered into the transcript. P120, 18

78. Statement objected to by prosecution, "Yeah" agrees the court, and court states "Let's not argue the law." P131, 1-7

80. Court tells defense "You know, don't argue the law." P131, 22-23

83. Court states "Let's not argue the law..." "Don't argue the law!" P133, 12-14

88. Defenses' opening statement is again objected to and the court calls for a bar side conference where the counsel is directed to change his opening statement to the jury. Objection sustained. P137, 17-25, P138 - P143 (all)

89. Defense tells jury that the prosecution must show the statute of law requiring a person to make and file and income tax return. P143, 9-15

90. Defense tells jury that defendant wrote a letter to the IRS requesting that they show him the law...P143, 24-25 & P144, 1-2

91. Defense objects to the introduction of previous tax returns as evidence of knowledge by the prosecution., P147, 1-7

92. Objection overruled. P147, 8-9

93. Court states "In this matter, you know, if you're making similar objection, I'm probably going to overrule those, too." P147, 16-18

95. Prosecution moves to enter exhibit (previously filed tax return). Court states: "Same objection Mr. Stilley? It will be admitted over your objection." P149, 5-6

102. Defense counsel cross examines asking if the witness can "... tell us what law required Dr. Roberts to file a tax return?"
OBJECTED to and sustained by the court.P156, 1-6

103. Sidebar called for by the court. P156, 9-10

104. Court asks the prosecution if they have already been over this, prosecution gives a thorough argument why it feels that the court should not allow this line of questioning and the court agrees. P156, 15-23

112. Defense asks witness on cross if he perhaps knows the law that requires the defendant to file... Objected to and sustained by the court. P191, 10-13

113. Defense asks if the terms "make" and "file" meant the same thing... OBJECTED TO AND SUSTAINED BY THE COURT. P193, 14-18

116. Court states "Let's not get into the definition of income." Orders defense off of the question. P219, 18-23

120. Defense asks that prosecution witness, Tom Bryan be excluded from the court room while Magistrate Jones-Stites is questioned. Court refuses stating that Bryan "... is the representative of the government and he's not going to be excluded." P278, 17-22

122. Court sustains prosecutions objection to Jones-Stites being required to testify in court for the defense stating: "I'm going to sustain the objection to it. You've made your offer of proof and that will be a part of the record available to the Eighth Circuit when you appeal this matter." P289, 10-14

124. Defense asks the court if the witness admits to selective prosecution against the defendant and the court interjects that "I'm not going to let you put her up there to ask that. What else are you going to put her up there and ask her?" P292, 4-6

131. Under cross examination, the defense asks her, Jefferee Bolen, if she has ever seen the law that requires you to file a tax return.
OBJECTED TO AND SUSTAINED by the court as an improper question. P332, 14 -17

132. Court tells the defense counsel that "We're not going to have any questions, you know, about laws and tax returns and whatever." P332, 19-21

138. Witness, Brian Miller (IRS Agent), states that "... nobody's an expert on all the tax law, but I'm pretty familiar with certain parts of it." P346, 22-23

139. In cross examination of the witness, Brian Miller, he states that the requirement to file can be found in the IRC, section 6012 and section(s) 61,63, and P349, 10-25 & P350, 1-8

140. Defense then asks the witness if the IRC, when opened to Section 6012, will show the law that requires a person to file a tax return.
OBJECTED to by the prosecution and sustained by the court. P350, 9-13

141. Defense asks the courts permission to approach the witness and the court states, " No, you may not approach the witness. You can approach the Bench. I want to see you up here right now..."P350, 15-19

142. Court tells defense counsel " ... I don't want you to go there..." "... you're not to go there on this."P351, 8-11

146. Court answers by telling the defense that if it asks an improper question, "... I'm going to clear this courtroom." P352, 22-23

149. The defense asks the expert witness that if the jury wanted to see the law, how would they see it. P355, 18-19
Court interrupts saying "... let's not go there, sir." P355, 20

151. Defense asks the court if he can read part of the IRC Section 6012 to the witness and the court says " No, Sir, you may not." " No, sir. You cannot. You cannot. You can't read a snippet, can't read a word...." P357, 9-14

152. Court again asks the defense if it is attempting to cause a mistrial (jury is out of the room). Court then tells the defense counsel " If you have an objection to it and if you think the Court's wrong, when this trial is over, it can be appealed..." P358, 11-18

153. Court tells the defense counsel "... You may not be permitted to ask any more questions, ever, if you're not careful in this case..." P361, 4-5

154. Court demands that the defense present its questions to the court prior to asking them in open court. P361, 16-24

155. Court again tells the defense counsel to approach the bench prior to asking any additional questions of the witness, Brian Miller, IRS agent. P363, 8-11

156. Court admonishes the defense counsel for asking to approach the bench. Court states, " ... I also need to advise you that you don't need to make comments like that in front of the jury." P370, 5-7

157. Court tells defense that it can ask any question that if wants to. Defense states that he wants to ask what law would be needed... . The prosecution objects and the court sustains the objection. P373, 18-24

158. Court orders the defense counsel to tell the court what other questions he is going to ask (at sidebar). P374, 10-12

159. Court authorizes the defense to ask two questions. P371, 15

160. Court refuses to allow the defense to ask a question regarding the penalties of perjury clause and tells the defense counsel "... Your cross examination is over, sir, you may be seated." P379, 8-18

166. Court tells the defense counsel, at sidebar, that the "... difference between making and filing I think is a matter of semantics that I'm not going to let you go into with this witness." P440, 9-12

170. Court tells defense counsel " I don't want to hear the word "LAW" mentioned again from this witness. Do you understand me?" P444, 15-17

171. Expert witness, Tom Bryan (IRS Agent), states that he doesn't "... really like to respond to a lot of things in writing." "... I don't want to get into a letter writing campaign such as this." Regarding letters written to him by the defendant. P449, 9-14

172. (Sidebar) Court demands that the defense counsel disclose his questions to the court at sidebar. "Tell me what questions you're going to ask." P452, 18

173. Court threatens to end the defenses' cross examination and demands to know what questions counsel will pose to this witness. P452, 22-24

174. Court again admonishes the defense not to discuss the law. P453, 19-20

180. Regarding the testimony of defense witness, Brenda Gray, the court tells the defense, " I don't doubt you're trying to lay a foundation. I just wonder if we hadn't already removed that foundation... ." P486, 5-7

186. Defendant is asked to whom else he had presented his questions regarding his requirement to file and he asks if he must divulge the name of the US Magistrate. (Magistrate Jones-Stites). The prosecution objects and the court sustains the objection telling the defendant "... you'll not be permitted to answer that. Ask your next question." P528,13-22

187. At sidebar, the court tells the defense counsel, concerning Magistrate Jones-Stites testimony before a jury less court room the day before, " I ain't going to let you - - we ain't going there." "...It's prejudicial, and we're not going there." " I don't want any conversations with the US Magistrate, we're not going there. That's improper." P528, 9-22

188. Court continues to demand that the defense counsel present its questions for the witness to the court at sidebar for approval or disapproval without the jury hearing any of it. P530, 4-11

189. Prosecutor threatens the defense counsel, "You want to go for sanctions, you just keep it up." P531, 11-12

190. Court tells the attorneys that, "We're not going to introduce anything on the Internal Revenue Code." P531, 23-24

191. Court tells the defense counsel, "... you're not functioning just exactly right. I don't know if you're not hearing or you're not comprehending..." P532, 10-12

192. Still at sidebar, the court tells the defense in response to the defense counsel's question about how to get the defendants' understanding of the law from his head to the jury, "I don't know, but you're not going to do it with the Magistrate. You're not going to do it with reading the law to him either." P532, 14-20

193. Speaking of the defendant, the court states, " Let's try to get rid of this witness. After he finishes, what other witness do you have?" P533, 16-18

194. Defense informs the judge that this is the defendant and the court responds, " Let's finish it then today." P533, 21-22

198. At sidebar again, the court threatens to clear the jury from the room because the defense counsel is talking too loudly. P540, 11-13

199. Court continues to insist, at sidebar, that the defense must present all of its Exhibit list for approval/ disapproval by the court before it can be offered in open court before the jury. P541, 14-20

200. Court continues to disallow defense Exhibits at the sidebar. Court states that. " ... we're not going to talk about statutes to the jury ..." P544, 11-13

201. Court restates to the defense that "... you're not going to be permitted to talk about any statutes, any acts, any law..." P545, 7-8

202. Court dismisses the jury for the day and asks the defense if some of its Exhibits weren't developed after the years 93/94. P548, 20-22

220. Court reminds the defense counsel, "... And I'm taking you at your word as an officer of this court that you're not going to ask something that we've already discussed time and time again, Sir." P628, 10-12

221. Defense questions to the witness (defendant) with regards to discussions he had with a Magistrate judge are interrupted by the court and the court tells the defense counsel three (3) times "... and we're not going there, Mr. Stilley. ..." P629, 22-23

"... You're not to go there, Mr. Stilley." P630, 1

"... You're not to go there, Mr. Stilley. Ask another question, sir, if you have another question." P630, 3-4

222. Defense counsel asks the defendant (witness) if he has ever filed a lawsuit in order to get a declaratory judgment as to his rights and duties under the law. Objected to and sustained by the court. The court then instructs the defense counsel, "Don't argue with me in front of the jury, Mr. Stilley. If you need to argue, come forward, but we've already resolved that." P622, 22-25 & P633, 7-9

223. Court states that if it hadn't ruled previously, with regard to bringing up the lawsuits filed by the defendant, that, "Well, if I didn't, I am now. I am telling you it is sustained on nothing concerning any civil lawsuits he may have filed. That's improper. And I'm going to prohibit you from asking any question about it, and your record is about as clear as it can be. ..." P634, 18-23

224. Court asks the defense counsel, "... Are you getting -- making any progress in getting him off the stand?" He is referring to the defendant who is testifying in his own behalf. P635, 6-7

225. When the defense responds that he hasn't gotten there yet, the court responds, "Well, you may not ever get there if you keep asking questions about that have already been -- you know, about issues that have already been resolved." P635, 10-12

226. The prosecution's cross examination of the defendant appear to be irrelevant and most of the questions concern the years outside of the years in question, 1993 and 1994. Defense objections are overruled by the court. P643 - P675 (all)

229. Court interrupts the defendants testimony in order to limit it. The prosecution had raised no objection. P682, 15-17

230. Court tells the defense counsel, "Mr. Stilley, don't argue with me." P683, 6

232. At sidebar, the Court tells the defense counsel, "... This is the most improper-- this is the worst conduct I've ever seen of a lawyer, Mr. Stilley. ..." "... (W)e're going to visit this further at length, Mr. Stilley. The practice of law, sir, is a privilege, especially in Federal Court. You're close to losing that privilege in this court, Mr. Stilley." P685, 5-11

234. At sidebar, the defense counsel asks again if he can ask questions regarding the defendants attempts to get a declaratory judgment to ascertain his responsibilities and is told by the Court, "Absolutely not, N O T, period."

The defense states that he objects highly and the court responds, "Fine. I want you to object as highly as you need to be, but what else do you have?" P687, 1-6

235. Court demands, at sidebar, that the defense tell the court where else it's going. P688, 3-4

236. At sidebar, the defense explains that many people disagree about matters of tax law without being kooks. The Court responds, "Mr. Stilley, you have -- you're not going there, sir. What else?" P688, 18-22

237. At sidebar still, the court asks the defense if that is going to be its last question. The defense answers no and the court responds, "Well, it very well could be, unless you tell me what they are. Now, the jury has been waiting over there for about five minutes and they're getting impatient and so am I, Mr. Stilley." P699, 19-25

238. Court continues to deny the defense's proposed questions at the sidebar stating, "That's improper. He's not to do that." "I'm not going to permit it. What else you got?" P690,6 &12-13

240. Court states that it believes that the jury has been abused. P700, 12

241. Defense tells the Court that it objects to any instruction to the jury with regard to income until it is defined. Court notes the objection and overrules it. P706, 21-25

242. Court states, absent the jury, that regarding willfulness, "... I don't know what the law is. I'm going to go look it up." P716, 20-21

243. Court states that closing arguments are just that, arguments. Court states, "... I don't ever like to interrupt closing arguments..." P718, 2-7

244. Defense is giving its closing argument and asks if there is a law that requires a single person under the age of 65 to make a Federal income tax return for 1994. Prosecution objects and the court sustains the objection stating, " ... You are not to argue the law, Mr. Stilley." P739, 14-19

245. When the prosecution makes its closing argument and the defense objects to statements made by the prosecution, the Court overrules the objection stating, "It's overruled. This is closing arguments. Be seated, sir." P748, 9-15

246. Defense objects again and the court overrules the objection stating, " You're overruled. Sit down, sir." P748, 22-24

247. JURY INSTRUCTIONS FROM THE COURT ARE NOT TRANSCRIBED INTO THE TRIAL TRANSCRIPT. P752, 6-7

248. Jury gives its verdict to the two charges of the Indictment. Guilty on both counts. P753 (all) & P754 (all)

249. Court instructs the jury saying, "... We have a rule in the Western District of Arkansas that you're -- that jurors cannot be contacted, and that rule is going to remain in effect. I would say if you are contacted by anybody in connection with this case, you need to notify the Court immediately. ..." P755, 8-12

250. Prosecuting attorney, Blackorby, tells the Court regarding the defendant, "He doesn't have a Fifth Amendment privilege now. It's been waived by the conviction." P756, 7-8

251. Court states, " I'm going to continue the bond at present through sentencing. ..." P756, 9-10

After reading item 232, I wonder why ANYONE would want to hire an attorney to represent them in a trial in Federal Court! What a farce!! That's why this document places such an emphasis on helping to develop in you the skills to masterfully litigate your own case—so you can tell the tax emperor he has no clothes without having your livelihood and your ability to earn a living threatened by a covetous so –called judge with a criminal conflict of interest in violation of 18 U.S.C. §208, 28 U.S.C. §144, and 28 U.S.C. §455!

Throughout the trial, the judge emphasized that they couldn't talk about the law. What the hell else are courts and the lawyers in them supposed to talk about…hearsay and what we think the law says?(!) All that's left if the judge manipulates and abuses the jury and the law isn't discussed is a kangaroo court that's on a witch hunt to convict and burn the defendant, which is precisely what they did in this case! What a miscarriage and abuse of justice if I ever saw one! The judge, by refusing to discuss the law, has violated the Sixth Amendment because he has made it impossible for a defendant to clearly know what the law says and what the charges against him are—instead, the court devolved into a subjective exercise of whatever the judge thinks the law says or wants the law to say! We are supposed to be a society of laws and not of men but this judge has made sure it is the other way around. This kind of tyranny MUST be stopped!

The court stated in item 240 that the "jury has been abused". That's right, and you know who abused them?.. THE JUDGE! And his abuse of them led to an involuntary abuse of Dr. Phil Roberts by the jury! Do we live in a mobocracy, I mean democracy, or a republic? Fire the bastard and strip him of his federal retirement and benefits for plundering the citizenry! THIEF! Now we know why judges wear black robes,.. because they are the executioner in most federal tax trials. When you go into federal court as the defendant, you have TWO prosecutors: The Judge and the U.S. attorney. The deck is stacked against you.

6.11.2 Fraud On The Court: Demjanuk v. Petrovsky, 10 F.3d. 338

If any reader doubts that officials of the United States government, even U.S. attorneys in the United States Department of Justice, are capable of perpetrating "fraud on the court" by engaging in "misconduct," the case of Demjanjuk v. Petrovsky, 10 F.3d. 338 (6th Cir.1993) should remove that doubt. Mr. Demjanjuk was wrongly identified as "Ivan the Terrible" and charged with murdering thousands of Jews during WW2. The appellate court found that some U.S. attorneys committed "fraud on the court" and "engaged in prosecutorial misconduct by failing to disclose to the courts and to the petitioner [Demjanjuk] exculpatory information in their possession during litigation culminating in extradition proceedings, which led to the petitioner's forced departure from the United States and trial on capital charges in the State of Israel." The record shows that "no fewer than eight government attorneys worked on the Demjanjuk denaturalization case...." The "exculpatory information" that U.S. attorneys possessed but failed to reveal to the courts (that heard and ruled on Demjanjuk's denaturalization and extradition proceedings) and to Demjanjuk's attorneys was reasonable evidence that Demjanjuk was not the man that the U.S. attorneys claimed him to be, "Ivan the Terrible."

As readers may recall, Mr. Demjanjuk was extradited to Israel where he was found guilty of the "mass murder of Jews" and sentenced to hang. But the persistent search for truth and justice by Mr. Demjanjuk's attorneys and his son-in-law through discovery requests and Freedom of Information Act requests and litigation finally paid off. Fortunately for Mr. Demjanjuk, upon appeal of his death sentence the Supreme Court of Israel learned from the withheld documents and statements of guards at Treblinka that "clearly identified" Ivan Marchenko--not John Demjanjuk--as "Ivan the Terrible." It is significant that it was the Supreme Court of Israel and not an American court that ultimately saved the life of John Demjanjuk. The Demjanjuk case proves that some U.S. attorneys had little interest in learning the true identity of a man they were prosecuting for mass murder or the attainment of justice when Demjanjuk's life was assumed to be at risk. Shamefully, such attorneys' apparent, chief interest is in obtaining convictions and "winning" cases. It would be interesting to know if the U.S. attorneys who perpetrated fraud on the court in the Demjanjuk case were punished and if the U.S. Department of Justice still employs any of them. With such grave, egregious and unethical misconduct as was practiced in Demjanjuk by U.S. attorneys who swore to uphold the law, there is small wonder why so many Americans have come to have so little faith in this country's judiciary system.

6.12 Judicial Scandals Related to Income Tax

"He who justifies the wicked, and he who condemns the just, both of them alike are an abomination to the Lord."
[Prov. 17:15, Bible, NKJV]

"Getting treasures by a lying tongue
Is the fleeting fantasy of those who seek death.
The violence of the wicked will destroy them,
Because they refuse to do justice."
[Prov. 21:6-7, Bible, NKJV]

"If a ruler pays attention to lies,
All his servants become wicked."

[Prov. 29:12]

"And you shalt take no bribe, for a bribe blinds the discerning and perverts the words of the righteous." [Exodus 23:8, Bible, NKJV]

"Under a government which imprisons any unjustly, the true place for a just man is also a prison."
*[*Henry David Thoreau]

In 1789 Thomas Jefferson warned that the federal judiciary, if given too much power, might ruin our REPUBLIC, and destroy our RIGHTS! Based on the content of the following subsections and the behavior of the IRS, we believe the very tyrannical situation that Thomas Jefferson warned us about below has come true!

"The new Constitution has secured these [individual rights] in the Executive and Legislative departments: but not in the Judiciary. It should have established trials by the people themselves, that is to say, by jury."

"The Judiciary of the United States is the subtle corps of sappers and miners constantly working under ground to undermine the foundations of our confederated fabric." (1820)

"…the Federal Judiciary; an irresponsible body (for impeachment is scarcely a scarecrow), working like gravity by night and by day, gaining a little today and a little tomorrow, and advancing its noiseless step like a thief, over the field of jurisdiction, until all shall be usurped from the States, and the government of all be consolidated into one….when all government … in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another and will become as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated." (1821)

"The opinion which gives to the judges the right to decide what laws are constitutional and what not, not only for themselves in their own sphere of action, but for the legislative and executive also in their spheres, would make the judiciary a despotic branch.

"…judges should be withdrawn from the bench whose erroneous biases are leading to dissolution. It may, indeed, injure them in fame or fortune; but is saves the Republic…"

The U.S. Supreme Court described succinctly how the government most often acts unconstitutionally and illegally, and we should heed and learn from their description below:

"It may be that it…is the obnoxious thing in its mildest and least repulsive form; but illegitimate and unconstitutional practices get their first footing in that way; namely, by silent approaches and slight deviations from legal modes of procedure. This can only be obviated by adhering to the rule that constitutional provisions for the security of person and property should be liberally construed. A close and literal construction deprives them of half their efficacy, and leads to gradual depreciation of the right, as if it consisted more in sound than in substance. It is the duty of the courts to be watchful for the constitutional rights of the citizens, and against any stealthy encroachments thereon. Their motto should be obsta principalis." [Mr. Justice Brewer, dissenting, quoting Mr. Justice Bradley in boyd v. United States, 116 U.S. 616, 29 L.Ed. 746, 6 Sup.Ct.Rep. 524"
[Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906)]

It is therefore the job of the courts to be watchful over our liberties and to act as a check and balance against unconstitutional acts by either the Executive or Legislative branches of government. This is a fiduciary duty they have for the citizens and inhabitants they serve within their jurisdiction. We'll let you be the judge in this section of how well they have fulfilled that duty.

Whole books have been written just about judicial conspiracy and tyranny. We have tried to narrow the scope of this section to summarize the picture for you only within the context of the income tax. If you would like to dig deeper into this subject of judicial tyranny, the best book we have found is:

- Government by Judiciary: The Transformation of the Fourteenth Amendment, Raoul Berger, Second Edition, 1997, Liberty Fund, Inc.; 8335 Allison Pointe Trail, Suite 300; Indianapolis, Indiana 46250-1684; ISBN 0-86597-143-9 (hardcover).

6.12.1 Abuse of "Case Law"[396]

[396] Paraphrased from The Federal Mafia, 2000 edition, ISBN 0-939374-09-6, Irwin Schiff, pp. 124-125.

In any court of law, an understanding of the legal relationship between statutory law and case law (i.e. court decisions) is crucial. The following U.S. Supreme Court case of Consumer Products Safety v. GTE Sylvania, 447 U.S. 102, establishes that the statute takes precedence over the case law backing the statute:

> "We begin with the familiar canon of statutory construction that the starting point for interpreting a statute is the language of the statute itself. Absent a clearly expressed legislative intention to the contrary, the language must ordinarily be regarded as conclusive.

So if and only if there is doubt about the meaning of the statute is there a need to refer to case law to resolve the controversy. This is especially true of the Supreme Law of the Land, which is the Constitution. In actual practice, however, corrupt judges and the federal courts where they occupy the bench commonly subvert this requirement in order to expand federal fiscal and monetary power, and in the process, conspire against the rights of Americans in illegally enforcing a voluntary tax, the Subtitles A through C personal income tax. To give you an example, take the case of Griffith v. C.I.R., 598 F. Supp. 405, where one Charles Griffith attempted to prevent the IRS from illegally seizing his assets without due process in order to collect a $500 penalty that had been assessed against him for allegedly filing a false W-4. As stated in that court decision:

> "According to plaintiff's complaint, on September 3, 1982, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) sent plaintiff a letter claiming that his W-4 did not meet the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code Sec. 3402 and informing him that his employer be directed to disregard [notice the court did not say "ordered" to] the W-4 form and withhold monies from his paycheck as if he were single and claiming one (1) withholding allowance. By letter dated September 14, 1982, plaintiff informed the IRS of his reasons for completing the W-4 in alleged illegal manner. However, the IRS notified his employer to proceed withholding as if plaintiff were single…and was assessed a penalty of five hundred dollars ($500) under 26 U.S.C. §6682(a).

Note that the court suggests that Griffith completed his W-4 in an "allegedly illegal manner." How exactly does one complete an IRS Form W-4 in an "illegal manner"? Did Griffith hit the personnel clerk over the head with a hammer, strip the clothes off and then complete his W-4 on her naked body? And if it were completed in an "allegedly illegal manner," why wasn't he arrested? It is clear that Griffith's W-4 did "meet the requirements of Section 3402." Griffith obviously knew (as you also know) that he was not liable for income taxes, and so probably claimed "exempt" in accordance with 26 U.S.C. §3402(n). Note that the court states that the "plaintiff informed the IRS of his reasons for completing the form." So why didn't the court state those reasons in its decision, since Section 6682 only applies when such reasons are not "reasonable"? But not only did the court refuse to consider whether Griffith's reasons were "reasonable," it refused to even mention them! I wonder why? Who, therefore, decided that Griffith "reasons" were not "reasonable"? An IRS cleaning lady?

In finding against Griffith the DIShonorable Judge White wrote:

> Plaintiff's claim that the manner of collection of the penalty violates his Fifth Amendment rights is without merit. He has attempted to show that the government cannot prevail in the collection of the penalty because to do so prior to a hearing would deprive him of his Fifth Amendment constitutional rights. Case law dictates otherwise…The power of the government to levy is essential to the self assessment tax system because it encourages voluntary compliance.

So the court, in deciding to allow the IRS to seize Griffith's property without any hearing whatsoever, admits that it does so on the basis of what "case law dictates"—never mind what the statute itself "dictates" or what the Constitution "dictates", which the judge took an oath "to support and defend"! Section 6682 only allows the penalty if there is no "reasonable basis" for the claim, which the court here refuses to even consider!

It should also be pointed out in this case that Griffith represented himself against the government as a pro per. He undoubtedly believed he could do so, since he was convinced (and rightly so) that he had several statutes, the Constitution, and logic all on his side. But he learned (as we all do sooner or later), that these often do not count much in federal court because of the massive corruption and outright tyranny that exists there. Incidentally, did you happen to get the feeling when you read the above, that you were reading right out of Alice in Wonderland?

Clearly, Griffith's argument is not only "not without merit"; it is legally correct. But federal judges can easily dispatch such arguments by labeling them "frivolous" or stating they are "without merit" and not explaining the basis for that determination. This leaves the average pro per litigant, not to mention most attorneys, without any recourse except to shake their head and file a lawsuit for breach of fiduciary duty and corruption against the judge.

6.12.2 The Federal Mafia Courts Stole Your Seventh Amendment Right to Trial by Jury!

The Federal Mafia Courts stole your Seventh Amendment right to trial by jury. Here is what the Seventh Amendment says about the right of trial by jury:

> In Suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re-examined in any Court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law.
> [Seventh Amendment]

And here is what the U.S. Constitution, Article 3, Section 2, Clause 3 says about the right of trial by jury:

> "The Trial of all Crimes, except in Cases of Impeachment, shall be by Jury; and such Trial shall be held in the State where the said Crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State, the Trial shall be at such Place or Places as the Congress may by Law have directed."*
> [Article III, Section 2, Clause 3, U.S. Constitution]

Here is what the tyrants in the Fifth Circuit court of federal appeals said about your Seventh Amendment right to jury trial in the case of Mathes v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 576 F.2d. 70 (1978) in relation to a civil tax trial held in U.S. Tax Court:

> Taxpayers also assert they were denied their Seventh Amendment right to trial by jury before the Tax Court. The Seventh Amendment preserves the right to jury trial "in suits at common law." Since there was no right of action at common law against a sovereign, enforceable by jury trial or otherwise, there is no constitutional right to a jury trial in a suit against the United States. See 9 C. Wright & A. Miller, Federal Practice & Procedure § 2314, at 68-69 (1971). Thus, there is a right to a jury trial in actions against the United States only if a statute so provides. Congress has not so provided when the taxpayer elects not to pay the assessment and sue for a redetermination in the Tax Court. For a taxpayer to obtain a trial by jury, he must pay the tax allegedly owed and sue for a refund in district court. 28 U.S.C. §§ 2402 and 1346(a)(1). The law is therefore clear that a taxpayer who elects to bring his suit in the Tax Court has no right, statutory or constitutional, to a trial by jury. Phillips v. Commissioner, 283 U.S. 589, 599 n. 9, 51 S.Ct. 608, 75 L.Ed. 1289 (1931); Wickwire v. Reinecke, 275 U.S. 101, 105-106, 48 S.Ct. 43, 72 L.Ed. 184 (1927); Dorl v. Commissioner, 507 F.2d. 406, 407 (2d Cir. 1974) (holding it "elementary that there is no right to a jury trial in the Tax Court.").
> [Mathes v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 576 F.2d. 70 (1978)]

Therefore, we only get a trial by jury when litigating against the U.S. government for wrongful taking of taxes if Congress gives its permission by statute! Do you think they will ever do that? Fat chance! The Constitution no longer guarantees a trial by jury if the matter being litigated is taxes and the litigant is suing the federal government. We have the wranglings of corrupt judges like the one above to thank for that. Such abuses directly contradict the U.S. Constitution, which states:

> Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8: "No Title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States: And no Person holding any Office of Profit or Trust under them, shall, without the Consent of the Congress, accept of any present, Emolument, Office, or Title, of any kind whatever, from any King, Prince or foreign State."

In this case, the Title of Nobility is "Sovereign"! Here's what the definition of Nobility is, right from Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1047:

> "In English law, a division of the people, comprehending dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts, and barons. These had anciently duties annexed to their respective honors. They are created either by writ, i.e., by royal summons to attend the house of peers, or by letters patent, i.e., by royal grant of any dignity and degree of peerage; and they enjoy many privileges exclusive of their senatorial capacity. Since 1963 no new hereditary ennoblements have been created."
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1047]

In the above case, the "royal decree" creating the "Title of Nobility" is a judgment by the courts, and the "exclusive privilege" granted to the government (by itself, which by the way is a conflict of interest) is that of:

1. Not being directly accountable to a jury or the people it is elected to represent like everyone else for its wrongdoing
2. Not being able to be sued by the real sovereigns (the people) without its own consent.

> "While sovereign powers are delegated to ... the government, sovereignty itself remains with the people.. "
> [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, page 370]

Hypocrisy and lawlessness! With the above startling realizations in mind, do you think it is EVER possible to guarantee a fair trial or a balance of power if you are litigating against the IRS or the federal government in their own federal court? Absolute power corrupts absolutely, and there is no better example of that philosophy in action than in the federal courts. The deck in federal court is obviously stacked, which explains why so many irrational and unconstitutional rulings occur in the context of income tax litigation in the federal courts. Another thing that this section ought to convince you of is that it is more productive in a federal court to go after the individual government officials involved for corruption, fraud, and extortion under the color of office than it is to go after the government. If they violate the law, they can be held personally liable, and because you are not suing a sovereign, the United States Government, you can be assured your right to a Trial by Jury.

Do you STILL think we live in a free country? Our government is no different than having a monarch with absolute power to do whatever it wants with sovereign immunity from prosecution for wrongdoing granted by our corrupt federal courts!

6.12.3 You Cannot Obtain Declaratory Judgments in Federal Income Tax Trials Held in Federal Courts

Your wonderful Congress legislated away your right to obtain a Declaratory judgment in a federal income tax trial. A declaratory judgment is one where there are no disputes over fact and the only relief sought is a declaration of status or rights of the plaintiff under law. No jury trial occurs and the court (judge) makes the declaration of status or right by motion and without a trial. An example might be a declaration of your status by the court as a nonresident alien, a person not liable for federal income tax, etc.

Congress knows that people don't like to pay taxes and that they will be likely to litigate to protect their Constitutional rights, so they put a statutory roadblock in front of patriots who use Constitutional rights to avoid paying taxes and who want to litigate to get a declaratory judgment identifying them as persons not liable for income taxes. This roadblock guarantees that those who don't know what they are doing will lose in federal court, especially in cases where issues of status as a nonresident alien or personal liability for tax are asserted. That roadblock is 28 U.S.C. §2201 as follows, and it prevents federal courts from declaring the rights or status of a plaintiff to remedy a wrong related to taxes or illegal taking of taxes by the federal government in a federal court:

> United States Code
> TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
> PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
> CHAPTER 151 - DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS
> Sec. 2201. Creation of remedy
> (a) In a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction, except with respect to Federal taxes other than actions brought under section 7428 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, a proceeding under section 505 or 1146 of title 11, or in any civil action involving an antidumping or countervailing duty proceeding regarding a class or kind of merchandise of a free trade area country (as defined in section 516A(f)(10) of the Tariff Act of 1930), as determined by the administering authority, any court of the United States, upon the filing of an appropriate pleading, may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought. Any such declaration shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree and shall be reviewable as such.
> (b) For limitations on actions brought with respect to drug patents see section 505 or 512 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

What this means is that a federal court can't issue a declaratory judgment relating to federal taxes or declare your rights or status (e.g. the Bill of Rights, and the first ten Amendments to the U.S. Constitution) or the status of its own jurisdiction to hear your case with respect to federal income taxes. So in other words, declaratory judgments based on lack of jurisdiction or based on citizenship or assertion of constitutional rights cannot be decided in federal court solely by a judge! Such cases must be heard in state court or a common law court!

When you think about this statute, it actually makes sense. The statute doesn't allow a federal judge to solely decide rights or jurisdiction or citizenship status on a federal income issue because it would present a conflict of interest that would not serve the interests of justice and would violate 28 U.S.C. 455. Why? Because the judge's paycheck comes from the matter he is deciding on! Do you think he is going to rule in favor of the Citizen by saying he doesn't have to pay income taxes? The Congress therefore required an outside entity, such as a state court, to decide on issues of status. Don't be discouraged by the above, however. There is a way around this statutory trap. Below is the way around the roadblock:

While income tax arguments are barred under this rule - actions proving lack of citizenship, domicile, and residence are specifically allowed. The issue is not income tax but jurisdiction over the person. Lack of jurisdiction is proved by FRCP Rule 44 and 44.1 - You go to the proper jurisdiction to resolve the matter by taking the following steps:

1. Acquire domicile and residence in a common law jurisdiction.
2. File notice in the clerk's office in state and federal courts.
3. Argue this in Federal court using as evidence the filings filed at common law, state court and federal courts.
4. Appeal at common law under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60 last line "by independent action".

You are then not arguing jurisdiction in front of that court - you are using evidence to prove that jurisdiction already exists in another court. Read 28 U.S.C. §2201 and it states that it must be argued in the proper manner - and that is by not letting the US court decide that issue - go to common law and plead condition precedent under FRCP rule 8.(The citizenship was already decided before the action began).

This argument is in agreement with all of the cites herein and the argument that dual citizenship can exist. State law tells you the procedure for noticing the state courts that you have acquired a new residence and domicile.

6.12.4 The Changing Definition of "Direct, Indirect, and Excise Taxes"

> "Dishonest scales are an abomination to the Lord, but a just weight is His delight."
> [Prov. 11:1, Bible, NKJV]

> "Judicial verbicide is calculated to convert the Constitution into a worthless scrap of paper and to replace our government of laws with a judicial oligarchy."
> [Senator Sam Ervin, during Watergate hearing]

> "By mercy and truth iniquity is purged: and by the fear of the LORD men depart from evil."
> [Prov. 16:6, Bible, NKJV]

> "Thus says the Lord: 'Execute judgment in the morning; and deliver him who is plundered [illegally by the IRS] out of the hand of the oppressor, lest my fury go forth like fire and burn so that no one can quench it, because of the evil of your doings."
> [Jeremiah 21:12, Bible, NKJV]

The purpose of this section is to provide evidence to support the conclusion that there is a conspiracy of massive proportions by the federal judiciary to defend and uphold federal income taxes. We hinted at the existence of this conspiracy in section 5.6.11.9 entitled "Why Hasn't the 861 Issue Been Challenged in Court Already?". Now we will prove the existence of this conspiracy by researching actual cases and by reading from judgments of the federal courts at various levels over the years.

Because the judiciary is authorized by the Constitution to "legislate", federal judges and the legal profession have crafted a different approach to support and expand the operation of the federal income tax. It's called "redefining the meaning of words". Over time, they have redefined such words as "direct tax", "excise tax", and "indirect tax" to expand the applicability of federal taxes and, by implication, the jurisdiction of the federal government to tax its citizens. Our own ignorance of the concept of "stare decisis", also called "precedent", and our lack of attentiveness to their transgressions through the political process has allowed them to get away with this devious fraud. We will therefore take a look at how the definitions of these terms have evolved and have been "optimized" over the years by federal judges as a way to maximize illegal government revenues from income taxes. This notion of changing the definition of words is not new. Instead, it is just another devious trick that covetous lawyers use to enslave us by hiding and obfuscating the truth over time. Instead of using language as a way to empower and free people and respect their liberties, lawyers abuse words as a way to trick, enslave, confuse, and control people. We talked about this devious approach in section 2.11.3, entitled "How to Teach Your Child About Politics", when we said:

> "When your child has matured sufficiently to understand how the judicial system works, set a bedtime for him and then send him to bed an hour early. When he tearfully accuses you of breaking the rules, explain that you made the rules and you can interpret them in any way that seems appropriate to you, according to changing conditions. This will prepare him for the Supreme Court's concept of the U.S. Constitution as a "living document."

> […]

> This brings me to the most important child-rearing technique of all: lying. Lie to your child constantly. Teach him that words mean nothing - or rather that the meanings of words are continually 'evolving', and may be tomorrow the opposite of what they are today.
> Some readers may object that this is a poor way to raise a child. A few may even call it child abuse. But that's the whole point: Child abuse is the best preparation for adult life under our form of GOVERNMENT."

If the above quote doesn't make the judicial conspiracy, I don't know what does! The below humorous anecdote carries this violation of due process to its extreme, and isn't too far from the truth!:

> NEW RULES FOR LAW
> SMUCKWAP NEWSSERVICE, Washington: The Supreme Court ruled today that judges can do whatever the hell they want. In a landmark case, Black-Robed Lawyers vs. Everyone Else, the justices handed down their inestimable judgment that since lawyers in general and judges in particular are such fine examples of humanity, not to mention smart enough to get through law school, judges can do whatever they please.
>
> "The Rule of Law has ended," proclaimed Supreme Court Justice Arrogant B. Astard, "and the Rule of Judges begins!"
> Turning their shiny black backs on the rest of America, the justices decided to toss out two hundred years of Constitutional law and indeed, to rid themselves completely of having to heed the Constitution.
> "The law is what we say it is," said Justice Whiney I. Diot. "It has been this way for some time now, but with Black-Robed Lawyers vs. Everyone Else, we are coming out of our judicial closet. No more arguments will be allowed from anyone, and we don't want to hear any more of your complaining about your rights. In fact, any mention of so-called rights will guarantee you 100 years, hard labor."
> Justice K. Rupt Assin concurred in his opinion that "judicial oligarchy has now fully come into its place in American history and will be fully enforced by an iron rule of law, and remember, law is whatever we say it is."
> The Center for People Who Want to Leave This Country Because It Is Beginning to Look Too Much Like Nazi Germany analyzed the justices' decision.
> "Judges now legally can put anyone in prison for any reason they want, for as long as they want," states the analysis. "Judges can also put jurors in prison for 'obstructing justice' and for anything else, including not handing the judge whatever money they may have on them at the time. Jurors who don't behave exactly as the judge desired have been persecuted in the past, but "now they can receive prison terms much longer than their own lifespan added to the lifespan(s) of the defendant(s) in any trial.
> The report also mentioned the justices' decision that anyone who says anything disagreeable in their courtroom can be immediately arrested and jailed, their property confiscated, and their spouses and children taken as "wards" of the court under the justices own personal pleasure ... or... supervision.
> The concept of separation of powers was addressed in the Center's report on the decision.
> "There is no separation of powers," it reads, "when not only all the justices are lawyers, so are all Congressmen and the President, his wife, his cabinet, the entire Department of Justice, most lobbyists and almost everyone else in Washington, D.C."
> *When questioned about what effect the decision would have on all Americans, the spokesman for the Center said, "I can't be certain. I suspect that emigration rather than immigration will become a major concern. Those Americans who are lawyers will be fine, for the most part. No one will ever again show up for jury duty. But if we thought we had an overcrowded prison problem before, we're in for a major shock!"*

Another way the federal judiciary has conspired with Congress to usurp such arbitrary and unconstitutional authority over time has been for Congress to write the laws in a deliberately vague way in order to leave a lot of undue discretion to the courts to interpret and misapply and broaden the applicability of these laws. Here are the two main ways this has deliberately been done in the case of the tax codes:

1. Title 26 of the U.S. Codes, which are written by Congress, don't clearly define "income." Does it mean "profit"? Does it mean "wage"? What about "sources" of income? If it means profit, then we must deduct from our wages the cost of sustaining our life, which includes food, clothing, housing, insurance, etc., since we must view ourselves as producers of labor for sale, which is not free but involves a cost to sustain and maintain the ability to provide that labor.

2. The purpose of the laws is to clearly define or to limit the authority of the government and to define precisely and unambiguously which actions are criminal. Congress has written the tax codes in such a way that they do not satisfy this requirement, but instead expand and enlarge the authority of the federal government to tax in a way that can't be completely defined or even understood by the common man. They have done this by deliberately monkeying with the definition of the word "includes" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(c). This word in normal usage is a term of limitation, but as we showed in section 3.12.1.8, Congress has used it as a term of enlargement, as if to say:

> "The Internal Revenue Code laws aren't a limiting factor and do not bound or define the authority of Congress to tax. Instead, these laws mean whatever the judge says they mean at the time, which can arbitrarily change over time without explanation or justification. Our powers to tax are unlimited and beyond your ability to comprehend or understand and beyond our obligation to explain to you. We don't care if this violates the Fifth, Sixth, and Tenth Amendments and your due process rights. Always remember that WE'RE the government and WE are in complete control and the ONLY ones who are sovereign or empowered or who know what the laws that we write really say! We don't work for you, YOU are OUR financial slaves and YOU will do exactly and only what you are told to do by our chief priests in the federal courts, who are the only ones qualified to interpret the law, who we appoint, and who can only hold office as long as they do exactly what we tell them to do by keeping tax dollars they extort from you under duress flowing into our Treasury.
> And by the way, your lawyer can't help you in challenging our sovereign authority to tax because we license him to practice law both in this state and in this court and if he in any way questions or threatens our authority to tax or our jurisdiction, we will simply pull his license and blacklist him with the IRS, and he will therefore cease to be able to earn a living and be subject to the same kind of financial terrorism, harassment, and intimidation that you are undergoing. You can't win this war, my friend, because our power is absolute and we will squash you like a bug if you don't 'voluntarily comply'! Nevertheless, you can do whatever you want because we live in a 'free' country and you are a free man, and we are here to benevolently protect that freedom. The minute you start complaining about losing that freedom, then we'll turn your 'rights' into government 'privileges' and charge you an additional tax to have these privileges upheld and respected in our courts."

You will note that a remedy is suggested for this kind of government arrogance, legal abuse, and terrorism in section 4.5, of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 when we talk about "What would it take for the IRS and the US Congress to 'come clean'" by saying that Congress needs to reform their definition of the word "includes", which even they don't use in a consistent fashion in the case of 26 U.S.C. §61, which says in part:

> (a) General definition - ... gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) the following items:
> [...]

Isn't that interesting? If 26 U.S.C. §7701 (c) indeed says the word "includes" is not a limiting term, then why do the shyster lawyers in Congress and the IRS need to use the phrase "including (but not limited to)"? I'll tell you why, because they don't want you to understand what the law really means or know what you are expected to do, but would rather see you terrorized into submission to whatever it is their arbitrary whims dictate. This legal terrorism and the fear it generates is foisted upon us with our own extorted tax dollars by lawyers in the Department of (In)Justice and the courts in the process of illegally enforcing (no Delegation of Authority orders to the DOJ to support litigation of voluntary income taxes) laws that are so vague that they violate the "void for vagueness" criteria we described in section 5.12.3, entitled "Why the 'Void for Vagueness Doctrine' Should be Invoked By The Courts to Render the Internal Revenue Code Unconstitutional in Total". This has to be one of the biggest frauds and scams in history and the tyranny won't end until We The People remedy this most basic violation of our right to due process guaranteed by the Fifth and Sixth Amendments. We must do this first at the ballot box, then the jury box, and finally with the cartridge box (guns) if need be to coerce the government to respect our Constitutional rights!

6.12.4.1 Definition of terms and legal framework

Recall from Chapters 3 and 5 that we spent a lot of time talking about "direct taxes" and "excise taxes" and the relationship between the two. Another synonym for an excise tax is "privilege tax". In particular, we compared and contrasted these two types of taxes in section 5.1.2, which we will not repeat here. Understanding the relationship between these two types of taxes is foundational to understanding why income taxes are unconstitutional as they are implemented by the IRS, and why they are upheld by the federal district/circuit courts in some cases. We also talked about the five types of constitutional taxes in section 5.1

Much of the deliberately-induced confusion created in the courts results from the rather basic misunderstanding in most people's minds over the term "United States". We talked this issue in sections 4.7 entitled "The Three 'United States'" and section 3.12.1.23 entitled "'United States' (in 26 U.S.C. §7701)'". You have to remember that the judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax can only be upheld and spread if the courts avoid discussing the true definition of this term within the meaning of 26 Title U.S.C. and the nature of the limited application of the income tax to federal/U.S. (federal zone) citizens). Within the I.R.C, the term "United States" actually means the "federal zone", which includes the District of Columbia and the federal territories and possessions within the contiguous 50 union states, but not the 50 sovereign states themselves. The courts, however, don't want your average sovereign natural born Citizen of the 50 union states knowing that the federal income tax only applies within the federal zone to people who claim to be U.S. citizens, so they have done things in their rulings such as:

1. Not mention or confuse the U.S. citizenship or residency status of the defendant. The most famous case of this was the case of Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1 (1916), in which Frank Brushaber claimed to be a Sovereign naturalized citizen of the New York Republic (state) and NOT a U.S./federal citizen. The government tried to confuse his status as a nonresident alien for tax purposes by claiming that he was a French immigrant who never obtained state citizenship.
2. Avoid discussing jurisdictional issues. For instance, ignoring claims by a Citizen that the U.S. government lacks jurisdiction to prosecute a Citizen for not paying income taxes.
3. Make cases won by the Citizen rather than the IRS unpublished so other Citizens don't find out the most effective tactics to litigate the income tax issues.

In this section, we will trace several U.S. supreme and appellate court cases to show that primarily the federal appellate and district the courts have established a new and changing definition for these terms that conflicts both with the original definition of the terms used by the founding fathers, the rulings of the Supreme Court, and with the modern-day definition that the "common man" understands of these terms. We will show how they have done this on their own accord and without any authority derived from the Constitution, congress, the rulings of the supreme Court, or the law itself. We will show that the definitions of the terms "direct" and "excise" taxes over time has been slowly modified by the courts in such a way that revenues from income taxes for the federal government have not only been increased, but MAXIMIZED. We will show that this approach violates the important concept of "stare decisis" that is foundational to our republic and our whole legal system. We will show that this behavior by the courts is consistent with their alleged role as part of the "federal mafia", whose mission is to expand the plunder and extortion of the property of private citizens in disregard of the U.S. Constitution. Simply by changing the definitions and interpretation of these two terms in their judgments, the federal courts have, in effect, "legislated" by setting new precedents, to uphold and expand the federal income tax system.

So let's start with a definition of the terms "stare decisis" and "precedent":

> STARE DECISIS: Lat: to abide by, or adhere to, decided cases. Policy of courts to stand by precedent and not to disturb settled point. Neff v. George, 364 Ill. 306, 4 N.E.2d. 388, 390, 391. Doctrine that, when court has once laid down a principle of law as applicable to a certain state of facts, it will adhere to that principle, and apply it to all future cases, where facts are substantially the same; regardless of whether the parties and property are the same. Horne v. Moody, Tex.Civ.App., 146 S.W.2d. 505, 509, 510. Under doctrine a deliberate or solemn decision of court made after argument on question of law fairly arising in the case, and necessary to its determination, is an authority, or binding precedent in the same court, or in other courts of equal or lower rank in subsequent cases where the very point is again in controversy. State v. Mellenberger, 163 Or. 233, 95 P.2d. 709, 719, 720. Doctrine is one of policy, grounded on theory that security and certainty require that accepted and established legal principle, under which rights may accrue, be recognized and followed, though later found to be not legally sound, but whether previous holding of court shall be adhered to, modified, or overruled is within court's discretion under circumstances of case before it. Otter Tail Power Co. v. Von Bank, 72 N.D. 497, 8 N.W.2d. 599, 607. Under doctrine, when point of law has been settled by decision, it forms precedent which is not afterwards to be departed from, and, while it should ordinarily be strictly adhered to, there are occasions when departure is rendered necessary to vindicate plain, obvious principles of law and remedy continued injustice. The doctrine is not ordinarily departed from where decision is of long-standing and rights have been acquired under it, unless considerations of public policy demand it. Colonial Trust Co. v. Flanagan, 344 Pa. 556, 25 A.2d. 728, 729. The doctrine is limited to actual determinations in respect to litigated and necessarily decided questions, and is not applicable to dicta or obiter dicta. See also Precedent,; Res (Res judicata)
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1406]

> PRECEDENT: An adjudged case or decision of a court, considered as furnishing an example or authority for an identical or similar case afterwards arising or a similar question of law. Courts attempt to decide cases on the basis of principles established in prior cases. Prior cases which are close in facts or legal principles to the > case under consideration are called precedents. A rule of law established for the first time by a court for a particular type of case and thereafter referred to in deciding similar cases. See also Stare decisis.

> A course of conduct once followed which may serve as a guide for future conduct. See Custom and usage; Habit.
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1176]

From these definitions, we can see that stare decisis and precedent are very important aspects of law that constrain what the federal courts can do. Together, they establish that cases must follow precedents unless there is a compelling reason not to, and that the reasons for overruling past precedents ought to be clearly explained so that the lower courts will understand how to apply the new paradigm.

Now let's move to the words themselves. We'll start off by examining the definition of "excise tax" found in Merriam Webster's Dictionary of Law[397]:

> ['ek-'siz, -'sis]
> *1: a tax levied on the manufacture, sale, or consumption of a commodity
> (compare income tax, property tax)
> 2: any of various taxes on privileges often assessed in the form of a license or other fee
> (see also Article I of the Constitution)
> (compare direct tax)
> [emphasis added]

Similarly, Barron's Law dictionary defines "excise" as follows:

> "Broadly, "any kind of tax which is not directly on property or the rents or incomes from real estate." 4A. 2d 861, 862. "An inland impost upon articles of manufacture or sale and also upon licenses to pursue certain trades, or to deal in certain commodities." 184 U.S. 608, 617. It is imposed directly and without assessment and is measured by amount of business done and other means. 161 So. 735, 738. See tax [EXCISE TAX] [398]
> "a federal tax imposed upon the purchase of certain items. See excise."

Excise taxes are commonly referred to as "indirect" taxes within the meaning of the U.S. Constitution (see section 5.1 for further details). From the preceding discussion, it ought to be clear that excise taxes apply to businesses involved in trade and the amount of tax is to be determined by any measure related to activity that the legislature determines. For instance, the (fraudulently ratified) 16th Amendment allows excise taxes to be measured by income, but does NOT allow for direct taxes without apportionment as ruled in the case of Stanton v. Baltic Mining (240 U.S. 103), 1916. In particular, the court said in that case that the 16th Amendment merely:

> "...prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..."

A good definition of "excise taxes" is found in the Supreme Court case of Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911):

> "Excises are taxes laid upon the manufacture, sale or consumption of commodities within the country, upon licenses to pursue certain occupations and upon corporate privileges; the requirement to pay such taxes involves the exercise of the privilege and if business is not done in the manner described no tax is payable...it is the privilege which is the subject of the tax and not the mere buying, selling or handling of goods."
> [Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)]

The Supreme Court case of Bromley v. McCaughn, 280 U.S. 124 (1929) provides another good definition of the operation of "excise taxes":

> "While taxes levied upon or collected from persons because of their general ownership of property may be taken to be direct, Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 15 S.Ct. 673; Id., 158 U.S. 601, 15 S.Ct. 912, this court has consistently held, almost from the foundation of the government, that a tax imposed upon a particular use of property or the exercise of a single power over property incidental to ownership, is an excise

> It is a tax laid only upon the exercise of a single one of those powers incident to ownership, the power to give the property owned to another. Under this statute all the other rights and powers which collectively constitute [280 U.S. 124, 137] property or ownership may be fully enjoyed free of the tax. So far as the constitutional power to tax is concerned, it would be difficult to state any intelligible distinction, founded either in reason or upon practical considerations of weight, between a tax upon the exercise of the power to give property inter vivos and the disposition of it by legacy, upheld in Knowlton v. Moore, supra, the succession tax in Scholey v. Rew, supra, the tax upon the manufacture and sale of colored oleomargarine in McCray v. United States, supra, the tax upon sales of grain upon an exchange in Nicol v. Ames, supra, the tax upon sales of shares of stock in Thomas v. United States, supra, the tax upon the use of foreign built yachts in Billings v. United States, supra, the tax upon the use of carriages in Hylton v. United States, supra; compare Veazie Bank v. Fenno, supra, 545 of 8 Wall.; Thomas v. United States, supra, 370 of 192 U. S ., 24 S.Ct. 305.
> It is true that in each of these cases the tax was imposed upon the exercise of one of the numerous rights of property, but each is clearly distinguishable from a tax which falls upon the owner merely because he is owner, regardless of the use of disposition made of his property. See Billings v. United States, supra; cf. Pierce v. United States, 232 U.S. 290, 34 S.Ct. 427. The persistence of this distinction and the justification for it rest upon the historic fact that taxes of this type were not understood to be direct taxes when the Constitution was adopted and, as well, upon the reluctance of this court to enlarge by construction, limitations upon the sovereign power of taxation by article 1, 8, so vital to the maintenance of the national government. Nicol v. Ames, supra, 514, 515 of 173 U. S., 19, S.Ct. 522."

Merriam Webster's Dictionary of Law defines "direct tax" as follows[399]:

> "a tax imposed on a taxpayer himself or herself or on his or her property (compare excise)"

The Supreme Court did a good job describing "direct taxes" in the case of Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 75 U.S. 533 (1869):

> "This review shows that personal property, contracts, occupations, and the like, have never been regarded by Congress as proper subjects of direct tax.
> ...
> It may be rightly affirmed, therefore, that in the practical construction of the Constitution by Congress, direct taxes have been limited to taxes on land and appurtenances, and taxes on polls, or capitation taxes."

We believe that these are good definitions that are consistent with the wishes of the founding fathers.

6.12.4.2 The Early Supreme Court View of Direct vs. Indirect/Excise Taxes Prior to Passage of the 16th Amendment 1913

With the legal definitions complete, let's examine the historical background for the subject of direct and indirect/excise taxes by the Supreme Court prior to the (fraudulent) passage of the 16th Amendment. We'll start off with the case of Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 74 U.S. 433 (1868), which is a very good reference on the definition of "direct taxes" and "indirect taxes":

> The ordinary test of the difference between direct and indirect taxes, is whether the tax falls ultimately on the tax-payer, or whether, through the tax-payer, it falls ultimately on the consumer. If it falls ultimately on the tax-payer, then it is direct in its nature, as in the case of poll taxes and land taxes. If, on the contrary, it falls ultimately on the consumer, then it is an indirect tax.
> Such is the test, as laid down by all writers on the subject. Adam Smith, who was the great and universally received authority on political economy, in the day when the Federal Constitution was framed, sets forth a tax on a person's revenue to be a direct tax. 5 Mill,6 Say,7 J. R. McCulloch,8 Lieber,9 among political economists, do the same in > specific [74 U.S. 433, 438] language. Mr. Justice Bouvier, in his learned Law Dictionary, defines a capitation tax, 'A poll tax; an imposition which is yearly laid on each person according to his estate and ability.'

[399] Merriam-Webster's Dictionary of Law ©1996.

>
> Indeed, it is obvious that an income tax, levied on the profits of any business, does not fall ultimately on the consumer or patron of that business, in any other sense than that in which a poll tax or land tax may be said ultimately to fall, or be charged over by the payer of those taxes upon the persons with whom and for whom they do business, or to whom they rent their lands. The refinement which would argue otherwise, abolishes the whole distinction, and under it all taxes may be regarded as direct or indirect, at pleasure.
>
> But, if the distinction is recognized (and it must be, for the Constitution makes it), then it follows, that an income tax is, and always heretofore has been, regarded as being a direct tax, as much so as a poll tax or as a land tax. If it be a direct tax, then the Constitution is imperative that it shall be apportioned.
> If it be argued that an income tax cannot be apportioned, then, it cannot be levied; for only such direct taxes can be levied as can be apportioned.
> But an income tax can be apportioned as easily as any other direct tax; first, by determining the amount to be raised from incomes throughout the United States, and then by ascertaining the proportion to be paid by the people of each State. An income tax, in the matter of its apportionment, is not embarrassed by any other difficulties than those which grow out of apportionment, in the admitted cases of poll taxes and land taxes."*

According to the Supreme Court, there can be only these type types of taxes: direct or indirect/excises:

> "And although there may have been from time to time intimations that there might be some tax which was not a direct tax nor included under the words "duties, imposts and excises," such a tax has yet remained undiscovered, not withstanding the stress of particular circumstances has invited thorough investigation into sources of revenue."
> [Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895), 557, Thomas v. United States (1903) 192 u.s. 363, 370]

6.12.4.3 Common Manifestations of the Judicial Conspiracy

This section summarizes the common elements of the judicial conspiracy to uphold the federal income tax. Below are a list of some of the more common tactics used by the courts following the passage of the 16th Amendment to prejudice any litigation that would undermine the income tax. These are things that you should be watching vigilantly for and loudly blowing the whistle when you see them:

1. Political moves:
   - 1.1. Congress making federal judgeships into political appointees instead of elected offices. This causes the judges to be more partial toward their political benefactors than they are in favor of citizens or the law.
   - 1.2. Congress or presidents appointing judges who will participate actively in the judicial conspiracy to uphold the federal income tax.
   - 1.3. Congress or presidents appointing judges who aren't confrontational (YES men) and who are unlikely to make any rulings that would have big political implications, like overthrowing illegal and fraudulent income taxes.
2. Counsel:
   - 2.1. Refusing to allow the counsel of the Citizen to represent him in the court because of his views about taxes, but at the same time, pretending like it is due to his lack of a license to practice law in a particular federal court or jurisdiction.
   - 2.2. Only granting pro-tem (temporary) judgeships (during the absence of the normal judge, during vacation, for instance) to lawyers who are in favor of the income tax, so that they have more authority and leverage against lawyers who are against in any case.
3. Jury selection:
   - 3.1. Including a "mole" or planted individual (perhaps a lawyer who is a tax advocate) on the jury who is outspoken and biased against the Citizen and biased in favor of income taxes. This most often happens when the government or judge "slips" new candidates of the government's choosing into the courtroom at the last minute during jury selection or voir dire. This is what happened to Dr. Phil Roberts failure to file case, for instance, and it biased his case and led to a unfair criminal prosecution. Visit our website if you like, to learn about this despicable miscarriage of justice that happened in his case.
   - 3.2. When it comes time to draw names out of a box to select jurists, the box will be populated (rigged) outside the courtroom by the government and the judge will not allow either the defense or prosecution to examine the contents of the box prior to drawing names. For all they know, the unbiased or better-informed jurists or the ones who have been convicted of tax crimes, are removed from the box. Dr. Phil Robert's attorney, Oscar Stilley, thinks this is what happened in Dr. Phil Robert's case.

3.3. Not allowing the counsel (threatening with contempt) of the Citizen who is contesting the taxes to interview or question the prospective jurors or the government's lawyers. Cross-examination allows biases to be uncovered. This is what happed in Dr. Phil Robert's case.

3.4. Asking the prospective jurists to reveal their social security number prior to jury selection and investigating their tax payment history. Then, only choosing jurists who have a history of paying taxes and who would be more likely to get indignant about people who either don't file or don't pay income taxes, even if they aren't obligated to. Having the jurists social security numbers also affords the IRS an opportunity to harass and audit them if they don't rule in the government's favor.

4. During Trial:

4.1. Hiding the nature of the citizenship and residency of the accused. Remember that according to Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), citizens of the District of Columbia or the Federal Zone have no constitutional rights. The court won't make it clear what the citizenship and residency of the accused is so that they can make it appear that all citizens are liable to pay income taxes on all income. Go back to section 4.11 for a clarification of citizenship issues

4.2. Fining or punishing litigants who raise issues about which the court doesn't want to address, such as:

4.2.1. Fraudulent ratification of the 16th Amendment ($5,000 fine currently in some federal courts for filing claims regarding this issue).

4.2.2. Fifth Amendment issues related to taxes (putting litigants in jail for failure to file).

4.2.3. Government conspiracy claims related to taxation filed by citizens.

4.2.4. Claiming a case deals with frivolous issues when in fact it doesn't and then forcing the litigant to pay the attorney fees of the government to defend against this.

4.2.5. Assessing the fines or fees without a due process hearing, which violates the Fifth and 14th Amendments.

4.3. Judges granting the IRS' frequent motion in most tax cases to dismiss a valid filing by a tax protester. This has the effect of censoring the litigant and violating his First Amendment rights.

4.4. Not allowing (threatening with contempt) the Citizen or his counsel to discuss or reveal the law regarding income taxes. Instead, trying to convince them that they must follow the judge's orders and interpretation of the law, rather than revealing the actual law and letting the jurists decide both the facts and the law for themselves. This gives the judge far more power than he should have.

4.5. Holding pro per litigants to the same standards as attorneys, which is illegal.

4.6. Delaying the judgment for controversial issues. For instance, in the case of William T. Conklin vs. IRS, case no. 89 N 1514 in the Tenth Circuit, a famous tax protester sued the government because he thought his fifth amendment rights were being violated by being compelled to file and sign a tax return under penalty of perjury and thereby be a witness against himself. The judge (Judge Nottingham) took SEVEN YEARS to reach a decision, because he had such a difficult time reconciling the constitutional issues involved! He was probably hoping he could put it off so he would retire first! The judge deviously chose to censor this judgment by making it unpublished so the truth wouldn't leak out. Nevertheless, the judge also sanctioned Mr. Conklin $6,000 by making him pay the IRS' legal fees, and without the ability to even litigate or challenge the fees. This he may have done to discourage him from litigating further.

5. After trial:

5.1. Making cases dealing with controversial aspects of federal income taxes "unpublished". This means that after there is a judgment on a controversial tax case that exposes fraud or wrongdoing of the government, the federal judge ensures that the findings aren't available in most federal case databases or indexes and copies can only be obtained by writing directly to the clerk of the specific court where the case was heard, and the reproduction is costly and long delays in obtaining the documents are commonplace. This amounts to censorship, in violation of the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which says that we have a right to speak freely and to petition the government for redress of grievances. This would also imply that we have a right not to have our court case regarding income taxes be censored or discriminated against from publication based on our views or the tax issues we are litigating. For instance, a notable tax freedom fighter, William Conklin, filed at least six different federal cases against the IRS and won several of them. The focus of his cases was related to the unconstitutionality of being compelled in the process of filing income tax returns to be a witness against oneself in violation of the 5th amendment. In the majority of his cases, the judges refused to publish his cases. For instance, the case of Conklin vs. United States of America, No. 94-1213 in the Tenth circuit, was unpublished. This kind of censorship is unconscionable!

6.12.4.4 Judicial Conspiracy Following Passage of 16th Amendment in 1913

With the definitions and historical legal background prior to the passage of the 16th Amendment (in 1913) fresh in our minds, we'll now try to start answering some questions:

1. How did taxes on businesses as excise/indirect taxes which fall on the consumer evolve into direct taxes on the labor of individuals (which are property) after the passage of the 16th Amendment?
2. How does the court justify a deviation from precedents already established by the U.S. Supreme Court in a way that is consistent with the U.S. Constitution?
3. How did the courts distort the interpretation of the law to expand the reach of the income tax to become direct taxes on citizens living outside of the federal zone (how did they "get away with it?")?

To answer these questions, we have to look at later cases and see how the courts redefined "excise taxes" or "indirect taxes", since the following case firmly established that taxes on income allowed under the 16th Amendment are limited to indirect or excise taxes:

> "..[The 16th Amendment] .prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..." [in describing Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1 (1916), 17-19]
> [Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103]

Most of error and distortion in the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code, and the judicial conspiracy to protect and expand the income tax, it turns out, comes not from the U.S. Supreme Court, but from the federal appellate/circuit courts immediately below the Supreme Court. Indirectly, the Supreme Court has contributed to the misdirected verdicts of the circuit courts by refusing to hear (not granting a "writ of certiorari") to cases which relate to direct income taxes on individuals. Most of that distortion, we argue, came after the passage of the 16th Amendment, and results from a misapplication and misunderstanding of the Internal Revenue Code by the circuit courts. It also results indirectly from voters adopting the socialist policies instituted by President Franklin D. Roosevelt during his long term in office.

We'll start the exposition by examining the case of Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920):

> "After further consideration, we adhere to that view and accordingly hold that the Sixteenth Amendment does not authorize or support the tax in question. " [A direct tax on salary income of a federal judge]

This case quite clearly shows that a direct tax on the income of a federal judge is unconstitutional. The case was then subsequently overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court in O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939). However, the Supreme Court in that case declined to address whether the tax on income of federal judges was a "direct" or an "indirect" tax or the nature of its constitutionality relative to the 16th Amendment, and therefore they skirted entirely the issue of whether taxes on income of citizens could or should be included in "gross income". Instead, by fiat, the justices simply said without any real legal analysis of facts, that the tax was constitutional because everyone regarded it as "unpopular". This, of course was a cop-out and there was a long dissenting opinion that advocated a more rational view that is more consistent with this document. Here's an excerpt from the findings of the court in that O'Malley case:

> "However, the meaning which Evans v. Gore, supra, imputed to the history which explains Article III, 1 was contrary to the way in which it was read by other English-speaking courts.[400] The decision met wide and steadily growing disfavor from legal scholarship and professional opinion. Evans v. Gore, supra, itself was rejected by most of the courts before whom the matter came after that decision[401]"

This decision, it is to be noted, occurred during a period of depression and recovery from depression, in which Franklin Roosevelt was pushing his socialist "Social Security" agenda. President Roosevelt held office for three terms, or 12 years. During that time, FDR wanted to ramrod his socialist agenda (Social Security, the Federal Reserve, Income Taxes, outlawing of ownership of gold coin, forced use of paper money) through Congress and the courts and get it firmly entrenched in our system of government before he left office. Therefore, FDR had to "stack" the Supreme Court by doubling its size from six to twelve justices. We talked about this in section 6.1 and even quoted FDR's own words about the "supreme court packing plan" in our analysis. This was unprecedented in American history and he was able to do it successfully because the Constitution didn't specify the size of the Supreme Court! The court that made the ruling above was therefore a "rigged" court. This ruling was the beginning of a long string of unfavorable rulings at the federal appellate level that would eventually mean the spread of the unconstitutional fraud we know today as the income tax. We'll now examine some of these circuit court cases. If you examine Supreme Court cases following Evens vs. Gore and search for the word "direct tax" and "excise tax", you will find nothing that relates to income taxes on citizens domiciled in the 50 union states. Consequently, when the IRS wants to defend the validity of the income tax, it usually cites Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad as its precedent.

It is very important to note a fact that in the Brushaber decision, the person subject to tax was a nonresident alien principal, who was receiving income from a railroad through a trustee, rather than directly. Treasury decision 2313, which was published just after this decision was rendered, reveals this:

> "..it is hereby held that income accruing to nonresident aliens in the form of interest...and dividends ..is subject to the income tax imposed by the act of October 3, 1913. The responsible heads, agents, or representatives of nonresident aliens...shall make a full and complete return of the income therefrom on...Form 1040..."

So there you have it. The Treasury Department stated that you are to file Form 1040 on behalf of your "nonresident alien principal". So don't forget to do that next April 15th! This is a fact the IRS doesn't like to discuss, for obvious reasons!

6.12.4.5 The Federal District/Circuit Court Conspiracy to Protect the Income Tax

Recall that the Supreme Court declared in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916) that the only constitutional income taxes were excise taxes. The federal circuit/appellate courts, following the passage of the 16th Amendment in 1913, and the Supreme Court decisions that followed, suddenly got very creative in their definitions of "excise tax" in order to fit a square peg into a round hole made by the 16th Amendment. This was encouraged by the fact that the Supreme Court refused to hear cases involving direct taxes on income (looked the other way). Such cases are referred to as "cert denied". However, it is an important principal of law that the fact that a cert was denied is NOT necessarily an affirmation of a particular federal circuit court ruling by the Supreme Court. This lack of attentiveness by the Supreme Court in not correcting errors by the circuit courts gave the circuit and district courts carte blanche authority to do anything they wanted and to ignore the constitution entirely relative to income taxes. The result was a broadened application of income taxes to what should have been excepted subjects, like Americans living outside the federal United States but inside the United States of America. We'll examine some of these cases to show you how the courts "legislated" the income tax by redefining the word "excise", and in some cases also boldly claiming, quite wrongfully, that the 16th Amendment authorized "direct income taxes without apportionment" (see the case of U.S. v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, 1990, mentioned in section 6.4.5). In all cases, we emphasize that the devious tactics mentioned in section 6.12.4.3 "Common Manifestations of the Judicial Conspiracy" apply.

The first case we want to look at is Simmons v. United States, 308 F.2d. 160, 8/28/1962:

> A direct tax is a tax on real or personal property, imposed solely by reason of its being owned by the taxpayer. A tax on the income from such property, such as a tax on rents or the interest on bonds, is also considered a direct tax, being basically a tax upon the ownership of property.[402] Yet, from the early days of the Republic, a tax upon the exercise of only some of the rights adhering to ownership, such as upon the use of property[403] or upon its transfer,[404] has been considered an indirect tax, not subject to the requirement of apportionment. The present tax falls into this latter category, being a tax upon the receipt of money and not upon its ownership.
> This tax is similar to others held to be indirect. In the case which on its facts most nearly resembles the present one, Scholey v. Rew, 90 U.S. (23 Wall.) 331, 346-348, 23 L.Ed. 99 (1875), the Supreme Court upheld a federal death tax, placed upon persons receiving real property from a deceased under a will or by intestate succession, against the claim that the tax was an unapportioned direct tax on property. In that case, as in the present, the tax was borne directly by the recipient, but was held to be merely upon the transfer of property. The Scholey case was by name reaffirmed in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41, 78-83, 20 S.Ct. 742, 44 L.Ed. 969 (1900), and by implication in New York Trust Co. v. Eisner, 256 U.S. 345, 349, 41 S.Ct. 506, 75 L.Ed. 963 (1921), both cases upholding federal estate taxes imposed, not upon the beneficiary but upon the decedent's estate. A tax upon the donor of an inter vivos gift was held to be an indirect tax in Bromley v. McCaughn, 280 U.S. 124, 135-138, 50 S.Ct. 46, 74 L.Ed. 226 (1929). If a tax on giving property is indirect, so would be a tax on receiving it, regardless of its source. That no distinction may be drawn between giving and receiving was pointed out in Fernandez v. Wiener, 326 U.S. 340, 352-355, 361-362, 66 S.Ct. 178, 90 L.Ed. 116 (1945), where the Supreme Court upheld as an indirect tax the federal estate tax on community property at the death of one spouse: "If the gift of property may be taxed, we cannot say that there is any want of constitutional power to tax the receipt of it, whether as a > *result of inheritance [citation omitted] or otherwise, whatever name may be given to the tax * * . Receipt in possession and enjoyment is as much a taxable occasion within the reach of the federal taxing power as the enjoyment of any other incident of property."[405]

> While the distinctions drawn in these cases may seem artificial, the necessity for making them stems from the structure of the Constitution itself, which distinguishes between direct and indirect taxes. The Supreme Court has restricted the definition of direct taxes to the above-enumerated well-defined categories, and we have no warrant to expand them to others.
> Even if we were to assume that the tax upon Simmons is direct, it comes within the Sixteenth Amendment, which relieved direct taxes upon income from the apportionment requirement. We need look no further than the two most recent Supreme Court cases in this area. In Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Glenshaw Glass Co., 348 U.S. 426, 75 S.Ct. 473, 99 L.Ed. 483 (1955), the Court upheld the inclusion in gross income of money received by the taxpayers as punitive damages, stating that "[here] we have instances of undeniable accessions to wealth, clearly realized, and over which the taxpayers have complete dominion." 348 U.S. at 431, 75 S.Ct. at 477. This test was specifically reaffirmed in James v. United States, 366 U.S. 213, 81 S.Ct. 1052, 6 L.Ed.2d. 246 (1961), where the Court considered the taxability of embezzled money. The plunder was held to be income solely because it came into the taxpayer's possession and control and despite the fact that he had no right to it and indeed was under a legal obligation to return it to its rightful owner. This obligation to repay was deemed irrelevant, for a gain "constitutes taxable income when its recipient has such control over it that, as a practical matter, he derives readily realizable economic value from it."[406] As is apparent from the quoted statements, and as illustrated by the diverse factual situations in these cases, it is the status in the recipient's hands of the money being taxed which is the crucial factor, while the source of the money is not relevant.

The above case of Simmons v. United States taxed receipt of income (which in this case was a gift) by a citizen not related to the conduct of a business or trade, as an occasion for an excise/indirect tax. But we know that this violates the definition of an excise tax in Flint v. Stone Tracy (220 U.S. 107) and the other definitions of excise tax stated earlier. Interestingly, they didn't label the tax on the gift as an excise tax, but that is the only way it can be classified, based on our discussion in section 5.1, where we talked about the legal types of federal taxes. Why didn't the court label the tax an excise? Because then they would have to talk about Flint v. Stone Tracy and relate the event being taxed to a business transaction involving sale and manufacture of commodities. Since this case didn't involve the sale or manufacture of commodities, then the court couldn't uphold the tax! The case also ignores the following other issues and considerations, which are very relevant to the issue of taxation:

1. Whether the income received was a result of interstate commerce or foreign commerce, as per Article I, Sections 8, Clauses 1 and 3 of the Constitution, which constrain Congress' power to taxing foreign and interstate commerce. These are the only taxable "sources" allowed by the Constitution. It would appear that the income in question in this case here didn't cross state boundaries, and yet the issue was never addressed, because if it was, the government's ability to impose the tax would be eliminated.
2. Whether the tax was on a Citizen of the 50 union states from income earned within the state. If it was, then 26 U.S.C. §862 and the source become relevant to whether the income received was taxable. If the court had addressed this issue, then once again the court would not have been able to uphold the tax.
3. What "privilege" was being taxed that related to the indirect or excise tax upheld by the court. (see Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)). According to Flint, "...it is the privilege which is the subject of the tax and not the mere buying, selling or handling of goods". Once again, if this issue was considered, the court would not have been able to uphold the tax.
4. Whether income beneficially received by Simmons was related to "the manufacture, sale, or consumption of commodities within the country" as per Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)). This issue is clearly very relevant to the imposition of an alleged excise tax, and yet is was ignored by the court. If the court had addressed this issue, it also would not be able to sustain the indirect/excise tax being imposed.

Next, we look at the case of United States v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, (10th Cir. 11/27/1990):

> Dickstein's motion to dismiss advanced the hackneyed tax protester refrain that federal criminal jurisdiction only extends to the District of Columbia, United States territorial possessions and ceded territories. Dickstein's [405] 326 U.S. at 353, 66 S.Ct. at 185. Analogous too are cases holding that a tax on the gross receipts of a business is an indirect tax, but, being a tax on business, this is more like the traditional excise tax, expressly treated by the Constitution as not direct. Spreckels Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397, 410-413, 24 S.Ct. 376, 48 L.Ed. 496 (1904); Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103, 114, 36 S.Ct. 278, 60 L.Ed. 546 (1916) (alternate holding); Penn Mut. Indem. Co. v. Commissioner, 277 F.2d. 16, 18-20 (3d Cir. 1960), affirming 32 T.C. 653 (1959).

[406] Rutkin v. United States, 343 U.S. 130, 137, 72 S.Ct. 571, 96 L.Ed. 833 (1952), quoted in James v. United States, 366 U.S. 213, 219, 81 S.Ct. 1052, 6 L.Ed.2d. 246 (1961).

> memorandum blithely ignored 18 U.S.C. § 3231 which explicitly vests federal district courts with jurisdiction over "all offenses against the laws of the United States." Dickstein also conveniently ignored article I, section 8 of the United States Constitution which empowers Congress to create, define and punish crimes, irrespective of where they are committed. See United States v. Worrall, 2 U.S. (2 Dall.) 384, 393, 1 L.Ed. 426, 28 F.Cas. 774 (1798) (Chase, J.). Article I, section 8 and the sixteenth amendment also empower Congress to create and provide for the administration of an income tax; the statute under which defendant was charged and convicted, 28 U.S.C. § 7201, plainly falls within that authority. Efforts to argue that federal jurisdiction does not encompass prosecutions for federal tax evasion have been rejected as either "silly" or "frivolous" by a myriad of courts throughout the nation. See, e.g., United States v. Dawes, 874 F.2d. 746, 750 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 920, 107 L.Ed.2d. 264, 110 S.Ct. 284 (1989), overruled on other grounds, 895 F.2d. 1581 (10th Cir. 1990); United States v. Tedder, 787 F.2d. 540, 542 (10th Cir. 1986); United States v. Amon, 669 F.2d. 1351, 1355 (10th Cir. 1981); United States v. Brown, 600 F.2d. 248, 259 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 917, 100 S.Ct. 233, 62 L.Ed.2d. 172 (1979); Cheek, 882 F.2d. at 1270; United States v. Ward, 833 F.2d. 1538, 1539 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 1022, 108 S.Ct. 1576, 99 L.Ed.2d. 891 (1988); United States v. Koliboski, 732 F.2d. 1328, 1329-30 (7th Cir. 1984); United States v. Evans, 717 F.2d. 1334, 1334 (11th Cir. 1983); United States v. Drefke, 707 F.2d. 978, 981 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 942, 78 L.Ed.2d. 321, 104 S.Ct. 359 (1983); United States v. Spurgeon, 671 F.2d. 1198, 1199 (8th Cir. 1982); O'Brien v. United States, 51 F.2d. 193, 196, 10 A.F.T.R. (P-H) 223 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 284 U.S. 673, 52 S.Ct. 129, 76 L.Ed. 569 (1931). In the face of this uniform authority, it defies credulity to argue that the district court lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the government's case against defendant.
> Dickstein's argument that the sixteenth amendment does not authorize a direct, non-apportioned tax on United States citizens similarly is devoid of any arguable basis in law. Indeed, the Ninth Circuit recently noted "the patent absurdity and frivolity of such a proposition." In re Becraft*, 885 F.2d. 547, 548 (9th Cir. 1989).* For seventy-five years, the Supreme Court has recognized that the sixteenth amendment authorizes a direct non-apportioned tax upon United States citizens throughout the nation, not just in federal enclaves*, see Brushaber v. Union Pac. R.R., 240 U.S. 1, 12-19, 60 L.Ed. 493, 36 S.Ct. 236 (1916); efforts to argue otherwise have been sanctioned as frivolous, see, e.g., Becraft, 885 F.2d. at 549 (Fed. R. App. P. 38 sanctions for raising frivolous sixteenth amendment argument in petition for rehearing); Lovell v. United States, 755 F.2d. 517, 519-20 (7th Cir. 1984) (Fed. R. App. P. 38 sanctions imposed on pro se litigants raising frivolous sixteenth amendment contentions). Dickstein's contention that defendant was not an "individual" under the Internal Revenue Code also is frivolous. See Dawes, 874 F.2d. at 750-51; United States v. Studley, 783 F.2d. 934, 937 (9th Cir. 1986); United States v. Rice, 659 F.2d. 524, 528 (5th Cir. Unit A 1981). His disregard of governing legal precedent is further portrayed by his reference to the "alleged ratification" of the sixteenth amendment in the face of uniform contrary authority. See, e.g., Miller v. United States, 868 F.2d. 236, 241 (7th Cir. 1989); United States v. Sitka, 845 F.2d. 43, 46-47 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 827, 102 L.Ed.2d. 54, 109 S.Ct. 77 (1988); United States v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438, 1440-41 (9th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1036, 93 L.Ed.2d. 840, 107 S.Ct. 888 (1987); Sisk v. Commissioner, 791 F.2d. 58, 60-61 (6th Cir. 1986); see generally United States v. Stillhammer, 706 F.2d. 1072, 1077-78 (10th Cir. 1983). Argument reflecting such contemptuous disregard for established legal authority has no place within this circuit.*
> [United States v. Collins*, 920 F.2d. 619, (10th Cir. 11/27/1990)]*

This case is quoted by the IRS as a reference in our Tax Protester Rebuttal on our website at http://famguardian.org/. This ruling has the following MAJOR and BLATANT defects:

1. It ignores the ruling of Stanton v. Baltic Mining, in referring to the Brushaber v. Union Pacific R.R., case, that income taxes are only constitutional as excise taxes, and not direct taxes:

> "that the provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment conferred no new power of taxation but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged and being placed in the category of direct taxation*"*

   Instead, the U.S. v. Collins ruling says that:

> "…the Supreme Court has recognized that the sixteenth amendment authorizes a direct non-apportioned tax upon United States citizens throughout the nation, not just in federal enclaves" and yet only cites ONE Supreme Court case, Brushaber, which clearly doesn't sustain their position. This is a very bad precedent and bad law indeed! Brushaber claims that income taxes are constitutional as "excise taxes" only, not "direct taxes". Where did the court get such nonsense? I contend that in this case they were just mad at the attorney, Dickstein, and were behaving irrationally. That was why they sanctioned him and dismissed him from the court.

2. Completely ignores the fact that in the Brushaber case, the appellant was acting as an agent for a nonresident alien, and NOT a citizen! But in the case of U.S. v. Collins, the appellant was a citizen, not a nonresident alien. This is a completely different situation.

3. In addition, it ignores all the issues, errors, and omissions we raised in the above case of Simmons v. United States, 308 F.2d. 160, 8/28/1962.

The last case we want to look at is U.S. v. Melton, 86 F.3d. 1153, ruling on May 22, 1996. This case dealt with brothers who owned a painting business and who evaded payment of income taxes by various highly creative means, including use of cash and avoiding banks, using gold coins, and setting up foreign corporations. It's a fascinating case that has just about every major tax evasion and protester element in it. We'd highly recommend reading it. Below is an excerpt from the court's ruling:

> "While courts may have offered differing views of the income tax over time, the United States Supreme Court has consistently interpreted the federal income tax for 80 years. Since 1916, the Court has construed the tax as an indirect tax authorized under Article I, Section 8, Clause I of the U.S. Constitution, as amended by the Sixteenth Amendment. See Brushaber v. Union Pacific R.R. Co., 240 U.S. 1, 11, 16-19, 60 L.Ed. 493, 36 S.Ct. 236 (1916). Federal courts have all agreed that wages or compensation for services constitute income and that individuals receiving income are subject to the federal income tax--regardless of its nature. See, e.g., Brushaber, 240 U.S. at 17; United States v. Sloan, 939 F.2d. 499, 500-01 (7th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1060, 117 L.Ed.2d. 110, 112 S.Ct. 940 (1992); Simmons v. United States, 308 F.2d. 160, 167-68 (4th Cir. 1962). In short, the debate over whether the income tax is an excise tax or a direct tax is irrelevant to the obligation of citizens to pay taxes and file returns. Simmons, 308 F.2d. at 166 n.21 (stating that "it has been clearly established that the labels used do not determine the extent of the taxing power").
> Furthermore, the duty to file returns and pay income taxes is clear. Section 1 of the Internal Revenue Code imposes a federal tax on the taxable income of every individual. 26 U.S.C. §1. Section 63 defines "taxable income" as gross income minus allowable deductions. 26 U.S.C. §63. Section 61 states that "gross income means all income from whatever source derived," including compensation for services. 26 U.S.C. §61. Sections 6001 and 6011 provide that a person must keep records and file a tax return for any tax for which he is liable. 26 U.S.C. §§ 6001 & 6011. Finally, section 6012 provides that every individual having gross income that equals or exceeds the exemption amount in a taxable year shall file an income tax return. 26 U.S.C. §6012. The duty to pay federal income taxes therefore is "manifest on the face of the statutes, without any resort to IRS rules, forms or regulations." United States v. Bowers, 920 F.2d. 220, 222 (4th Cir. 1990). The rarely recognized proposition that, "where the law is vague or highly debatable, a defendant--actually or imputedly--lacks the requisite intent to violate it," Mallas , 762 F.2d. at 363 (quoting United States v. Critzer, 498 F.2d. 1160, 1162 (4th Cir. 1974)), simply does not apply here.

Once again, this Appellate court ruling ignores all the same issues referenced earlier in Simmons v. United States. It ignores constitutional issues such as Article I, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3, which constrain the Congress' taxing power to foreign and interstate commerce, and their relation to 26 U.S.C. §861 and the 26 C.F.R. §1.861-1 through 26 C.F.R. §1.861-14. It does not attempt to identify whether the income derives from a taxable "source". It doesn't relate the income to an occasion that is appropriate to an excise, such as the sale or manufacture of commodities involving interstate or foreign commerce. This is clearly a glaring error in logic and legal analysis, and yet it is allowed to stand because of a federal judicial conspiracy to uphold the income tax!

There are many, many other cases we could discuss, but they all follow the same pattern of the two indicated above. In the interest of conserving space, we won't show any others here.

Following the expansion of the definition of "excise taxes" by the circuit courts documented above, a number of cases were heard by the federal appellate courts dealing directly with the constitutionality of the income taxes and the nature of being a "direct tax". In each case, the court unfavorably "rubber stamped" the result without dealing with the constitutional issues of direct vs. indirect taxes. They also failed to address the nature of the parties allegedly subject to the tax, such as whether they were citizens domiciled in the 50 union states, nonresident aliens, or citizens living overseas. This simply clouded the application of the income taxes even further for the average Citizen, which we believe was clearly their intent. Here are two examples of such abuse by the federal appellate courts:

1. Ficalora v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 751 F.2d. 85 (12/13/1984).
2. Charczuk v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 771 F.2d. 471 (8/29/1985).

We'll first provide the ruling in the case of Charczuk v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (771 F.2d. 471), because the arguments of the "taxpayer" not only were rejected by the court, but the court also sanction of attorney fees against the appellant. Below is an excerpt from that case:

> Paul E. Charczuk and Victoria Charczuk jointly filed a Form 1040 for the taxable year 1977 reflecting income of $4,763.00. This amount was entered on the line for "business income" rather than on the line for "wages, salaries, tips and other employee compensation." Attached to the taxpayers' return were seven Form W-2 Wage and Tax Statements showing that the taxpayers received wages during 1977 totaling $12,276.00. Also attached was a Schedule C for each taxpayer claiming a "net profit" of $2,668.00 for Paul Charczuk and $2,095.00 for Victoria Charczuk.[407] On June 9, 1980, the Commissioner sent taxpayers a notice of deficiency informing them that they owed $1,148.00 in taxes for 1977 based on disallowance of all expenses claimed on Schedule C for lack of verification. Subsequently, the taxpayers petitioned the Tax Court for a redetermination of the deficiency. In those proceedings the taxpayers did not attempt to challenge the Commissioner's determination by presenting evidence in support of their claimed deductions, but rather argued that the income tax itself was invalid as a matter of law. The Tax Court granted summary judgment in favor of the Commissioner. T.C. Memo. 1983-433. Taxpayers appeal from this judgment claiming the Tax Court misconstrued their arguments against the income tax and that its decision was contrary to law and "illogical." We affirm.

[...]

It takes little consideration to determine that the arguments presented by taxpayers with respect to these issues are meritless and unreasonable. However, to forestall taxpayers' patently false claim that "the issues in this case have never been addressed and answered by any Federal Article III Court" we will quote at length from the opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Ficalora v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 751 F.2d. 85 (1984), cert. denied 471 U.S. 1005, 105 S.Ct. 1869, 85 L.Ed.2d. 162 (1985), which involved taxpayers who were represented by the same Thomas J. Carley who represents the taxpayers in the instant appeal. The quoted text which follows reveals that the Second Circuit in Ficalora was responding to arguments substantially identical to those taxpayers advance in this case.

I. Constitutional Authority to Impose An Income Tax on Individuals

We first address ourselves to the appellant's contention that neither the United States Congress nor the United States Tax Court possess the constitutional authority to impose on him an income tax for the taxable year 1980. Appellant argues that an income tax is a "direct" tax and that Congress does not possess the constitutional authority to impose a "direct" tax on him, since such a tax has not been apportioned among the several States of the Union. In support of his argument, appellant cites Article 1, Section 9, clause 4 of the United States Constitution which provides that:

"No Capitation, or other direct, Tax shall be laid, unless in Proportion to the Census or Enumeration herein before directed to be taken."

He also relies on the case of Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 15 S.Ct. 673, 39 L.Ed. 759 (initial decision), 158 U.S. 601, 15 S.Ct. 912, 39 L.Ed. 1108 (decision on rehearing) (1895), wherein the United States Supreme Court held that a tax upon income from real and personal property is invalid in the absence of apportionment.

In making his argument that Congress lacks constitutional authority to impose a tax on wages without apportionment among the States, the appellant has chosen to ignore the precise holding of the Court in Pollock, as well as the development of constitutional law in this area over the last ninety years. While ruling that a tax upon income from real and personal property is invalid in the absence of apportionment, the Supreme Court explicitly stated that taxes on income from one's employment are not direct taxes and are not subject to the necessity of apportionment. Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 158 U.S. at 635, 15 S.Ct. at 919. Furthermore, the Sixteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, enacted in 1913, provides that:

"The Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes on income, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration."

Finally, in the case of New York, ex rel. Cohn v. Graves, 300 U.S. 308, 57 S.Ct. 466, 81 L.Ed. 666 (1937), the Supreme Court in effect overruled Pollock, and in so doing rendered the Sixteenth Amendment unnecessary, when it sustained New York's income tax on income derived from real property :n New Jersey. Id. at 314-15, 57 S.Ct. at 468-69. Hence, there is no question but that Congress has the constitutional authority to impose an income tax upon the appellant.

II. Statutory Authority to Impose an Income Tax on Individuals and Definition of Taxable Income

The appellant contends that "[n]owhere in any of the Statutes of the United States is there any section of law making any individual liable to pay a tax or excise on 'taxable income.'" . . . The essence of the appellant's argument is that 26 U.S.C. §1 does not impose a tax on any individual for any stated period of time; rather, it imposes a tax on an undefined: "taxable income".

[407] Each Schedule C (entitled Profit or (Loss) from Business or Profession (Sole Proprietorship)) gave the taxpayers' name, address, social security number and the amount claimed as "net profit." To the right of the area for deductions on both schedules was the instruction "See Form-21." A "Form-21" was attached for Paul Charczuk which detailed various "subtractions" for taxes, rent, subsistence, interest, auto, telephone, utilities, supplies, dues and subscriptions from "receipts" of $6,676.00. No "Form-21" or similar explanation of calculations was attached for Victoria Charczuk.

> Section 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (26 U.S.C.) (hereinafter the Code) provides in plain, clear and precise language that "there is hereby imposed on the taxable income or every individual . . . a tax determined in accordance with" tables set-out later in the statute. In equally clear language, Section 63 of the Code defines taxable income as "gross income, minus the deductions allowed by this chapter . . .", gross income, in turn, is defined in Section 61 of the Code as "all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) . . . : (1) Compensation for services . . .". Despite the appellant's attempted contorted construction of the statutory scheme, we find that it coherently and forthrightly imposes upon the appellant a tax upon his income for the year 1980.
> [...]
> This appeal is frivolous. Pursuant to Rule 38 of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, we impose on the appellants double the costs of the Commissioner.
> *When the costs incurred by this Court and respondent are taken into consideration, the maximum damages authorized by the statute ($500) do not begin to indemnify the United States for the expenses which petitioner's frivolous action has occasioned. Considering the waste of limited judicial and administrative resources caused by petitioner's action, even the maximum damages authorized by Congress are wholly inadequate to compensate the United States and its other taxpayers. These costs must eventually be borne by all of the citizens who honestly and fairly participate in our tax collection system. * * * (Sydnes v. Commissioner, [74 T.C. 864, 872-873 (1980), affd. 647 F.2d. 813 (8th Cir. 1981)].)*
> Courts are in no way obligated to tolerate arguments that thoroughly defy common sense. Such conduct is permissible in our society for the very young, those attempting to make a joke or, occasionally, philosophers, but it cannot be allowed of one engaged in the serious work of a practicing attorney appearing before a court of law. Mr. Carley's conduct in this suit has been a paradigm of unreasonable behavior, and it has been exceedingly vexatious as that term is understood by the Supreme Court. See Christiansburg Garment Co. v. EEOC, 434 U.S. 412, 421, 54 L.Ed.2d. 648, 98 S.Ct. 694 (1978). (In a case arising under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Court stipulated that "the term 'vexatious' in no way implies that the plaintiff's subjective bad faith is a necessary prerequisite to a fee award against him."). Given the continued character of Mr. Carley's intransigence, justice requires that he and his clients bear the full weight of the sanctions allowed by law so that the government, and ultimately all law abiding taxpayers, will not be taxed with the expense of opposing meritless contentions such as his.
> Accordingly, the decision of the Tax Court is affirmed and Paul E. Charczuk and Victoria Charczuk are ordered to pay the government double its costs on appeal. In addition, the government is ordered to submit within twenty (20) days to the court clerk, and to Thomas J. Carley, an appropriate accounting of all expenses (other than costs of the appeal) and attorneys' fees it has reasonably incurred as a result of this appeal. Thomas J. Carley may file with the court clerk a challenge to the government's accounting within ten (10) days of the government's filing only with regard to whether the expenses and fees were in fact incurred on this appeal. Upon approval of the government's accounting or any part of it by the court, Thomas J. Carley will be ordered to personally pay to the government the entire amount approved.[408]

You will note that the court ignored all of the same issues we raised with the cases of Simmons v. United States, 308 F.2d. 160, and U.S. v. Melton, 86 F.3d. 1153. They readily identified the receipt of income as other than a "direct tax", which means that it must be an "indirect tax". The only legitimate and constitutional type of indirect tax that it could be, as authorized by the 16th Amendment, is an "excise tax". But guess what, the court didn't mention a word about excise taxes or their applicability only to businesses. The subject of this case, however, was not a business, but an natural person. We refer you again to section 5.1 and following entitled "Introduction to Federal Taxation".

We hope that this section has served to emphasize the basic problem with the Internal Revenue Code that Congress is not willing to address:

1. The laws are unnecessarily complex, mainly because they have to be so carefully crafted to conceal the real truth that most citizens domiciled in the 50 union states with only domestic income DON'T owe tax.

[408] Courts imposing sanctions on an attorney under § 1927 must "afford the attorney all appropriate protections of due process available under the law." House Conf. Rep. No. 96-1234, 96th Cong., 2d Sess. 8, reprinted in 1980 U.S. Code Cong. & Ad. News 2781, 2783. At oral argument :n this case, Mr. Carley was offered an opportunity to explain why sanctions should not be imposed against him personally. This satisfies any right he may have had to a hearing on the matter. Cf. McConnell v. Critchlow, 661 F.2d. 116, 119 (9th Cir. 1981).

2. Even most judges don't really understand the Internal Revenue Code and don't agree with each other on their interpretation. See section 3.20.1 "Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws" for more interesting reading on this subject.
3. The complexity and uncertainty of the Internal Revenue Code contributes significantly to a violation of "due process" discussed in this and section 3.20.1 "Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws". The first principle of due process is that the laws are written to be clear and unambiguous enough that they can consistently be interpreted and applied by citizens and the courts. An unclear law also violates the Sixth Amendment to the Constitution.

6.12.4.6 State Court Rulings

The State courts have held that the income tax is a direct property tax. This is revealed by the following cases:

> See Eliasberg Bros. Mercantile Co. v. Grimes, 204 Ala. 492, 86 So. 56, 58 (1920); State v. Pinder, 108 A. 43, 45 (Del. 1919); Bachrach v. Nelson, 349 Ill. 579, 182 N.E. 909 (1932); Opinion of the Justices, 220 Mass. 613, 108 N.E. 570 (1915); Trefry v. Putnam, 227 Mass. 522, 116 N.E. 904 (1917); Maguire v. Tax Comm. of Commonwealth, 230 Mass. 503, 120 N.E. 162, 166 (1918); Hart v. Tax Comm., 240 Mass. 37, 132 N.E. 621 (1921); In re Ponzi, 6 F.2d. 324 (D.Mass. 1925); Kennedy v. Comm. of Corps. & Taxation, 256 Mass. 426, 152 N.E. 747 (1926); In re Opinion of the Justices, 266 Mass. 583, 165 N.E. 900, 902 (1929); Hutchins v. Comm. of Corps. & Taxation, 272 Mass. 422, 172 N.E. 605, 608 (1930); Bryant v. Comm. of Corps. & Tax'n., 291 Mass. 498, 197 N.E. 509 (1935); Culliton v. Chase, 174 Wash. 363, 25 P.2d. 81, 82 (1933); Jensen v. Henneford, 185 Wash. 209, 53 P.2d. 607 (1936); State ex rel Manitowoc Gas Co. v. Wisconsin Tax Comm., 161 Wis. 111, 152 N.W. 848, 850 (1915); and State ex rel Sallie F. Moon Co. v. Wisconsin Tax Comm., 166 Wis. 287, 163 N.W. 639, 640 (1917).

There appears to be no dispute about the plain requirements of the Constitution that direct taxes must be apportioned and that indirect/excise taxes must be uniform. Likewise as shown above, there is a line of decisional authority regarding the generally accepted proposition that income is property.

6.12.5 2003: Federal Court Bans Irwin Schiff's Federal Mafia Tax Book

Below is an article about a ban on this country's most famous anti-tax book published by the most famous tax protester at the time, Irwin Schiff. The article was published by the We the People Foundation for Constitutional Education and distributed via email on June 30, 2003.

Judge Bans Schiff Book on Income Tax

1st Amendment Thrashed to Buy the Tax More Time
New York Times: More Deception

On Monday, June 16, Federal District Court Judge Lloyd D. George issued a preliminary injunction banning the sale and distribution of Irwin Schiff's book about the income tax titled, "The Federal Mafia: How The Government Illegally Imposes And Unlawfully Collects Income Taxes And How Americans Can Fight Back."

Schiff's book, which is a personal and legal examination of the income tax fraud, and includes extensive, and specific quotations and analyses of Internal Revenue Code and Supreme Court rulings on the tax, was banned even though the Department of Justice (which bears the burden of proof) presented no evidence and no witnesses at the April 11th preliminary injunction hearing. Click Here to read the first portion of the censored book (.pdf).

In short, Judge George banned Schiff's book as "false commercial speech" without any specific analysis or any in-court evidentiary examination establishing the "falsity" of Schiff's actual speech and by blithely ignoring the substantial body of established Supreme Court constitutional law protecting free expression and publication.

With only an unsubstantiated claim of criminal speech asserted by a government witness (via a written declaration), Judge George summarily dismissed the content of Schiff's book as "largely autobiographical, containing in large part Schiff's anti-tax and anti-government diatribes and theories." Of course, it appears to be lost on the court that this is the exact type of speech protected by the First Amendment and -- even when intertwined with "commercial" speech -- requires the highest level of examination and legal justification to censor.

Allen Lichtenstein, general counsel of the American Civil Liberties Union in Nevada, said he looked forward to arguing the case before the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. Schiff said he had done nothing wrong and would appeal. "We argued that the book is not commercial speech, cannot be banned as false commercial speech and does not meet any other criteria for censorship," Lichtenstein said.

On Tuesday June 17, The New York Times ran an article authored by David Cay Johnston about the Schiff injunction. According to Schiff, Johnston makes two knowingly false statements distorting the perceived nature of the proceedings. Schiff has demanded a formal retraction from the New York Times.

Johnston wrote," At the court hearing, Mr. Schiff fired his lawyer after she said that she could not argue his tax claims because they lacked merit." In his demand letter to the Times, Schiff points out that the transcript from the hearing makes it explicitly clear that Schiff's attorney was not characterizing Schiff's legal assertions as false or lacking in any way, but instead that she was effectively prohibited by the court from even raising the issues in defense of Schiff under fear and threat of court sanction.

Analysis of the Order

To reach his contorted legal conclusions and to issue the preliminary injunction in favor of the IRS, Judge George ruled, without any evidentiary examination or cross-examination, to conclude that Schiff's speech is false.

With this in mind, please note on page 4 of the Order there are five distinct, separate legal elements listed for the government to successfully assert a claim for an injunction related to an "abusive tax shelter."

In his order however, the judge conveniently "combines" his analysis of the critical second and third statutory elements, (i.e., relating to making actual "false and fraudulent statements" and the defendant's "reason to know" about their falsity) together within section "B" of the Order, thereby clouding the court's grossly inadequate treatment in establishing the truth or falsity of Schiff's actual speech.

While Section "B" contains much ado concerning Irwin's past criminal tax convictions, his failed federal appeals and Schiff's extensive knowledge and expertise in Internal revenue Code, precious few words are wasted establishing the actual falsity of Schiff's speech. In fact, most of the relevant language concerning the court's finding of falsity merely lists District Court decisions of other victims of the IRS's nationwide attack on speech. The Court is in effect stating, "All these other people had false speech concerning abusive tax shelters so Schiff's speech is too."

In short, to enable the government's full and unfettered dismissal of the very significant First Amendment issues raised subsequently by the ACLU, Judge George quickly reaches the judicial conclusion of the "falsity" of Schiff's speech (relative to abusive tax shelters) by grossly mischaracterizing Schiff's legal assertions within the context of several Supreme Court cases cited that are only tangentially related to the core legal issues raised in Schiff's actual speech.

Example: The Court cites the 1916 Brushaber case which addressed the "right of Congress to impose income tax" [sic]. In fact, Brushaber was acting as a withholding agent for a foreign corporate entity operating inside the US and was in fact, under US law, liable in that capacity. This issue is not the issue raised by Schiff in the Federal Mafia.

According to Schiff's Federal Mafia material - if Brushaber was a natural citizen of living and working in the 50 sates, his personal wages would in fact be non-taxable because they don't meet the constitutional definition of "income" as defined by the Supreme Court (i.e., a corporate profit or gain). It is Supreme Court decisions such as these cited in Schiff's Mafia (and therefore, his alleged tax "scheme") that the Court has blindly ignored in its legal analysis.

The bottom line: Nowhere is there a direct rebuttal or examination of the specific legal assertions advanced by Schiff in either his speech or his book. Every subsequent aspect contained in the Court's injunction is rationalized, and squarely erected, upon this defective judicial premise.

In reality, Schiff's "abusive tax scam" is merely a detailed discussion and analysis of Internal Revenue Code, the Constitution, and US Supreme Court decisions, coupled with detailed instructions on how average Americans can implement the logical conclusions and reasonable inferences of those legal facts to protect their property and their rights.

The IRS, DOJ and now the US District Court, have failed to provide ANY specific, substantive rebuttal to ANY of the specific elements of Schiff's speech - even though these elements contain the nexus of the falsity or truth of his speech, and thereby are at the heart of determining the legality or criminality of the alleged "abusive tax scheme". To fail to directly address the content and alleged falsity of the speech is a clear violation of due process.

Armed with this defective and patently self-serving judicial conclusion, the Court then begins to rebut the 1st Amendment free speech issues raised in the ACLU's amicus briefs.

(Note: The 1st Amendment discussion begins on page 13 of the order)

Commercial Speech

Judge George summarily concludes not only that The Federal Mafia is non-protected "false" commercial speech because the book is sold for money and it contains false information that might be of "selfish" economic benefit to the audience (or Schiff) -- but that it should be banned because it advertises other Schiff products that naturally lead to the same alleged tax "scam." I.e., as false commercial advertising, the book should be banned.

The judge, citing the 9th Circuit Estate Preservation case, makes the implicit point that Schiff, outside this injunction, is free to continue to give tax planning advice as long as it is "legitimate" as (quote) "every honest and qualified tax consultant knows."

Judge George, having concluded that the book constitutes "core commercial speech," (i.e. "advertising, plain and simple") dismisses the tightly interwoven political content and far reaching political implications of Schiff's work and instead focuses on establishing that Schiff's book is simply a contrived "soup" of false advertising and an embedded "abusive tax scheme," which, of course, enjoy no protection.

Incitement of Imminent Lawless Acts

At the beginning of the section dealing with the "Incitement of Imminent Lawless Acts" (page 26) Judge George cites the Brandenburg v. Ohio Supreme Court case where the court upheld that even speech advocating the violation of law was protected, as long as the speech did not "incite imminent unlawful acts".

The Brandenburg case is the modern day constitutional litmus test for the legal banning of speech. Below is the definition of the word "imminent".

> Imminent *\Im"mi*nent\, Imminent: it is the strongest -- it denotes that something is ready to fall or happen on the instant; as, in imminent danger of one's life.*
> 1. Threatening to occur immediately; near at hand; impending; -- said especially of misfortune or peril. ``In danger imminent." (Source: Webster's Revised Unabridged Dictionary, © 1996, 1998 MICRA, Inc.)

Having already sidestepped the issue of whether filing a "zero return" constitutes an unlawful act, Judge George haphazardly, and improperly, dismisses the crucial Brandenburg "test" as inappropriate in Schiff's case because the speech in Schiff's book "incorporates the (tax) scheme" thereby implying that Schiff's speech is the actual crime and therefore that this test need not be applied.

The entire nature of the Supreme Court's Brandenburg litmus test revolves around the direct incitement of "imminent" lawless behavior - i.e., in the case of Brandenburg (and its supporting case citations) imminent VIOLENT behavior. (Brandenburg was a Klansman engaged in inflammatory, racist speech. His speech was upheld as constitutional because he merely advocated the breaking of the law.)

Judge George takes license in citing several sympathetic Court decisions, while choosing to ignore the direct guidance of the Supreme Court regarding this crucial legal test necessary to ban speech.

In short, the Court makes no attempt to establish how reading a book containing a legal analysis and instructions on how to file a tax return could result in anything resembling "imminent" activity of ANY type - whether lawful or not. The judge seems content - as the other District tax case judges seem to be - of tolerating a mere logical relationship between this "unlawful" speech and a subsequent "criminal act." With that linkage established, the "imminence" element to banning speech is cleanly dismissed out of hand.

By this court's logic, anyone who wrote a "how-to" book containing any information that was subsequently used in a crime - no matter how far removed from the alleged proximate cause -- and regardless of whether the speech was false or not - could be held liable for his/her speech or writings.

Illegal Acts

In the last section of the injunction order, the judge cements his previous conclusion of the false, (and thereby criminal), nature of Schiff's speech by citing a handful of free speech cases involving bomb makers, illegal drug manufacturers and "hit-men" that purport to, by example and association, show how speech that leads directly to and induces specific criminal conduct is not protected.

Of course unlike exploding a bomb or killing another human being -- which are reasonably understood to be plainly criminal acts - the filing of a tax return per instructions and legal advice of a court-acknowledged tax expert that specifically and plainly cites decisions of the Supreme Court and the Internal Revenue Code itself is much harder to comprehend as an overt criminal act.

Conclusion

The legal arguments and carefully selected lower level court cases cited by Judge George throughout the Order clearly appear strained in their effort to support a justifiable ban of Schiff's book and appear to set the stage for the Ninth Circuit to deny an appeal from Schiff. The clearly protected political content of the book is outright ignored. It is obvious that the government has found Schiff's speech (and many other tax "protestors") intolerable simply because the speech conveys details of the income tax fraud and that they have provided methods on how to effectively contravene its effects.

To be sure, the banning of speech through restraining orders and like vehicles are extraordinary remedies that can be implemented without a trial by jury, were designed to temporarily protect rights, property and the public tranquility at risk until other legal remedies could be effected. They were never intended for the purposes of suppressing, or otherwise circumventing, rightful, lawful public debates and discussions about the tax codes or the abuses of government power.

The extraordinary remedy of enjoining speech was never intended to replace the proper processes of due process and the enforcement of laws as executed via indictments, prosecution and the judicial appeal process. The delegated and strictly limited legal authority of our government to collect taxes DOES NOT, and CANNOT, ever trump the sovereign People's right to free speech.

That the judiciary would openly sanction the use of these extraordinary legal remedies and affirmatively deny Schiff his constitutionally protected right to speech while the government - for 13 years - has had the ability and resources to openly pursue Schiff with full, public criminal charges for his allegedly unlawful acts - AND HAS NOT -- should not be tolerated. That our media would ignore -- and even unquestioningly facilitate -- this carnage on our Constitution is deplorable.

In the pivotal case New York Times Co. v. Sullivan (1964), Justice Brandeis, is cited from his concurring opinion in Whitney v. California, 274 U.S. 357, 375-376 restating the rationale behind free speech:

> "Those who won our independence believed . . . that public discussion is a political duty, and that this should be a fundamental principle of the American government. They recognized the risks to which all human institutions are subject. But they knew that order cannot be secured merely through fear of punishment for its infraction; that > it is hazardous to discourage thought, hope and imagination; that fear breeds repression; that repression breeds hate; that hate menaces stable government; that the path of safety lies in the opportunity to discuss freely supposed grievances and proposed remedies, and that the fitting remedy for evil counsels is good ones. Believing in the power of reason as applied through public discussion, they eschewed silence coerced by law--the argument of force in its worst form. Recognizing the occasional tyrannies of governing majorities, they amended the Constitution so that free speech and assembly should be guaranteed." [emphasis added]

Will the People silently endure these abuses? We shall see.

> "The liberties of a people never were, nor ever will be, secure, when the transactions of their rulers may be concealed from them."
> [Patrick Henry]

> "We are not afraid to entrust the American people with unpleasant facts, foreign ideas, alien philosophies, and competitive values. For a nation that is afraid to let its people judge the truth and falsehood in an open market is a nation that is afraid of its people."

6.12.6 2002: Definition for "Acts of Congress" removed from Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure

The definition of the term "acts of Congress" was formerly an especially good means to demonstrate the very limited territorial jurisdiction of the United States Courts. One place to look for that definition was in Rule 54(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. We quoted this rule in chapters 4 and 11 of this book as a means to demonstrate the very limited jurisdiction of the federal government starting in mid 2002.

> Rule 54(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (prior to Dec. 2002)
> "Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia, in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession."

Subsequently in Dec. 2002, the Federal Judiciary rewrote the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure and took the contents of Rule 54 and moved it to Rule 1 of the Rules. They then removed the definition of "acts of Congress" from the definitions. Below is the explanation of what they did, from the notes under Rule 1:

> NOTES OF ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON RULES - 2002 AMENDMENT
> Rule 1 is entirely revised and expanded to incorporate Rule 54, which deals with the application of the rules. Consistent with the title of the existing rule, the Committee believed that a statement of the scope of the rules should be placed at the beginning to show readers which proceedings are governed by these rules. The Committee also revised the rule to incorporate the definitions found in Rule 54(c) as a new Rule 1(b).
> Rule 1(b) is composed of material currently located in Rule 54(c), with several exceptions. First, the reference to an "Act of Congress" has been deleted from the restyled rules; instead the rules use the self-explanatory term "federal statute." Second, the language concerning demurrers, pleas in abatement, etc., has been deleted as being anachronistic. Third, the definitions of "civil action" and "district court" have been deleted. Fourth, the term "attorney for the government" has been expanded to include reference to those attorneys who may serve as special or independent counsel under applicable federal statutes. The term "attorney for the government" contemplates an attorney of record in the case.
> [See http://www.law.cornell.edu/rules/frcrmp/NRule1.htm]

Black's Law Dictionary doesn't define the term nor could we find any other definition that was as clear as the one above, but now, like all the other good leads that freedom fighters have discovered, the truth has once again been covered up and obscured by your deceitful public "servants" in order to perpetuate the illusion that they have more authority than the Constitution gives them. 6.12.7 1992: William Conklin v. United States

In this section, we'll discuss some of the incredible chicanery and legal trickery that was pulled by the federal courts in conspiring with the IRS in misapplying the Internal Revenue Code to extort and oppress of the rights of a specific Citizen, William Conklin. Bill is a famous tax resistance advocate who wrote a fascinating book called Why No One is Required to File Tax Returns: Reforming Tax Laws Using Our Fifth Amendment Rights.[409] He runs a great website found at:

http://www.anti-irs.com/

Bill used his Fifth Amendment rights exclusively to litigate not having to file federal income tax returns. On his website and in his book, he largely ignores the 861/source issue that is one of the two themes of this document. He has a lot of very good and persuasive arguments about the Fifth Amendment, and he deadlocked the federal district courts on the income tax issue for over five years because of some of the very serious constitutional questions he raised that the courts refused to deal with and delayed ruling on! On his website, he states that he has won against the IRS seven times! Here are some of his cases:

1. Church of World Peace, Inc. v IRS, 715 F.2d. 492
2. United States v. Church of World Peace, 775 F.2d. 265
3. United States v Church of World Peace, 878 F.2d. 1281
4. Conklin v. United States, 812 F.2d. 1318
5. Conklin v. C.I.R., 897 F.2d. 1032
6. Tavery v. United States, 897 F.2d. 1027
7. Tavery v. United States, 897 F.2d. 1027, Civ. No. 87-Z-180 (1987), USDC Colorado

For at least the past ten years, Bill has challenged everyone by offering at least $50,000 to the first person who can show him how he can file an income tax return without violating his Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate himself! Every time he publishes a new version of his book, he ups the ante! To date, no one, including famous Hollywood criminal lawyers like Melvin Belli, has been able to satisfy his challenge! He has more than adequately made his point that direct income taxes violate the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution on this basis alone! But this wasn't enough, he took the issue all the way up to the Supreme Court. It was a hot potato for the Supreme Court so they denied his right to litigate the issue there (violation of the First Amendment right of free speech and of ability to petition the government for redress of grievances), which was another way of saying:

> "We don't want to argue with you and we know you are right, and if people hear the truth about, we're in trouble!"

He had to appeal to the Supreme Court because the federal district court, after a 5-year delay reaching a verdict (!), ruled against him on the surface, but proved his point indirectly!

We don't have room here to discuss all of his cases, but here is a quote from Judge Nottingham in Bill's case of Conklin v. United States, 812 F.2d. 1318, which he said in open court on August 27, 1992. Remember, the issue was Bill Conklin litigating to defend his right not to be compelled to incriminate himself by filing or signing an income tax return, and he filed a tax return he wouldn't sign and then litigated his right not to have to pay the $500 frivolous return penalty assessed by the IRS:

> "And one of the fatal things that I—or things that you are overlooking—I will not say it is fatal, although it appears to me it may be fatal—is when you do not sign a return, the reason that the tax collection system is frustrated is because you are not signing under the penalty of perjury. I mean, if everybody could do what you did, the tax collection system would collapse, which you know I am sure some people would argue is not a bad result. But it is not one that I am in a position to bring about."[410]

Are you starting to see the picture? Judge Nottingham knows it is unconstitutional but his bigger concern is that he doesn't want to undermine the tax system because his job would be threatened! According to 28 U.S.C. §134(a), federal judges must be on "good behavior" in order to hold office, and can be removed from office on bad behavior. Could it be that in this case, declaring income taxes unconstitutional might be described by the Congress, who would impeach him, as being "bad behavior"? WE THINK SO!!!

[410] Why No One is Required to File Tax Returns, by William Conklin, 1996, Davidson Press, ISBN 189183391X, p 36.

We'd also like to repeat some of Bill's own words from his book:

> Notice that the judge basically told me that I could not possibly win because I would overturn the federal tax system. Of course, that was the point of my lawsuit to begin with!
>
> After thinking about the case for five years(!), he decided to rule against me. He took the position that the Fifth Amendment does not apply to tax returns because the Fifth Amendment applies only to "compelled testimony." In other words, the Fifth Amendment only applies to information that individuals are required to give to the government.
>
> Since I had argued that the Fifth Amendment applies to tax returns because I felt that their filing was compelled by the penal provisions of the law, it is clear that Judge Nottingham took the position that individuals are not required to give information to the government on the 1040 returns (or, in other words, he was talking like the IRS talks by saying that filing is "voluntary"), and that is why the Fifth Amendment cannot be applied.
> The Court Rules in Opposition to the U.S. Supreme Court
> Judge Nottingham had to rule directly against the position of the Supreme Court in Garner vs. U.S., supra. Remember, the Garner Court took the position that information on tax returns is "compelled testimony" for purposes of the Fifth Amendment.
> Furthermore, Judge Nottingham also accused me of taking a blanket Fifth Amendment position, even though I certainly had not done that. In fact, I had completely filled out the return and provided supporting documentation and paid the tax that I voluntarily self-assessed. The Supreme Court took the position that if an individual so much as even admits to having books and records, he waives the Fifth Amendment protections of his rights because the Fifth Amendment does not apply to documents, it only applies to testimony.[411] Judge Nottingham also ruled that "Plaintiff has wholly failed to persuade me that truthful completion of the IRS Form 1040 or any related forms would tend to incriminate him."
> The Judge Answers a Question I Did Not Ask
> The judge answered a question that I did not as,. How could the judge know if a piece of information would incriminate me? There is no way either of us could know that! But I was not arguing that I might incriminate myself. I was arguing that I could not be required to waive my Fifth Amendment protections of my rights. As a layman, there is no way I could be presumed to know if a piece of information would be incriminating or not. His opinion duly impressed me again as to how tricky the courts can be in their "Alice in Wonderland" language.
> I appealed the case to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals. The Tenth Circuit upheld the lower Court and thus also took a position exactly opposite to the position taken by the Supreme Court in the Garner case. The circuit court judges held that information on a tax return is not compelled, and the judges also accused me of taking a blanket Fifth Amendment position even though I had answered all the questions.
>
> I could not believe it! It was as if the court had not even looked at my return! Then the Tenth Circuit Court sent the case back to the lower court for any further recommendations by Judge Nottingham. The government seized the opportunity to ask Judge Nottingham to order me to pay the amount it estimated it had cost the IRS in attorney time to respond so my complaint. I was amazed when the attorneys for the IRS submitted a $6,000 bill for their time! I was really flabbergasted when Judge Nottingham assessed me the entire amount—this for raising the "frivolous" argument of law that individuals are required to waive their Fifth Amendment rights when they file tax returns!
> For me, the judge's actions underscored the unfair bias of the courts against someone who is challenging the incongruities of our income tax laws. Think about the contradictions in this scenario: The judge was saying that this was an obviously frivolous issue—an issue that even I, a layman, would immediately realize could quickly be defeated. Yet when the government submitted a $6,000 bill for the time that it required for two professional attorneys to defeat my position, the judge accepted their bill and the many hours it represented without question, and considered it appropriate to pass it along to me in its entirety!
> I Appeal to the Supreme Court
> I guess I should have been grateful that the judge did not add his time to my bill, too. It took him five years to evaluate my "easily understood as frivolous even by the layman" argument! Of course, I appealed once again, this time on the issue of the newly-imposed $6,000 worth of sanctions. Unfortunately, the Supreme Court was too busy with other far more important issues. It decided to not even consider my objection to the $6,000 sanction.

[411] See U.S. vs. Doe, 104 S.Ct. 1237(1984).

> Putting aside my outrageous $6,000 fine, do you now understand why the IRS continually refers to the filing of tax returns as voluntary? The IRS knows that if it stated than an individual is required to file tax returns, a Fifth Amendment confrontation would be created, so the IRS enforces the idea that tax returns are indirectly required. The IRS requires you to volunteer, and then punishes you if you chose not to volunteer. (Did I just hear you say that you feel like Alice in Wonderland, trying to tie the Queen down to fixed definitions of words?)

His book is really fascinating and we highly recommend it! You can order it from his website. After you read his book, you will probably be as mad as I was at the IRS. Reading his book was one of many reasons I became so committed to writing this book! His book didn't tell enough of the story and I felt people needed to hear "the rest of the story", as Paul Harvey likes to say.

Among some of the many unethical, immoral, and frivolous tactics the IRS and the courts used against Bill in litigating his case were:

1. The judge hearing the case had a conflict of interest with eliminating the income tax and refused to recuse himself or address the issue of recusing himself for cause.
2. The IRS requested and the court agreed to sanction Mr. Conklin with significant legal fees for defending his rights (a violation of his First Amendment right of free speech and his right to petition the government for redress of grievances). This, in effect, amounts to penalizing someone for the exercise of a right, which we said and the Supreme Court has also said, is unconstitutional.
3. The federal court refused to publish his cases, which is to say that they wouldn't allow his cases to go into the case law databases so other people could read about them. This is another First Amendment violation.
4. The court delayed ruling on the case for five years without explanation!
5. They accused Mr. Conklin of litigating frivolous issues. Unbelievable!
6. They overruled the Supreme Court!
7. The Supreme Court refused to hear the appeal (denied his writ), which was a death sentence for him.

Now do you understand the "judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax" that we are talking about? It's pathetic and disgusting!! Judge Nottingham should have been criminally prosecuted for his conduct (and his obvious conflict of interest) in this case with all the claims listed in section 5.8 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 (entitled "Basis for Claims/Redress Against the Government Involving Wrongful Taking of Taxes")!

6.12.8 1986: 16th Amendment: U.S. v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438 (1986)

> "[Defendant] Stahl's claim that ratification of the 16th Amendment was fraudulently certified constitutes a political question because we could not undertake independent resolution of this issue without expressing lack of respect due coordinate branches of government...."
> [U.S. v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438 (1986)]

This case was a major scandal for the Federal appellate court. The defendant Stahl presented credible evidence that the 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was fraudulently claimed to have been ratified by the Secretary of State, Philander Knox, in 1913. The court refused to deal with the issue and ignored all the evidence presented. Instead, they said it wasn't their business to deal with the issue. Congress said the same thing. This leads to the conclusion that there is a federal judicial (as well as a Congressional) conspiracy to protect the income tax.

6.12.9 1938: O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277[412]

The judges' actions with regard to their own salaries provide the evidence that they cooperated with those in the legislative and executive branches of government. Their conduct is evidence of concealing the illegal kickback program. The executive and legislative branches of government must now depend on Federal judges to keep the illegal kickback programs as a source of income to the U.S. Treasury.

Had the Federal judges fought the legal issue of their basic rights as an employee the Act of 1862 would have fallen and the "individual income tax" as enforced today would not exist. There is no lawful way it can be deemed that a Federal Government employee agrees in advance to an employment agreement where the conditions of the kickback changes at the discretion of Congress or anyone else. Treaties cannot be broken. This results in the kickback being legal in part, and in part illegal. The kickback a Federal Government employee agrees to when he/she first takes a job with the Federal Government is legal, but, when changes unilaterally made by Congress create a higher kickback the portion which constitutes the change is illegal. The illegal portion is a debt obligation which the Federal Government employee is forced to discharge. Being forced to pay a debt obligation constitutes involuntary servitude. You cannot agree in advance to involuntarily serve the Federal Government (or anyone else). To force someone to do so is to ignore the laws under the First, Fifth, and Thirteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

To show that the Federal Supreme Court Justices actually cooperated with the legislative and executive branches of government in bringing the President and judges taking office after June 6, 1932, under the Federal kickback program, even though they avoided impairment of their own employment contracts, let's look at what they said in 1938 when they used Supreme Court Chief Justice Taney's 1863 letter to the Secretary of the Treasury. Following are several excerpts from the Taney letter as used in O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939):

> At page 288. The Act in question, as you interpret it, diminishes the compensation of every judge three percent, and if it can be diminished to that extent by the name of a tax, it may in the same way be reduced from time to time at the pleasure of the legislature.

The justices know the law requires equal treatment. They know the U.S. Constitution prohibits the diminishment of everyone's compensation for services by any means other than an agreement entered into on a voluntary basis prior to employment. They also know Art. III, Sec. 1, which prohibits the diminishment of compensation of Federal judges, was placed into the Constitution of the United States to keep the employment agreements of Federal judges separate from other Federal Government employment agreements so that all Federal judges could answer any legal question regarding labor contracts other than their own with objectivity in mind. They are no longer capable of reviewing violations of Federal employment agreements or any issue with regard to the Federal kickback program as a disinterested third party, making their participation divisive and their opinions, extended as case law, oppressive upon persons who are not Federal Government employees.

Though those who constructed the U.S. Constitution probably did not anticipate a Federal kickback program, the Supreme Court Justices in 1862 understood section 86 for what it was and chose to act only to prevent their own employment agreement from being impaired. They could have made their contracts "from time to time at the pleasure of the legislation." BY the statement of Justice Taney in 1863, it also can be assumed justifiably that the Justices knew of the plan of Congress to force it on the balance of society by belief. For this belief to be established and sustained, the cooperation of Federal judges was required and gained. This is documented by their conduct and recorded opinions.

The "income" kickback program changes at the pleasure of Congress. And, as we now know, all persons (whether working in the private sector or for a government entity) have been forced into the Federal Government's illegal kickback program.

O'Mally opinion at pg. 288:

> The Judiciary is one of the three great departments of the government created and established by the Constitution. Its duties and powers are specifically set forth, and are of a character that requires it to be perfectly independent of the two other departments, and in order to place it beyond the reach and above even the suspicion of any such influence, the power to reduce their compensation is expressly withheld from Congress, and excepted from their powers of legislation.

Note that they avoided using the term "powers of taxation." The justices knew the legislation they were discussing was not a "tax" (direct or indirect).

The Judiciary's independence would have been secured had they objected to the law on the legal issue of civil rights that apply to all in society, namely the violation of the Fifth Amendment by illegal, unilateral impairment of existing employment contracts through a forced debt obligation which results in the deprivation of property without due process of law. Also, the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution is violated when no choice is provided--when a person is deprived of freedom of expression as to the changes in his employment agreement.

Congressmen, most being lawyers, knew they had no lawful right to use the power of their elected position to arrange for the deprivation of property under the pretense of law; and the IRS and all other Federal Government employees are on notice as to what is includible and what is not includible in "gross income" by the I.R. Code and Regulations. To control the property of natural persons not includible in "gross income" through the force of undue influence not only violates the Constitution and laws of the United States but those of the states as well. The enforcement of the debt obligation created in this fashion is prohibited by civil rights laws and brings up questions of conspiracy with intent to defraud (subjects that will be discussed later). For now, back to Justice Taney's letter discussed in the O'Malley opinion.

> At pg. 288. "Language could not be more plain than that used in the Constitution. It is moreover one of its most important and essential provisions. For the articles which limit the powers of the legislative and executive branches of the government, and those which provide safeguards for the protection of the citizen in his person and property would be of little value without a judiciary to uphold and maintain them, which was free from every influence, direct or indirect, that might be possibility in times of political excitement warp their judgments."

Here the Chief Justice Taney admitted, and subsequent Justices concur, that they knew their duty was to protect the citizen in his person and property. Still, they chose to ignore that duty and protect only their own person and property. By choice, they indirectly stated that they person and property of all other Federal Government employees was not entitled to protection from such deprivation.

When the Justices did not fight the 1862 law on the primary civil rights legal issue, they permitted illegal impairment of all other Federal Government employment contracts and permitted debt obligations to be forced upon all Federal Government employees but themselves. These Supreme Court Justices proved their judgment could be influenced and controlled by people in the other branches of government, and they paved the way for the cooperation between all Federal judges and employees of the IRS, the Justice Department, and members of Congress. By the continued conduct of cooperation in concealing the illegal nature of the kickback program, U.S. judges provide evidence that they chose NOT to uphold their duty as the branch of government created as a check and balance on the executive and legislative branches of government. Their duty is to assume that government under the law exists.

Getting back to the O'Malley opinion, pages 288-289, we see Justice Taney's letter said:

> Having been honored with the highest judicial station under the Constitution, I feel it to be more especially my duty to uphold and maintain the constitutional rights of that department of the government, and not by any act or word of mine, leave it to be supposed that I acquiesce in a measure that displaces it from the independent position assigned it by the statesmen who framed the Constitution; and in order to guard against any such inference, I present to you this respectful but firm and decided remonstrance against the authority you have exercised under this act of Congress, and requires you to place this protest upon the public files of your office as the evidence that I have done everything in my power to preserve and maintain the Judicial Department in the position and rank in the government which the Constitution has assigned to it. [emphasis added]

Here the Federal Judges state they are concerned with upholding the Constitutional "rights" of the Judicial Department. A government entity does not have rights--it has duties. Hence, to protect such rights is a subjective position which violates the judges' duty to be objective.

Those who accept jobs with the government have the duty to uphold the rights of all under the laws of the Constitution of the United States. Federal judges would have complied with their duty if they had fought for their contractual rights on the general civil rights that all persons have, rather than claim a special privilege status, they would have upheld their personal rights and secured the rights of all others at the same time. Hence, they did not do everything in their power to maintain the independence of the Judicial branch of government. Indeed, they did everything in their power to ultimately make the other branches of government dependent on them.

These Justices set the standard for all Federal judges. To this day Federal judges compromise their independence when they permit the use of U.S. courtrooms for the illegal enforcement of the IRS service (the imposition of illegal kickback programs upon persons in society).

Continuing with what the O'Malley Court said at pg. 289:

> The letter of the Chief Justice was not answered and, at his request, the Court, May 10, 1863, ordered the letter entered on its records. In 1869, the Secretary of the Treasury requested the opinion of Attorney General Ebenezer Rockwood Hoar as to the constitutionality of the Act construed to extend to judges' salaries. He rendered an opinion in substantial accord with the views expressed in Chief Justice Taney's protest. 13 Op.A.G. 161. Accordingly, the tax on the compensation of the President and or judges was discontinued and the amounts therefore collected from them were refunded--some through administrative channels; others through action of the court of claims and ensuing appropriations of Congress. See Wayne v. U.S., 26 C.Cls. 274, 290; 27 Stat. 306.

The U.S. judges' compensation for the performance of personal services, just like all other employees, is not subject to a law which impairs the obligation of the agreement of employment. However, as a result of Justice Taney's letter, you can see that the U.S. judges were placed in a class, among citizens, above all others. Their right not to be forced to accept an obligation that does not exist in law, or by employment agreement, was observed. Violation of the civil rights of all other Federal Government employees was permitted to stand, and the U.S. judges actively participated in these violations by concealment.

By claiming and receiving special status, Federal judges provided power that was implied and used by the IRS that does not exist under law. The limit of IRS power is to administer to the return of income disbursed to Federal Government employees as a result of their employment agreement.

Only through false belief can IRS employees continue to force their will upon all natural persons (Federal Government employees as well as persons working in the private sector and for other governmental entitles) by imposing conditions based upon vague laws passed by Congress. Vague laws are enacted because lawyers in our society permit their use by not challenging them.

At pages 289, 290 the O'Malley court went on to say:

> In 1889, Mr. Justice Miller, a member of the Court since 1862 said:
> "The constitution of the United States has placed several limitations upon the general power [of taxation], and...some of them are implied. One of its provisions is that neither the President of the United States (Art. II, Sec. 1), nor a judge of the Supreme or inferior courts (Art. III, Sec. 1), shall have his salary diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, or during his continuance in office. It is very clear that when Congress, during the late [Civil] war, levied an income tax, and placed it as well upon the salaries of the President and the judges of the courts as those of other people, that it was a diminution of them to just that extent." [emphasis added]

These judges had a duty to declare the law unconstitutional instead of arranging for special privileges. Constitutional restrictions made it equally unlawful for the compensation of all Federal Government employees to be diminished under the pretense of law when it was in fact a unilateral employment agreement change. The conduct of the Federal judges was taken by Congress and the IRS to imply they had power to pave the way for the illegal Federal kickback programs manifested through the filing of a "U.S. Individual Income Tax Returns." The O'Malley case was decided by the Supreme Court in 1938, four years before the enactment of the Victory Tax which was used to infer that an "income tax" had been imposed upon the compensation everyone receives in exchange for their labor.

The intent of the Federal judges to cooperate with the legislative and executive branches of government in 1862 to start the Federal kickback programs was just as clear by their conduct as is the conduct of Federal judges today. Today, the intent of the Federal judges is to cooperate in perpetuating the false belief that the IRS has uninhibited power over a person's liberty and property. Though maliciously unlawful, the results of that power is real. The evidence is in the fear of the IRS which exists among the U.S. public.

The I.R. Code provides the full extent of the IRS power. It is notice to IRS employees and judges of just what is and what is not includible in "gross income" under Subtitle A of the I.R. Code, and will be revealed to you. While most IRS employees hold jobs so limited in scope they would not be cognizant of their illegal activities, Federal judges and lawyers have no excuse. U.S. judges have placed themselves in a "Catch 22" situation. If they allow a Federal Court to be misused in order to force an illegal kickback on property not includible in "gross income" or aid in depriving persons of their liberty by misuse of laws, they are acting illegally. If they claim ignorance of who is subject to the I.R. Code laws and what property is includible in "gross income," they are admitting they do not know the law. Either way they confess they are not competent to retain their jobs.

6.12.10 1924: Miles v. Graham, 268 U.S. 501[413]

When Congress passed section 213 of the Revenue Act of 1918, Federal judges were not willing to be made a party to the Federal Government's kickback schemes and avoided impairment of their employment contracts by using their judicial power [see Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920) and Miles v. Graham, 268 U.S. 501 (1924)], expressed in opinions. In the Miles v. Graham, at page 509, the Justices said of the 1918 Act:

[413] Adapted from IRS Humbug: Weapons of Enslavement, Frank Kowalik, ISBN 0-9626552-0-1, 1991, pp. 23-24.

> ...No judge is required to pay a definite percentage of his salary, but all are commanded to return, as a part of "gross income", the compensation received as such" from the United States. From the "gross income"* various deductions and credits are allowed, as for interest paid, contributions or gifts made, personal exemptions varying with family relations, etc., and upon the net result assessment is made. The plain purpose was to require all judges to return their compensation as an item of "gross income," and to tax this as other salaries. This is forbidden by the Constitution.

In this opinion, the Justices were describing the return of income, or kickback, and its enforcement with regard to existing employment agreements. The statement made that this is forbidden by the Constitution was certainly correct, the Justices just neglected to say in positive, direct and clear language that it actually applied to all Federal government employees. Treating all salaries in this manner, including that of the judges, is "forbidden by the Constitution."

The Justices again claimed only the exemption of their salaries from this statute because of special status during their term of office. In stating the kickback is not a fixed amount, but an amount that depends upon the deductions and credits allowed, they confirmed the prediction of Justice Taney in his letter of 1863 that the compensation agreed to "may in the same way" [under the pretence of law] "be reduced from time to time at the pleasure of the legislature..."

6.12.11 1915: Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad, 240 U.S. 1[414]

The power of the IRS is restricted to the U.S. Government's income that is from within the employment agreement between the Federal Government and its employee. People NOT employed by the Federal Government are not required to include the gross income they earn for personal services in "gross income" under the I.R. Code. Doing so on a "U.S. Individual Income Tax Return" does not make income not includible in gross income under subtitle A of the I.R. Code includible in the legal kickback program. The U.S. Government is powerless to lawfully lay and collect a kickback on such income in the name of "tax." You have the right to surrender control of your personal income, but no IRS scheme can lawfully collect it without your cooperation.

By section 7701(a)(31), Congress placed the burden upon the IRS, the Justice Department, and the U.S. judges not to include income that is not includible in gross income under subtitle "A". All Federal Government employees are on notice that property which is foreign to the U.S. Government is not includible in "gross income" under the I.R. Code. This notice places a duty on the Federal Government employees to be certain only income belonging to the U.S. Government is returned.

> Sec. 7701(a)(31). Foreign estate or trust. The terms "foreign estate" and "foreign trust" mean an estate or trust, as the case may be, the income of which from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A." [emphasis added]

One's conduct produces income when employed with a source of income. The material element is the identity of the employer. In the U.S. Codes the term, "without the United States" means without the U.S. Government, and "within the United States" means within the U.S. Government. One's conduct cannot be effectively connected with the performance of personal services with a place, only a source of income can pay one. The place or geography is immaterial. The U.S. Codes identify geographical boundaries with the term "outside" or "inside" the United States. Congress shows intent to control us by use of vagueness when such similar phrases are used to express entirely different meanings.

By virtue of the definition of "foreign estate or trust," the burden, the duty, is upon Federal Government employees not to include income that is not includible. However, the conduct of the Federal Government employees causes the burden to be switched to each person to defend life, liberty, and property (including labor). Only with knowledge can one place the burden where it belongs--on the Federal Government employees.

The point being made now is that only when one has entered into an employment agreement within the U.S. Government is remuneration for personal services "effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States."

Any income not effectively connected with a trade or business within the U.S. Government contains no kickback due to the U.S. Government because it is not includible in "gross income" under subtitle A of the I.R. Code. To force a kickback on income that is not includible in "gross income" is to tax such income directly, making it mandatory for the U.S. Government to observe the constitutional restrictions on direct taxation.

[414] Adapted from IRS Humbug: Weapons of Enslavement, Frank Kowalik, ISBN 0-9626552-0-1, 1991, pp. 53-55.

In 1915 the Supreme Court recognized the effect enforcement would have in converting what is called "income tax" into a direct tax when they said:

> Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1, 16, 17 (1915)
> Moreover, in addition, the conclusion reached in the Pollock Case did not in any degree involve holding that income taxes generically and necessarily came within the class of direct taxes on property, but, on the contrary, recognized the fact that taxation on income was in its nature an excise entitled to be enforced as such unless and until it was concluded that to enforce it would amount to accomplishing the result which the requirement as to apportionment of direct taxation was adopted to prevent, in which case the duty would arise to disregard form and consider substance alone,..." [emphasis added]

The justices in the Brushaber case basically agreed with the justices in the 1895 Pollock case that generically the "taxation on income was in its nature an excise," meaning all excise taxes are in their nature a tax on income. This is exactly what i was getting at earlier when describing the power of everyone to tax income and that a tax is only direct when there is no choice with regard to becoming effected by it. The justices of both the Pollock and Brushaber cases knew taxation was not the true issue of the "income tax" enacted by Congress. The true issue being the effect on a person's labor when to enforce income tax on property "would amount to accomplishing the result which the requirement as to apportionment of direct taxation was adopted to prevent, in which case the duty would arise to disregard the form and consider substance." This statement indicates that if the issue were properly presented, the U.S. Courts would have to acknowledge that the kickback in the name of Federal "income tax" is legally enforceable only on income received as a result of an employment agreement within the U.S. Government as the U.S. Government has the right to enforce the return of its own income. All other income is NOT INCLUDIBLE IN GROSS INCOME UNDER SUBTITLE A OF THE I.R. CODE and the IRS has no jurisdiction over such property. With the IRS jurisdiction restricted to U.S. Government property it is legally impossible for them to sustain any action in court (civil or criminal) with regard to any other property.

6.12.12 Conclusions

For all the above reasons and using the examples cited in this section, it is clear that there has been a significant contribution of the judiciary to protecting and expanding the operation of the income tax and make it apply to subjects it was never intended, in violation of the U.S. Constitution and of the several rights of citizens. That makes federal judges who participate candidates for prosecution under the following criminal laws, all of which carry heavy penalties:

1. They are part of a “continuing financial crimes enterprise” (18 U.S.C. §225)
2. Extortionists who “entice citizens into peonage” to the IRS (see 18 U.S.C. §1581;Thirteenth Amendment;197 U.S. 207, 215 (slavery for indebtedness).
3. Are the subject of a massive conflict of interest (see 28 U.S.C. §455).
4. Are perpetrators of fraud (see 18 U.S.C. §1018).
5. Are committing blackmail by threatening prison time and fines (see 18 U.S.C. §873).
6. Are criminally encouraging the IRS to mail threatening communications (see 18 U.S.C. §876).
7. Are involved in extortion (see 18 U.S.C. §872)
8. Are encroaching on federally and constitutionally protected rights to property and liberty and the pursuit of happiness (see 18 U.S.C. §245)
9. Are involved in “a conspiracy against rights” (see 18 U.S.C. §241)
10. Are “Engaging in monetary transactions in property derived from specified unlawful activity” (see 18 U.S.C. §1957)

6.13 Legal Profession Scandals

> "[T]he tax code is the single greatest source of lobbying activity in Washington." -- Rep. Richard K. Armey, R-Texas

> “An old preacher was dying. He sent a message for his IRS agent and his Lawyer (both church members), to come to his home. When they arrived, they were ushered up to his bedroom. As they entered the room, the preacher held out his hands and motioned for them to sit on each side of the bed. The preacher grasped their hands, sighed contentedly, smiled and stared at the ceiling. For a time, no one said anything. Both the IRS agent and Lawyer were touched and flattered that the old preacher would ask them to be with him during his final moment. They were also puzzled because the preacher had never given any indication that he particularly liked either one of them.

Finally, the Lawyer asked, "Preacher, why did you ask the two of us to come?"

The old preacher mustered up some strength, then said weakly, "Jesus died between two thieves, and that's how I want to go, too."

6.13.1 Legal Dictionary Definitions for "United States"

We looked at five different legal dictionaries and a Collegiate dictionary for the term "United States". Here is a list of the legal dictionaries we examined:

1. Bouvier's Law Dictionary, Revised Sixth Edition, 1856.
2. Law Dictionary, Barron's, Copyright 1996, ISBN 0-8120-3096-6.
3. Merriam-Webster's Dictionary of Law, Copyright 1996. (http://dictionary.lp.findlaw.com/)
4. Black's Law Dictionary, Seventh Edition, Copyright 1999, ISBN 0-314-24130-2.
5. Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, Copyright 1990, ISBN 0-314-76271-X.

Interestingly, only ONE of these dictionaries identified the definition of the legal term "United States", and this edition was out of print after 1999! Recall that we said in section 3.12.1.23 that the definition of "United States" is a very important key to understanding the trick that Congress has played on the American people with the income tax. Even more interesting is that the Sixth Edition of Black's Law Dictionary was the only one of the above which properly and completely defined the term "United States", and even that definition was removed from the Seventh Edition of the same dictionary by the publisher, in an apparent effort to further conceal the truth about the limited jurisdiction of our federal government. If the average American understood that there are actually THREE independent definitions for the term "United States" as ruled by the united states supreme Court in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945), then a lot more people we believe would better understand the very limited application of the federal and state income tax statutes. If they understood that the term used in the Internal Revenue Code for "United States" actually means the District of Columbia, then they would understand that they are NOT residents of the [federal] United States, but instead are residents of the United States of America. This is the foundation of the idea that the IRC is "special law". As we pointed out in section 1.11.3 entitled "How Come my Accountant or Tax Attorney Doesn't Know This", it seems quite clear to us that there are very good reasons why your attorney would claim he didn't know this. Here is a summary of just a few of those reasons:

1. Lawyers make money by litigating rather than settling.
2. The way to encourage litigation is to put the most assets and property possible at legal risk, or at least to fool people into thinking they are at risk.
3. There are two main ways to get the average person to put their assets at legal risk:
   - 3.1. Getting a marriage license from the state. Notice we didn't say getting married, because you can get married without a marriage license from the state, and instead have a prenuptial agreement and a private wedding where the priest doesn't sign any kind of marriage license.
   - 3.2. Owing taxes to the government, who incidentally own the courts and love to use their own home turf to steal and extort tax money out of the average citizen.
4. Lawyers therefore have a financial interest to make you believe that your assets are at risk by making you think that you owe income taxes.
5. If no one owed income taxes, we would need probably 1/2 as many lawyers (and accountants) as we have now and the few that remained would charge less for their services because they would be in far less demand. The following fields of law would see drastic cuts:
   - 5.1. Probate attorneys.
   - 5.2. Tax attorneys.
   - 5.3. Legislators and legislative analysts.
6. Can you see why the American Bar Association and most lawyers wouldn't want to put the definition of "United States" in any of the legal dictionaries?

We would venture to say that probably 70% of attorneys, after you tell them the correct definition of "United States", would claim that they didn't know the proper legal definition or even what the supreme Court said was the definition. Lawyers are just as fallible as the rest of us. We would also venture to say that even the ones who do know the correct definition and who are familiar with the supreme Court's definition of the term would never admit to it because it would undermine their profession! Furthermore, about the same percentage of attorneys don't know that most Americans actually have dual citizenship (federal and state), and what the rights are of each type of citizen.

After we examined four contemporary legal dictionaries in vain for a definition of the term "United States", then we went to Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, 1983, Merriam-Webster, p. 1291 and found the following definition:

> "United States (1617) a federation of states esp. when forming a nation in a usu. specified territory (advocating a United States of Europe)."

Even the non-legal college dictionary doesn't properly define the term "United States"! Is it any wonder that most Americans don't even know what it means and are deceived into paying income taxes because of their ignorance(?) …they couldn't look up the definition of the term even if they really wanted to know, which most of them don't anyway! The only way to eliminate this kind of ignorance is to either read this book or to look up the definition on the Internet by reading 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9). We encourage you to do both, or you will be victimized because of your own ignorance.

6.13.2 The Taxability of Wages and Income Derived from "Labor" Rather than "Profit" as Described in CLE Materials

We looked through ten different student manuals and reference books addressing Federal Taxation at several law bookstores and a law university bookstore for clarification and explanation of the taxability of the following:

1. Wages.
2. Labor.
3. Compensation for "personal services."
4. Salaries.

Interestingly, NONE of the over ten federal taxation books and dictionaries and other Continuing Legal Education (CLE) materials addressed ANY of the following:

1. Wages as "property".
2. Income taxes only applying to "profit" and the nature of profit in the context of exchanging labor for wages.
3. The right to labor as a "common right" that cannot be infringed, regulated, or penalized by the government.
4. The relationship between graduated taxes on wages and slavery, or how such taxes might infringe on rights.

Several of the books had examples of how to apply the Internal Revenue Code to specific situations, but NONE of the examples used receipt of wages as a taxable event. We can only conclude that this omission was a deliberate decision by educators in the legal profession to conceal the dastardly truth about income taxes. We also have to assume that the most popular way to conceal the truth is to NOT mention what is NOT taxable, and only to mention what IS taxable. Is it any surprise then that we have a whole generation of tax attorneys out there who haven't heard the truth because the very curricula they rely on for their legal education excludes the whole truth? In such an environment, does the oath a lawyer would take if he went on the witness stand mean anything?:

> "I promise to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help me God."

If you researched the background of most lawyers, you'd find that they, like most doctors, overwhelmingly got into the profession because of greed and that disproportionately few of them believe in "God". They are too egotistical and self-sufficient to believe in God or to have to depend on Him for anything. How can a lawyer tell the "whole truth" and not lie taking the oath if he was never taught the "whole truth" to begin with and doesn't believe in God anyway? Let's face it, like Satan, a majority of the members of the legal profession have misused the gifts that a Creator they don't believe in has given them, and never bothered to question the laws beyond what they were taught because it was so profitable to not question authority. Perhaps this explains why early law schools in the late 17th Century in this country required a strong theological background as a prerequisite to studying law. Very few, if any, universities have the same requirements for the study of law these days.

6.14 Social Security Chronology[415]

When the Social Security Administration first began assigning social security numbers in 1935, SSN cards included the statement "NOT FOR IDENTIFICATION" printed upon their face.

[415] Courtesy http://www.informamerica.com/SSN Chronology.html.

The card issued in 1964 contained that very statement while all cards issued today no longer do. Over the years a multitude of new, unintended uses for SSNs have evolved. The result is that SSNs are now widely and routinely demanded for purposes of routine identification. As a result, the SSN has now become a de facto National Identification Number.

The following will give you some idea of what the free Citizen who never applied for and therefore never received a social security number is up against when dealing with state and federal bureaucrats.

It is obtained from a table prepared on January 13, 1998 by Sandy Cerato of the Social Security Administration's Office of Legislation And Congressional Affairs and chronicles the implementation of the social security number for identification purposes, although it was never originally intended as such.

Nowhere within the report does it breathe mention of the fact that an SSN is not required by law of a Citizen because nowhere does any law require the Citizen to apply.

> Table prepared (1/13/98) by Sandy Cerato of SSA's Office of Legislation & Congressional Affairs
> 1935 The Social Security Act (P.L. 74-271) is enacted. It did not expressly mention the use of SSNs, but it authorized the creation of some type of record keeping scheme. Treasury Decision 4704, a Treasury regulation in 1936 which required the issuance of an account number to each employee covered by the Social Security program. The Social Security Board considered various numbering systems and ways (such as metal tags, etc.) by which employees could indicate they had been issued a number
> 1936-1937 Approximately 30 million applications for SSNs were processed between November 1936 and June 30, 1937.
> 1943 Executive Order 9397 (3 C.F.R. (1943-1948 Comp.) 283-284) required: All Federal components to use the SSN "exclusively" whenever the component found it advisable to set up a new identification system for individuals. The Social Security Board to cooperate with Federal uses of the number by issuing and verifying numbers for other Federal agencies
> 1961 The Civil Service Commission adopted the SSN as an official Federal employee identifier. Internal Revenue Code Amendments (P.L. 87-397) required each taxpayer to furnish identifying number for tax reporting.
> 1962 The Internal Revenue Service adopted the SSN as its official taxpayer identification number.
> 1964 Treasury Department, via internal policy, required buyers of Series H savings bonds to provide their SSNs.
> 1965 Internal Revenue Amendments (P.L. 89-384) enacted Medicare. It became necessary for most individuals age 65 and older to have an SSN.
> 1966 The Veterans Administration began to use the SSN as the hospital admissions number and for patient record keeping.
> 1967 The Department of Defense adopted the SSN in lieu of the military service number for identifying Armed Forces personnel.
> 1970 Bank Records and Foreign Transactions Act (P.L. 91-508) required all banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions and brokers/dealers in securities to obtain the SSNs of all of their customers. Also, financial institutions were required to file a report with the IRS, including the SSN of the customer, for any transaction involving more than $10,000.

1971 SSA task force report published which proposed that SSA take a "cautious and conservative" position toward SSN use and do nothing to promote the use of the SSN as an identifier. The report recommended that SSA use mass SSN enumeration in schools as a long-range, cost-effective approach to tightening up the SSN system, and consider cooperating with specific health, education and welfare uses of the SSN by State, local, and other nonprofit organizations.

1972 Social Security Amendments of 1972 (P.L. 92-603): Required SSA to issue SSNs to all legally admitted aliens at entry and of anyone receiving or applying for any benefit paid for by Federal funds; Required SSA to obtain evidence to establish age, citizenship, or alien status and identity. Authorized SSA to enumerate children at the time they first entered school.

1973 Buyers of series E savings bonds are required by the Treasury Department to provide their SSNs. Report of the HEW Secretary's Advisory Committee on Automated Personal Data System concluded that the adoption of a universal identifier by this country was not desirable; also found that the SSN was not suitable for such a purpose as it does not meet the criteria of a universal identifier that distinguishes a person from all others.

1974 Privacy Act (P.L. 93-579) enacted effective September 27, 1975 to limit governmental use of the SSN: Provided that no State or local government agency may withhold a benefit from a person simply because the individual refuses to furnish his or her SSN. Required that Federal, State and local agencies which request an individual to disclose his/her SSN inform the individual if disclosure was mandatory or voluntary. (This was the first mention of SSN use by local governments.)

1975 Social Services Amendments of 1974 (P.L. 93-647) provided that: disclosure of an individual's SSN is a condition of eligibility for AFDC benefits; and Office of Child Support enforcement Parent Locator Service may require disclosure of limited information (including SSN and whereabouts) contained in SSA records.

1976 Tax Reform Act of 1976 (P.L. 94-455) included the following amendments to the Social Security Act: To allow use by the States of the SSN in the administration of any tax, general public assistance, driver's license or motor vehicle registration law within their jurisdiction and to authorize the States to require individuals affected by such laws to furnish their SSNs to the States; To make misuse of the SSN for any purpose a violation of the Social Security Act; To make disclosure or compelling disclosure of the SSN of any person a violation of the Social Security Act. To amend section 6109 of the Internal Revenue Code to provide that the SSN be used as the tax identification number (TIN) for all tax purposes. While the Treasury Department had been using the SSN as the TIN by regulation since 1962, this law codified that requirement. Federal Advisory Committee on False Identification recommended that penalties for misuse should be increased and evidence requirements tightened; rejected the idea of national identifier and did not even consider the SSN for such a purpose.

1977 Food Stamp Act of 1977 (P.L. 96-58) required disclosure of SSNs of all household members as a condition of eligibility for participation in the food stamp program. Privacy Protection Study Commission recommended that: No steps be taken towards developing standard, universal label for individuals until safeguards and policies regarding permissible uses and disclosures were proven effective; and Executive Order 9397 be amended so that Federal agencies could no longer use it as legal authority to require disclosure of an individual's SSN. (No action taken.) The Carter Administration proposed that the Social Security card be one of the authorized documents by which an employer could be assured that a job applicant could work in this country but also stated that the SSN card should not become a national identity document.

1978 SSA required evidence of age, citizenship, and identity of all SSN applicants.

1981 Reagan Administration stated that it "is explicitly opposed to the creation of a national identity card" but recognized the need for a means for employers to comply with the employer sanctions provisions of its immigration reform legislation. Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (P.L. 97-35) required the disclosure of the SSNs of all adult members in the household of children applying to the school lunch program. Social Security Benefits Act (P.L. 97-123) Section 4 added alteration and forgery of a Social Security card to the list of prohibited acts and increased the penalties for such acts. Section 6 required any Federal, State or local government agency to furnish the name and SSN of prisoners convicted of a felony to the Secretary of HHS, to enforce suspension of disability benefits to certain imprisoned felons. Department of Defense Authorization Act (P.L. 97-86) required disclosure of the SSNs to the Selective Service System of all individuals required to register for the draft.

1982 Debt Collection Act (P.L. 97-365) required that all applicants for loans under any Federal loan program furnish their SSNs to the agency supplying the loan. All Social Security cards issued to legal aliens not authorized to work within the United States were annotated "NOT VALID FOR EMPLOYMENT" beginning in May.

1983 The Social Security Amendments of 1983 (P.L. 98-21) required that new and replacement Social Security cards issued after October 30 be made of banknote paper and (to the maximum extent practicable) not be subject to counterfeiting. The Interest and Dividend Tax Compliance Act (P.L. 98-67) requires SSNs for all interest-bearing accounts and provides a penalty of $50 for all individuals who fail to furnish a correct TIN (usually the SSN).

1984 Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 (P.L. 98-369) Amended the Social Security Act to establish an income and eligibility verification system involving State agencies administering the AFDC, Medicaid, unemployment compensation, the food stamp programs, and State programs under a plan approved under title I, X, XIV, or XVI of the Act. States were permitted to require the SSN as a condition of eligibility for benefits under any of these programs. Amended Section 6050I of the IRC to require that persons engaged in a trade or business file a report (including SSNs) with the IRS for cash transactions over $10,000. Amended Section 215 of the IRC to authorize the Secretary of HHS to publish regulations that require a spouse paying alimony to furnish IRS with the taxpayer identification number (i.e., the SSN) of the spouse receiving alimony payments.

1986 The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-603): Required the Comptroller General to investigate technological changes that could reduce the potential for counterfeiting Social Security cards; Provides that the Social Security card may be used to establish the eligibility of a prospective employee for employment; and Required the Secretary of HHS to undertake a study of the feasibility and costs of establishing an SSN verification system Tax Reform Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-514) requires individuals filing a tax return due after December 31, 1987, to include the taxpayer identification number--usually the SSN--of each dependent age 5 or older. Commercial Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-750) authorized the Secretary of Transportation to require the use of the SSN on commercial motor vehicle operators' licenses. Higher Education Amendments of 1986 (P.L. 99-498) required that student loan applicants submit their SSN as a condition of eligibility.

1987 SSA initiated a demonstration project on August 17 in the state of New Mexico enabling parents to obtain Social Security numbers for their newborn infants automatically when the infant's birth is registered by the State. The program was expanded nationwide in 1989. Currently, all 50 union states participate in the program, as well as New York City, Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico.

1988 Housing and Community Development Act of 1987 (P.L. 100-242) authorized the Secretary of HUD to require disclosure of a person's SSN as a condition of eligibility for any HUD program. The Family Support Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-485): Section 125 required, beginning November 1, 1990, a State to obtain the SSNs of the parents when issuing a birth certificate. Section 704(a) required individuals filing a tax return due after December 31, 1989, to include the taxpayer identification number--usually the SSN--of each dependent age 2 or older. The Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-647): Authorized a State and/or any blood donation facility to use SSNs to identify blood donors (205(c)(2)(F)). Required that all title II beneficiaries either have or have applied for an SSN in order to receive benefits. This provision became effective with dates of initial entitlement of June 1989 or later. Beneficiaries who refused enumeration were entitled but placed in suspense. Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-690) deleted the $5,000 and $25,000 upper limits on fines that can be imposed for violations of section 208 of the Social Security Act. The general limit of $250,000 for felonies in the U.S. Code now applied to SSN violations under section 208 of the Social Security Act. Also, penalties for misuse of SSNs apply as well in cases where the number is referred to by any other name (e.g., taxpayer identification number (TIN)).

1989 Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989 (P.L. 101-239) required that the National Student Loan Data System include, among other things, the names and SSNs of borrowers. Child Nutrition and WIC Reauthorization Act of 1989 (P.L. 101-147) requires the member of the household who applies for the school lunch program to provide the SSN of the parent of the child for whom the application is made.

1990 Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-508): Section 7201 (Computer Matching and Privacy Protection Amendments of 1990) provided that no adverse action may be taken against an individual receiving benefits as a result of a matching program without verification of the information or notification of the individual regarding the findings with time to contest. Section 8053, required an SSN for eligibility for benefits from the Department of Veterans Affairs (DVA). Section 11112, required that individuals filing a tax return due after December 31, 1991, include the taxpayer identification number--usually the SSN--of each dependent age 1 or older. Food and Agricultural Resources Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-624), Section 1735: Required an SSN for the officers of food and retail stores that redeem Food Stamps. Provided that SSNs maintained as a result of any law enacted on or after October 1, 1990, will be confidential and may not be disclosed.

1994 Social Security Independence and Program Improvements Act of 1994 (P.L. 103-296): Section 304, authorized the use of the SSN for jury selection. Section 314, authorized cross-matching of SSNs and Employer Identification Numbers maintained by the Department of Agriculture with other Federal agencies for the purpose of investigating both food stamp fraud and violations of other Federal laws. Section 318, authorized the use of the SSN by the Department of Labor in administration of Federal workers' compensation laws.

1996 Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-193) (Welfare Reform): Section 111 required the Commissioner of Social Security to develop and submit to Congress a prototype of a counterfeit-resistant Social Security card that: is made of durable, tamper-resistant material (e.g., plastic); employs technologies that provide security features (e.g., magnetic stripe); and provides individuals with reliable proof of citizenship or legal resident alien status. Section 111 also required the Commissioner of Social Security to study and report to Congress on different methods of improving the Social Security card application process, including evaluation of the cost and workload implications of issuing a counterfeit-resistant Social Security card for all individuals and evaluation of the feasibility and cost implications of imposing a user fee for replacement cards. Section 316 required HHS to transmit to SSA, for verification purposes, certain information about individuals and employers maintained under the Federal Parent Locator Service in an automated directory. SSA is required to verify the accuracy of, correct, or supply to the extent possible, and report to HHS the name, SSN, and birth date of individuals and the employer identification number of employers. SSA is to be reimbursed by HHS for the cost of this verification service. This section also required all Federal agencies (including SSA) to report quarterly the name and SSN of each employee and the wages paid to the employee during the previous quarter. Section 317 provides that State child support enforcement procedures require the SSN of any applicant for a professional license, commercial driver's license, occupational license, or marriage license be recorded on the application. The SSN of any person subject to a divorce decree, support order, or paternity determination or acknowledgement would have to be placed in the pertinent records. SSNs are required on death certificates. Section 451 provides that, in order to be eligible for the Earned Income Tax Credit, an individual must include on his or her tax return an SSN which was not assigned solely for non-work purposes. Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1997 (P.L. 104-208) (Division C (Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996) (Immigration Reform): Sections 401-404 provide for 3 specific employment verification pilot programs in which employers would voluntarily participate. In general, the pilot programs would allow an employer to confirm the identity and employment eligibility of the individual. SSA and the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) would provide a secondary verification process to confirm the validity of the information provided. SSA would compare the name and SSN provided and advise whether the name and number match SSA records and whether the SSN is valid for employment. Section 414 requires the Commissioner to report to Congress every year, the aggregate number of SSNs issued to non-citizens not authorized to work, but under which earnings were reported. Also requires the Commissioner to transmit to the Attorney General a report on the extent to which SSNs and Social Security cards are used by non-citizens for fraudulent purposes. Section 415 authorizes the Attorney General to require any non-citizen to provide his or her SSN for purposes of inclusion in any record maintained by the Attorney General or INS. Section 656 provide for improvements in identification-related documents; i.e., birth certificates and driver's licenses. These sections require publication of regulations which set standards, including security features and, in the case of driver's licenses, require that an SSN appear on the license. Federal agencies are precluded from accepting as proof of identity, documents which do not meet the regulatory standards. Section 657 provides for the development of a prototype Social Security card. The requirements are the same as in Section 111 of the Welfare reform legislation (described above) with the exception that the Comptroller General is also to study and report to Congress on different methods of improving the Social Security card application process.

1997 Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1997 (P.L. 104-208) (Division C--Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996) (Immigration Reform): Sections 401-404 provide for 3 specific employment verification pilot programs in which employers would voluntarily participate. In general, the pilot programs would allow an employer to confirm the identity and employment eligibility of the individual. SSA and INS would provide a secondary verification process to confirm the validity of the information provided. SSA would compare the name and SSN provided and advise whether the name and number match SSA records and whether the SSN is valid for employment. Section 414 required the Commissioner of Social Security to report to Congress every year the aggregate number of SSNs issued to non-citizens not authorized to work, but under which earnings were reported. Also required the Commissioner of Social Security to transmit to the Attorney General a report on the extent to which SSNs and Social Security cards are used by non-citizens for fraudulent purposes. Section 415 authorized the Attorney General to require any non-citizen to provide his or her SSN for purposes of inclusion in any record maintained by the Attorney General or INS. Section 656 provided for improvements in identification-related documents; i.e., birth certificates and drivers licenses. These sections require publication of regulations which set uniform standards, including security features, and, in the case of drivers licenses, require that an SSN appear on the license. Federal agencies are precluded from accepting as proof of identity documents which do not meet the regulatory standards. Section 657 provided for the development of a prototype Social Security card. The requirements are the same as in > Section 111 of the Welfare reform legislation (described above) with the exception that the Comptroller General is also to study and report to Congress on different methods of improving the Social Security card application process. 1997 Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 (P.L. 105-34) Section 1090 requires an applicant for an SSN under age 18 to provide evidence of his or her parents' names and SSNs in addition to required evidence of age, identity, and citizenship. Report to Congress on "Options for Enhancing the Social Security Card" released on September 22, 1997.

Keep in mind that there is no authority under the Constitution for the government to require that a free Citizen number himself or withhold services if he does not. Certainly the Citizen who chooses not to obtain and use a number or who later revokes the application for the number as some have done faces a future of self-reliance and individual responsibility, with no help from Uncle Sam.

6.15 Conclusion: The Duck Test

What can one make of this pattern of alterations that disguise the truth behind the law and this pattern of behavior throughout the U.S. Government, including the Congress, the courts, the Treasury, and the IRS to misrepresent it? Is the income tax operating as a hoax? Let's apply the "duck test":

> "If it looks like a duck, waddles like a duck, and quacks like a duck, it must BE a duck!"

Thomas Jefferson said it better:

> "Single acts of tyranny may be ascribed to the accidental opinion of a day; but a series of oppressions, begun at a distinguished period, and pursued unalterably through every change in ministers [administrations], too plainly proves a deliberate systematic plan of reducing us to slavery."

We assert that the evidence presented in this document is more than adequate proof that the income tax does not apply not only to most Americans, but it doesn't apply to most "U.S. citizens" either! Has our detailed exposition raised doubt in your mind about what the law says? Here is what the Supreme Court has said about doubt.

> "In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes it is the established rule not to...enlarge their operations so as to embrace matters not specifically pointed out. In case of doubt they are construed most strongly against the government, and in favor of the citizen."
> [Gould v. Gould, 245 U.S. 151 (1917)]

> "Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
> [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

Shouldn't these court rulings be applied to the income tax?

Because of Article 1, Section 8 of the Constitution, Congress could not impose a tax on all income earned in the United States of America. What Congress did instead was to impose a municipal tax within only the District of Columbia on matters which they could tax (international and foreign commerce), and write the law in such a way that it would give the impression that it also applied to the income of most Americans outside that jurisdiction and in the 50 union states. The Secretary of the Treasury wrote corresponding regulations with a similar goal: to tell a truth while implying a lie. Despite a longstanding and ongoing effort by some in government to confuse and obfuscate, the literal truth has remained in the law. Though it is a complex process, the current statutes and regulations by themselves do reveal the limited application of the Internal Revenue Code. The older statutes and regulations then add extensive reinforcement and clarity to the conclusions reached by deciphering the current law. The historical documents also give ample evidence to justify an accusation, against the legislators in Congress and the authors of the regulations at the Department of the Treasury, of intent to defraud the American people of money not legally owed.

Aside from arguments about specific details, there is one giant hurdle for those who would still insist that most Americans receive taxable income: what is the alternate conclusion that accounts for every citation in this document? There is extensive documentation, not only in the current statutes and regulations, but throughout 87 years of statutory and regulatory history, which supports the conclusions of this document. It would be absurd to claim that a tax was imposed on the income of most Americans, and that by mistake or coincidence Congress and the Secretary put into the statutes and regulations such an enormous amount of information, spanning nearly a century, which indicates that the tax applies only to those engaged in international or foreign commerce. Quite simply, there is no conclusion other than the conclusion of this document which explains all of the evidence.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Is there some other "interpretation" of the statutes and regulations which would show domestic income of United States citizens as taxable, and also explain the meaning of all of the citations in this document?

8. DEFINITIONS

alien: A person born in a foreign country, who owes his allegiance to that country; one not a citizen or national of the country in which he is living. A RESIDENT ALIEN is a person admitted to permanent resident status in the country by the immigration authorities but who has not been granted citizenship.

An alien is a "person" within the meaning of the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. 347 U.S. 522, 530. And alienage is treated as a "suspect" classification for purposes of equal protection analysis. For example, the Supreme Court has invalidated statuses that prevent aliens from entering a state's civil service and from receiving educational benefits. But where a job is "bound up with the operation of the State as a governmental entity"—policemen and public school teachers, for example—states may exclude aliens. 441 U.S. 68, 73.[1] burden of proof: A rule of evidence that makes a person prove a certain thing or the contrary will be assumed by the court. For example, in criminal trials, the prosecution has the burden of proving the accused guilt because innocence is presumed.

citizen of the United States: — defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401. In the context of federal statutes: Means a person born or naturalized in the federal United States (federal zone) and a subject citizen of Congress. Typically, the U.S. government allows "nationals", who are persons born outside the federal zone and inside the 50 states to declare that they are "U.S. citizens" so that they can volunteer to become completely subject to the jurisdiction of the federal courts and become the proper subjects of the Internal Revenue Code, but technically, they are not "U.S. citizens" in the context of federal statutes as legally defined. "U.S. citizens" are possessors of statutory 'civil' rights and privileges granted by Congress and stipulated by statute, code or regulation, found mostly in 48 U.S.C. §1421b. In the context of the Constitution and the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court: A "national of the United States" born in any one of the states of the Union and not on federal territory and defined under 8 U.S.C. §1408 .

claim: the assertion of a right to money or property; the aggregate of operative facts giving rise to a right enforceable in the courts. A claim must show the existence of a right, an injury, and a prayer for damages. In tax cases, this means that the petitioner who is litigating against wrongful taking of taxes must show a law or Constitutional right that has been violated in the process of illegally taking taxes, a harm or injury that is quantifiable because of that taking, such that the court can award damages against the IRS. Otherwise, the tax case will be dismissed without prejudice because it lacks merit. Naïve and inexperienced tax freedom advocates who represent themselves in court as pro se litigants quite commonly do not specify a claim upon which they can base their case and usually end up being assessed attorney fees and having their case dismissed by the courts.

coercion: "Compulsion; constraint; compelling by force or arms or threat. General Motors v. Belvins, D.C.Colo., 144 F.Supp. 381, 384. It may be actual, direct, or positive, as where physical force is used to compel act against one's will, or implied, legal or constructive, as where one party is constrained by subjugation to another to do what his free will would refuse. As used in testamentary law, any pressure by which testator's action is restrained against his free will in the execution of his testament. "Coercion" that vitiates confession can be mental as well as physical, and question is whether accused was deprived of his free choice to admit, deny, or refuse to answer. Garrity v. State of N.J., U.S.N.J., 385 U.S. 493, 87 S.Ct. 616, 618, 17 L.Ed.2d. 562.

A person is guilty of criminal coercion if, with purpose to unlawfully restrict another's freedom of action to his detriment, he threatens to: (a) commit any criminal offense; or (b) accuse anyone of a criminal offense; or (c) expose any secret tending to subject any person to hatred, contempt or ridicule, or to impair his credit or business repute; or (d) take or withhold action as an official, or cause an official to take or withhold action. Model Penal Code, §212.5.

See also Duress; Extortion; Threat; Undue influence." [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 258] color: "Pretense of official right to do an act made by one who has no such right. An act under color of office is an act of any officer who claims authority to do the act by reason of his own office when the office does not confer on him any such authority." [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition] color of office: "A claim or assumption of right to do an act by virtue of an office, made by a person who is legally destitute of such right." Feller v. Gates, 40 Or. 543, 67 P. 416, 56 L.R.S. 630, 91 Am.St.Rep. 492. [Black's Law Dictionary, 4th Edition] common right: Right derivative from common law. Strother v. Lucas, 37 U.S. (12 Pet.) 410, 437, 9 L.Ed. 1137. Right peculiar to certain people is not a common right. Perdue v. Zoning Bd. Of Appeals of the City of Norwalk, 118 Conn. 174, 171 A. 26, 28. [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition] compel: The following definitions are offered for the word compel. These definitions bear directly on any arguments having to do with the exercise of 5th Amendment rights as it pertains to the filing of income tax returns :

Black's Law Dictionary defines the word "compel" as follows:

"To urge forcefully, under extreme pressure. The word 'compel' as used in constitutional right to be free from being compelled in a criminal case to be a witness against one's self means to be subjected to some coercion, fear, terror, inducement, trickery or threat—either physically or psychologically, blatantly or subtly; the hallmark of compulsion is the presence of some operative force producing an involuntary response. U.S. v. Escandar, C.A. Fla., 465 F.2d. 438, 442"

The Random House Dictionary of the English Language defines "compel" as follows:

"1. To force, drive, esp. to a course of action. 2. To secure or bring about by force. 3. To force to submit; subdue. 4. To overpower."

definition: A description of a thing by its properties; an explanation of the meaning of a word or term. The process of stating the exact meaning of a word by means of other words. Such a description of the thing defined, including all essential elements and excluding all nonessential, as to distinguish it from all other things and classes." [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 423] discovery: The term used to describe various methods for obtaining evidence in advance of trial, including such things as interrogatories, depositions and various motions to permit the inspection of documents etc.

distraint: the act or process of distraint, whereby a person (the DISTRAINOR), without prior court approval, seizes the personal property of another located upon the distrainor's land in satisfaction of a claim, as a pledge for the performance of a duty, or in reparation of an injury. Where goods are seized in satisfaction of a claim, the distrainor can hold the goods until the claim is paid and, failing payment, may sell them in satisfaction. Originally, distress was a landlord's remedy (see lien [LANDORD'S LIEN], 324 A.2d. 102, 104) and was distinguishable from attachment, which is a court-ordered seizure of goods or property. The persons whose goods are distrained upon has recourse against the wrongful distrainor in replevin.

Distraint has been superseded in most states of the United States by statutory provisions for debt collection, the enforcement of security interests, and landlord-tenant relations.

donation: A gift. A transfer of the title of property to one who receives it without paying for it. The act by which the owner of a thing voluntarily transfers the title and possession of the same from himself to another person, without any consideration. [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 487] due process: administering of law through courts of justice in accordance with established and sanctioned legal principles and procedures, and with safeguards for the protection of individual rights. As determined by custom and law, due process has become a guarantee of civil as well as criminal rights. In the United States, the phrase due process first appears in the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, ratified in 1791. Because the amendment refers specifically to federal and not state actions, another amendment was necessary to include the states. This was accomplished by the 14th Amendment, ratified in 1868. Thus was established at both federal and state levels that no person "shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." The guarantee of due process requires that no person be deprived of life, liberty, or property without a fair and adequate process. In criminal proceedings this guarantee includes the fundamental aspects of a fair trial, including the right to adequate notice in advance of the trial, the right to counsel, the right to confront and cross-examine witnesses, the right to refuse self-incriminating testimony, and the right to have all elements of the crime proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

duress: "Any unlawful threat or coercion used by a person to induce another to act (or to refrain from acting) in a manner he or she otherwise would not (or would). Subjecting person to improper pressure which overcomes his will and coerces him to comply with demand to which he would not yield if acting as free agent. Head v. Gadsden Civil Service Bd., Ala.Civ.App., 389 So.2d. 516, 519. Application of such pressure or constraint as compels man to go against his will, and takes away his free agency, destroying power of refusing to comply with unjust demands of another. Haumont v. Security State Bank, 220 Neb. 809, 374 N.W.2d. 2,6.
A contract entered into under duress by physical compulsion is void. Also, if a party's manifestation of assent to a contract is induced by an improper threat by the other party that leaves the victim no reasonable alternative, the contract is voidable by the victim. Restatement, Second, Contracts §§174, 175.

As a defense to a civil action, it must be pleaded affirmatively. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(c).

As an affirmative defense in criminal law, one who, under the pressure of an unlawful threat from another human being to harm him (or to harm a third person), commits what would otherwise be a crime may, under some circumstances, be justified in doing what he did and thus not be guilty of the crime in question. See Model Penal Code §2.09. See also Coercion; Economic duress; Extortion; Undue influence."

employee: (see 26 U.S.C. §3401(c)) For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation. Refer to section 3.6.1.1 for further explanation.

employer: (see 26 U.S.C. §3401(d)). For purposes of this chapter, the term "employer" means the person for whom an individual performs or performed any service, of whatever nature, as the employee of such person, except that -

> (1) if the person for whom the individual performs or performed the services does not have control of the payment of the wages for such services, the term "employer" (except for purposes of subsection (a)) means the person having control of the payment of such wages, and
> (2) in the case of a person paying wages on behalf of a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, the term "employer" (except for purposes of subsection (a)) means such person.

FOIA: The Freedom Of Information Act. FOIA is the secret key to unlock a vast amount of information, especially information about you. Thanks to this act, everyday citizens have access to records, files, and other information just for the asking. Of course you are required to use the proper format in your request, but extremely valuable information can be obtained by using this simple procedure that very few use. The IRS, for instance, keeps literally countless secret files on citizens (law-abiding or not) of the United States. Most folks would be interested in knowing what kind of information is being kept on them by the government. By using FOIA, you can find out what they know what they don't..... in addition to protecting yourself and building your case against them.

foreign country: IRS Publication 54 (2000), p. 12, defines this term as follows:

> "A foreign country usually is any territory (including the air space and territorial waters) under the sovereignty of a government other than that of the United States.... The term 'foreign country' does not include Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, or U.S. possessions such as American Samoa."

You will note that this definition is consistent with 26 U.S.C. §7701, which defines "United States" as the District of Columbia and the States" and "State" as the District of Columbia. Another way of stating this is that the "U.S." includes only the "federal zone" as used in the tax code and as described in section 4.7. With this definition in mind, the 50 states of the United States of America are considered as foreign countries while any federal possession or territory is considered part of the "federal zone".

Foreign government: "The government of the United States of America, as distinguished from the government of the several states." (Black's Law Dictionary, 5th Edition; removed from the Sixth and Seventh Editions by a legal profession that wants to hide the truth and sell you into slavery to the U.S. government by unlawfully extending the jurisdiction for personal income taxes outside the federal zone.)

Foreign Laws: "The laws of a foreign country or sister state." (Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition)

Foreign States: "Nations outside of the United States…Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state. The term 'foreign nations', …should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense." (Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition) forum: Lat. A court of justice, or judicial tribunal; a place of jurisdiction; a place of litigation; an administrative body. Particular place where judicial or administrative remedy is pursued. See also Venue. (Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition). The federal district, circuit, and Supreme courts and the "federal zone" constitute the forum within which the government of the United States operates and exercises exclusive jurisdiction. In more limited cases, it also has jurisdiction in criminal matters that involve multiple states.

income: Below is the definition, taken from the Supreme Court case of Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920) and the definition found in Bouvier's Law Dictionary:

> 'Income may be defined as the gain derived from capital, from labor, or from both combined,' provided it be understood to include profit gained through a sale or conversion of capital assets, to which it was applied in the Doyle Case, 247 U.S. 183, 185 , 38 S.Sup.Ct. 467, 469 (62 L.Ed. 1054).

Internal Revenue Service: The current name of the "Bureau of Internal Revenue" (BIR) of Puerto Rico. The "Federal Alcohol Administration" created on 8-29-1935, 49 Stat. 977; 27 U.S.C. §201, was abolished and absorbed in the BIR on 4-2-1940 by Reorganization Plan No. III of 1940, 5 F.R. (Federal Register) 2107, 54 Stat. 1232, set out in the Appendix to Title 5, Government Organization and Employees. Department of the Treasury Order (TDO) 221 of July 1, 1972, established the BATF and transferred to it the alcohol and functions of the Internal Revenue Service. Public law 97-258 §5(b), Sept 13, 1982, 96 Stat. 1068, 1085 repealed §2 of the 1940 Reorganization Plan No III and the first section of which enacted Title 31, Money and Finance. levy, n: A seizure. The obtaining of money by legal process through seizure and sale of property; the raising of the money for which an execution has been issued.

The process whereby a sheriff or other state official empowered by writ or other judicial directive actually seizes, or otherwise brings within her control, a judgment debtor's property which is taken to secure or satisfy the judgment.

In reference to taxation, the word may mean the legislative function and declaration of the subject and rate or amount of taxation. People v. Mahoney, 13 Cal.2d. 729, 91 P.2d. 1029; or the rate of taxation rather than the physical act of applying the rate to the property, Lowden v. Texas County Excise Board, 187 Okl. 365 103 P.2d. 98, 100; or the formal order, by proper authority declaring property subject to taxation at fixed rate at its assessed valuation, State v. Davis, 335 Mo. 159, 73 S.W.2d. 406, 407; or the ministerial function of assessing, listing and extending taxes, City of Plankinton v. Kieffer, 70 S.D. 329, 17 N.W.2d. 494, 495, 496; or the extension of the tax, Day v. Inland Steel Co., 185 Minn. 53, 239 N.W. 776, 777; or the doing of whatever is necessary in order to authorize the collector to collect the tax, Syracuse Trust Co. v. Board of Sup'rs of Oneida County, 13 N.Y.S.2d. 390, 394. When used in connection with authority to tax, denotes exercise of legislative function, whether state or local, determining that a tax shall be imposed and fixing amount, purpose and subject of the exaction. Carkonen v. Williams, 76 Wash.2d. 617, 458 P.2d. 280, 286. The qualified electors "levy" a tax when they vote to impose it.

lien: A claim, encumbrance, or charge on property for payment of some debt, obligation or duty. Sullins v. Sullins, 6 Wash.2d. 283, 396 P.2d. 886, 888. Qualified right of property which a creditor has in or over specific property of his debtor, as security for the debt or charge or for performance of some act. Right or claim against some interest in property created by law as an incident of contract. Right to enforce charge upon property of another for payment or satisfaction of debt or claim. Vaughan v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 61 S.W.2d. 189, 190. Right to retain property for payment of debt or demand. Bell v. Dennis, 43 N.M. 350, 93 P.2d. 1003, 1006. Security for a debt, duty or other obligation. Hurley v. Boston R. Holding Co., 315 Mass. 591, 54 N.E.2d. 183, 193. Tie that binds property to a debt or claim for its satisfaction. United States v. 1364.76875 Wine Gallons, More or Less, of Spirituous Liquors, D.C.Mo., 60 F.Supp. 389, 392. Liens are "property rights". In re Pennsylvania Central Brewing Co., C.C.A.Pa., 114 F.2d. 1010, 1013. The word "lien" is a generic term and, standing alone, includes liens acquired by contract or by operation of law. Egyptian Supply Co. v. Boyd, C.C.A.Ky., 117 F.2d. 608, 612.

A charge against or interest in property to secure payment of a debt or performance of an obligation. Bankruptcy Code §101.

Lien by operation of law. Where the law itself, without the stipulation of the parties, raises a lien, as an implication or legal consequence from the relation of the parties or the circumstances of their dealings. Liens of this species may arise either under the rules of common law or of equity or under a statute. In the first case they are called "common –law liens;" in the second, "equitable liens;" in the third, "statutory liens."

national: means a person born or naturalized outside the federal United States (federal zone) but inside the country United States and who is subject to the political but not legislative jurisdiction of the federal government at the time of birth as the Fourteenth Amendment (illegally ratified) requires. Synonymous with "American Citizen", "American National", "Natural Born Sovereign Citizen", or "nonresident alien". Typically, the U.S. government allows and even encourages "nationals" to incorrectly declare that they are "U.S. citizens" so that they can volunteer to become completely subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts and become the proper subjects of the Internal Revenue Code, but technically, they are not "U.S. citizens" as legally defined. 8 U.S.C. §1452, and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) define who are "nationals". The following code section from 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) defines the type of "national" that most Americans born in the 50 union states outside of the federal zone qualify as. It is highlighted to bring attention to it:

> TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
> (a) As used in this chapter -
> (22) The term "national of the United States" means
> (A) a citizen of the United States, or
> (B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States.

Note that the "United States" term as used in the above section refers to the federal United States, also called the "federal zone". 8 U.S.C. §1401 indicates that all "citizens and nationals of the United States" are also "nationals of the United States". 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) indicates that not all "nationals" are also "U.S. citizens". Throughout this book, when we use the term "national", we mean either a "citizen, but not a national, of the United States" as described in 8 U.S.C. §1452 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).

occupations of "common right": Any profession you can choose to do or undertake in private industry in any field or trade (even if its for the government) and which do not depend on the authority granted you as part of a political office, being either elected or appointed. Occupations that are not of common right are things you can only do as an officer or politician working for a government agency by virtue of the rights and privileges granted to you as a consequence of your election or appointment to that political office and the authority delegated to you by the law itself. See the case of Simms. v. Ahrens, 271 S.W. 720 for further details.

prima facie: On its face; not requiring further support to establish existence, validity, credibility, etc. An example of this would be an allegation or assertion made by the IRS against a citizen that is never refuted. Therefore, when any kind of assertion or allegation is made that is incorrect, it is important to deny the assertion or it will often be accepted as undisputed fact by the court.

illegal tax protester: A person who resists illegally the paying of appropriate taxes. As of January 1, 1999, the U.S. Congress has eliminated the ability of the IRS to designate a taxpayer as an "illegal tax protester". Here is a part of the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 that talks about this (form the website at http://www.irs.gov/):

Background: The IRS designates individuals who meet certain criteria as "illegal tax protestors" in the IRS Master File. Congress was concerned that taxpayers may be unfairly stigmatized by a designation as an illegal tax protester.
C. Change(s):

1. The IRS shall not designate any more taxpayers as "illegal tax protesters." Removal of existing "illegal tax protester" designations from the individual master file is not required to begin before January 1, 1999.
2. IRS personnel must disregard any designation in a taxpayer's file (i.e., revenue agents report or other paper records) as of the date of enactment.
3. As of the date of enactment, IRS personnel should not describe taxpayers in written documents as "illegal tax protesters."
4. The IRS may designate appropriate taxpayers as nonfilers. The IRS must remove the nonfiler designation once the taxpayer has filed valid tax returns for two consecutive years and paid all taxes shown on these returns.

D. Impact: The provision requires reprogramming master file databases.

Law: that which is laid down, ordained, or established. A rule or method according to which phenomenon or actions co-exist or follow each other. Law, in its generic sense, is a body of rules of action or conduct prescribed by the sovereign within a jurisdiction, and having binding legal force. United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co. v. Guenther, 281 U.S. 34, 50 S.Ct. 165, 74 L.Ed. 683. That which must be obeyed and followed by citizens subject to sanctions or legal consequences is a law. Law is a solemn expression of the will of the supreme power, which is the ultimate "sovereign", of the State. California Civil Code, §22. The "law" of a state is to be found in its statutory and constitutional enactments, as interpreted by its courts, and, in absence of statute law, in rulings of its courts. Dauer's Estate v. Zabel, 9 Mich.App. 176, 156 N.W.2d. 34, 37.

In the United States of America, the People, both collectively and individually are the "sovereigns" , according to the Supreme Court:

- Chisholm, Ex'r. v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 454, 457, 471, 472) (1794): "From the differences existing between feudal sovereignties and Government founded on compacts, it necessarily follows that their respective prerogatives must differ. Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here, never in a single instance; our Governors are the agents of the people, and at most stand in the same relation to their sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes have personal powers, dignities, and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in the sovereignty otherwise, or in any other capacity, than as private citizens."

- Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884): "There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States…In this country sovereignty resides in the people, and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution entrusted [delegated] to it. All else is withheld."
- Perry v. U.S., 294 U.S. 330 (1935): "In the United States, sovereignty resides in the people…the Congress cannot invoke sovereign power of the People to override their will as thus declared."
- Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886): "Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law…While sovereign powers are delegated to…the government, sovereignty itself remains with the people."

Therefore, the People are the authors of the law as the "sovereign" or supreme power of the state. The law constitutes essentially a binding written legal agreement or contract among the sovereigns to conduct their affairs according to some standard of conduct. The sovereign is never the proper subject or object of most laws, unless he violates the contract and thereby injures the equal rights of other fellow sovereigns. Instead, the servants of the sovereign People working in government are the main object and subject of most civil laws, and laws are enacted mainly with the purpose to delegate and confine the authority of public servants so that they do not injure or undermine the rights of the true sovereigns, the People. Furthermore, only statutes which have been enacted into "positive law" are considered binding upon all persons within the jurisdiction of the law. The legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204 indicate that the Internal Revenue Code is not "positive law", and therefore it can only be described as "special law" or "private international law" (contractual law) applying to specific persons. Subtitle A of the I.R.C., in fact, is limited mainly to those engaged in a "trade or business" and who work for the U.S. government as Trustees. The Internal Revenue Code cannot be described either as "law" or "positive law" unless and until:

1. The IRC is first enacted into "positive law" by a majority of the representatives of the sovereign People. This provides evidence that they voluntarily consented to enforcement actions required to implement the law. Without such consent, no enforcement actions may be attempted, because according to the Declaration of Independence, all just powers of government derive from the consent of the governed.
2. Regulations must be written by the Treasury for the enforcement provisions of the enacted positive law, and these regulations must be published in the Federal Register. This puts the public on notice of the enforcement actions that will be attempted against them in enforcing the law, as required by the Fifth Amendment due process clauses.
3. The enforcement regulations are then incorporated into the Code of Federal Regulations, Title 26.
4. Delegation of authority orders are written for all the enforcement agents within the Internal Revenue Service authorizing them to conduct enforcement actions.
5. The enforcement agents must be designated as enforcement agents by receiving a black enforcement Pocket Commission and being specially trained and commissioned as "public trust" employees.

Unless and until all of the above have occurred, the Internal Revenue Code, according to 1 U.S.C. §204 cannot be described as "law" and can only be described as "prima facie evidence of law", which is simply "presumptive" evidence of law. That means that it may be rebutted. Since "presumption" causes prejudice and prejudice is anathema to any legal proceeding and violates due process of law, then the Internal Revenue Code is not admissible as evidence of "law", which means that it does not furnish any evidence that the people ever consented to its enforcement against them. Consequently, it is unenforceable. Until it becomes "positive law", it can only be described as a "code", or a "statute", but not as "law".

pseudotaxes — a term identifying revenues to the U.S. government derived from Subtitles A and C of the Internal Revenue Code and collected from nonresident aliens who are not in fact and indeed: 1. Engaged in the excise taxable activity called a "trade or business", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office"; 2. Have no income from the District of Columbia; 3. Do not have a domicile in the District of Columbia. For everyone meeting this criteria, the revenues collected under the authority of I.R.C. Subtitles A and C are not "taxes" as legally defined, but an unconstitutional abuse of federal taxing power. Public servants in the government love to call such revenues "taxes" in order to deceive the people and lend undeserved dignity to the THEFT that enforcing such as system against improper parties amounts to. This is covered in Great IRS Hoax sections 5.1.2 earlier.

resident: under the Internal Revenue Code, an "alien" who is domiciled within either the District of Columbia or the territories of the United States. This "individual" has a "res" that is "identified" within federal jurisdiction, which is limited under the Internal Revenue Code to the District of Columbia and territories or possessions of the United States identified in Title 48 of the U.S. Code. Federal territories are generally identified with the term "State" in the U.S. Code, while states of the Union are identified with a lower case "state" in the U.S. Code and are treated as "foreign states". "Residents" live exclusively in federal "States" but not in "states" of the Union and therefore are not protected by the Bill of Rights within the Constitution as per Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901). Pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.1441(c)(3)(i), an alien can be neither a "citizen" nor a "national" of the United States. The terms "alien", "resident", and "resident alien" are all synonymous in the Internal Revenue Code, as confirmed by 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3). "citizens of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 cannot legally be classified as "residents" under the Internal Revenue Code and are not authorized by the code to "elect" to be treated as one either. The reason is because the purpose of law is to protect, and a person cannot elect to lose their constitutional rights and protection, even if they want to! However, by filing an IRS form 1040 or 1040A, they in effect make this illegal election anyway, and the IRS looks the other way and does not prosecute such unintentional fraud because they benefit financially from it. The only way to avoid this election is to instead either file nothing or to file a 1040NR form instead of a 1040 or 1040A form. The rules for electing to be treated as a resident are found in IRS Publication 54: Tax Guide for U.S. Citizens and Resident Aliens Abroad. See Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 4.10 for further definition of this term and the following sections for amplification: 5.5.3, 5.5.4, and 5.4.8.

special law: "One relating to particular persons or things; one made for individual cases or for particular places or districts; one operating upon a selected class, rather than upon the public generally. A private law. A law is "special" when it is different from others of the same general kind or designed for a particular purpose, or limited in range or confined to a prescribed field of action or operation. A "special law" relates to either particular persons, places, or things or to persons, places, or things which, though not particularized, are separated by any method of selection from the whole class to which the law might, but not such legislation, be applied. Utah Farm Bureau Ins. Co. v. Utah Ins. Guaranty Ass'n, Utah, 564 P.2d. 751, 754. A special law applies only to an individual or a number of individuals out of a single class similarly situated and affected, or to a special locality. Board of County Comm'rs of Lemhi County v. Swensen, Idaho, 80 Idaho 198, 327 P.2d. 361, 362. See also Private bill; Private law. Compare General law; Public Law."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1398]

The Internal Revenue Code, 26 U.S.C., Subtitle A, Income Taxes, for instance, is special law that applies ONLY to the District of Columbia and federal territories over which the United States government exercises exclusive legislative jurisdiction, but not including nonfederal areas within the borders of the several states. The U.S. Government, however, has done a fine job making the tax code LOOK like it is general law. Most Congressmen know this, of course, and if you write them to ask if the I.R.C. is special law, they have been known to try to avoid answering or have given weasel-worded answers. See http://www.supremelaw.org and the case of People v. Boxer for more details on an example of this.

source of income: "Place where, or circumstances from which, income at issue is produced. Union Electric Co. v. Coale, 347 Mo. 175, 146 S.W.2d. 631, 635." [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 1395]

State: in the context of federal statutes, federal court rulings, and this book means a federal State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Northern Marina Islands, and includes areas within the external boundaries of a state owned by or ceded to the United States of America. Federal "States" are defined in 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10). In the context of the U.S. Constitution only, "State" means a sovereign "state" as indicated below. The reason the constitution is different is because of who wrote it. The states wrote it so they are capitalized. Federal statutes are not written by the sovereign states so they use the lower case "state" to describe the sovereign 50 states, which are foreign and outside the territorial jurisdiction of the U.S. government.

> "It is to be noted that the statute differentiates between States of the United States and foreign states by the use of a capital S for the word when applied to a State of the United States"
> [Eisenberg v. Commercial Union Assurance Company, 189 F.Supp. 500 (1960)]

state: in the context of federal statutes, federal court rulings, and this book means a sovereign state of the Union of America under the Constitution for the United States of America 1789-1791. In the context of the U.S. Constitution only, "State" means a sovereign "state" as defined here. Below is a further clarification of the meaning of "states" as defined by the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of O'Donoghue v. United States, 289 U.S. 516 (1933), where they define what is not a "state":

> After an exhaustive review of the prior decisions of this court relating to the matter, the following propositions, among others, were stated as being established:
> '1. That the District of Columbia and the territories are not states within the judicial clause of the Constitution giving jurisdiction in cases between citizens of different states;
>
> '2. That territories are not states within the meaning of Rev. St. 709, permitting writs of error from this court in cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question;
>
> '3. That the District of Columbia and the territories are states as that word is used in treaties with foreign powers, with respect to the ownership, disposition, and inheritance of property*;*
> '4. That the territories are not within the clause of the Constitution providing for the creation of a supreme court and such inferior courts as Congress may see fit to establish.'

Below is a summary of the meanings of "state" and "State" in the context of both federal and state laws:

"state"	Foreign country	Union state	Union state	Other Union state or federal government	Other Union state or federal government	Other Union state or federal government
"State"	Union state	Federal state	Federal state	Union state	Union state	Union state
"in this State" or "in the State"[2]	NA	NA	NA	NA	Federal enclave within state	Federal enclave within state
"State"[3] (State Revenue and taxation code only)	NA	NA	NA	NA	Federal enclave within state	Federal enclave within state

So what the above table clearly shows is that the word "State" in the context of federal statutes and regulations means (not includes!) federal States only under Title 48 of the U.S. Code[4], and these areas do not include any of the 50 Union States. The word "state" in the context of federal statutes and regulations means one of the 50 union states, which are "foreign sovereigns", "foreign states", and "foreign countries" with respect to the federal government as clearly explained later in section 5.2.11 of this book. In the context of the above, a "Union State" means one of the 50 states of the United States* (the country, not the federal United States).

State national: A biological person who was born in any state of the Union and who is treated as a citizen of every state of the Union under Article IV, Section 2, Clause 1 of the United States Constitution. This person owes allegiance to his state and obedience to its laws. In exchange for this allegiance, he is entitled to demand protection from the government and the laws and that state. He is also treated as a "national of the United States" or a "non-citizen U.S. national". "State nationals" are defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B), 8 U.S.C. §1452, 8 U.S.C. §1408(2), and are indirectly referenced under The Law of Nations, Book I, Section 215.

Tax: A charge by the government on the income of an individual, corporation, or trust, as well as the value of an estate or gift. The objective in assessing the tax is to generate revenue to be used for the needs of the public.

> A pecuniary [relating to money] burden laid upon individuals or property to support the government, and is a payment exacted by legislative authority. In re Mytinger, D.C.Tex., 31 F.Supp. 977,978, 979. Essential characteristics of a tax are that it is not a voluntary payment or donation, but an enforced contribution, exacted pursuant to legislative authority. Michigan Employment Sec. Commission v. Patt, 4 Mich.App. 228, 144 N.W.2d. 663, 665. Annual compensation paid to government for annual protection and for current support of government. Alabama Power Co. v. Federal Power Commission, C.C.A.5, 134 F.2d. 602, 608. A ratable portion of the produce of the property and labor of the individual citizens, taken by the nation, in the exercise of its sovereign rights, for the support of government, for the administration of the laws, and as the means of continuing in operation the various legitimate functions of the state. An enforced contribution of money or other property, assessed in accordance with some reasonable rule or apportionment by authority of a sovereign state on persons or property within its jurisdiction for the purposes of defraying the public expenses.
> In a general sense, any contribution imposed by government upon individuals, for the use and service of the state, whether under the name of toll, tribute, tallage, gabel, impost, duty, custom, excise, subsidy, aid, supply, or other name. And in its essential characteristics is not a debt. City of Neward v. Jos. Hollander, Inc., 136 N.J.Eq. 539, 42 A.2d. 872, 875.
> [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1457]

"taxes", as legally defined, are a mandatory payment to the government exacted by operation of law which is not voluntary and which support only the government. If the monies paid can be used for wealth transfer or supporting private persons or organizations, then they do not qualify as "taxes", according to the U.S. Supreme Court

> To lay, with one hand, the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms.
> Nor is it taxation. 'A tax,' says Webster's Dictionary, 'is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or State.' 'Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the Legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes.' Cooley, Const. Lim., 479.
> Coulter, J., in Northern Liberties v. St. John's Church, 13 Pa.St., 104 says, very forcibly, 'I think the common mind has everywhere taken in the understanding that taxes are a public imposition, levied by authority of the government for the purposes of carrying on the government in all its machinery and operations—that they are imposed for a public purpose.' See, also Pray v. Northern Liberties, 31 Pa.St., 69; Matter of Mayor of N.Y., 11 Johns., 77; Camden v. Allen, 2 Dutch., 398; Sharpless v. Mayor, supra; Hanson v. Vernon, 27 Ia., 47; Whiting v. Fond du Lac, supra."
> [Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874)]

"Taxes" which are paid voluntarily and/or which are spent on wealth transfer or to support private purposes are referred to as "donations", and when their payment is enforced, they are called "extortion".

Tax Class: A one digit number indicating the type of tax that a tax falls under. This number appears in the Individual Master File (IMF) maintained by the taxpayer. This number or digit is the third digit of the DLN, or Document Locator Number, assigned to each document that is entered in an Individual Master File. The Tax Class codes are as follows:

0 = IRAF
1 = Withholding and Social Security
2 = Individual Income Tax
3 = Corporate Income Tax
4 = Excise Tax
5 = Estate and Gift Tax
7 = CT-1
8 = FUTA

This number appears throughout the IRS' IMF file maintained on each individual, and it is also associated with specific forms of the Internal Revenue Service. Use of this code within the individual's IMF is described in IRS Publication 6209. Section 2 of Publication 6209 describes the association of specific IRS forms with Tax Class codes. You can order a copy of IRS Pub. 6209 from Freedom Law School at http://www.livefreenow.com/. Interestingly, NOWHERE in Publication 6209 are the simple Tax Class codes defined, even though they are used extensively in that document, and furthermore, at the bottom of every page, it says "FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY". This is double speak that really says the IRS doesn't want this book getting into the hands of tax freedom fighters, which is why they keep the "secret decoder ring" (the Tax Class Codes) separated from the code listing and in other innocuous publications no one seems to be able to get ahold of!

Below is a summary of the Tax Class codes for specific forms, derived directly from Section 2 of IRS Publication 6209. It ought to be clear examining the codes below that your employment tax authorized by the W-4 form is actually a gift or estate tax, and NOT an income tax, because it uses Tax Class 5!

Form	Title	Tax Class
W-2	Wage and Tax Statement	5
W-4	Employee's Withholding Certificate	5
W-4E	Exemption from Withholding Allowance Certificate	5
W-4V	Voluntary Withholding Request	5
706	United States Estate Tax Return	5, *6
1040	U.S. Individual Income Tax Return	2, *6
1041	U.S. Fiduciary Income Tax Return (for Estates and Trusts)	2, *6
1099-INT	Statement for Receipts of Interest Income	5
1099-MISC	Statement for Receipts of Miscellaneous Income	5
1120	U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return	3, *6

Taxpayer: The term "taxpayer" means any person who is either liable to pay an any internal revenue tax or who isn't liable but "volunteers" to pay anyway. Read section 3.6.1.15 for further explanation.

United States:

"This term has several meanings. It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in family of nations, it may designate territory over which sovereignty of the United States extends, or it may be collective name of the states which are united by and under the Constitution. Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, U.S. v. Ohio, 324 U.S. 652, 65 S.Ct. 870, 880, 89 L.Ed. 1252."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1533]

The term was conveniently removed from Black's Law Dictionary Seventh Edition by a legal profession that wants to hide the truth and sell you into slavery to the U.S. government by unlawfully extending the jurisdiction for personal income taxes outside the federal zone. Look on the IRS website for this definition…you won't find it because they don't want you to know.)

[Code of Federal Regulations]

TITLE 26--INTERNAL REVENUE
CHAPTER I--INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
Sec. 1.911-2 Qualified individuals.
(g) United States. The term ``United States'' when used in a geographical sense includes any territory under the sovereignty of the United States. It includes the states, the District of Columbia, the possessions and territories of the United States, the territorial waters of the United States, the air space over the United States, and the seabed and subsoil of those submarine areas which are adjacent to the territorial waters of the United States and over which the United States has exclusive rights, in accordance with international law, with respect to the exploration and exploitation of natural resources.

U.S. citizen: defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1, 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A), and 8 U.S.C. §1401. In the context of federal statutes: Means a person born or naturalized in the federal United States (federal zone) and a subject citizen of Congress. Typically, the U.S. government allows "U.S. nationals", who are persons born outside the federal zone and inside the 50 states to declare that they are "U.S. citizens" so that they can volunteer to become completely subject to the jurisdiction of the federal courts and become the proper subjects of the Internal Revenue Code, but technically, they are not "U.S. citizens" as legally defined within nearly all federal legislation and statutes. "U.S. citizens" are possessors of statutory 'civil' rights and privileges granted by Congress and stipulated by statute, code or regulation, found mostly in 48 U.S.C. §1421b.

U.S. person: this term is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) as follows:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a)(30) United States person

The term "United States person" means -
(A) a citizen or resident of the United States,
(B) a domestic partnership,
(C) a domestic corporation,
(D) any estate (other than a foreign estate, within the meaning of paragraph (31)), and
(E) any trust if -
(i) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust, and
(ii) one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust.

voluntary:

"Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another's influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself. Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary deed."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575]

voluntary compliance: An oxymoron meant to confuse taxpayers. Voluntary implies that it is not compelled and that there is no punishment for not doing it. They add the word compliance as a way to confuse the citizens into thinking that they have to do it and will be punished for not doing it. However, when used in the context of income taxes, what it means is that you don't have to comply and don't have to volunteer to pay income taxes.
